According to our handbook, the purpose of orientation is primarily to give a brotherly welcome to the freshmen and to instill and foster in them a love for Villanova and cooperation in all university activities and interests. To accomplish all this is certainly no easy task.

Villanova's Finest Orientation Program

This year, Villanova is witnessing perhaps its finest orientation program. Why? Undoubtedly a good part of its success is due to the outstanding efforts of the committee. Much of its time has been devoted to a program which would not only enforce the orientation rules directed to the new class, but also to afford to it a warm and hearty welcome. It has done this, and has done it well. But much credit must also be given to the freshmen class. It has displayed unusual cooperation towards the committee, it has been highly enthusiastic at pep rallies, and has certainly distinguished itself early in its Villanova career as a class with an abundance of Villanova spirit and pride.

Administration Changes Made During Summer Recess Period; Father Greenlee Re-elected

A June meeting of the Eastern Province of the Augustinian Order's triennial chapter and a board reorganization of the administrative structure of Villanova University this past summer have resulted respectively in the re-election of one official and the appointment of officers to four newly created posts at the University.

Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., was re-elected Provincial of the Eastern Province at the Province's meeting on the Villanova campus June 19.

Named Chairman Also

With his re-election as Provincial, Father Greenlee also became chairman of Villanova's Board of Trustees.

Presiding at the week-long June sessions was the Most Rev. Engelbert G. Eberhard, O.S.A., Prior General of the Augustinians throughout the world.

Father Greenlee became the religious superior of nearly 400 Augustinian Priests and will supervise three colleges besides Villanova, 11 high schools and 33 parishes located in Philadelphia, New York and Los Angeles among others.

A 58-year-old native of Haverford, Pa., Father Greenlee was born in Bristol, Conn. and came to Philadelphia at an early ago where he was educated at Sacred Heart Parish School and Our Lady of Good Counsel Parish school in Bryn Mawr.

After four years of study at the old Villanova Prep, he entered major seminary at Villanova in 1916. He pronounced his vows the following year and received his undergraduate degree in 1920.

That same year, Father Greenlee went to Rome for theological studies where he was ordained in 1922 by Cardinal Pompili. In 1925 he received his Doctorate in Sacred Theology from the Vatican Theological Commission.

Following six years at Villanova as a teacher of philosophy, he was a curate at St. Mary's Parish, Lawrence, Mass. He was assigned to St. Augustine's College in Washington in 1933 and remained there until he was made prior of St. Mary's Hall at Villanova in 1947.

Father Greenlee marked his silver jubilee to the priesthood on July 7, 1948.

The creation of four new administrative posts at Villanova were announced in August. The new officers include an assistant to the President and three new Vice-Presidents: Vice-President for Academic Affairs; Vice-President of Finance, and Vice-President for Student Affairs.

The Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., University Chaplain for the past four years, was named Vice-President for Student Affairs, a post which includes the school's athletic department.

The Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., who served as Dean of the Extention and Graduate Divisions, assumed the post of Vice-President for Academic Affairs.

Belle Air Staff Schedules Press Meet Saturday

The Belle Air, Villanova's year book, will commence its tenth Annual Publication Conference for Catholic High Schools this Saturday at 8:30 a.m.

150 Schools Invited

High school students, numbering over 3,000 have been invited from 150 schools as far away as Richmond Va., Buffalo N.Y. and Erie, Pa. by the Reverend Daniel P. Falvey, chairman of the conference.

Experts in the field of mass communication will address the student-delegates in the opening assembly at 9:15 a.m.

Buckley Guest

The editor and publisher of the National Review of Current Opinion, William F. Buckley, Jr., author of the controversial best-seller, "God and Man at Yale," as well as the more recent "McCarthy and His Enemies," will be the featured speaker and discuss the need and opportunity for Catholics in the field of communications.

Students will conduct panel discussions following Mr. Buckley's address.

Afternoon Schedule

Midway through the conference, the delegates and their faculty advisors will attend a luncheon in Dougherty Hall.

At 3:30 p.m. a dance will be held in the Field House for the delegates and also all Villanova students. Ed Harvey, popular disc jockey for WCAU radio will supervise the music chores.

The day's activities will be closed with benediction at the grotto, weather permitting. Father Sullivan, Dean of the Arts and Science School and co-moderator of the Belle Air, will address the delegation before Benediction.

Singers Appear At Night School Opening Mass

The Villanova Singers began their year last Thursday night by singing the opening mass for the Evening Division which was celebrated by Father James Donnellon, O.S.A.

Charles Ross, Singers president, said the beginning of regular rehearsals would be posted and that the program for this year will include additions to the traditional singing engagements.

Ken MacGillivray, sophomore class president, has returned to his dual capacity as accompanist and librarian. Other officers are: Joe D'Aquila, Hank Nichols, and Jim Judge.

Juniors Meet

Junior Class President Bob Mulcahy has scheduled a class meeting tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. in C & F Auditorium to discuss plans for the year.

Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., university president, addresses students during opening Mass of the academic year.

LYNX to Form Editorial Staff

With the prospect of two issues this year, the LYNX, campus literary magazine, will hold its initial meeting of the year on Monday at 4:30 p.m. in 101 C & F.

First on the order of business for Monday's meeting is the selection of this year's editorial staff. A new editorial position, contributing editor, will be established. The duties of this editor will include the responsibility for submitting a fixed number of articles and essays for each issue.

Two Editions Forseen

The staff has its work cut out for it. Dr. John Phillipson and Mr. James Mitchell, faculty moderators of the publication, hopefully promise two editions of the Lynx.

Two editions means that much more material will be needed. Contributions are solicited from anyone on the Villanova campus who feels he has some literary talent and even from those who don't feel particularly talented.

Campaign Underway

The Inquirer is conducting a campaign to raise funds for the Dorsey family.

In a letter to Mrs. Dorsey, Father Donnellon said:

"Deeply conscious of the many sacrifices and personal dangers faced daily by our police officers and in specific recognition of the recent misfortune suffered by your husband, Villanova University wishes to join with others in paying him honor.

"I am pleased, therefore, to inform you that a full four-year scholarship to Villanova will be made available to your son, George Dorsey, Jr., upon completion of his secondary education. I trust we will have the honor of enrolling him in our freshman class of 1975 on thereabouts."

New Cut System Adopted To Halt Class-Cutters; Quality Points Affected

"For the first time at Vilanova University, attendance at all classes and laboratory sessions will have a direct effect on the computation of a student's quality points and grade point average," said the Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., the recently appointed Vice-President for Academic Affairs in an official statement regarding class attendance last week.

The previous "cut system" in effect for several years is now completely eliminated, including the incurrence of a double "cut" or absence for missed classes or laboratory sessions on the day preceding and following school holidays.

Absence Affects Grade

In contrast to the disregarded ruling under which one less than twice the number of weekly credit hours due to unpardonable reasons constituted a failure in a course, the newly-adopted method will either improve or lower a student's grade point mark since attendance will be graded according to the number of unexcused absences the student incurs from all his courses.

A student who is never absent will receive a grade of A but if he is absent as many as six times from any one course or a combination of courses he will receive a B. Eleven absences constitute a grade of C.

The average student carrying 17 to 20 credit hours per week will be given an absence mark of D when his total reaches 16.

The number of absences which deserve the grade of F varies according to the number of credits. For example, a student with 20 credits will receive a failing grade for attendance after his twenty-third absence.

Twenty-two absences rate an F for 19 credits; 21 absences for 18 credits; while 18 absences is one over the maximum required to pass with 15 credit hours.

Students Fill C&F Auditorium In Spirited Rally For Football Team

Despite the rainy weather, Villanova's football team was given a spirited send-off to the Detroit University game last Thursday night.

A surprisingly large turnout filled the C&F Auditorium to cheer for a victory amid much banner-waving and streamer-throwing.

Spirit Committee Strikes

Villanova's recently-formed special effects division of the Spirit Committee under sophomores, John Rumbarger and Bob Reynolds provided the highlights of the rally by marching five students dressed as defeated Titans into the auditorium to lead the students in song.

Victory Leaf Given

A notorious "white-hat" known as "Little Caesar" then appeared in a toga to present a victory laurel-wreath to Ron Wood, Villanova's team captain.

Then followed words of thanks and optimism by Ron Wood, Don Luzzi, Dave Parr, John Gianantionia, Bill Magee, and assistant-coach Joe Rogers.

Fall Plans Announced:

Belle Masque Holds First Meeting; Members Welcome New Director

Belle Masque dramatic society greeted its new director with an "enthusiastic turnout" Thursday.

DuPrey New Director

Mr. Richard A. DuPrey, a member of the English department and a seasoned college director, replaced the Rev. William J. Krupa, O.S.A., as director.

Belle Masque President Mike Clark said more than 60 new members turned out at the opening meeting. Plans for the fall play, which is already in rehearsal, were announced.

Tryouts for the play—Clark wouldn't announce the title—were held over the weekend.

Father Krupa Transferred

Father Krupa served as moderator-director of Belle Masque for 11 years before being transferred to parish work in Lawrence, Mass., during the summer.

Mr. DuPrey, a native of New Hampshire, will confine his duties to the directing end. A moderator will be named later, according to Clark.

He took his master's degree in theatre arts from Tufts University after turning out original scripts during his undergraduate day at St. Anselm's College.

Commenting on the new director's appointment, Clark said: "Belle Masque is greatly pleased with the new director and would like to publicity welcome him to Belle Masque and to Villanova."

Freshmen To Present Play

At the same time Clark announced that Belle Masque was introducing a new setup this year for freshman members. "They will present their own play and will be trained separately from upperclass members," the president explained.

Strictly Opinion

By PAUL FINAN

And so another school year has begun, and the returning Villanovan observes many changes. There have been new appointments within the Administration, the new class absence rule has been introduced, and Belle Air Hall has been moved to its new location. Garey Hall, the new home of the Law School, is nearing completion and should be ready for occupancy in the near future.

Yes, the Villanova scene is a rapidly changing one, and with every passing year the student observes the expansion program in action. And with expansion, especially the rate at which Villanova is growing, improvements have to be made. New theories must be tested, new ideas must be introduced. This is being done.

Improvement in the Student Body

Perhaps the improvement which I am going to discuss will seem minute compared to others being made, but an improvement within the student body is one which directly benefits the University. This improvement has been made in a program which deals with the Freshman Class. What could be more ideal?

The task of putting into action a successful orientation program is indeed a very difficult one. Many problems are to be confronted along the way, such as the selection of able committee members, the proper enforcement of the orientation rules, and also the ability to help the new class with its "first year at college" problems.

Total Strangers Make Good

It is safe to say that when the average freshman arrives at Villanova, he is here for the first time. He is a total stranger to the rules and regulations of the University, to the ways of college life, and to the day to day existence of a Villanovan. He is anxious to be exposed to the religious, educational and social advantages offered here. He has perhaps traveled a great distance to come to Villanova that he might learn her ways, and yes, to become what a true Villanovan should be.

According to our handbook, the purpose of orientation is primarily to give a brotherly welcome to the freshmen and to instill and foster in them a love for Villanova and cooperation in all university activities and interests. To accomplish all this is certainly no easy task.

Villanova's Finest Orientation Program

This year, Villanova is witnessing perhaps its finest orientation program. Why? Undoubtedly a good part of its success is due to the outstanding efforts of the committee. New Look For Gridders

by BOB MULCAHY

Sunday's victory over Detroit may well be the dawn of a new era in Villanova football. The long awaited comeback was launched as the Wildcats won the "must" game. A loss here could have put the team down for the rest of the season.

Running hand in hand with the success of the team this season is the tremendous spirit exhibited by the student body. Rallies are better than ever before, demonstrations are greater, and the crowds are larger.

All these factors are extremely necessary for a winning team. Hats off to the Spirit Committee for the fine job they have done.

New Uniforms

The new look on the gridiron is also exemplified by the complete uniform change this fall. Departing from their traditional blue-jersey and gold-pants outfits, the Wildcats have donned white jerseys with blue arm stripes and white pants with blue and white stripes down the side of the leg.

The new uniforms will feature two sets of jerseys. One will be white with blue UCLA-type stripes circling the shoulders at the armpits; the other will be blue with white Northwestern-type stripes circling the elbow.

This is only Villanova's second experience with a uniform change and the victory over Detroit erased the jinx connected with new uniforms. In 1949 the 'Cats had won four straight games and donned new outfits against thrice-beaten Tulsa. Tulsa won the game and needless to say the uniforms were junked. The team went on to win the rest of its games. However, the uniforms have proved no "jinx" this year as evidenced by the record.

Olympic Fund

It seems everything is a first this year; not only did the Wildcats win the second game of the season for the first time in three years, but Bud Dudley has scored another first in the promotional field. His unprecedented Olympic fund game has given V.U. nationwide publicity. Through the generosity of Villanova, all the profits of the Florida State game in Municipal Stadium Oct. 27, will be donated to the Olympic fund.

Student Circus

To add icing to the cake, all seats will be priced at $1 and the student circus as well as the band of FSU will make the trip to Philadelphia for the game. Tickets to the 100,000-seat Municipal Stadium game will be sold at Food Fair stores.

Villanova will use game captains this year with a regular captain being selected at the end of the season. Thus far Joe Ryan and Ronnie Wood have led the team.

Variety Show

To show their versitility, the footballers put on a surprise three-act variety show for the benefit of the incoming freshmen players, coaches and members of the athletic department. Hit of the show was the rendition of "Tonight You Belong To Me" by Gene O'Pella and Bill Craig.

Douglas Resigns

Other news around the campus and Field House is the resignation of line coach Otis Douglas so that he can assume the head coaching duties for the Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian league.

At the present moment "Bull" Schweder former Penn and Pittsburgh Steeler standout is helping with the line.

I Formation

Florida State, opponent in the fund game, operates out of the "I" formation devised by coach Tom Nugent and publicised by Notre Dame a few years ago.

Villanova has signed a contract with Petro and WIP to broadcast "live" five games on the current schedule. These games are Dayton (Oct. 13), Boston U. (Oct. 20), Florida State (Oct. 27), Boston College (Nov. 2), Iowa State (Nov. 24).

Wildcats Down Detroit, Win Ushers In New Era

Lose Opener to Texas A & M, 19-0; Bauer 18-yd.-Run Beats Titans

By Jack Curtin

The promise has become a reality. After two years of speculation and anxious waiting, Villanova is ready for big-time football.

A 18-yard touchdown run by halfback Johnny Bauer ushered in the new era of Villanova football Sunday afternoon before more than 10 thousand fans. The fleet-footed wildcat raced around right end with the deciding points in the third quarter as Villanova came back from a five-point deficit to an upset victory over the Detroit Titans, 8-7.

The Detroit conquest was unquestionably a team victory. From start to finish, there were all fighting Wildcats on the field. The Mainliners continually drove the Titans deep into their own territory, outgaining them three to one, and if it weren't for several costly penalties and fumbles, would probably have score one or two other touchdowns.

The Wildcats drew first blood late in the first quarter when right end Van Injaian tackled the Detroit quarterback, Steve Piskach, who had gone back to pass, in the end zone for a safety.

Run Erased

With Vilanova leading 2-0, Detroit used its only sustained drive to score a touchdown midway in the second quarter. A pass interference penalty nullified a fine 35-yard run by fullback Rollie West and gave the Titans the ball on the Villanova 38-yard line.

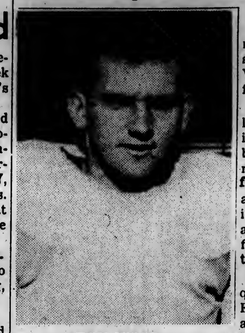
A series of short drives brought the ball to the 22-yard line, where an 18-yard pass to left end Al Richards put the ball on the four. Detroit halfback Bill Dando pushed across the line in three plays, Piskach converted, and the Titans led at the half, 7-2.

Wood Blocks Kick

However, early in the third period, the Wildcats finally capitalized on one of several breaks. The Titans were forced to kick from their own 20, but before the kick could be made, Ron Wood burst through the Detroit line and blocked it.

Don Luzzi recovered the ball, setting up Bauer's scoring drive on the next play. A key block by Injaian opened the way for the touchdown. Bauer's try for the extra point was no good, but nobody cared as Vilanova's first touchdown of the season proved to be a winning one.

Villanova Dominant



During the fourth period, the Wildcats again kept the ball in Detroit territory, and were on the 35-yard line when the final gun sounded. Although it is hard to pick out any special heroes in the victory, special note must be made of the fine ball-carring of Bauer and Dave Parr, and the excellent quarterbacking of "Billy the Kid" McGee.

The game also marked a radio first for station WVIL, which broadcast the game back to the campus from Detroit.

Golf Tryouts This Week; Outlook Good

Golf team captain Ben Klemanowicz announced last week that try-outs for next year's team will be held this weekend.

At a meeting in the Field House last Thursday, Klemanowicz and athletic director Ambrose "Bud" Dudley set Saturday, Oct. 6 and Sunday, Oct. 7, as the dates for the try-outs. Students interested must be at the first tee of the Main Line Golf Course by 9:00 a.m.

Freshman candidates, although they will not be able to play in competition next spring, are also asked to try-out.

Had 7-5 Record Last Season

The golf team, which gained varsity status after World War II, has had many successful seasons. Last year, the linksmen had a 7-5 record against teams of the calibre of Penn, Princeton, and Penn State.

"Good Prospects"

Klemanowicz has high hopes for next season, especially since all last year's lettermen will be returning. "The propects for next season look good, and we hope that the weekend try-outs will make us even stronger," the veteran captain added.

A sophomer Muff Day contestant hoists himself during the rope climbing event. Sophs turned back the frosh.

Muff Day Opens 'Mural Program; Football Next

The fall Intramural Program for 1956-1957, under the direction of Father John Dunne, O.S.A., and Ed Geisz, intramural director, began last Thursday afternoon on Mendel Field as the annual MUFF Day competition took place. The Sophomores downed the Frosh 110-96, forcing the new students to continue wearing their "regs" until tonight.

Competition was tight in the individual events, such as the tug-of-war, racing, football and basketball skill events, with only four points separating the two classes going into the all-important football game. It was on the gridiron that the Sophs achieved their final winning margin, beating the yearling squad, 9-0.

Football League Top Attraction

Highlighting the rest of the fall program is the touch football league. The Intramural Council, headed by Jim Moran, Junior Arts student, expects as many as sixty teams to participate in this fall's contests. Last year's battles drew several large crowds to Mendel and Austin Fields in the twilight hours.

The annual tennis and horseshoe tournaments should draw many followers of the less strenuous forms of athletic endeavor. Other opportunities for the Villanova student to display his prowess lie in the volleyball tournament, outdoor foul shooting contests, cross country races, and golfing events.

Lelite Track Presents Stadium With New Face

By JOE SLAVIN

Since the early part of July, Villanova's "new" track has been under construction. Upon completion, Villanova will boast of one of the finest tracks in the east.

The existing track has been completely excavated to a depth of one and one-half feet and the present track built up from that level. The sub-base consisted of six inches of ballast with three inches of gravel to bring the grade up to sub-base level. Three inches of cinders from the old track were place on this base. Finally lelite, a type of cinders used exclusively for running tracks was mixed with loam to form the running surface. This mixture provides an excellent binding quality for the cinders. Over 400 tons of lelite were hauled in for the construction.

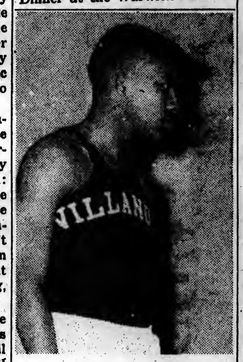
Melbourne Beckons 'Cat Track Stars; Jenkins And Reavis Train For Olympics

By FRANK FLEMMING

Deep in the obscurity of Goodreau Stadium, far from the eyes of the crowd watching football practice, may be found two men preparing to carry the name of Villanova University to international fame. Both men, Charlie Jenkins and Phil Reavis, are representing the United States at the Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia this fall.

Jenkins will be a contestant in the 400 meter test and Reavis will be competing in the high jump. Charlie may also take part in the 1500 meter relay. Jenkins holds the worlds record in the 600 yard indoor race.



Although only 5 feet 8 inches in height, Reavis has consistently jumped a foot over his height and has gone as high as 6 feet 10 inches. He has jumped over further his head than any man in history.

The two athletes will leave Villanova on Oct. 10 and fly to San Francisco where they will take part in an intensive three-week training. On Nov. 3 they will leave the coast with Uncle Sam's track and field team. The team will have a two-day layover in Hawaii during which they will participate in a pre-Olympic meet and then will fly directly to the Olympic City.

The two track stars are training hard to bring first place medals home to Villanova. Charlie Jenkins, speaking recently for both representatives said: "Just because I got third in the 400 and Phil got second in the high jump at the trials this summer does not mean that we won't be shooting for first place in November." Reavis summed it up in fewer words by saying, "We'll do our best."

Villanova most likely will have a third man in the Olympics when the Irish Olympic Council announces the team that will represent Ireland on Oct. 1. Vil-

Joe Ryan Gets Maxwell Award For Aggie Play

Forecasting the type of play to be expected from the 1956 Wildcats, veteran Villanova center Joe Ryan was named the recipient of the first weekly Maxwell Award for outstanding football performance.

Ryan ,who came to Villanova from New Dorp High School on Staten Island as a fullback before being switched to the center slot here, was voted the award by the Philadelphia sportswriters for his outstanding line play in Villanova's 19-0 defeat by the Texas Aggies at College Station, Texas, Saturday, September 22.

He received the award last Monday at the Maxwell Award Dinner at the Warwick Hotel.

Rugged scrimmages such as the one above show the reason why Villanova's gridders have found the key to victory. That's Ron Cherubini pulling down a fellow teammate.

Korean Vet Excels As Student And Athlete

By JOE SLAVIN

Electrical Engineering and football is a mixture not recommended for the average college student. Here at Villanova it is considered next to the impossible. However, Mike Flynn, standout varsity performer for the past three seasons has proved that at times the impossible can be performed.

Flynn's tranquil personality belies the experiences of his past life. Determination has been a prevalent factor in his personality since his first football tryout in high-school. The coach at Colt Memorial High School in Bristol, R.I. was amazed when a 108 lb. sophomore appeared in uniform at the first session. The first out found Mike going home with the coach's advice to come back again "when you put on some more weight."

Heavyweight

The same advice was offered to Mike in his junior year. Finally, in his last year his determination seemed to overcome the coach's better judgment and Mike was placed on the squad. It appeared that the coach's advice had been taken in earnest by Mike for he now weighed slightly over 115 lbs. In the last few games, his goal was realized, Mike starred with the Varsity.

Immediately after graduation Mike entered the United States Marine Corps. Shortly after "boot" camp the Korean War broke out. After graduating from radio school in California, Mike was transferred to Korea. For the next 10 months, he worked as a wireman for his company. It was his responsibity to keep communications in working order. Determination again seemed to prevail in Mike's personality.

Coveted Navy Award

For outstanding accomplishment beyond the ordinary call of duty Mike Flynn was awarded the coveted Navy Letter of Recommendation.

Again in 1952, Mike decided to try out for football. He spent the next several months playing for the 6th Marines. Upon discharge, he decided on studying Electrical Engineering at Villanova. After watching several scrimmages Mike decided to try out again for football. Coach Art Raimo soon realized Mike's capabilities and awarded him a berth on the squad.

Admired By All

Between classes and after practice sessions a determined student can be found conscientiously using spare minutes to complete his heavy assignments. On road trips his team-mates are amused by the manner in which Mike can quietly envelop himself in some problem of higher mathematics, completely oblivious to the usual comedy routines. However in reviewing his past life, it can be realized that Mike is not studious, he is merely determined to be an electrical engineer. Students admire Mike for being an athlete and athletes admire Mike for being a student.

Bill Hattrick, Arts '57: I think it would have been worth it to the school if the administration had matched the Canadian offer Douglas received. I say this because I feel he is the one coach in a thousand that a lineman would willingly "lose his looks" for.

Sam Pietrofitta, Eng. '59: I feel as though he let us down. He worked hard, and helped Coach Reagan to build up the team, but he left when he was most needed. I only hope it won't have a bad affect on the team's playing.

Bill Brown, Arts '57: It's got to have a bad effect on a team when you lose someone of Douglas' quality. It wouldn't be too bad if you could come up with someone like him, but let's face it, you can't.

Dick Schleicher, Eng. '57: I think everyone's taking this too seriously. It will hurt the team's spirit for a short time, but football players aren't inclined toward passion. A win this week will help the team to quickly forget him, and win some ball games.

Texas A & M, 19-0. Three long drives by the Aggies, in the first, third and fourth periods proved to be the margin of victory.

The Wildcats were stopped three times inside the Texas 20-yard line, their best drive coming in the fourth quarter. They advanced to the Aggies 10-yard marker before the clock ran out on them. It was during this drive that Parr got loose for the longest run of the day, 40 yards.

Delany Highlights Summer By Shattering Magic Mile

By DON KEMPF

Ron Delany, Villanova's smiling Irishman, highlighted the summer athletic schedule by attaining the ultimate goal of all milers, the magic four minute mile.

Among his competitors in the star-studded field at the 17th Annual Compton Invitational Track Meet on June 2 were Denmark's Gunnar Neilson, holder of the 1500 meter world record, ex-Villanovan Fred Dwyer, and Bobby Seaman of UCLA.

Youngest Miler To Break Mark

At 20, Ron has become the youngest miler in history to achieve the "magic circle" of four-minute men. He gained membership with the remarkable time of 3:59 flat, the seventh fastest mile on record. Only Landy, Bailey, and Bannister have turned in better times than Delany.

Ron stayed well back in the field until the final 50 yards, when he closed the gap on Neilson, taking first place with a final kick at the tape. Neilson was timed in 3:59.1

built on both the inside and outside lanes along with a new drainage system. The track has been slightly banked to take full advantage of the drainage system. This will permit the track to be useable very shortly after inclement weather.

A 235 yard straightaway along the north stands will provide eight lanes for dash events. The width along the stands has been extended to 24 feet. Within the track itself, the pole vault, broad-jump and high jump areas have been completely reconstructed. The pole-vault runaway has been extended to 150 feet and paved with an asphalt mix. The high-jump and broad-jump areas have been paved with the lelite and loam mix.

Coach Jim Elliott and Assistant coach Jim Tuppeny have been working diligently since the start of construction. They have been checking the completed work daily to insure conformity to the specifications of the AAU. Baring inclement weather, the work should be finished within two weeks.

decide that since they have ventured that far, the "T" is but a few steps farther and much more appealing.

History profs have been noted strolling around the campi slightly befuddled in search of a football player who may possibly remember where last year's training table was. It seems that the history office has been moved from its old homey position within the confines of Belle Air Hall, a move which brings tears of nostalgia to the eyes of our prominent historians, to the former sight of the voracious struggle for the survival of the fittest, the old training table. "Yeah, sure prof, it's down that way in the big buildin' wit' all the offices in it. Say prof, do youse guys gotta train, too?"

On The Move

The math office has also been moved from old Belle Air, to new quarters in the old rock 'n roll emporium, the Pie Shoppe, newly christened Classroom Annex. Conveniently abbreviated A. C. for the less fortunate students who have difficulty in remembering the alphabet conventionally, much less backwards.

Speaking of the old Pie Shoppe, it is a sad sight indeed to see an occasional lonely figure wander in in the late afternoon and wistfully listen for a bygone echo of "Bee Bop a Lou Bop, She's muh Baybee," or to search hopelessly for the tattered remains of an old pinball machine. It is enough to make one unpeg one's pants and get a crew cut.

In A Serious Vein

Yes, it may be a bit difficult on us returning to a long winter of reality, of classes, homework and responsibility, but in a serious vein may we say it is a great privilege to attend a Catholic University like Villanova. Let us quickly adapt ourselves to the work before us in order to assure a return engagement with the same problems next year at this time, as we enter Villanova for another year.

Seniors have even a stiffer task to face, we must adjust ourselves to facing probems of much greater magnitude in the years to come.

with a time of 4:00.8, only two tenths of a second off the American record held by Wes Santee. Most observers felt that if Seaman hadn't bumped Dwyer on the final turn, Fred could have become the first American to break the four minute barrier.

Villanova track coach, "Jumbo" Jim Elliott, and Director of Athletics, Ambrose "Bud" Dudley, hailed Delany's race as the greatest single event in Villanova athletic history.

Gyrene Recruiting Starts Monday in Dougherty Hall

The line will form in Dougherty Hall next Monday for all prospective Platoon Leader Corps, Officer Candidate School and Marine Aviation candidates.

Captain E. H. Utley, U.S.M.C., Marine Officer Procurement Officer from Philadelphia, and First Lieutenant Darby, USMC, Marine Aviator, along with Captain Grace, Villanova Marine instructor, will process candidates for the above-mentioned marine corps programs daily 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, Oct. 8 through Friday, Oct. 12.

Processing on Campus

The candidates will be received in Dougherty Hall and those that have no apparent disqualifications will be able to receive their written test, physical and the other necessary processing right in Dougherty Hall.

The Platoon Leader's Corps enables candidates to work towards a commission with one or two summer training periods at Quantico, depending on what year of schooling the applicant is in. This program is open to all up to and including juniors.

For seniors, there is the Officer's Candidate School program through which the senior can work towards a commission after graduation.

Pilot's Program

For those interested in careers as marine aviators, commissions as such can be obtained through the Marine Aviation program.

The week's concentrated recruiting offers the incentive of extra convenience to procrastinating recruits. At other times the processing must be taken in Philadelphia.

lanova's four-minute miler, Ron Delany, is almost a sure member of the team. Delany is one of the few men in the world to break the four-minute barrier. Ronnie has never been beaten by an American, as his only losses were to John Landy and Jim Bailey, both Australians.

Contrary to common belief, these men are not the first Villanovans to take part in the Olympiad. George Guida, former Villanova great middle distance man, participated in the 1948 games in London. Browning Ross ran in the steeple chase in both the '48 and '52 games.

Supervised Every Detail

When the play finnaly went into production, Father supervised every detail.

In rehearsal Father worked out every nuance of acting down to the movement of the actor's eyes. Father could spot the slightest mistake in gesture from the rear of the Field House. Musical Comedy Reviewed

"Summertime," it died. Revived after audiences had appreciated "Oklahoma" and "South Pacific," it gained new popularity. Soon it is to be made into a cinemascope production which will bring it to greater audiences. To me "Porgy and Bess" is even more basic to the new trend of serious music in musicals. It has always seemed more serious and deeply felt.

"The Three Penny Opera" was first written in 1928 by Kurt Weill, better known as the writer of "September Song." Translated from the original German and brought to America, it opened in March, 1954, becoming extremely popular. This work is not completely American and is too satirical for mass audiences, but possibly after a few more plays of the stature of "Porgy and Bess" and "The Most Happy Fella," "The Three Penny Opera" will reach the popular stature it deserves.

The Trend's Significance

Now that we have accumulated this list of hits, we may ask what do they signify and what will they lead to. First, I think that they signify the popular acceptance of a deeper type of music. Two new evidences of this has been that the amount of show albums sold has reached an all time high, and the music circuses have proved successful. People have taken to this new musical trend. Composers, like Rodgers, Loesser, and Loewe, have elevated American musical standards, while not losing popular appeal. It is a slow process, but it has been rewarding. Better trends have proved themselves here to stay. The courting and marriage of American musical comedy has taken place. I hope to see this coming fall many fine new offsprings which we can praise and sing.

Nalty Home Recuperating

Don Nalty, who lay near death after an automobile crash in May, has returned to his New Orleans home to recover—and doctors feel his participation in prep school sports considerably aided his recovery.

Nalty returned home with his father in mid-September after being in a Norristown hospital from the time of the crash into a bridge over the P & W tracks near Norristown. He was thrown from the car and landed near the railroad tracks.

Nalty, who would have completed his junior year in June, participated in sports at Georgetown Prep, Washington, D. C. Doctors have said this aided his recovery. He was a diver on Villanova's varsity swimming team.

Spirit Rings From Airport

By TOM SMITH

It was New Year's Eve and V-J Day rolled into one when Villanova's spirited students turned out to greet their victorious footballers early Monday morning.

For almost an hour they waited at International Airport in Philadelphia and the cheering and singing were causing bystanders to gather.

Then, at 12:45 a.m., the airliner glided along the runway and the weary ballplayers trooped out. They admitted later they were surprised at the reception that greeted them inside the airport building.

"Beat Dayton"

An estimated 175 students had clustered around the escalator waving banners and shouting for a win over Dayton Oct. 13 as the athletes came up.

That was nothing, though, compared to the turnout at Leary Hall around 2 o'clock. Almost 500 students, some clad in pajamas and slippers, put on an impromtu parade around campus as the ballplayers retired to their dormitories.

Players Talk

By the time they passed Sullivan on te march back they wanted to see some victors. Game Captain Ron Wood acknowledged the chant and joined with tackle Don Luzzi in promising "seven more victories."

Wood appeared especially happy about the reception. "I thought about a crowd meeting us as we were flying back but it seemed crazy that anybody would come out this late. It was great," he remarked.

PUBlicly Speaking . . .

By BOB and MIKE

Did you work this summer, or did you have a job like most Villanovans? Seems everyone is joyfully relating to us how they took the poor outfit that hired them this summer. After an extensive survey, we've come to the conclusion that the average Villanovan was paid for 40 hours a week while working approximately 12. Even more phenomenal were the wages. How about the making $4.85 an hour counting uninspected sweet potatoes for the Government?

Then there's the experienced strawberry picker, not to be confused with a cotton picker or a chicken plucker, rating $6.50 per hour who worked his way around the world.

How many unbelievable truths have you been subjected to by friends vacationing in Chile, Greece, India, or the Amazon? As world-travelling Navy men. There aren't any flies on most guys around here, but that doesn't include us. We're afraid we had to work this summer, and didn't make too much headway in either the material or intellectual realm.

We're still rather baffled and subsequently stymied by the tremendous impact the Freshmen have made. We find it an insurmountable task to make any social headway. Upon inquiring at the favorite local female institutions, we find reservations booked solid until mid-December.

We find ourselves seeking heretofore unknown pubs some 30-odd miles from alma-mater due to the overcrowded conditions at the local parlors occasioned by the be-dinked upstarts. Rumor has it that 276 juniors and 237 seniors remained in their rooms Saturday night occupied with such diversions as bridge, checkers and Monopoly because the freshmen had all the social activity in the area under thumb.

We've actually been toying with the idea of matriculating as freshmen again with the thought in mind that perhaps we might once again enjoy the social life we once knew.

A serious note . . we'd like to commend all Villanovans on the outstanding display of spirit they've shown so far. All of us have a lot to cheer about this year. We hope that everyone will stay behind the Wildcats and show them we really appreciate the winning season they are about to give us.

V.U. Student Body Ready To Descend On B.U. Next Sat.

"I don't care how you get to the Boston game next week-end but get there," screamed Pat Nicholson, Vice-Chairman of the Student Council at the first meeting of the junior class last week.

The chairman of the enthusiastic Spirit Committee, responsible for the supervision of all football rallies held this fall, emphasized that round-trip bus tickets to the Villanova-Boston U. game Oct. 20, including a seat on the fifty-yard-line at Braves' Field, may be purchased in Dougherty Hall from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. until a week from today.

PAT NICHOLSON
Spirit Committee head

Leo Rogers and John Fixl, junior English majors, are ticket co-chairmen.

Ticket Prices

Student tickets cost $13.25 although alumni and fans making the trip may secure them for $14. Tickets for the game alone may be purchased for $2.50 which guarantee the bearer a seat in the Villanova student section.

Those going on the round-trip ticket will board buses in the Field House parking lot on Friday, Oct. 19, at midnight and arrive in Beantown early Saturday morning.

Demonstration Planned

Nicholson requested all villanova students to stay away from headquarters, until early Saturday evening, at which time a mass demonstration will send the squad off to the gridiron.

An afternoon party is tentatively planned preceeding the team send-off.

Buses Return Sunday

Buses will not depart from Boston until 10 o'clock on Sunday morning and arrive on the Main Line by 8 p.m.

"If the trip proves a success" continued Nicholson, "the Student Council will endeavor to arrange several similar weekend football trips next year."

Rallies Send Off Olympians Today, Gridders Thurs.

Villanovans will urge their footballers to defeat Dayton at a sendoff and rally at the Villanova railroad station tomorrow at 7 p.m.

Spirit Committee Chairman Pat Nicholson said fire engines and a parade are on the schedule. Guard Ron Wood, team captain in the Detroit victory, will present the Cyril J. Burke trophy—annual prize for the winner of the Titan-Wildcat game — to the student body.

This morning at 8 a sendoff for Phil Reavis and Charley Jenkins will be held in front of the Field House. The pair will leave for the Olympic training camp in California later today.

In an effort to encourage more students to join the large number already planning to make the 10-hour trip, the Spirit Committee will stage an all-out drive during the Activities' Period tomorrow.

Last Trip in '51

The Committee has accepted numerous applications already but hopes that many more students will take advantage of this opportunity to make a Villanova weekend excursion for the first time in five seasons. The cross-state trip to College Station for the Penn State game during the successful 1951 campaign was the last time such a movement was undertaken.

Straw Vote Underway to Determine Political Preference at Villanova

By BILL JONES, Associate Editor

Several weeks ago, a prominent national magazine published an article rebuking the college youth of America for their apathy towards government in general and the forthcoming national election in particular. They published a survey of college students as the basis for their remarks.

The VILLANOVAN is curious to find out how well this theory holds at Villanova and is therefore holding a student poll of its own on the coming election. The purpose of this poll is to find out just how many Villanova students are interested in the election and who their preference is to guide our country for the next four years.

Let us make it clear that you do not have to be of voting age for the VILLANOVAN poll. Any student, graduate or undergraduate, is eligible to submit his or her selection. No name is to be attached to the ballot to be found on page three of this edition of the paper.

It is asked that each student submit one ballot for the poll, as it is the hope of the VILLANOVAN that close to 100 percent response can be obtained, and a true tabulation of the political views of Villanova can be effected.

The poll will last two weeks.

Stan Rubin's 12 Tigers To Highlight Soph Cotillion

An internationally famous jazz and dance band has been signed for this year's Sophomore Cotillion, on Oct. 26 in the Field House.

Jack Curtin, dance chairman, has promised that Stan Rubin, his twelve piece band, and his jazz - combo, "The Tigertown Five," will provide "the best music ever heard at a Villanova dance." Rubin and his band have, in recent years, become tremendously popular in collegiate circles and have conducted highly successful European tours, including a performance at the Grace Kelly wedding in Monaco.

Father Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Moderator of Athletics, poses with the Cyril Burke trophy which Villanova regained possession of for another year by beating Detroit, 8-7, two weeks ago.

Record for RCA

"The Tigertown Five," recording artists for RCA Victor, are graduates of Princeton University who were gathered by Rubin in their college days. They turn out a brand of dixieland which has few, if any, equals. The band, which specializes in the more sedate music for dancing, was formed at the same time.

The dancers at the Cotillion will be given their double treat in varied portions. It is planned that the dance band will play for the greater part of the evening with the "Five" coming on intermittently for a small dose of dixie. There is some speculation, however, as to whether the "jam sessions" will be allowed to end as promptly as scheduled.

Theme Secret

Curtin has further stated that the band will not be the only outstanding feature of the event. Decorations, under the co-chairmanship of Matt Brennan and Al Lepore, have already begun. The highly unusual theme will remain a closely guarded secret until the night of the dance.

The secrecy has been preserved to such an extent that not even the members of the Decorations Committee have been informed. The only comment by Brennan was "with the enthusiasm shown to date by the committee, I feel that our highly imaginative theme will be long remembered at Villanova."

T. Walker Lloyd plans to incorporate the theme as a major ingredient in the refreshments of which he has charge.

Door Prizes Given

The committee for publicity, headed by Don Kempf and Bob Reynolds, has undertaken several unique projects for the Cotillion. Among these are the first presentation of door prizes at the dance, a new design in tickets, and a distinctive souvenir booklet.

Because of the paperwork involved, Chairman Curtin has appointed Jim Hull, to act as monetary chairman of the entire operation.

Tickets Sales Start Today

Tickets, which go on sale today, will be supervised by Frank Fleming and Larry Waterhouse. The price is $2.50. Sales will be limited to Sophomores for the first week in view of the expected great demand.

Ken MacGillivray, president of the Class of 1959, feels more than satisfied with the work completed to date and looks forward to a dance to which other cotillions will be compared.

Senior Weekend Plans:

Prom, Dinner Dance, Fathers' Day Highlight Festivities

In the last social weekend of their collegiate careers, seniors will dine and dance March 1 and 2.

Class President Vince Sullivan announced that the dinner dance wil take place in the Broadwood Hotel, March 2 after the Prom in the Field House the night before.

Sullivan outlined Senior Weekend plans at a steering committee meeting last Wednesday. At the same time he announced that Bill Hattrick will direct the dinner dance and Dick Mason will be chairman of the senior Fathers' Day celebration May 11.

No chairmen for the prom have been announced by Sullivan.

Other details about the weekend are still in the planning stage, according to the president.

The steering comittee voted to contribute to a "tool pool," which has been proposed to Student Council. The three upperclasses and Turf 'n' Tinsel Society would contribute money to purchase a complete set of tools which could be used by contributing organizations for construction of dance decorations and stage sets. Student Council is scheduled to consider the "tool pool" motion at a future meeting.

Rev. Thomas Mahoney, O.S.A., speaks at one of the conferences during Thursday's day of recollection.

Strictly Opinion

By PAUL FINAN

This year, the Student Council is going to strive to attain the position of high respect which it rightfully deserves, by setting the pace and example for all other campus organizations.

With the three point program recently introduced by capable Council chairman Joe Martin, the student representative body is working to establish itself as the center of campus activity by cooperating with the Administration to make Villanova a University equal to its potential.

Administration Liaison

The importance of the Student Council is easily seen. It is the voice of all the students and yet is really more than that, for it has the opportunity of directly discussing with the Administration any of the various problems which might arise within the school.

The Council has not wasted any time in getting down to the business at hand. It has already undertaken the orientation program successfully and is now sponsoring a football trip, the success of which depends on the response of you, the student.

Proposed Parent's Day

An attempt to increase senior privileges is now being made. The underclassmen have not been forgotten though, for a Parent's Day exclusively for them has been suggested. The purpose of Parent's Day would be to bring more parents closer to Villanova.

FINAN

With the afore-mentioned projects and ideas, the present members of the Student Council are not looking for praise and self-benefit. What they are looking for is improvement of any kind which will benefit the student body and the University.

Willing and Able

From what has been said, it is apparent that the members of the Council are not sitting back and taking things in stride. They are taking their election to office as an indication that confidence has been placed in their ability to work. And they are not only willing to work but have a strong desire to do so.

At a recent Council meeting, a wonderful enthusiasm for the coming year was shown and many new ideas were introduced.

Peering . . .

with NORM PEER

. . . At all the charcoal mud shoes displayed on campus. Fresh mud may be picked up in the newly-founded Office of Mud Administration in the cellar of Belle Air Hall.

. . . At the tired looking faces in class. Clues point to too much wine, women and song. Better cut out that singing and get down to work.

. . . At the gala opening of the infirmary. Everything was alright until two left-over trench mouth cases were found strapped in their beds. Cooled the whole affair, I hear.

. . . At the rampant school spirit being shown lately. There's a large group leaving this weekend on foot for the Houston game (Nov. 17). How about it, fellows it's not that far.

. . . At the new business of counterfeiting faculty parking stickers. So far, though, only 850 applicants.

Collegians Can Prove A Point

The spirit thus far manifested by the student body in all aspects of Villanova life has been extraordinary. The students have done themselves proud far and above the expectations of many. Let us hope this spirit and interest will continue and become stronger as the school year progresses.

The coming presidential election, one which will decide the fate of the nation for the next four years, is a good test for the enthusiasm and political interest of the Villanova student body. In this very interest, the VILLANOVAN is running a poll to uncover the political likes and dislikes of the students.

Much has been said about the lackadaisical attitude of the average college student to the political scene and is the attempt of the VILLANOVA to prove this attitude does not exist among most Villanova students.

Contradiction of this somewhat widely accepted attitude can only come from the student himself. It is up to the student to prove conclusively that he is not disinterested in the affairs of the nation. The student is the future nation, and it is our contention that he is actually much more politically interested than contended by various surveys.

Through the VILLANOVAN poll, the student can show exactly what his interest in politics is, even if he is not of voting age. In the future, one of our most important duties will be to vote. Our votes, fitting into the network of thousands of others, will help to guide the America of the future.

It is up to all of us of voting age to vote this year, as in every election year. It is one of our rights as an American. Of course, all of us cannot vote because of age requirements, and some of us must wait four more years. But in the VILLANOVAN poll everyone can pitch in and show his interest and enthusiasm in the future of the nation, and it is the sincere hope of the editors that everyone will pitch in and do his part to refute these ideas of several factions which consider college men and women so lightly.

The editors of the VILLANOVAN strongly wish that first, all those in position to will take part in the national election this year, and secondly, that each and every Villanova student will take time out from his daily routine to seriously consider our poll and submit a carefully and intelligently answered ballot.

A Fair Draft

A presidential candidate's statement that it might soon be possible to abolish the military draft appears a bit unrealistic. With the Pentabon complaining that not enough 18-year-olds signed up for the six-month active duty program, it would seem that American young men as a group will stay away from military duty as long as they can.

And because the United States is looked on by the rest of the world as some kind of good shepherd, this country must continue to keep her military establishment strong and flexible.

The Pentagon feels that a force of more than 1½ million men must be kept on active duty. And with the life as a professional military man today lacking the glamour it once did, this active force must be strengthened by a constant flow of conscripts into the armed services.

No one can deny that there are abuses and discriminations in the military draft. But the draft, in the past six or seven years, has been overhauled and made more democratic. Parents who watched their sons become scooped up by draft boards because college life was out of the question financially, often charged that offspring of wealthy men were able to escape military service simply by staying on college rolls.

This is no longer the case, generalyy. Most young men have resigned themselves to the draft after they have finished their college careers. Drafts boards, although usually eager to let collegians earn their degrees, will not generally allow more than four years for higher education. There are exceptions, but these can often be traced to students in the scientific fields, where trained personnel is needed.

BILL board

By BILL REICH

At the end of this past summer, as the good nuns packed their bags and summer school ended, Villanova University lost an almost ten-year-old tradition. A well-known and never-to-be-forgotton gentlemen left this campus. Eight years ago, Mr. Russell Roray—to the upperclassmen, "Russ"—came to offer his services to what was then Villanova College. On what campus could be found a man who was greeted with such feeling? Who of us can forget such meals as chicken "a la fork?" We all remember the friendly way we were welcomed by the smiling Russ, the way any request was handled with finesse, his explanation that due to a slight oversight on his part there just wasn't enough food for an additional portion. We all realized his position and were very cooperative.

Years have passed and now Russ has retired to his manor along the Main Line. Mr. Joseph E. Morris, "Elwood" to us, has attempted to fill Russ's place. But from my vantage point amid the mass of glass and aluminum, I can see the disappointment registered upon the faces of those who still miss the sight of muscles and tattoos over the potatoes. If you should see Russ in Bryn Mawr, lift your head up high and say hello for me! . . . There's still the General!

The Social Season

If you have nothing to do this weekend and your finances can stand it, I'm sure you'll find enjoyment at the University of Dayton stadium. Should this be a little too much for you, there's enough going on this week to entertain you more modestly. Big doings at Rosemont this Saturday—an open invitation for all to attend the Country Fair sponsored by the Alumnae. The fair will start at 11 a.m. and continue through the day until around midnight. There'll be a real carnival atmosphere with booths and a country supper. A square dance will begin at 8 p.m. with the admission being fifty cents per person. All proceeds go to the Rosemont Building Fund. Looks like a good chance for the upperclassmen to get back on the good side of the "Rosies" after the way the frosh have been showing us up.

Although the Town and Country is not a new restaurant to many, you can now expect a new atmosphere. The management has just finished redecorating—to appeal to the University clientele. One visit will convince you to make this a regular spot.

Music Quiz

Do you know music? If you think you do, listen to Garry Mara over WVIL and test your talents. Villanova's answer to the $64,000 Question will not only give you enjoyment music-wise, but will also provide a few laughs and some unknown facts. Keep your eyes open for notice of the renewal of "Wildcat Safari."

This week's best buy in records comes from the flick "High Society"—"True Love" and "Well Did You Evah" (Capitol) with Bing Crosby, Grace Kelly, and Frank Sinatra.

And Around Campus . . .

Has the one new paved parking lot alleviated the problem of where to park? (For Day Hops, that is) . . . Does that space marked "F" mean it's reserved for a faculty member or new frosh? Who was the senior in Sullivan charging freshmen a quarter each to watch the World Series? (Sales Major of course) . . . another campus mystery—who stole the two phone booths in Dougherty? Security Force in action!

Fish Story

"The Fisherman Magazine" isn't going to let any big ones get away. The magazine heard about a certain couple soon to be married in Angler, North Carolina. It has gone all out to add its bait and sinker to the occasion. The magazine has promised them a honeymoon in New York. The hooked couple are Miss Marie Fish and James Bass.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

It is the desire of the editors of the VILLANOVAN that the "Letters to the Editor" column be one of the prominent features of the paper each week. Letters from students voicing their opinions on campus topics can provide most interesting reading matter for the student body.

The editors wish to remind readers that each and every student has the right to air his or her comments of praise or rebutal. Students with intelligent ideas for the improvement of the university should not be shy about coming out in the open about them.

Ike Well-Fortified By Good Government

"I have diligently sought the path of personal responisibility and of duty to the immense body of citizens who have supported me and this Administration in what we have been jointly trying to do."

Last March, Dwight David Eisenhower announced his entrance into the presidental race with the reason quoted above. This is a very appropriate statement since it portrays the president as a man of service that began in June, 1915, when he graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

This matter of service has been stretched and berated by both major parties from "Ike's" first step into politics, but the heart of the situation lies in the non-political praise handed him during the Second World War. A close analysis of the president's four years in office will disclose a case of servitude to a country and a job similar to the devotion of that military career.

Opposed to most popular knowledge of "Ike" is the fact that at birth in Denison, Texas, he was baptized "David Dwight" and the present transposition came from family preference and usage. Not all of his early life was spent in Texas, however. In 1892, his parents settled in Abilene, Kan., where Mr. Eisenhower was educated in the public school system.

The most notable part of his life is centered in an historic military career, which began with an assignment in the infantry. From this position as a "greenhorn" second lieutenant, the following years might well be called the polishing of a born leader.

From a position of an executive officer in the Canal Zone, he attended the Command and General Staff School, where he graduated at the head of his class. This, after schooling in the Army War College, was rewarded with the position of aide to the Assistant Secretary of War.

None of these are qualifications for a leader, they say, but the sequence of events and their results are indicative of the staunch character so pronounced in the last Administration.

As a man approached by both Republicans and Democrats in 1952 for the presidential nomination, this character has been symbolized in a basis of sound government.

In broadening the profile of such a man, it might be cogent to add that never before in world history has one man been held in such trust by people of other nations. In 1950, for example, he was recalled to military service by president Harry Truman to coordinate action in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He had been recalled in 1949 to serve as temporary chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Eisenhower unfortunately was hampered in the fall of 1955 and the spring of this year by illness which might have proved fatal to the Republican platform, much less the president himself. On this count some hold that it would now be "better to be sick than healthy." Aside from the issue of health itself in his case, an important point that has been brought to the fore—Will Nixon be able to supplement the Eisenhower Administration in the newly-important position of vice-president? This is the dilemna that faces not only the president but his party supporters in their quest to obtain another four years of White House residency.

". . . I am dedicated to a program that rigidly respects the concepts of political and economic freedom on which this nation was founded; that holds there must be equal justice and equality of opportunity for individuals; that adapts government methods to changing industrial, economic and social conditions; and that has, as its never changing purpose, the welfare, prosperity, and, above all, the security of 166 million Americans," commented President Eisenhower in a television address to the nation from the White House last February.

Late Start Was No Hindrance To Adlai

"The job is to cling everlastingly to the truth; to try everlastingly to find it in the clatter and confusion of these times—and to find it even in the storm of a political campaign." These are his own words, which Adlai E. Stevenson will have to try to live up to as he makes his second attempt for the presidency of the United States as the standard bearer of the Democratic party. This time, Adlai hopes to be right and President.

Grandson of Grover Cleveland's vice president Adlai E. Stevenson, known to Republicans as the "headsman" for the way Republican postmasters' heads rolled under him, on one hand, and of Jesse Fell, the first man to propose Lincoln for President, on the other, Stevenson has a decidedly bipartisan past, if a partisan present.

Urbane Illini

Stevenson, a fifth generation Illini was born Feb. 5, 1901, in Springfield, state capital of Illinois. After a brief stint in the Naval Reserve in 1918, he was graduated from Princeton in 1922. After studying law at Northwestern University, Stevenson was admitted to the Illinois bar in 1926.

Sauve, witty, urbane, and characterized by Punch as being so remarkable as to be almost British, Stevenson lives the private life of a gentleman farmer on a 71 acre farm in Libertyville, Ill. Here were reared his three sons Adlai Jr., Bordon and John Fell.

Wide Government Experience

Starting in journalism with the Bloomington Pantograph, Stevenson before long moved into government service helping to frame the Agricultural Ajustments Act, forerunner of Soil Bank, of the New Deal, serving as assistant to the Secretaries of State and of the Navy, helped frame O.S.C., the United States delegation to that organization. He paused long enough in his breathless rush from office to office to pick up the Navy's Distinguished Citizens award.

Back in Illinois, Adlai plunged into politics in earnest challenging incumbent Dwight Green for the governship of Illinois. He won by the largest margin of votes in that state's history. The position of governor of Illinois gave Stevenson political and administrative experience, prestige and a large block of votes in the Democratic convention, none of these things being exactly a detriment to a prospective presidential nominee.

Estes To Adlai To Ike

Estes Kefauver having committed the unpardonable sin of entering his name against President Truman's in a presidential primary, Truman decided that Stevenson would make the perfect presidential nominee. And so through the act of fate and Mr. Truman, Stevenson found himself a participant in a race in which he wasn't quite sure in which direction to run. Adlai made very many erudite speeches which very many didn't particularly understand and unfortunately Mr. Truman was busy translating them into unequivocal terms. Someone named Eisenhower won. Even Dr. Gallup had successfully predicted that one.

Adlai Kefauverized

Estes Kefauver raised a threat again in the Minnesota primary but after Adlai slightly Kefauverized his technique, he went on to clinch the nomination by the time his party convened this August. Despite indications during the pre-convention campaigning that he might have preferred even "Joe Smith," Estes Kefauver, the man who would rather be veep than nothing, became his running mate.

Despite efforts to build a "new" Stevenson, ala the kindly family man, he remains as always more a representative of his and the majority of his party's ideas rather than a strong personality. With vision, logic, ideas and awareness of his own intelligence, Adlai Stevenson was and remains an —nasty word—intellectual.

Political Round-Up:

By GENE DONOHUE

1956 Presidential Foes Start "Mud-Slinging" Campaign

There is a song in the United States that most of us have heard at one time or another, the first few bars of it being, "You take the high road and I'll take the low road . . ." This is the song that more than any other typifies this year's political campaign.

Down through the years, it has been traditional in most of our presidental battles for opposing parties to take different views on vital issues such as the tariff, the slavery question, free coinage of silver, etc. But in this campaign there are no real issues, only issues which have been fabricated by party leaders to arouse the people. Even the important farm question is not a real issue because both parties agree that the farmer needs aid; there is just disagreement as to the method to be employed, and even in that there is no sharp dividing line. If a person were to take the political platforms of both parties and compare them he would find them quite similar. The Democrats have gone as far as to reverse one of their very basic planks . . . the support of the low tariff.

DONOHUE

High and Low

This lack of issues leaves only one actual battleground for the parties . . . the candidates themselves. In the beginning, all the candidates used the "high road" and frankly, the campaign was becoming quite boring. But true to form, toward the end of September and especially now in October, the candidates are getting their shoes muddy on the "low road." A typical example of this was Mr. Eisenhower's statement that Stevenson's proposal for stopping hydrogen bomb tests and ending the draft in the near future was "wicked nonsense."

Of course pointing to the above example does not imply that this is solely a Republican method, not by a long shot. Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Kefauver could stand to have their shoes shined too. But it is obvious that Stevenson is a bit more cynical about it. Such statements as, "I think it is too bad that the President indulged himself in such a gross misstatement of the record. I am sure he is an honorable man and could hardly have deliberately intended the misrepresentations which his speech included . ." are typical examples of such mudslinging.

A Different Campaign

Perhaps the question might arise in many minds as to why a man as great as Mr. Eisenhower must resort to this political debauchery. The truth of the matter is that he is no longer the timid amateur of 1952. The Eisenhower of 1956 is a professional politician who is itching for a good fight. Mr. Stevenson threw out the challenge and "Ike" accepted it. He realized that the attitude of the American people has changed in four years. In 1952 the people were so disgusted with Trumanism and all that it implied that the Republicans could have run "Joe Smith" and still won the election.

Voting Tonic

But today things are different, the Republicans have already lost two Southern states that had gone over to them in the last election, Kentucky and West Virginia. Along with this, there are fourteen other states that had gone Republican in 1952 and are very doubtful this year. It is this reality that has taken President Eisenhower out of his untouchable shell and given this campaign all the essentials of a good one. The American people enjoy an all out fight for the presidency. This is the tonic that is needed to get them to the polls on November 6. Mr. Eisenhower knows this and is giving it to them.

A Current Problem:

College Students Should Consider Draft Deferment

First of a Series of Three Articles by John McGee

One of the first questions a freshman may ask is, "Should I take a deferment and how do I get one?" In this and two succeeding articles, I intend to answer this and the other oft-asked questions by college students on the all-important subject of military service requirements.

Some students in the past have refused to accept a military deferment because they knew from their local draft board that their age group would not be reached until after their graduation. This, however, is a gamble since no one can see how the international situation is going to fluctuate in the four years one hopes to attend college.

Prefer to Defer?

Even though a deferment does extend your maximum age limit for military obligation from twenty-six to thirty-five, it pays to have one for the security and peace of mind it gives you.

A college student may obtain a deferment in either of two ways. He may take the College Qualification Test given by the Selective Service and obtain a grade of seventy, or he may rank in the upper half of his freshman class.

A grade of seventy in the College Qualification Test will defer him for the complete four years of college, but ranking in the upper half of his freshman class defers him for his sophomore year only.

A Rank System

To maintain a deferment in the latter case, he must rank in the upper two-thirds of his sophomore class and the upper three-fourths of his junior class. Freshman year is the hardest hurdle.

If a freshman is uncertain of ranking in the upper half of his class and is desirous of a military deferment, he is advised to take the College Qualification Test when it is offered.

Post-Graduate Deferment

For a senior desiring a military deferment for the purpose of attending graduate school, the qualifications vary according to the proposed course of study.

Graduates entering Law School need only rank in the upper three-forths of their graduating class or obtain a mark of seventy in the College Qualification Test.

Advanced students in any of the medical sciences need either to rank in the upper half of their graduating class or obtain a grade of seventy on the C.Q.T.

All others desiring graduate study must rank in the upper one-fourth of their class or obtain a grade of eighty on the deferment test.

Obligations Defined

It is of course no news that most of us are obligated to serve twenty-four months active duty in the armed forces if we are drafted, or volunteer for the draft.

We may enlist in the army or marine corps for thirty-six months or in the air force or navy for fourty-eight months. It is possible to enlist in the marine corps for two years and in the navy for approximately three years under a minority program.

There is even a limited program of the army for those under eighteen and one half where by they join the Army Reserve, train in active service for six months and then train part-time in the ready reserve for seven and one half years.

Six Year Total

Under the new Reserve Forces Act of 1955 the military obligation has been changed radically. Formerly obligated for a total of eight years, everyone is now obligated for a total of six years as follows: two years active duty, one year Standby Reserve (subject to call by Congress in a war crisis), and three years part time training in the Ready Reserve.

The end of the Korean War ended almost all G.I. benefits such as home loan, educational subsidies and low-rate insurance.

This, then, is your present military obligation. Next we will discuss the various officer training programs available to college students and some shortcomings of the present selective service system.

1958 Ring Fittings Held Oct. 18-19

Juniors will be fitted for Class rings on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 18 and 19, it has been stated by Leo Rogers, chairman of the ring committee.

The fittings will be taken in the Publications Office in Dougherty Hall and the tenative hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Thursday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday.

Thanksgiving Delivery

The exact delivery date of the rings has not been set, but they definitely will be delivered before Thanksgiving vacation.

Payment for the rings must be made upon receipt.

Rudegair Named Chairman Of First Seminary Dance

Leo Rudegair, junior engineering student, has been appointed chairman of a dance sponsored by the junior class to be staged in the Field House on Friday, Nov. 9.

Proceeds of this dance will be donated to a scholarship fund for some deserving young man entering the Augustinian priesthood.

This informal dance will be the first of its type at Villanova and the admission will be $2 per couple.

Bonfire and Rally

Prior to the dance, the highlight of the Citadel game weekend, will be bonfire and rally at which the Basca Awards will be presented.

These awards, in memory of Nick Basca, backfield star of the '38 Wildcat football team who was killed in World War II, are presented annually to the halls that have the best decorations relative to the Citadel game.

BOB MULCAHY
Junior Class President

Donations Needed

Later in the semester, a collection will be taken on campus for the Augustinian Seminary Guild.

The announcement of the innovation of this new affair into the social calendar followed the naming of chairmen to supervise the important events of Junior Week next May at a class meeting last week.

Tom Brennan and Jed Diguardi were named co-chairmen for the entire seven days while a five-man Spirit Committee was also contemplated.

Ralph DeCiccio and Gene Fogarty will head the Prom Committee and Clem Birch will direct the committee which will prepare the Dinner-Dance at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia.

Red Cross Blood Drive Opens Soon In Barry Hall

The annual Red Cross Blood Drive will be held at Villanova this year on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 24 and 25.

Donations will be taken from the hours of 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Commodore John Barry Hall.

All those wishing to donate blood can register at a table which will be set up in the Pie Shoppe in Dougherty Hall.

Hank Miller, Senior Engineer, who is a resident of Kansas City, is in charge of the 1956 Drive. Anyone wishing further information on the blood drive is asked to contact Hank.

Digest To Give Cash In Contest

Reader's Digest is offering $41,000 in cash and scholarships as prizes in an October contest open only to college students and faculty members in the United States.

First prize is $5,000 in cash with another $5,000 to the scholarship fund of the winner's college. Second prize is $1,000 cash with an equal amount to the school's scholarship fund. There are ten $500 cash prizes with an equal amount to scholarship funds.

There will be 100 prizes of $10 in book credit from local college book stores. The best entry from each college will receive an additional $10 in book credit.

How To Enter

No blanks are available at college book stores. Entrants simply list in order the six articles which they consider the most interesting in the October issue of Reader's Digest. Those with listings closest to the results of a survey of Digest readers will receive the prizes.

Entries must be postmarked before midnight Oct. 25 and addressed to the Reader's Digest Contest, Box 4, Great Neck, L.I., N.Y. Entries will be judged by O. E. McIntyre, Inc.

Funds Needed

October issue of the magazine includes an article by Howard Whitman urging contributions to scholarship funds instead of flowers at funerals and an account of the success of the Fund for the Advancement of Education's program for admitting brighter boys and girls to college two years earlier.

No Studying Allowed

Resident students must take their studying chores elsewhere this year as Mendel Hall Classrooms have been declared off limits because of Evening School Classes. The Reverend Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., in making this announcement also emphasized that no meetings or other affairs were to be held in these rooms in conflict with the classes.

Schleicher Announces New BELLE AIR Editorial Staff

MIKE FORD
Business Manager

Editorial appointments for the 1957 Belle Air have been announced by Richard Schleicher, fifth-year NROTC engineer, editor-in-chief.

Assistants to the Activities Editor are Gary Moran, Engineering Activities; Brendan Flynn, Arts & Science Activities, and Jack Daly, C & F Activities.

Conference Successful

Schleicher reported that the Press Conference sponsored by the Belle Air was a great success. He added that more than 3,000 high school students attended the day of lectures, exhibitions and discussions of the conference.

PUBlicly Speaking . . .

By BOB and MIKE

We've been told time and time again that spring isn't here, but actually we're not quite sure. The way social life has been thrown at us so far this year, it seems almost impossible to begin pounding the print.

What with mixers, rallies, jazz concerts, dances, parties, parties, and more parties, we haven't yet felt the full impact of our studies. Of course, we haven't been so completely given over to abandon our work for play, however appealing the idea seems, or have we?

The way one would go about tackling a problem of this sort would surely indicate his status as man or boy . . . . . and in this regard, we feel we haven't quite reached manhood, so move over boys!

BOB and MIKE

Remember guys, a well-rounded man is one who has a healthy and fully rounded perspective of social life, among other things. With this thought in mind, we suggest you strive to blossom forward into a beautiful specimen of a social animal.

For the benefit of those who don't consider themselves too advanced in matters social-wise, we would perhaps be of some service to you in suggesting a few hints previously known only by the authors and their companions-in-pubs.

In regard to picnics, don't hesitate to investigate the alleged liquid larder before committing yourself to surrendering recompense. Beware of picnics reputed to have "planned games" in the offing, but more especially beware of picnics wherein hot dogs are to be served.

Completely disregard the little known, fat sophomore who attempts to sell tickets on Tuesday for a Saturday party when he informs you that the amount of refreshment to be served has definitely been set regardless of the number of socialites who will lend themselves to the affair.

While considering attending a party, don't hesitate to inquire as to whether records are to be used in place of a dixie-land combo, or as to whether sandwiches are to be served. If either is the case, forget it.

We're sure you've been warned of this on innumerable occasions, but allow us to rehash it for you. Definitely beware of a date who is a "friend of a friend." No doubt you've been told that she has a warm and winning personality, she's a favorite with all the girl's and she's well liked by all who have occasion to make contact with her. But take it from us men, it just never quite works out that way.

We leave it to you men, heed our words of wisdom and act accordingly, or all is lost.

Possible IRS Radio Show Topic of Recent Meeting

The International Relations Society held its first meeting Wednesday in Mendel Hall. General discussion on the program for the coming year took place among the members and, according to President Gene Donohue, "the year is taking on the appearance of becoming one of the best."

Reich Chairman

One of the chief topics that was discussed was the formation of an IRS radio show. Program Chariman Bill Reich received about 15 volunteers for this undertaking and promised to bring a more concrete proposal before the body at the next meeting which is scheduled for next week. A date for the meeting was not announced by Donohue.

More than 50 members and candidates were present at this initial meeting and the body seemed to be interested in the work of the organization, according to Donohue. Other items that were brought up at the meeting were possible trips to the United Nations in New York and a trip to Washington.

ICG Planning Session For Tomorrow

Chairman William Lesko has announced that the first meeting of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government will be held Thursday, October 11, at 10:30 a.m. in Room 104 C&F. All are invited to attend.

At this meeting, an orientation will be held dealing with the program for the coming scholastic year, with regard to speakers, conventions and other events to take place during the year.

Offers Knowledge

The purpose of the I.C.G. is to foster an interest in governmental problems; provide a means whereby Villanova students may gain knowledge of the practical operation of good government in a nonpartisan manner; prepare for and cooperate in the activities and conferences held by the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Conference on Government. This year's state convention will be a mock state legislature.

The Villanova chapter has been very active during the past years and is prominent in the State Committee and in the Southeast Region, holding several positions in these offices.

Beta Gamma

Jack McGee, Society President, announced that Beta Gamma will hold their regular meeting on Thursday at 10:30. They intend to introduce to the new members the art of debating.

New Midshipmen and Unit Officers Lead Villanova NROTC Battalion

Now in its eighth year of steady expansion, Villanova's Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps, starts off the new academic year with a new midshipman battalion staff and a fifty percent new outfit staff.

Leo Kane Leads Unit

Heading up Villanova's answers to Annapolis on Tuesday afternoons is Leo Kane, Engineering school senior, new midshipman Battalion Officer. His Executive Officer is Richard Madara, better known as "Sleep," senior history major.

Comprising the rest of the Battalion Staff are John McNicholas, Operations Officer; Ray Clarke, Adjutant; John Hooper, Supply Officer; George Drumheller, Communications Officer, and Angelo Pastare, Mustering Petty Officer.

Alpha, Bravo, Charlie

Alpha company is Commanded this year by Henry Whalen with Pat Gallagher as his Executive Officer. Jay Husted commands Bravo company and Don McDermott is Executive Officer. Charlie company has Ronnie Pyle for Commanding Officer and James Shea for Executive Officer.

The band is in the hands of George Bednar with Bill Doblas second-in-command. To Phil Kent goes the demanding position of commanding the Drill team. Jay O'Neil will serve as his aide.

Seven Unit Replacements

Backing up the midshipmen in the classroom and NROTC administration are four new officers and three new enlisted men.

Commander John L. Burge, U.S.N., replaces Lieutenant-Colonel Wilson, U.S.M.C., as Executive Officer of the Villanova Unit. Commander Burge is married and has two children and was formerly Executive Officer for Photographing Squadron 61 at Mirama Naval Air Station in San Diego, Cal.

Naval Engineering Instructor

Replacing Lieutenant Rowlands as Naval Engineering Instructor is Lieutenant (j.g.) Richard N. Peterson, U.S.N., Lt. Peterson was also formerly stationed at Mirama Naval Air Station, San Diego, on the staff of the Carrier Air Group Five.

Ordnance and Gunnery this year is in the hands of Lieutenant-Commander Norman E. Matheson who succeeds Lieutenant Duronio as Sophomore Instructor.

Carrier Experience

The all important Freshman Orientation and Naval History course is now in the hands of Lieutenant (j.g.) Eldon E. Park, U.S.N., whose prior tour of duty was on the Attack Aircraft Carrier Kearsarge. Lieutenant (j.g.) Wilson was last year's Freshman Instructor.

New Enlisted Men

Serving as assistant to Lt. Peterson is Chief Robeson, U.S.N., replacing ST1 Crandall. James N. Donovan, GM1, formerly of the U.S.S. Macon, replaces GM1 Jacobs as assistant to the Freshman Instructor Lt. Park.

On the immediate agenda of the unit are plans to march at the Citadel game at Villanova Stadium on November 9. The following week the unit will pass in review for Admiral Von Heimberg, U.S.N., Commandant Fourth Naval District.

SPOTLIGHT

Sully Seen A Success

Meet Vince Sullivan, president of the class of 1957. Vince is the second son of Rear Admiral Dennis J. Sullivan USN (Ret.) Born in San Diego, he completed ten years of school before moving to Washington D.C. He attended Gonzaga High School where he earned varsity letters in football, basketball and track.

Villanova was Vince's choice as the place to further his ambitions for a career in engineering. He chose V.U. because he wanted a "Catholic College with a good engineering school."

World Traveler

Vince is a regular NROTC man and as such has seen France, Spain, Germany and Sweden.

During his years at Villanova, Vince has been active in the intramural program, winning the intramural high jump honors the past two years.

No slacker in studies, "Sully" is first in his Chemical Engineering class and is active in the Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering school fraternity. Vince has been a member of the Spirit Committee, Orientation Committee and Junior Prom Committee.

VIN SULLIVAN

Hometown Fan

Sportswise, Vince is a fan of the Washington Senators and Washington Redskins. Musically he prefers Broadway musicals, a favorite being "Paint Your Wagon," and the bands of Les Elgart and Tom Dorsey.

A steady companion of Vince's at Villanova social functions is Dorothy Floyd, a Rosemont day-hop.

Although Vince has no definite plans beyond his stint in the navy, he has what it takes to succeed in whatever field he chooses.

Night School SC Outlines Plans For Year At Opening Meeting

The Evening Division's Student Council, inaugurated last year, held its first meeting of the new school year after the Evening Division's opening Mass on September 27. Dr. Eugene Powers, Dean of Evening Division, welcomed the member of the Student Council and briefly outlined the activities planned which include a Christmas Party and a spring dance. An Executive Council and various committees also were formed.

Executive Council

Members of the Executive Council and their respective departments are William E. Ball, Engineering; William E. Fanus, Statistical Quality Control; Thomas A. Mills, Accounting; John W. Murray, Business Administration; Michael Rudy, Engineering; Elizabeth Stewart, Nursing; and Margaret C. Sweeney, Special.

The various committees and their moderators are Publicity—Constance Burczynski, William Aubrey, and George DiFrancesco-moderated by Mr. Jerome J. Fisher; Spring Dance—Agnes Berger, Geoffrey Langdon, Robert Morrison, John Sandowski, and Catherine Smith, moderated by Mr. George J. Chorba; Christmas Party—Jane Brown, William Maguire, Stan Rodkin, Thomas Santobianco, Elizabeth Stewart, and Mildred Wesolowski, moderated by Miss Dorothy Boyle.

PLC Training Program Will End Friday

The processing, which started Monday, for candidates interested in the Platoon Leaders Corps will carry on daily, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., through Friday.

The candidates are being received in Dougherty Hall for their physical, mental, and other necessary tests, by Captain E. H. Utley, U.S.M.C., Marine Procurement Officer from Philadelphia, and First Lieutenant Dardy, U.S.M.C., Marine Aviator, along with Captain. Grace, Villanova Marine instructor.

Fr. Berra Named Jr. Class Moderator

The Rev. Dominic Berra, O.S.A., Professor of Religion new junior class moderator, was introduced to the class at its first general meeting last week. Father Berra promised to give his full support to the class in all their undertakings and emphasized prayer, work and sacrifice as the keys to success.

Opera -- Classica Has Tebaldi In 'La Traviata' Lead

RENATA TEBALDI
Has "LaTraviata" lead

Richard Salisbury, president of Opera-Classica, urges all students unfamiliar with opera to join the audience of opera-conscious Villanovans at the performance of Verdi's "La Traviata" tonight at 7:30 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Tebaldi Sings Lead

Renata Tebaldi, renowned operatic soprano, will sing the lead and have a supporting cast of other well known names, including Francesca M. Pradelli, conducting.

The story of "La Traviata" is based on Alexander Dumas' "Camille," a very successful play, before Verdi decided to make an opera of it.

Conflict Evolves

Its main characters are a beautiful, ill-fated courtesan, her young; romantic, and aristocratic lover, and the aristocrat's loving father. The conflict centers on the clash between the new forces of the times versus the traditional elements, asks the heroine, who has been living with the young romantic, to give him up.

The scene begins when Germont visits Violetta at her summer estate, where she and Alfredo are living. His manner and words, at first, are strong and demanding, for he tells Violetta that she is ruining Alfredo's career and fortune. She reminds him with great restraint and dignity that she in her house and she is paying the bills.

Music Becomes Sweet

Verdi's music for the beginning of this scene is appropriate and effective. The father's notes and melodic line are high and heavy, while Violetta holds her ground with an assertive middle melody. Then, when Germont decides to state his case by telling of his daughter and his concern for her future marriage, which is in danger because of the social repercussions of the illicit relationship between Violetta and his son, Verdi's music changes to a short arietta filled with youth and sweetness that has its ironic touch for Violetta.

But undaunted, Violetta in a dramatic passage of great lyric strength tells Germont that he does not realize what he is doing. He is taking away her only love, her only happiness, her only life. Prophetically, she says that if Germont takes Alfredo away from her she will surely die.

Germont Warns Her

Germont tells Violetta in another arietta, this one suave and knowing, that because of the age difference between she and Alfredo, one day she will lose Alfredo. Violetta realizes the truth of this and her music supports Germont with an up-lifting phrase that says, "tis true, tis true."

Leaves Alfredo

At this point Violetta starts a slow, yielding melody that rises expressively, conveying musically the realization that she must give Alfredo up. She tells Germont that she will leave Alfredo. Now with another uplifting melody, this time by Germont, he supports her decision and realizing her plight tells her "to cry, to cry." Violetta and Germont leave in double circled portion wishing each other happiness.

Inquiring Reporter:

How May Villanova Attain Recognition Equal To Its Potential As A University?

By TOM CURRAN

Since 1953, Villanova has been growing by leaps and bounds. This did not just happen, it was carefully planned, and has a definite goal in mind, which is to make Villanova a big-time University in every way.

In 1953 a Nursing School, and a School of Law were added, and we became a University. Enrollment jumped faster than buildings could be built, and it's still going on.

CURRAN

Progress is the key word and in order to try to help Villanova's progress I have asked some of the students their opinion on the subject.

The question I asked them was: "What do you think Villanova needs in order to obtain recognition, as a big-time University?" I didn't define the word "big-time," but let the men use it as they thought it should be used.

DAN MULLIN, C&F '58: It can only be done if Villanova builds up its athletic program, particularly the football and basketball teams to compete with the best in the country. By doing this the school would gain national prominance and untold publicity. In this way the school would receive more applications for admission, and would be able to be particular in its selection of students.

JIM CORRICAN, ENG. '60: Publicity is the main way, and the best publicity is given by word of mouth. If you could go home and tell your friends what a terrific fraternity house you live in, it would do a lot more to encourage fellows to enroll here. If things like frat houses were added, I think Villanova would advance to a ranking with the top colleges in the country.

John Brown, Arts, '57: There is only one way to be a "big-time" school, and that's by producing the best graduates. It would entail a two-point program; the first would be to raise the professors' salaries, thereby getting the best available. Secondly, the entrance requirements should be stiffened to allow only the best students to come here. You don't need a large sized school to be big-time; you need educated, intelligent alumni and students.

PAUL LANG, Arts '59: I think Villanova's pretty big-time at the present. Publicity is the big thing, and we're getting it now by having prominent track and football teams. The main thing I can see is an increased enrollment, and it's quite evident that we have that. Except for building suitable accommodations to cover the enlarged student body, I don't think we need anything.

JERRY LYNCH, C&F '57: I think the only way to gain recognition, at least informally is to activate Villanova's alumni. Right now they are in a static state, but if they could come alive, especially the Philadelphia group, much could be done to promote the University's standing.

NICK ZIRGANY, C&F '60: I don't think it really needs anything. It's already a big-time University. It may need a few material things, such as classroom buildings and dormitories, but in every sense of the word Villanova is already big-time.

BOB DURKIN, Arts '58: Before you can have a big-time university you have to have a big enrollment. The best way to do this is by expanding the curriculum. If you offer more and diversified courses, it only follows that you will get a larger student body. I'd suggest the addition of a medical school; it would not only increase enrollment but it would help to publicize Villanova and bring in even more students.

Olympian Delany Runs For Ireland

Villanova will have three representatives at the Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia, after all.

Ron Delany, the Wildcats' 3:59 miler, has been named to represent his native Ireland in the 1,500 meter and 800 meter events by the Irish Olympic Council.

Joining high jumper Phil Reavis and middle distance runner Charley Jenkins in the Olympic competition starting in late November, Delany is the fifth trackmen coached by Jim Elliott to earn Olympic team berths.

The first two were George Guida, in the 400 meters and Browning Ross, in the 300-meter steeplechase. They competed in the 1948 Games in London.

Delany, winner of 12 of 14 miles he has run, set a new intercollegiate record for the 1,500 meters in June with a 3:47.3 time.

Straw Vote

It opens today and will run until Wednesday, Oct. 24. The final results will be announced in the Oct. 31 issue of the VILLANOVAN.

Ballot boxes will be placed at various locations around the campus to facilitate the progress of the poll. The boxes may be found at the information window in Mendel Hall, the ticket booth for the Boston University student trip in front of Dougherty Hall, and the publications office on Dougherty's second floor.

Ballots may also be left in the rooms of Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith, 106 Sullivan, Managing Editor Bob Strayton, 337 Good Counsel, and Associate Editor Bill Jones, 211 Sullivan, or slipped under the doors.

All ballots must be submitted no later than 6 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 24.

It is the hope of the editors of the VILLANOVAN that this poll will be taken seriously by the students and the spirit manifested so far this year in the university will continue in the response to the poll.

Chapel Exercises Open Mon.

Evening devotions for Villanova students will begin Monday, it was announced through the Chaplain's office.

Chapel cards will be distributed at this opening service, which begins at 6:45 p.m.

Residents of Sullivan, Mendel and Simpson Halls will attend the devotions on Monday and Wednesday evenings, while the Tuesday and Thursday devotions will be held for residents of the remaining halls on campus.

Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., new Villanova chaplain, was greatly pleased with the day of recollection last week and thanks the student body for their cooperation with Father Thomas Mahoney, O.S.A., and Rev. William McDermott, O.S.A., retreat masters.

A Bit of Italy Expands VU's Languages

Villanova University, in proposing a course in the Italian language, gives to many Americans of Italian origin the opportunity to learn the language perfectly. It is really an easy work for them, but at the same time a wonderful opportunity.

It also forms in the students the desire of learning this poetic and romantic tongue with the end of introducing them to the best understanding of arts, of poetry, of picture and culture in general.

The course is divided into two sections: Elementary and Intermediate Italian. The requirements of the elementary course are only to know the native language and grammar in order to be able to find the differences of pronounciation and essential structure of the Italian construction, and to practice easy readings, translations and short conversations.

The intermediate course requires either the study of the Italian in high school or other equivalent knowledge.

The second course is a review of the study of the grammar, completed now with the special irregular verbs and idiomatic expression. There is also a intensive drill on oral Italian, selected readings, composition and conversation.

Villanova's Opinion To Be Recorded In National Poll

Villanova has been selected as one of the nation's colleges where student opinion is to be gathered for use in polls circulated by the Associated Collegiate Press.

The VILLANOVAN will publish these polls throughout the year, according to Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith.

Students in all four classes, as well as law students, were questioned, according to Smith.

Various Topics

Opinion of students was asked on such questions as the coming presidential campaign, "big-time" college football scandals, the United States' chances at the Olympic Games, rock 'n roll music and Elvis Presley, the federal government and school desegregation, restrictions of college administration, whether college men or women are the neater dressers.

Chapel Society To Train Members For Serving Mass

Richard McEntee, President of the Sanctuary Society, received several new members into the organization last week and made assignments for this semester's religious functions.

Fr. Klekotka, moderator, announced that instruction classes for students who wish to serve Mass will begin shortly. Students interested may obtain information in the Chaplain's Office on the first floor of Mendel Hall.

See You in Boston!

Students have been advised to get tickets now for parents and friends for the Oct. 27 "Olympic Bowl" game between Villanova and Florida State.

Priced at $1, tickets are on sale each class day from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. in the Field House athletic office.

From 9 to 5, And Later

If you ever passed Dougherty Hall late at night and a light was burning on the second floor, then the odds are that Eugene J. Ruane was hard at work. For Mr. Ruane, Villanova Director of Public Information, is quite accustomed to staying up late publicizing the university.

GENE RUANE

Mr. Ruane was born in Hawley, Pa., where he graduated from high school in 1941. The same year, he entered Villanova's pre-law course, but after a year and a half he left for the U.S. Army's "Specialized Training Program" at Princeton. He eventually served at Miami Beach and Tuscon Arizona before being transferred to the Phillipines in 1944.

Gene was discharged from the Army in 1946 with the rank of technical sergeant, and in the same year he re-entered Villanova. In June, 1948 he graduated from the university with a B.S. in economics. His graduation day, however, carries a twofold memory for the hard-working publicist, for it was also his wedding day.

In February of the following year, Mr. Ruane took over the job of Villanova Publicity Director, succeeding Jim Haughton. The job involved publicizing both the academic and athletic ends of the university life.

Mr. Ruane continued in this position until December 1955, when through the efforts of the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., university president, a dream of four years was unfolded. The publicity department was divided into two separate divisions, sports and public information. Jim Gallo took over the sports end while Gene became publicity chief. Gallo was replaced this year by Harry Nash, exVILLANOVAN editor-in-chief.

The Public Relations Office is the medium through which all official news of the university is channelled, and Mr. Ruane has a busy schedule. He follows the usual nine-to-five routine with a half day on Saturday and many nights on the speaking circuit. Besides all this, Gene conducts campus tours for important visitors and also works closely with the University Development Foundation.

Mr. Ruane is the father of Michael, 7 and Kathleen, 6. Both are students at Annunciation School in Brookline, and little Mike wants to come to Villanova. By then, if Ruane has his way, it will be the best known university in America.

AIEE-IRE Meets Tuesday to Open Membership Drive

A record 200 electrical engineers attended the first meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers—Institute of Radio Engineers (AIEE-IRE) on Monday, October 8.

Speakers for the evening were Father John Klekotka, O.S.A., head of the Electrical Engineering department, and Mr. John Clothier, a professor in the department, both of whom stressed the benefits to be gained through membership in the AIEE-IRE, which is starting a drive for new members.

Klapper To Speak

The first evening meeting of the group will be held next Tuesday and will include the first in a series of lectures to be given by outstanding engineers. The speaker will be Mr. G. E. Klapper, a project engineer with the Philadelphia Electric Company.

Mr. Klapper's talk will highlight the problems involved in the design of the company's advanced electrical generating station at Eddystone, Pa., and is entitled "Supercritical Pressure —A Step Forward in Power Generation." The speaker is one of the company's engineers responsible for the design and construction of the plant, which wil be completed in 1959.

Fatkin Heads AIEE

Officers of the club are Harry Fatkin, president; Tom O'Rourke, vice president; John Ellis, AIEE secretary; Tony LaRosa, IRE secretary; and Tom Rasser, treasurer.

Marketing Club Meets Tomorrow

The Marketing Club has scheduled its initial meeting of the year for tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in 201 C&F for the election of officers for the coming year. Last year's moderators Mr. Fredrick M. Burgess and Mr. William H. Charleton will again act as co-moderators for the coming year.

Crucifixes in New Building Pledged By DPE Fraternity

Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity will initiate pledges during the week of Nov. 12 through 17, President John Fusaro announced today.

Only Commerce and Finance students in sophomore year and above are eligible to pledge, Fusaro explained.

Jim Stark has been appointed head pledgemaster and will have 23 pledgemasters working under him.

Pledge week will be climaxed with the fraternity's annual dinner dance the night of Nov. 17.

The first edition of Delta Pi Epsilon's newspaper will be published sometime next week, Fusaro said. The paper was "well received" in its initial appearance last year, according to the president.

Barney Miller and Bill Englert will serve as co-editors of the paper.

Earlier, Fusaro announced that D.P.E. would donate crucifixes for the proposed Commerce and Finance building. He said the remainder of the pledge would be paid "sometime next year."

Fusaro also said D.P.E. will join with Lambda Kappa Delta and Delta Pi Mu in sponsoring an interfraternity ball, which has been tentatively scheduled for Jan. 11.

Officers, besides Fusaro, are Bernard F. Conway, vice president; Philip W. Seefried, secretary; Anthony Tuozzo, treasurer; John Dunne, Student Council representative.

Seven Candidates Being Screened For Senior Post

Seven nominees for a vacant senior position on Student Council are being screened by the administration.

The candidates were nominated to run for the resident engineering post after Jack O'Rourke resigned from Council in August to enter the Augustinian Order.

Nominated at a class meeting Thursday, attended by 23 seniors, were John Decker, Harry Fatkin, Dick Mason, Jic McCormick, Terry McHugh, Jim Schuster and Jim Wray.

Bob Schiller, chairman of the Student Council elections committee, said he did not know when the election would be held.

Senior Class President Vince Sullivan presided at the class meeting, attended by 17 Engineers, five Arts students and one C & F student.

All seniors will be eligible to cast ballots in the election.

"Unethical Problems"

By HARRY & GERRY

In response to many requests, we have devoted this column to helping Freshmen solve some of the complex problems that have arisen after their first contact with college life.

Dear Editor,

My problem concerns my upperclass roommate. Ever since we met, he has been borrowing all my clothes and money. He also uses my car on week-ends. I have been agreeable so far, as I would like to be his friend. However, recently he stole my date for the Owl Hop, and then locked me in my room. What can I do? Please hurry as I am getting hungry.

Dear Frosh,

Roomy has obviously gone to far. Tell him off nicely, but if he persists and is bigger than you, squeal to the counselor.

Dear Editor,

I am in perfect agreement with all rules of the Villanova campus. However I am very disappointed over the fact that the maintenance crew will not let me store my teddy bears in Alumni Hall. Whenever I try to pin one of them down about it, he begins to snicker and point at me. Please help me as I am getting lonely.

Dear Frosh,

Don't worry, this rule was rough on all of us at first. However you should soon outgrow teddy bears.

Dear Editor,

I am a very popular freshman nurse. There is always such a crowd around me that I can never hear what those in the back are saying to me. Usually, I just smile and nod my head. Yesterday, my girl friend told me that I have accepted eight dates for the Soph Cotillion. Is there a way out?

Dear Frosh,

Your case is hopeless. In the future, have those in the back row, write their questions out, and send them up to you.

Dear Editor,

I live on campus, and like many of the boys, occupy the top bunk in my room. However, as a child, I developed the habit of jumping out of bed as soon as I awoke. I can't seem to break this habit since I have come to Villanova, even though I have sprained my ankles several times. Recently, I awoke and vaulted as usual from my bed, unfortuneately landing on the cleaning lady. She became very upset and has refused to enter the room for three days. How can I regain her confidence?

Dear Frosh,

Your solution is really quite simple. Turn your bed around

Singers Slated To Appear At Ceremony For Nurses

The Villanova Singers, 80 members strong, held their first full scale rehearsal last night in the C&F auditorium. They also welcomed 20 new members into their organization.

Dean H. G. Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School and Director of the Singers, announced plans for increasing and improving the repertoire. New songs on the program this year include "There's Nothing Like a Dame" from Rodgers and Hammersteins' "South Pacific;" and "Students Marching Song" and "Gaudeamus Igitur" from "The Student Prince."

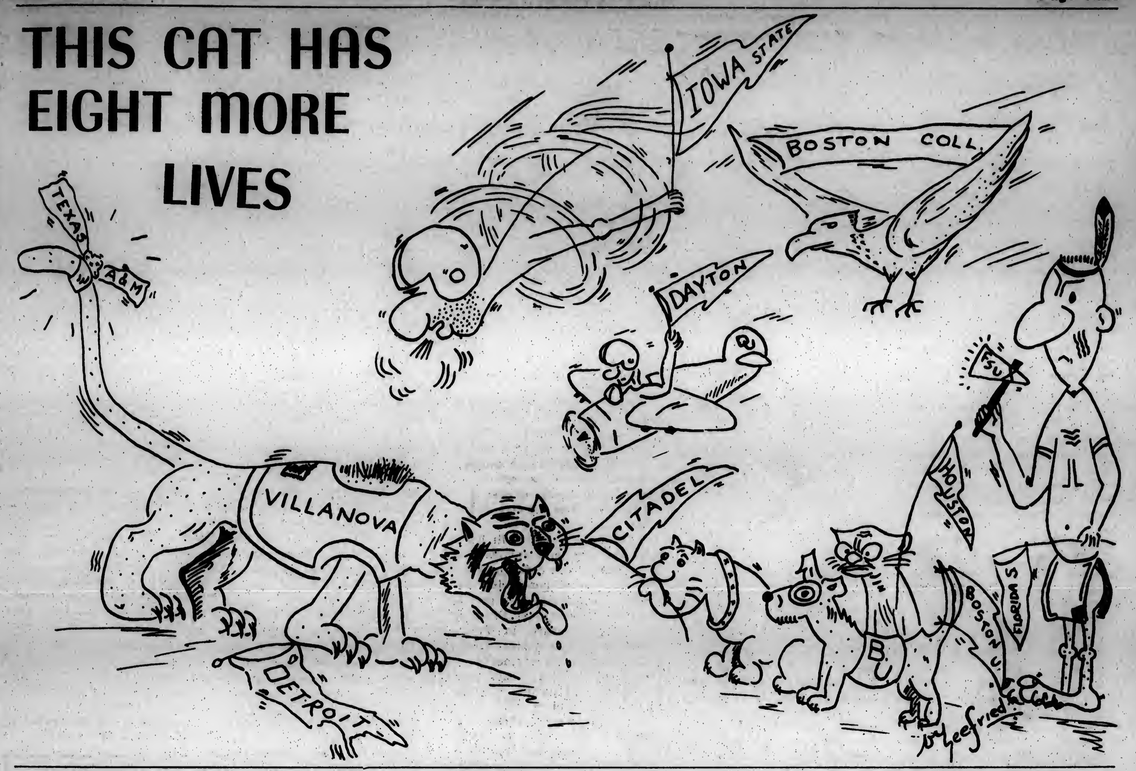
They also discussed "Whale of a Tale" as sung by Kirk Douglas in the movie "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" and "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho," a Negro spiritual.

The members were also interested in doing "Cool Water" in the style of the Sons of the Pioneers.

Presently the Singers are preparing for the Nurses Capping Ceremony to be held October 14 in the University Chapel. In the future is the Annual Faculty Dinner in the Field House at which the Singers are scheduled to make their fourth consecutive appearance.

During the year the Singers also serve as the Schola Cantorum, singing at Chapel Services.

Plans have been made for the Villanova school songs, including the "Alma Mater" and "The Villanova Victory Song," to be arranged into four part harmony.



Charlie Ross, senior science students and Singers President, said that he was well pleased with the tremendous interest shown thus far by the Singers. He was especially pleased by the results of the auditions and the fine Villanova Singers spirit.

Six Veterans Help Harriers Attempt to Preserve Streak; Soph Hopefuls Add Strength

By BILL VINCENT

The opening of the Wildcat's cross country season is highlighted by the return of all the leading harriers from last year. Ron Delany, four minute miler from Ireland; Alex Breckenridge, Scottish distance star and winner of the renowned Boardwalk Mile at Atlantic City a few years back; John Kopil, George Browne, and Al Peterson, all distance stars from Bayonne, New Jersey, and sprinter Gene Maliff are the leading returnees from a year ago.

Coaches Jim Elliott and asst. coach Jim Tippeny are getting the team ready for another tough schedule which includes such powerful teams as Navy, St. Josephs, Georgetown, Seton Hall, LaSalle, and Pitt. The latter was undeated for twenty meets till last year when the Wildcats defeated the Panthers 25-30. In this meet Alex Breckenridge, Ron Delany, and John Kopil finished one, two, and three, ahead of Arnie Sowel.

New Blood

To help the veterans with this rough schedule, sopohomes Joe Armon, hurdle champion from nearby Malvern Prep; Bill Rahn, ex-West Catholic track and cross country star; Charlie Stead, hurdler and quarter miler; and Vic DeMaio, half mile sensation, are around to bolster the sqaud. The last three were members of last year's Freshmen Mile Relay Team, which swept the indoor and outdoor races.

Delany's effort broke the record established in 1953 by N. W. Harper, a Navy runner.

The only home meet is against Fort Monmouth, which always has its share of track and cross country stars. This meet is on Wednesday, October 24 and it will give everyone opportunity to witness the harriers in action.

With all this material and the installment of a new track at Villanova, the Main Liners should have no trouble duplicating last year's undefeated season and stand a great chance of winning the IC4A championship and thereby gain national recognition once again.

New Record Set By Ron Delany in Triangular Meet

A record breaking performance by Ron Delany was not enough as the Villanova cross country team went down to defeat in a triangular meet with Pittsburgh and Navy at Annapolis Saturday. The score was Pittsburgh, 34, Villanova 39 and Navy 59.

In covering the four-mile course in 20 minutes and 50 seconds, Delany shaved 19 seconds off the course record. Tom Timon of Pitt was one second behind, as he was nipped at the wire by Delany.

Johnny Kopil who was third and George Browne, who was ninth were the only other Wildcats who placed and this tells the story of the Mainliners' defeat. Pittsburgh placed five of their seven runners in the top ten to win the meet.

Delany's effort broke the record established in 1953 by N. W. Harper, a Navy runner.

Wildcats Aim At Second Victory; Will Oppose Dayton On Saturday

Reagan's Squad Anxious To Keep Winning Streak Alive

By FRANK FLEMING

The Villanova Wildcats, after first tasting victory at Detroit two weeks ago, will be trying to continue on that pleasing diet when they meet the Dayton Flyers in the University of Dayton Stadium Saturday night.

Coach Frank Reagan's eleven will be in top physical condition for their invasion of Ohio. The squad has been working with emphasis on the Flyers for two weeks as a result of last week-end's open date.

Returning Lettermen

Dayton has 17 lettermen returning from last year's team,—which won only three games, including its final upset victory over Villanova. Coach Bud Kerr's charge surprised the football world this year by overcoming a 13-0 halftime deficit to upset a highly regarded Holy Cross team, 14-13, for its second win of the season.

The Flyers work out of a straight "T" formation and build their attack around the running ability of Billy Smith. Smith, a 164 pound halfback, is a co-captain of the team and was the leading ground gainer on last year's squad. Last year, while carrying the ball 105 times, Smith gained close to 500 years and intercepted four passes which he ran back 74 yards. The "Blur," as Billy is called by his team-mates, has been rated by some authorities as one of the best little college ball players in the country today.

All-American Candidate Missing

Dayton will be playing Saturday without the services of their co-captain and All-American candidate, Jerry Ward. Ward last year, one of the best linemen in the country, and was one of the few college juniors to be drafted by the professional National Football League.

This is Dayton's first year under the reins of Bud Kerr. They lost their able coach, Hugh Devore last year when he took over the head coaching spot for the Philadelphia Eagles.

Kerr will be using new men to fill in gaps in the line-up which were vacated by eleven graduating lettermen. He has great faith in soph tackle, Emil Karas; center, Bill Koruts, and end, Pat Chaney.

Intramural Dept. Plans Full Fall Schedule of Events

By DON KEMPF

Not to be left behind in the current "progress program" at Villanova, the 1956-57 Intramural Staff, moderated by Reverend John R. Dunne, O.S.A., and directed by Mr. Edward P. Geisz, has planned its biggest sports' year ever.

Necessitated by this advanced set-up is the stricter enforcement of the rules and regulations of the Department to assure the best possible organization, allowing each participant to get the most from the program.

No Varsity Athletes

One change in policy is the absolute restriction of varsity athletes' taking part in intramurals, since it has been decided that the benefits provided by the program are solely for those who do not participate in a varsity sport.

For those who have never taken part in the intramural program, there is a varying and extensive slate of activities, ranging from touch football in the fall to softball in the spring.

Winter Sports

Throughtout the winter there is basketball, swimming and even chess and checkers for those who enjoy the minor sports.

Schweder Replaces Douglas in 'Cat Coaching Regime

By BILL CHRISTY

A new All-American has joined the Villanova football squad. Unfortunately he will not be able to play, since he is John "Bull" Schweder, the Wildcat's new line-coach.

Schweder replaces Otis Douglas who resigned his position to become head coach of the Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian Football League.

"The Bull" hails from Bethlehem, in the football players producing regions of upper Pennsylvania. He received his high school football training at Bethlehem High School from John Bulter, new head coach of the freshman team at the University of Pennsylvania. Scheder's college play started at Penn when he played on the varsity squad as a freshman in 1945. At that time freshmen were permitted in varsity competition because of the shortage of players caused by the war.

In '47, '48, and '49 he starred at the position of guard and in 1949 he was selected as a first team All-American by the Associated Press and the International News Service.

He began in the pro-league in 1950 with the Baltimore Colts as a 200-pound guard. The following year he switched clubs as well as positions when he joined the Pittsburgh Steelers in the dual capacity of end and tackle. He remained with the Steelers until his retirement from active play last season.

Schweder had originally planned to broadcast the Lehigh games from Bethlehem this season, but when he was asked by Coach Frank Reagan to fill the vacant coaching spot, he resigned at Lehigh for a berth with the upcoming Wildcats.

FINE RUNNING BACK WHO SCORED THE WILDCATS FIRST TOUCHDOWN OF THE SEASON AGAINST DETROIT. JOHN WAS LEADING GROUNDGAINER OF '55.

Bauer Leads Backs On Victory Quest

By CHARLES CARROLL

The honor of being the first and only Villanovan to score a touchdown against a Detroit team in the last four years belongs to senior halfback Johnny Bauer. It was this touchdown by the 21-year-old converted fullback which gave the Wildcats the margin for their initial triumph of the young season.

Johnny's past record indicates great things are in store for him in this, his final year of intercollegiate competition. One of 24 returning lettermen from last year's squad, the 6-2, 200 pound native Philadelphian was the leading Wildcat groundgainer for the 1955 season while operating out of the fulback and halfback positions.

His speed and size suit him ideally for either slot. Last year's Indiana game shed light on his pass receiving ability when he was on the scoring end of a sensational 67-yard pass play which was the Wildcats' only score in the 14-7 defeat.

Star At West

Before setting his sights on Villanova, Johnny was a standout gridman for West Catholic High School of Philadelphia where he was a tail-back in the single wing. Because of his size and line bucking experience, John can run well on the quick inside bucks that are required in the T-formation used by Villanova. Thus, the transition was not very difficult for him.

His biggest thrill in high school ball came in the city championship game in his junior year when he kicked six consecutive extra points to boost West to victory.

Marketing Major

Here at Villanova John is a marketing major in the Commerce and Finance School. He chose the Mainline institution because of its proximity to his home.

Teammates Fran Kane and Bill Magee are his most frequent companions both on and off the campus. Aside from football, Johnny's main interests lie in other sports, especially baseball.

His experience against opponents of the caliber of Mississippi, Baylor, Syracuse, Kentucky and Indiana should prove to be a steadying influence for the younger players when the going gets a little rough and the tension increases.

SPORTS CHATTER

Freudian Football

By JOE SLAVIN

Last Sunday night at 2:30 in the morning the "normal" citizen was fast asleep. But on the Villanova campus several hundred students were milling around Lancaster Pike, anxiously awaiting the arrival of the victorious football team. At the arrival of the team, all semblance of sanity left the crowd as they began shouting, decorating the campus with paper streamers and parading around the campus to arouse the few remaining "normal" people.

A Freudian pyschologist would consider such a demonstration as the result of inhibited frustrations. He would contend that after each pep rally an anticipation of victory sets in which results in a frustration with a Villanova defeat. He contends that the past record of defeats builds his hypothesis into a theorem. He would insist that each student was not motivated by his rationality but was determined by this uncontrolable inner force.

Mob Rule

A sociologist would consider this melee as an example of mob psychology. Each of the students present, he would insist, did not act of his own volition but was assimilated into the mob and acted according to the rules of mob psychology.

Cynics would consider it as an example of the reaction of disciplined freshmen who are away from home for the first time and were merely throwing off the shackles of discipline. Another contribution would have been those silly upperclassmen who should have known better. Those citizens of the khaki, white buck and repp tie world who are always doing something a normal person wouldn't consider.

School Spirit

Villanovan's considered the spontaneous outburst merely as a display of school spirit. School spirit——that highly contagious disesase which is recognizable by its effects. That which was referred to in a national magazine article by a radio announcer as being absent from the Villanova campus.

Effects of "Disease"

If the above mentioned critcs were present on the Villanova campus throughout Sunday afternoon perhaps their theories would have coincided with that of the Villanovans. From the outset of Ed Shea's broadcast a deadening silence settled over Villanova's campus. Dayhop's arrived at the Dougherty Hall lounge to follow the Wildcats. The Sunday visitors forsook their weekly trip to the "tea" and settled down in their rarely habitated quarters, also to listen. Very noticeable were the coaxial cables running from Austin Hall to St. Mary's Hall where the seminarians proceeded to conform with the crowd. The silence of the afternoon was broken by sudden outbursts of cheers whenever the Wildcats started an attack. At approximately 5:20 the effects of that highly contagious disease were obvious in the display of shouts and smiling students shaking hands with one another.

Criticism Proved Absurd

The statement concerning lack of spirit among Villanovans appears somewhat absurd. The other intellectuals would probably persist in their theories, but Villanovans will stand by their school spirit theory. They have a right to their theory. They have more facts to support their contention. Throughout the academic year they have the opportunity to witness the effects of that disease. Basketball games at the Palestra indicated that Villanova was not lacking in spirit. The students spectators at games as far away as Detroit proves that students had not been driven by inner forces but had merely driven such a distance to cheer on the Wildcats. The rousing ovations at away basketball games and the indoor track meets at Madison Square Garden given the Wildcats by the members of the student body are more evidence to bolster the school spirit theory.

On To Boston

It is hoped that the planned student trip to Boston will completely disprove any of these intellectual theories. After reviewing the past history of Villanova spirit it is inevitable that the student body will be well represented at Boston. This sense of school spirit and the economic advantages offered by the Spirit Committee are definite enticement to the average Villanovan.

Intramural Department Strengthens Program

The new and revitalized Intramural Council has announced plans for a full and promising intramural schedule. The Council will be headed this year by Junior Education major, Jim Moran, under the supervision of Rev. John R. Dunne, O.S.A., and Ed Giess of the Intramural Department.

Today will be a typically busy one for Mr. Moran's staff with four types of athletic competition scheduled for the afternoon. The finals of the Annual Intramural Tennis Tournament will be held this afternoon on the courts behind St. Mary's Hall with the championship match to be held at aproximately 4:30. Among the more than seventy five entries competing for top honors in this year's tourney, is Vince Quinn, winner of the '55 tournament.

Swimming

Also to be held today beginning at 4:00 is the Annual Swimming Competition. The competition, consisting of various swimming and diving events, will be held in the Villanova pool in the Field House with entries being acepted at the pool.

As a third attraction the Annual Intramural Horseshoe Matches will be held today on Mendel Field at the horseshoe pits. Competition will run through tomorrow and will include both singles and doubles matches. Contestants may sign up for the matches at the pits.

Two games will be played this afternoon in the Intramural Touch Football Leagues.

Army, Navy on Schedule Freshmen Gridders Ready

This year's freshman take over where last year's left off—another excellent team is expected of them this year.

The coaching staff has done a wonderful job in gathering a good number of "All-State" and "All-Catholic" ball players for the Villanova yearlings. Last year's team was one of the finest freshman teams in the history of the school.

The backfield is literally loaded with talent. It could be described as a coach's dream, consisting of plenty of speed and power on offense, and lots of defensive know-how. The biggest problem facing Coach Michaels is whipping the line into perfect shape. Center appears to be the weakest position on the team, but it is hoped that Ed Lemkins, hailing from New Haven, Conn., will fit the bill.

Defense will be the keynote to success this season with such outstanding line men as 215 lbs. "Pud" Nagle, formerly of Roman Catholic; Jim Osborne, 210 lb. All Catholic Guard from LaSalle; end versatile Walt Posadowski, who played center for South Catholic. The heavyweight of the team, tipping the scales at 250, is tackle Dick Keyser of Norristown. From LaSalle's championship team comes All Catholic end, Tommy Heron.

Also at end is the fine pass receiver, Paul Tomczyk, who spent his high school days at St. Thomas More's.

The backfield is inspired by Dave Bishop, 190 lb. fullback, who was all-state at Lower Merion High School. Some of his running mates are: hard-hitting Jim Ward, a product of LaSalle; Leon Horin, an oustanding back from New Jersey, and Jim McLaughlin from West Catholic. Filling the all-important quarterback slot poses a problem. However, Al Musco, a converted halfback, is looking very good at that spot, as is Ed McCarthy, a Boston product.

The team is full of enthusiasm and really hustling, which could be a tip-off of what to expect when they open up their season on October 20, against Wyoming Seminary.

Locker Room Chatter

How much does student spirit mean to a football team? Villanova's varsity players were asked the question in the locker room following the impromptu demonstration after the Detroit win.

Ron Wood, guard: "When we're on the field we must use teamwork to stop the opposition and to move the ball ourselves. The spirit which the student body has shown is their part of the team play. They are as much a part of the team as we are."

Joe Ryan, center: "The team has more spirit itself than ever before. This goes back to the students and makes you play harder for them."

Gene O'Pella, end: The spirit of the students means a lot to the players. I only hope we continue to win for the school."

Dear Editor,

I am having a violent quarrel with my girl. I became very much attached to my catcher's mit over the summer, and would like to take it along with us to the Soph Cotillion. She says I'm crazy. Who is right?

Dear Frosh,

You are. It is perfectly sane to bring a catcher's mit to the Cotillion, provided of course it matches your date's dress.

Dear Editor,

I have been attending school here for three years now and am beginning to wonder when I can take my regs off. Since I live pretty far off campus (Chicago) I find it difficult to keep in touch on these things. Can you give me permission?

Dear Junior,

Would you please drop into the infirmary some day after class?

$41,000 CONTEST

Open to All College Students (Faculty, too!)

Nothing to buy... nothing to write

...and you may find you know more about people than you think!

How well do you know human nature? Can you tell what subjects interest people most? Here is a chance to test your judgment—show how good an editor you are—and you may win $5,000 for yourself, plus $5,000 in scholarship funds for your college.

It's fun to try. Maybe you can top other students in colleges across the country . . . and you can match wits with the editors of Reader's Digest.

Why do far more college graduates read Reader's Digest than any other magazine? What is it that makes the Digest the most widely read magazine in the world — with 11 million copies bought each month in the United States, plus 9 million abroad? Why is it read each month by at least 60 million people, in 12 languages—Arabic, Danish, English, Finnish, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Norwegian, Portuguese, Spanish and Swedish?

Can you spot in a typical issue of Reader's Digest the universal human values that link scholars, statesmen, scientists, writers, businessmen, housewives? Can you pick out the articles that will be most popular with the average Digest reader?

You may find . . . you know more about people than you think!

Here's all you do. Study the descriptions (at right) of the articles in the October Reader's Digest—or, better still, read the complete articles in the issue itself. (But you are not required to buy The Reader's Digest to enter the contest.) Then simply list the six articles—in order of preference—that you think readers of the magazine will like best. This will be compared with a nationwide survey conducted among a cross section of Digest subscribers.

Follow the directions given below. Fill in the entry blank, paste it on a post card, and get it into the mail before the deadline. Additional blanks are obtainable at your college bookstore.

All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 25, 1956. Don't delay. In case of ties, the entry with the earliest postmark will win.

YOU CAN WIN:

$5000 cash 1st prize
plus $5000 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

$1000 cash 2nd prize
plus $1000 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

Any of TEN $500 cash prizes
plus $500 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

Any of 100 $10 prizes
in book credit from your local college bookstore

And if your entry is the best from your college you will receive an extra award —an additional $10 in book credit at your college bookstore.

FOLLOW THESE EASY RULES

1. Read the descriptions in this advertisement of the articles that appear in October Reader's Digest. Or better, read the complete articles. Then select the 6 that you think most readers will like best.

2. On the entry blank at left, write the number of each article you select. List them in what you think will be the order of popularity, from first to sixth place. Your selections will be judged by comparison with a national survey which ranks in order of popularity the 6 articles that readers like best. Fill in and mail the coupon. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 25, 1956.

3. This contest is open only to college students and faculty members in the U. S., excluding employees of The Reader's Digest, its advertising agencies, and their families. It is subject to all federal, state and local laws and regulations.

4. Only one entry per person.

5. In case of ties, entries postmarked earliest will win. Entries will be judged by O. E. McIntyre, Inc., whose decision will be final. All entries become property of The Reader's Digest; none returned.

6. All winners notified by mail. List of cash-prize winners mailed if you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Which six articles will readers of the October Digest like best?

1. Norfolk's friend to troubled teen-agers. Story of the arthritic cripple to whom youngsters flock for advice.

2. The great Piltdown hoax. How this famed "missing link" in human evolution has been proved a fraud from the start.

3. How to sharpen your judgment. Famed author Bertrand Russell offers six rules to help you form sounder opinions.

4. My most unforgettable character. Fond memories of Connie Mack—who led the Athletics for 50 years.

5. How to make peace at the Pentagon. Steps to end ruinous rivalry between our Army, Navy and Air Force.

Eddie Condon To Return Nov. 11; Cotillion Tickets on Open Market

Jazz Band Highlights Jr. Weekend

Eddie Condon's nationally famous jazz group will once again appear on the Villanova campus after a lapse of two years to climax the Junior Class Basca Award weekend beginning Friday, Nov. 9.

Bob Mulcahy, junior class president, has signed the popular Greenwich Village band for a jazz concert, Sunday afternoon, Nov. 11 in the Field House.

First Such Weekend

This weekend is the first venture planned by the juniors outside of Junior Week.

The Eddie Condon group was very successful in its last appearances on the campus. The Dixieland jazz band has several of the best known musicians in the jazz field today.

Details will be given at a later date on this climaxing highlight of the weekend which starts on Friday night with the Basca Award pep-rally, bonfire, and dance, followed by Saturday's V. U.-Citadel game.

Tickets And Time Running Out

After a week of limiting sales to sophs only, Cotillion tickets were placed on the market for all classes today in Dougherty Hall. Larry Waterhouse and Frank Fleming, co-chairmen of ticket sales, report that their 32-man staff has already sold a large number of the tickets.

One of the most talked about features of the Cotillion to date has been the distinctively modern design of the tickets. In speaking of the tickets, dance chairman Jack Curtin said that they "are just one of the many new and progressive ideas for which the class has worked."

Stan Rubin Featured

This year's dance will be held in the Villanova Field House on Oct. 26. It will be an informal affair lasting from nine 'til one with music being provided by Stan Rubin's Orchestra and Tigertown Five jazz combo. This internationally known group was signed through the efforts of band chairman Mike McCarthy.

Rubin's band has been a great favorite at college dances throughout the country. Composed originally as a five man jazz combo, the group has grown into a twelve-piece dance orchestra which will feature the "Tigertown Five" for jazz breaks during the evening.

Theme Still Secret

Another topic much in discussion among the sophs is the closely-guarded secrecy of the theme. With less than two weeks remaining before the dance, the decorations committee has launched an even bigger drive towards completion of their work.

LYNX Offers Cash In Essay Contest; Deadline Nov. 16

The LYNX, campus literary magazine, announced today that it is sponsoring an essay contest. Three cash prizes will be awarded, with $15, $10 and $5 being awarded to the top works.

Deadline for the submission of material has been set for Friday, Nov. 16, the same date set for submission of regular LYNX copy. Subject matter may be anything of general interest, but preference will be given to material of current significance.

The winning essays will be published in the winter issue of the LYNX, tentatively scheduled for publication in mid-December. Entries will be judged by a committee of faculty members. A minimum of 2,500 words has been set.

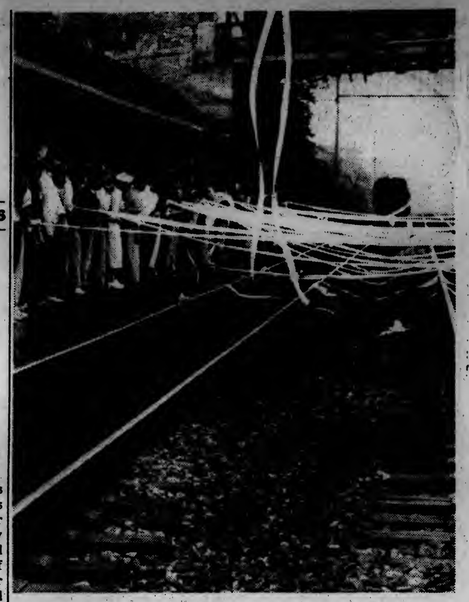
Municipal Stadium Motorcade Planned For Florida Game

A motorcade of Villanovans is being tentatively planned for the Florida State "Olympic Bowl" game Oct. 27 in Municipal Stadium.

Student Council Secretary Jack Shea announces that all students desiring to participate in the parade must submit name, make of car and class.

Deposit Boxes

This information may be deposited in boxes in the Dougherty Hall dayhop cafeteria or in the organization's office, second floor of Dougherty.

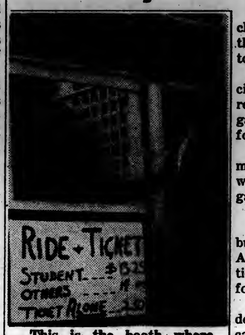


Shea and his commitee will confer with Philadelphia police officials this week for permission to operate the motorcade.

"The information requested will be used to estimate the size of the caravan for police officials," Shea explained.

Signs to be Displayed

"All cars must be decorated in some way to be allowed in the motorcade," Shea said. Fraternities and organizations have already agreed to display signs of their groups.



The motorcade will leave from in front of the Field House at 5:15 p.m., to give students time to get to the Stadium in time for Florida State's famed student circus.

Some 250 students and priests jam Villanova station platform just before the victorious footballers pulled in by train Sunday afternoon.

Student Body Ready to Roll:

Last Chance For BU Tix; Spirit Display Ready for Boston

This is the booth where sales of student trip tickets end today.

Today is the last day for purchasing bus and game tickets for the student excursion to the Boston University game.

Pat Nicholson, Student Council Spirit Committee chairman, reminded students that bus and game tickets are still available for last-minute purchasers.

Tickets for buses leaving at midnight Friday cost $13.25, which include admission to the game Saturday night.

Decorating Cars

Students traveling in cars may buy game tickets for $2.50. Alumni and friends may secure tickets for the buses and game for $14.

Nicholson suggested that students driving up decorate their cars with banners "to show towns on the way to Boston the spirit possessed by Villanova's students."

Students were also urged by Nicholson to stay away from team headquarters at the Hotel Kenmore until the pep rally scheduled for 6 p.m. Saturday at the hotel.

Big Dayton Sendoff

Meanwhile, the campus saw one of its most inspiring pep rally's Thursday night when approximately 1,200 students turned away from their studies to send Villanova's optimistic football team off to Dayton.

The crowd gathered at the Villanova railroad station—saw Ron Wood, Detroit game captain—without a microphone—present the Cyril J. Burke Trophy to the school. Villanova will retain possession until the Titans win the trophy back.

Wednesday morning, high jumper Phil Reavis and middle distance runner Charley Jenkins departed to the Olympic training camp in California amid the cheers of a group of early risers.

Council Dissolves President's Group; Administration To Consider New Plan

Dissolution of the President's Committee for Students and formation of a new committee was approved by the Student Council Monday night.

Council Chairman Joe Martin said the proposed change must now be approved by the administration.

Under the new system, the Council committee would meet with the three recently-named vice presidents, Martin explained.

President's Committee

The President's Committee was formed last year, to replace the old student-faculty committee, and had a Council committee meet with Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., university president.

Recommendations made by Council were turned over to Father Donnellon for approval or disapproval.

New Plan

In the new system, the three vice presidents would consider the Council's recommendations and Father Donnellon, who could sit in on meetings, would be an honorary member and would not take an active part, Martin said.

Vice presidents making up the proposed new committee would be: Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., student affairs; Rev. Joseph Boyle, O.S.A., academic affairs; Rev. John Curran, O.S.A., financial affairs.

Student Representatives

Councilmen on the committee are Martin, Jim Judge, Pat Nicholson and Tom O'Rourke.

Chairman Martin said the new committee would be in keeping with the revamped administrative set-up completed during the summer.

Said Martin, in a prepared statement:

"When the administration was reorganized, the responsibilities of running the University were distributed among the three new vice presidents. Each of these priests are entrusted with the task of seeing that this division does the most it can to help Villanova. Naturally, these priests know their particular job better than anyone else who is not as close to the problems as they are.

. . . At the quiet outing to Boston this weekend. A few rules were set down: no fires on the busses, no jumping from any windows above the fourth floor of any Boston hotel, no food allowed to be eaten, and at least 65 per cent of the student body must return by Wednesday. . . .

. . . The way that three workers on the new building appeared on the Dean's List. When questioned they said all they did was walk through a few C & F classes and yell "here."

. . . At the big, new "Pick The Worst" contest that is being run. No special rules, just pick the worst law student, coed, dinner cafeteria worker, course you take, or teacher and submit them to the Mendel Bulletin.

. . . At the way the bookstore now has all their books in. A reward is being offered for anyone finding a new excuse for not having assignments done.

. . .At the big country fair in the vicinity that we all tried to miss. Quite a few of our less fortunate V. U. men were seen at the dog watching contest which seemed to draw many entries.

. . . At all the Marine recruiting going on around here. Old John Wayne movies are being shown in the C & F Auditorium for those who just can't decide.

Letter To The Editor

In regard to the Oct. 3 VILLANOVAN, it has come to my attention through careful observation that this illuatrious newspaper, despite it's many awards, has erred.

In his column, "Political Roundup," Mr. Gene Donohue seems confused. As every clear-thinking political scientist realizes, President Eisenhower, when he was seeking the Presidency in 1952, promised 100 per cent parity supports, during the 1952 Kasson plowing contest in Minnesota, not in Mississippi.

The intelligent people of these important states no doubt would consider this seemingly insignificant fact important.

Sheldon Pollock

Editor's Note: Mr. Donohue regrets the error. The editor would suggest that Mr. Pollock, however, spell the President's name as it appears above, and not "Eisenhower."

The editorial staff of The Villanovan is always glad to receive comments from its readers. Although names may be withheld upon request, all letters must be signed. Letters submitted by Villanova students—residents or dayhops—may be delivered to the publication's office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall, Alumni and friends may address their opinions to The Villanovan, Villanova, Pa.

Palestra Gentlemen Migrate

Not that Villanova students need any prompting, since they showed their training as gentlemen at the Palestra last winter, but we'll just drop a small reminder:

Don't forget you're a Villanovan when you pack the repp ties and tweed jackets for the trip to Boston this weekend.

From the manner in which students conducted themselves during the "Big Five" basketball competition, it seems there's no cause for the administration to worry.

Villanovans know when to whoop it up, and as a group, they also know when it's time to calm down and remember that they are representing a great Catholic university. There'll probably be plenty of alumni around Boston University Field, and they will certainly want to point to the present-day undergraduate with enthusiasm.

We certainly hope many freshmen will board the buses or hop into cars for the excursion, and follow the upperclassmen in behavior.

A tip to those hardy souls whe plan to brave turnpike and parkway traffic: We want to see you Monday in one piece. As the National Safety Council would put it . . . "The life you save. . . "

There's just one more point to keep in mind. The ball players will need all the rest they can squeeze into those hours before game time. So please, Villanovans, stay away from the team headquarters at the Hotel Kenmore until 6 o'clock Saturday night.

By then, Pat Nicholson and his energetic Spirit Committee will be ready to steam up the student tourists for the ball game.

And then it's on to the ball park for a ball game that will make Villanova a winner on the field and in the stands.

Persistence Pays Off

Four years ago the Villanova nurse was unheard of. She was but a gleam in the eyes of the leaders of what was then Villanova College. Today she has become a fine and proven addition to our university. She has become another division of our school proud to bear the name of Villanova.

Six nurses will graduate this coming June as part of the Class of 1957. They have come a long way. Twenty-seven young women entered our hallowed halls in the fall of 1954, and of these just six have survived the rigors of higher scientific education.

These six standard bearers of the Villanova School of Nursing have shown the rest of the university, primarily hostile at first to the thought of co-education, just where the going is roughest. They have come through, as the old cliche goes, with flying colors.

In recognition for their spirit and determination in progress the VILLANOVAN dedicates the center section of this week's edition to our ladies in blue and white. They well deserve this recognition, men, it has been a long and rather lengthy and tough road. But the end of this is slowly coming into focus for these young women, and our hats are left off to them. They have been through a lot.

Just this past Sunday the nurses of the Class of 1959 received their caps in the Villanova chapel. We are sure they will follow in the footsteps of their predecessors of '57 and '58 and continue to uphold the fine Catholic standards set by Villanova in the field of nursing.

Pioneering Move

The display of Catholic missionary work throughout the world which attracted more than 400,000 persons to Convention Hall last week was most timely.

In churches throughout the archdiocese this Sunday parishoners will be asked to contribute to the missions.

Students and faculty members who had the chance to look over the displays of religious orders will be able to appreciate the need that these orders have for nickles, dimes, quarters and greenbacks.

This annual drive for funds will enable the nuns and priests from these orders to expand their activities and bring His word to previously undeveloped regions.

The dime you drop into the collection basket this Sunday will help them to "Go therefore and teach all nations . . "

Will It Be Ike or Adlai?

Although response to the VILLANOVAN'S presidential preference poll has been heartening, we still haven't heard from every student.

That's our aim. To be able to predict the outcome of the November election from the opinions offered by male undergraduates, nurses and law students.

The editors will be accepting your ballots until next Wednesday at 6 p.m. Just clip the ballot from this issue—or use a sheet of paper—check your choice, and leave it in the envelope at the student trip booth in front of Dougherty; the box at the Mendel Hall information booth; in the VILLANOVAN office; or give it to the editors.

We're waiting for your opinion.

New Library Painting "David and Goliath" 300 Years Old

The reference room of the Villanova Library is the home of a 300-year-old Italian masterpiece "David and Goliath" by the noted painter, Pietro da Cortona.

The picture is 12' x 20' and depicts the appearance of David with the head of Goliath before the enthroned Saul. A scriptural citation more accurately describes the depicted scene: ". . .Abner (captain of the army of the Israelites) took him, (David) and brought him in before Saul, with the head of the Philistine in his hand."

"Now when David returned, after he slew the Philistine, the women came out of all the cities of Israel singing and dancing to meet King Saul, with timbrels of joy, and cornets." (First of Kings 17:57; 18:6)

Princely Gift

The valuable painting is the gift of the Prince and Princess Alexis Droutzkoy, whose family has also presented most of the other pictures hanging in the library.

An exotic and romantic history lies behind both the painting and its painter. Pietro Berretini was one of the leading Italian church architects of the 17th century. He was born in Cortona in 1596 and studied in Florence and in Rome, his special interest being the works of Raphael, Michelangelo, and Caravaggie.

Noted Baroque Artist

"The Rape of the Sabines" and "The Battles of Alexander" which the artist painted for Cardinal Sacchetti, later Pope Urban VIII, brought Berretini wide-spread notice in the world of art.

Under the pontificate of his patron, Urban VIII and of Alexander VII, Berretini designed and restored many Roman churches, decorating the ceilings and cupolas of some with his own art. One of these churches, San Luca, he endowed with his entire and considerable fortune. The artist died in 1669.

Allegorical Art

Most of the works of Pietro da Cortona are massive allegorical church paintings. Easel pictures of his, however, hang in galleries in Vienna, Milan, and Dresden.

For many years. "David and Goliath" hung in the castle of Nemi, outside of Rome and near to the Pope's summer residence, the Castel Gandolpho. Nemi belonged, at various times in its past, to the great papal families, the Borgias and the Colonnas.

War Damage

In the early years of this century, the castle of Nemi was purchased by the widowed Princess Ruspoli, the Berretini's works, possibly this painting along with it. During the Second World War, the castle of Nemi was damaged by a bomb, and a part of "David and Goliath" was exposed to the action of water.

After the war, the painting was shipped to this country, and, in 1950, was presented to the Villanova Library. During this past summer, the picture was taken out of storage and painstakingly restored and hung under the direction of Mr. Frank Reidy of McClees Gallery, Ardmore, and of Mr. M. Michelotti.

Unveiling on Oct. 21

"David and Goliath" is not very well-known because of its possession by a private family.

The formal unveiling of the gift painting will take place on October 21, at the meeting of the Friends of the Villanova Library, in the presence of Prince Alexis Droutzkoy. Princess Alexis is the former Princess Maria Therese Ruspoli.

This 300-year-old Italian masterpiece, "David and Goliath," is now displayed in the Library's reference room. A work of Pietro da Cortona, the painting will be formally unveiled Oct. 21, in the presence of the Prince and Princess Alexis Droutzkoy, who gave the work to the Library.

Political Round-up:

Republicans Begin to Roll; Despite Democratic South It Looks Like Ike Again

By GENE DONOHUE

As the days and weeks go by, one point seems to be apparent in this 1956 presidential campaign. The Republicans have finally rolled their campaign machinery into high gear and are blazing away on all sides.

According to the Republican National Committee, the slow start in September was all part of a preconceived plan for the campaign. Once the bandwagon started rolling along in October it would continue to pick up momentum until November 6, never running out of gas. The psychology behind this move was to force the Democrats to carry the first part of the campaign, with the assumption that their pledges would sound like broken records by November and be subsequently crushed by the Republican onslaught.

Few Modifications

So far, the Republican campaign has followed the plan laid out by the committee with few modifications. There has been, however, one sour note in this concert; and that is the fear that the Republicans might have started too late. Already Mr. Stevenson and the Democrats have finally assured themselves of a "Solid South" with the only states in any doubt being South Carolina, who claims it will not endorse either candidate because of their milk-sop stand on the segregation issue, and Florida, who, while still in doubt, will probably go Democratic. Aside from 11 this, Mr. Stevenson has made quite a few inroads into the normally Republican farm belt. Both he and Kefauver keep hitting the President hard on the farm situation and will not allow him to forget his support of 100 per cent parity at the Kasson plowing contest in Minnesota.

DONOHUE

Democrats Stronger

This does not mean to imply that the Republicans are fighting an uphill battle. It is obvious, however, that they do not regard this Democratic show of strength as a mere bluff, but as a possible source of serious trouble. Perhaps the biggest indication of this fear is Mr. Eisenhower's increased campaign schedule.

During the first few weeks of September it was announced that the President would confine his campaigning to six nationally televised addresses. But once it became apparent that the Democrats were fast gaining ground, these plans were radically changed. To begin with, he has increased the number of television broadcasts to an unknown number and has enlarged his public appearance schedule greatly.

A Current Problem

Serving Active Duty As An Officer Has Pay Assets, Time Disadvantages

Second in a Series of Three Articles
by JOHN McGEE

In last week's feature article it was seen that all eligible young men are obliged to serve a total of five years in full and reserve training. Collegians have the advantage of a number of officer training programs available to them in addition to the familiar ROTC programs.

An economic selling point of these programs is the difference in pay for weekly drills as well as active duty between an enlisted man and an officer. For example, a corporal receives $4.68 a day, whereas a second lieutenant receives $9.88 a day. Thus, an officer receives more than twice as much as an enlisted man.

Money Versus Time

Despite the economic advantages of being an officer, many may think it insufficient compensation for the extra active duty required. The decision is naturally personal and individual.

The officer training programs offered by the various services fall into three classifications: Officer Candidate School (OCS), aviation programs, and special programs of summer training.

OCS Comparison

The Army OCS is offered only to qualified recruits who have completed basic training. It consists of six months training prior to receiving the commission, then serving two years active duty followed by ready reserve.

Naval OCS for college graduates consists of four months training before commissioning, then three years active duty.

Marine OCS is given after ten weeks of basic training. It consists of ten weeks further basic training, commissioning, and three years active service, eight months of which are spent in an advanced training school at Quantico.

Aviation Program

Navy and Marine aviation programs for qualified college graduates consist of 18 months flight training and two years of active duty. Students with two years of college must spend two and one-half years in active duty after their 18 months of flight training.

The Navy Reserve Officer Candidate Program (ROC) can be taken by college students who join the reserves, take two summer programs of eight weeks each and then serve three years active duty.

Gyrene Opportunities

The Marine Platoon Leaders Class consists of two six weeks training sessions in the summer and obligates one to three years active duty upon graduation and commissioning.

The above officer training programs are mutually consistent in regard to length of service for the officer benefits received, but such consistency is not universal in the present selective service practices. Especially is this true of the current procedure of induction which is outlined below.

After delinquents and volunteers are called for induction, all non-volunteer, non-fathers between the ages of 19 and 26 are called. Then non-volunteer fathers between 19 and 26, non-volunteer fathers over 26, and non-volunteers between 18½ and 19 are called in that order.

"Selective" Selective Service

Most states seem to be drafting ages 21-22 at this time. In the three or four years between graduation from high school and induction, however, more and more youths will enter into the father group, thus deferring their military obligation, in many cases permanently.

The end result in the present situation is not military service for all physically and mentally fit young men but military service for only those youths who desire a college education or who do not marry and have a child before they are called for induction around age 21 or 22.

Letter To The Editor

In regard to the Oct. 3 VILLANOVAN, it has come to my attention through careful observation that this illustrious newspaper, despite it's many awards, has erred.

In his column, "Political Roundup," Mr. Gene Donohue seems confused. As every clear-thinking political scientist realizes, President Eisenhower, when he was seeking the Presidency in 1952, promised 100 per cent parity supports, during the 1952 Kasson plowing contest in Minnesota, not in Mississippi.

The intelligent people of these important states no doubt would consider this seemingly insignificant fact important.

Sheldon Pollock

Editor's Note: Mr. Donohue regrets the error. The editor would suggest that Mr. Pollock, however, spell the President's name as it appears above, and not "Eiesenhower."

The editorial staff of The Villanovan is always glad to receive comments from its readers. Although names may be withheld upon request, all letters must be signed. Letters submitted by Villanova students—residents or dayhops—may be delivered to the publication's office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall, Alumni and friends may address their opinions to The Villanovan, Villanova, Pa.

Palestra Gentlemen Migrate

Not that Villanova students need any prompting, since they showed their training as gentlemen at the Palestra last winter, but we'll just drop a small reminder:

Don't forget you're a Villanovan when you pack the repp ties and tweed jackets for the trip to Boston this weekend.

From the manner in which students conducted themselves during the "Big Five" basketball competition, it seems there's no cause for the administration to worry.

Villanovans know when to whoop it up, and as a group, they also know when it's time to calm down and remember that they are representing a great Catholic university. There'll probably be plenty of alumni around Boston University Field, and they will certainly want to point to the present-day undergraduate with enthusiasm.

We certainly hope many freshmen will board the buses or hop into cars for the excursion, and follow the upperclassmen in behavior.

A tip to those hardy souls who plan to brave turnpike and parkway traffic: We want to see you Monday in one piece. As the National Safety Council would put it . . . "The life you save. . . "

There's just one more point to keep in mind. The ball players will need all the rest they can squeeze into those hours before game time. So please, Villanovans, stay away from the team headquarters at the Hotel Kenmore until 6 o'clock Saturday night.

By then, Pat Nicholson and his energetic Spirit Committee will be ready to steam up the student tourists for the ball game.

And then it's on to the ball park for a ball game that will make Villanova a winner on the field and in the stands.

Persistence Pays Off

Four years ago the Villanova nurse was unheard of. She was but a gleam in the eyes of the leaders of what was then Villanova College. Today she has become a fine and proven addition to our university. She has become another division of our school proud to bear the name of Villanova.

Six nurses will graduate this coming June as part of the Class of 1957. They have come a long way. Twenty-seven young women entered our hallowed halls in the fall of 1954, and of these just six have survived the rigors of higher scientific education.

These six standard bearers of the Villanova School of Nursing have shown the rest of the university, primarily hostile at first to the thought of co-education, just where the going is roughest. They have come through, as the old cliche goes, with flying colors.

In recognition for their spirit and determination in progress the VILLANOVAN dedicates the center section of this week's edition to our ladies in blue and white. They well deserve this recognition, men, it has been a long and rather lengthy and tough road. But the end of this is slowly coming into focus for these young women, and our hats are left off to them. They have been through a lot.

Just this past Sunday the nurses of the Class of 1959 received their caps in the Villanova chapel. We are sure they will follow in the footsteps of their predecessors of '57 and '58 and continue to uphold the fine Catholic standards set by Villanova in the field of nursing.

Pioneering Move

The display of Catholic missionary work throughout the world which attracted more than 400,000 persons to Convention Hall last week was most timely.

In churches throughout the archdiocese this Sunday parishoners will be asked to contribute to the missions.

Students and faculty members who had the chance to look over the displays of religious orders will be able to appreciate the need that these orders have for nickles, dimes, quarters and greenbacks.

This annual drive for funds will enable the nuns and priests from these orders to expand their activities and bring His word to previously undeveloped regions.

The dime you drop into the collection basket this Sunday will help them to "Go therefore and teach all nations . . "

Will It Be Ike or Adlai?

Although response to the VILLANOVAN'S presidential preference poll has been heartening, we still haven't heard from every student.

That's our aim. To be able to predict the outcome of the November election from the opinions offered by male undergraduates, nurses and law students.

The editors will be accepting your ballots until next Wednesday at 6 p.m. Just clip the ballot from this issue—or use a sheet of paper—check your choice, and leave it in the envelope at the student trip booth in front of Dougherty; the box at the Mendel Hall information booth; in the VILLANOVAN office; or give it to the editors.

We're waiting for your opinion.

The reference room of the Villanova Library is the home of a 300-year-old Italian masterpiece "David and Goliath" by the noted painter, Pietro da Cortona.

The picture is 12' x 20' and depicts the appearance of David with the head of Goliath before the enthroned Saul. A scriptural citation more accurately describes the depicted scene: ". . .Abner (captain of the army of the Israelites) took him, (David) and brought him in before Saul, with the head of the Philistine in his hand."

"Now when David returned, after he slew the Philistine, the women came out of all the cities of Israel singing and dancing to meet King Saul, with timbrels of joy, and cornets." (First of Kings 17:57; 18:6)

Princely Gift

The valuable painting is the gift of the Prince and Princess Alexis Droutzkoy, whose family has also presented most of the other pictures hanging in the library.

An exotic and romantic history lies behind both the painting and its painter. Pietro Berretini was one of the leading Italian church architects of the 17th century. He was born in Cortona in 1596 and studied in Florence and in Rome, his special interest being the works of Raphael, Michelangelo, and Caravaggie.

Noted Baroque Artist

"The Rape of the Sabines" and "The Battles of Alexander" which the artist painted for Cardinal Sacchetti, later Pope Urban VIII, brought Berretini wide-spread notice in the world of art.

Under the pontificate of his patron, Urban VIII and of Alexander VII, Berretini designed and restored many Roman churches, decorating the ceilings and cupolas of some with his own art. One of these churches, San Luca, he endowed with his entire and considerable fortune. The artist died in 1669.

Allegorical Art

Most of the works of Pietro da Cortona are massive allegorical church paintings. Easel pictures of his, however, hang in galleries in Vienna, Milan, and Dresden.

For many years. "David and Goliath" hung in the castle of Nemi, outside of Rome and near to the Pope's summer residence, the Castel Gandolpho. Nemi belonged, at various times in its past, to the great papal families, the Borgias and the Colonnas.

War Damage

In the early years of this century, the castle of Nemi was purchased by the widowed Princess Ruspoli, the Berretini's works, possibly this painting along with it. During the Second World War, the castle of Nemi was damaged by a bomb, and a part of "David and Goliath" was exposed to the action of water.

After the war, the painting was shipped to this country, and, in 1950, was presented to the Villanova Library. During this past summer, the picture was taken out of storage and painstakingly restored and hung under the direction of Mr. Frank Reidy of McClees Gallery, Ardmore, and of Mr. M. Michelotti.

Unveiling on Oct. 21

"David and Goliath" is not very well-known because of its possession by a private family.

The formal unveiling of the gift painting will take place on October 21, at the meeting of the Friends of the Villanova Library, in the presence of Prince Alexis Droutzkoy. Princess Alexis is the former Princess Maria Therese Ruspoli.

This 300-year-old Italian masterpiece, "David and Goliath," is now displayed in the Library's reference room. A work of Pietro da Cortona, the painting will be formally unveiled Oct. 21, in the presence of the Prince and Princess Alexis Droutzkoy, who gave the work to the Library.

Political Round-up:

Republicans Begin to Roll; Despite Democratic South It Looks Like Ike Again

By GENE DONOHUE

As the days and weeks go by, one point seems to be apparent in this 1956 presidential campaign. The Republicans have finally rolled their campaign machinery into high gear and are blazing away on all sides.

According to the Republican National Committee, the slow start in September was all part of a preconceived plan for the campaign. Once the bandwagon started rolling along in October it would continue to pick up momentum until November 6, never running out of gas. The psychology behind this move was to force the Democrats to carry the first part of the campaign, with the assumption that their pledges would sound like broken records by November and be subsequently crushed by the Republican onslaught.

Few Modifications

So far, the Republican campaign has followed the plan laid out by the committee with few modifications. There has been, however, one sour note in this concert; and that is the fear that the Republicans might have started too late. Already Mr. Stevenson and the Democrats have finally assured themselves of a "Solid South" with the only states in any doubt being South Carolina, who claims it will not endorse either candidate because of their milk-sop stand on the segregation issue, and Florida, who, while still in doubt, will probably go Democratic. Aside from ll this, Mr. Stevenson has made quite a few inroads into the normally Republican farm belt. Both he and Kefauver keep hitting the President hard on the farm situation and will not allow him to forget his support of 100 per cent parity at the Kasson plowing contest in Minnesota.

DONOHUE

Democrats Stronger

This does not mean to imply that the Republicans are fighting an uphill battle. It is obvious, however, that they do not regard this Democratic show of strength as a mere bluff, but as a possible source of serious trouble. Perhaps the biggest indication of this fear is Mr. Eisenhower's increased campaign schedule. During the first few weeks of September it was announced that the President would confine his campaigning to six nationally televised addresses. But once it became apparent that the Democrats were fast gaining ground, these plans were radically changed. To begin with, he has increased the number of television broadcasts to an unknown number and has enlarged his public appearance schedule greatly.

A Current Problem

Serving Active Duty As An Officer Has Pay Assets, Time Disadvantages

Second in a Series of Three Articles
by JOHN McGEE

In last week's feature article it was seen that all eligible young men are obliged to serve a total of five years in full and reserve training. Collegians have the advantage of a number of officer training programs available to them in addition to the familiar ROTC programs.

An economic selling point of these programs is the difference in pay for weekly drills as well as active duty between an enlisted man and an officer. For example, a corporal receives $4.68 a day, whereas a second lieutenant receives $9.88 a day. Thus, an officer receives more than twice as much as an enlisted man.

Money Versus Time

Despite the economic advantages of being an officer, many may think it insufficient compensation for the extra active duty required. The decision is naturally personal and individual.

The officer training programs offered by the various services fall into three classifications: Officer Candidate School (OCS), aviation programs, and special programs of summer training.

OCS Comparison

The Army OCS is offered only to qualified recruits who have completed basic training. It consists of six months training prior to receiving the commission, then serving two years active duty followed by ready reserve.

Naval OCS for college graduates consists of four months training before commissioning, then three years active duty.

Marine OCS is given after ten weeks of basic training. It consists of ten weeks further basic training, commissioning, and three years active service, eight months of which are spent in an advanced training school at Quantico.

Aviation Program

Navy and Marine aviation programs for qualified college graduates consist of 18 months flight training and two years of active duty. Students with two years of college must spend two and one-half years in active duty after their 18 months of flight training.

The Navy Reserve Officer Candidate Program (ROC) can be taken by college students who join the reserves, take two summer programs of eight weeks each and then serve three years active duty.

Gyrene Opportunities

The Marine Platoon Leaders Class consists of two six weeks training sessions in the summer and obligates one to three years active duty upon graduation and commissioning.

The above officer training programs are mutually consistent in regard to length of service for the officer benefits received, but such consistency is not universal in the present selective service practices. Especially is this true of the current procedure of induction which is outlined below.

After delinquents and volunteers are called for induction, all non-volunteer, non-fathers between the ages of 19 and 26 are called. Then non-volunteer fathers between 19 and 26, non-volunteer fathers over 26, and non-volunteers between 18½ and 19 are called in that order.

"Selective" Selective Service

Most states seem to be drafting ages 21-22 at this time. In the three or four years between graduation from high school and induction, however, more and more youths will enter into the father group, thus deferring their military obligation, in many cases permanently.

The end result in the present situation is not military service for all physically and mentally fit young men but military service for only those youths who desire a college education or who do not marry and have a child before they are called for induction around age 21 or 22.

Fr. Sullivan Nominates 18 Seniors For Delta Epsilon Sigma, Nat'l Honor Society

Eighteen seniors in the Arts and Sciences School have been nominated for admission to Delta Epsilon Sigma, national Catholic college honor society.

Nominated were: Vincent Cardella, Leslie Carson, John V. Esposito, Robert Fredericks, Stephan Fritsky, Isaac Hargett, Joseph Keffer, Oliver Ludwig, Richard Madara.

Also: J. J. Manlandro, Edward P. McCarthy, John McGee, John McNicholas, Joseph Mizgerd, Floyd Nasute, Charles Ross, James Shea and Robert Weisenbaugh.

The Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Sciences, announced the list.

He said these men have completed six semesters with a cumulative average of 3.0 or better and have no failures recorded.

A student whose cumulative average reaches 3.0 by the end of his seventh semester may request consideration, Father Sullivan noted.

Members of the faculty committee are Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., Rev. Edward F. Jenkins, O.S.A., Dr. John I. McInerney and Dr. John McClain.

Rosemarie Pecillo, Arthur Knowlton Wed On Saturday

With one of her night school instructors singing the high nuptial Mass, Miss Rosemarie R. Pecillo was married Saturday to Arthur L. Knowlton, former Villanova football lineman.

The Rev. J. J. Burns, O. S. A., Dean of Women, sang the Mass in St. Thomas Aquinas Church, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Knowlton is a teacher at St. Helena's parochial school, Center Square, and attends night school here.

Mr. Knowlton took his BS degree in economics in 1954.

Apply for Foreign Service Exams at Placement Office

Villanovans planning t otake the Department of State's semi-annual Foreign Service Officer Examination must apply by next Tuesday in the Placement Office, 114 Mendel.

The examination will be admin istered Dec. 8 in more than 65 centers across the country.

Requirements are available at the Placement Office.

Lynx Cash Award

All undergraduates are eligible to participate. Manuscripts should be clearly marked "Essay Prize Contest" and accompanied by the author's name, address, division and class.

Manuscripts should be brought to the LYNX office in Dougherty Hall or to the English office in Austin Hall.

At a meeting last week all prospective LYNX staff men and contributors filled out questionnaires and were informed of plans for the year. Almost fifty students attended.

Beta Gamma Meets Tomorrow; First Debate Due Soon

Beta Gamma, Villanova's debating society, will hold a meeting this Thursday at 10:30 in Room 206 C & F in order to prepare for its first intercollegiate novice debate which will be announced soon.

Robert McDonough, Beta Gamma's debating coach, will discuss debating techniques.

All students, especially fresh men, sophomores, and pre-law undergraduates, who wish to debate this year are urged by President John McGee to attend.

By BOB and MIKE

Like all adventure-seeking Villanovans, we are eagerly anticipating the trip to Boston this weekend. Everything seems to indicate that it will be one of the best social whirls of the season.

No possible mode of transportation having been discounted, everyone seems to have his itinerary down pat. Whether traveling by plane, train, bus, car or thumb, our nomads are determined to arrive in fine spirits.

It's reported that the braver lads who are depending upon well-built thumbs to charm their way to Beantown probably will have dropped to a C-plus in Attendance by the time they return. For those leaving by bus at midnight Friday, conferences have been scheduled at local emporiums, commencing at 7 p.m., to discuss, no doubt, the points of cultural interest in Boston.

Immediately after the conferences, all students will board the buses and be on their way. It has been announced that there will be plenty of opportunity for sleeping on the buses, as everyone has been asked to keep noise at a minimum. No doubt everyone will comply.

Many field trips have been organized for Saturday morning and afternoon, occasioned by the many, many requests for tours of places noted for historical significance. For the less-historically minded students who will be at a loss for anything to do Saturday, the Student Council has organized a poetry reading contest in Boston Commons. Since we haven't heard of any other ways to pass the time, students will have to choose one of these time consumers.

All types of accommodations have been sought and obtained. Keeping in mind the tradition that all Villanovans are very particular as to where they spend their nights away from home, everyone has obtained as near to first-rate lodgings as possible. Most men have reserved rooms at the better hotels.

We hope we won't be cramping your style in mentioning this, but keep in mind the staidness of old New England in seeking out your diversion.

So with all this in mind, gentlemen, you tell us next week how the poetry contest went off or how the historical tour fared and we'll tell you of some of the public places we visited.

Fr. Kemme Reveals Newly Formed Disciplinary Board

Following the creation of four new administrative posts at Villanova, Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O. S. A., vice-president of student affairs, has announced the establishment of a disciplinary board.

The board consists of five members: Rev. George J. McLaughlin, O. S. A., dean of men; Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S. A., counsellor—Delurey Hall; Rev. Robert E. Regan, O. S. A., counsellor—Simpson Hall; Rev. John J. Maher, O. S. A., counsellor—Fedigan Hall, and Joseph Monaghan, counsellor—Fedigan Hall.

This board will meet at the call of the dean of men to consider serious disciplinary violations.

Library To Hold Open House

Reverend Daniel Falvey, O. S. A., Villanova University Librarian announced today that the Friends of Villanova Library are holding open house on Sunday Oct. 21 at 3 p. m. The parents of the students are invited and have received a letter for this purpose.

The program will feature the unveiling by Prince Alexis Droutzkoy of the painting "Presentation of David to King Saul."

Painting to be Unveiled

Mr. John C. Kelly, K. S. G., of the Class of 1915, chairman of the Friends of Villanova University Library, will open the program. The welcoming address will be given by Fr. James Donnellon O. S. A., President of the University.

Prince Droutzkoy will then unveil the painting, and Mr. Frank Reidy owner of McClees Gallery of Ardmore will give a short talk on the problems encountered in the restoration of the water-damaged painting.

Hurley to Speak

The principal speaker will be Fr. James Hurley, Prior of St. Thomas Monastery. Father Hurley will be followed by Fr. Daniel Falvey, O. S. A., who will speak on the accomplishments of the Friends of Villanova Library.

To round out a full afternoon, tea will be served by the Friends of the Library.

PKP's Bowling Chairman Picked

Phi Kappa Pi's engineering fraternity, responsible for the year's first social function—The Owl Hop—named George Drumheller chairman of its newly-organized bowling league at a meeting last week.

Khouri to Speak At IRS Meeting; Rosemont Invited

The next meeting of the International Relations Society will be held tomorrow night in 201 C & F at 7 p. m. This will be the first joint meeting with Rosemont and will have the honor of being addressed by one of our own faculty members.

President Gene Donohue announced that this month's speaker will be Dr. Fred Khouri. Dr. Khouri will speak on the Suez Canal dispute.

All members are asked to be present and anyone else who is interested in the topic is cordially invited.

Business Meeting

The main business that will be discussed at the preliminary meeting will be the forthcoming radio show. The first show is scheduled to be held at 8:30 o'clock on Monday Oct. 22

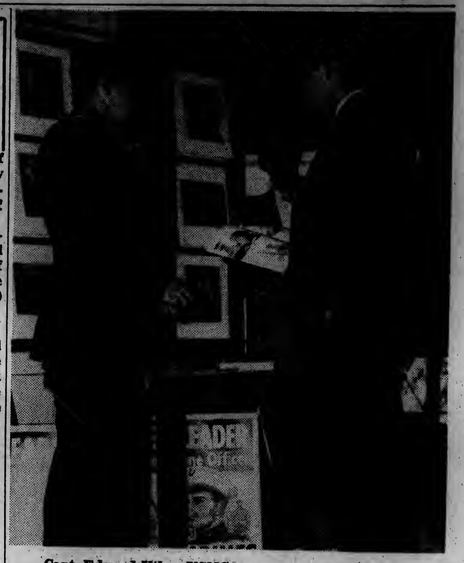
"The definite outline of the show has yet to be decided by the body of the organizations but Ellen Burns, the president of Rosemont's International Relations Club, has agreed to give all the aid that she can in making this radio show a success," Donohue said.

Ring Fittings Tomorrow

Ring fittings for the Class of 1958 will take place tomorrow and Friday in the VILLANOVAN office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Chairman of the Ring Committee, Leo Rogers, announced that Mr. George A. Packer, of Dieges and Clust, will be in the office tomorrow from 10 to 7:30 and on Friday from 10 to 3.

November Delivery



At this time the unfinished ring, without the stone, will be fitted on the student so that when the completed rings are delivered in November, there will be as few as possible changes required.

All juniors who ordered their rings last spring and paid their deposits during the summer are asked to appear on either day

$10. Deposit for Orders

For those who have not ordered their rings, orders will be taken at the same time as the fittings. A ten dollar deposit is required with all orders taken.

Rogers added that no definite date has been set for the delivery of the rings because much will depend on the number of changes required by the fittings.

Capt. Edward Utley, USMC, answers a query from a Villanovan during Marine Corps recruiting drive in Dougherty last week for officer candidates.

O'C Holds Second Concert Tonight

The Opera-Classica Music Society, now in its third year on the campus, will hold its second concert of the season tonight at 7:30 in the East Lounge in Dougherty Hall.

In following the schedule of alternating programs of opera and classical music, the light program tonight will consist of selections from Maurice Ravel, P. I. Tchaikovsky, and J. Offenbach.

Additional check cashing hours to accommodate students who have afternoon classes were announced this week by the Rev. John Curran, Vice President for Financial Affairs.

Effective immediately checks will be cashed from 10:00 A. M. to noon on Fridays in addition to the regular afternoon schedule of 1:00 P.M. to 4:00 P.M.

D.P.M. to Meet Wednesday; Year's Program to be Drawn Up; Treas. Calls for Dues

Delta Pi Mu fraternity will meet next Wednesday night, announced President Jim Judge.

He said dues must be paid by the December monthly meeting, but officers would prefer payment at next week's meeting to allow completion of the year's program.

Treasurer Mike Rafferty, 332 Good Counsel. will accept dues.

Tom Curran and Bill Hattrick were named social chairmen; Bob Donohue and Joe McCullen, program; Norm Peer, fraternity football team.

Judge announced the annual dinner-dance has been tentatively scheduled for Dec. 1.

Harris to Take Part in Round Table Talks

Mr. George Harris, dean of education, is among 28 educators from 21 colleges participating in round table discussions at the annual meeting of the International Systems meeting of the Systems and Procedures Association of America next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Discussed will be improved techniques for teaching systems and management courses.

These Six Girls Make Villanova Proud

In Both the University and the Hospital Our First Coeds Shine

Oh - where, oh - where have our nurses gone? There is a nursing class of '57, but it hasn't been much in evidence about the Villanova campus in the past two years. For they have gone to the Fitzgerald-Mercy hospital in Darby to continue their training on the practical level.

This was Villanova's first nursing class. Starting with twenty - seven girls in 1953, the class is now down to six. After two years of classroom work, the student nurses moved out to continue their training by working in hospitals in every phase of their profession.

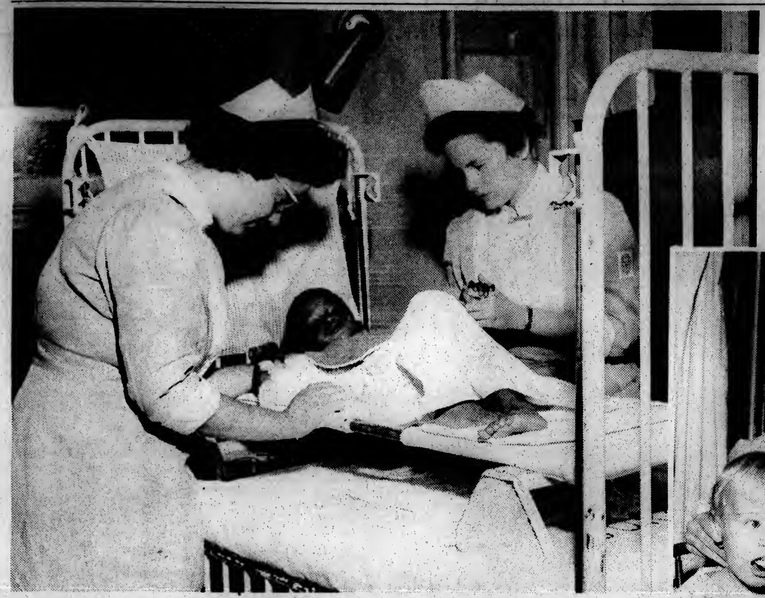
The Bedside Manner

Their hospital work covers practically everything they need to know from the proper method of administering a hyperderimc needle to the development of a professional bedside manner.

The pictures on these pages present more graphically than words ever could same of the rewards of the nursing profession which these Villanova young ladies in the advanced stage of undergraduate training are already beginning to enjoy.

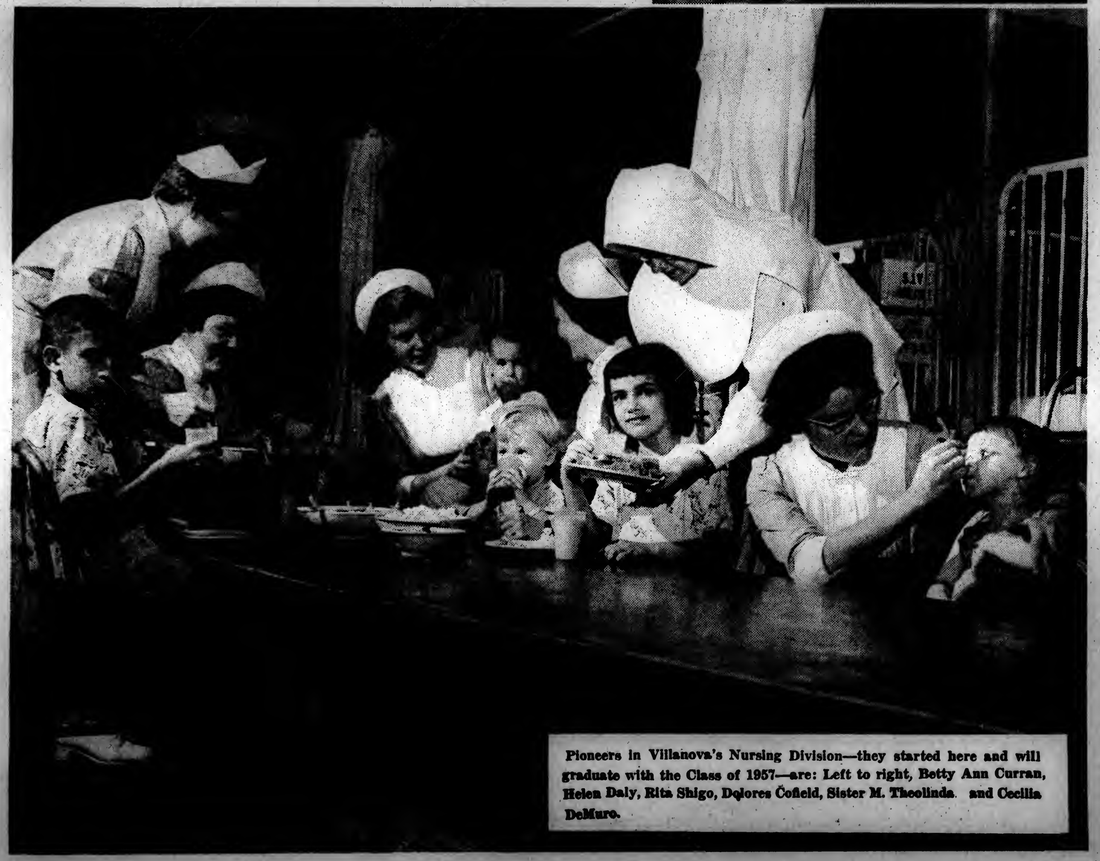
Dedication and Enjoyment

These rewards are the smile of a youngster, the trust of a youngster and the love of a youngster. But most of all there is the knowledge of usefulness and good: their usefulness to society as a whole and the good they can bring to the life of a little boy or girl.



But they don't look the part of girls bearing a heavy burden of responsibility, impressed with their own value. Rather they look like happy young women enjoying their life and their work. And a girl couldn't ask for much more.

"Vector addition and equilibrium" means nothing to Jackie's young mind but that "greenstick fracture" wouldn't heal half so well without the use of such principles of physics.



"Morning report . . ." This shows the nurse's ability to integrate her treatment to meet the physical, mental, spiritual, social and emotional needs of her patients.

"Hold my hand, please" Psychology, chemistry, physics and nursing arts all come into use at the bedside, even for such little patients.

"Mmmm, tastes good!" No coaxing needed here.

Late Senior Pix Taken Next Week

Paul Clarkson, feature editor of the Belle Air, asks that seniors return their proofs from their senior portraits to Carl Wolf Studio immmediately so that the deadline for the Belle Air may be met.

For those seniors who did not have their picture taken in the spring, the photographer will be on campus next Thursday, and Friday. The place will be announced at a later time.

Seniors are also asked to fill out and return their Senior History Forms by October 26. Forms may be obtained and returned in the Belle Air office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Students have been advised to get tickets now for parents and friends for the Oct. 27 "Olympic Bowl" game between Villanova and Florida State.

Applications Accepted Today For Red Cross Blood Drive

"The annual Blood Drive at Villanova is scheduled for next Wednesday and Thursday in Barry Hall's armory," commented Hank Miller, 1956 chairman.

In preparation for this a display has already been set up in the Villanova Library by the Red Cross, showing uses and methods of preserving whole blood and plasma.

A table in the day hop Cafeteria has been set up today so everyone will have a chance to sign up.

Bloodmobile At Barry Hall

The Bloodmobile will be at Barry Hall on both of the assigned days from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Students under 21 are required to have a signed permission from their parents. These slips may be picked up in the day hop cafeteria, the Marine office in the Navy building or Room 313, Sullivan Hall.

Ford Plans To Celebrate Spanish Night

According to President of the Spanish Club, Mike Ford, at the first meeting last week, this year's program will be an exceedingly active one Ford announced the resignation of the secretary of the club. Bill Mahedy, last year's election winner, has gone into the Augustinian Seminary in California. Gene Donohue, Villanovan feature writer, was appointed acting secretary.

Spanish Night Soon

The main social event of this semester will be the annual Spanish Night celebration. As always, it is to be attended by Spanish dignataries and members of the Romance Language clubs of the neighboring colleges.

AIEE Members Guests At Conference

Harry Fatkin, president of the Villanova branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, John Ellis, branch secretary, and Professor John B. Clothier, branch counselor, along with representatives of many other Eastern colleges will be guests of Lafayette College this weekend.

The purpose of the conference is to plan a program of activity which is of interest to electrical engineers.

Mr. G. E. Klapper of Philadelphia Electric spoke at the branch's first meeting last night which was attended by over 100 electrical engineers. Mr. Klapper's topic was "Supercritical Pressure—A Step Forward in Power Generation."

A major change in this fall's semester in the Chemistry Department is the expansion of the 153 laboratory session to six hours.

Ike Begins To Roll Despite "Solid South"

A campaign conducted in this manner will undoubtedly bring back many votes to the Republican banner that were lost in 1954. At first, many of the people thought that the President had not thought enough of their votes to work hard for them, but now all that is changed. Slowly the American people are coming back to the Republican fold. They are realizing that the past four years have not been as bad as the Democrats have said they were, They think that Mr. Eisenhower makes sense when he objects to his so-called "middle-of-the-road" policy being passed on both sides at the same time by the same party. After all, how can a man foster increased spending, lower taxes, and still call for a balanced budget?

Papers Behind 'Ike'

Many newspapers, who at first remained silent on backing a candidate, now stand fully behind the President. In the Philadelphia area, the Inquirer had a front page editorial in support of the President just one week ago today, and even the New York Times, which is noted for its factual and unbiased accounts, has backed him. With this support from many of these newspapers and magazines, and with the backing of the American people on November 6, Mr. Eisenhower, while not equalling his 1952 landslide, will spend another four years in the White House.

A REBIRTH

By BOB MULCAHY

Rebirth of spirit, dawn of a new era, sudden awakening of a dormant part of college life—call it what you want, but the obvious fact is that Villanova has really come alive.

In the past three years there have been sporadic outbursts of student spirit on campus. Examples are the rally and parades before the North Carolina State game last year and the rallies preceeding the Richmond contest last year and the Syracuse game three years ago, but always there was an undercurrent of doubt—doubt that the team could win. Not all of the student body attended—yes, there always were enough to make noise, but it was not the wholehearted enthusiasm that exudes from students when they know that they have something to back up their actions.

The Plane Was Late

When has a Villanova team been given a rousing reception after losing its opening game? When have students waited for the arrival of an airplane three hours overdue at the Philadelphia airport at 12:45 a.m.? When has there been a spontaneous demonstration at 2 a.m. on campus when the team returned home from its first victory? When have Villanova students crowded the railroad station to send the team off?

All these demonstrations have been squeezed into the short space of three games. Three vitally important games in the football destinies of this school.

Every Villanovan can be proud that he has done his part. Nothing like this has prevailed on this campus since this author has been here, and the impetus the team has given it by crushing Dayton should unite the student body as never before.

Can't Get Away From It

Everyone knew we had the potential this year. The outstanding thing in all minds was whether we could put forth the effort to realize it. Integral in the success of every team is the inspiration of the student body. Certainly this has been shown this year.

Victory tastes sweet, especially to a victory-starved college, and victory has been sweet here.

A vital part of the success of a college is the spirit of its undergraduates. This motivates their graduate activities as alumni and gives the school its name and prestige.

The spirit that is prevailing on campus now is something no Villanovan can shut himself away from and still feel in his heart that he is a real member of the school. This is something everyone is being caught by and it behooves every man to give his most.

No Failure This Time

This weekend in Boston another demonstration of the support the students are giving the team will be self evident. The last time a student trip was tried here it failed. This time it will be a great success. Boys short on cash are hitchhiking because they want to be part of it. Illustrative of this attitude is the remark of one student when told that we beat Dayton, "I wasn't sure if I would go to Boston but now I wouldn't miss it."

This new attitude is something we can boast about, our team, our spirit. Certainly it has put us in the spotlight and awakened the spirit so long dormant. It is up to every Villanovan to support it to his utmost. The benefits are lasting.

Villanova's Al Ciarrochi drives for yardage against Dayton Saturday night as the Wildcats extended their winning streak to two games with a 13-0 victory on a second half comeback. John Ferruolo and Don Devereaux were ball carrying stars. Student trip to Boston this weekend will give Villanovans a chance to see their globe trotting footballers in action.

Devereaux and Ferruolo Stars As Wildcats Shut Out Dayton 13-0

By HANK NICHOLS

Villanova's Wildcats unleashed a devastating ground attack at Dayton Saturday night, as they toppled the Flyers 13-0 for their second consecutive victory.

Led by a hard charging line that opened gaping holes in the Dayton forward wall, the locals completely outplayed the Ohioans in virtually every statistical department.

John Ferruolo and Jack Devereaux, heretofore sparingly used by Coach Frank Reagan, led the Mainliners as they rushed for 65 and 84 yards respectively. Ferruolo also shone on defense, intercepting two Flyer aerials the second of which set up the Wildcat's second touchdown.

Ed Michaels, Don Luzzi, Ron Wood and Joe Ryan were thorns in the Dayton side all night as they led the Villanova linemen in holding Dayton to a mere 65 yards rushing, compared to the visitors 221.

Although the Wildcats only scored twice, both times in the second half, they were deep in Flyer territory throughout the evening. In the first quarter the Wildcats reached U of D's four-yard-line but were deprived of a chance to score by a 15-yard-penalty. This drive started on the Dayton 46. Ferruolo picked up 30 off tackle and Grazione went to the 10 on an option play. Ferruolo made a first down on the four but the penalty halted the drive there.

First Score

Villanova's first touchdown came with five minutes left in the third quarter. The Flyers punted to the Wildcat 45. John Gianantonio hit left tackle for six, John Bauer went off the same tackle for two, and around left end for 12 yards. On fourth down Rick Sapienza moved the ball to the Dayton seven. An offside violation put the ball on the two, from where Parr took it over.

The Mainliners' second score was set up by Ferruolo's 25-yard return of an intercepted pass to the Flyer 25. A fourth down pass from Billy Magee was caught by Bauer off the fingertips of Devereaux on the ten and Bauer ran over from there.

Harriers Sweep Hoyas, St. Joe's; Ron, Alex, John Win

Villanova's cross country team defeated St. Joseph's and Georgetown Saturday by the score 28-37-63. The meet was held at Cobb's Creek Course.

The meet was highlighted by a three way tie for first place between three Mainliners: Ron Delany, Alex Breckenridge and John Kopil. All 3 built up an immense lead over their opponents throughout the five ¼ mile course and made no effort to beat each other. Their winning time was 24 minutes, 34 seconds, which is an excellent time for such a tricky and hilly course.

George Browne and Al Peterson were the others who placed for the Wildcats. They finished eighth and fourteenth, respectively.

Bob Lippiner of Georgetown was fourth, while Ed Mather, Joe Sloane and Bob Hagerty of St. Joseph's followed the Georgetown ace to the finish line.

Other Villanovans running included Joe Armon, Bill Rahn, Vic DeMaio, Charley Stead, and Jerry Hogan.

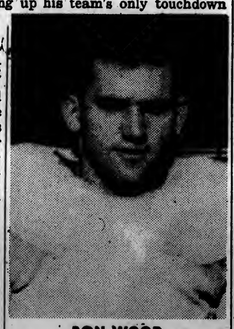
It was the first victory for the Wildcat harriers, who lost a triangular meet to Pittsburgh at Navy in their first outing.

The only home meet of the season will take place next Wednesday when Fort Monmouth runs against Villanova.

Placers in Villanova's triangular cross country win over St. Joseph's and Georgetown: Ron Delany (1), John Kopil (3), Alex Breckenridge (2) and Al Peterson (14).

Fulfillment Of Promise To Student Rally Brings Wood His Greatest Grid Thrill

By JACK CURTIN



The underdog team was pushing the favorites all over the field, yet was losing the game, 7-2, in the third quarter. Then, as the favorites were forced to kick on a fourth down from deep in their own territory, a burly guard broke through the defensive line and blocked the kick, setting up his team's only touchdown and eventual victory.

Presents Trophy To Students

Last Thurday evening, Senior lineman Ron Wood, as acting Captain during Villanova's 8-7 conquest of Detroit, presented the Cyril Burke trophy to the University student body. This cup, which goes to the winner of each game between the two teams came to Villanova as a result of Wood's blocked kick and the touchdown scored by John Bauer.

Ron is a Marketing major in the Commerce and Finance School from Rahway, New Jersey. He attended Rahway High School, where he starred on the school gridiron team. Originally, Ron was a quarterback but was switched to the guard position during his Junior year.

During his Senior year, the soon-to-be Wildcat was named to the New Jersey All-State squad and the high school All-American team. He lists as his greatest thrill in high school the 20-6 defeat of Clifford Scott High School in his Senior season. Scott had ruined Rahway's chance for an undefeated season for two years previously.

RON WOOD
A Lineman Breaks Through

Upon graduation, he was granted a scholarship to Villanova. During Ron's freshman year, the Frosh squad had no games scheduled and participated only in scrimmage contests with the varsity. However, he won a letter in his Sophomore season and has been a regular in the line for the past two years.

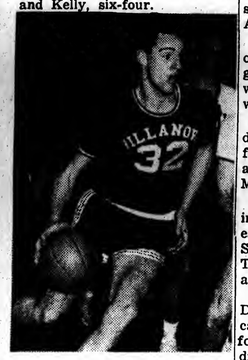
Wildcats Begin Practice For Coming Court Series

Six Veterans Form Nucleus

By HANK NICHOLS

Last Monday afternoon the Villanova Basketball Wildcats began preparation for their December 5 opener with Canisius, last year's NCAA Eastern Regional finalists.



Head Coach Alex Severance, entering his twenty-first year at Villanova, will be well fortified with returning lettermen and promising freshmen. He lost only three men from last year's team; John Cirino, Marty Milligan, and Larry Tierney.

Captain Jim Smith tops the list of returning lettermen that includes Jack Weissman, Jim Fahey, Allan Griffith, Jack Kelly, and Tom Brennan. Kelly and Brennan are juniors while the former are back for their last crack at the hoops in a Blue and White uniform.

Frosh Hopefuls

Joe Ryan, leading freshman scorer last season, Gene Opella, and Ken Harrison will be moving up for their first shot at varsity competition.

The height problem which has plagued Severance in past seasons seems to be somewhat rectified. He has Brennan, six-six, Fahey and Opella, both six-five, and Kelly, six-four.

TOM BRENNAN
A Tall Junior

Smith, Weissman, and Griffith are entering their third season as regulars and on past performance alone, rate as major college ballplayers. They have competed with the best and have the experience vitally needed to push this year's hardwood aggression to a good season, possibly a great one.

Joe Ryan, a six-footer, has the talent necessary to become an All-American. If he can make the step to varsity competition showing some of his great potential, then the 1956-57 Wildcats will have a most outstanding scorer needed to rank with the country's 286 teams.

Kenny Harrison, at six-two, jumps like he has springs in his feet, and may prove a valuable asset in the rebounding department.

There are many "if's" to reckon with this season, but judging on Severance's past record, this winter will show little surprise if Villanova has one of the best teams in the East and comes back from New York the winner of the Holiday Festival.

DPM Fraternity Grid Team Beats Defending Champs In Intramural League Play

By BILL VINCENT

Delta Pi Mu fraternity's intramural football team ruined the defending champion Flyweights' season opener last Tuesday on Austin Field.

DPM was declared the winner on first downs, 7-2, when the game ended in a scoreless tie with the winners on the Flyweights' two-yard-line.

Quarterback Bill Hattrick directed the game-closing drive from the losers' 20-yard-line after completing a long pass to Mike Klesius.

The Flyweights' were in scoring position on the DPM five earlier, but Quarterback Bob Scalzi missed on two passes after Tom Curran had thrown him for a ten yard loss.

Al Dombroski starred for DPM on defense and Don Couig caught several Hattrick passes for long yardage—one for on a diving grab.

Large Turnout

This year's touch football circuit has 45 teams and 700 players. Presently the teams are divided into four leagues, but with the second games coming up this week there may be an increase in leagues allowing more games to be played each week. With this speeded up schedule, more teams will be given a chance to compete against each other and the leaders of their respective leagues will be able to fight it out for the championship.

Football isn't the only Fall intramural sport. On Wednesday, October 10, Villanova's pool was the scene of the intramural swimming meet.

Joe Mason and Gene Hewitt won five of the six championships. Mason won the 50 yard orthodox brest stroke in 37.9 seconds, and the 50 yard butterfly breaststroke in 34.1. Hewitt won the 150 yard individual medley in 2 minutes 14.2 seconds and the 50 yard backstroke in 33 seconds. The best diver was S. Carton with a total of 78 points. Lyons, Cunjak, Yurchak, Merikangas, Gilhool, McCurley, Baker, and Huson were others who fared well in the meet.

More Eevents

With the swimming championships completed, and the touch football league running smoothly, Jim Moran, president of the Intramural Council, announced that the department is very satisfied with the number of students participating, but expresses hope that more students will take part in the extensive competition remaining.

Summer Basketball League Captured By VU Students

Villanova's students have won another title—that of champions of the CYO summer basketball league in Phoenixville. The "Villanova Gyros," a team composed mostly of juniors, captained and coached by Gene Fogerty, Electrical Engineer from Jeffersonville, won the laurels by winning two out of three games from the Bowling Alley All Stars in the playoffs. The victory was achieved despite the fact that several team members were on a NROTC cruise.

The "Gyros" ended the regular season undefeated in league play and received the victory trophy Sunday, October 6. Jack McNichol, Civil Engineer from Philadelphia, was voted the most valuable player of the league and received a portable-radio and carrying case.

Team Members

Other members of the champions included Tom Boyle, Joe Kolen, George Fraunces, Mack McCarthy, Jim Hearn, Dick Gillespie, Norm Huddy, Tom LoBue, and Dick Horn.

Formed last winter, the "Gyros" advanced to the finals in the Howard Detwiler Invitation Tourney last March before they lost to these same Bowling Alley All Stars 60-38.

On the Road Again:

Mainliners Renew Rivalry With Boston U.; Ex-Wildcat At Halfback For Terriers

By BOB THOMAS

Villanova's Wildcats travel to Boston this weekend to clash with Boston University in their fourth consecutive away game and second straight night game. The encounter will be played at Boston University (Braves') Field Saturday night.

This will be the seventh meeting between these two clubs in a rivalry that started with three games played in the late 1930's. Villanova came out the winner in all three contests by scores of 25-7 in 1936, 12-0 in 1937 and 39-6 in 1938.

Fourteen years elapsed before the two teams met again but Villanova continued to hold its mastery over the Terriers by stunning a favored Boston team by a 51-6 score. In 1953 the Scarlet and White squad won its first game over Villanova by a 31-19 count and followed this up with a 28-6 triumph in 1954.

In meeting this year's Boston University team, the Wildcats run into a coach who has compiled a fine record and also a former Wildcat, Larry Fennessey, who transferred to Boston University after playing for Villanova in 1954.

Fennessey, a 5-8, 175 pound junior, was outstanding in the Terriers' recent game with William and Mary College. In 1954 the speedy halfback was a standout performer for the Wildcats in the loss to Boston University.

Aldo (Buff) Donelli, head coach of the Terriers for the past nine years, is the winningest major college coach in New England. He had compiled an all-time head coaching record of 74 wins, 35 losses and four ties before the start of this season.

Co-Captains, quarterback Charley Fiorino and tackle George Spaneas, lead a 45-man team with a young backfield but a relatively veteran line. Their squad that has 20 new faces. The first game this year the Terriers defeated Massachusetts University 19-6 and in their second encounter battled to an 18-18 tie with William and Mary.

Golf Team Chosen; Captain Predicts Promising Season

Newest athletic team to show its improvements is the rejuvenated golf team. Under the supervision of Captain Ben Klemanowicz tryouts for next spring's team were held October 6 and 7 at the Mainline Golf Course in St. Davids.

This was done as a precautionary measure to insure every candidate an equal chance for a berth on the squad. Last spring the snow and rains forced cancellation of tryouts because the first match was at hand.

About 25 students played the 36 holes of medal play on Saturday and Sunday under summer rules.

The strength of next year's club is shown by the fact that the nine qualifiers all ranged between 159 and 169. Low man with rounds of 77 and 82 was sophmore Ronnie Zurinskas while the low individual round was turned in by Roger Gaire with a 74.

Qualifiers

Jim Birle, Nick Aquilino, Frank Kruse, Jay Gibney, Joe Lewis, William Mawn, Roger Michaud qualified along with Gaire and Zurinskas. Captain Klemanowicz was exempt. Of this total two will be dropped in competition in the spring.

'We'll Have A Terrific Year,' Says Ron Wood

Fulfills Promise

He names the previously mentioned Detroit victory as his biggest thrill so far, in his college career. This is because his teammates elected him captain for the game, and also because he was able to fulfill a promise made to a student football rally that he would bring the Cyril Burke trophy back to the campus.

Ron made a prophesy about the rest of the football season, saying that "if the team's spirit can match that shown by the students, we will have a terrific year."

Evening Division Lists New Course

Adding to the regular curriculum, the Evening Division of Villanova University has inaugurated a program of courses for life insurance men and women designed to prepare them for the Chartered Life Underwriter's examination. This semester the first C.L.U. course in Part I is being offered. Courses in other Parts wil be offered during successive years. The course is being taught by Leroy G. Steinbeck, managing director of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters.

DR. LYONS HEADS ADDITIONS TO FACULTY

Ten new professors have been added to the Evening faculty. They are: Robert Lyons, PhD., John Meloche, B.S.N.Ed., Frederick H. Reeder, M.D., M.P.H., Richard E. Ruane, LI.B., James McElhaney, B.S.M.E., Bohdan P. Procko, M.A., Raymond L. Cummings, M.A., Tobias Hahn, A.B., John M. Green, M.A.

PA. AUDIO-VISUAL ASSN. ELECTS DR. POWERS

At a recent meeting of the Pennsylvania Audio-Visual Association for Teacher Education, Dr. Eugene P. Powers, Dean of the Evening Division, was elected President.

Council Dissolves

"By being able to take its suggestions directly to the proper vice president, the Council now has a fast and efficient method for making itself heard. Any recommendations approved by the administration will be put into practice with the minimum of delay."

"I am looking forward to having this system make the Council an effective voice of the students."

Starting a trip that will end up in Melbourne, Australia, Charley Jenkins (in car) and Phil Reavis tell a crowd outside Field House good-bye. They left Wednesday for Olympic training camp in California. Coach Elliott is next to Reavis.

"UNETHICAL PROBLEMS"

By HARRY & GERRY

Dear Editor,

I am sure that the girl I met at Rosemont is crazy about me, although she uses little tricks to keep me guessing. Little tricks like when I approach her she says, "Beat it, Ya Creep," or points at me and begins to laugh hysterically. Other of her clever devices to win me are hanging up when I call her and threatening my life if I ever bother her again. How can I get her to admit her true feelings.

Dear Frosh,

Why bother with this radical when it is obvious you possess some eerie mystical power over women.

* * * * * *

Dear Editor,

This summer I met a very wonderful girl. Before I left for school I decided to go steady. However, on my first visit home I was shocked to find my name tatooed on her forehead. Although I was very much disturbed I acted as if I was pleased. In her last letter this very wonderful girl told me all about her latest tatooes, plus the fact that she now wears my ring through her pierced ear. How can I get rid of her?

Dear Frosh,

Wait until she is completely covered with tatooes, then accuse her of misspelling your name. This should break her spirit.

* * * * * *

Dear Editor,

I am truly amazed at my roommate. He is only 5 feet in height, but possesses incredible strength. Recently I returned to our room to find him sitting by the window, his body glowing in the dark. To boot, he picks up strange television stations on his lamp. Also, I have noticed him saluting other equally odd looking freshmen. I think he is a Martian.

Dear Frosh,

You are absolutely right. The school has been accepting Martians for years. In fact, very few of our students are earth men. Be kind and understanding to your comrade, and he will not be too quick to disintegrate you.

* * * * * *

This column has also been conducting a "Write-In Opinion" Poll, with these amazing results;

Q. What do you think of the 1956 elections?

A. Well, my grandmother says Coolidge is a shoo-in. However, I have never heard of Coolidge and anyone who hasn't the ambition to campaign will never get my vote, especially since I am only twelve years old.

Signed Marcia vonAlshott.

Q. What do you think of "Rock-'n-Roll?"

A. This primitive rhythm is disgusting to every true music lover. The revolting gyrations of these so called artists are nothing short of nauseating. Rock-'n-Roll is the comic book of the music world.

Signed Fats Domino.

Q. What is your favorite TV show?

A. I am crazy over the Late-Late-Late show, which I watch every day before breakfast. Yesterday they featured a movie called "Tony Curtis Meets The Wolf Man," starring Nelson Eddy and Margaret O'Brien. It was all about teen age gangs in the Belgian Congo, and was really keen watching.

Signed ?

Q. What did you think of the World Series?

A. I despise this silly, frivolous waste of time.

Signed Don Newcombe

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

This weekend the social spotlight will be on Beantown as the Wildcats meet Boston University. Since it's a school excursion, we plan to see all of you up there. The spirit that has been shown so far on this campus is to be congratulated. Just keep up the good work. A lot of credit goes to the Spirit Committee under Pat Nicholson.

The following should give you a start on what to expect and where to go in Boston. Should you desire nourishment as you approach Boston, the Meadows on Rt. 9 is recommended. While in Boston proper, you will find Freddies' on Union Street supplying good Italian food if that be your desire. There are two "Oyster Houses" located in the Boston area for seafood supreme.

REICH

Chow and Sacks

As far as accommodations are concerned, there are many hotels around Boston University (formerly Braves') Field, which also provide good chow. Prices are expected to be higher in these hotels for most food. The Hotels Kenmore and Copley are nearest to the stadium, although the Hotels Sherton and Manger may be cheaper. You might be able to get sacks at the University.

Since B. U. is coed, I'm sure you'll be able to find dates. The university has no actual campus, so most action will be found along "fraternity row" and in the sorority houses.

Following the game there should be a host of parties at both the fraternities and hotels around town. In the evening, if dancing be your choice, you can usually find a big name band at the Totem Pole. King Philip's is also recommened, since more potent refreshments will be found there.

For Jazz Fiends

For a more night club atmosphere with dancing, you might try Blistroms. For jazz lovers, either Mahoney Hall or the Savory will satisfy your Wildcat dreams. A drive to Chelmsford, Mass., has been recommended by G. M. and J. M.

All the above is meant as a guide for your enjoyment and pleasure, but take it easy and be careful.

For Stay-at-Homes

If you are among the few who aren't going to Boston, and there are a "few," there's still entertainment to be found around Villanova.

The idea of country fairs has caught on, even up at Immaculata, where they're sponsoring a "Country Store" on Saturday. Rain or shine, throughout the day and night. Refreshments will be available. You even get a chance to win a "Country Squire" station wagon, which will be raffled off. All proceeds going to the building fund.

Appearing in the Philadelphia area this week are Red Buttons (Chubby's) and the Four Voices (Sciolla's).

"Cindy, Oh Cindy," by Vince Martin, gets our vote as the best record buy of the week. The success story of this record makes a dramatic tale. Martin, coming out of nowhere, challenging Eddie Fisher, has smashed through for a big, genuine hit that has trade circles wondering. Vince has the edge in popularity over Eddie in a majority of markets surveyed.

The Elephant vs. the Donkey:

Villanova Students Voice Their Opinions On Presidential Issues

By FRANK DELANY

V.U. Speaks On Election

Following up on our presidential preference poll, the Villanovan has attempted to discover the issues confronting the voter as the campaign goes into its final month and to present the Democratic and Republican stand on them.

Joseph Wheeler, Education voter .....Farm Problem

Democratic: As a temporary measure to take care of an emergency situation of falling farm prices and more farm mortgages, the Democrats propose high firm price supports. Long-range plans include the encouragement of cooperatives and rural electrification and aid projects as typified by T.V.A.

Republican: As a permanent remedy, the soil bank chiefly stands to benefit the farmer. Unfortunately political yogi has misled the farmer to ask for another form.

George Rogacz, Industrial Administration ..... Civil Rights

Democratic: Despite the southern influence, Stevenson's position is everything short of force, particularly the full utilization of the president's moral force.

Republican: The Constitution calls for the enforcement of all laws. The Republican viewpoint is to uphold the Constitution in the segregation issue.

Bob Arkison, English Labor

Democratic: Repeal or at least revision of the anti-union clauses of the Taft-Hartley Act and a National Labor Relations Board not staffed almost entirely by those favorable to management, and a raising of the minimum wage to $1.25 are called for.

Republican: Keep the balance between labor and management met in the present administration by liberal policy as seen in the Steel Workers problem. The president believes in having the minimum wage apply to more people before raising it for the present allowed group.

Charles Beltrazzo; C&F Big Business Giveways

Democratic: Said the first Secretary of Interior of the Administration, McKay, "We are in the saddle as an administration representing business and industry." He proved it. And Ike is supporting him for Senator. Dixon-Yates is merely one that didn't work.

Republican: Actually as an issue this is merely an attempt to archaic return to the days of Teapot Dome. There have been no "business giveways" that reflect (as is hoped) a corrupt administration.

Not of Age? Vote Anyway

The VILLANOVAN presidential poll is running into its second and final week. Have you voted yet?

The results are being accumulated and tabulated by the staff, but the returns have not been up to expectations.

The final results of the poll will be announced in the VILLANOVAN appearing on the campus Oct. 31. The deadline, therefore, has been set as Wednesday, Oct. 24.

Ballot boxes are placed at the information window in Mendel Hall and the chow hall ramp and the day hop cafeteria in Dougherty Hall. Ballots may also be left in the room of Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith, 106 Sullivan, Managing Editor Bob Strayton, 337 Good Counsel, or Associate Editor Bill Jones, 211 Sullivan.

Prom Band Limit Removal Passed By Student Council

Motions calling for the relaxation of all financial limits on bands for proms and dinner dances and for free textbooks for band members were passed Monday night by Student Council.

Sophomore Councilman Don Kempf's motion would leave the financial limit to the discreation of the class officers and the Dean of Student Activities. At present a limit of $1,000 is placed on hiring bands.

The proposal for free textbooks was offered by Senior Bob Schiller, the band's student conductor. Council Chairman Joe Martin appointed Schiller chairman of a committee to study the matter. Books would be distributed to bandsmen as they are now to scholarship athletes and would be turned into the school at the endof the year.

Motions Offered

Junior Councilman Pat Nicholson offered two motions, which were passed. They call for: A trophy case in Dougherty Hall.

Recording of the Alma Mater and fight songs by the band and the Villanova Singers.

Improvement of "March of the Wildcats" by the addition of new verses.

Seniors Elect Representative For SC Tomorrow

Seniors will elect a new Student Council representative tomorrow between 10:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. in Alumni Gym.

Candidates for the resident engineering seat are: John Decker, Harry Fatkin, Dick Mason, Jim McCormick, Terry McHugh, Jim Schuster and Jim Wray.

All seniors are eligible to vote for the replacement to Jack O'Rourke, who resigned from Council in August to enter the Augustinian Order.

V.U. Law School Holds Moot Court

The Villanova University Law School conducted its annual moot court competition last Wednesday evening in the C&F Auditorium.

The case enacted by the law school students was Young versus United States, in which the petitioner was convicted of first degree murder.

Meets Tomorrow

This Thursday at 10:30 the Physics Club will hold its second meeting of the year in room 212 Mendel. Ray Muench, senior physics major, will give a lecture and demonstration on "Microwaves," and all interested students are invited to attend.

President James Shea, a senior, announced the speaker and topic. He emphasized that the Club is open to all students with an interest in science, not just physics majors.

IRC Meets Today

Personnel Relations in Industry will be the topic of tonight's meeting of the International Relations Club in 207 C&F at 7:30.

Class of '59 Nurses Capped

Seventeen sophomore nursing students received their caps Sunday afteroon in Villanova's third capping ceremony in the University Chapel.

The Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., university president, presided at the ceremony, which marked the appearance of the Villanova Singers.

Fr. Rongione Speaks

The Villanova Nursing Pledge was followed by an address to the students by Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., moderator of the VILLANOVAN, in which he warned the future nursing graduates to prepare themselves for the hardships incurred in the profession and prayed that they would have the strength to overcome these hardships.

Those Capped

The seventeen young ladies honored were: Regina Mary Bausher, Margaret Mary Bonner, Gertrude Arlene Bulterman, Kathleen Margaret Collins, Mary Kathleen Cowan, Janet Mary Cunningham, Rosalina Mary Ghilhardi, Faith Marieanne Heller, Patricia Michele Hunt, Christina Cecilia Keane, Marcia Ann Marlow, Barbara Ann May, Mary Esther Screem, Ellen Nora Stewart, Sharon Elaine Trail, Barbara Joan Warner, and Joanne Leona Zaremba.

Work In Hospitals

Since the beginning of this semester these nursing students have attended classes on campus while traveling to hospitals in the vicinity to receive necessary practical experience.

Father Farrell New B.M. Moderator

Belle Masque President Mike Clark welcomed the Rev. William Farrell, O.S.A., assistant to the chaplain and instructor in the Engineering School, as the organization's moderator.

This appointment now completes the filling of the dual-position held formally by Father William Krupa, O.S.A., now residing in Massachusetts. Earlier, Mr. Richard Duprey, was appointed as Director of the organization.

December Play

Father Farrell has already conferred with many of the members of BM and with Mr. Duprey on the script for the forthcoming production in December.

The society is currently well underway in preparations for this production. Casting has been completed and early rehearsals are already being held to meet the show dates of December 6, 7, and 8.

Bigger Production Staff

Something a little different has been established this year for Belle Masque in the way of an enlarged Production Staff.

Several new position have been created and other have been combined into a staff resembling those of a professional company.

A general meeting for all members has also been scheduled for tomorrow at 7:15 P.M. in 101 C and F.

Bloodmobile Arrives For Two-Day Stay

Delany Named New Editor-in-Chief At LYNX Meeting

The first step on the way to two and possibly three editions of the revitalized LYNX this year was taken with the announcement of an editorial staff and the first meeting of the editors.

Frank Delany, junior day-hop from Broomall, has been named editor-in-chief to succeed John Eddinger and Joseph Barrett.

The important and difficult job of make-up editor is in the hands of Robert Strayton, senior resident, and VILLANOVAN managing editor.

Clem Birch, junior day-hop from Haverford, heads the copy staff while finances and publicity are the charge of Ted Macri.

The art editorship, carrying with it the responsibility of cover design, has been assigned to junior Gerald La Karnefeaux.

Daniel Bartolini, senior, is the new poetry editor and Gerald Sullivan, sophomore, will hold down the position of circulation manager.

Dr. John Phillipson and Mr. James Mitchell, faculty moderators of the magazine, presided over the initial meeting of the new editorial staff last Thursday.

The editors discussed objectives and plans for the first issue and outlined immediate work to be done. First on the agenda is the solicitation of material.

"Every issue of the LYNX is only as good as the material contributed by the Villanova student body," said Delany.

The LYNX urges everyone with any interest in writing to submit their material to the magazine.

Copy Editor Birch promises that all material submitted will be filed and, if not used, will be returned to the author with a brief criticism and suggestions for improvement.

Students Asked to Give; Miller Cites Advantages

Today and tomorrow, Villanovans will once again have an opportunity to participate in the annual Villanova Blood Drive. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will set up its temporary quarters in John Barry Hall from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on both these days.

Among the advantages gained by Villanovans donating blood is a plan whereby any member of the donor's family in need of a blood transfusion within the next year, is eligible to receive the whole blood necessary from the Red Cross at no cost to the donor, the person in need or any member of the family.

Want 20 Per Cent

Hank Miller, chairman of this year's drive, has commented that if 20 per cent of the student body contributes to the blood drive, all those who are unable to contribute because of ill health or other reasons will also be covered by this policy. Up to this time Villanova has always fallen short of the 20 per cent.

Faculty members are especially urged to give blood.

Registration Slips

Students under the age of 21 are required to have signed permission from their parents. Slips for this purpose may be obtained in Dougherty Hall or at the Marine office in John Barry Hall.

NROTC students will be given merits for blood donations. Intercompany competition will also be held.

The possibility of one excused cut for blood donors is under consideration by the administration, according to Miller.

Packed Cotillion To Feature Award, Rubin, and Prizes

The first class dance of Villanova's social calendar, the Sophomore Cotillion, will be held this Friday night from 9 to 1 in the field house.

Stan Rubin's internationally famous Tigertown Five and his 12-piece orchestra have been engaged for this kickoff to the year's first big weekend, which will include the student motorcade and the Florida State game Saturday night.

The theme of the dance will not be announced until Friday night, but two changes have been revealed. The newly established white-hat award will be given to the member of the orientation committee who contributed most to the introduction of freshmen to Villanova. Door prizes will also be awarded.

These prizes, two long-play albums by the Tigertown Five and signed by the members of the VU football team, will be

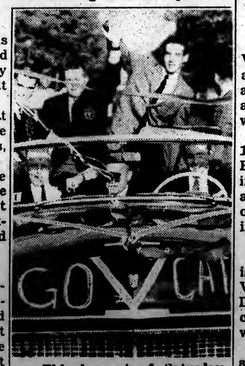
Motorcade Ready To Go As VU Meets Fla. State

A 20-foot long hearse, topped by a 12-piece band, will be in Villanova's first motorcade, to the Florida State game Saturday night.

John Fusaro, motorcade co-chairman with Jack Shea, said Bill Quinn was entering his father's hearse—the only one of its kind on the East Coast—in the motorcade starting at about 5 p.m. from the Field House.

Assemble at 4:30

All fraternities and campus organizations have been urged to enter their cars as a group by Spirit Committee Chairman Pat Nicholson.



The caravan will assemble at about 4:30 and all cars must be decorated with ribbons or signs, Nicholson explained.

All drivers must stay in line as the cars proceed along the Schuylkill Expressway and East River Drive to Franklin Parkway where they will be formed into small "V's."

First Motorcade

This is the first time a motorcade has been tried here, according to Nicholson, who urged drivers to follow the rules set down by the Spirit Committee "to insure success for the project and bring favorable publicity to Villanova."

No horn blowing or siren blowing will be permitted, warned Nicholson, but other types of noise will be tolerated by the Philadelphia Police Department, except in the vicinity of hotels and hospitals. The police department is "cooperating to the fullest," Nicholson said.

This is part of Saturday afternoon's impromptu motorcade through Boston streets, making Beantown residents well aware that Villanova had followed its team up.

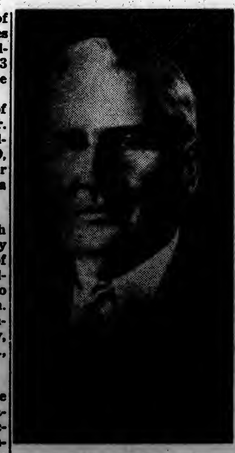
Prizes will be awarded to the three most attractively decorated cars, according to the chairman. First prize will be $10, second, $5 and third, $3.

Cyril J. Burke Dies; University Trustee

Cyril J. Burke, member of Villanova's Board of Trustees and Advisory Board and a Villanova alumnus, died Oct. 13 after an extended illness. He was 61.

A graduate of the Class of 1917 in civil engineering, Mr. Burke received the "Outstanding Alumnus" award in 1939, and accepted an honarary doctor of science degree from Villanova in 1953.

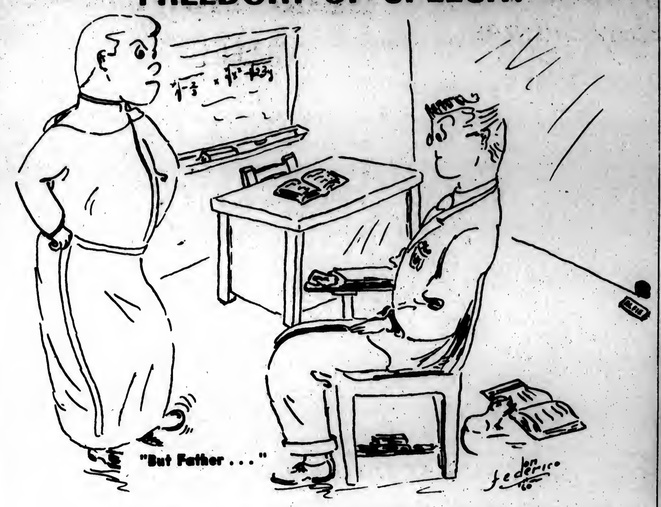
Donated Trophy



He donated the trophy which is competed for each season by Villanova and University of Detroit football teams. The Wildcats won it for the first time two weeks before Mr. Burke's death.

Mr. Burke, president of a construction equipment company, died at his Grosse Point, Mich., home.

Sons Are Alumni



Among his survivors are three sons who graduated from Villanova—Cyril J. Burke Jr., electrical engineering, 1947; Thomas, chemical engineering, 1949; Michael, C & F, 1953.

A member of the Board of Trustees since 1951, Mr. Burke had served on the Advisory Board since 1944.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH?

Barry Hall For Cheap Insurance

One of the cheapest insurance policies available anywhere is on sale in John Barry Hall today and tomorrow.

For a pint of blood, a Villanovan may insure that every member of his family will have plenty of blood for emergency operations and in case of accidents.

In the past many Villanova families have received Red Cross blood. By donating today and tomorrow, Villanovans can insure that the Red Cross' blood supply will remain in a strong condition.

In recent visits to Villanova, the Bloodmobile has never reached the 20 per cent mark, which would insure the entire school. Last year's turnout was ten per cent.

Hank Miller, blood drive chairman, especially urges all faculy members to take part between 10:15 a.m. and 3:45 p.m. The procedure is painless, and persons who can not donate for physical reasons will be told this after preliminary tests.

Pope Pius XII has joined officials around the country in describing the need for blood donations. The Holy Father has commented:

". . . Those who shed their blood for a high and holy cause afford indeed a stirring witness to their generosity, love, allegiance. Worthy they are of the palms of glory awarded them. But to give one's own blood for the recovery of the unknown, or even the thankless;

"To make a gift of one's own strength solely to restore to another what he has lost; not to wait to rebuild one's diminished resources before beginning again, before renewing the same gift, the same sacrifice: to this you have pledged yourselves so large-heartedly."

From Boston To Philadelphia

The first Villanova football trip in five years was a great success. The students visiting Boston for the weekend are to be congratulated both for their fine display of spirit at the game and for their equally fine and amazingly orderly display of the same spirit at the rally in front of the Kenmore Hotel.

According to the Boston papers, the Villanova students took over the cheering the moment they entered the field and never let up. Still more to their credit, and much to the amazement of many of their own contingent, was the way the student body conducted themselves while in Beantown. It is quite unusual for a student trip as successful as this to also produce such a safety and sanity record.

On this trip depended the entire future of Villanova football excursions. It was entirely up to the students making this initial migration whether there would ever be another one. And thanks to their spirit-filled, but nevertheless safe and sane conduct, it looks like there will be many more to come. It will be a long time before Boston forgets this one.

But let us not let the success of the trip go to our heads. We have another stiff test awaiting us.

The people of Philadelphia do not get a chance to glance through the Boston Sunday papers very often, so they will be watching, quite critically we are sure, the student motorcade to Municipal Stadium Saturday night. We doubt very much that the City of Brotherly Love believes it is possible to pull off a stunt like this without causing a wave to commotion and confusion the likes of which have never before been witnessed by the city.

Let us give them a show of spirit they will never forget. But let us do it like conscientious Catholic men that all involved can be proud of, especially the guiding lights of our own university who have done so much to make this "first" possible.

Political Round-up:

Anything Goes In Final Week; Ike Seen In Again

by Gene Donohue

With the election day less than two weeks away, it seems that the old saying "all's fair in love and war" should be changed to read "all's fair in love, war, and politics."

All four candidates have stopped pulling punches now and are letting loose with the works. "Talk now, apologize later" appears to be the by-word.

So far, not much has come to the fore in specific issues, but plenty has been said about opponents' speeches. Mr. Eisenhower tosses epithets at Mr. Stevenson, and finds he is getting them tossed right back. But all this name-calling and mud-slinging is getting results, and perhaps this is more evident in the cities than anywhere else.

The general consensus of opinion in the cities is still that the Democrats are the party of the poor man, while the Republicans support the rich. The big thing, though, is that the dividing line at which the Republicans gain an almost even split has been pushed much further down the income scale than at any time during the presidencies of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman.

Perhaps the most effective weapon the Republicans have used to attain this raised standard of living attitude has been facts about the cost of living. They very deftly point out that the cost of living has risen three percent in the past three and one half years, while it soared almost 50 percent in the last seven years of the Democratic administration of Harry Truman.

A Load Lightened

Such statements as this have turned even some people who voted for Stevenson in 1952 toward Eisenhower in '56. A large amount of these people were saddled with debt four years ago, but have managed to lighten their load considerably during the Republican reign.

This is not to say, though, that the people will vote a straight Republican ticket. Many people claim they will vote Democratic on everything but the Presidency because "they like Ike." Their reasoning goes something like this: "Eisenhower is fighting for peace. He won't send you overseas. But the Democrats are for better working conditions. So, I'll go Democrat for everything but President."

Peace and Safety

This brings in Eisenhower's second big drawing card . . . peace. If you were to ask the average American to show you where Eisenhower started his peace offensive, he would look at you as if you had been completely sheltered from the field of current events. He would tell you that everyone knows that Ike ended the Korean War. But ask him exactly how, and he's stuck. All he knows is that there is no war now and that his sons are safe, and that Ike is in some way responsible for this peace. Thus, this is the main Republican drawing card. Men debate the issues of the standard of living, but the woman wants her son home.

Take this peace issue as the filling, pour it into a crust of prosperity, lay it before the American people, and you have a dish that would tempt anyone. Add to this the spice of campaign oratory with telling blows being struck by the Republicans, and the election is decided.

A Big Test

President Eisenhower will get his next four years in the White House and will test the faith the American people will have placed in him. If the majority of his promises are kept and his economic programs are successful, then he will have justified that faith. But if the promises are broken and the programs fail, it will be many long years before the elephant can again make Washington his home.

"Tigertown Five" Play Way To International Success

By BILL CHRISTY

The recent rise of Dixieland jazz in collegiate as well as national circles has brought to the fore one of the best jazz groups since the birth of the blues.

Stan Rubin and his Tigertown Five have steadily gained national and even international fame since their formation in 1951.

It all began one cold night of the Christmas vacation five years ago on a bay ferry between Baltimore and Annapolis. Stan Rubin, an unknown freshman at Princeton University, had been at a meeting of that University's Alumni in Annapolis and was returning to his home in New York for Christmas. A local musical troupe known as "River Chambers and his Band" was entertaining the ship's passengers with Dixieland music. Rubin had his clarinet along and at the insistence of some friends and the invitation of River Chambers, he joined the session.

When Rubin returned to dry land and to Princeton he began to work long and hard as a Dixieland stylist. By March of 1952 the original Tigertown Five (the group has grown since then) could be seen searching the Princeton campus for space in which to hold their own sessions. The manager of Princeton's radio station, WPRU, soon heard of the group, and, after hearing them play, arranged a weekly program for them.

Their style of play caught the attention of the campus jazz fans and acclamation of the group was instantaneous. The popularity rating of the Five began to soar. It hasn't stopped since.

The football weekends of 1952 saw Stan Rubin and his musical aggregation at Penn, Cornell, Princeton, and Lehigh. During the winter they dished out Dixie at Dartmouth's Winter Carnival and New York's world famous Dixieland center, "Jimmie Ryan's."

From there the band began to spread its fame to an international level. During the spring recess they flew to Bermuda to play an engagement at the Elbow Beach Surf Club. Then, after cutting the first of many popular long-playing record albums, the "Tigertown Five" left for its highly-successful European tour in May of 1953.

Rubin in Europe

Rubin's group was engaged to play on the S.S. Groote Beer's college group round-trip voyage with an eight-week layover in Europe. During these eight weeks they gained a great number of European fans. They caused a sensation by playing on the Boulevard Saint Germain during the evening celebrations of Bastille Day in Paris. There they appeared in such spots as the Vieux Colubier, the Academie du Viu, and Harry's New York Bar.

A Horn at Midnight

Back in the States again the boys continued the college circuit, adding many new names to their growing list. Along with the list grew the size of the group, and when they made their second appearance in Carnegie Hall in November of 1955, Stan had organized a seventeen-piece orchestra including the original 'Five' which had delighted the crowd in a 1954 appearance. As a New York music reviewer put it, "Stan's horn blew at midnight and caused a critical rumpus of delight."

Despite its name, the Tigertown Five is not a ferocious group. They play their happy Dixie in a free and easy style. They enjoy their work and the audience can feel their pleasure. Their Dixieland style has been described as the work of one of the best jazz groups in the country.

At Grace Kelly's Wedding

One of their recently acquired fans is a girl from Philadelphia, Grace Kelly by name, who engaged the Ivy-Leaguers to play at her spectacular wedding to Prince Ranier in Monaco.

Stan Rubin and his band have returned to the States again and plan to return to the college circuit this year. To start the season right, they are adding another great name to the list of colleges and universities they've played for—that of Villanova University.

A CURRENT PROBLEM:

Draft Inequities Scored; Suggestions Offered For Much Needed Improvements

By JOHN McGEE

In concluding my series on the practice and shortcomings of the present military service acts, I will review some of the features, especially the new Reserve Forces Act of 1955.

This act is the one which obligates all servicemen beginning active duty after August 1955 to a five year active and one year inactive commitment. Under the old act, remember, there existed an eight year commitment with all the reserve time in the inactive status. Korean War and G.I. benefits have been excluded from the new bill.

A partial result of the change is that new draftees are giving more for less.

Small Army Desirable

The professed purpose of the change was to give greater security to America by means of a small standing army backed up by many trained civilians. The Department of the Army states that this is the "True American way. In keeping with the realities of the cold war, it interferes the least with the lives of the most."

Last week I critized Selective Service procedure for its injustice to non-fathers. This law which goes by the name of Universal Military Training is anything but.

Appraisal, Revision Called For

The problem then is to make the present Selective Service Act universal and to revise the Reserve Forces Act, retaining its enlightened object and discarding its unenlightened methods.

America must build up its reserve to full strength. America must, therefore, continue to take men into the reserves upon their completion of active duty.

Let's Draft Dad

The first task, then, is to alleviate bitterness and promote patriotism by making military service really universal. This can only be done by drafting all physically and mentally fit, fathers as well as non-fathers. Realizing their hardships and dependents, the two-year active duty period might be inadvisable for fathers. They could be put into the six-month active duty program with seven and one-half years active reserve commitment. Such a program would be just.

A truly small army that will "interfere the least with the lives of the most," the goal of the new act, cannot be fully realized with a two year active duty requirement. A one year active service requirement with intensive training would be sufficient to mold efficient soldiers consistent with national security.

Painless Induction

With these changes, the average induction age could be brought down from its present high level at twenty-one, twenty-two years of age to a more painless nineteen or even eighteen.

With such a program as I advocate, there are "small career army" problems such as sufficient leadership. Through a sound system of higher salaries for careerists and better living conditions for servicemen's families, this leadership could be assured. In the long run, small difficulties would be out-weighted by the fact that such a program would be far more economical in men, money and resources.

Inquiring Reporter:

Difference of Opinion Is Found on Coed Acceptance

By TOM CURRAN

In 1953 the then Villanova College had for the first time in its history, enrolled nine girls. They were the start of Villanova's Nursing Division, to whom, incidently, along with the School of Law, goes the credit for making us a university. Those nine coeds were met with hostility on the part of the male enrollment. For the last three years the nurses have tried to gain recognition in the Student Council, but were defeated each time. The animosity has decreased somewhat during the years and in order to try to find out just how much it has receded, I asked a cross-section of the male students, the following question:

"Do you think the coeds here at Villanova are fully accepted by the male portion of the student body?"

Terry LaCorte Arts, '58. In my first two years here the fellows seemed to take an antagonistic attitude toward the coeds. This year, however, everyone seems to realize that they are here to stay, and appear ready to accept them as members of the student body. I think the change came about due to the girls' patient attitude, and their willingness to participate in any activity opened to them.

Larry Kirwin C & F, '57. No they are not. They are an integral part of the University as such, but they are not fully accepted by the students. I feel this is due mainly to their small numbers and the limitations placed upon them concerning extra-curricular activities.

John Memmionger Eng., '60. Yes, in the short time that I've been here, I find that they are quite popular. I don't know of any reason why they wouldn't be, after all they are girls, and guys still like girls, don't they?

Don Kempf Arts, '59. No, I don't think they are, nor do I think they should be. When they came in '53, they broke a time-honored tradition by which Villanova was known as a Catholic male institution. I can only think of them as part time students, but not regulars.

Mike Clark Arts, '57. I feel that the coeds are fully accepted by the men of Villanova. Those who don't recognize them have a lot to learn here. I admit that when they first came here, it was very hard to get accustomed to them, but believe me, now they are as permanent as Alumni Hall.

John Welsh C & F, '58. Refusal to accept the fair ladies on our campus is a mark of immaturity. We are all here to grow into men of one sort or another, and acceptance of a somewhat bitter pill will make us all grow. I feel most of us are men, and those that aren't, are not worth bothering about.

T. Walker Lloyd Arts, '59. Definitely not. I think that most of the fellows here feel that their privacy is being intruded upon by the coeds.

Vic Buono Arts, '60. It really depends on how you look at it, (and who doesn't like looking). From the standpoint of quality they should be accepted, and from the standpoint of quantity they can't be. I happen to like girls myself, and accept them wherever I find them.

Shades of Andrea Doria:

'Away Ship' Cried Brown But the Freighter Came

By TOM SMITH, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

On the foggiest morning he had ever seen, a Villanova midshipman found himself in the middle of a minor shipwreak in the the Elbe River estuary.

John Skidmore Brown, standing watch as junior midshipman officer, had been on duty only about five minutes when the Goodrich, the destroyer on which he was stationed for a summer cruise was rammed by the Dutch freighter, Booskop.

At the time his mind was about 37 miles away, visualizing the first meeting with his older brother in 2½ years.

He Stayed Calm

Brown got only a glimpse of the 5,190-ton Dutch vessel as it struck the port side of midship, smashed the motor whale boat and ripped off a three-inch gun mount of the 3,000-ton Goodrich.

As the ship ran aground on a mud bank after colliding, Brown was ordered below by the regular officer to calmly record muster of midshipmen officers who had roused their men.

The Goodrich limped to its destination in Hamburg where Brown met his brother and the year-old niece he had never seen, and anticipated a rest.

No Razor

Three days later he was ordered by telegram to report back to Hamburg, only to find the Goodrich had departed.

"I had to spend three days in port and four days at sea before we caught up with the Goodrich in the English Channel. During that time, I had to live in the uniform I reported back in, and borrow a razor and T-shirts," the quite regular midshipman recalled with half a grin.

Brown considers the collision the most unusual thing that's happened to him since he entered, Villanova from Hyde Park, N.Y., where he had played guard on the high school football team.

Watches Stock Market

Besides keeping his name on the Arts School dean's list, Brown is a class representative on the Student Council, a member of Delti Pi Mu and the Chemical Society, and keeps a sharp eye on the stock market quotations in the newspapers. He also finds time to entertain Julie Arm-

VILLANOVA NROTC AT NORRISTOWN:

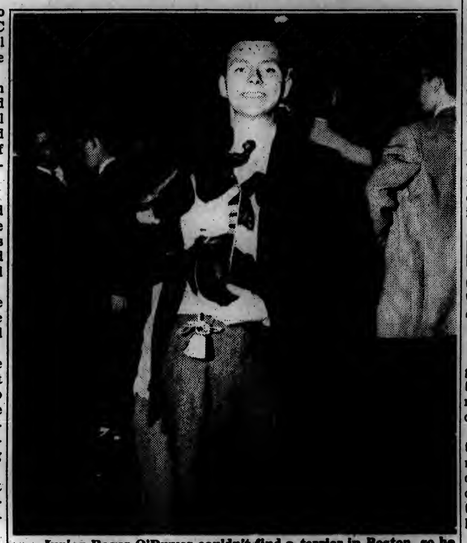
Navy Dance Set For Valley Forge Hotel; Reich Orchestra Engaged

Clad in their dress blue bravo uniforms, the Villanova NROTC unit middies and their dates will attend their annuall fall dance on Nov. 16.

The Valley Forge Hotel in Norriatown is the site selected for the festivities. The hotel boasts a spacious ballroom and four lounges for the pleasure of the three hundred couples expected to attend.

Reich To Play

Charlie Reich and his band will provide the music for the evening of dancing. Reich has previously played at Penn and Temple frats and at several proms in the area.



The theme selected for the dance is a "Welcome to the Freshmen." The affair is closed to midshipmen and their dates.

The co-chairmen of the dance are midshipmen 1st class Pat Gallagher and Dick Green. To these gentlemen has fallen the task of making all necessary arrangements for a successful evening. Hank Nichols is assisting the two chairmen.

Expenses of the dance are met by means of the semester recreation fee charged each midshipman.

Regulation Dress

Dress blue bravo, for the uninitiated, consists of the regular blue uniform with four-in-hand tie and white cap cover, and, of course, a spit shine on the shoes.

Junior Roger O'Dwyer couldn't find a terrier in Boston, so he took Blakie instead. Dog was captured as he was cavorting around Boston University Field last Saturday night before the game.

Schiller's Six Swings Into Social Season

Bob Schiller's combo, the Villanovans, has started its social season with the usual rush.

Since the beginning of the year, they have been playing every weekend at mixers, parties and frat dances. The group includes Jack Gilfillan on drums, Jack Emevick on banjo and guitar, Mike Guida on clarinet and sax, Pat Briody on trombone and Jimmy MacCarthy on piano. Bob Schiller leads the group and plays trumpet.

Engagments to play during intermissions at the Seminary Fund Dance, Nov. 9 and at the NFCCS's Mardi Gras Ball, Nov. 30, are forthcoming. There have also been offers to play at Lehigh University in Bethlehem and Muhlenburg College in Allentown.

Westinghouse Steam Turbine Plant First On ASME Visit List

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers will conduct a field trip to open its 1956-57 year.

More than 100 students will be visiting the Steam Turbine Division of the Westinghouse Corporation on Wednesday, Oct. 24. An opportunity to get a first hand look at turbine production and development will be offered all who attend.

4-year Men Vote for Last Time:

Mason Elected to Student Council; Few Seniors Vote

Richard T. Mason will take his seat on the Student Council Monday night. He was elected senior resident engineering representative Thursday by 14 per cent of the senior class.

Mason, a 21-year-old civil engineer, had 33 votes. Jim Wray was runner up with 20 votes.

Former Class President Jack Decker was third with 15 votes. Jim Schuster and Jim McCormick rounded out the field.

Bob Schiller, Student Council elections chairman, said the 83 ballots cast was about 14 per cent of the class.

Mason is a graduate of Northeast Catholic High School and lives in Medford Lakes, N.J.

Talk Planned For ASCE, Speaker Is Named By Barton

Opportunities for civil engineering graduates in the consulting field will be outlined for the American Society of Civil Engineers next Monday night.

Mr. Thomas J. McCormick, of the Class of 1920 will address the memers at 7:30 p.m. in C & F Auditorium, announced President Bill Barton.

After graduation Mr. McCormick taught here until 1940. He is a member of the McCormick and Taylor consulting firm.

Debators Invited To Tournaments

Beta Gamma's debaters, who appeared in a television debate with Swarthmore ten days ago, have received offers to participate in tournaments scheduled in Rochester, N.Y. and Vermont.

NFCCS Commission Meets; Lepore Is Mardi Gras Head

The Literary Commission of the regional National Federation of Catholic College students held its initial meeting of the academic year last Sunday at St Joseph's College in Philadelphia.

A two-point program was divided between a seminar on newspaper work and a planning session on future seminars, writing helps and contests.

A. L. Ostheimer, editor-in-chief of the Catholic Standard and Times, was guest speaker for the seminar.

Future plans based on the results of the planning session will be announced soon.

Villanovan Feature Editor Frank Delany, and John Kennedy represented Villanova at the meeting.

Bob Lawler, senior delegate to the Villanova chapter of the NFCCS, has named Al Lepore as chairman of the Mardi Gras Ball.

Lepori, sophomore C & F student, recently served as co-chairman of the decoration committee for the Sophomore Cotillion.

The ball will be the first activity of the year for the NFCCS and will be held Nov. 30 from 9 to 1 in the field house. Band and committee arrangements are incomplete.

Dean Reuschlein To Address Philadelphia Philopatrians

Harold G. Reuschlein, dean of the Villanova Law School, will address the members of the Philopatrian Society of Philadelphia at the group's November First Friday breakfast to be held at Kugler's Restaurant in Philadelphia.

The Philopatrian Society is composed of several hundred Catholic laymen of the Philadelphia area, and some 200 members are expected to attend the breakfast.

First Layman to Speak

Although many members of the clergy have given addresses at similar meetings of the society, the dean is the first layman to have this honor.

Dean Reuschlein's speech, entitled "Ethics is My Business," will deal with the methods of giving practical training in Catholic ethical principles to those training for a profession.

Mr. Dougherty and Mr. Angeline will serve as co-moderators for the newly formed Finance Society, it was learned today.

The society was formed for the purpose of orienting finance majors to the type of work they can expect upon graduation. The organization occasionally plans to invite guest speakers from local brokerage houses.

The society, for upperclassmen only, will meet in 101 C & F on Thursdays at 10:30.

Officers Elected By Law Students To Bar Fellowship

Officers elected for the Student Bar Association of Villanova's Law School are as follows: John F. Gaffney, president; John G. Kneafsey, vice-president, and Edward J. Fitzsimmons, treasurer. All three are from the third-year class.

John Stork and Joseph Smith from the second-year class were elected to the executive board.

DPM To Hear Demo Tonight

Mr. Charles Hepburn, Democratic candidate for state senator from Delaware County, will address the first monthly meeting of Delti Pi Mu fraternity tonight at 7:30 in 201 C & F.

The speaker practices law in Media and lives in Newtown Square. Bob Donohue arranged the program.

Strictly Opinion

By PAUL FINAN

We, as Americans, certainly have a great deal of pride for our country. From our early education to the present day, we are often reminded of the courageous fight for independence, the trials and tribulations of a young nation, and its eventual rise to the "world leader" role which it plays in the international affairs of today.

FINAN

We all know that the United States became a reality only as a result of the dreams of men who wanted to live in a free country, where the rights of man would be easily recognized and understood. Through our American heritage, we have received these rights, and there are many of them. We can worship our God according to our own religious beliefs. Such privileges as the freedom of speech and the right to private property are not only well known to us, but actually they are taken for granted.

Our Greatest Privilege

There are, of course, many more liberties which have not been mentioned, but perhaps our greatest privilege, as Americans, is the opportunity to to place in government offices men whom we believe to be the most capable and worthy individuals for the job. In many foreign lands this privilege, which is a natural right to all Americans, is something that is still missing from some governments. But in our great land of liberties we have the right to vote!

If the American nation displays the same indifferent attitude toward the presidential election this November as it has done in previous years, the turnout at the polls will be rather poor. In 1952 there was greater participation than ever before, with a little more than one-half of he eligible voters taking part.

Consider the Communist Rule

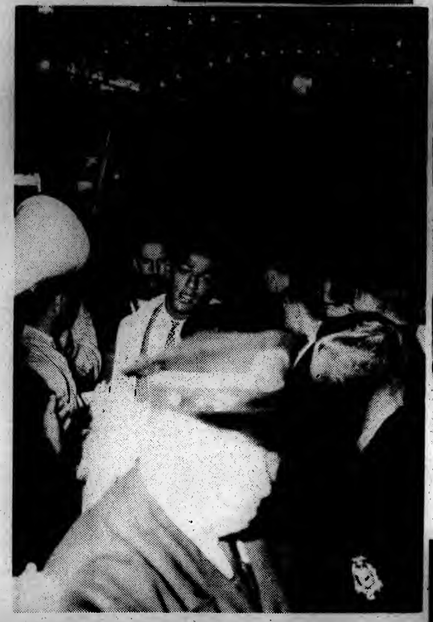
Consider for one moment what the people under Communist rule, for example, would do to be able to voice their opinion in government affairs. But we of America, who have this privilege already, do not hesitate to abuse it! If for a short period of time only an appointed group was allowed to vote in all elections, the protests would fly from all the corners. But those displaying the most concern would be the same people who either have not voted in years, or perhaps never voted at all!

As college men we are the voters of the near future. It is now that we must begin to form our political ideas and beliefs, and it is also now that we must decide to use our rights as American citizens, and not just be satisfied to be proud of them.

Make Good Government a Reality

A close look at a political party, and its activities in relation to the current issues, will give us a better understanding of the political world about us. And with this understanding of politics, we can vote for men who will give us a government which meets the standards of the American way of life.

'Home' Game In Boston



A 900-Man D-Day Invasion Sits Sedate Boston On Her Ear

Flanked by two cuties, Junior Bob Phillips gets in some afternoon advertising for the boisterous student delegation. Jim Story is in front.

Probably the most unique mode of transportation to the Boston game was this moving van, carrying 12 students and driven by George Drumheller (in blazer). T-shirts were ordered for the trip.

VILLANOVA NROTC AT NORRISTOWN:

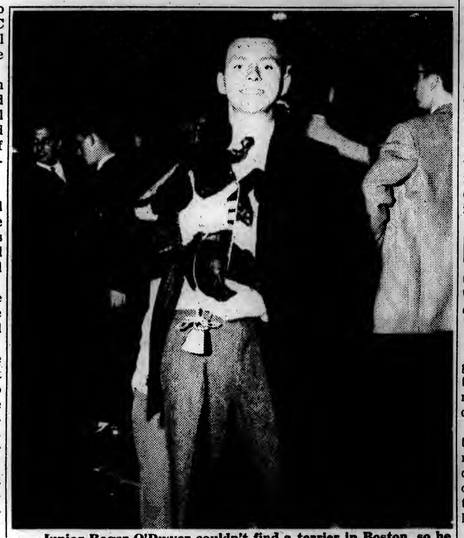
Navy Dance Set For Valley Forge Hotel; Reich Orchestra Engaged

Clad in their dress blue bravo uniforms, the Villanova NROTC unit middies and their dates will attend their annuall fall dance on Nov. 16.

The Valley Forge Hotel in Norristown is the site selected for the festivities. The hotel boasts a spacious ballroom and four lounges for the pleasure of the three hundred couples expected to attend.

Reich To Play

Charlie Reich and his band will provide the music for the evening of dancing. Reich has previously played at Penn and Temple frats and at several proms in the area.



The theme selected for the dance is a "Welcome to the Freshmen." The affair is closed to midshipmen and their dates.

The co-chairmen of the dance are midshipmen 1st class Pat Gallagher and Dick Green. To these gentlemen has fallen the task of making all necessary arrangements for a successful evening. Hank Nichols is assisting the two chairmen.

Expenses of the dance are met by means of the semester recreation fee charged each midshipman.

Regulation Dress

Dress blue bravo, for the uninitiated, consists of the regular blue uniform with four-in-hand tie and white cap cover, and, of course, a spit shine on the shoes.

Junior Roger O'Dwyer couldn't find a terrier in Boston, so he took Blakie instead. Dog was captured as he was cavorting around Boston University Field last Saturday night before the game.

Schiller's Six Swings Into Social Season

Bob Schiller's combo, the Villanovans, has started its social season with the usual rush.

Since the beginning of the year, they have been playing every weekend at mixers, parties and frat dances. The group includes Jack Gilfillan on drums, Jack Emevick on banjo and guitar, Mike Guida on clarinet and sax, Pat Briody on trombone and Jimmy MacCarthy on piano. Bob Schiller leads the group and plays trumpet.

Engagments to play during intermissions at the Seminary Fund Dance, Nov. 9 and at the NFCCS's Mardi Gras Ball, Nov. 30, are forthcoming. There have also been offers to play at Lehigh University in Bethlehem and Muhlenburg College in Allentown.

Westinghouse Steam Turbine Plant First On ASME Visit List

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers will conduct a field trip to open its 1956-57 year.

More than 100 students will be visiting the Steam Turbine Division of the Westinghouse Corporation on Wednesday, Oct. 24. An opportunity to get a first hand look at turbine production and development will be offered all who attend.

Dean Reuschlein To Address Philadelphia Philopatrians

Harold G. Reuschlein, dean of the Villanova Law School, will address the members of the Philopatrian Society of Philadelphia at the group's November First Friday breakfast to be held at Kugler's Restaurant in Philadelphia.

The Philopatrian Society is composed of several hundred Catholic laymen of the Philadelphia area, and some 200 members are expected to attend the breakfast.

First Layman to Speak

Although many members of the clergy have given addresses at similar meetings of the society, the dean is the first layman to have this honor.

Dean Reuschlein's speech, entitled "Ethics is My Business," will deal with the methods of giving practical training in Catholic ethical principles to those training for a profession.

4-year Men Vote for Last Time:

Mason Elected to Student Council; Few Seniors Vote

Richard T. Mason will take his seat on the Student Council Monday night. He was elected senior resident engineering representative Thursday by 14 per cent of the senior class.

Mason, a 21-year-old civil engineer, had 33 votes. Jim Wray was runner up with 20 votes.

Former Class President Jack Decker was third with 15 votes. Jim Schuster and Jim McCormick rounded out the field.

Bob Schiller, Student Council elections chairman, said the 83 ballots cast was about 14 per cent of the class.

Mason is a graduate of Northeast Catholic High School and lives in Medford Lakes, N.J.

Talk Planned For ASCE, Speaker Is Named By Barton

Opportunities for civil engineering graduates in the consulting field will be outlined for the American Society of Civil Engineers next Monday night.

Mr. Thomas J. McCormick, of the Class of 1920 will address the memers at 7:30 p.m. in C & F Auditorium, announced President Bill Barton.

After graduation Mr. McCormick taught here until 1940. He is a member of the McCormick and Taylor consulting firm.

Debators Invited To Tournaments

NFCCS Commission Meets; Lepore Is Mardi Gras Head

The Literary Commission of the regional National Federation of Catholic College students held its initial meeting of the academic year last Sunday at St Joseph's College in Philadelphia.

A two-point program was divided between a seminar on newspaper work and a planning session on future seminars, writing helps and contests.

A. L. Ostheimer, editor-in-chief of the Catholic Standard and Times, was guest speaker for the seminar.

Future plans based on the results of the planning session will be announced soon.

Villanovan Feature Editor Frank Delany, and John Kennedy represented Villanova at the meeting.

Bob Lawler, senior delegate to the Villanova chapter of the NFCCS, has named Al Lepore as chairman of the Mardi Gras Ball.

Lepori, sophomore C & F student, recently served as co-chairman of the decoration committee for the Sophomore Cotillion.

The ball will be the first activity of the year for the NFCCS and will be held Nov. 30 from 9 to 1 in the field house. Band and committee arrangements are incomplete.

IRS To Celebrate U. N. Day In Villanova Chapel Today

Something new is coming to Villanova University today in the celebration of United Nations Day. According to International Relations Society President, Gene Donohue, the day will be celebrated with Rosary and Benediction services in the Chapel at 4 p.m.

"The success of this venture will depend not only on the cooperation of the members of I.R.S., but also on the whole student body," Donohue said.

This announcement was made at the second meeting of the I.R.S. which was especially successful. There were approximately 85 students in attendance, including one class of the night school. The main attraction of the night was the informative talk given by Dr. Fred Khouri in the Suez crisis.

Speaker on Suez

Dr. Khouri explained the history of the Suez situation and proceeded to point out the flaws in the foreign policy of not only the United States in the matter, but also of Great Britain, France, and Egypt itself.

According to Dr. Khouri, the major point at issue was not so much the fact that we deprived Colonel Nasser of our aid for the Aswan High Dam, but the way in which it was done, precipitated the seizure of the Suez Canal.

The meeting ended with a plea from Donohue to support the United Nations Day service as the contribution of a Catholic university to the cause of world peace.

CCD Is Vital Force During Critical Time In America For Catholic Education

These are critical times in the history of the Catholic Church in the U.S. There is a danger that the next generation of Catholic citizens will be largely uninformed about even the basic truths of their Faith.

Arm of Church

This is brought home in statistics recently released by the Church. These show that 65% of the Catholic students of the U.S. attend public schools and of these, less than half receive regular religious instruction. The majority of these uninstructed Catholics are to be found not in isolated rural areas, but in our large cities.

To combat this situation, Pius X decreed that the official teaching arm of the Church, the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine be established in every parish in the world.

Furthermore, the CCD was to have preference over every other parish group. This decree, which was part of the encyclical "Acerbo Nimis," was incorporated into Cannon Law as Cannon 711,2.

NFCCS Active

The campus unit of the CCD is operated through the NFCCS. All Catholic college students should be familiar with the work of this, the privileged lay organization.

Placement Office Calls All Seniors for Spring Interviews

The placement office has arranged for campus interviews for 1957 graduates.

All seniors interested in this service are urged to report immediately to the placement office, room 114, Mendel Hall, for registration. Complete registration must be accomplished by Friday, November 9.

G. H. Klapper, Philadelphia Electric Co. Project engineer, speaks to Villanova's AIEE-IRE.

Over 135 employers have been scheduled for campus visits, beginning next Feb. 18, and all indications are that the number will exceed 150. A complete list of employers will be published in December, and final instructions as to interview procedure will also be forthcoming during the latter part of the first semester.

All junior and senior students interested in a career with the State Department are reminded that this Friday is the final filing date for the test which will be held on Dec. 8. A limited number of applications are available in the placement office.

Sharp and Dohme Prexy to Address V.U. Chem. Society

Villanova Chemical Society will hold its first evening meeting of the year tonight at 7:30 in 215 Mendel Hall, Herb Rammrath, president of the society, announced.

Roy Machlowitz, representative of Sharp and Dohme, will be the speaker for the evening. His address will be entitled "Careers in Chemistry."

All Villanova students, and particularly coeds, are invited to the meeting.

Dr. Donald Schwartz, assistant professor of chemistry at Villanova, recently addressed the ACS convention at Atlantic City.

Research for the speech was done in coordination with the Atomic Energy Commission as an aid to the U.S. Government in its search for an economical uranium extraction process.

Opportunity For Everyone In Philosophy Club Plans

The Philosophy Club, beginning its third year at Villanova, has begun to work on its program schedule for the 1956-57 school year.

The club is initiating a research program in a "perennial problem" of philosophy of comprehensive scope. Such an undertaking will employ the arts and skills of linguists, scientists, researchers, historians, business students, writers and teachers as well as philosophers.

This society under its aggressive moderator, Dr. Roland Houde, and President Paul Gormley, has, as part of its goal, "to enrich the world of letters and promote the basic aims of Villanova University as a Catholic cultural center."

All students who have an interest in the Philosophy Club's attempt to unify all the sciences via philosophy are urged to meet today in Room 206 Mendel between 3:00 and 4:00 p.m. today.

Cromby Electrical Plant Visited On AIEE Field Trip

Yesterday the AIEE-IRE traveled to Phoenixville, Pa. to inspect the Cromby Generating Station of the Philadelphia Electric Co.

The Cromby Station, one of the most advanced electrical generating stations in the nation, has numerous outstanding features of interest to engineers.

This was the group's first field trip of the semester.

The Padded Cell

or . . .

"UNETHICAL PROBLEMS"

By HARRY & GERRY

"The Padded Cell" turns literary this week with a searching, probing analysis of a current best seller.

THE OLD MAN AND THE SHOWER
by Ernest Humingbird

"The Old Man and the Shower" by Ernest Humingbird, now in its thirtieth printing, is a violent tale of one man's fruitless duel with frustration and despair. Picture a typical Mexican fishing village with an atmosphere of friendliness and warmth . . . actually, the setting of "The Old Man and the Shower" is a bleak, squalid home for the aged in a smog-filled midwestern city. The plot revolves about the trials of the most beaten and haggard resident of this home. It is the story of this man's endless struggle with doom, with fate and destiny, and mainly with a crummy old shower.

Day after day, the old man has been plodding to and from this shower, day after day failing to draw a drop of water. The reader is drawn right into the book. We see each dragging step of the old man; we watch him groping for the water knobs; we see him drop his teeth on the floor and then slip on the soap. We share with him in the agonizing moments of waiting . . . waiting . . . waiting in vain for the soothing spray.

He is now in his eightieth day without a shower. Scorned by his fair-weather friends, he lies immobile on his bed. The plot now moves ingeniously towards its colossal climax. The old geezer now has strength for one more trip. Steeped in despair, he pulls himself towards the shower. A boney hand clutches at the rusty knob and then the old man drops to the floor. The book now attains its zenith in truth and beauty as gallons of scalding water tumble on our hero who dies in a scream of triumph.

Humingbird's brilliant account of the tragic downfall of the old man is symbolic of our ever constant symbolic battle with nature's symbolic forces. In fact, as in the case of most Humingbirds books, it can be symbolic of almost anything, including other symbols. Here is a poll of what the leading critics are saying about this book:

". . . 'Old Man and the Shower' symbolizes absolutely nothing."
— Sigmund Freud

". . . anyone who has ever drowned in the shower will chuckle at this inaccurate description."
—Embalmer's Handbook

". . . will take its rightful place with the worst trash of our time." —Mickey Spillane

". . . reading 'Old Man and the Shower' is like plodding through mounds of jello." . . . . . .
—Good Housekeeping

". . . a biased plug for anti-segregation." —New England Express

". . . a vicious boost for segregation." —Atlanta Journal

"It is hard to believe that a book could be so thoroughly irrelevant." —Ernest Hemingway

". . . restores my faith in comic books." —Yogi Berra

". . . Humingbird has risen to new heights of boredom . . . Humingbird is a complete idiot . . . Humingbird deserves to be hanged . . . Boo Humingbird!!"

THE VILLANOVAN

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Resolved; That Villanovans Are Fickle

With the blossoming forth of a fighting, well-coordinated football team this year, a new atmosphere has been injected into the air here on the Villanova campus. For the first time in my four years here, there seems to be an intangilbe something which is floating throughout the student body.

This prevailing atmosphere, this intangible something is a six-letter word—"Spirit." As of this writing our impressive gridiron eleven has won two games while losing one ,and that to powerful Texas A & M. In addition, well over 800 students have taken advantage of the fine group plan to follow the team to Boston for the Boston University game.

The Big Question

To all this bubbling enthusiasm shown thus far I can only say, "great." However, will this same spirit be evident throughout the football season, especially during our ball club's three home games against Florida State, The Citadel and Iowa State?

Will the stands at the Palestra rock with boisterous shouting and unending cheering when our basketball quintet takes to the hardwood each week? And will this spirit be present even if our athletic teams slump off a bit during the season and lose a couple games?

To the above question I answer emphatically, "No."

It has been proved to me all too often in the past, especially in regard to our basketball team, that the effervescent early season enthusiasm soon vanishes midway through the season.

Student Body Challenged

I don't think we, the students of Villanova, deserve the fine athletic teams which represent our university. Furthermore I don't think we have the right to call ourselves loyal Villanovans unless we stick with our ball clubs through thick and thin.

I might add that I don't think this air of school spirit and excitement will last throughout the school year.

I doubt that you will, but I dare you, the Villanova student body, to prove me wrong.

Has Anyone Here Seen Schnozzle? He's a Hot Dog

Does anyone know the whereabouts of a black and tan dascshund wearing a gray-studded collar and answering to the name of "Schnozzle?"

About four-years-old, the dog was last seen in the vicinity of the A & P Store on Lancaster Ave. in Bryn Mawr.

Two Villanova students in a 1949 black Chevrolet coupe were seen with the dog just before its disappearance on Friday.

Auyone who has seen the dog or knows of its whereabouts is asked to contact the VILLANOVAN office Dougherty Hall.

SPORTS CHATTER

Money Melbourne-Bound

By FRANK FLEMING

The mammoth Philadelphia Municipal Stadium which minutes ago was filled with light and cheers during the first half of the Villanova-Florida State football game is now dark and quiet. The glow of the single light in the huge amphitheater has mesmerized the crowd, for this small light radiates from one of the most sacred things in amatuer athletics, the Olympic Torch.

As the symbol of international athletics is carried around the stadium track, one might get a glimpse of the colorful sweat suit worn by the runner which shows that this man, Mr. Mason, is the Official American Torch Bearer for the 1956 Olympic games.

Met By Father Donnellon

After leaving the stadium track, the runner is met in the center of the field by Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Villanova president, the President of Florida State University, Mr. Ambrose (Bud) Dudley, Villanova Atheletic Director, Mr. J. Lyman Bingman, Executive Director of the United States Olympic Committee, Mr. Ed McMahon, a Philadelphia radio and television star who is acting as M.C., and two Olympic athletics, Jack Kelly Jr., who will represent Uncle Sam in Melbourne and Villanova's own Ron Delany, who will run for Ireland "down under."

At this moment a power-spotlight pierces the dark, still air and focuses on this distinguished group in the center of the field. Here under the symbol of the Olympiad, the Olympic Torch, and in view of two Olympic athletes, Father Donnellon will present Mr. Bingham with what is hoped will be the largest single contribution ever made to the United States Olympic Fund.

FSU Plays For Expenses

This ceremony which will take place between the halves of the Florida State-Villanova game Saturday night will be the climax of an unprecendented venture in which Villanova is donating all profits from the game played that night, over and above expenses, to the Olympic Fund. Villanova has received great support from many sources in this great undertaking. Florida State University is playing the game for expenses only.

The southern school has gone to great troubles to bring its famous 180-piece marching band and its unique student circus to Philadelphia to entertain at the crowd. The Seminole alumni has set the Villanova game as its homecoming. In doing so the Florida people are going to play their homecoming game away from home for the first time in history.

Amusement Tax Removed

Food Fair Inc., one of the largest grocery store chains in the Philadelphia area, is cooperating with Villanova by acting as the official ticket distribution agent. All Food Fair stores in Philadelphia and Delaware Valley have been selling tickets in special booths for several weeks.

The City of Philadelphia has cooperated with the venture completely. The city has minimized the stadium rental for the game and just last week removed an amusement tax through special legislation. In removing the city's 10 per cent tax, City Council could be said to be donating $9,000 to the Olympic Fund if the game is a sellout.

The Villanova student can insure the success of the "Olympic Bowl" and in doing can help Villanova gain the prestige which it so rightly deserves. If each Villanova student took it upon himself to sell ten tickets for the game to his friends and neighbors, success would be achieved—Villanova would make the largest single donation to the United States Olympic Fund at half time on Saturday.

Needed—A Full Team

The patriotic person must realize the need of beating Russia in Melbourne, for the Olympics are no longer just athletic contests. They are a contest between two ways of life—the Russian and Western (American). To win and show our superior way of life we must send a full team to Australia next month. This can not be done without funds, and this ball game is helping supply those badly needed funds.

Villanovans, this is your opportunity to help your school and country. You can work and accept it or you can relax and reject it. Knowing the Villanova student spirit, we will see you and your friends and neighbors Saturday night when Father Donnellon puts the Olympic Fund over the top for the first time in history.

Wildcats Crush Terriers For Third Straight; Florida State Saturday Olympic Bowl Test

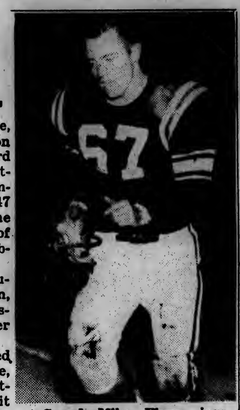
Flynn, Sapienza TD's Feature Win Over Boston Univ.

Unleashing a bruising offense, Villanova rolled over Boston University 27-13 for its third consecutive victory of the season, last Saturday night. Compiling 18 first downs and 347 yards passing and rushing, the Wildcats displayed two teams of about equal strength in drubbing the Terriers.

Cheered on by about 950 students who traveled to Boston, opened up a 7-0 lead in the closing moments of the first quarter and were never headed.

When the starting team failed to score on its opening drive, Coach Frank Reagan substituted his other first team and it proved too much for B.U. Villanova moved the ball to the ten-yard-line on the passing of Johnny Lammers and then John Giannantonio took it over from six yards out.

Bauer Scores



Quarterback Billy Magee engineered the second touchdown in the second period when the visitors moved 63 yards to score with John Bauer recording the touchdown on a three yard plunge.

Boston then recovered a VU fumble on the Wildcat 21 and converted it into seven points, but this only set the stage for one of the spectaculars of the game. With only a couple minutes remaining in the first half, Mike Flynn intercepted a Terrier pass on his own 45 and raced 55 yards to score. On the way he was helped by a block by Don Luzzi and then he bulled over the last Terrier in his path on the six.

55 yd. Pass Play

The Mainliners added the icing to the cake in the second half when they scored on a 55-yard pass play Magee to Rick Sapienza. From here on the Wildcats substituted freely and the outcome was never in doubt.

This was the premier performance for the team as far as the students were concerned and the team certainly showed its best.

Guard Mike Flynn jogs from field after scoring the first touchdown of his collegiate career on a 55-yard pass interception.

Campus Circus Acts To Provide Half-Time Treat

Football fans who attend the Villanova-Florida State football game will be treated to a collegiate version of the three-ring circus. Since its initiation on the Florida State campus nine years ago, the student circus has gained national recognitian by its outstanding professional appearance.

The student organization, holding tryouts each fall, usually numbers about 150 performers. After extensive drills, the troupe travels each weekend to various cities throughout Florida, Georgia and Alabama.

Trips On Weekends

Trips are set on weekends so classwork will not be impaired. Every member of the circus must maintain a C-plus scholastic average to remain in the acts.

Since the closing of the Ringling Brothers circus this group should gain even more recognition as it is one of few active traveling circuses.

Florida State Set For Olympic Tilt Against Villanova

With almost half of the season completed, Villanova plays its first home game this Saturday night at Municipal Stadium in Philadelphia. The Wildcats meet Florida State University, a team that boasts of a one-two backfield punch and a very good defense.

After playing their first four games, the Seminoles ranked tenth in the nation on total defense. They had held their opponents to an average of just 195.8 yards per game.

Gound Gainer

Quarterback Lee Corso and left halfback Bobby Renn have paced the Florida State offense this year. In rushing yardage Genn was averaging 5.8 yards per carry and he had not been thrown for a loss in the first four games. Corso had an average run of 5.7 yards and was also leading the Seminoles' passing attack with two touchdown tosses to his credit. After the first four games he was the nation's 17th ranking offensive player.

In its first game this year Florida State routed Ohio University 47-7. The Seminoles tasted defeat in their next two contests, bowing to Georgia 3-0 and dropping a 20-7 verdict to Virginia Tech. The team of Tallahassee then pulled up to the .500 mark by defeating North Carolina State 14-0.

Poor Punting

Florida State had the distinction of leading its opponents in every offensive department except punting. The opposition's punting average was 38.3 yards while Tribe punters had a 30.0 mark. The Seminoles led in first downs, both by passing and running, total net yards, completed passes, touchdowns, extra points, and total points.

In rushing Florida State had amassed 773 yards against 597 for the opposition and in passing the Tribe had picked up 313 yards compared to 182 for the opponents. The Seminole passers

Another Undefeated Year Hoped For By Rifle Coach

The Varsity Rifle Team, under the leadership of its Captain Hank Miller, began practice for its third season last Monday. The rifle marksmen went undefeated through ten matches last season.

Four matches have already been scheduled for the coming season, and challenges have been sent to five others. Georgetown, Lehigh, John Hopkins and Penn have already agreed to meet the Wildcat shooters, while Seton Hall, Fordham, Manhattan, Princeton, and Rutgers have received the challenges.

Tryouts for the squad are now being held at the rifle range in Commodore John Barry Hall. After coaching the squad for the past three seasons, Sgt. John Waryha has been transferred from Villanova. Replacing the popular "Sarge" is Sgt. Edward Molcaney, who is anticipating another undefeated season.

Florida State Tix On Sale - Dudley

Students who want tickets for parents and friends for the Villanova-Florida State game Oct. 27 should buy them now, Athletic Director Ambrose Dudley advised today.

Priced at $1, tickets are on sale each class day from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. in the Field House athletic office.

Halfback Rick Sapienza gets shoved out of bounds by Boston's U's Larry Fennessey during Cats' third triumph. Fennessey transferred to BU from Villanova.

Starting his 21st year as basketball coach, Al Severance shouts at some of his varsity hopefuls during a Field House workout. Freshmen practice in background.

SEASON STARTS DEC. 5

'Dark Horse' Label Given Basketball Team As Coach Severance Begins 21st Year

By FRANK FLEMING

On December 5 the Villanova University basketball squad begins what appears to be one of the toughest schedules in Wildcat history. In their season opener Coach Severence's charges will meet a strong Canasius team which posted a 19-7 record last year, and boasts three returning starters including All-American prospect, Captain Hank Nowak.

Dec. 8 the Wildcats meet Delaware U. at the Palestra. The Blue Hens have Ray "Skip" Crawford, a 20.6 point performer from '53 returning from the Army. Next is William and Mary with four out of five starters returning.

In one of the big games of the season Villanova meets Indiana at the Palestra, Dec. 20. The Hoosiers lost only one starter by graduation and are picked by most pre-season polls as the second strongest team in the "Big Ten."

Holiday Tournament

Next on the agenda is the ECAC Holiday Tournament over the Christmas vacation in New York's Madison Square Garden. Upon returning from the Garden, the Wildcats will travel to Muhlenburg, St. Bonaventure, Duquesne, and West Virginia. Duquesne is without the services of All-American Sy Green, but they still have coach Dudey Moore and a strong team. West Virginia is led by the clowning "Hot Rod" Hundley.

Home for the first time in a month, the 'Cats will meet their first intra-city rivals in Penn and St. Joe's, Jan. 16 and 19. Moving to South Orange, N.J., Vilanova opposes Seton Hall, featuring the Wildcat wreaker of the past two seasons, Dick Gaines.

Dayton And Temple

Then comes the big week. Faced with the almost irreplaceable loss of Captain Jimmy Smith by graduation, the Wildcats come up against the Dayton Flyers and the Temple Owls, Feb. 6 and 8 at the Palestra. Dayton is picked as the top midwest indepdent and the number three team in the nation. The Owls are picked as the tops in the east.

Next in line comes Fordham, Richmond, Scranton, and Washington and Lee, followed by a trip to Raleigh N.C. to face N.C. State, always a national powerhouse.

Frosh Gridders Defeat Wyoming Seminary With Last Period Score

Villanova's freshmen football team won its opening game of the season by handing Wyoming Seminary a 7-0 setback Saturday afternoon at Villanova Stadium. Lou Picciano plunged over from the two yard line in the fourth period to finish off an 82-yard touchdown drive and Frank Ficca converted for the only scoring play of the game.

The Kitten's march started when they recovered a Wyoming fumble on their own 18 yard line in the third quarter. Then with Dave Bishop and Picciano doing most of the running, Villanova got down to the Wyoming 23-yard-line as the period ended.

16 First Downs

After two plays in the final quarter, the Kittens made a first down on the 16-yard-line. Picciano ran for six yards and then seven more for a first down on the three. Bishop bucked to the two-yard-line and on the next play Picciano went over.

Villanova made 16 first downs, while Wyoming Seminary got only one, although they were deep in Wildcat territory on several occasions. In the first period with Villanova in a fourth down kicking situation, a bad hike from center allowed the Wyoming linesmen to down the kicker on the 17-yard-line. On the third play from scrimmage, however, Villanova's Ed McCarthy interceped a pass on the seven-yard-line and ran to the 18.

Kittens Fumble

With first and ten Villanova fumbled and Wyoming took over on the Kitten's 12-yard-line. A penalty against the Main Liners put the ball on the seven with still first down. Then after a four yard loss and an incompleted pass, Wyoming tried another pass only to have it deflected and go into a Villanova player's arms on the five-yard-line.

The Kittens drove to the 18 but there a fumble was recovered by Wyoming. The visitors got down to the 14-yard-line before they fumbled and Villanova took over as the first period ended. As the second period started Villanova began to march and they got all the way down to the Wyoming 33-yard-line before penalites forced them back into a punting situation. The two teams then exchanged the ball until the half ended in a scoreless tie.

Ferruolo Stars In New Position At Halfback

By JACK CURTIN

Coach Frank Reagan is quick to reward outstanding achievement on the football gridiron. Therefore, Wildcat halfback Johnny Ferruolo received his first starting assignment of the 1956 season last Saturday night in Boston as a reward for his outstanding play against Dayton the previous week.

Ferruolo, a Marketing major from Providence, R. I., came to Villanova from LaSalle Academy in that town. As a quarterback for his high school team, John was picked for the All-State squad.

Leads Team To Championship

Asked for the game he remembered most from high school, the Wildcat backfield star came up with a truly dramatic incident. In the last play of the last game of the season he threw a touchdown pass to win the game and state championship for his team. On the receiving end of the play was Bill Halligan, another member of the Villanova squad.

Upon graduation from LaSalle, John chose Villanova over the many colleges that offered him scholarships because he wanted to attend a Catholic college.

Swithched To Halfback

There were no games scheduled for the freshmen John's first year, but, as a soph, he broke into the first string as starting quarterback. There he stayed until he was switched to his present halfback position at the start of this season.

Agreeing with the other members of the present football team, Ferruolo picks the fact that the team has a two game winning streak going prior to the Boston University game as his biggest thrill, and expressed a hope that they would continue the streak in Boston.

John also said that he thought that Villanova had a great team this year, one the school and coaches could be proud of. He has no definite plans for after graduation, except to wait for the draft board to select him for military service.

Wildcat Harriers Defeat LaSalle For Second Win

By BILL VINCENT

Last Wednesday at Wister Woods, Villanova's cross country team defeated LaSalle 23-33 to win their second consecutive meet.

Alex Breckenridge, IC4A Two Mile Champion and winner of the Boardwalk Mile at Atlantic City two years ago, was first with the time of 21 minutes and 24 seconds. A half minute later teammate John Kopil hit the finish line. Earl Jefferson and Earle Eldridge, two LaSalle runners, placed third and fourth, followed by George Browne of Villanova. Al Peterson and Vic DeMaio also placed in the meet to round out the scoring at 23.

Delany Missed

Four minute miler and NCAA 1500 meter champion, Ron Delany, who is now preparing to represent Ireland in the 1500 meter race in the Olympics at Melbourne, didn't run in this meet and doesn't plan to run in any more cross country meets this season.

The Villanova harriers have been quite successful in their previous outings. They defeated St. Josephs and Georgetown in a triangular meet while placing second in the Pitt, Navy, Villanova meet.

Today at 3:30 the Mainliners run against Fort Monmouth. For several years Fort Monmouth has been sending runners to track and cross country meets throughout the country. Next week the Cats journey to South Orange, New Jersey, to meet Seton Hall. The Pirates boast of a strong group of Sopohmores to go along with a good group of veterans. Both of these meets should be a good preparation for the Wildcats before the all important IC4A meet at New York, on Monday, November 19. Last year at the IC4A meet Villanova placed eighth in a meet which 40 teams participated. Ron Delany came in second only to Michigan State ace Jim Kennedy.

Florida State

had completed 25 out of 50 attempts while the opposition managed to complete 13 out of 25.

Team Spirit

Head coach Tom Nugent attributes much of the team's success this year to spirit, especialy in its second win. He stated that North Carolina State played a good game against Florida State but that they couldn't beat the spirit of the Seminoles.

Halfback Davey Parr stretches for a pass during Villanova's victory over Boston U. Saturday night.

Carmen Out, Peiffer In, But She'll Be Back

A change in the original season schedule finds the Opera-Classica journeying to Rosemont tonight to join the Rosemont College Music Club for a piano recital to be given by M. Bernard Peiffer, classical and modern jazz pianist.

The Rosemont excursion replaces a hearing of Bizet's tragic opera "Carmen." "Carmen" wil be heard instead tomorrow at 7:45 p.m. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall. A free French-English libretto will be distributed.

Leave at 7 p.m.

Opera-Classica members leave promptly tonight at 7 p.m. from the east lounge of Dougherty Hall and walk to McShain at Rosemont for M. Peiffer's recital.

Imaginative short stories, essays on any subject of interest, poetry, sketches, one-act plays and practically anything else you can write are suitable for the LYNX.

Deadline for submission of material for the first issue is Nov. 16.

The winning essay in the LYNX's essay contest will be published in the first issue. A maximum of 2,500 words has been set, not a minimum as previously reported.

The first general meeting of the staff will be held Thursday at 3:30 in 101 C & F. The editors will make progress reports and the staff members will be given assignments.

Band to Display Music And Marching at Future Games

One More Chance For Senior Photos

Seniors have one last opportunity to have their portraits made for the 1957 BELLE AIR.

Carl Wolf Studio will take pictures tomorrow and Friday from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on the second floor of Dougherty.

Seniors who have not had pictures taken or who were dissatisfied with their first proofs may make appointments in the Pie Shoppe, starting today.

Editor-in-Chief Dick Schleicher reminded seniors that this is their last opportunity for portraits.

Villanova's marching band, the largest in four years, is now preparing a new set of formations to be presented at the forthcoming Florida State and Citadel games.

Many talented freshmen have joined the organization and Mike Martinelli, band president, has expressed optimism in the performances of this year's season. Walt Gould, drill master, is rapidly bringing the new men into shape, and the quality of the band's music is being concentrated upon.

Other officers of the organization are Jerry Yantis, secretary treasurer and John Chabay student council representative.

Fr. Joseph Boyle To Nominate Men For Fellowships

Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, university president, has named Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, vice-president in charge of academic affairs, as the liaison officer to nominate to the Danworth Foundation three candidates for fellowships.

Invitation To Seniors

The Danworth Foundation, an educational trust fund, invites applications from college seniors and recent undergraduates who are preparing themselves for a career of college teaching, and who are planning to enter graduate school in September.

These appointments are fundmentally "a relationship of encouragement" throughout the years of graduate study. The maximum annual grant for single fellowship is $1800. Students with or without financial need are invited to apply.

PKP to Highlight Citadel Hoedown With Chorus Line

A fraternity rally before the Vilanova-Citadel game Nov. 10 is being planned by Phi Kappa Pi.

Fraternity President Gerry Moran said no chairman has been appointed yet, but that the rally would feature a chorus line and other entertainment.

Meanwhile, PKP will hold a regular meeting next Monday at 11:30 a.m. in 304 Mendel. At 7:30 p.m. Monday a fraternity smoker is scheduled for C & F Auditorium.

Mugs, Pins Arrive

Members have also been advised that:

Mugs and fraternity pins are available for those who have ordered or want to order. Frank Donohue (30 Sullivan) handles mug orders and Jack Rozman (34 Sullivan) sells pins.

Dues must be paid to Charles Boyle (3 Sullivan) before Nov. 15.

Plans Discussed

Members of the 12-man executive committee which met last Tuesday to discuss the year's plans are: John Chabay, chairman; Joe Theston, Bill Westcott, Bob Repin, Brian Lammers, Bill Fallon, Bob Bonner, Bill Lamphrecht, John Burns, Al Sheppard, Joe Driscoll and Joe Krackeler.

Workmen turn the old Mendel Hall cafeteria into offices. The space was used last semester for classrooms.

Villanova Students Name "Ike" Presidential Winner

by Bill Jones
Associate Editor

If once again the VILLANOVAN presidental poll runs true to form, Dwight D. Eisenhower will spend another four years in the big white mansion on Washington's famous Pennsylvania Avenue.

The students of Villanova, in the sixth poll since 1932, have picked President Eisenhower to handle the executive reigns of the country by a substantial margin over his Democratic opponent, Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois.

211 For Ike

Of the 393 Villanovans who voiced their opinion on the coming election, 211, or 53.6 per cent, picked the President to repeat his victory of 1952, while 135, or 34.1 per cent, chose Mr. Stevenson for the Presidency.

Of the independents, the largest number of votes amassed was 24, or 6.1 per cent of the entire vote by Mr. T. Coleman Andrews, the States Rights entry to the chief executive race. The other independents, led by Darlington Hoopes with 7 votes managed to accumulate 6.1 per cent of the 393 votes.

Over 21 Vote

Among the students 21 and over, President Eisenhower's margin of victory was cut down sharply by Stevenson. Of the 150 voter in the over-21 bracket, Eisenhower polled 52.7 per cent, a drop of 1 per cent from the regular vote. Gov. Stevenson, on the other hand, rose from his original vote of 34.1 to 40.7 per cent. Only ten of the 150 eligible voters reported that although they were of age, they were not voting in the coming presidential election.

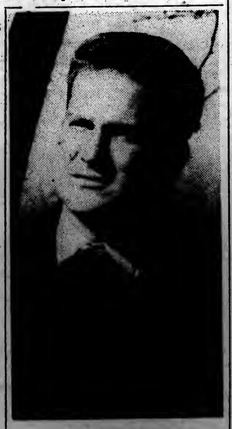
First Fraternity Alumni Reunion Scheduled by DPE for Nov. 10

More than 100 alumni and their guests will attend the first fraternity reunion ever held at Villanova Nov. 10.

Delta Pi Epsilon members will sit a special section of the Stadium during the Villanova-Citadel game with the alumni, including some charter members of the fraternity from 1925.

Post-Game Party

Fraternity alumni will be entertained at a post-game gathering, according to President John Fusaro.



Preliminary work on the reunion began last spring, explained Fusaro, when Bill Lesko and his committee compiled a list of alumni.

Meet in Field House

Almost 300 feelers were mailed and about 100 acceptances were received from alumni who wanted a reunion. Some of the acceptances came from as far away as Minnesota and Ohio.

Mike Giuda, reunion chairman, and his committee will meet alumni and their guests in the Field House lobby beginning at noon.

Fusaro said June fraternity graduates were not officially invited, but many are expected to attend.

Dean of Student Affairs To Entertain All Future S C Recommendations

Under a new plan proposed by the administration, Student Council recommendations will not be turned over to a committee of vice presidents but will be cleared through the Vice President of Student Affairs.

Council Chairman Joe Martin said he was told about the new plan by the Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities.

Directly to Fr. Kemme

Father Girolami told Martin that the vice presidents had decided that Council recommendations should be made to Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President of Student Affairs.

This is the way the new system would work, according to Martin:

Father Kemme would decide whether suggestions merited consideration by himself or the other two vice presidents or whether suggestions should bypass the vice presidents and be considered by their subordinates. In this case, Council could have recourse to the vice presidents if subordinates disapproved them, Martin said.

Decided at Meeting

Martin said the new system was devised at a meeting of the three vice presidents and two deans—Rev. John Curran, O.S.A., Vice President for Financial Affairs; Rev. Joseph Boyle, O.S.A., Vice President for Academic Affairs; Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Men; Father Girolami and Father Kemme.

Martin and the three other councilmen appointed under the old President's Committee for Students' plan would meet with Father Kemme regularly, according to Martin, but regular meetings would not be held with the other vice presidents.

Other Committeemen

Joining Martin on the committee are seniors Jim Judge and Tom O'Rourke and junior Pat Nicholson.

Martin said the vice presidents and deans would have the privilege of meeting in private to discuss any Council recommendations.

The President's Committee for Students was dissolved three weeks ago and at that time a committee of vice presidents was proposed and approved by Council.

Dignitaries Break Ground For New C&F Building

Ground breaking ceremonies for the new Commerce and Finance building to be located on the old site of Belle Air Hall took place last Friday at 1:30 p.m.

Some nine dignitaries of the clergy and several laymen were on hand for the occasion at which the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President, presided.

Turning the initial shovelful of soil was the Rev. Patrick J. Campbell, O.S.A., representative of Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of the Eastern Province of the Augustinian Order.

Next to turn the soil was Rev. James M. Hurley, O.S.A., Prior of the Villanova Monastery, followed by Rev. Edward M. Dwyer, O.S.A.

Taking the fourth shovelful jointly were Father Donnellon, Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O.S.A., Dean of Commerce and Finance Division and Pat Nicholson, representing the Villanova student body. Nicholson then turned the soil alone. Miss Katherine Keily, secretary to Father Bartley, took the final shovelful of earth.

Tommorrow is the feast of All Saints and a Holy Day of Obligation binding all Catholics to attend Mass under pain of mortal sin.

There will be no classes but the Rev. Joseph Kemme, Vice-President of Student Affairs, reminds all students that all classes and laboratory sessions will resume on Friday, Nov. 2, at 8:30 a.m.

Tickets For Next Weekend's Dance, Jazz Concert Go On Sale Today

by MIKE MANCUSO

Villanova's Junior Class will sponsor its first social affair of the 1956-57 school year, when it opens the Field House doors to all students for the Nick Basca Memorial Dance on Friday night, Nov. 9, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Tickets go on sale today in Dougherty Hall at $2.00 per couple.

The proceeds of the dance will be donated to the student sponsored Seminarian Scholaship Fund which will entitle an Augustinian seminarian to a college education here at Villanova.

Both the dance and the scholarship fund are projects initiated by the Class of '58.

The dance, which will be informal, will be preceded by the Nick Basca Award pep-rally and a bonfire.

SAM Group Names Two

The Rev. Joseph Bartley, O.S.A., Dean of the Commerce and Finance School, and Dr. Walter H. Klein have been chosen to represent Villanova at all national conferences of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

The two will also represent the growing Villanova chapter at Philadelphia chapter meetings.

Dr. Klein, director of the Industrial Administration curriculum, was also appointed to the Society's research committee.

Villanova's chapter was established last spring and now includes 96 members.

Don't Let It Happen Here

Now that the football team has lost a tough game the true spirit of the Villanova student body can be accurately tested. While the team was winning four straight, the spirit around campus was better than ever before. Enthusiasm vertibly tingled through the air.

The last quarter of the Florida State game presented an entirely different picture. Something new had been added. The team was losing, and they looked bad in doing it. Practically the only noise heard from the stands were murmers of discontent. There were a few scattered cheers, but they were really scattered and not very loud at that.

It was very interesting to read an AP release the other day about a lead editorial in the South Bend, Indiana Tribune. The editorial reported the appearance of a cloud of indifference settling down on the nearby Notre Dame University campus after the upset loss to Purdue. It was reported that a mere 200 students showed up at a pep rally for a vitally important Michigan State game on the Notre Dame campus next Saturday. These 200 represent a student body of more than 5,000. Truly a poor turnout.

When the team appeared at the rally, they were received with a curt 10-second "ovation." The slightly disinterested group then proceeded to show much more enthusiasm for a student's take-off on Bob Hope than for the other matter at hand.

Notre Dame spirit has always been noted as the finest in the land. But Notre Dame usually has a winning team to cheer for. Has the bubble also burst at Villanova?

We feel that the spirit around here should be even greater than it has been in the past weeks. The Cats still have four games left, and a chance for four more victories. The team naturally feels bad about losing to Florida State, but they are far from discouraged. We, personally, would not like to be in the shoes of the Boston College Eagles Friday night.

Let's just remember one thing, men, it's quite easy to cheer long and loud for a winner, but it's rather difficult to yell louder for a loser, even if only a temporary loser.

So, what do you say we yell until our teeth rattle?

Eyes Toward Russia

The outbreaks which erupted in Poland and Hungary last week seem to support what many students of government said when Stalin died: The Soviet domination of European countries will slowly but surely lessen.

These experts felt that with the passing of the extra-strong one-man rule and the breaking down of authority, the Soviets would not be able to maintain the tight control over satillite nations that it had exercised.

For a short time however, it appeared that Georgi Malenkov and Yyacheslav Molotov would carry the Soviet Union through the transition. But Nikita Khrushchev quickly rose to the position of First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party—making him number one man in the party and second, in the entire Soviet government, to the Premier himself.

Then in February 1955, Khrushchev announced that Nikolia Bulganin had replaced Malenkov as Premier. Malenkov had confessed himself a failure in agricultural affairs, and Khrushchev was able to overshadow the mild-mannered Bulganin.

It was then that the whole world was startled by Khrushchev's denunciation of Stalin, and the policy of downgrading the dictator who had been worshipped as a god was begun. This downgrading was to spread confusion throughout Russia and the satellites.

Some political experts believe that this anti-Stalin policy may have indirectly led to the uprisings which have erupted in Poland and Hungray.

The rejoicing in the Polish-American clubs in the United States was boisterous last week, and more than one American envisioned a triumph over Russian Communism in these countries.

The free world looks hopefully toward Russia now, wondering if, in the not too distant future, the tortured souls there may summon up a rebellion of their own after almost a half-century of Communist domination.

The Student's Choice

On the front page readers will note the results of the VILLANOVAN's poll of student opinion in the Presidential election.

The editors remind readers that this does not mean that this newspaper is supporting President Eisenhower; it is merely reporting the results of a poll.

We feel that if it would be inappropriate for one man, or even an editorial board of a student newspaper, to endorse one candidate. Each student, whether or not he is old enough to vote, should make his own selection.

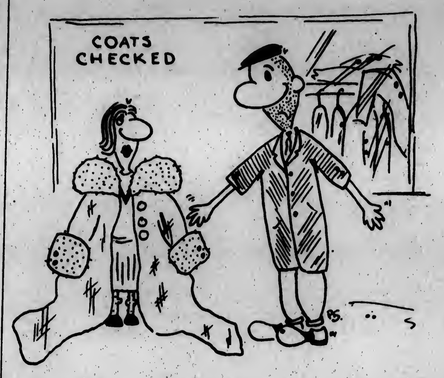
The Police Helped

Another Villanova "first" has proved to be a definite success. The motorcade to the Florida State football game, all seven miles of it, came off as planned and manifested clearly to the people of Philadelphia the spirit of the university.

However, one of the main secrets behind the success of the parade was the cooperation of the Philadelphia Police Department, the State Police and the Fairmount Park Guard. Without their okay and their help, the whole affair would have died in the minds of the Spirit Committee.

It is a large request to ask for permission to stage a moving pep rally right through the center of one of the country's largest cities. At first glance it appears that a mass movement the likes of this one would produce more traffic confussion than ever before witnessed in the history of the city.



But the police went along with the Spirit Committee and the administration. They placed a lot of confidence behind us in backing the motorcade, and they deserve our complete thanks.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

It is the desire of the editors of the VILLANOVAN that the "Letters to the Editor" column be one of the prominent features of the paper each week. Letters from students voicing their opinions on campus topics can provide most interesting reading matter for the student body.

The editors wish to remind readers that each and every student has the right to air his or her comments of praise or rebuttal. Students with intelligent ideas for the improvement of the university should not be shy about coming out in the open about them.

"What did you expect, the same coat?"

Peering . . . .

—With NORM PEER

At the reason why we don't have Friday off. We hear that the Boston Chamber of Commerce requested that it be changed so their Recovery Act could continue.

At all the food the ball players are putting away in their little nook in Dougherty Hall. Remains of a few horses were seen outside. Big question is what to do with the hoofs.

NORM PEER

At the success of the circus last week. Plans are being made for a horse show and antique exhibit to just jam the stands.

At all the meetings that go on nightly in the C&F building. Reservations have to be made months in advance. The poor Astronomy Club had to have their meeting during the day and it ruined the whole thing.

At all the musical groups that keep springing up. Let's be the first university in the country to have a five-hundred man whistling group. No offers to perform anywhere but think of the prestige.

At the variety of dates seen around for these big weekends. What extremes the freshman and others are going to in order to keep warm at football games. Horse blankets will be on sale at future contests.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

As a reporter for the Boston University News covering the Villanova pre-game pep rally Saturday night in front of the Kenmore Hotel, I would like to congratulate your school on its spirit.

For over an hour more than 400 students cheered their team, which was quartered in the hotel, on to its subsequent victory over Boston University.

These students had traveled some 300 miles. Credit must be given to them and to the Spirit Committee for doing such a fine job. The one policeman detailed to the rally termed the group as a whole, "very orderly."

I think it was a wonderful example of what spirit is and no doubt your team felt this also.

Why Vote Republican?

Grand Old Party; Peace, Prosperity

By GENE DONOHUE

Day in and day out, one can listen to the radio or watch the television set and hear an overabundance of campaign chatter which, in the long run, amounts to absolutely nothing. Speech in and speech out the poor voter tries to gather some facts from amid these charges and countercharges, only to find that they are either non-existent or so smothered in oratory so as to be indeterminable. That is the purpose of this column, the clear and factual account of "Why Republican."

To begin with, while it is absolutely true that the domestic policy of the Republican Party is, and we do not try to deny it, geared more to those individuals in the middle and upper income brackets, it is also a fact that a greater percentage of the population is in these brackets. The line between comfortable living and hardship is slowly but surely receeding as the cost of living index levels off. It is true that this index has risen 3% in the past three and one half years, but it is also just as true that in the four years of the Truman Administration between 1946 and 1950 this same figure rose 27% and by the time of the election of 1952 it was up close to 50%.

Change in Policy

With this has also come the change in the policy of the Federal Government with regard to labor. Under the past Democratic Administrations the ability of collective bargaining was retarded through government intervention in strikes. This resulted in the loss of vast sums of money to the working man as he lost valuable weeks of pay. However, during these past three and one-half years there has been little intervention and the rights of collective bargaining have been used to their utmost with the result that many of the situations that could have been detrimental to labor have been settled peacefully and there now exists a definite balance between labor and management.

The Farm Issue

Another great issue in this campaign is the farm issue. First of all it is a known and proven fact that the last time that farm prices had risen aside from these past few months, was during the Korean War. After this "Police Action" was ended, farm prices, while still under these false price supports, began to fall. The theory of these supports was that they would cause the prices to rise after they had leveled off. The fact of the matter has been that prices had not stopped falling until these parity supports were lowered. All they did was to cause the farmer to produce for a non-existent market and cause the building of billions of dollars of surplus commodities. The Republican plan, while definitely not a cure-all for this problem, goes part of the way toward eliminating this surplus and having the farmer produce for a real market.

Education

Education has also become an issue in this campaign because the Democrats have insisted that they are the benefactors of the educational process as they are the advocates of strong federal aid. This, however, does not conform to the wishes of the educators themselves. As any student of the educational system agrees, the school system of the United States is set up on a state level and any interference with that set-up is deeply resented by it. It is to retain this time honored system that the Republican policy toward education has been one of advocating state and local aid to education. Naturally they do agree that some federal aid is necessary, but the aid that they favor is aid in small enough amounts to be given without reservations and which allow freedom in education.

No account of Republican issues is complete without a good look at foreign policy. Paramount in the minds of the people of the United States when they think of foreign policy is the fact that we are no longer involved in a war nor is it in any danger of war. While it is a fact that since the Republicans have been in office, the danger of war with the Soviet Union has diminished infinitely to the point where more people regard it as an impossibility.

Symbol of Peace

President Eisenhower has fostered the United States as the dove of peace by many of his proposals, especially those at the Summit conference at Geneva. Last year, about this time, a poll was taken throughout the free world to determine what man most represented to them, the symbol of peace. Mr. Eisenhower won this poll hands down with his nearest competetor being Prime Minister Nehru of India.

Perhaps the plan which gained this distinction for him more than any other was his "open skies" plan. This plan, announced dramatically at the Geneva Conference, called for the establishment of reciprocal inspection of armament and troops by means of planes having access to all skies without intimidation.

Best Domestic Policy

These are the arguments for the Republican Party in this election. They show conclusively that the Republicans have the best domestic policy of the two major parties . . . one that holds benefits for everyone in our economy . . . and a foreign policy that assures the safety of all Americans by refusing to make political issues of things that would endanger our national security. This is "Why Republican?"

Why Vote Democratic?

'Ikeonoclast' Adlai Man with a Party

By FRANK DELANY

For 20 years the battle cry was heard of "preserve the two-party system. It is the core of American democracy." Well, instead of joining the Federalists and Whigs in the great beyond of pompous politicians, the Republicans captured the government in '52 and so, despite rumors to the contrary, we still have two parties.

Now, instead of one-party government, it would seem that we have one-man government. Despite their commanding volume in the press and campaign oratory, the Republican party remains the minority party of America as proven by the registration figures.

The New Mr. Republican

The Republican party as a potent political force is President Eisenhower, no more, no less. This is amply demonstrated by the Grand Old Party itself. In his acceptance speech at the Republican convention in August, Mr. Eisenhower after lip service to Lincoln, who ranks only one step behind home, flag and mother in the hearts of the nation, passed over the remaining ninety-odd years of Republican history and went on to verbally picture the new Republican party, a party hewn in the president's own image and likeness.

Ike Likes Republicans

On the lower political level, a Republican candidate can seemingly think of no more convincing reason for his election than "Ike needs me."

All this shows that the election is between Eisenhower the man, and the Democratic party. It will take Democrats to put Ike back in the White House.

Ike: Man vs. Politician

So which is more important to the future of the U. S. A., Eisenhower the man or the Democratic party? I say the Democratic party. For Eisenhower the man isn't really running in the election.

Any man, no matter how personally appealing and good, is no better as a possessor of public office than his political views. And Ike is a Republican. Desoite the fact that both parties wanted Ike in '52 (as Republicans are rather hasty to point out), he has since thoroughly proven that he chose his proper political home in the Republican party.

Party vs. Party

And so we must close our eyes to the blinding Eisenhower personality and judge him as the exponent of the principles of the Republican party!

A complete comparison of the philosophies of both parties is immeasurably beyond the scope of a single newspaper article and so we can only take a quick glance at the past record and a briefer glimpse at the vision of the future.

Democratic Successes

Now no political party can claim a monopoly on political and social goodness and light. This may come as a revelation to some. But an objective glance at American history right up to contemporary times reveals conclusively that most major progress can lay claim to a Democratic label. Social Security, effective anti-trust legislation, power development, FDIC and a long, long list come immediately to mind.

The Republican party has had its liberals too, perhaps the best in T. R. Roosevelt and Senator La Follette, but we all know how far they got with their own party. Both headed third party movements.

Me-Too Liberals

Eisenhower and his improved breed of Republican are liberal too but of the me-too variety. His progress has consisted mostly of obvious and rather limited extensions of Democratic initiated policies of one of the many "deals." Even the Republicans beloved Soil Bank Program is a hash-over of Franklin Roosevelt's then unconstitutional Agricultural Adjustments Act.

But the Republican party and Mr. Eisenhower have nothing really new or progressive to offer in the struggle for men's minds and the fight to strangle poverty and social inequality at the roots.

Government Social Responsibility

Government by platitudes won't work because progress is rooted in the philosophy of the Democratic party which holds that the government is responsible for the welfare and happiness of its citizens not merely the maintenance of an economic system no matter what. And the Democratic party has enough faith in the basic democracy of the American body politic to believe that the people may be trusted through their national representatives to order their own affairs without letting old-age benefit become the first step on a road to communism. Rather they believe the best method of eliminating socialism is to eliminate any need for it.

I Don't Like Ike

Although this is my reason for being a Democrat, I suppose it is obligatory upon any political hack to pay some attention to that political vote getting phenomenon called the "issues."

On segregation, suffice it to say that the Supreme Court, Vice-President Nixon notwithstanding, is a Democratic body. On the much talked about, little-understood H-bomb, draft, farm and Federal health insurance issues let me merely ask if you have thoroughly investigated the Democratic position or the Republican refutations of these positions in all their possible distortions.

Eggheads Unite

So think it over and vote Democratic if you have that great privilege of balloting. There are worse things than being an egg-head.

"Fine Arts of Bridge Playing . . ." Keeps NDers Busy

With their gridiron heroes struggling through an off year, Notre Dame is pushing its intercollegiate bridge team for the national championship.

It may sound strange, but that's what the Association of American Playing Card Manufacturers says in a press release.

A year ago, a wealthy ND alumnus bequeathed $5,000 to his alma mater to encourage participation in "the fine arts of bridge playing and golfing—the only things you can do in sports as life goes on."

Although the gift has intensified interest, competition in intercollegiate bridge is nothing new at the famed football capital. For many years, along with more than a hundred other colleges, ND has competed in the National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament.

Two years ago, the Irish team took third place. But the coach, in true Rockne tradition, is not satisfied with anything but the championship.

DO YOU LIKE MEN?

Glamour magazine (for the girl with a job, they say on the letterhead) must have heard of Villanova's coeds.

A release tells us about a contest explained in the November issue of the magazine. All the girls have to do is look over pictures of seven attractive bachelors, match up a few clues, choose the man they want a date with and give reasons why. There will be three winners. Let's see one of our coeds snag a Glamour date.

SO NEAR, SO FAR

When Leo Rogers slips on his class ring next month, he may issue a sigh of relief. He almost missed ordering one.

For a week last May, Leo took ring orders from classmates. After the ring company representative packed up and left, Leo's face turned red. He hadn't ordered one for himself.

A postcard hanging over the Post Office Stamp window tells how busy the writer is. "I'm so busy, Mom and Dad, I've had to resort to postcards. I'll try to write a letter soon." The postcard won't leave Villanova until he claims it and scrawls an address across the front.

"I WANTA GO THERE"

We thought we were prejudiced when we considered Villanova's campus one of the most beautiful anywhere. Now a nine-year-old backs us up.

One of the Long Publishing Co. employes who help put out this newspaper was telling the other day how his son almost leaped out of the car when he passed here one day with his mother.

"I want to go there, Mommy," he shouted, and then began figuring how much money it would take for tuition and a room on campus. Looks like a candidate for the Class of 1965.

University's Largest School

War, Fire Fail To Halt C & F Growth Since 1922

Breaking ground for the new Commerce and Finance building is the Rev. Patrick Campbell, O.S.A., during ceremonies Friday afternoon. Looking on are: Reverends John Curran, John Kiekotka, James Hurley, Joseph Bartley, Father Campbell, Edward Dwyer, Thomas Roland, James Donnellon and Joseph Kemme.

By ED KARRER

With the initial step taken in the construction of Villanova's nef Commerce and Finance building, the problem of the rapid growth of the University's C & F Division is being solved.

The University's largest division, the Commerce and Finance School, numbers 1,468 students this year an increase of some 1,436 members over its first class in 1922.

With the inauguration of the Commerce and Finance Division in 1822, Rev. Joseph Bartley, O.S.A., Ph.D., was apponited dean of the new school, a position which he retains today.

The 32 members of the first C & F group attended classes in the old Mendel Hall and were instructed by a faculty of two. In 1923 there were three faculty members who taught the new school, now 68 in number.

Gets New Quarters

Classes continued in the old Mendel Hall until the fall of 1928, when fire destroyed the building. The division was then moved to the first floor of Alumni Hall, where it had some six classrooms and one faculty office. The school was growing rapidly, however, and in 1931 the temporary quarters in Alumni were evacuated and the commerce and finance students moved into a building all their own the present C and F building.

By 1934 the enrollment was up to 233 and the faculty was composed of 19 members. The division's enrollment rose steadily reaching 324 by 1941. Then came World War II and the enrollment dropped decidedly.

Increase Starts Again

The post war years, however, started tenrollment on the increase once again and by 1949, the C & F Division had 1,084 students. The Korean War brought a slight drop in the number of students during the early 1950s, but by 1954 the enrollment rise continued where it had left off.

The 1956 enrollment of 1,468 Commerce and Finance students is 99 more than were at Villanova last year. The present faculty consists of 35 members instructing exclusively in business administration courses. Commerce and Finance students are also instructed in various courses by faculty members of the University's other divisions.

Modern Building Started

With an even greater enrollment of C & F students seen in future years, construction has been started on the new Commerce and Finance building, which is expected to be completed early in 1958.

The new building, which will cost approximately $1,200,000 will become the third unit under construction on campus in various stages of completion.

The C & F building will be erected by the Joseph Farrell Co., the same company that built Sullivan Hall, Dougherty Hall and the University law building, Garey Hall.

It will contain 32 classrooms varying in size from 30 to 90 seats and two large lecture halls which will seat 180 students each.

Will House Modern Equipment

Constructed of fieldstone and limestone, the new structure will consist of three stories in addition to a ground floor. In it will be housed a business library, a laboratory for the study and use of the latest business machines and equipment and a large cafeteria.

The building will accommodate approximately 2500 students and will contain offices for about 60 faculty members.

The Very Rev. James A. Donnelon, O.S.A., University President, has described the new structure as "one of the most modern of its kind in the East."

Freddie the Frosh:

Freddie Plays the Role; Gets Taken for a Ride

By WILLIE WAINSCOTT

Freddie the Frosh: Hey Mr. upperclassman, sir. I've been here at Villanova for a whole month now and I'm getting awfully lonely. Won't you please tell me how I can get a date. My father sends me $25 a week, and I don't know what to do with it.

Senior: Well Freddie, where did you plan to go to get a date?

Freddie: Well, first I was planning to ask out one of our freshman nurses, but my senior roommate told me they'd take away his seat on the Student Council if they found out he had a traitor roommate. So I don't know what to do. Please help me.

Senior: No, no Freddie, you don't want to do that and have people talking nastily about you behind your back. Why don't you try Rosemont?

Freddie: Rosemont, where's that?

Senior: Freddie, you are a gnome. Everybody knows where Rosemont is. It's that haven across the tracks where hordes of aspiring Rosies play bridge and dream about the Ivy League. You mean to say you never heard of Rosemont? Wow!

Freddie: Please sir, it's not my fault. My senior roommate keeps me locked up in my room every day composing his senior thesis, shining his shoes, cleaning his golf clubs, writing his girl friend and keeping the TV set in tip-top shape. He beats me up if the set goes on the blink and he misses the wrestling bouts.

Senior: But Freddie, where is he now? How did you sneak out?

Freddie: He's on vacation this week, I copied down his license plate number and slipped it under the Dean of Men's door.

Senior: You are also a rat, but I will attempt to give you the information you crave. When you find the Rosie campus, go directly to the "T House." Don't be afraid, step right in. Then pick out a girl whom you'd like to take out and strike up a conversation. You may have a tough time getting her away from the bridge game, but you can just use your ingenuity. After getting acquainted, casually ask her out for Saturday night. Don't mention your $25 per week, though. If you're overheard there may be a stampede in your direction. The last guy who went over there and divulged his financial status had one of his best friends killed in the rush and seven girls had to be taken away to the hospital suffering from shock. His buddie was in the NROTC so they gave him a Naval burial in the little pond by the "T." It was very sad.

Freddie: Gee thanks sir. You are most kind. But where can I go on the date. I haven't got a car.

Senior: Don't worry about that, Freddie. Almost anyone in Sullivan Hall can help you out.

Freddie: But sir, resident students aren't allowed to have cars, and Sullivan Hall is for resident students.

Senior: Yes Freddie, I know. You are still a gnome. A car is the least of your worries. Now don't go any place expensive. Remember this will be your first date with the girl and you don't want to spoil her. By the way Freddie, you better tell her that you're an upperclassman, just to make an impression. And Freddie, good luck. You'll need it.

The Following Sunday Morning

Senior: Hi Freddie. How did things go last week?

Freddie: Oh just fine sir. I had a wonderful time. But let me tell you what happened. When I got to the "T" I decided to use a little ingenuity. I sneaked around the side to an open window and yelled in "Who wants to go to Princeton for a weekend?" Then I quickly ran around to the other side and after about 100 hysterical females came running, tumbling and screaming out the "T" I captured one of the less seriously hurt who was still able to crawl out through the door in search of the mysterious Princetonian. After I convinced her that the whole thing was a hoax, she cried for a while and finally consented to go out with me. I promised her that I'd wear my roommate's tweedy jacket and she could tell anyone we met that I came from Brown. I knew she'd go for me because I wore my regs to impress her that I was "Joe College." One thing I can't understand, though, is the funny look she gave me when I told her I was a senior.

Senior: Gee Freddie, what did she look like?

Freddie: Sigh, she was beautiful. Her buck teeth hardly showed at all and you couldn't even see her cross eyes because her thick horn-rimmed glasses hid them. And even though she was six inches taller than I, she promised to wear flats. Her name is Rosie Golddigger.

Senior: Freddie, for a minute I wondered if you had ever gone over to Rosemont or if you were making this story all up. But now I know you're telling the truth. Where did you go?

Freddie: Well, I suggested the Greek's for supper, then the Bryn Mawr Movies, and finally maybe an English muffin at the Mari-Nay.

Senior: Gosh Freddie, I underestimated you. You got off cheap.

Freddie: Not quite sir. You see, she had other ideas. We went to Stoffer's for cocktails and dinner, then into Philly for a show, then over to Palumbo's for the last floor show, and finally I had to put her up in the Bellevue-Stratford because it was too late to go back to Rosemont.

Senior: Gee Freddie, you were taken. Then did you drive back to Villanova?

Freddie: I guess I forgot to tell you sir, the 1934 Plymouth I borrowed dropped its transmission on the way over to Rosemont and we had to take cabs all night. Say Mr. upperclassman, would you please lend me $25. I have to get a cab and go back into Philly to get her and then she wants me to take her to the Sunday afternoon concerts, and then out for dinner, and then..... err... why are you looking at me that way sir? Did I do something wrong? Gee, I'm having a wonderful time. I'm sure this girl sees

Forecast Truman in 1948:

Past Polls Prove Close Predictions

The VILLANOVAN presidential poll of 1956 was the sixth of a series dating back to 1932 when the students of Villanova College predicted that Franklin D. Roosevelt would beat Herbert Hoover for the Presidency.

In 1936 Villanova was one of the few Eastern colleges to select Roosevelt again for the Chief Executive's position. It was commanly believed, except at Villanova, that Alf Landon would take the election.

Wrong With Wilkie

The election of 1940 proved to be the first and only erroneous prediction by the Villanova students. The school stood strongly behind Wendell Wilkie to dethrone President Roosevelt. However, Mr. Roosevelt rolled on to his unprecedented third Presidential term.

Because of the war and the shaky status of the student, no poll was held in 1944 when Roosevelt won again. But in 1948 Villanova called what proved to be the biggest upset of any Presidential campaign. The students forsaw the victory of unknown Democrat Harry S. Truman over New York's popular governor, Thomas E. Dewey, generally conceded to be the next President.

Right With Ike

In 1952 the poll showed that 53.9 per cent of the Villanova students thought Ike would win and the remaining 46.1 per cent figured it would be Stevenson. But actually 64 per cent of the voters wished that Stevenson would take the election, compared to the 36 per cent who preferred Eisenhower.

Westinghouse Visited By 90 ASME Members

Last Wednesday the American Society of Mechanical Engineering conducted its first field trip of the school year to the Westinghouse Steam Turbine Division at Lester, Pa.

Approximately 90 students inspected various sections of the plant during the two-hour tour and problems concerning turbine assembly and manufacturing were answered by the guides.

All the students who participated in the tour gained valuable information as to their future in such fields after graduation.

Film Shown

At a previous meeting a film entitled "The Steam Turbine" was shown in preparation for the trip.

Mr. James Erwin of the Society of Automotive Engineers spoke briefly on the advantages of Mechanical Engineers as members of SAE.

Sports Car Race

A film and talk will be given at a future ASME meeting concerning a recently-held sports car race. Tickets for this meeting will be distributed through the ME department shortly.

Hot Dogs, Beans and Dates For Bold Seniors in Boston

By SUSAN SHERRILL Boston U. NEWS Reporter

Persistence paid off for eight Villanova seniors the other weekend in Boston.

The good-looking seniors braved the confines of a Boston-University coed dormitory in search of dinner and dates before the Villanova-BU game.

Coeds Amused

The eight Wildcats boldly invaded the dining room to the amusement of the onlooking coeds. The head resident quickly restored order, but not before one of the enterprising young men had inquired what she was doing later that evening. She good-naturedly replied she had an engagement.

The smiling lady said she was more than willing to feed the contingent, but rules were rules. If they wanted to eat they would have to pay.

Plenty of Milk

One lad, chagrined by her courtesy, whipped out a glass of tomato juice he had managed to conceal in his pocket, saying ruefully, "You are too nice, I can't do it."

After paying the charge for dinner, the eight starving men entered the dining room to cheers from the girls. They were treated to a typical Boston fare of baked beans, frankfurters and brown bread. Cake and milk in large quantities completed the meal.

And, oh yes, they also found dates.

'Wildcat Safari' Returns to WVIL; Kelly Moderator

Bill Kelby, production manager of WVIL, has announced the return of the popular information show "Safari" to WVIL. Kelly will take over as moderator replacing Pete Quinn.

The show is heard over WVIL at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday.

"Safari" keeps Villonovans informed as to weekend comings and goings, especially being concerned with different campus societies' parties.

Kelly also said that there will be visitors from the local girls' schools to keep Villanova informed of the upcoming events.

Many firsts will be available to "Safari" and anyone interested in "getting the scoop" on what to do and where to go should tune in WVIL.

SPOTLIGHT

They Call Him Sleepy But He's Always Awake

The Spotlight beam focuses this week on Richard "Sleepy" Madara, sometimes known as "Admiral" Madara because of affiliation with the Villanova NROTC unit.

Madara is the son of Walter and Susan Madara of Lansdowne, and graduated from West Catholic High School in Philadelphia before matriculating at Villanova in 1952.

Midshipman Traveler

The nickname "Sleepy" is a holdover from high school days when as a freshman, his classmates noticed his wide-awake look and quick pace and dubbed him appropriately.

"Sleepy's" career at Villanova has been most intimately connected with the United States Navy. As a regular midshipman, "Sleep" has visited Europe.

Sleepless "Sleepy"

France seemed to him a place always on the go. His tourist eye caught Paris and its people as firm believers that fun is for everyone at all times. He advises "no-sleep" pills if you intend visiting Paris.

Only one mishap was encountered on his journies. This was at Little Creek, Va., where he stepped out of a landing boat to wade ashore and found that the water was ten feet deep.

As a student, "Sleep" is one of the best, having appeared four times on the dean's list. As a sophomore, he received the Navy League and the Midvelle Company awards for excellence in the subject of Naval Ordnance and Gunnery.

Executive Officer

This year he is the midshipman executive officer of the battalion as well as president of the Quarterdeck Society.

An incident in the "Admiral's" history class last year is as expressive of him and his effect on his surroundings as anything. "Sleep" came to class in uniform with all his drill team finery on. He was late, so he quietly took a seat in the back of the class. Mr. Henry Rofinot, conducting the class, strolled back to the rear of the class and circled Madara a couple of times while all eyes turned towards him. "Humph," said Mr. Rofinot finally, "You look like the Chief of Police of Monaco."

Belle Masque is in the process of readying itself for its coming fall production. The title of the show is being kept secret by the producers. It is still uncertain when the name will be made public.

Joe Guisti and Joe Chinnici are constructing a set that designer Jake Krupa claims will be the most complex ever to be presented on the Field House stage.

Chestnut Hill College, in conjunction with Villanova, will present Shakespeare's "Tempest" on Friday and Saturday nights, Nov. 9 and 10. Belle Masque will be represented in the production by Jack Erdlen, Larry Seavers, Gerry Sullivan, Jim Bourne, and Pete Philbrin, Marilyn Macline and Joy Richardson will play the female leads. Curtain time is 8:15.

On Tuesday, Nov. 6, Bryn Mawr College will be the setting for the Shakespearean Players' of Stratford, Ontario production of "Hamlet." A group of Belle Masquers will attend.

Cullen Elected to French Club Post

The French club announced today its officers for the 1956-57 school year.

Ray Cullen was elected president, with John Lynch and Ken Miller vice-president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

The club will meet tomorrow in the classroom annex during the activities period at which time a constitution will be formulated.

New members as well as old are urged to attend.

21 Colleges Come Here in Spring For EE Contest

Villanova's student AIEE-IRE chapter will entertain representatives from 21 colleges April 25 and 26 during the district prize paper contest.

Villanova Chapter President Harry Fatkin said students in colleges having an AIREE branch deliver papers at their schools. Winners in this competition will come here.

Schools to be here

Fatkin said schools to be represented here are: Bucknell, Carnegie Tech, Catholic University of America, University of Delaware, Drexel, Gannon College, George Washington, Howard University, Lafayette College, Lehigh, University of Maryland, Penn State, University of Pennsylvania, University of Pittsburgh, Princeton, Swarthmore, U.S. Naval Academy, West Virginia, Youngstown and Villanova.

Lafayette Conference

Fatkin, chapter Secretary John Ellis, and Professor John B. Clothier outlined plans for the paper contest at the annual eastern conference of AIEE Oct. 20 at Lafayette.

Students In Night School Interviewed About Its Benefits

In trying to discover the aims of various evening students, the question "What do you hope to gain by attending evening school?" was asked of several men and women in different programs of study. Here are some of the interesting answers received:

Charles Tinder, Accounting—"I hope to attain a higher position in my firm, both salary and prestige-wise.

Sister Colette, Order of St. Francis, Nursing—"I am trying to develop all my faculties so that I may better serve God and my neighbor."

Walter Heck, Jr., Business Administration—"My attendance at evening school holds promises of unlimited advancement in my present occupation."

Dolores Jemionek, Education—"By attending evening school, I am striving to acquire the knowledge that will best prepare me for my role as a teacher."

Peter Borzellecs, Accounting—"I hope to gain a broader education through my association with people in the same field of work."

Alfred R. Marcini, Business Administration—"I hope to attain a B.S. degree in order to have a tool with which to work in the business world."

Geraldine Feler, Education—"I am working for a B.S. degree in Elementary Education; trying to obtain enough experience and information to cope with today's problems in education."

Leba Stern, Nursing—"To obtain a B.S. in Nursing is my secondary goal, while a more intelligent outlook on life is my primary goal."

Julian H. Kokoruz, Engineering—"I am trying to obtain a degree in engineering which I started working for at Lvov College in Poland."

Harold Staats, Business Administration—"I'm married. This is the only way I can get out at night."

Anne Jakubowski, Nursing—"To see my boy friend who's a resident student and won't ever come home."

Moot Court Team Listed By Dean; First Meet Nov. 9

Members of the Villanova intercollegiate moot court team for this year have been named by Harold G. Reuschlein, Dean of the Villanova Law School.

The three law students making up the team are: James A. Matthews, third year class, graduate of Duquesne University; Thomas E. Eichman, second year class, graduate of Villanova, and Anthony J. Ryan, second year class, graduate of Bellarmine College.

All three members are residents of Philadelphia.

First Argument—Nov. 9

The Villanova team will have its first argument on Friday, Nov. 9, when it meets the Dickinson team in the regional intercollegiate competition, being held Nov. 9 and 10.

Other teams entered in this year's regional arguments include: Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh, Temple, Rutgers and Seton Hall.

The two top teams in the regional competition will then go to New York where they will compete in the national arguments.

Two New York Trips

This is Villanova's third year of competition in the regional arguments. Each of the other two VU teams, those of 1954 and 1955 respectively, gained first place ties in the regionals, and consequently went on to New York for the national arguments.

Ad Campaign Under Way For the 1957 BELLE AIR

Mike Ford, business manager of the 1957 BELLE AIR, announced today that this year's advertising campaign is officially underway. Ford said that much progress has already been made.

Any student in the University can place advertisments in the publication. Seniors especially are urged to consider placing the family business in the yearbook—the only permanent record of the Class of 1957. Copies of the yearbook are distributed to each member of the student body, numbering over 3,000 and hundreds of faculty members, alumni and friends of the University.

Ford said that he planned to continue the format adopted last year, consisting of three types of advertisements, namely: Sponsors, Patrons, and Donations.

A commission of 10% on the total of old advertisments and 20% on all new advertisments will be paid when the bill is paid.

Mike Ford or any member of his business staff will be glad to give further details. They can be contacted in either the BELLE AIR office, 2nd floor Dougherty or 337 Sullivan.

U. S. Civil Service Lists Exams For Student Trainees

United States Civil Service Commission has announced a new examination for student trainee positions in architecture, cartography, chemistry, engineering, mathematics, metallurgy, meterology, oceanography and physics.

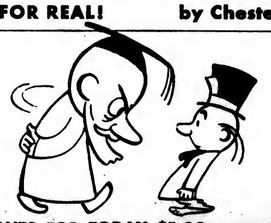
Entrance salaries during the training period vary from $2,960 to $3,415 a year.

On-The-Job Training

Student Trainees will participate in special training programs consisting of on-the-job training in a Federal establishment and scholastic training at a college or university. To qualify, applicants must have had appropriate high school or college education and must pass a written test.

Applications

Further information and application forms may be obtained from the U.S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C. Applications will be accepted by the Civil Service Commission until further notice.



70 Chem Students Hear Year's First Talk At Meeting

Approximately 70 students heard the first speech of the year last Wednesday night—"Careers in Chemistry"—by Roy Machlowitz of Sharpe & Dohme.

He noted a belief in which many of our male students have always believed—"marriage is the career for women"—but he admitted that women are more suitable for some jobs than are men.

In technical fields, he stated that graduate degrees give the bearer an "increased potential," but the main traits sought by industry in a prospective employee are the proper education, character, personality and attitude.

IT'S FOR REAL! by Chester Field

THOUGHTS FOR TODAY $1.98

I met a man with a rather large head
Who looked at me and finally said:

"If ever you're caught
Without any thought
And you think that you ought
To be thinking a thought,
Buy one from me before it's too late.
Thoughts for today, only one-ninety-eight."

"A reasonable price," I said and bought
The following brainy, thoughtful thought:

FAINT PLEASURE AIN'T PLEASURE!

Take your pleasure big! Smoke the cigarette that gives you more of what you're smoking for . . . more real enjoyment, more real rich flavor . . . more smoking satisfaction. Smoke a Chesterfield and enjoy it to the hilt!

Smoke for real . . . smoke Chesterfield!

Trophy to be Awarded For Student Palestra Conduct

A sportsmanship award has been established for spectator conduct during Big Five basketball games this winter.

The trophy will be donated by the Collegiate Conference of Greater Philadelphia, which approved establishment of the annual award after it was suggested by Pat Nicholson, Vice-chairman of Villanova's Student Council.

St. Joseph's Meeting

Approval of the award took place at a meeting of student government representatives from Penn, Temple, LaSalle, St. Joseph's and Villanova, at St. Joseph's Student Council Chairman Joe Martin and Councilmen Dick Mason and Don Kempf also represented Villanova.

The award will be presented to the school rated "out-standing" in sportsmanship during games involving Big Five teams.

Judges Listed

Newspapermen and radio and TV broadcasters will judge the crowd during games, officials will evaluate the coaches and players, and Palestra police will judge conduct of students entering and leaving games.

Nicholson had offered the proposal at a meeting last May of CCGP.

The next CCGP meeting will be held at Villanova Nov. 18. Martin said at that time final plans will be set up for the award.

AIEE-IRE To Have Student Talks, Movies

Student speakers will give short talks on their summer working experiences and a movie will be shown during the regular meeting Monday of the AIEE-IRE at 11:30 a.m. in 215 Mendel.

President Harry Fatkin said "talks of this nature by students aid the student himself in public presentation and indicate to the audience the type of summer jobs available to engineers."

The movie will be "Principles of Engineering."

Rosemary Clooney appeared at Villanova Seminary Guild shows in 1951 and 1952.

Law Convention Postponed Until Late February

The first meeting of the Institute of Church and State, scheduled to be held on the Villanova campus Nov. 2 and 3, has been postponed until Feb. 21 and 22, according to Dean Reuschlein of the Villanova Law School.

The dean cited several reasons for the postponement, foremost of which was the fact that the principal speaker sought for the occasion was unable to be obtained for a November meeting, but would be available in February.

Harvard Prof. to Speak

Professor Mark DeWolfe Howe, professor of law at the Harvard Law College, has been engaged as the principal speaker for the two-day fete.

The theme of the meeting will be "The Problem of Heretical Status of Churches."

Activities of the meeting will be centered around Gary Hall. And the dean cited the fact that work on the new law school would not be completed by November as another reason for the postponement of the meeting.

O-C Club Plans Trips, Provides Program Guide

Edward Grieg's "Concerto in A Miner" will be presented to Opera-Classica's recording listeners tonight at 7:30 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

It will be the fourth concert of this semester.

Two trips, one to Philadelphia and one to New York are planned by O-C moderator Mr. A. Angeline for students interested in ballet and classical music.

Ballet Lecture

On Nov. 8 at 8 p.m.,, Dame Ninette de Valois, director of Sadler's Wells Ballet, will give a lecture on "Ballet and the Contemporary Scene" at the New Century Club, 124 S. 12th St. in Philadelphia.

Students may reserve seats at the lecture with the payment of $1.50 to O-C president Richard Salisbury.

Renata Tebaldi

The first 40 Villanovans to reserve free box seats with Salisbury to witness THE TELEPHONE HOUR in New York's Carnegie Hall on Nov. 19, will see Renata Tebaldi, renowned operatic soprano.

A complete listing of the operatic and classical concerts on campus and in Philadelphia has been published into a program guide and may be obtained from Salisbury.

Belle Air Dummy Layout Arrives; Theme of Progress Listed By Editor-In-Chief

The dummy layout of the 1957 BELLE AIR, Villanova's yearbook, has arrived on campus it was announced today by Dick Schleicher, editor-in-chief. The dummy is the basic form the yearbook will follow in its composition. It was recieved from the Wm. Cooke Publishing Co.

An Annual Report

The theme portrays the progress of the school in the past four years. "This progress is characterized in the form of an annual report of a big corporation with dividens being given to those who believe in Villanova, the dividends being our fraduates," Scheicher said.

The theme of progress fits the occasion, for the present Senior class is the first to go through Villanova as a university. The building program, beginning with Sullivan Hall, and the student body have progressed rapidly. The students in number, quality and spirit have driven quickly forward.

ENGINEERING EMPHASIZED

Emphasis is being placed on the Engineering School as it celebrates its 50th anniversary.

Work on the Senior section of the book has already started with the taking of portrates and collection of history forms by Feature Editor, Paul Clarkson.

Accounting Society Sets Constitution; Future Plans Made

The Accounting Society, under the direction of Mr. George Chorba, has announced tenative plans for a smoker to be held in late November or early December.

The guest speaker will be H. C. Kensky, acting regional manager of the U.S. General Accounting Division of Philadelphia.

Kensky will return to Villanova next June to conduct interviews with senior acounting majors.

Last week's society meeting saw initial drafting of a constitution, this being the first step toward full recognition by the university administration.

Six new committee were also organized at the meeting.

Rock 'n Roll Ban Enforced by Shea

Ed Shea, WVIL, station manager announced last week that "there will be no rock 'n roll or jazz played except on the shows designated to feature that type of music."

Execeptions would occur if one or more rock 'n roll or jazz records was listed in the top twenty tunes. In this case they may be played on the "WET WAX WORKS show from 9 to 10 nightly.

Father Coffey Will Address Nurses Group

The Rev. John J. Coffey, O.S.A., director of St. Mary's Seminary, will address Alpha Delta Chi, graduate nursing society, at a Communion breakfast tomorrow.

Members will receive Holy Communion at the 9 a.m. Mass in the Chapel and breakfast will be served in Dougherty Hall's day hop cafeteria.

Alumni, Evening Division nurses and faculty members have been invited.

A get-together was held last Thursday in Austin Lounge to give freshmen nurses a chance to meet upperclass nurses. After refreshments were received, nurses went to the rally for the Florida State game .

Moderator of IRC Dr. Lyon is Named

Dr. Robert Lyon, newly elected Associate of the American Psychological Association, which is a National Association for Psychologists was also chosen as moderator of the Industrial Relations Club of Villanova.

The club president Attilio DiMartino has announced that the club is open to all students interested in government relations. Joseph Rafferty is the treasurer of the club while Owen Peterson is the secretary.

ICG Holds Panel With Politicians

Two prominent politicians—one Republican, the other Democratic—addressed last night's meeting of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government.

The GOP speaker was Attorney Elkins Wetherill, county chairman of Montgomery County and co-chairman of the State of Pennsylvania Citizens for Eisenhower Campaign.

Speaking for the Democratic Party was Attorney Daniel Quinlan, a State Deputy Attorney General, chairman of Montgomery County Speakers' Committee, member of the county Democratic Executive Committee and vice-chairman of the Lower Merion Democratic Committee.

Each of the speakers presented an outline and defense of his party's basic policies in the 1956 presidential campaign.

PUBlicly Speaking . . .

By BOB and MIKE

Let's treat the college man's everpresent problem of finances. Money, or the lack of it bears heavily upon the collegian's social life. There are some individuals who never seem able to see the light of day regarding ways and means.

Consider the perennial debtor. His social doings are planned on a rather shaky basis. Any money acquired must quickly be disposed of lest a crafty creditor pounce upon our boy. This sort of thing gives rise to a rather sneaky individual, greatly adept at all manner and means of chicanery.

He usually regards working completely beneath him, the result being that by May he is beyond hopes of settling his accounts and adopts a policy of downright dodging. For some unexplainable reason, his exams always end two days before those of his creditors and he is nowhere to be found on the day of reckoning.

BOB and MIKE

What Every Villanovan Should Know

If your case is something akin to friend debtor above, why not attempt our plan of social attack . . . SCHEME. Not having access to undue amounts of currency, we feel ourselves rather progressed in the science of scheming. For those in the dark, scheming is the science of obtaining all the benefits of social activities while surrendering next to nothing for them.

The schemer need be a fast-talker and possess an above average degree of suavity. He needs more than anything, however, a girl unquestionably sympathetic to his views. She must be observant of all possible opportunities, quick-witted, completely self-contained and able to explain herself in any situation.

Sample Problem

Examine the method of this couple in gaining entrance to a dance. Our guy, collar unbuttoned, looking extremely disturbed, expains to the questioning ticket-taker that his car has stalled in the middle of the Pike and is in dire need of push from his roommate. He is admitted. Three minutes later, our girl-friend, apparently uncontrollably angry, barges past the same ticket-taker who feels quite safe in remaining aloof from such a display of female ferocity. Result . . . one free dance for our hero and his drag.

With a few minor adjustments, this method may be applied to any social affair. When one gets it down to a science, one might become the biggest socialite on campus, regardless of cash on hand.

Pet Peeve ..... Unsympathetic ticket-takers

SC Suspends BELLE AIR

Student Council voted Monday night to suspend the BELLE AIR's seat until Dec. 31.

The move was taken, Councilmen said, because Council rules concerning appointment of fifth-year NROTC men to leading campus posts had been violated.

Last March Council passed a resolution ruling out appointment of fifth-year men to editorships of the BELLE AIR and VILLANOVAN and WVIL station manager's position.

Violated Rule

However, fifth-year man Dick Schleicher was appointed BELLE AIR editor in May and was entitled to a Council seat.

Council decided Monday night that "in order to uphold its integrity," it would suspend the yearbook's seat because "Council's rules had been violated."

Schleicher, who was not present at the meeting but was represented by BELLE AIR Feature Editor Paul Clarkson, will be able to come to meetings and join in discussions but will have no vote, Council Chairman Joe Martin explained.

Protests Paper Throwing

At the first meeting in January, the question will be taken up again and Council may vote whether or not to re-instate the yearbook seat, Council decided.

Juniors to Hold Nick Basca Dance

The theme, which will be in line with the rally and the V.U.-Citadel game on Saturday, has not yet been decided.

Leo Rudegair has been chosen as the chairman for the dance. Leo Savio and Ted Betting will head the refreshments committee while Tony Lisa is in charge of the band arrangements.

The permanent committees of the Junior Class that are working on the dance are: the Decorations Committee under Mike Delany, Bill Fallan and Tom Sprenger; Tickets Committee supervised by Fred Herr, John Lyons, and John Mullin; and the Publicity Committee headed by Leo Rogers and Frank Bonner.

Climaxing this eventful weekend will be a jazz concert also to be held in the Field House on Sunday afternoon at 3:30.

Eddie Condon to Play

The Eddie Condon group of Greenwich Village fame will headline the affair.

The band features such outstanding names as Wild Bill Davision on the coronet, Cutty Cutshall on the trombone, George Wettling on the drums, and Bob Caseybass and Bob Wilbur on the clarinet.

Admission will be $1.00 per person and tickets will be available starting today.

A New Venture

This is a new venture of the Junior Class to attempt a jazz concert outside of Junior Week.

Consulting Firms Described to ASCE

Mr. T. J. McCormick, of McCormick & Taylor Structural Consultants of Philadelphia talked on consulting firms at the ASCE meeting on Monday.

The society is tentatively planning to have movies at 11 a.m. once a month during the engineers activity period. The society is also attempting to get a permanent seat on the Student Council.

Mainliners Seek to Extend Boston Streak In Contest With Archrival BC Eagles

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Villanova's Wildcats face Boston College Friday night at Fenway Park in Boston in hopes of stretching their victories to four . They are out to prove to the Boston fans that their last victory in Boston was not just a lucky game.

The Boston College Eagles under Coach Mike Holovak, now in his sixth year as head coach, have another strong squad. After going down to defeat at the hands of a powerful Miami of Florida by a 27 to 6 score, the Eagles bounded back to top Marquette, 26-19 and Rutgers 32-0. In this game Rutgers was held scoreless for the first time in 99 consecutive games.

Lambert Trophy

On the basis of the Eagles' two victories, they were placed among the top teams of the east in competition for the Lambert Trophy which is symbolic of Eastern football supremacy. As yet, Villanova has not received recognition in this poll.

In their first three games, Boston College has relied upon a devastating ground attack as their main force of attack. They are in second place in the east with a 225 yards per game.

8.5 Average

Bill Alves, a 5'8, 160 lb. halfback, has been the main-stay of the backfield. Carrying the ball 14 times thus far he has gained 120 yards for an 8.5 yards per game average.

Also in the backfield is Tom Sullivan a fast breakaway runner and Larry Plenty, powerful fullback, who excelled in Boston College's 28-14 triumph over Villanova last year. Leading the line attack will be center Larry Fitzpatrick, brother of Tom Fitzpatrick, a Villanova standout during the '52 and '53 seasons.

PRESIDENT

Gen. Mark Clark is president of The Citadel, Villanova's Nov. 10 football oppenent.

Outlook Bright as Swimmers Prep for Fordham Opener

By BILL VINCENT

With the opening meet against Fordham approaching, Villanova's swimmers are again preparing for a tough schedule which includes Georgetown, L.I.U., LaSalle, and Penn. The latter two were the only conquerors of the Wildcats a year ago.

Even with such a tough schedule, Ed Geisz, swimming mentor, expressed the team's outlook as bright because of the numerous sophomores to go along with a nucleus of varsity men.

Last year's captain, Don Coulg, a 200 yard backstroker, heads the list of varsity returnees. Other returning varsity men are sprinters Denny Rinkacs, Bob Duffy, and Mike Klesius; diver, Mike Rafferty; distance men, Lou Schoener and Jim Donnelly; and orthdox breatroker, Lou Pinto.

Larry Palacio, who specialize in the 200 year butterfly breast stroke; Jerry Cechoney, backstroker; sprinters, Bob Pinto and Ken MacGilvery; diver, Jim Corey.

Coach Geisz is pleased with his present squad, but he is doubtful over their success because of last year's losses, which include Don Nalty, who was injured in an auto accident last year, Pat Kean, Paul Donohue, and George Sinott who graduated June.

'Mural Football Officials Needed

Due to the number of games being played in the Intramural leagues per day, there is a shortage of officials to handle these games. Any student interested in officiating football for the department may sign up in the Intramural Office or in room 332 Austin Hall.

Also, today is the occasion for the annual intramural golf tournament at the Mainline Golf Course on Lancaster Pike. Participants are asked to report to the course between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. and play 18 holes. The Callaway system will be used in determining individual scores.

Tomorrow, Nov. 1, the traditional intramural Cross-Country Run will be conducted on a rain or shine basis. A three mile course around the campus has been mapped out, beginning at the Stadium.

It takes two Florida State players to stop Gene O'Pella just short of the FSU goal line just before Cat's second touchdown.

Florida State completes a pass, but receiver is surrounded by too many Villanovans —Wildcats—Rollie West (21), Bill Magee (15), Joe Ryan (partially obsured) and John Bauer (20).

Wildcat Streak Halted At Three By Florida State U.

By FRANK FLEMING

VAN INJAIAN

The Villanova Wildcats three game winning streak—the longest in three seasons—came to an abrupt halt Saturday night when Coach Frank Reagan's charges dropped a 20-13 decision to a strong, multi-offense Florida State team. The Cats, suffering from the proverbial Municipal Stadium jinx while preforming before a crowd of 42,000 for the benefit of the U.S. Olympic Fund, were the victims of two costly fumbles in the first period of play.

Florida State's first score came in the first period when it recovered a fumble on the V.U. 27-yard-line. Three plays later found the ball on the nine. Vic Prinzi then took the ball and raced around end for the touchdown. Jack Sheppard converted and the Seminoles led 7-0.

Villanova's Jack Devereaux received the kick-off and carried it 16 yards to his own 37. The Wildcats made two straight first downs before fumblitis set in, and Bob Renn fell upon Billy Magee's fumble on the 33. Guard Mike Flynn intercepted a State pass, but the Southerners picked up another loose ball on their own 28.

Early in the second quarter the Cat's gained control and took to the air. Quarterback Magee's passes to Devereaux and Tony Verrechione put Villanova in scoring position, but the yardage lost via a 15-yard-penalty couldn't be regained. The visitors took over on the 11.

Blocked Kick

Late in the first half the Seminoles recovered still another fumble on their own 43 and immediately started passing. Ted Rodriques found his target, Ron Schomburger two straight

Mean Blocker Van Injaian Marks Third Year At End

By HANK NICHOLS

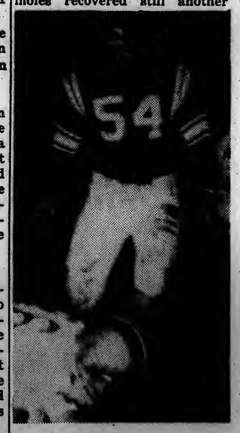
For the past three seasons, Vilanova's left end position has been held down by a fellow who truly lives up to the name of "Wildcat." Senior Van Injaian has been a starter at this position since his sophomore year.

He is fierce blocker, especially downfield. Evidence of this was shown in last year's Richmond game when he knocked two Spiders cold with one block. His 195 pounds are proportioned nicely over a six feet-one inch frame and he has tremendous spring which enables him to leap high in the air and snatch aerials from would be receivers.

Defensively, he likes to bang in there when a sweep comes in his direction. When he does not make the tackle, he usually takes two or more of the runner's interference out of the play, enabling the backer-up to make the tackle.

Athlete of Year

Van is from Merchantville, New Jersey, where he was a nine letterman in high school. He was chosen "Athlete of the Year" in South Jersey his senior year. Some of the many other honors he received in high school are: Al-South Jersey Football (two years); second-team, All-South Jersey Basketball, and first place in the discus throw at the New Jersey State Meet. Once he was chosen lineman of the week, at the same time his roommate, Tony Esgro, was back of the week.



For the past two season here on the Main Line, he has been selected on the All-Armenian All-American Team.

Early season point production seems to be his specialty. He accounted for the first Villanova touchdown last year against Boston University on a 22 yard pass play and was responsible for the first scoring of this season when he tackled Steve Riskash from Detroit in the end zone for a safety.

Future Plans

A marketing major in Commerce and Finance, Van has no immediate plans after graduating. If he chooses, he has the opportunity to go into the furniture business with his father, but as yet he has not decided. He has no steady girl friend, and one of his favorite pastimes is playing Pinochle.

Walt Novak, a former Wildcat All-American, was responsible for Van choosing Villanova over such schools as Duke, Georgia, Michigan, and Michigan State. This was a tremendous break for Villanova football, as can well be seen by the great play at left end by number 83, Van Injaian.

Wildcats linebacker Mike DeLucia hurries up but Florida State runner is already grounded in Saturday night game.

Nick Basca Award Recalls Great Name In Villanova Football

By TOM SMITH

The night before the Villanova-Citadel game an award will be presented to the most attractively decorated hall. This is a story about the player whose name the award bears.

Before he was killed on a beachhead in the South Pacific during World War II, Nick Basca had starred on three Villanova football teams which won 18 games, lost six and tied one.

From his sophomore season, Basca ran wild against Villanova's slate of opponents, including Auburn, South Carolina, Temple, Detroit, Manhattan, and Boston University.

After he was named honorary captain for his senior season in 1940, Basca was named to a spot on the Pennsylvania all - state team ahead of Penn All-America Frank Reagan, now Villanova's head coach.

Scored 50 Points

Even in his first season, Basca had caused sports-writers' eyebrows to jump by leading the Wildcats in scoring with 50 points. That 1938 team won eight games and was tied by South Carolina.

In his final college game against Auburn, Basca passed for the first touchdown, kicked a 30-yard field goal on a rain-soaked field and contributed several long runs in a Wildcat romp.

Because he passed and didn't score so many touchdowns, Basca didn't get as much national recognition as he could have, Philadelphia sportswriters believed.

He was such a sensation at that Auburn game in Montgomery, that he was invited back for the North-South all star game.

Greatest Headache

Commented the Auburn college newspaper: "He gave Dixie the greatest headache since 'Abe' Lincoln."

A Montgomery businessman put it this way: "He can have the whole damn town piece by piece if he wants it."

Now Villanova recognizes one of the backfield greats from the golden era of Villanova football—the late 1930's—each fall.

Delta Pi Mu Wins Third as Weather Hampers Schedule

After two days of postponements due to inclement weather the intramural football league resumed play. In games played last week: Delta Pi Mu whipped the Cats, 7-2 for their third straight win, the Delurey Devils defeated the Electrons 7-2, the Flyweights shutout the Suicide Nine 14-0, and the Jazz A. C. trounced the Ironheads 6-0. The above games were played on Austin Field.

In the Mendel league, it was the Mainliners 6 and the Beetles 0, the Playboys set back Alpha Co. 9-0, and Caesar's All Stars demoralized the NROTC Band 49-0.

32 Games A Week

Due to the fact that Austin and Mendel fields have been split into two separate football fields, it is now possible to schedule four games a day on each field.

The VILLANOVAN wishes to correct an error in last week's account of the Frosh-Wyoming Seminary football game. The Freshman team's touchdown, reported as having been scored by Lou Picciano, was actually scored by Reggie Powe. Powe, a halfback from Paterson, N.J., scored on a plunge. The freshmen won the game, 7-0.

SPORTS CHATTER

The Wildcats' Press

By JOE SLAVIN

For the past several weeks there has been much discussion over the publicity afforded the Villanova football team by the Philadelphia newspapers. The problem can be resolved into two questions. Is Villanova getting enough coverage of its football games? Is Villanova getting enough feature coverage of its football team?

After reading the Sunday papers students are quick to note that a certain other Philadelphia school is given much more coverage in losing than we are in winning. Several action shots of their game appears on the front page while one picture of Villanova's game appears several pages back. The answer does not reside in the personal preferences of the sports editor.

Away Games

An explanation of the composing of the paper can possibly solve this problem. Thus far this year Villanova has played four night games. Three of these games have been played away from the Philadelphia area. The editors of the papers do not wait until Villanova has finished playing to begin making up their sports pages. Having the results of the afternoon games, the page is set and space alloted for the Villanova game.

Pictures of the local games have been processed and a selection can be made. Any pictures of a Villanova away game must be sent by special wire service at a cost of $25 a picture to the paper. Deadlines must also be considered by the editors. At times the extensiveness of an article must be sacrified to meet a deadline. Perhaps this is the case on the coverage of certain away games.

Feature Material

In the coverage of feature material of the team the problem of meeting a deadline is eliminated. The necessary facts for the story can be obtained several days in advance. Such feature material as stories of the individual players are much sought after by the fans of the team. Knowing the background and personality of a player gives a feeling of personal contact to the followers of the team. The question arises, are there enough followers of Villanova reading the papers?

Even though it is argued that Villanova is a suburban school it is generally conceded that Villanova does represent Philadelphia on the national sports scene. Over one-half of our 3,300 students reside in the Philadelphia area. A good percentage of the team are natives of Philadelphia. Several of the coaches are from the Philadephia or have played their college football there. About 500 Philadelphia newspapers are sold daily on the Villanova campus. Friends and alumni of Villanova number in the thousands around Philadelphia. After the above considerations it seems that there is an audience for articles concerning the Villanova football team.

Room For Improvement?

After reading the Philadelphia papers for the past four weeks it can be conceded that there is something to be desired. The followers of the team can read feature material on the team in the school paper which is published only once a week. Why aren't the followers of the team satisfied and how can this condition be corrected? The team can only win games; the sports editors must decide whether there is an audience large enough to warrant extensive coverage.

Freshmen Gridders Ready For Army And Navy; Improvements Are Evident

Again this year, Villanova's freshman football team is laden with promising varsity hopefuls. Uuder new coach Eddie Michaels, the frosh expect to repeat last year's undefeated campaign.

Fast Guards

Jim Osborne also from LaSalle High School, City Champions of Philadelphia, and Joe Fitzpatrick from Malvern Prep show great promise at the guard positions. Both are very fast and have proved their outstanding abilities equally on offense and defense. A definite varsity prospect is Ed Lemkin devastating lineman from New Haven, Connecticut who plays at center.

All State

Filling out the line at the tackle positions are Ron Vernon from Trenton, N.J. and Pat Brennan from West Pittstown, Pa. All-Stater Dave Bishop from Lower Merion, Pa. consistantly ripped through the line against Wyoming. Bishop also played one year for Fork Union Military Academy. Quarterback Ed McCarthy from Boston, Mass. threw several passes and gained needed yardage with his quarterback sneaks.

Power Backs

Halfbacks Jim McLaughlin from West Catholic in Philadelphia and Frank Ficca of Mt. Carmel Pa. added much to the offensive threat of the freshman squad. McLaughlin is a small halfback who runs low with plenty of power. Ficca is a fast scat back who is very quick to break away on wide sweeps.

Reggie Powe from Paterson, N.J. is another halfback who runs with plenty of power. Last week against Wyoming he scored the only touchdown for Villanova with a plunge from the two yard line, which culminated an 82 yard drive.

Breckenridge Sets Mark:

Villanova Harriers Defeat Ft. Monmouth; Seton Hall, IC4A Features of Schedule

In their initial appearance on Vilanova's cross country course last Wednesday, the Wildcat harriers defeated Fort Momouth 18-38.

Alex Breckenbridge, IC4A Two Mile titleholder again led his team across the finish line. Finishing with a time of 25 minutes and 51 seconds Alex set a record for this course. The best previous time had been turned in by Villanova's Olympic hopeful, Ron Delany.

John Kopil finished close behind Brenkenbridge with a time of 26 minutes and one-tenth seconds. Fort Monmouth's only representative in the first six was Ed Shea who finished third with a time of 28 minutes flat. Shea formerly ran for West Point. George Browne of Villanova finished fourth followed by teammates Al Peterson and Vic DiMaio. Fort Monmouth was well represented with several former collegiate runners.

Meet Seton Hall

Next week the cross country team travels to South Orange, New Jersey, to meet Seton Hall. The Pirates boast of a strong team with several returning veterans. On November 19 the Wildcat Harriers will travel to Randall's Island in New York to engage in the annual IC4A cross country meet. Last year Villanova placed eighth in a field of forty competitors.

The signs wern't prophetic, but this car won third place in motorcade judging. Ike Hargett decorated. Paul Ittland's car, carrying a gallows, was judged first and won him $10.

'Li'l Abner' Bounces With Satire As Dogpatch Takes Over Erlanger

Even Presley Gets Jabbed In Johnny Mercer Lyrics

Some of the sharpest musical comedy satire in years is wrapped up in color-laden, bouncy, "Li'l Abner," now on the Erlanger Theatre stage in Philadelphia.

Al Capp's famed Dogpatch citizens are trying to prove their locality is a necessary part of the earth. The federal government wants to blow the place up in atomic bomb tests—to keep from interfering with the Las Vegas slot machines—and Dogpatch was selected as the most useless spot anywhere.

Yokum's Tonic Saves

To save the place, Li'l Abner steps forth and displays his towering physique, and his Mammy announces it's the result of the tonic brewed from a tree in the Yokum's front yard. The government immediately decides the place may have some value, at that.

Edith Adams, shapely-stemmed wife of TV comedian Ernie Kovacs, makes a more than capable Daisy Mae and new-comer Peter Palmer shows why he got the part as soon as he was discharged from the Army. Talent scouts first discovered Palmer when he sang on Ed Sullivan's show during the summer.

Everybody Gets Jabbed

Norman Panama and Melvin Frank included as targets for satire in their book everybody from the President to Norman Vincent Peale to Ramar of the Jungle. Even Elvis gets a jab. The comedy theme, of course is the government and its red tape-tangled operations.

Michael Kidd handeled the Johnny Mercer composed the lyrics and Gene de Paul the music for the 18 rousing songs, including "If I had My Druthers," "Jubilation T. Cornpone," "Progress is the Root of All Evil," and "Namely You."

Broadway veterans in the cast are Stubby Kaye, remembered most for his "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat" from "Guys and Dolls"; Howard St. John, Charlotte Rae, Tina Louise and Joe E. Marks.

"Li'l Abner" is scheduled to fill the Erlanger stage until Nov. 10. The show will open on Broadway the next week. —

The Padded Cell or . . . "UNETHICAL PROBLEMS"

By HARRY & GERRY

In the response to the overwhelming amount of abuse we received last week as the result of changing our format, we humbly return to publishing some current letters:

Dear Harry and Gerry,

We, the owners of the Kenmore Hotel, are faced with a perplexing dilemma. It has now been ten days since your infamous visit, and there is still a large body of students outside our Hotel waiting for your team to arrive. Due to their wild behavior, they have not only attracted hundreds of applauding spectators, but have been on television for the past two days. We have begged and pleaded with them. We have offered them sumptuous bribes. We have gone on our knees in tears before them, but all we ever get is "Beat Boston." What should we do?

Signed
Two Desperate Men.

Dear Sirs,

Your solution is quite simple. Wait until the dead of night when some of them are sleeping. Now cleverly remove your hotel to the other side of town. If this dosen't work, simply reroute the Charles River, thus flooding the sidewalk on which they are standing. If this dosen't work, invite them all inside, free of charge. Now quietly steal away and dynamite the whole area. If this dosen't work, you must give in. Unlock the team, and let them have their lousy rally.

* * * * * *

Dear Harry and Gerry,

The last thing my friend and I remember about the Boston trip was our conversation with some interesting and colorful seamen on the Boston Waterfront. As you can tell from the post mar kon this letter, we have been shanghaiged on what appears to be a whaler and are now off the coast of Greenland, hunting a white whale. The fanatical captain is also a former B. U. student and is keeping us in chains until he hears who won the game. Please help us!

Signed
Big Herm Melville, Senior C&F

Dear Herm,

First, organize a mutiny by offering the crew NROTC scholarships, thus turning them against the captain. Then tell the captain that he crew is hiding his white whale, thus turning him against the crew. Now jump overboard, as your are hopelessly overcut.

* * * * * *

Dear Harry and Gerry,

My life at Villanova so far has been a horrible nightmare. You see I am in a state of terror over the great number of ferocious squirrels on campus. I shudder whenever one of these little monsters scampers by me. Also I have always been fearful of choo-choo trains and funny looking girls. Then there is my roommate who looks more like a fat little ape each day. I also believe that the maid is against me. At many times I have caught her sawing at my bed braces. I am somewhat embarrassed to include my last fear, yet I feel it is my duty. My body has become very bruised from being hit by all the falling leaves on campus. Maybe you don't realize how far those leaves fall, but I do. They hurt. Please help me.

Rocky Graziano, Freshman Arts.

Dear Rocky,

If you think it is bad now, watch out for those snow flakes. By the way, did you ever think of earning a living with you fists?

Harry & Gerry are actually Harry Waters and Gerry Gwinish, Sophomore Arts students. No, they aren't in a padded cell, and sometimes the editor wonders why not.

times placing the ball 29 yards from pay dirt. With ten seconds remaining in the half the talented second string quarterback tossed to Bob Nellums in the end zone. The Wildcats blocked the point after touchdown attempt and left the field trailing 13-0.

Villanova quickly came back in the second half, as Johnny Bauer intercepted a pass, and Devereaux and John Ferruolo moved the ball to mid-field. Then Magee changed pace and completed two passes to big Gene O'Pella to gain 45 yards on two plays. This placed the ball on the five-yard-stripe. Ferruolo carried to the three. Rollie West then picked up one before he crossed the goal, but an off-side penalty nullified the score, and the Wildcats were penalized to the seven. West again carried, this time to the two. Ferruolo then raced into the endzone. Bauer kicked the extra-point and the Wildcats trailed by six.

Graziose Apears

Early in the third period Florida State's All-American candidate, Lee Corso, led a drive which moved the ball from their 25 to the V.U. eight where he passed to Bob Holt for a touchdown. The Seminoles converted and led 20-7.

Jim Grazione entered the game in the midst of Villanova's 78 yard final advance and passed to Davey Parr and Rick Sapienza which placed the ball on the 22. A pass interference penalty moved the ball to the two. Graz again demonstrated his versatility by running for the touchdown. Bauer's kick was wide of the uprights, and the scoring was over.

AN ALL-VILLANOVA EVENT

What makes this an all-Villanova wedding is that the best man and three out of four ushers are either Villanova grads or now attending V.U. The best man, Larry Tierney, will be remembered as a basketball star here from 1953 to 1956. Ushers are Richard Curley, Peter Curley, and William Curley, all brothers of the bride.

The Reverend Thomas A. Burke, O. S. A. will be on the altar and many Villanovans will be in the ranks celebrating Bob's big day.

After the nuptial Mass at St. Lawrence's Church, the couple will honeymoon at Niagara Falls.

OPEN INVITATION EXTENDED

Bob has invited all Villanovans who wish to attend the wedding.

Some more action can be found at Rosemont on Friday night when the Jest and Gesture Club presents "Career Angel." This is a light comedy in three acts and will begin at 8:30 p.m. in the Rosemont auditorium. Donation is on dollar.

Just the other day the Villanova post office received a letter that had been returned to the sender for the correct address. Scribbled on the outside of the envelope was a note: "Julius: This is the only address I have for my girl. Please see that she gets this letter. Do not send it back to me again. I have already read it three times!"

Basca Award, Rally Opening Events Of Citadel Weekend

Ushered in by a roaring bonfire—the first here in five years, football returns to the campus this weekend, accompanied by judging for the Nick Basca Award.

The Villanova-Citadel game Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Goodreau Stadium will top off a weekend which begins Friday night at 7:30 behind C & F Auditorium.

Biggest Rally Yet

"It'll be the largest rally in Villanova history," exclaimed Pat Nicholson, chairman of the Student Council Spirit Committee, which arranged the pre-game celebration.

The marching band and a fire engine will lead the parade of students as they march around campus to observe residence halls in their Basca dress.

Bonfire Talks

The parade will continue to the rear of the stadium where Spirit Committee members will set the bonfire. Short talks by football players, coaches, alumni and faculty members will feature the rally program, Nicholson said.

Decorations will be judged by a faculty committee to be announced later by Nicholson.

Simpson Hall won the Basca Award the past three years. Sullivan was runner-up last year.

Basca Star Halfback

The award is named for Michael Martin (Nick) Basca, high scoring halfback on teams in the late 1930's who was killed in the South Pacific during World War II.

The plaque will be presented to the winning hall by a special guest, who was not identified by Nicholson.

Spirit Committee members invited every Villanovan to bring wife or girl friend to the rally and then to the Junior Class-sponsored Nick Basca Memorial Dance from 9 till 1 in the Field House.

Prior to the game Saturday, campus fraternities will join in another campus parade. This event was introduced last season before the Villanova-North Carolina State game and was "well-received," according to Nicholson.

Smith, Strayton Will Go to Press Meet in Cleveland

Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith and Managing Editor Bob Strayton will represent the VILLANOVAN at the 32nd annual Associated Collegiate Press Convention tomorrow through Saturday in Cleveland's Hotel Statler.

Smith will serve as discussion leader on a five-editor panel considering editors' problems Saturday morning.

The pair are scheduled to fly from International Airport tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. and are due back in Philadelphia Sunday at 4:45 p.m.

More than 800 newspaper workers are expected at the convention, which will include panels on newspaper editorials and business and short courses in make-up and typography.

The ACP also judges college papers and last April ranked the VILLANOVAN as one of the first eight "All-American" newspapers in the nation.

NEXT VILLANOVAN

Because of mid-term examinations and Thanksgiving recess, the next VILLANOVAN will appear Dec. 5. Deadline for this issue will be Nov. 29.

Marines Present Award To Villanova on Saturday

By FRANK DELANY
Feature Editor

Villanova University will be officially honored by the United States Marine Corps this Saturday when a delegation of marine officers present the Marine Corps Commandant's "Certificate of Appreciation" to the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, university president.

The certificate will be the Marines' tangible expression of appreciation for the outstanding cooperation given the Marines over the past few years in the procurement of candidates for the Platoon Leaders Corps program and Officer Candidate corps program, especially during the week long recruiting drive this fall.

Father Donnellon Recipient

Father Donnellon will be given the award by a delegation of marine officers in his office at 1 p.m. on Saturday, following a luncheon in Dougherty Hall. After the presentation, the officers will be Father Donnellon's guests for the Villanova-Citadel game.

Heading the presentation delegation will be Colonel A. J. Roose, USMC, executive officer of the Villanova NROTC unit in the late forties and now chief-of-staff for Brigadier- General E. Y. Hansen. To complete things, Col. Roosy is an alumnus of the Citadel.

Other Guests

Other members of the delegation will be Capt. C. F. Langley, Colonel J. W. Scott Jr., USMCR, Colonle J. G. Duryea, USMC, who will be guest of honor at the Marine Corps Birthday party Saturday evening, Captain Edward H. Utley, USMC, at Villanova recently in connection with the recruiting drive and Captain J. J. Grace, USMC, marine instructor at Villanova.

Representing the Navy will be Captain Neale R. Curtin, professor of Naval Science and Commander J. L. Burge, executive officer of Villanova's NROTC unit.

Not a Routine Award

On hand with Father Donnellon to receive the award will be the Rev. Edward McKee,

Dance, Game and Jazz Show Will Highlight Jr. Weekend

Class of '58 Initiates New Social Event

The Junior Class will highlight the Basca Award weekend with its first social venture outside of Junior Week when the Field House spotlights are turned on for the Nick Basca Memorial Dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The dance will be given in honor of a Villanova star football player and World War II hero, Nick Basca.

The proceeds of the memorial dance will be donated to the University Seminarian Scholarship Fund which will entitle an Augustinian seminarian to a college education at Villanova.

Tickets $2 a Couple

Tickets are now on sale in Dougherty Hall and may also be purchased from members of the ticket committee at $2 per couple.

Those attending may dress informally so that they may comfortably dance and reminisce to the popular music of the Villanovans and the Commodores.

The theme will be in line with the Nick Basca Award pep rally and a bonfire, which will precede the dance, and also will be concerned with the Villanova-Citadel game on Saturday afternoon.

Rudegair is Chairman

Leo Rudegair is the chairman for the affair while Leo Savio and Ted Bettling will head the chores of the refreshment staff.

Tony Lisa made the arrangements for the bands.

The permanent committees of the Junior Class that are working on the dance as well as other outstanding junior functions are: the decorations committee under Mike Delany, Bill Fallan and Tom Sprenger who have come up with unique trimmings for the dance; tickets supervision under Fred Herr, John Lyons, and John Mullin; and the publicity committee headed by Leo Rogers and Frank Bonner who have directed the advertising campaign.

The juniors will leave Saturday night social affairs open to the various students groups anticipating their own private gatherings.

Jazz Concert on Sunday

In climaxing this weekend the Class of '58 will once again take over the Field House floor with the jazz concert on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p.m.

Highlighting this jam session is the internationally-famed group from Greenwich Village, the Eddie Condon Jazz Band.

Band Members

This combo features such outstanding names as Wild Bill Davison on the cornet, Cutty Cutshall on the trombone,

Organizations Will Select Queen for VU-Iowa St. Tilt

The first queen ever to reign over a Villanova football game will be elected by student vote Nov. 19.

All organizations having a seat on the Student Council have been asked to submit pictures of their candidates by Nov. 15. The first five finishers in the balloting will be present at the Villanova-Iowa State homecoming game Nov. 24.

The queen's identity will remain a secret until she is introduced during half time ceremonies.

Pat Nicholson, chairman of the Student Council Spirit Committee, arranged the contest and said it met with immediate approval from the Administration. It was approved by council last Monday night.

"Pictures of all nominees will be placed on a bulletin board in Dougherty before the voting, and all students may vote as many times as they want," Nicholson explained.

One stipulation that Nicholson made was that girls who place in the first-five category be present at the football game.

The chairman said all entries must be submitted to the Student Activities Office, second floor of Dougherty, by 4 p.m. Nov. 15.

Although this is the first football queen, a young lady has been reigning over Junior Week each year since 1941. The first Junior Queen was the first royalty to preside over a Villanova social event.

Moot Courters Face Dickinson Friday In Philly

The National Moot Court Team of the Law School will meet Dickinson Law School in the Federal Courthouse Building in Philadelphia at 4 p.m. Friday.

Villanova's team is composed of James Matthews of the third year and Thomas Eichman and Anthony Ryan of the second year.

Chosen In Competition

Matthews, Eichman, and Ryan were chosen after the Moot Court Competition in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium on October 10. At that time, Matthews, along with Anthony Bartlini, George Forde, and Burchard Martin represented the petitioners, and Eichman and Ryan, along with Joseph McDonald and Leo O'Drudy, argued on behalf of the respondents.

John Collins of the third year was elected Chief Justice of the Law School Honor Board.

The first year will hold its elections in December.

Some more action can be found at Rosemont on Friday night when the Jest and Gesture Club presents "Career Angel." This is a light comedy in three acts and will begin at 8:30 p.m. in the Rosemont auditorium. Donation is on dollar.

Just the other day the Villanova post office received a letter that had been returned to the sender for the correct address. Scribbled on the outside of the envelope was a note: "Julius: This is the only address I have for my girl. Please see that she gets this letter. Do not send it back to me again. I have already read it three times!"

7 LYNX Editors

the LYNX will hold its weekly meeting on Friday at 3:30 in the publications office in Dougherty Hall.

Weekly meetings of the staff will be held this year and each editor will make a progress report for his department at each meeting.

Several new projects are being contemplated such as a sociological photo essay and a tape recorded conversational profile with a theatrical or literary celebrity.

Junior Rings Here Nov. 15 - Rogers

Ring Chairman Leo Rogers stated that junior class rings will be delivered on Thursday, Nov. 15.

Full payment must be made upon reception of the ring in the Publications Office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall between 9:30 and 6 p.m. on that date.

Rogers emphasized that payment may be made in cash, check, or money order (made out to Dieges and Clust) for the balance on the receipt which was mailed to each ring recipient during the summer. No checks, government or otherwise, will be cashed.

Approximately 400 rings will be delivered at this time by Mr. George A. Packer, representative of Dieges and Clust.

There are 180 in the C and F division, 120 in Arts and Science, and 100 in Engineering. In addition to this, over 75 rings have been ordered this fall.

Basca Award, Rally Opening Events Of Citadel Weekend

Ushered in by a roaring bonfire—the first here in five years, football returns to the campus this weekend, accompanied by judging for the Nick Basca Award.

The Villanova-Citadel game Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Goodreau Stadium will top off a weekend which begins Friday night at 7:30 behind C & F Auditorium.

Biggest Rally Yet

"It'll be the largest rally in Villanova history," exclaimed Pat Nicholson, chairman of the Student Council Spirit Committee, which arranged the pre-game celebration.

The marching band and a fire engine will lead the parade of students as they march around campus to observe residence halls in their Basca dress.

Bonfire Talks

The parade will continue to the rear of the stadium where Spirit Committee members will set the bonfire. Short talks by football players, coaches, alumni and faculty members will feature the rally program, Nicholson said.

Decorations will be judged by a faculty committee to be announced later by Nicholson.

Simpson Hall won the Basca Award the past three years. Sullivan was runner-up last year.

Basca Star Halfback

The award is named for Michael Martin (Nick) Basca, high scoring halfback on teams in the late 1930's who was killed in the South Pacific during World War II.

The plaque will be presented to the winning hall by a special guest, who was not identified by Nicholson.

Spirit Committee members invited every Villanovan to bring wife or girl friend to the rally and then to the Junior Class-sponsored Nick Basca Memorial Dance from 9 till 1 in the Field House.

Prior to the game Saturday, campus fraternities will join in another campus parade. This event was introduced last season before the Villanova-North Carolina State game and was "well-received," according to Nicholson.

Smith, Strayton Will Go to Press Meet in Cleveland

Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith and Managing Editor Bob Strayton will represent the VILLANOVAN at the 32nd annual Associated Collegiate Press Convention tomorrow through Saturday in Cleveland's Hotel Statler.

Smith will serve as discussion leader on a five-editor panel considering editors' problems Saturday morning.

The pair are scheduled to fly from International Airport tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. and are due back in Philadelphia Sunday at 4:45 p.m.

More than 800 newspaper workers are expected at the convention, which will include panels on newspaper editorials and business and short courses in make-up and typography.

The ACP also judges college papers and last April ranked the VILLANOVAN as one of the first eight "All-American" newspapers in the nation.

NEXT VILLANOVAN

Because of mid-term examinations and Thanksgiving recess, the next VILLANOVAN will appear Dec. 5. Deadline for this issue will be Nov. 29.

Dance, Game and Jazz Show Will Highlight Jr. Weekend

Class of '58 Initiates New Social Event

The Junior Class will highlight the Basca Award weekend with its first social venture outside of Junior Week when the Field House spotlights are turned on for the Nick Basca Memorial Dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The dance will be given in honor of a Villanova star football player and World War II hero, Nick Basca.

The proceeds of the memorial dance will be donated to the University Seminarian Scholarship Fund which will entitle an Augustinian seminarian to a college education at Villanova.

Tickets $2 a Couple

Tickets are now on sale in Dougherty Hall and may also be purchased from members of the ticket committee at $2 per couple.

Those attending may dress informally so that they may comfortably dance and reminisce to the popular music of the Villanovans and the Commodores.

The theme will be in line with the Nick Basca Award pep rally and a bonfire, which will precede the dance, and also will be concerned with the Villanova-Citadel game on Saturday afternoon.

Rudegair is Chairman

Leo Rudegair is the chairman for the affair while Leo Savio and Ted Bettling will head the chores of the refreshment staff.

Tony Lisa made the arrangements for the bands.

The permanent committees of the Junior Class that are working on the dance as well as other outstanding junior functions are: the decorations committee under Mike Delany, Bill Fallan and Tom Sprenger who have come up with unique trimmings for the dance; tickets supervision under Fred Herr, John Lyons, and John Mullin; and the publicity committee headed by Leo Rogers and Frank Bonner who have directed the advertising campaign.

The juniors will leave Saturday night social affairs open to the various students groups anticipating their own private gatherings.

Jazz Concert on Sunday

In climaxing this weekend the Class of '58 will once again take over the Field House floor with the jazz concert on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p.m.

Highlighting this jam session is the internationally-famed group from Greenwich Village, the Eddie Condon Jazz Band.

Marines Present Award To Villanova on Saturday

By FRANK DELANY
Feature Editor

Villanova University will be officially honored by the United States Marine Corps this Saturday when a delegation of marine officers present the Marine Corps Commandant's "Certificate of Appreciation" to the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, university president.

The certificate will be the Marines' tangible expression of appreciation for the outstanding cooperation given the Marines over the past few years in the procurement of candidates for the Platoon Leaders Corps program and Officer Candidate corps program, especially during the week long recruiting drive this fall.

Father Donnellon Recipient

Father Donnellon will be given the award by a delegation of marine officers in his office at 1 p.m. on Saturday, following a luncheon in Dougherty Hall. After the presentation, the officers will be Father Donnellon's guests for the Villanova-Citadel game.

Heading the presentation delegation will be Colonel A. J. Roose, USMC, executive officer of the Villanova NROTC unit in the late forties and now chief-of-staff for Brigadier-General E. Y. Hansen. To complete things, Col. Roosy is an alumnus of the Citadel.

Other Guests

Other members of the delegation will be Capt. C. F. Langley, Colonel J. W. Scott Jr., USMCR, Colonle J. G. Duryea, USMC, who will be guest of honor at the Marine Corps Birthday party Saturday evening, Captain Edward H. Utley, USMC, at Villanova recently in connection with the recruiting drive and Captain J. J. Grace, USMC, marine instructor at Villanova.

Representing the Navy will be Captain Neale R. Curtin, professor of Naval Science and Commander J. L. Burge, executive officer of Villanova's NROTC unit.

Not a Routine Award

On hand with Father Donnellon to receive the award will be the Rev. Edward McKee,

Organizations Will Select Queen for VU-Iowa St. Tilt

The first queen ever to reign over a Villanova football game will be elected by student vote Nov. 19.

All organizations having a seat on the Student Council have been asked to submit pictures of their candidates by Nov. 15. The first five finishers in the balloting will be present at the Villanova-Iowa State homecoming game Nov. 24.

The queen's identity will remain a secret until she is introduced during half time ceremonies.

Pat Nicholson, chairman of the Student Council Spirit Committee, arranged the contest and said it met with immediate approval from the Administration. It was approved by council last Monday night.

"Pictures of all nominees will be placed on a bulletin board in Dougherty before the voting, and all students may vote as many times as they want," Nicholson explained.

One stipulation that Nicholson made was that girls who place in the first-five category be present at the football game.

The chairman said all entries must be submitted to the Student Activities Office, second floor of Dougherty, by 4 p.m. Nov. 15.

Although this is the first football queen, a young lady has been reigning over Junior Week each year since 1941. The first Junior Queen was the first royalty to preside over a Villanova social event.

Moot Courters Face Dickinson Friday In Philly

The National Moot Court Team of the Law School will meet Dickinson Law School in the Federal Courthouse Building in Philadelphia at 4 p.m. Friday.

Villanova's team is composed of James Matthews of the third year and Thomas Eichman and Anthony Ryan of the second year.

Chosen In Competition

Matthews, Eichman, and Ryan were chosen after the Moot Court Competition in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium on October 10. At that time, Matthews, along with Anthony Bartlini, George Forde, and Burchard Martin represented the petitioners, and Eichman and Ryan, along with Joseph McDonald and Leo O'Drudy, argued on behalf of the respondents.

John Collins of the third year was elected Chief Justice of the Law School Honor Board.

The first year will hold its elections in December.

A Clean-up Needed

Because all recommendations made by the Student Council must be considered by some type of Administration committee, Council has not been able to follow through on any of the proposals made during three meetings this semester.

Why? Because the re-organization of a faculty committee has taken more than a little work, and several major revisions.

The newest plan would have all suggestions pass through Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President of Student Affairs. He would then decide whether the matter should be turned down, or turned over to one of the other vice-presidents, or to one of their subordinates.

This new plan was established after the Student Council several weeks ago approved an Administration-inspired dissolution of the President's Committee For Students.

The President's Committee had only been in operation since the middle of last year when it was suggested by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., university president. Since his inauguration to the presidency in January 1954, Father Donnellon had repeatddly stated that he wanted to feel closer to the students.

Council agreed with Father Donnellon that his committee would help improve this relationship. One of the major Council recommendations approved by Father Donnellon under the President's Committee set-up were the unlimited permissions for seniors on Friday and Saturday and the nights before school holidays.

The President's Committee, in turn, had followe dthe Student - Faculty Committee which had been established during the 1951-5p academic year. Council suggestions were considered, and approve dor turned down, by a group of Administration officials meeting with selected Councilmen.

It is too early to evaluate the efficiency of this new system. The Student Council committee was scheduled to meet with Father Kemme some time this week, when all suggestions made by Council so far were expected to be considered.

We hope the group will be able to meet immediately, because the Student Council's incentive for proposing recommendations will be impaired seriously if the back-log of old business is not cleared off the legislative calendar.

All In Fun

The editors of the VILLANOVAN wish to assure their readers that all "Freddie the Frosh" features and similar satires are published entirely in jest and are meant solely to provide a little humor for the paper's readers.

Any aspersions to Rosemont or any other of our friendly and quite welcomed neighboring girls' colleges are not meant to be digs at the girls themselves as some of our neighboring Rosies have apparently concluded.

We are sure that upon examination of almost any male college publication with female institutions nearby one can quite easily uncover many good-natured and at times very humorous jibes at said institutions.

Rosemont and Villanova have been socially inseparable for as long as anyone around here can remember and the Rosies have been the target of Villanova humorisms for just as long. Villanova students and most Rosemont girls take them as part of the fun connected with the fine relationship between the two institutions.

We hope that in the future any satire printed in the VILLANOVAN will not be taken as a personal insult by any of our neighboring womens' colleges.

We feel that the bond built up between the Rosies and the V.U. men is too strong to be endangered by the opinions of a few.

A Little Respect

We would like to add to those pleas of Captain Neale R. Curtin, Professor of Naval Science and Midshipman Battalion Commander Leo Kane, Villanova NROTC, our own that the entire Villanova student body show a little more respect for the National Anthem when it is played during NROTC drill on Tuesday afternoons.

The air of disrespect permeating a good part of the student body in regard to the Star Spangled Banner is something that no trace of should be found on any campus in the United States.

It is our hope that in the future the student body will take a few fleeting moments of their time and devote it to standing at attention if they are in the vicinity of the drill field when the National Anthem is played on Tuesdays.

This is certainly a small sacrifice. We are sure you won't miss those extra two minutes in the Pie Shoppe.

Wastebasket Bound

Despite all our reminders that letters to the newspaper must be signed, one came in last week without a signature.

The writer was taking exception to a remark in one of the VILLANOVAN'S columns in the Oct. 17 edition. We would have printed his letter. But he only signed it: "A loyal Villanovan and member of the Dean's List of C & F."

So if you want to take exception to something you read in this paper, let us hear from you. But sign your name. Otherwise, your note will wind up where the "loyal" one's did—in the waste basket.

Grads Only

Elsewhere in this issue, undergraduate students are warned that they will not be admitted to the Alumni's home-coming party at the Haverford Court Hotel following the Iowa State game Nov. 24.

This game was set aside as homecoming months ago, and the alumni apparently feel that the students will have a chance to celebrate a victory over the Citadel this weekend. They want their own affair to be a truly graduate get-together.

The alumni are following other schools in forbidding undergraduates to attend their functions.

Students will save themselves embarrassment at the door by staying away.

Political Round-up:

Reality Seen Cure For Foreign Policy

By GENE DONOHUE

At last the election is over and once again the American people are called upon to forget their partisan feelings and support the party in office. This is a characteristic of elections that is indigenous only to the United States and is the basis of our democratic society. But this does not mean that we must remain silent on faults that have been committed by the party in office. On the contrary, it is the duty of American citizens everywhere to offer constructive criticism as an aid to better government.

For the past few years, the foreign policy of the United States has been acceptable, but far from perfect. On one hand, we have been led up to the brink of war in the instance of defending Formosa from the Chinese Communists, and on the other hand we have prevented other nations from going to war in the recent Suez dispute. But all in all our foreign policy has been lacking in one essential element . . . . reality!

Awareness of Public Opinion

By reality is meant an awareness of public opinion not only throughout the uncommitted neutral countries we are trying to influence, but awareness of the public opinion that is dominant in our allied countries. It seems that up until now the United States has considered itself above all the other free nations of the world to the extent that we are placing too much emphasis on our status as a super-power.

DONOHUE

Perhaps the best example of this was the way in which we precipitated the now deadlocked Suez issue. Up until the day that Secretary Dulles announced that the United States would no longer support the Aswan High Dam project which is vital to the existence of any standard of living in Egypt, Colonel Nasser had no inclination whatever that he was about to have the rug pulled out from under him. When the announcement was made he was caught completely unprepared and blindly struck back the best way he thought possible. He nationalized the Suez Canal.

A Lack of Understanding

Burning the pride of a young nation that was vying for the leadership of the Arab states definitely showed a lack of understanding of the nationalistic spirit that is alive in North Africa and the Middle East today. This is what is meant by a lack of reality in foreign policy.

There is a great dispute among political scientists and diplomats in general as to whether or not aid should have been given to Nasser on the damn. But there is no dispute whatever on the fact that this refusal was made in an unfortunate manner. The proper thing to do would have been to give Nasser a hint of what was to come and possibly the entire situation might have been avoided.

A Long Range View

But this issue is dead since the action has been taken and nothing can be done about it. It is not the purpose of this columnist to play Sunday morning quarterback, but the point that should be made is that we should definitely give our foreign policy more of a long range view. Before we take action either for or against another country, unless it is an emergency that requires immediate action, we should consider not only the effects it will have at first, but also the effects it will have on our relations with other nations in the future. The United States may easily be a super-power now, but it cannot fight the world; it needs friends the same as any other nation, and no nation can have friends if it is not considerate.

Peering . . . .

With NORM PEER

. . . At all the student riots going on all over the world. All we need is a cause, a few tanks and we can form the Villanova Riotinfi Group. Getting a faculty moderator is the only problem.

. . . At all the quarterly tests that sneak up on us amid rallies, games and parties. Well-intentioned students hav ebeen falling asleep nightly all week in Belle Air and C & F, trying to stop th einevitable.

PEER

. . . At all the interest taken in the election. It seems that everyone a ward heeler or shrewd political analyst of some sort. If Krajewski could only have take nthe South he might have had it, said one keen observer.

. . . At the return of Eddie Condon and his merrymen this weekend. Why couldn't we all go up to his place in New York instead of bringing Eddie down here? Sunday is a much nicer day in his state.

. . . At the display being built by Sullivan Hall for the Basca Award. And everyone thought all that work was going to be a new dorm across the way. It cost a bit, but it shuld really be impressive if they only get it finished in time.

. . . At all the rain and mud which seems to be a tradition here. At this rate, the intramural football season will run into the summer.

Dr. Fred Khouri Discusses Middle East Crisis

Radical Western Action Weakens The UN and The Hope for A Future Peace

by Lawrence M. O'Rourke

Recent world events have spotlighted the Middle East. For an expert analysis of the situation, the VILLANOVAN went to Dr. John Fred Khouri, Associate Professor of History and Political Science.

Foremost Expert

Dr. Khouri, recognized as one of the foremost Middle Eastern experts, has been teaching at Villanova since 1951. He received his Ph.D. in 1953 from Columbia University. Dr. Khouri belongs to many organizations, including the Middle Eastern Institute and the Society of International Law.

He has lectured often for the World Affairs Council and at many civic association, as well as for various Villanova socities, on the Middle East.

Dr. Khouri has done considerable research in Middle Eastern affairs since the end of Wor'd War II and has read all UN documents and records on Middle Eastern affairs, particulary with the Arab-Israeli, Suez Canal and French North Africa problems.

Recent Developments

We ask Dr. Khouri to discuss recent developments.

"The last several days represent a black period in post World War II history, a tragic period, the consequences of which will only become clearer with time.

"What Israel, Great Britain and France have done is to greatly weaken the only hope for the future of mankind, the UN. They have taken the law into their own hands, doing exactly what they have accused the USSR of doing in the past. Far more important than Eygpt or the Canal is the future of mankind, and the fate of the UN, for destruction of it destroys law and order and world peace."

Peaceful Means A Must

If so-called peaceful and law abiding Western nations put themselves above the UN—then on what moral basis can we face the rest of the world? The UN charter states that all members must use peaceful means to settle disputes and must not resort to war or the threat of war in foreign relations. No matter what the provocations, under no circumstances do they have the legal or moral right to go to war.

"Another tragic result of the aggression has to do with our basic struggle with the Soviet Union. The action has seriously weakened the moral position of the West in the vast uncommitted areas of the world where a decisive struggle is now going on between the East and the West."

Dr. Khouri
ICG Moderator

Attacked Wrong Country

Britain and France say that they are fighting to end the conflict between Israel and Egypt and to protect shipping in the Canal. "This is not true." If these were the real reasons, they should not have vetoed the Security Council resolution ordering Israel to withdraw behind the armistic line and threatening economic action. They should have attacked Israel, the aggressor, and not Eygpt, the victim.

"Nasser's seizure of the Canal was politically and economically unwise, but not contrary to any UN law or any treaty."

No Moral Right

UN officials and the UN General Assembly have made it clear that Britain, France and Israel had no legal or moral right for their aggression, under any circumstances. Israel is the only nation condemned by the UN for serious breaches in the armistice lines. She has vetoed more UN resolutions than the Arabs. What is ignored is that provocations existed on both sides.

Britain and France are trying to get at Nasser. Invading Egypt will not solve their basic problem—it will only intensify the hatred of Arabs and other peoples everywhere, said Khouri.

Dr. Khouri has a solution for the problem. It is a longe range one which must be observed by all nations.

"The prestige of the United Nations must be restored. Aggression must not be allowed to succeed from any source. British and French troops must be removed and Israel restored to its original boundaries. The Suez Canal problem must be dealt with peacefully through the UN.

Compromise Needed

"It is not true that Israel wants peace and the Arabs do not. Israel has attempted to bypass the UN in every way to settle the dispute. She could have had a settlement if she was seriously willing to compromise with the UN resolutions and to negotiate through UN auspices."

It is hoped that Britain and France can be withdrawn from the Middle East without injuring the Western Alliance. The Western peoples must quickly realize that nationalism is on the march and that nothing can stop it in the long run, continued Dr. Khouri.

"The question of foreign policy must be removed from the field of partisan politics."

Hope For Civilization

"It is the height of statesmanship in dealing with problems to make them smaller. It is the height of folly to make the problems bigger and more varied.

German Contributor Invites Comparison of Universities

The life of an average Villanovan is all-too familiar to most of us. We take for granted our system of dorms, classes, parties, campus life, etc. But how does the other half live? Is our system better, worst or just plain average compared to universities in the rest of the world?

One who could best answer these questions is a student from a foreign university, preferably a native of the country whose university he attends.

Average Hamburger

We therefore present the German counterpart of the average Villanovan, barring the language barrier. Klaus-Jurgen Popp is a nineteen-year-old citizen of Hamburg, Germany who attends the University of Hamburg where he studies Modern History, German Literature, English Literature and Political Science.

KLAUS-JURGEN POPP

There is one all important difference between German and American university life which is probably lying in the different way of life in both countries: at a German university you will find practically no companionship among the students and almost no common life.

The students are living, eating and working separately. They only meet for two or three hours during the lectures.

Admires American Colleges

I know the American college-life only from books and movies (for instance "Daddy Longlegs") but I think it is extremely good to live and work together and to go home only during the vacations.

One is allowed to attend a university in Germany if one has gone to the Elementary school for four years and to the Secondary school for nine years, thirteen years in all. The last year at the Secondary school corresponds to the first year at an American college.

Few Enter College

Before entering the university, you have to pass an examination after the thirteenth year, the so-called "Abitur." But previous to this there is a great selection. On an average, only thirty percent of the pupils who entered Secondary school succeed in passing this exam. About ninety percent of German youth is going to the Elementary school until the ninth school year. These are the future workers etc.

How does a German University look? I'll describe the University of Hamburg, for I am studying there, but all other universities (there are about twenty in Western Germany) are similiar. With 9,078 students (6,685 male, 2,393 female and 372 from foreign countries) Hamburg has, next to Munich, the biggest university of Western Germany.

Arts School is Largest

It is divided into six faculties. These are: faculty of divinity, faculty of law, faculty of medicine, faculty of arts (called f. of philosophy in Germany), faculty of mathematics and natural sciences and faculty of economics and social sciences. The faculty of arts is comprehending the languages, literature, history, politics, and anyone who will be a teacher in future times is a member of it. Therefore it is the biggest one.

Usually, one is studying only within one faculty, which is almost a university in itself. Only he, who hasn't still a certain aim for his future life or he, who will have a so-called free profession (journalism or such) can afford to study in all the faculties that interest him and to gain in this way a great intellectual specialists in their subjects.

Economy vs. Free Speech

A University education is very expensive in Germany: in Eastern Germany, about Ninety percent of the students have no financial worries but for that they may not open their mouths.

Of course there are a lot of clubs and associations at German universities. The three big political parties have university groups (the Christian, Social and Free Democrats). About fifty other are doing sports or have

FOOTBALL POLL:

Oklahoma or Slippery Rock Home or Away; You Tell Us

By BOB STRAYTON
Managing Editor

One of the most controversial and popular topics of discussion on any college campus is the school's football schedule. Football fans are perennially interested, often disgruntled, and rarely happy about the teams which their favorite school plays.

Some feel a school should go all-out big-time, and schedule the nation's best teams. Others dislike big-time football, and prefer traditional rivalries in small ivy-covered stadiums. Still other fans prefer a mixture of big and small schools. Feelings run strong, particularly among alumni and students, about scheduling too many games away from home.

Arguments In Vain

Football fans, however, get little chance to make any decision in selection of opponents. The many arguments aired over cups

Talks to Continue

From Maritain To Vogeler, Villanova Forum Prospers

By MIKE MANCUSO

Mr. Charles Bruderle, chairman of the committee for the Villanova University Forum, has announced that once again the forum will appear on campus.

The committee will meet next week to decide on the activities of this year's forum.

Back in 1949, when Villanova College was beginning to show signs of growing into a great American university, the school gave birth to the Villanova Forum.

The main purpose of the Forum was to provide the students, faculty, and friends of the college, lectures on various topics by prominent persons in the news-making world of the day. This purpose has lived with the Forum from its humble beginning

MR. BRUDERLE
The Forum Goes On

Four Year Activity

The Villanova Forum has only been active four years since its inauguration, as it was interrupted in 1953, and only resumed last year.

Before this interruption, speakers and lecturers from all walks of life such as Jacques Maritain, eminent scholastic philosopher, and Rev. John Courtney Murray, S.J., and Dr. Brendan Brown, Dean of the School of Law of Catholic University received warm applause from the Forum's audiences.

Dr. Brown's speech was accepted with such interest by the public that it was later reprinted in the professional lecture magazine, "Vital Speeches."

At the beginning of the Fall term of 1955, Father President ordered that the Villanova Forum be once again activated and it was then that a three man committee went to work to attain for Villanova a permanent forum that would be noticed in all college forum circles. This will take time but with the support of the student body, faculty, and administration, as shown last year, it will be attained.

Mr Bruderle Heads Committee

Heading this committee as chairman is Mr. Charles Bruderle, a member of Villanova's faculty in the history department. Mr. Bruderle, is a determined man who feels that the forum's reactivation last year was justified by the overwhelming interests of the student body and the faculty.

The other two members of the new committee are Mr. O'Toole of the Law School and Dr. Powers, Dean of the Evening Division who also played important parts in the revitalization of the forum. It is to these three men that most of the praise for the forum's success should go.

How would the Villanova University Forum be a success without prominent speakers?

The committee knows of the importance the speaker is for a successful forum and has therefore shown its good choice last year with the excellent lecturers it has obtained.

Orators Well Received

Among the well received orators who spoke at the forum last year are Mr. Robert Vogeler and Mr. Mortimer Adler. Both of these men showed great interest in their topics and expressed these interests to the audience's satisfaction.

Enthusiasm and interest was so great for Mr. Vogeler's speech that there was a standing audience in the Commerce & Auditorium before the lecture even began. Mr. Vogeler, who was a prisoner of the Communists provided the audience with a talk that explained his hardships behind the Iron Curtain.

This was one of the best lectures ever given at any of the V.U. Forum's and it is this type of talk that may be expected in this year's series of the ever-expanding forum.

Tape Recording Made

Following Mr. Alder's talk a tape recording, made during his speech, was played back a few days later at an informal gathering in the Library.

This idea, which was initiated by the Committee for the purpose of providing various advantages for debate and discussion following the talks, proved to give those interested in the various talks of the forum, a chance to express their views openly to all at the meeting.

This is the brief background of one of the expanding operations of Villanova's faculty which will in time grow into a nationally recognized college function.

Collegiate Whirl

THE NEED FOR STRONGER STATES

(ACP) - The government of America's individual states must be strengthened in both legislative and executive branches if they are to continue as strong and vital parts of the federal system. That is one of the conclusions drawn in a report on Southern state governments published this week by Tulane University. The report recommends longer gubernational terms, reapportionment of legislatures, and removel of what it calls "outmoded constitutional restrictions."

On the touchy problem of state government and their relationship to race relations, the report had this to say: "Governments in the South have dealt with difficult problems before and undoubtedly have the ability to alleviate the present tensions. The Southern Assembly (which conducted the survey) believes that state governments in the south should undertake, by all means at their disposal, to prevent violence and maintain public order."

The survey of Southern governments was sponsored jointly by Tulane University and the American Assembly of Columbia University.

* * * * * *

THE LIGHTER SIDE

(ACP) - Bill Moore gave this description of a psychology professor in his column in the Ohio State Lantern. He's a man who enters a classroom and says "Good morning, students. You're fine, how am I?"

ANTIOCH CENSURED

(ACP) - At its recent convention in Los Angeles, the American Legion again censured Antioch College for "permitting subversive programs and activities to function on campus." A similar resolution of censure was passed by the Legion in 1954.

This time, however, one of the original supporters of censure action, Ohio State representatives Lowell Fess, objected to the Legion action. He said the Legion was talking about things that took place three or four years ago and that aren't taking place now. Fess, who helped bring about the 1954 censure said "The atmosphere at Antioch has cleared."

Antioch President Samuel B. Gould said this about the latest censure action: "I do wonder a little, when our neighbors know so well what we are, if it is necessary to tell them again that these charges are untrue. Let me say as strongly as I know how, that there are no subversive activities at Antioch." In an off-the-cuff comment, President Gould dismissed the Legion action with the words "It's the same old thing."

HERE COME THE GIRLS

(ACP) - What was once a strictly male fortress has collapsed at the University of Texas. Six new cadettes (women, that is) have been admitted to the school's Air Force ROTC training program. They'll take their place beside the rest of the corps during flag-raising ceremonies when Texas plays SMU on November 3rd. The six girls look on themselves as pioneers. The University of Texas is the only one in the state which has installed AFROTC training for women and one of ten schools in the nation.

* * * * * *

(ACP) - A somewhat different situation existed recently at Louisiana State University. You can't say no to Uncle Sam, so the school's military department was rather nonplussed when a prospective freshman turned down its offer to compulsory military training. The department sent an information form, explaining that two years of basic military training are required at LSU of all physicially-fit male students up to the age of 23. In reply, the prospective freshman wrote: "Thank you for your generous offer to let me join the ROTC at LSU. I assure you that I would deem it the greatest honor ever to come to me. After giving the matter deep consideration, I have decided it would be best if I declined your offer."

The freshman refused the offer "because of the advantage it would give me over the girls on campus."

The red-faced military department plans no action in the case because he turned out to be a she.

* * * * * *

NO CHANGE IN CUT SYSTEM

(ACP) - No change will be made in the present cut system at Ohio University. After discussing proposed alterations, the Men's Union Governing Board has decided against an unlimited cut system for the school. The President of the Board, Joe Phillips, said the main drawback against unlimited cutting at Ohio University is that the school is not on a plane with Ivy or eastern schools that offer such a system. Said Phillips: "We're not a highly selected university like they are and, therefore, the plan would not work."

Phillips said that individual professors at Ohio University have their "own quirks" about cutting classes. Some permit no cuts, some grant three, and others allow an unlimited amount. Currently, the general practice is to permit three cuts during the semester.

* * * * * *

A CHANGE IS NEEDED

(ACP) - Charles Thomas, who writes in the Richmond Professional Institute's Proscript, dosen't like some of the theme assignments given to freshman English students. He rebels against the idea of themes entitled HOW I SPENT MY SUMMER VACATION or AN INTERESTING PLACE I VISITED ON MY SUMMER VACATION or MY HAPPIEST DAY THIS SUMMER. Thomas has given the problem some thought and come up with some ideas. He suggests titles like HOW TO SPONGE OFF YOUR PARENTS FOR A SUMMER, HOW I RAMMED MY MOTORCYCLE THROUGH A POLICE ROADBLOCK and, finally, THAT BIG ALL-NIGHT BEACH PARTY. I think you'll agree they'd produce some very interesting reading.

WITH THE EDITOR

They Want Oatmeal Again

The stomach-warming cereal that every youngster gets to munch on at one time or another in their growing years seems to be missed around here.

A couple of senior electrical engineer roommates, John Kiernan and Larry Marhoefer, have intiated a "Bring back the oatmeal to the chow hall " movement.

Resident students haven't had oatmeal for breakfast in two years, claim the pair, and they think there are enough oatmeal eaters on campus to make its return worthwhile.

So if you miss the venerated cereal, just mention it to Elwood ext time you pass along the ow line.

HE WAS MISSED

VILLANOVAN cartoonist Phil Seefried found out what it s like to be missed. His page two cartoon in last week's issue was his first humor bit of the new semester.

Phil says he was so tied up with the texts he didn't have time to play around with his long-beaked characters in the patched khakis. He got so many requests for another look at Freddie and Company that he picked up his pen again.

Talk about popular demand.

LONG DISTANCE PRESS

If the VILLANOVAN's editors thought their printer in Philly was far away, they changed their mind on hearing about the set-up followed by the Old Gold and Black, weekly at Wake Forest College, Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Baptist school moved into its new ultra-modern campus in June, but couldn't find a printer around to measure up to their former publisher.

So each week they have to travel almost 50 miles to turn out the paper.

A DETERMINED YOUNGSTER

The nine-year-old mentioned in last week's column—the one who decided he wanted to come here after glimpsing the campus on a ride down the Pike—is really after his daddy now.

He's talked his parents into bringing him to the Villanova-Citadel game this Saturday. With a little urging, he'd probably enroll right now.

'MIKADO' ON THE WAY?

Just about every day somebody asks what name will be placed on the dorm rising in front of Sullivan.

The sharpest answer we've heard yet came from a senior. "Naturally they'll name it Gilbert."

OLD GLASSES NEEDED

The country's most unusual charity—one that doesn't even want money—has announced its 1956-57 goal. It wants 350,000 pairs of old eyeglasses.

Specs collected by New Eyes for the Needy, Inc., will be used to defray the cost of new, individually - fitted, prescription lenses for thousands who can't afford them.

The non-profit, non-sectarian organization salvages precious metals in frames of old glasses, melts down the metal and sells the proceeds to pay for the new glasses.

Takes about 40 old pairs to buy a single new pair.

Congratulations are in order after the ICG's political panel last Tuesday. Pictured from left to right are Dr. Fred Khouri, assistant professor of political science at Villanova; Attorney Daniel Quinlan, a state deputy Attorney General and the Democratic speaker; Attorney Elkins Wetherill, county chairman of Montgomery County and the Republican speaker; and ICG chairman Bill Lesko.

Fall Middie Dance Set For Next Saturday at Valley Forge Hotel in Norristown

Villanova's answer to Annapolis, the NROTC middies, will revel at their annual fall dance next Saturday at the Valley Forge Hotel in Norristown.

The dance is informal and closed to midshipmen and their dates. Charlie Reich and his band will provide the hot and sweet music. Theme of the dance will be "Welcome to the Freshmen."

Dance co-chairmen Pat Gallagher and Dick Green are making all the necessary last minute arrangements.

Three Hundred Couples

Three hundred couples are expected to fill the hotel's spacious ballroom and four lounges.

Midshipmen with problems as to the whereabuots of the Valley Forge Hotel can find ample directions on the main bulletin board in Commodore John Barry Hall.

There will be ample parking space in the vicinity of the hotel to accommodate those middies who will be travelling by auto.

Recreation Responsible

The recreation committee of the unit is responsible for the planning of this and other NROTC social events. The expense is taken care of by a recreation fee of three dollars fifty cents collected from each midshipman each semester.

Uniform for the affair is dress blue bravo.

Astronomy Society Visits Planetarium, Franklin Institute

The Villanova Astronomy Club toured the Franklin Institute and visited the Fels Planetarium last Wednesday.

Although this was the first field trip of the 1956-57 school year, the society, under the capable leadership of Father Jenkins, moderator and Frank Simon, president, is a rapidly growing one.

After spending considerable time examining the many exhibits in the Institute and observing the various demonstrations, the society filed into the large Planetary Hall. Here they were treated to a study of stellar matter in "The Expanding Universe."

Used Telescope

At the conclusion of the show the group retired to the roof, where they made fine use of the two giant telescopes, examining the universe and gaining a greater appreciation of the stellar constellations.

Tonight the society meets again in the West lounge of Dougherty Hall. The time is 7:15. All interested in becoming stargazers are urged to attend.

AIEE-IRE Speaker To Fly From Minn.

Mr. Thomas Pierce of Hughes Aviation Corporation will fly in from Duluth, Minn., next Tuesday to address Villanova's AIEE-IRE, according to President Harry Fatkin.

He will discuss "fire control," the system employed in most guided missiles and the nerve center which "giudes" the missile to its target.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p. m. in 206 C & F.

A student speaker, Senior James Hirsch, described his summer job experiences with the General Electric Company during a regular meeting last night.

A color motion picture, "Principles of Electricity," was shown. It gave a thorough introduction to electrical engineering in animated form.

New Publication Lists Eighty Career Fields

The U.S. Civil Service Commission has just published "Federal Careers—a Directory for College Students." This publication describes over 80 different types of positions in government service for which college students might qualify. It is easy to read, illustrated, and emphasizes career opportunities—not just jobs.

Thirty-nine federal agencies assisted the Civil Service Commission in its development. Complete information is given concerning the federal government as an employer. The Directory was designed to assist the college placement officer and faculty members in vocational guidance counselling but will be of equal interest to the student at any academic level.

Distribution has been made to all universities, colleges, and professional schools in the United States and possessions. Reference copies have been distributed to the Villanova Library and the Placement Office.

Jr. Rings Nov. 15; Rogers Cites Full Balance Required

Pagliacci Sings Tomorrow, Norma Next Week for OC

Tomorrow night at 7:45 "I Pagliacci" will be presented by the Opera Classic Club in Dougherty Hall.

This opera of Ruggiere Leoncavello will be sung in Italian by the chorus of the Academy of St. Cecilia in Rome.

Mario Del Mnnaco will portray Canio, while Clara Petrella, Aldo Protti, and Afro Poli will sing the parts of Nedda, Silvio, Tonio.

"Norma" Next Week

Three trips to Philadelphia are planned.

Tickets may be acquired from O-C president Richard Salisbury for tonight's concert at the Academy of Music, as well as the Academy's presentations of "Norma" on Nov. 27 and "Medea on Nov. 29.

Fr. Maher Year's First Speaker at Physics Meeting

Villanova's Physics Club heard its first guest speaker of the year on October 23, in 212 Mendel. Father John Maher, O.S.A., discussed Cardinal Newman's views on "Christianity and Scientific Investigation," pointing out to the club members the importance of remaining within the bounds of their particular science if their knowledge of another field, for example philosophy, is not extensive.

Junior class rings will be delivered next Thursday, Nov. 15, from 9:30 until 6.

Leo Rogers, chairman of the Ring Committee, discloses that Mr. George A. Packer of Dieges and Clust will be in the Publications Office in Dougherty Hall during these hours to receive payment for the rings.

How To Buy

Rogers has asked that those expecting to purchase their rings heed the following instructions:

1. The balance must be paid on receipt.
2. This balance will be found on the receipt which was mailed out during the summer.
3. Payment can be made in check or money order.
4. Checks and money orders be made payable to Dieges and Clust for the exact amount due.
5. The endorsement must include the student's name and address.

No Orders Thursday

The rings of all those who ordered last spring and paid their deposits during the summer will be delivered.

Those who required changes at the second fitting will also receive their rings at this time.

Those who cannot buy the ring next Thursday will have to see Mr. Packer when he returns to Villanova at a later time to be announced.

No orders for rings will be taken next Thursday.

Rogers added that the Villanova University ring is "among the outstanding rings in the nation," and that the changes made by the Class of 1958 are "definite improvements over previous years."

Guided Missiles Highlight November In ENGINEER

What did you do this summer? What will you be doing next summer? An engineering student has the unique chance of gaining both practical experience in his field and financial rewards for summer work.

Jim Schuster, CE '57, presents a very humorous and enlightening article on summer employment in the coming issue of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER. It should be of interest to the underclass engineering students.

The first issue will be distributed on Nov. 15.

Facts About Missiles

One of the feature articles in this issue is entitled "Guided Missiles," a subject which should arouse the attention of many students. Guided missiles are currently a topic of international concern. In this feature Harry Fatkin, EE '57, presents many of the little known but interesting facts of the missiles, including history and development from rocket propulsion. The article deals with the problems met in missile development, such as propulsion, aerodynamics and control.

The Intercontinental Ballistic Missile, which shows the greatest potential of any missile yet developed by the United States, is also discussed in this article.

W. H. Charlton Receives Appointment As Assistant Marketing Professor at VU

William H. Charlton, of Broomall, has been appointed assistant professor of marketing at Villanova. He is currently serving as co-moderator of the Marketing Club.

He came here as a part-time instructor in marketing last February, and directs an active insurance business in Philadelphia and vicinity.

Conducted Surveys

Before coming here, Mr. Charlton was a field representative for the Management Service Division of Temple University, where he conducted training surveys and designed management development programs for industry.

He formerly worked as a sales engineer and business adviser for the Westinghouse Electric Corporation. Mr. Charlton has participated in marketing research studies and taught adult extension courses in business subjects at Temple and Drexel and engineering laboratory courses at Penn.

Engineering Graduate

Mr. Charlton has a BS degree in mechanical engineering from Illinois Institute of Technology and an MBA degree for the Penn's Wharton School. He did further graduate work in economics at Penn.

Mr. Charlton and his wife have two daughters and a son.

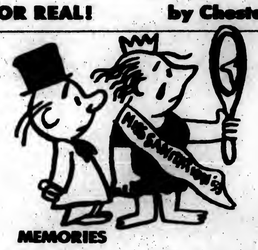
Boston Hotel Sends Congratulations To Villanovan Guests

Boston's Hotel Statler has congratulated Villanova students who stayed there for their conduct during the student trip Oct. 19 and 20.

In a letter to Senior Ed Tomezsko, VILLANOVAN co-circulation director, the hotel said Villanova students were well-behaved and invited Villanovans back to Boston.

Tomezsko stayed at the Statler.

NEED MONEY?



COLLEGE MEN

Judge Born A Day Late, But They'll Count Him Anyway

Senior Jim Judge's absentee ballot was counted in Lockport, N.Y. yesterday—even though Jim is celebrating his 21st birthday today.

Jim, president of Delta Pi Mu fraternity, explained that New York voting law provides that persons that reach the legal age by the day after the election are eligible to cast ballots.

Election Issues Discussed At Recent Meeting of ICG

Policies of the Democratic and Republican parties in yesterday's election were outlined before the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, Tuesday night, October 30.

Representing the Republicans was attorney James McConner and attorney Daniel Quinlan spoke for the Democrats.

Dr. Fred Khouri, ICG adviser and a member of the Political Science Department, served as forum moderator. About 75 students were present.

Each representative was allowed 25 minutes to express his views and five minutes to answer any questions brought up by his opponents. A question period from the floor followed.

Some of the policies included by Mr. McConnor in his talk: a balanced budget for the last two years, tax cut, increased civil rights, establishment of the Health, Welfare and Education Department. In his summary he stated: "Eisenhower is a 'symbol of liberation' and progress."

Mr. Quinlan confined most of his talk to showing the deficiences of the Republican Party in the past four years. He said the balanced budget was achieved by cutting Air Force expenditures: that the tax cut aided only "big business;" that most social legislation was passed under Democrats; that our foreign policy was aimless and makeshift.

Library Expands With Addition of New Literature

By SUE YEAGER

The University Library has added several literary works in the past few months. Students in the various fields will find much matter suited to their personal interests as well as reading in step with modern thoughts and events.

"Mind and Body," by Pedro L. Entralgo, which discusses the relationship between medicine and psychology, realized from the earliest beginnings of medicine but of particular interest today;

"How Communists Negotiated," by Admiral C. Turner Joy, U.S.N. (Ret.), which contains the intricate bargaining methods of the Communists as encountered by the author as senior United Nations Delegate at the Korean Armistice Conference;

"Theology and Evolution" by E. C. Messenger, which contains the more important articles and other essays, collected internationally on the problem under discussion.

"The Impact of the Food and Drug Administration on Our Society," edited by Henry Welch and Felix Marti-Ibanez, which contains collected articles explaining the evolution of food and drug laws as enacted by Congress and describing the enforcement problems encountered.

"Catholic Pioneers in West Africa," by Martin J. Bane, S.M., which provides a sketch of the missionary history of West Africa from the thirteenth to the seventeenth century, and a record of the triumph and the "triumphs of failure" of the Society of African Missions in West Africa.

"Beaverbrook," by Thomas Driberg, reports one of the most fabuous success stories of our time — that of William Maxwell Aitken, who for more than 40 years has been a formidable figure in British politics, and is now almost the last survivor of the great generation of newspaper millionaires.

"The Mechanism of Cheap Money," by Edward Nevin contains a study of the British monetary policy through the years 1931-39, the mechanism by which it was enforced and the channels through which it affected economic activity generally.

"Improving Transition from School to College," edited by Arthur E. Traxler and Agatha E. Townsend, examines procedures of college admissions, and in the light of the facts makes recommendations for improvements.

Instructors Decide Use of 'Late Cuts'

When questioned about the practice of a few professors awarding fractions of a cut to a student for coming late to class, the Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., Vice President for Academic Affairs said, "this is entirely up to the discretion of the individual instructor."

Father Boyle went on to say that the strict interpretation of the rules states that a student must be prompt as well as present to attend class, therefore an instructor is entirely within his rights to give a late student a "cut."

No Definite Clause

The present cut system does not have a definite clause concerning lateness, therefore the Administration hasn't pronounced any policy to cover this question.

Father Boyle indicated that he believed that the instructors are being quite generous in giving half cuts. After all, he said, they have to keep a record of those late classes and could very well avoid the entire problem by giving a cut to the offending students.

Tony Lisa, in charge of the band arrangements for the Basca Dance, is the chairman of the junior-initiated afternoon program.

Admission is $1 per person and the tickets are now on sale in Dougherty Hall cafeteria through Friday.

In the Law Convention story in last week's VILLANOVAN, the theme of the meeting was incorrect. The corrected title is "The Problem of the Juridical Status of Churches" not "Heretical Status," as was reported.

VU Singers Initiate Policy of Holding Section Rehearsals

Villanova Singers have inaugurated a new policy of part rehearsals. In addition to the regular Tuesday night rehearsal in the C&F auditorium, each of the four voice parts has been scheduled for an extra hour-long rehearsal.

The times for each part were announced at last night's full rehearsal.

Belle Air Schedule

Seniors are reminded to return all yearbook picture proofs to Carl Wolf Studios (2013 Walnut St., Philadelphia) before next Wednesday.

Seniors who have not had pictured taken must do so before next Wednesday at the Wolf Studios. Otherwise, their pictures will not be included in the 1957 BELLE AIR.

All senior history forms must be returned to the BELLE AIR office, second floor of Dougherty, by Friday.

6 Senior Nurses Complete Special Harrison Training

Nursing Division members of Class of 1957 completed four weeks of psychiatric training Friday at St. Vincent's Psychiatric Hospital, Harrison, N.Y.

Their instructor reported that they had "adapted themselves well in their approach to the mentally ill."

Thursday, after Mass in the Chapel, graduate nurses heard a talk by Rev. John J. Coffey, O.S.A., at a communion breakfast in Dougherty Hall day hop cafeteria, sponsored by Alpha Delta Chi sorority.

Schiller to Play At NFCCS Ball Hed at Villanova

Bobby Schiller's Villanovans, who will perform at the Seminary Dance this Friday night, have been signed by NFCCS general chairman Al Lepore to play at the National Federation of Catholic College Students' dance on Nov. 30.

The theme will be the traditional Mardi Gras of old New Orleans.

The Ball will be held in the Villanova Field House and the affair will endure 9 'til 1 a.m.

The donation will be $2 with all proceeds being sent to the Japanese Augustinian Missions. This mission, located on the sight of the second atom bomb blast, was founded by the Augustinian Fathers

Who's Who Pending; 32 Names Submitted

Villanova's 32 nominees for Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges have been submitted to national headquarters in Alabama.

Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities, said he mailed the list Oct. 26 and did not expect confirmation "for about four weeks."

Villanova's list will not be announced until it has been approved by national headquarters, Father Girolami said.

The final list was formulated during a meeting of Senior Class President Vince Sullivan with a faculty committee.

Requirements Cited

Requirements used in considering nominees are participation in extra-curricular activities and acceptable chapel, disciplinary and academic records.

The Student Council set a 2.5 cumulative academic average as a minimum requirement in March 1954.

50 Names Submitted

Preliminary lists of 50 senior names were submitted by former class president Jack Decker, Joe Martin (acting for former class president Jack O'Rourke now at Good Counsel Novitiate, New Hamburg, N.Y.), Sullivan, Jack Essig, VILLANOVA ENGINEER editor-in-Chief and Tom Smith, VILLANOVAN editor-in-chief.

The nominating procedure now in use was outlined by Student Council several years ago, according to Father Girolami.

"Li'l Abner" is scheduled to fill the Erlanger stage until Nov. 10.

Rosies Say VU Men Equal Or Superior To Ivy Boys

To the Editor:

In regard to "Freddie the Frosh's" predicament in the Oct. 31 VILLANOVAN we feel obligated to correct this gross exaggeration concerning Rosemont girls.

Freddie's senior friend should have learned by now that universal conclusions cannot be drawn from particular incidents. If such a goldigging Rosemont Girl exists, she is certainly in the minority, and the Villanovans know this to be true. It seems a shame that Freddie and his friend have not heard of the good times Rosemont girls have had at Villanova picnics and parties where expense has been at a minimum. If these two knew Rosemont's rules, they would also realize that a sudden decision to stay at the Bellevue-Stratford is an impossibility unless expulsion is desired.

Villanovans Insecure?

Could the remarks concerning the desire of Rosemont girls to date students from Brown and Princeton stem from an insecurity upon the part of these two boys? True Villanova men should consider themselves on a par or superior to any other group of college men, Ivy Leaguers included. They have shown themselves to be such on most occasions, and it seems unfortunate that the two in question have not done so.

We cordially invite Freddie and his senior friend to visit the "T" again and become acquainted with the real Rosemont Rosies.

ICG to Plan for April Convention In State Capitol

Intercollegiate Conference on Government starts planning for its April state convention at 10:30 a.m. Nov. 15 in 204 C&F.

Chairman Bill Lesko said planks and platforms will be discussed for the Haverford convention in February, which will be a warm-up for the state convention in Harrisburg.

Other ICG officers are Vice-Chairman Hugh Breslin and Secretary-Treasurer John McNichols.

MONEY NEEDED FOR COUGAR BROADCAST

Ed Shea and Jim Judge of WVIL will fly to Houston and broadcast the Villanova-Houston game to the campus only if enough money can be raised for the operation from the students themselves.

Shea announced that every student on campus will be asked for a 50-cent contribution and that a collection box will be placed in the day hop cafeteria for the off campus residents and day hops.

Contributions are needed from every student in the university in order to make the trip possible, Shea said.

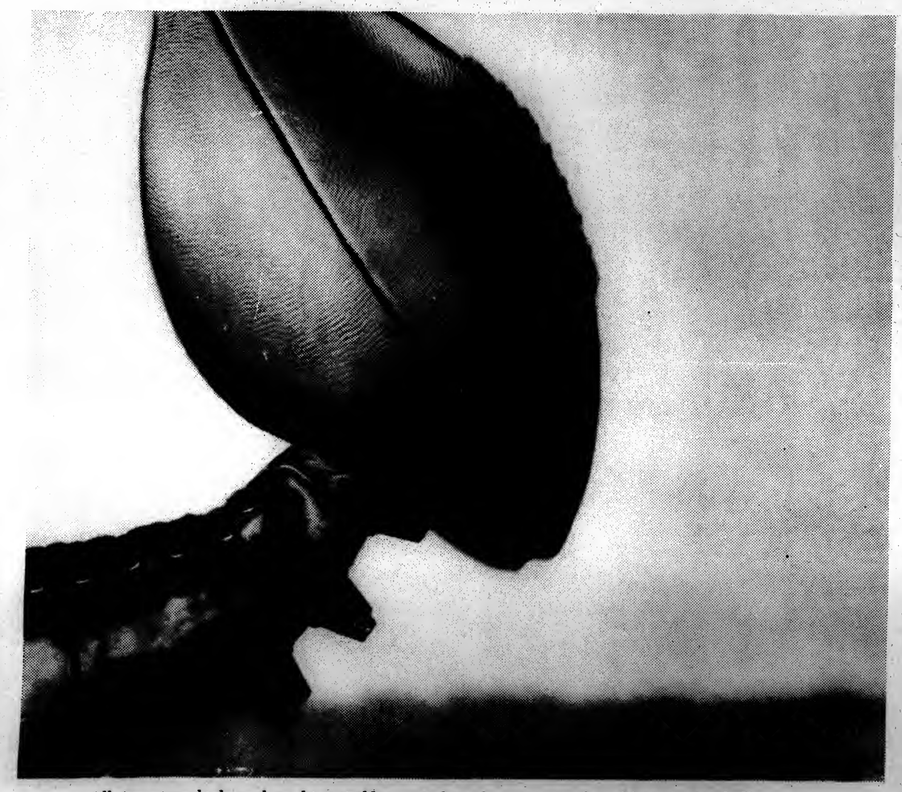
ASME to Visit Ford Motor Co.'s Chester Division

A 50 man group from ASME will visit the Ford Motor Company's Chester assembly plant today, as half of the M.E.'s will participate in the second field trip of the year.

The remaining half will tour the Chester plant next Monday, Nov. 12. The trip will be of special interest to the automation enthusiasts visiting this highly mechanized plant.

At its regular meeting last Monday, ASME heard a talk by Michael Mooney of Allis-Chalmers. The topic of discussion was what the engineering industry expects from graduates and the training program Allis-Chalmers offers the graduates.

VU Law School Forum Holds First Meeting; All Students Invited



The first meeting of the Villanova University Law School Forum will be held today at 8:15 p.m.

The speaker on that occasion will be Andrew Hourigan, Esq., Chairman of the Committee on Unauthorized Practice of the Pennsylvania State Bar Association. Mr. Hourigan is a partner in the firm of White, Rowlands, and Hourigan in Wilkes-Barre and has lectured extensively on the problems of protecting the public against unprofessional legal advice.

All interested students are invited to attend. The place of the meeting will be announced later and will be posted on the Dougherty Hall bulletin board.

ESSO RESEARCH works wonders with oil

Fabulous oil-made rubber for the world of sports

All-American kicks and crashing tackles put a brutal squeeze on the rubber in a football. But footballs with bladders of Butyl rubber take punishment in stride . . . hold air indefinitely . . . resist weather extremes. Developed from oil by Esso Research, Butyl rubber is out-performing natural and other types of rubber in hundreds of ways. Proof, once again, that ESSO RESEARCH works wonders with oil!

Is Our Spirit Sound?

By BOB MULCAHY

Every well developed and seemingly proven undertaking undergoes an acid test—a test that establishes the foundation was built on. Now we at Villanova are being tried to see if the foundation we have built, the tremendous spirit exhibited this fall, is sound.

The motorcade and game against Florida State seemed to be a peak in student spirit enthusiasm. Every Villanovan was proud of his part in this collegiate movement and boasted to his friends. Actually we had every right to be proud because few colleges have exposed to the spirit shown here.

Boston was ample proof and Florida State scaled it. But now we reach a turning point or acid test. Students are naturally let down by the two successive defeats suffered in the last two games. For two dreary and long years we have waited for a winning team and we have one within our grasp. Granted more victories would have been desired but let us not get greedy in our aggressiveness.

Bonfire Highlights Rally

This Friday night the Spirit Committee has scheduled a bonfire rally—the biggest attempted here in the memory of any of the present student body and probably equalling or surpassing the rally before the Army game a few years back which was complete with a fireworks display.

Recently facts brought to light reveal the fact that one of the names revered in college spirit circles has suffered a little difficulty with a losing team. This school, Notre Dame, long placed in the forefront as an example of spirit, happened to lose two games and the prospects were not bright as the Michigan State game approached.

A pregame rally drew the "tremendous" number of 200 students and the team received a ten second ovation. This was what happened at a school accostomed to winning. A lesson can be learned by all of us.

Palestra Action Cited

After the Big Five competed in the Palestra last winter the charge was leveled at Villanova students that they were great as long as the team was ahead, but as soon as they were down everyone was quiet and sullen.

These two examples are exposed for one purpose, to make the students realize the power they hold within themselves to keep this steamroller going.

This coming weekend allows all Villanovans both upper and under classmen to once again demonstrate that they are not fair-weather fans. The rally and game are the starting point for the weekend. Will the average student restrain his enthusiasm because he has a date with him or will he show the spirit that prevailed thus far? Everything is in his favor—victory is in sight and there are numerous social functions to make the weekend a success.

Doubts Unfounded

There are doubts that the students can keep the fever pitch they have reached; these doubts are unfounded as far as I am concerned but we must all unite to provide the final proof for any doubter and most important to give the team pyschological lift necessary for them to carry on to a winning season, the first in our college days.

Senior Joe Ryan Bolsters Center of Villanova Line

Although he receives considerably less publicity than the glamorous, touchdown-scoring backfield stars, Center Joe Ryan is an indispensable member of the Villanova football team. Joe was rewarded for his pre-season efforts and fine work in past years when Coach Frank Reagan appointed him game-captain for the season opener with Texas A & M. Reagan has recently said of Ryan that he was the most improved senior over a three year period and that his terrific hustle and spirit has been one of the chief factors in making this a winning season.

Started As Fullback

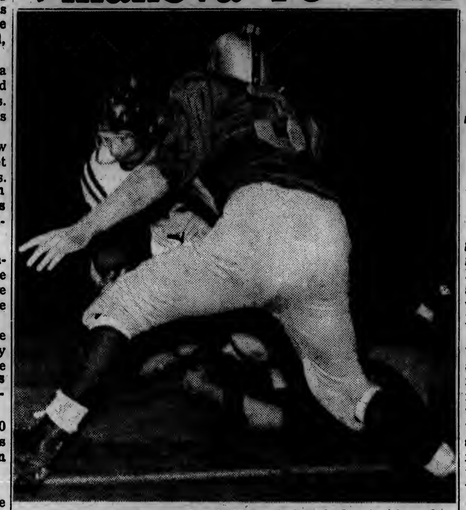
Ryan, a senior from Staten Island, N.Y., came to Villanova as a fullback. He played out of that spot in his sophomore year and also saw considerable action as a halfback, but during his first practices as Wildcat mentor, Reagan saw great lineman potentiality in the fast-moving, hard-hitting back. Last season found Joe starting in the center of the V.U. line.

Joe, who was selected to the All-New York City two straight years while playing at New Dorp High School in Staten Island, comes from a large family of devout Catholics. This backround was instrumental in his great desire for a Catholic education which eventually brought the 6-1, 213 lb. star to Villanova.

Won Maxwell Club Award

Ryan, who waits on tables in the ball-players dining room and spends most of his off-season time working in the Pie Shop, won the first weekly Maxwell Club Award for his stellar play against the Texas Aggies. Joe's great defensive line-play greatly helped the Wildcats make a fine showing in their Big Ten debut against Indiana last year. He led the Villanova line which stopped the Hoosiers five times within the five yard line.

Joe lists his greatest thrill in college ball as "winning against Boston University before all those fans who came so far to see us win."



Basketball

Any student, especially freshmen interested in becoming student basketball manager is requested to report to the equipment cage in the Field House any afternoon between 2 and 5 p.m. Steadiness is essential but advancement chances are good.

Boston College Plummets Villanova To Third Loss

Last Second Field Goal Try Blocked

By JACK CURTIN

Villanova quarterback Bill Magee is knocked out of bounds on an end run during Friday night's Villanova-B.C. game in Fenway Park, Boston. Making the tackle are B.C. linebacker Tino Bartolini and safetyman John Connelley (30).

An attempt to utilize that forgotten offensive weapon, the field goal, resulted in failure and Villanova's third defeat of the season last Friday as the Wildcats were edged 7-6 by Boston College.

The nomadic Villanovans thrilled a large Boston crowd and their own traveling cheering section with a driving attack in the final minutes of the game which carried from their own 36 to the Eagles' 15. With eleven seconds remaining, Sophomore fullback Rollie West attempted to bring the Wildcats a thrilling victory.

Field Goal Blocked

However, a Boston College lineman broke through the Villanova defense and blocked the field goal attempt. West picked up the ball and tried to run it into the end zone, but was downed on the ten. As the Wildcats got set for another try, the clock ran out and the Eagles had a victory.

Both team's touchdowns resulted from miscues. Early in the second quarter Villanova safety man, Dave Parr, fumbled a Boston punt on his own 14. An Eagle lineman recovered the ball, and seven plays later fullback Bernie Teliszewski, crossed the goal line from the one. The extra point was good and at the half Boston led, 7-0.

Midway in the third period, as the Eagles dropped back to their own 25 to kick, a bad pass from center forced fullback John Connelly to attempt to run the ball, but he was stopped at the line of scrimmage by the rugged Wildcats.

Devereaux Scores

Halfback Johnny Ferruolo carried twice for nine yeards, then fullback Jack Devereaux hammered the BC line five straight times, finally scoring from the one, for his first touchdown in two varsity seasons. West attempted the conversion, but this kick too was partially blocked. That left the score 7-6, setting up Villanova's last period desperation attempt.

Individually, several Wildcats stood out. Devereaux, who started the season as fourth string fullback, and West both gained ground readily from their position. Ed Michaels, playing his first game as a starter, Don Lazzi, and Mike Flynn shone defensively. Flynn also recovered two fumbles.

Billy Magee and Jim Grazione played their usual fine games from the quarterback slot. Both showed daring and initiative, completing passes in fourth down situations needing long yardage.

The Wildcats record now stands at 3-3. They will attempt to get above the .500 mark on Saturday afternoon against the Citadel in Goodreau stadium.

Marksmen Extend Winning Streak by Downing Western Maryland; Miller Excels

By FRANK FLEMING

The Villanova University varsity rifle team has now extended their undefeated streak to two seasons as it downed Western Maryland Saturday 1398-1350. The Wildcats were led in their first win of the season by Captain Hank Miller who shot a score of 290 out of a possible 300.

This was the first time in Villanova history that a Wildcat marksman ever broke the 290 point barrier. Millers' nearly perfect shooting led his team to within points of 1400 which is considered by most authorities to be excellent an team score.

In addition to Miller's outstanding fete Chris Kloss shot a 283. Pete Carini, Jim Abernethy, and Fred Passarella finished in that order firing 276, 275, and 274 respectively.

Scheduled Matches

Five matches have been scheduled for the Villanova sharpshooters, and challanges have been extended for matches with five other top-notch college rifle teams. The Villanova team will travel to Princeton on Dec. 8 for their only other pre-Christmas meet. On Jan.5 Georgetown will meet the Wildcats on the V.U. range. On Feb. 9 Villanova will play host to their own intra-city rival, Penn. The following Saturday, Feb. 16, the Wildcats will travel to New York City to meet a strong Manhattan College squad, and come home on Mar. 2 to meet Lehigh, Fordham, Rutgers, Seton Hall, and John Hopkins.

Interested Shootres

Coach Molcany and Captain Hank Miller recently announced that any marksmen interested in trying out for the team can do so by enrolling in the National Rifle Association course that will be conducted soon on campus in the Marine Office in Barry Hall. The funds derived from these sources are used to help meet the expense of this championship team.

Charles J. Rodden Named Chairman of Football Banquet

The chairman for the 35th annual football banquet sponsored by the Villanova Club of Philadelphia has been named by the club's president, Joseph F. O'Donnell.

The dinner honoring Coach Reagan and the Villanova University varsity football squad will be held on Monday, Dec. 3, at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

1950 Graduate Named

Charles J. Rodden, a 1950 graduate of the School of Engineering, who has been a member of the banquet committee for the past three years, is the chairman this year. He has been active with the local alumni group since his graduation and was a club officer in 1953-54 and 1954-55.

Rodden is an engineer with the refrigeration engineering division of the Philco Corporation here.

O'Donnell said that other members of the committee include Charles Devenny, tickets; John J. Currie, Jr., patrons; Gerry Lee, awards; Robert Pope, program; Martin Mulkeen, invited guests; Harry Rohlfing, treasurer; and Daniel Dagit, arrangements.

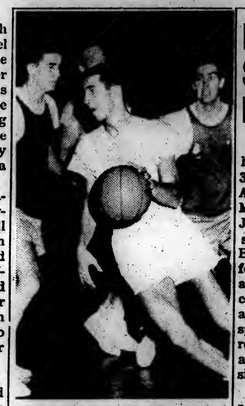
Wildcats Oppose Citadel, Iowa State in Home Games

By DON KEMPF

The spirited Wildcats of coach Frank Reagan face the Citadel on Saturday afternoon in the first of two games scheduled for Villanova's home stadium this season. The Mainliners will be out to keep the tradition going which has seen the Wildcats lose but one game in the last twenty two years on the Villanova campus.

The Bulldogs from the Citadel, with the return of 18 lettermen, are a much improved ball club over last year's team which had a record of five wins and four losses, the best Citadel effort in thirteen years. Head Coach and Athletic Director John Sauer boasts a squad which includes eight sophomores who earned varsity letters in their freshman season.

First Meeting with Citadel



The Cadets have a 2-2-1 record to date this year, winning over Davidson and Stetson, losing to Richmond and Wofford, and playing Newberry to a tie. The game, scheduled for 1:30 p.m., will be the first meeting of the two teams.

Budgie Broome, Cadet Captain and an all-Southern Conference halfback last season is expected to be a rough test of Villanova's rugged defense. Last year he led the Bulldog attack with an average of seven yards per carry and a total of 419 yards for the season.

Houston Next

The Saturday following the Citadel game will find the Cats travelling to Texas to face a strong Houston team. It will be the Mainliners second appearance this season in the Lone Star State, where the Wildcats lost their opener to Texas A & M, 19-0. The Cougars, however, played the Aggies to a 14-14 tie. With 25 lettermen returning from last year's squad, most observers pick Coach Bill Meek's Cougars to win the Missouri Valley Conference crown.

The Wildcats close out the season against Iowa State on the Nov. 24, in the Villanova Stadium. Coach Vince DeFrancesca's Cyclones began the season with only ten of last year's 24 lettermen returning. Playing other Big Seven Conference powers such as Oklahoma and outside competition from the Big Ten, Iowa State has been travelling a pretty rough road. Most fans expect the State game to end the Wildcat season on a winning note.

MONEY NEEDED FOR COUGAR BROADCAST

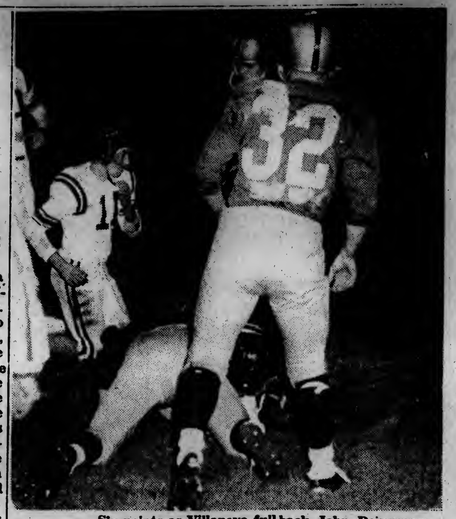
Ed Shea and Jim Judge of WVIL will fly to Houston and broadcast the Villanova-Houston game to the campus only if enough money can be raised for the operation from the students themselves.

Shea announced that every student on campus will be asked for a 50-cent contribution and that a collection box will be placed in the day hop cafeteria for the off campus residents and day hops.

Harriers Defeat Seton Hall Easily; Breckenridge Wins

Last Wednesday the Villanova harriers toppled Seton Hall 17-38 at South Orange, New Jersey. Alex Breckenridge, IC4A Two Mile Champion from Scotland, John Kopil, mile and two mile star, and distance star, George Browne finished one, two, three for the Wildcats. Breckenridge and Kopil ran the five mile course in 25 minutes, 27 seconds and 25 minutes, 37 seconds, respectively, to break the course record. Mainliners Al Peterson and Vic DeMaio placed fifth and sixth.

This victory gives the harriers a four and one record. They hold victories over LaSalle, Fort Monmouth, Seton Hall, and St. Joseph's and Georgetown in a triangular meet. Their only loss was to Pitt, last year's IC4A champion.



IC4A Meet

The Seton Hall meet was the harriers' final appearance before the IC4A Meet, which will be held Nov. 19 at Van Courtlandt Park, New York.

Last year the Mainliners placed eighth in this meet in which over forty teams competed.

Delaay Second

A year ago, Villanova's Ron Delany placed second behind Michigan ace Henry Kennedy. Arnie Sowell of Pitt was third.

Six points as Villanova full back John Devereaux scores from the one-yard-line during third period against Friday night at Boston. Villanova halfback John Ferruolo watches happily from his knees Henry Sullivan, lying on top of Devereaux, fails to stop him. Also in on play are Eagle lineman Jim Tiernan and an unidentified B.C. ball player.

Second Half Onslaught Of Navy Too Much For 'Cat Freshmen as They Lose 37-0

Navy's Plebes scored two touchdowns in each of the last three periods to beat Villanova's Freshman Footballers 37-0 last Friday.

The game, which was played at Navy, loomed as a tight hard, fought battle until the last four minutes of the first half when a Navy lineman blocked a Wildcat kick and fell on it in the end zone. The point after touchdown was blocked by Reggie Powe.

Fumble Costly

Two minutes later, Navy fell on a Villanova fumble on the Kitten's 20 yard line and then proceeded to score on a pass play. The half ended with Navy leading the little Wildcats 13-0.

On the first play from scrimmage of the second half, Navy scored on a 55 yard pass play. The other Navy scoring came on Villanova fumbles and long pass plays.

Army Next

The starting team for the Cats was Heron and Norton as ends; Brennan and Vernon at tackles; Osburn and Fitzpatrick at guard; Lemken at center; and McCarthey, Cleary, Daniels, and Ficca in the backfield.

The next game is this Friday against the Army Plebes at West Point, New York.

Muscles And Might Mark Anton's Quest For Records

By BILL JONES
Associate Editor

If you were to go wandering through Sullivan Hall some night you might be a bit surprised to peer into one of the rooms and see a rather muscular chap casually pressing a couple hundred pounds over his head. Well, don't be alarmed, its only Bill Anton, a New Jersey State weightlifting champ.

Bill's a senior here at Villanova and hails from River Edge, New Jersey. He attended nearby Hackensack High School where he began weightlifting in his senior year.

Broke Record

He first came into prominance in the New Jersey State finals two years ago. Bill broke the swing curl record in the 181 pound class with a lift of 235 pounds. Gaining strength, weight and stature as he progressed, Anton, at an International AAU weightlifting meet this past summer, broke a record in the bench press that had stood for eight years. Competing in the 198 pound class, he bench-pressed 350 pounds, breaking easily the old record by 15 pounds.

Besides breaking records in these two events, Bill has turned in quite a few other strong performances.

He has lifted 235 pounds in the military press,, and has managed an Olympic total of 700 pounds.

Holds Class

If you were to visit Bill's home in River Edge, you would find scattered around the cellar, garage and his bedroom some 3,000 pounds of weights. Besides his own weight lifting, Anton holds classes for both men and women in the fundamentals of the sport.

BILL ANTON
Record-breaker

Bill tells us that he actually considers weightlifting more of a hobby than a sport.

He also points out that the best way to excel in any sport is to train heavily and do a lot of running, along with getting a good deal of rest and plenty of food.

Coach Helped

He attributes much of his success to his coach, Steve Ekdahl, United States arm wrestling champ, and also to the pointers he picked up while training with the great Paul Anderson, said to be the strongest man in the world. Anton is vice-president of the Lantana Barbell Association in New Jersey, and is a member of the famous New York Barbell Club which produces most of the Olympic weightlifters. He also belongs to the Amateur Athletic Union.

Besides the records mentioned before, Bill holds many county, state and eastern intercollegiate records. Some of these were broken while lifting right here in Philadelphia.

Bill is a marketing major and plans to go in the real estate appraising business after graduation.

Basketball Team Practices Daily For Tough Opener

While the football season grinds on, behind the headlines another Wildcat varsity is rounding into shape. Coach Al Severance is putting a squad of about 16 basketball hopefuls through long daily drills in the Field House.

Villanova usually opens the season with a setup or two in the friendly confines of the Field House. But not this year. The Cats open in less than a month, Dec. 5, in the Palestra to take on an always fast, tough and nationally-ranked Canisius five for their opening game.

LKD Meets Tues., Hears Dr. Shepard

Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity will hear Dr. Samuel Shepard, prominent Philadelphia physician, and discuss the organization's annual Communion breakfast at a meeting next Tuesday night in the General Laboratory on the third floor of Mendel.

All are invited to attend and listen to Dr. SChepard.

The Communion Mass is scheduled for Nov. 18 at 9 o'clock in the Chapel and will be followed by breakfast at Stouffer's Restaurant in Bryn Mawr.

Officers o fthe fraternity are: Lloyd Nasuti, president; Joe DeGrazia, vice president; Joe Pitelli, secretary and Jack Fisher, treasurer. Student Council representative is Marty Dohaney.

Marine Birthday Will Be Observed By Villanova Unit

Villanova's marines celebrate the Marine Corps birthday Saturday with festivities at the Villanova-Citadel game and a party Saturday night at the Peacock Gardens in King of Prussia.

The Villanova NROTC will march down to the stadium for the game Saturday and a half-time program is planned with the theme of birthday greetings to the United States Marine Corps.

The band and the drill team will highlight the program. The award of the "Certificate of Appreciation" from the Marine Corps commandant to Villanova will be announced to the spectators.

Saturday evening Villanova's officers, marine NROTC students, PLC candidates and all other marines of the area will congregate at the Peacock Gardens for a happy birthday party.

Guest of honor and speaker of the evening at the party will be Colonel J. G. Duryea, USMC, retired due to wounds received during World War II. Colonel Duryea will also participate in the "Certificate of Appreciation" presentation.

Administration Cooperation Gets Marine Award

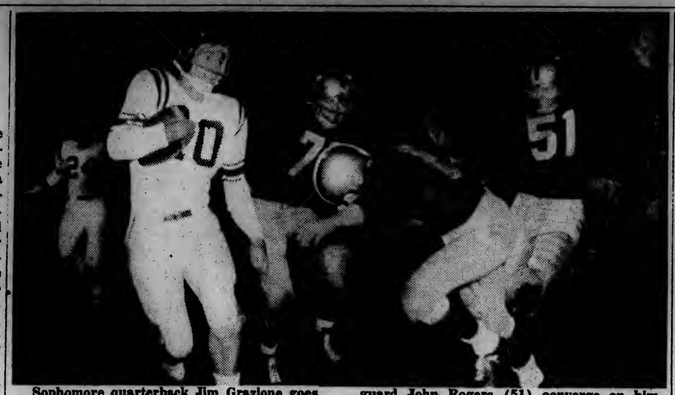
Assistant to the President, the Rev. Joseph Boyle, Vice-President in Charge of Academic Affairs, the Rev. Joseph Kemme, Vice-President in Charge of Student Affairs, the Rev. John Curran, Vice-President in Charge of Financial Affairs, the Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, Director of the Development Fund and president of Villanova during the period that Col. Roose was NROTC executive officer and the Rev. Thomas Burke, University Registrar.

The coveted and rarely-given certificate was awarded to Villanova at the instigation of Captain Grace who brought to the attention of the Marine Corps commandant the Villanova recruiting record and the instances of special cooperation on the part of the university administration.

Publicity Credited



Among those singled out by Captain Grace are the Rev. Robert Regan and Father Burke. Captain Grace praised the generous publicity given the Villanova marines and the excellant facilities in Dougherty Hall put at the disposal of the marines during the recruiting drive this year.

The captain pointed out that Villanova gives to the marines about twenty PLC candidates and from ten to fifteen OCC candidates per year and that the recruiting drive this fall netted forty-five candidates with a good likelihood of fifteen more being sworn in during the remainder of the academic year.

In brief the award is being given Villanova for the quantity of people and the quality of operation.

South C. Alumni

Bishop Neumann (formerly Southeast Catholic) High School's annual alumni Communion breakfast will be held Nov. 18.

Sophomore quarterback Jim Grazione goes around end for Villanova during B.C. game in Boston Saturday as Jerry Havdra, B.C. tackle (72), end John Flanagan (82), and guard John Rogers (51) converge on him. Rick Sapienza watches anxiously from the background.

Belle Masque Presents:

Bill Brown In 'Billy Budd,' Plot: Billy Gets Nipped In The Budd

By Joe Wheeler

Mr. Richard Duprey, director of the Belle Masque drama society, has announced the name of this fall's production, "Billy Budd." This drama will run in the field house from Thursday Dec. 6 through Saturday Dec. 8 starting at 8:15 nightly.

The story takes place aboard a British frigate circa 1795 and deals with the struggle between the master of arms of the ship, John Claggerte, and a young innocent sailor Billy Budd. It is the basic struggle between good and evil. The master of the ship Captain Vere must at the end of the play make the choice between hanging Billy Budd or releasing him and having the possibility of mutiny breaking out aboard his ship. This decision makes the play a strong and compelling drama.

The play is adapted on Herman Melville's novel "Billy Budd" by Messers Cox and Chapman. A featured part of this production will be a 24-foot drop by a sailor from the top of the main mast to the deck.

One of the more interesting highlights of this year's production is the set. The highly unusual set has three levels and should be worth seeing. The costumes will be authentic 18th century British naval uniforms.

The twenty-character all male cast is headed by Bill Brown, senior English major, in the role of Billy Budd. Brown has been an active participant in the Masque dramas since his matriculation at Villanova. This is his first lead role in Belle Masque productions.

The members of the cast are Chuck Brockman as Capt. Vere, Vic Buono as John Claggerte, the master of arms, Ed McCarthy as Lt. Seymore, Ray Clarke as Lt. Ratcliffe, Owen Klein as Lt. Wyatt and Jim Gilligan as Jenkins.

The Donsker is played by Bob Lima, Squeek by George Gillen, Midshipman Gardiner by John Cannon, Midshipman Rea by Vic Ludmerer and Kincaid by Dick Dressler.

George Allen plays O'Daniel, Ron Cusack as Payne, John Fischetti as Talbert and Norm Peer as Butler. Tom Kimmel plays a dual role-Duncan and the mess boy, Jackson by John Welsh, the Surgeon by Larry Silvers. and Hallem is by Frank Cunningham.

The members of the production department are Mr. Richard Duprey, director, Larry Kirwin assistant to the director and Paul Gormley is the production coordinator, Mike Clark is general production manager with Lt. Eldon Parks as the technical adviser.

Business chairman is Tom Curran and publicity is being handled by Dick Brothers. Stage managers are Joe Giusti and Joe Chininici. The set was designed by Mr. Duprey and constructed under the supervision of Jake Krupa.

Alumni

Alumni of Villanova invite all graduates to attend their Homecoming Party to be held at the Haverford Court Hotel following the Iowa State game Nov. 24.

Mr. Louis Merlini, alumni officer, urges all graduates to attend this get-together and emphasizes that no undergradutes will be permitted to attend.

Spanish Club Will Plan Winter Date At Meet Tomorrow

Tomorrow at 10:30 a.m., the Spanish Club meets in room 203 C&F Auditorium to discuss plans for the biggest date on the organization's winter calendar—"Noche Espanola"—on December 7.

President Mike Ford commented that a modern Spanish play will be a part of the evening's entertainment. At tomorrow's meeting, Ford intends to discuss the possiblity of having the female roles portrayed by members of Rosemont's Spanish Club. Chairmen will also be named tomorrow.

The Spanish consul from Philadelphia and other dignitaries will be present at Noche Espanola. Refreshments will be served at the close of the evening's festivities.

Other club officers are Joe Koman, Vice-President; Gene Donohue, Secretary; and Bill Francis, Treasurer.

The Reverend Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., is moderator.

painting, theater or so on, on their program. There are only a few which are fighting, drinking and wearing the same colors as in Heidelberg. There are some unimportant newspapers and some theater-groups.

Effective Student Government

Then we have our own parliament, into which each faculty is sending deputies. It has some money at its disposal and is allowed to decide on many affairs of student life and has an office where jobs are distributed.

When Prime Minister Nehru came to Hamburg, the parliament decided to give him as a gift two scholarships for Indian students. But interest in the parliament is small. Only thirty percent of the students voted at the election.

Average Student Apathetic

The average student does not take part in such organizations, does not take part in volunteer offices which could be of some use for himself. The average student is going home after his lectures, is doing his home-work, but does not care about his colleagues except for two or three friends. There is not the atmosphere of a common, convivial life as at an American college or an English Public School.

If one has studied at least six semesters, one leaves the university with an academic title or degree. Without them it is very difficult to have succeses in your profession in Germany.

Future Emersons Urged to Submit Essays By Nov. 16

Little over a week remains to earn an easy five, ten or fifteen dollars in the LYNX essay contest. The deadline for submission of material is Friday, Nov. 16.

Anything of general interest is suitable material for the essay contest. Minimum and maximum wordage is five hundred and fifteen hundred words respectively.

Essays for the contest should be brought to the LYNX office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall any day except Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. or to the English department office in the basement of Austin Hall at any time.

The LYNX staff repeats its cry for material for the forthcoming issue of the LYNX. There is no limit on the subject matter to be treated. The only requirement is that you treat it well. Anyone with material or ideas to submit or discuss may come to the LYNX office at the times mentioned above.

Material suitable for publication may be essays, short stories, one-act plays, poems, sketches, vignettes.

Villanovans Get Chance to Pick Football Schedule of coffee are just so many spoken words which have no significance.

The VILLANOVAN, realizing the plight of the college football fan, has decided to run a poll in order to let spectators express their preference for opponents they would like to see the Villanova football team compete against.

Use Sample Ballot

The sample ballot reproduced for the convenience of the fan on this page may be used for submitting his choice of teams. However, any piece of plain paper may be used.

Simply list fifteen teams, naming the opponents in order of preference, in the space provided in the ballot. Also list which games you would like to see played at home, and which played away.

Completed ballots may be placed in any of the several envelopes distributed on campus for that purpose, or addressed to Football Schedule, the VILLANOVAN, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa.

Alumni Encouraged

Ballots are not restricted exclusively to Villanova students. Any Villanova fan may submit a list of the team's he'd like to see the school play. Alumni and faculty in particular are encouraged to submit their seiections.

The poll will run for three weeks, and the results will be tabulated and printed in the Dec. 12 issue of the VILLANOVAN. The fans overall first choice,then the second choice, the third, fourth, and so on will be listed in the order in which the fans select them.

IRC Shows Films

Films on management and labor relations will be shown at a meetoing of the Industrial Relations Club tonight at 7:30 in 207 C & F.

All members have been urged to attend and other interested students are invited.

Paeans To Presley

Below is a piece of contemporary verse the editors happened upon the other day. The writer, for some reason, did not bother to sign his name to the timely bit of rhyme.

It does show, however, that Elvis' influence doesn't merely elate blue-jeaned teen-agers to boisterous rock 'n' roll exhibitions. The Presley meanings even inspire the campus bards.

I celebrate the personality of Elvis!
I love his manicured hands, his scented ears, his locomotion feminine.
Each dimple on his cheeks I sing.
Praises I chant to his padded shoulder-blades.
Also Rock and Roll!
I, Whilt, of unbridled thought and tongue,
Whoop it up!

I love his shoes: open-toed, high-heeled . . .
So too his feet, fairic-like, flattened:
I see them in the morning when dawn its seal breaks, and o'er the globe is heard the melodic lilt of the screech-owl.
I see him climb the stage in search of funds for his voice coach . . .
Oh, speaking of him, I could celebrate the old fake if I had time.
He's a corker.

But I was praising Elvis.
I love to watch his fans,
And wonder as I watch.
They greet him at the stage-door . . . he smiles; he cowers.
They escort him to his car . . . he's naked; he bleeds,
But he loves them!

He is a coward.
But I love his cowardice, for it is an attribute, like patience or wisdom.
And I love attributes.
Whoop!

* Paean. Noah Webster defines this intriguing word as follows: "A hymn in honor of a diety; a song of joy, praise, or triumph." Nuf said!

STRICTLY OPINION

By PAUL FINAN

What is war? We might define war as a state or fact or exerting violence against another; it is a contest by force between two or more nations or states. It is hostility, strife and furious struggle. And yet, isn't war much more than this? It can be a complete destruction of a nation, it can change the geography of the world, and it can completely alter the day-to-day existence of the innocent individual.

But more lasting than these effects are the feelings of hate, revenge and coldness which are left behind the last volley of combat. Still we do not have the complete picture of war, for to know it fully we must be able to see with our own eyes the suffering, famine and hardships that inevitably follow.

Why War?

What are the reasons that might be given to explain a call to arms? Why were there wars in the past, and why might there be still more in the future? The theologian might point to the decline in religion and the disregard for true Christian spirit throughout the world as the underlying causes.

FINAN

The philosopher might declare that too many of the world's inhabitants have adopted false or weak doctrines, or that they have been too concerned with the materialism of the age.

Historic, Economic Reasons

The real cause was poor leadership or perhaps inadequate government that gave rise to unrest and eventual war.

Then too, the economist might point out some economic deficiency in some areas that was an occasion for dissatisfaction or resentment.

Plethora of Causes

Many authorities from various backrounds in life have given their own reasons for war and the conditions which brought it about. Yet we cannot actually say that there is only one reason, for it seems rather to be a combination of many weaknesses and faults which exist in the world at a given time.

We the students of Villanova know quite clearly what war would mean to us. If war would break out, we could immediately forget about marks, attendance at class and the picnic season.

If War Comes You Go

Let me please say at this time that I am not advocating war, nor am I on the other hand ruling out its possibility. A glance at any recent newspaper will quickly reveal to us that the world is in political and social chaos.

The affairs of the world are not unlike those of the pre-World War I era, what with critical areas becoming even more critical. Just how things are going to develop in Europe, or just how far Communism is going to reach, we cannot be sure. But there is only one thing of which we can be certain, namely that if a world war should occur, we would immediately be called to military service.

And Pray Hard

There is something which each and every one of us can do. We can all hope . . . and pray!

WINSTON wins honors on flavor!

32 Seniors Chosen For National Collegiate Who's Who; Betty Curran First Coed Honored

PTC Head Came With '53 Pioneers

With the inclusion of Betty Ann Curran in "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges," Villanova's coeds seem to have reached another milestone.

Betty, a graduate of Little Flower High School in Philadelphia, was one of the nine "pioneer" coeds to matriculate here in September 1953.

These nine were not the first feminine members of the previously all-male student body, however. In February 1952, a registered nurse, Marjaroie Morris, became the first coed to enter Villanova.

Betty's Activities

At Villanova, Betty Ann has been president of Phi Theta Chi basic nursing sorority, helped with make-up on Turf 'n Tinsel productions, worked on WVIL and was a member of the Junior Prom decorations committee.

Betty Ann and the five other survivors of that pioneer group are enrolled in the Nursing Division curriculm which will grant them Bachelor of Science degrees in nursing at commencement exercises in June.

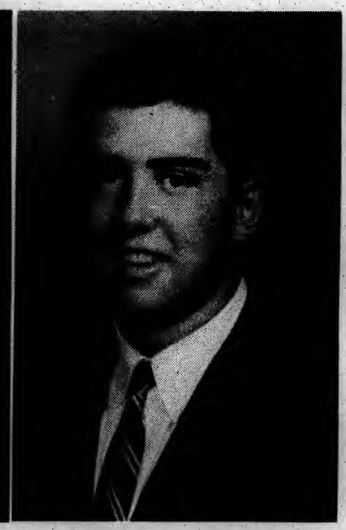
The girls have been taking practical work off campus since the end of their sophomore year. First they underwent training at Fitzgerald-Mercy Hospital in Upper Darby and then travelled to other hospitals for more training.

34-Year-Old Sea Captain Recognized

A 34 - year - old Merchant Marine veteran is one of Villanova's 1957 representatives in "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

John Louis French Jr., a pre-law major in the C & F School, is a licensed, unlimited- tonnage shipmaster.

He graduated from West Philadelphia Catholic High School in 1940, and was commissioned three years later from King's Point Merchant Marine Academy.



After graduation, French—who transferred here in 1954 from St. Joseph's College—plans to enter law school. He and his wife live in Yeadon.

French, whose cumulative average is a shade under 4.0, did not have any extra curricular activities listed on his senior history form.

Arts Leads Activities Honor List

The first Villanova coed to be named is among 32 seniors listed in "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Betty Ann Curran, one of nine coeds who entered Villanova with the Class of 1933 will be listed in the national chapter's publication along with 12 other students from Arts and Sciences School, 11 from Engineering and eight from Commerce and Finance.

Names, Criteria

Other seniors honored: William E. Barton, Donald G. Bragg, William J. Brown, Leo J. Calabrase, Vincent G. Cardella, Frederick A. Costello, Eugene J. Donohue, Harry W. Fatkin Jr., Michael J. Ford, John Louis French Jr., Joseph P. Guisti, Thomas B. Hooker, James L. Judge Jr., Leo P. Kane, Joseph H. Keffer.

Odabash, Joseph W. Redmond, Charles B. Ross Jr., Robert A. Schiller, James R. Shea and Vincent E. Sullivan.

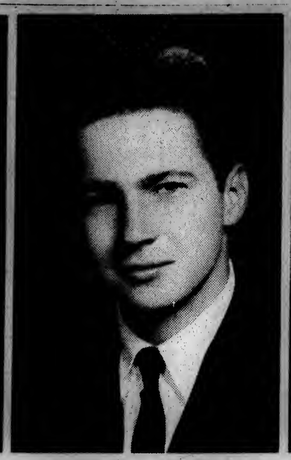
How List Compiled

The Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities, announced the list through Senior Class President Vince Sullivan.

Criteria for inclusion in "Who's Who" are participation in at least three extra curricular activities and a 2.5 cumulative average. Other requirements set up by the Administration are acceptable disciplinary and chapel records.

Villanova's quota was figured on an enrollment of 3,138.

Sullivan had lists of names submitted by Student Council Chairman Joe Martin, former Class President Jack Decker and VILLANOVAN Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith. Other lists had been turned in by the deans of Arts and Sciences, Engineering and Commerce and Finance.



The final 32 names were compiled after discussions among Sullivan, the Rev. George McLaughin, O.S.A., Dean of Men; Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President for Student Affairs; Rev. Thomas Burke, O.S.A., Registrar; Rev. John Klekotka, O.S.A., Chaplain and Father Girolami.

'Noche Espanola', Annual Spanish Night, Features Songs, Poetry And A Play

Friday night, Dec. 7, the Spanish Club of Villanova University will present its annual Spanish Night celebration, "Noche Espanola."

According to President Mike Ford and Spanish Night Chairman Gene Donohue, "This will be the Spanish Night to end all Spanish Nights." The program, which starts at 7:30, will start with a selection of Spanish songs on the piano by Luis Haddock, a fifth year engineer.

GRACIELA QUELQUEJEU
Noche Espanola Star

This spot on the program will be followed by Michael Pepe telling of his memories of Spain. Pepe was awarded a scholarship to study in Spain during the past summer by the Spanish Ministry of Education.

After this, a definite Spanish cultured flavor will be added to the affair by the singing of some Spanish folk songs by the glee club section of the Spanish Club. This will be followed with a solo by Alaimo Gaetano and an interpretation of a poem, "A Hymn to the Americas," by a group of students.

Consul of Spain

The first part of the program will be climaxed with a few words by Don Teodomiro de Aguilar, the Consul of Spain.

The second part of the Program will consist of a play presented in Spanish entitled, "Wanted, One English Professor." The stars of this play are Arturo Martinez of Villanova and Graciela Quelqueju of Rosemont who play the parts of Rafael and Luisita, respectively. Others appearing in the play are: Isabel Fagot, Maricarmen Matanza, Virginia Wright, and Angela Medina from Rosemont; and Miguel A. Paez, Nicholas Walls, Juan Lima, Michael Pepe, Joseph Zicarelli, and Peter Martorana from Villanova.

Original Production

While it is not well known, the play is a completely original production accomplished under the pen of Father Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., moderator of the Spanish Club.

"Noche Espanola" will have quite an important audience this year too. Invitations have been sent not only to the Consul of Spain, but also to the Consuls of Brazil, Chile, Columbia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Uraguay, and Venezuela.

Future of LYNX Looks Optimistic; First Issue Jan. 3

Three important announcements emanated from the LYNX office this week. The first issue of this year's LYNX will hit the campus on Jan. 3, greeting the Christmas vacation returnees.

Judging from the student response to the appeals for material, it is now considered quite probable that the LYNX will reach its goal of three issues this year, the next two coming out in March and May. Deadline for submission of material for the next issue is Jan. 18.

Featured in this issue of the LYNX will be short stories by Fred Fortin, Ed Karrer, John Kennedy, John Williams and Frank Delany, topical essays by VILLANOVAN editor-in-chief Tom Smith and Richard Madara and poetry by Daniel Bartolini, Gerald La Karnafeaux and George Tittle. The emphasis in the material is on reader appeal and balance of subject matter.

Jenkins and Delany Fly Home With 3 Gold Medals

Villanova's prestige in track spread around the world last week.

Charley Jenkins won two gold medals and Ron Delany took another as Jumbo Jim Elliott became the first American college coach to produce two Olympic winners.

Jenkins' victory in the 400-meter run last Thursday in Melbourne gave Villanova her first gold medal winner.. He was also a member of the winning 1,600-meter United States relay team.

1,500 Winner

Delany gave Ireland her first track and field gold medal since 1932 by roaring to victory Saturday in the 1,500-meter-run.

The turkey-trotting junior had been at the tail-end of the race with Australia's John Landy and Denmark's Gunnar Nielsen at the halfway point.

Landy then started making his bid and Ron stayed in the rear, slipped a few inches, but held his place as the pace got hotter. He made his bid rounding the turn into the back stretch and was in second place at the last turn.

Ron caught Klaus Richtzenchain of Germany 70 yards from the finish. Landy was moving up too and almost caught the German but coldn't make it as Delany beat Klaus by several yards in Olympic-record time of 3.41.2. It was just one six-tenth of a second off the world record and chopped four seconds off the previous Games' mark.

Roars By Jones

Jenkins, a senior from Cambridge, Mass., also won his 400 title with a surge in the stretch. Running third, he suddenly swept around world record holder Lou Jones, New Rochelle,

Belle Masque's 'Billy Budd' Ready For Tomorrow; Brown, Brockman and Buono Star

Senior English majors Bob Lima and Bill Brown practice for the opening of Belle Masque's "Billy Budd" in the Field House tomorrow night. Brown has the title role of Billy Budd.

Tomorrow, Friday and Saturday nights, the Belle Masque Drama Society presents its fall production "Billy Budd."

Written by Herman Melville as an adventure novel of life aboard an 18th Century British warship, this story, although not Melvilles best known work, was a tremendous success. The book was adapted for the stage by Cox and Chapman and was received by Broadway audiences with mixed emotions.

The critics were overwhelming public was rather slow to become aware of the intrinsic value with their praise, but the general of the show. After a moderate run, "Billy Budd" closed down. Few amateur theater groups have attempted to portray this drama because it demands much of its cast.

First Lead for Brown

The title role is portrayed by Brown, a senior English major from Ardmore, Pa. This is his first lead in the Masque productions though he has appeared in them since his freshman year.

In 1953 Brown had a walk-on part in "The Admirable Crichton" and then in his sophomore year he landed the role of a southern senator in "Command Decision."

In the fall production of "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" Bill had a small role and another small part in the spring presentation of "Detective Story."

Outside Experience

Bill gained further experience while appearing in the 1954 Immaculata College production of "Our Hearts Were Young And Gay" and later that year in the male lead role, Henry VIII,

Denison To Play For Charity Ball

Jim Egizio, vice president of the Class of '58 and general chairman of this year's Orphan's Weekend, announced that the Charity Ball Dec. 14, under the chairmanship of Vince Caracio, will feature the music of Lou Denison's 12-piece orchestra.

The theme of the dance will be appropriate to the Christmas season, and decorations are under the direction of Bill Fallon, Tom Sprenger and Mike Delany.

Tickets will be on sale in Dougherty Hall beginning Monday, Dec. 10. Admission will be $1 if the ticket is purchased before Dec. 14 and $1.50 if bought at the door.

The Junior Class ticket committee, under the direction of Fred Herr, John Muller and John Lyons urge all students to buy tickets even if they cannot attend the dance, since the proceeds will be used for the Orphan's Outing and gifts for the "Johnnies" of St. John's Orphanage at their party.

Big Day for Orphans

The big day for the boys from St. John's will be Dec. 15 and all Villanovans, including coeds are urged to take one of the boys through the itinerary, which will include a tour of Wanamaker's, a visit with Santa Claus, lunch and a movie.

Paul Laughlin and Don Luzzi, chairmen of the outing, have asked all Villanovans to contribute to the collections being taken up in all Religion classes

Following the weekend outing, a party for the orphans will be given on Monday, Dec. 17. Mike Mancuso and John Donatucci are in charge of the party, at which each of the "Johnnies" will receive gifts and refreshments.

McCloud Named Chairman Of Interfraternity Ball

The Interfraternity Ball returns to the Villanova social calendar Jan. 11, and the support it receives will decide whether it becomes a permanent event.

Bill McCloud, senior history major and member of Delta Pi Mu, was appointed ball chairman by Bill Wescott, Student Council social chairman.

McCloud heads a committee which also includes Jack Dunn of Delta Pi Epsilon and Marty Dohany of Lambda Kappa Delta. The three represent their fraternities on the Council.

Bobby Schiller and his Villanovans will provide music for the ball from 9 to 1 in the Field House. The group will feature its own brand of Dixieland which has become famous around these parts.

Ticket Sales Planned

Tickets for the ball, priced at $2 per couple, will go on sale "as soon as possible," according to Dunn, who will handle sales.

McCloud will supervise arrangements for the ball and Dohany will be in charge of publicity. Jim Stark, of Delta Pi Epsilon, will handle decorations.

The Interfraternity Ball was dropped from the social calendar about two decades ago. McCloud said it will be up to students to decide whether the ball will become an annual event.

"If the dance is a success," he explained, "the three fraternities will join with Phi Kappa Pi and the ball will then cover all the schools of Villanova."

At present PKP sponsors the financially-successful Owl Hop at the start of each school year.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

THE ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT

November 5, 1956

Dear Mr. Smith:

The President has asked me to thank you for your letter telling him of the result of the election poll conducted by The Villanovan.

The result was, of course, most heartening to him. However, he was equally delighted to know of the important service rendered by your newspaper in arousing the interests of your fellow-students in the campaign.

The very kind thought expressed by yourself and your associates about the President were deeply appreciated by him.

Sincerely,

Sherman Adams

Mr. Thomas E. Smith
Editor-in-Chief
The Villanovan
Villanova University
Villanova, Pennsylvania

This letter from Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams was received by the VILLANOVAN after the Oct. 31 edition announcing that President Eisenhower had won the paper's straw poll.

Hail, Champions

Never before in the history of the Olympic Games have the athletes of any one college or university managed to take home three gold medals. History has been made, and it has been made by Villanova University.

We of Villanova are proud of many things. We have a right to be. But right now three men rate just about tops. Our hats are off in sincere admiration to those three who have carried the name of Villanova University into prominence of perhaps the highest echelon in the world of sport.

Charley Jenkins and Ron Delany, in bringing three Olympic gold medals and the praise of the sports world home to Villanova, have certainly merited this praise. And Phil Reavis has proven to be one of the top high jumpers in the world. They are a credit to the name they represent.

And although these are the three making most of the headlines, we feel that our hats warrant another tip. This time to Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, Villanova's highly-esteemed track coach. It was under his care and guidance that the Villanova track team in its entirety and Jenkins, Delany and Reavis in particular rose to the lofty heights of the top of the track world.

Mr. Elliott is one of the best, if not the best track coach in the nation, and we are sure that when our medallioned athletes glance into the polished gold of their medals they may catch a quick glimpse or two of Jumbo's smiling face.

It appears fitting to add that when these three Villanovans return to Philadelphia we expect to see a reception by the Villanova students unequalled in the history of the city.

The "City of Brotherly Love" has already had a fleeting look at Villanova spirit, but in the words of that famous English major, "They ain't seen nothin' yet."

Palestra Support

The spirit displayed by the student body during the past football season was outstanding. Perhaps it was the finest display ever seen at Villanova. The apathy of the past years was reborn into a solid wave of student enthusiasm.

The question arises, "Will this newborn spirit continue during the year, or will it fade silently away with the close of a successful football season?" Or more specifically, "What kind of support will be given to the basketball team?"

Last season Villanova had a fine team, but was let down quite noticeably by the student body. More than once, prominent people connected with Philadelphia sports wondered out loud what had happened to the once boisterous Villanova spirit. Students from other Philadelphia schools were yelling much louder and quite a bit longer than our representatives at the Palestra. And they were getting results.

It only took a couple of defeats to completely douse Villanova spirit. A "so what" attitude quickly asserted itself, and, in all respects, the team was through. Thus ensued a poor season with worse than mediocre student support.

The same thing could happen this year. Tonight at the Palestra, Villanova opens its season against one of the top teams in the country, and we will not win unless Villanova cheers are constantly ringing through the Palestra's lofty rafters.

It is also evident that the other Philadelphia school on the basketball program at the Palestra tonight is considered by far the most spirited of the "big five." Last year they continually and easily out shouted us. They practically made made a mockery of Villanova spirit, and had a fine time doing it.

We feel it is about time the shoe was shifted to the other foot.

Political Round-up:

U.S. and U.N. Must Combine For Peace

For the past few weeks there has been considerable controversy in this country with regard to the standing of the United Nations among the average person. Many people in high authority have voiced the opinion that, in the minds of the American people, the United Nations can do no wrong. They claim that United States foreign policy is becoming bogged down in the speech-making of the United Nations. According to these reports, the propaganda of the United Nations and the Eisenhower Administration on the U. N. has been so successful that the public is completely oblivious to the facts of international life.

The fact of the matter is that this report, while containing some obvious truths, also contains some deeply-seated flaws. To begin with, the foreign policy of this country has at last taken the form of being a positive one. No longer are we groping around in the maze of foreign relations. We have decided to stick by the United Nations and we are continuing to do it.

U.S. Takes Stand

From the beginning of this mess, the United States has taken a stand for what is right and in the face of all opposition has remained by it. The State Department has seen that the action taken by Britain and France has gone completely against the U.N. Charter. They have understood that the most important thing in world today is not Egypt but the United Nations.

DONOHUE

When views such as this are brought forth they immediately evoke a wave of criticism which usually attacks the promulgator for not being realistic. On the contrary, however, this view of the universal is the realistic approach. Had we supported England and France or even taken unilateral action against them in this action, the United States would have been guilty of lowering the U. N. to the status of the defunct League of Nations.

Prestige Regained

By following through with this support of the United Nations, the United States has gained back for itself and for the U.N. some of the prestige it had lost in the initial action that had taken place in the Middle East. The Arab states respect the United States for this stand more than is shown at times but we are still a long way from being their idol and the model for their governments.

Many people also claim that Russia has gained much ground in the area because of their policy. It can very truthfully be said that the threat of Russian "volunteers" fighting in Egypt has done more to get English and French conciliation than any other force. Following this same general line of thinking they therefore feel that the United States should have offered this type of aid in the beginning, either through direct intervention or through some other more forceful action.

This action also was possible from a realistic point of view. Had the United States taken stronger action than they did, NATO and any alliance that this country has with Britain and France would have been finished. Things are bad enough now with the controversy still raging because of the shortage of oil for western Europe. There is strong doubt in many quarters as to whether even now, the breach can ever be fully healed and made over to be as strong as it once had been.

U. S. Is Responsible

Therefore the United States took the strongest action that was possible and is continuing to follow it. If any ground is awarded because of this aggression, then the United Nations has failed and will never be able to handle any important issue again.. If aggression is made to pay, then the chances of the United Nations survival in this troubled world are negligible. If any of these things happen, it will be the fault of the United States because right now we are the backbone of this organization and The United States is the only great power that has not tried to circumvent the United Nations in this crisis.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

It is the desire of the editors of the VILLANOVAN that the "Letters to the Editor" column be one of the prominent features of the paper each week. Letters from students voicing their opinions on campus topics can provide most interesting reading matter for the student body.

'Billy Budd' Goes To Sea In Real Ship

By Joe Wheeler

When Billy Budd goes to sea in the Belle Masque production of the same name, he will sail on the first ship ever built in the Villanova Field House.

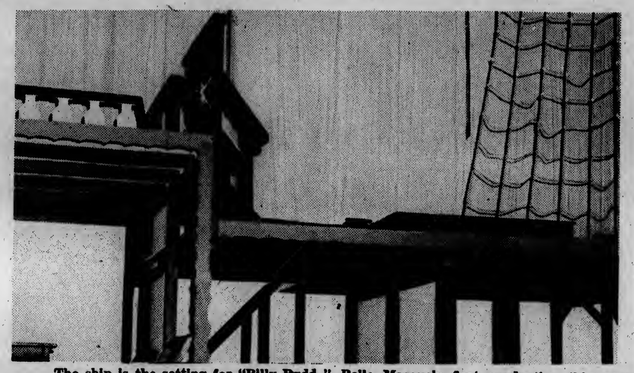
While the tale of "Billy Budd" will be unfolded tomorrow night and the two succeeding nights, the actual production began in early October. The decision was made — Belle Masque would produce "Billy Budd"; casting was begun.

At this same time, tentative steps were made in the construction of the most ambitious and difficult stage setting attempted by the Belle Masque. The facsimile of an eighteenth century British frigate had to be built on the Field House by the stage crew.

Krupa, Duprey and Co.

Jake Krupa designed the set and supervised its construction with the assistance and suggestions of Mr. Richard Duprey, show director. The co-managers of the stage crew, Joe Chinnici and Joe Guisti, working with Mr. Krupa set down the basic outlines of the proposed set.

The general outline of this set would cover over ninty-percent of the visible stage area, and this was just the floor plans. Since the entire action of the play could not take place on the deck of the ship, some other arrangement had to be made for the other scenes in the action.



The main desire of Belle Masque with regard to the set was to make it as realistic as possible. Since nothing would be more realistic than a ship itself, a ship would be built.

U. S. Navy Assists Authenticity

One difficulty at this time was the problem of authenticity. Lt. (jg) Eldon Parks of the Villanova Naval Science Department was called upon to supply much-needed technical directions.

Through October and November the Field House was a place of organized confusion. Men climbing over mounds of scaffolding and disorganized piles of lumber gave the impression that the cast would be playing on an incomplete stage in December.

One hundred and forty man hours produced a minor miracle in the appearance of the stage—with the reproduction of a cross-section of a British frigate, circa 1796.

The ship is the setting for "Billy Budd," Belle Masque's first production this year, which will "up anchor" with tomorrow night's performance.

Thirty-eight Foot Ship

The ship is over thirty-eight feet in length, and three levels-quarterdeck, main deck, and ship's hold. These three levels are divided into six acting stages. The depth of the ship is in excess of fourteen feet while the height from the stage floor to the quarter-deck in the stern is over fifteen feet.

Mainmast Feature

A remarkable feature of the set is the mainmast which is complete with rat lines and boarding nets. From the stage floor to the top of the mast is some twenty-four feet high and is fitted to the deck in such a manner that the mast does not extend into the acting area below the main deck.

Under the maindeck are cabins and the crew's quarters—all visible to the audience and authentic in every detail.

The unusual stage set, representing much hard work, bodes well for the Belle Masque's hopes of another hit.

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

The pages of our college life are slowly but surely passing us by. The senior views the subject by realizing that graduation is only six months away. The junior remains in his shell until second semester when he comes into bloom. Our friend the "soph", a big boy this year thinks he knows all the angles since he's been here a year and a quarter. Poor Freddie the Frosh, he's still lost. He's been here for two months and can only look to the future here at Villanova.

REICH

Exams have come and gone, the screams have subsided from home and we've all promised to do better the next time. Now we can settle down for a little brief but enjoyable pre-Christmas entertainment and social life.

Carnival on the Hill

Movies have become quite popular across the tracks at Rosemont. Last week Julie Adams starred in "Bright Victory," so this week's should be equally good.

Over at Chestnut Hill this Friday we can celebrate our new-fallen snow at the "Winter Carnival." This will be what they call a half-party and kindler. It begins at 7:30 and should provide a lot of fun.

There is a rumor that there will be a dance at I. C. this coming Sunday afternoon.

Christmas Carolling Near

In the near future we can look forward to a number of evenings of Christmas carolling. We all remember Rosemont's annual visit to our chapel, and Villanova's impromptu return engagement to Rosemont last year.

Away from the Christmas spirit, for awhile, it was noted at the big rock 'n roll show at the Arena last Wednesday night that our football squad was well-represented. Seems a few of the Wildcats were out on the town. At the show Bill Haley and his Comets shared billing with groups such as the Platters, the Clovers, the Flairs, Frankie Lynaon and the Teenagers, plus Shirley and Lee, Clyde McPhatter, Ella Johnson and the big rocking band of Buddy Johnson. Jim Macdonald, your "Ace From Outer Space," was also on hand to tape record interviews with these stars. The recordings will be presented over WVIL at some future date.

More of Elvis

Still on the subject of rock 'n roll, Elvis Presley opened in his new movie, "Love Me Tender," at the Fox in Philly. With a personal dislike for Elvis, I find it difficult to go along with the movie critics who raved about his acting ability. For an unusual experience be sure to go see it.

The BILLBOARD record spotlight this week also falls on a rock 'n roll hit. The Platters on the Mercury label are up and coming with their new one, "On My Word of Honor." Their styling is leisurely and luxurious with the high flying lead embroidering the melody profusely.

Advantages Seen For College Men, Coeds Who Seek U.S. Foreign Service

By FRANK DELANY

The function of the Foreign Service of the United States government is to establish and maintain friendly relations between the government and people of the United States and the governments and peoples of the countries with which we maintain diplomatic relations.

This requires a large force of educated, personable and representative personnel and provides an attractive and reasonably lucrative field for the college graduate.

An applicant for the Foreign Service must meet many requirements. He must be an American citizen and have been a citizen for five to ten years depending on the position for which he is trying.

All applicants must be willing to accept assignment to any foreign post. If married, applicants must be married to an American citizen. Physical requirements based on army and navy standards must be met since candidates may be required to serve under extremely difficult living conditions.

Those under consideration for positions with the Foreign Service are subject to a suitability investigation which generally requires two months for completion.

Age Requirements for Applicant

Age requirements vary according to positions. Foreign Service officer candidates—

Coeds who feel inclined toward a career in this field are reminded that married women are ineligible.

Salaries are graded according to the job classification. For Foreign Service officers, the salary ranges from a minimum of three thousand, nine hundred and ninety-three dollars for those in Class 6 to a maximum of fourteen thousand three hundred dollars for Class 1 employees. An equivalent scale is in effect for Foreign Service reserve officers.

Foreign service staff officers and employees range from a two thousand seven hundred and ninety dollars minimum for Class 14 employees to an eleven thousand one hundred and thirty dollars for those in Class 1.

Foreign Service Benefits

Other benefits accrue to a Foreign Service employee. At posts where government housing is not provided, an allowance is paid which is intended to cover rent, light, heat, gas and electricity. In addition there is a variable allowance for those areas where the cost of living has been ascertained to be higher than that in Washington, D. C. and a differential allowance is paid to those who are considered to have exceptionally difficult living and health conditions.

An officer or employee of the Foreign Service receives transportation expenses for himself and his family from his residence to his post abroad.

The tour of duty for a Foreign Service employee is a continuous period of at least two years aboard before becoming eligible for home leave at government expense.

Annual leave is earned at the rate of thirteen days each year for employees with less than three years of government service. After that there is a slight increase corresponding to length of service. Home leave is earned at the rate of one week for every four months' service abroad. Home leave is for exclusive use in the United States. Sick leave is accrued at the rate of thirteen days per calendar year. Sick leave is accumulative over the years. During the first ninety days of service, no leave with pay can be granted.

All members of the Foreign Service with satisfactory service records receive annual salary increases ranging from one-hundred and twenty to four hundred dollars, depending upon the class to which assigned.

Foreign Service Promotions

Promotion in the Foreign Service is based on merit. A member of the service is promoted in accordance with demonstration of ability to assume duties of greater responsibility and in accordance with established regulations.

A retirement plan covers all Foreign Service members.

The Foreign Service Institute conducts courses of training and instruction for the officers and employees of the Foreign Service.

No particular course of study is advocated by the State Department for employment with the Foreign Service. Information concerning this type of employment can be obtained by writing to the Department of State, Office of Personnel, Washington 25, D. C.

St. Joe's Changes Stand:

Big Five Approves Sportsman Trophy

By TOM SMITH
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

After a preliminary veto by one college, the Big Five sportsmanship award has been approved for this season.

St. Joseph's College Student Council, after disapproving the proposed award two weeks ago, Monday night gave its approval.

The award, proposed in October by Villanova Student Council Vice Chairman Pat Nicholson, will be given to the Big Five school which is judged best in spectator conduct during games involving Big Five basketball teams at the Palestra this season.

Writers Judge

Supervising the award will be the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia. Judging spectator conduct at games will be sports writers from three Philadelphia newspapers and city and Palestra uniformed officials.

After a meeting Sunday, the CCGP decided that this procedure would be followed:

Spectators will be judged on sportsmanship. This was defined by the council as "faithful support of a team, whether winning or losing, courtesy, good conduct, good attitude toward the opposing school and all other persons concerned."

Nicholson Tabulates

Nicholson will handle tabulation of scores turned in after each game by the judges. He will then notify the five schools of their standing periodically during the season.

Only City Series games will be judged.

St. Joseph's Student Council had disapproved the award after a meeting of the CCGP at Villanova Nov. 18.

Want Skits

At the meeting the St. Joseph's representatives, John Foley and George Cooper, proposed that skits be allowed during Big Five games and judges be informed that skits are permitted and may be judged as part of the conduct of the fans.

The motion was voted down 7-2.

Two days later they wrote Student Council chairman Joe Martin, who had presided over the session here, that "St. Joseph's College has decided not to participate . . . . in the ultimate best interests of all the member colleges and universities of the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia . . ."

Joe Martin, Villanova Student Council Chairman, said that the CCGP emphasized that the sportsmanship award was not to be considered a contest.

It is planned as a tangible reward to encourage sportsmanlike conduct by students and spectators, Martin indicated.

The CCGP is composed of student government representatives from LaSalle, Pennsylvania and Temple, in addition to Villanova and St. Joseph's.

Rifle

A class in National Rifle Association basic rifle instruction will be held Dec. 10 to 18 in Commodore John Barry Hall at 5:30 p. m. Anyone interested should contact Sergeant Molcany at the marine office in CJB Hall.

Barry Hall Completed in 1949:

Naval ROTC Program, Inaugurated In 1946, Celebrates Tenth Anniversary

Villanova's Naval Reserve Officer's Training Corps unit has just quietly completed its tenth anniversary on campus. The program was inaugurated on campus in November of 1946. Captain C. Thomas was the first commanding officer of the earlier V-5 and V-12 training programs established earlier on campus.

Completing the first complement of officers were Commander James W. Whaley USN, executive officer, Lcdr. C. E. Lorenz, MC, doctor assigned to the unit and Captains Roger S. Toussaint, USMC, and Robert L. Morgan, USMC, marine instructors.

Villanova's 1st NROTC's

The unit had two-hundred seventy-nine midshipmen enrolled and grouped in two navy companies, two marine companies, one V-5 company and one V-12 company.

A milestone in the unit's growth was reached in 1949 with the completion of Commodore John Barry Hall, named after the man called by many the father of our navy, which was presented to the school by the Very Rev. Mortimer A. Sullivan, O.S.A., chairman of the Board of Trustees, and accepted by the Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., dean of the Arts and Science school.

At the same time the navy presented Villanova with an award for wartime service.

Captain Curtin, PNS

Ten years later, the NROTC has made its mark on Villanova. The unit now is commanded by Captain Neale R. Curtain, USN, and boasts a staff of six officers and seven enlisted men. Commander John L. Burge, USN, is executive officer.

But it is in the midshipmen that the measure of the unit is to be found. Constituting approximately only ten percent of Villanova's enrollment, the NROTC midshipmen exercise leadership and influence in the life of the university far in excess of their numerical strength.

Leadership Personified

The three class presidents are NROTC men: midshipmen Vince Sullivan, '57, Bob Mulcahy, '58, and Ken MacGillivray, '59. The vice-chairman of the student Council is midshipman Pat Nicholson. The editors of the Belle Air, Lynx and Villanova Engineer are midshipmen. Similarly, the lists of club and fraternity officers, publication editorships and athletes reveal name after name of Villanova midshipmen.

Ten years of Villanova NROTC has proved a unique mutual benefit society for the United States Navy and Villanova University.

SC Session

Student Council will meet Monday at 7:15 in room 207 C & F, Council Chairman Joe Martin announced.

He said a meeting scheduled for last Monday was postponed because some members were attending the varsity football banquet.

PUBlicly Speaking . . .

By BOB and MIKE

Let's consider the age-old collegiate problem of "life with roommate." A roommate is a four year necessary evil who always seems to emerge from every situation in a better light than you.

No matter what his physical make-up, a roommate can always fit into your clothes while none of his fit you. It's remarkable the number of times he's able to run out of soap, razor blades and clean towels.

A Case of Roomatitis

BOB and MIKE

Then there are the times you stay up half the night studying for a test while roommate has retired five hours previously with the minimum of study and winds up the next day with a higher grade than you do.

It never fails. His blind date is always nicer than yours. At parties, he seems to indulge more than you but always wakes up better the next day.

What's Mine Is Ours

Why is it that his schedule always begins an hour later than yours and ends two hours earlier? And his books are no help to you at all but all of yours are constantly in his possession.

How many times have you eagerly anticipated a pleasant half-hour in the shower room only to find that recently departed roommate has left you with a squeezed out tube of tooth paste, a wet towel, a used razor blade and no soap? As if that's not bad enough, you return from the shower to find your last clean shirt, your new sport jacket and your favorite tie gone.

He's Popular

When he's studying, absolute silence must prevail. But when you are in the sack, he thinks nothing of having the post-midnight poker association in for a meeting.

There happens to be one easy chair in your room. No need to mention to whom it belongs, who never sat in it and why he must have your pillow for a foot rest.

Why does he have to choose your desk as a receptacle for his dirty socks, underwear, hankies and khakis?

A Crumb Among Crumbs

Then there are the food packages you receive from home. Why does he take upon himself in your absence to distribute your food among his friends?

Who else can grub your last cigarette, borrow your last dollar, wear your last clean pair of argyles and win every argument?

After all is said and done, however, roommates are necessary. Who else would break in your new electric razor for you?

Pet Peeves ..... Ollie and Norm.

Peering . . . .

With NORM PEER

. . . . . At the sidewalk that doesn't exist between Sullivan Hall and the Pike. That big pit for the new C & F Building on weekends is full of muddy Villanovans trying to scramble up the sides after a wrong step. The Marine Corps wanted to take it over for an obstacle course, but after the swamp incident they decided not to.

. . . At all the road signs placed so strategically around campus. Mounted campus police would make it look like Central Park, As many signs as Broad Street and no cars on campus.

. . . At those cultural trips in Philadelphia that come with basketball season. Villanovans have been known to bring back a lot of Philly' — usually as much as they can carry.

. . . At the way we miss out on a holiday this Saturday. Something must be done about revising the calendar so it won't happen again.

. . . At all those wrapped packages in the window of the campus Sears and Roebuck. One wit says they contain do-it-yourself kits for more new buildings.

. . . . At the way our Christmas vacation begins so late. Christmas mail may be tied up for months without the labor of husky Villanovans. Some however, feel that the mail must go through and have left already. Shows a fine sense of patriotism.

Phi Kappa Pi Entertains Orphans, Holds Communion Breakfast in Busiest Week

Phi Kappa Pi fraternity will entertain orphans this week, gather for a communion breakfast and hear its new "drinking song."

The fraternity will continue the orphans' event it started last year when it entertains a crowd of boys at the Catholic Youth Center in Philadelphia this Saturday.

Boys will be brought to the hall from foster homes, where they live. One of the reasons this group was chosen for the party, according to Chairman Harry Fatkin, was the fact that these boys do not have the advantage of the normal orphanage life.

Sunday, fraternity members will hold the communion breakfast after 9 o'clock Mass in the Chapel. The breakfast will be served at the Falcon House on West Chester Pike. Tickets are priced at $1.25.

The fraternity's new song, written by Matt Mazza, Dick Deasy and Barney Donahue, will be introduced at the next smoker.

Bill Wescott is handling arrangements for the breakfast. Guests will include Dr. Walter Klein, head of the Industrial Administration department; Rev. John Klekotka, O. S. A., chaplain; Rev. William Farrell, O. S. A., assistant chaplain; Mr. John Gallen and Mr. William Driscoll.

President Gary Moran said yearbook pictures of fraternity members will be taken after the regular meeting Monday at 11:30 a.m.

Placement Office Announces Senior Interview Dates

Any seniors looking for a job?

The Placement Office has arranged for interviews for the class of 1957. Approximately 150 companies and agencies will converge on Villanova beginning Feb. 18. The Placement Office has a library containing advertisements, brochures and applications.

Mr. James J. Redfern, Placement Director, urges all students to use the facilities.

Alumnus Preps At Ariz. School Of Foreign Trade

John Kenneth Seward of Mexico, has enrolled as a member of the June 1957 class of the American Institute for Foreign Trade, Phoenix, Ariz.

Specializing in Latin American subjects, Seward is taking the school's intensive training course in preparation for a career in business or government.

Seward attended Bishop Loughlin High School in Brooklyn, and received his Bachelor of Science degree in Economics from Villanova, where he was a member of Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity, Turf 'n Tinsel Society and Accounting Society. He served in the U. S. Navy as a Lieutenant junior grade.

Saturday, the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, is a holyday of obligation for Catholics. The Sunday Mass schedule will be followed.

Criticism, Staff Members Wanted By ENGINEER

The VILLANOVA ENGINEER is on the lookout for constructive criticism and new staff members.

Editor-in-Chief Jack Essig said he will welcome comments on the first edition, which appeared Nov. 26. He also needs articles for the next issue, appearing in January.

"We have noted a definite lack of articles from freshmen and sophomore engineers. The staff is willing to assist anyone in writing articles," commented Essig.

Articles need not be purely technical but should run along technical lines, the editor explained.

Positions on the staff are open to any engineering underclassmen willing to work, noted Essig.

Students interested in writing articles for the next ENGINEER —deadline is Dec. 10—should contact Gerald White (239 Sullivan).

Freshman and Date Injured Crossing Pike

A Villanlova freshman and his girl companion were in Bryn Mawr Hospital today recovering from injuries inflicted by a car Friday night as they crossed Lancaster Pike to attend a dance in the Field House.

David Carney, a freshman in the C & F School, and Eve T. Kenny, 16, were listed in fair condition Monday night by a hospital attendant.

They were critically injured about 9:30 p. m. as they crossed the Pike at Ithan Avenue, bound for the NFCCS Mardi Gras Ball.

Carney suffered a compound fracture of the right leg, a brain concussion and multiple cuts and bruises. The Kenny girl, a student at Notre Dame of Moylan, suffered a fractured left hip, head injuries and multiple cuts and bruises.

They were given last rites of the Church at the accident scene by the Rev. Joseph Kemme, O. S. A., vice president for student affairs.

Radnor Township Police said the car was operated by Leo Stewart, 17, Ardmore. He was detained at the hospital suffering from shock.

Student Council President Joe Martin gets set to plant a kiss on the cheek of Villanova's first annual Homecoming Queen, Dorothy Williams between halves of Iowa State game.

Coughlan, Villanova Prof, To Speak to IRS Tomorrow

President Gene Donohue has announced that the December meeting of the International Relations Society will be held tomorrow night in 201 C&F at 7 p.m. Definite plans for the pending trip to Washington will be discussed along with the usual order of business.

The main item of the meeting will be the speaker and once again IRS has used Villanova talent. Mr. Francis Coughlan of the history department is going to inform the club on England's viewpoint of the Suez issue. Mr. Coughlan, himself a graduate of the University of London, came to Villanova in 1955 and has been following these events closely.

The meeting is open to anyone and Donohue stressed that all interested will be cordially welcomed.

WVIL Broadcasts Ball Game Tonight, All Home Contests

Tonight's play-by-play description of the Villanova-Canisius basketball game marks the beginning of the third consective season that all games have been broadcast live from the Palestra.

Ed Shea, WVIL station manager, assisted by Jim Judge Tom Smith and Lenny Bellanca will begin the broadcast tonight at 9:15.

Basketball broadcasting began two years ago with the taping of the home games. Last year, for the first time the games were heard live on campus direct from the scene of action.

This year Shea set a new football precedent. He travelled to Detroit and Houston to broadcast football games in those cities.

Confraternity of Christian Doctrine Plans Activities

The campus unit of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, organized through the NFCCS, is planning an active program for the remainder of the school year.

At two region-wide (Greater Philadelphia) meetings this year, the CCD units at local Catholic colleges discussed various programs with Rev. Charles Mynaugh, Archdiocesan CCD director.

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine is the official Church organization for the instruction of all Catholic laity not attending Catholic schools, including pre-school children, Catholic children attending public schools, and all Catholic adults. It is a parish organization of, by and for the laity, and it is privileged over all other lay organizations. All Catholics may belong to the CCD, either as active or as associate members. The Confraternity also does convert work.

The most important task for NFCCS CCD units is, according to Father Mynaugh, to prepare Catholic students for leadership in parish units after graduation. To that end, the emphasis will be on training programs in fundamentals and techniques of CCD work.

Senior Andy Panik Asks Witnesses

Anyone who witnessed or saw anything connected with the accident in which Villanova student Andrew Panik was injured Jan. 11, around 5 p.m. is asked to call LA 5-8860 or come to 721 Moore Ave., Bryn Mawr. It involves the outcome of a law suit between the student and the insurance company.*

Student Council Vetoes December Date for Free Day

By Bill Christy

A motion that the Student Council take Dec. 19, the Wednesday before Christmas vacation, for its annual free day was defeated at the last Council meeting Nov. 12.

The suggestion was made in the interests of students who may be seeking employment for the holidays. It was defeated by a large majority of Council members who felt that more students would prefer the Monday after St. Patrick's Day in March for the free day.

Rosary Each Night

Nightly rosary in residence halls for world peace, under supervision of Council Members, was approved.

The Spanish Club was given a seat on Council after approval of the petition submitted in the prescribed manner to Dick McEntee, Ways and Means Committee chairman. The club will not be officially seated until the Council is reorganized in May, and will have no voting power until then.

More Business

Other business at the meeting:

A report from the Spirit Committee recommending retirement of the Nick Basca trophy by Simpson Hall—which has won the award for the past four years—and more definite rules for judging the award.

A motion to give the Basca Memorial Weekend, established this year for the Villanova-Citadel game, preference on the social calendar was turned down.

A constitutional amendment was proposed to provide that the voting power of half-votes (organizations) on Council shall never be equal to or greater than that of full votes (class representatives). This proposal will be voted on at the next regular meeting Monday night, as required by the Council's constitution.

New Finance Group Hears Stock Broker On Market

Villanova's newly-organized Finance Society heard a talk on the stock market from a Villanova alumnus at last Thursday's meeting

Class of 1942

Mr. Robert Konnis, '42, and a stock broker with Merril Lynch and Co., was the speaker.

Society President William Haley announced that the next meeting will be held Dec. 13 at 10:30 a.m. in 101 C & F.

Explains Market Function

Mr. Konnis spoke on the phases and responsibilities of a stock broker and explained the function of the stock market and some of the traming programs that have been instituted for young men entering the field.

Professor Patrick Dougherty, society moderator, introduced the speaker. After the talk assistant moderators, Mr. Anthony Angeline and George Pearce led a discussion of questions from the floor.

VU Grad Places Second In ASME Award Judging

The 27th annual meeting of the National American Society of Mechanical Engineer was held in New York during the week of Nov. 25-30.

Forty members of the Vilanova ASME, headed by Professor George Orth, represented Villanova.

At this meeting, the Wilston Medal and Award was presented by Dean J. Stanley Morehouse, who is chairman of the Board Honors. Joe Distal, a Villanova graduate, placed second in the competition for the award.

Little Luzzi To Attend VU; 'Better Than I Was:' Don

The Luzzi family is about to create a football dynasty at Villanova.

Joe Luzzi, 16-year-old brother of junior tackle Don Luzzi, is planning to enroll here next September.

The younger Luzzi is a physical counterpart of his aggressive brother—stands 5-11 and weighs 228 pounds.

How does Joe rate as a ball player? "He was much better in high school than I ever was," commented Don, who seemed pleased at the prospect of his brother coming here.

Exerted No Pressure

But Don exerted no pressure in encouraging Joe's selection of a college. "I left it up to him but he says he wants to come to Villanova."

And there's evidence that Joe was quite a tackle at Wilbur Cross High School in New Haven, Conn. That's Don's alma mater, too.

Outstanding Player

One night the other week Joe took home an award as the "outstanding high school football player" in the New Haven area. The next night he was presented the Savitt Award for sportsmanship.

There is just one drawback: The Luzzi brothers will never be able to get together in the Wildcat forward wall. Opposing coaches will breathe a sigh of relief.

J. F. Lincoln Offers Grant To Engineers

The James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation of Cleveland is sponsoring a $5,000 award and scholarship design program for all resident engineering undergraduates.

These students will compete for 46 cash awards by submitting papers describing the design of either a machine, machine component, structure, or structural part in the construction or manufacture of which significant use is made of arc welding.

The purpose of this series of design programs is to encourage engineering undergraduates to study the value of arc welding through a competition in mechanical and structural design.

Books Given to Library

The Lincoln Foundation has donated over one hundred titles on arc welding to the Villanova Library. These reference books may be taken out by Villanova students and are located in the library stacks under the call number TS-227.

Further information on this design program may be found on the reserve shelf of the library.

Chem Group Sees Oil Co. In New Jersey

Last Tuesday, the American Chemical Society made a field trip to Paulsboro, N. J. Dr. Heininger, the moderator, and about 25 members attended this meeting at the Socony Mobiloil Co.

Last Wednesday, Mr. Carl Heineman lectured to the Chemistry Club on "Plastics."

The November issue of the Journal of Chemical Education magazine contains an article by three members of the Villanova faculty. Dr. G. N. Quam, Rev. E. F. Jenkins, O.S.A. and Rev. J. W. Puaquette, O.S.A., wrote the article entitled, "Teaching Manual Skills to Chemistry Majors." This article is based on a paper presented at a meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Concert Band Plans Season

The Villanova Concert Band, under the direction of Bob Schiller, has begun preparation for its coming concert season.

The season will last from February to March with concerts being given at all the neighboring colleges and nursing homes.

Anyone interested in joining the band is urged to come to any of the weekly Monday night rehearsals.

Simpson Wins Again; Given Basca Plaque

After a four-year victory skein, Simpson Hall has retired the Basca Award Plaque.

The award, presented annually, goes to the hall on campus with the best football decorations. Pat Nicholson, Spirit Committee chairman, made the announcement.

Prominent Judges

Judging the decorations were broadcasters Ed McMahon and Jack Whitaker from WCAU; Jim Leaming from WIP; Mr. William Driscoll and Mr. Sullivan of the Villanova Physics Department; Dr. Walter Klein, Industrial Management, and Capt. John J. Grace, USMC.

Simpson Hall, featuring "A Football Weekend" display, carried away the honors. Good Counsel and Austin Halls were runners-up.

Reviews A New Movie

By HARRY & GERRY

The Lester Duchin Story is a tale of one man's frenzied fight for happiness in the face of overwhelming odds. It is the tale of one woman's tragic compromise with her heart in the face of her conscience. It is the tale of one youth's desperate bid for a normal childhood in the face of blindness, deformity and palsy. All in all this movie is so depressing it is bound to leave even the most stout-hearted optimist a blubbering whimpering wreck.

Lester Duchin, country bumpkin and unemployed piano player, leaves the little town of Dry Gulp and comes to the big city to find his fortune. Instead he finds the love of beautiful, talented, Kim Greenback, a filthy-rich socialite. Kim comes to Lester's opening on the Bowery and finds our hero cowering behind his piano under a rain of tomatoes. Deeply touched, she gets him a job playing background music in her father's shoe factory. Day after day, Lester sinks further in to the mire of mediocrity. Then one day, in a drunken stupor, he composes a magnificent rendition of "Chop Sticks", which sweeps the country over night. Now fabulously wealthy, Lester takes Kim's hand in marriage. Suddenly his fortunes plummet. Kim is bitten by a Tse-Tse fly and dies of a rare disease, their son Oswald is tramped in a polo match, and Lester is ruined when reporters discover his player piano.

The movie ends dramatically with Lester, humble and broken by life's cruel kiss, sneaking back to Dry Gulp where he is hanged by the disgusted townfolk.

Tab Collar, as Lester, is even more laughable in his first straight dramatic role than in his best comedy. Piper Cub, as the tender, sympathetic kin gives her greatest performance since her release from prison. However, Curly Lox, 6-foot-3, 280 pounds, former UCLA fullback, is somewhat miscast as Lester's eight-year-old son.

Lester Duchin Story is much too short . . . Cast much too small . . . No Biblical references . . . Phooey!

I predict that future generations will look upon the Lester Duchin Story as the worst piece of slop ever to crawl out of Hollywood. It stinks!

O-C Sees New York; Meets Tonight

The Opera-Classica Society had an active program during the month of November, featuring two trips to Philadelphia and one to New York City.

On Nov. 7 the Society members journeyed to Philadelphia to hear Maestro Eugene Ormandy conduct a program of light classical music played by the world renowned Philadelphia orchestra.

The opening of the Metropolitan Opera Season brought about another trip to Philadelphia on Nov. 27.

Tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. the Society again travels to the Academy of Music to hear the Vienna Philharmonic.

Moot Court Team Places 2nd In Regional Law Competion

A three-man team from the University of Pennsylvania Law School won top honors in the two-day Inter-Law School Moot Court Competition for Region Four, which ended last Saturday afternoon in the Federal Courthouse, Ninth and Chestnut Streets. Second place was awarded to the team from Villanova.

Both schools won the right to represent region four, composed of all law schools in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, in the national finals to be held during December in New York City. The plea of insanity as a defense in a criminal case was the subject.

Twenty-one members of the judiciary and prominent attorneys from Pennsylvania and New Jersey served as judges for the competition, which also included teams from the law schools of Temple University, Seton Hall University, Pittsburgh University, Dickinson College, Rutgers University, Newark, N. J. and Rutgers University, South Jersey Division.

Winners Get Awards

The University of Pennsylvania team consisted of Isaac H. Clothier IV, Ronald H. Isenberg and Richard M. Kirschner. Villanova teammates were Thomas E. Eichman, James A. Matthews and Anthony J. Ryan. Each member of the Penn team was awarded a copy of Goldstein's Trial Techniques, while members of the Villanova team received a copy of Gazam's Trial Tactics and Experiences.

Villanova will accompany the Penn team to New York because of a rule which allows both first and second place winners to compete in the national finals if there are more than seven schools participating in region four's elimination contest.

Prominent Men Judge

A three-man panel including Chief Justice Horace Stern, Supreme Court of Pennsylvania; Judge Harry E. Kalodner, United States Court of Appeals, and Thomas D. McBride, Chancellor of the Philadephila Bar Association, selected the winning teams in the final competition which began at 10:30 Saturday morning.

Mannino, James S. Marsh, George G. Nimick, Aloysius Polaneczky and John C. Saboe, all in Statistical Quality Control. Chemical Engineers meriting honor grades are: Fredric W. Berdux, Joseph D'Auria, Donald R. Klein, Joseph C. Maginn, Jr. and Ralph V. Robb.

Villanovans Seek Subs; Five of Six Graduate in June

Anyone with musical talent looking for a good campus organization?

The Villanovans, popular dance band, are looking for replacements and new members. Five of the six graduate in June, and with the desire of keeping the band alive, any applicants will be well received.

The group plays at local colleges, nursing homes and at spot guest appearances. Under the direction of Bob Schiller, the six musicians have made themselves a well known combo.

VU Nursing Sororities Plan Advent Commemoration Fete

Both student and graduate nursing sororities are contributing to the commemoration of Advent around campus this year. An Advent committee, combining representatives from the Alpha Delti Chi and the Pi Theta Chi sororities, has been appointed. The following events have been scheduled.

The two will combine one evening during the last week before vacation when one girl will be chosen to place the Christ Child in the crib. Prayers and hymns will complete the ceremony.

In the presence of the student nurses, each day a window of a structure representing "The Tower of David" will be opened. Exposed there will be a picture depicting the gospel story of the day. Prayers will then be said.

On Dec. 17 at 7 p. m., a tea will be given in Dougherty Hall for all faculty members. Each will be presented with a small gift from the students, these to be distributed by Santa Claus. All student nurses are invited and refreshments will be served.

The Nursing Division of the Class of 1958 finished its three-month training period in pediatrics at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia Nov. 26. Since Sept. 4, this group of six had been studying at St. Agnes Hospital, also in Philadelphia.

Blazers Ready

Blazers for the Classes of 1957, '58 and '59 will be delivered by Rogers-Peet Co. on Dec. 10 at the Publications Office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall, it was announced by P. J. Clarke, representative of Rogers-Peet.

Orders will also be taken for blazers at the same time, but no orders will be taken from freshmen.

Opportunities For Engineers Topic Of ASCE Speech

The American Society of Civil Engineers will hold a joint meeting with the Quarterdeck Society next Monday at 7:30 p. m. in Barry Hall.

The speaker will be an officer from the district office of the Civil Engineering Corps who will discuss "Careers in Civil Engineering in the Navy."

ASCE President Bill Barton urges all members to attend and invites freshman engineers. He said refreshments will be served.

Villanova guard Mike DeLucia wraps his arms around Iowa State back who has broken through the line, holding him to a short gain.

Aggressive Johnny Bauer grimaces as he strains to get past the Cyclone defense after sweeping an end.

Rick Sapienza is smothered under red-shirted Iowans as he bucks across for a Villanova touchdown. Villanova won the game, 26-0.

Basketball Season Opens Tonight Against Canisius

Wildcat Gridders Finish With First Winning Season For Coach Frank Reagan

By FRANK FLEMING

After three long, hard years, Villanova University can now boast of a winning football team. The 1946 Wildcat gridders, in closing their current campaign with a 5-4 won-lost record, are the first Villanova football club to win more than half of their games since all-american Gene Filipski led the 1952 squad through a 7-1-1 season.

This year's Cats won two of their last three games, routing The Citadel, 46-0, and Iowa State, 26-0, while losing to a strong Houston team 26-13.

Joe Ryan Captain 1956

A large thrilled and chilled home-coming crowd braved subfreezing temperature to watch the Wildcats close their season against Iowa State.

Grazione, Sapienza, Star

Jim Grazione and Rick Sapienza led the Wildcat offense by accounting for three of the touchdowns. Sappy scored the first T.D. by diving over from the one-yard-line after a pass interference penalty on a toss from Magee to Sapienza put the ball on the one.

Later in the game Rick sped into the end zone between two Cyclone safety men faking them enough to grab a 28 yard pass fired by Grazione. Graz, who led South Catholic High to the Philadelphia City Championship in 1954, was also instrumental in the last scoring play of the game as he completed a long pass to Bill Halligan, who made a fine over-the-shoulder running catch, which netted 55 yards and a touchdown. Halligan also played an outstanding game. Beside his two T.D. passes, Grazione gained 60 yards on the ground in five attempts.

Magee Scores

Billy Magee scored the other Wildcat touchdown when he went over from the one on a quarterback sneak. This score topped a 60-yard-drive in which Devereaux contributed 23.

The Cyclone's longest drive, 57 yards, and deepest penetration of the game was stopped short in the second period when Sophomore end Gene O'Pella recovered Paul Sharpe's fumble on the Villanova nine.

Two weeks previous to the Iowa State game the Wildcats gave a preview of the season's finale by riding over The Citadel, 46-0. Villanova scored almost at will, with Rollie West, the big Sophomore fullback, tallying twice.

The Battle of Houston

The following week V.U. traveled to Texas to meet Houston University. Early in the game Sapienza picked off a Cougar pass and returned it 81 yards along the sidelines for a touchdown. The Wildcats were ahead 7-0 at the quarter and 7-6 at the half. But then the Texans started moving and outscored Villanova 20-6 in the second half, making the final tally Houston 26, Villanova 13.

The one bright spot in the Houston trip was the Wildcat's pass defense which allowed the Cougars to complete only two passes for a total of five yards. This fete gained the Mainliners the number two spot in the national ranking for pass defense.

Schoener Elected Capt. by Members Of Swim Team

By DON KEMPF

Lou Schoener, Junior Arts student and all-around swimming star, was elected captain of the 1956-1957 Villanova varsity swimming team. Schoener, prepped at Philadelphia's St. Joseph's High School, won by a slim margin over team-mate Don Couig, co-captain of last year's team, who is expected by Coach Ed Giesz to be the mainstay of the team again this year.

Schoener, Couig Star

Both Schoener and Couig were stars on last season's squad which posted a record of nine wins and two losses, suffering defeats at the hands of only Penn and LaSalle. With but two lettermen missing from the 55-56 squad and an impressive group of sophomores coming up, Coach Giesz loks forward to an even better record than last year.

Denny Rinkacs former navy frogman; Ken MacGillivray, promising sophomore from the middle west; Bob Pinto, another promising soph; Jim Donnelly; and transfer student Joe Mason, ineligible this season, are the sprinters who will be competing in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events.

Villanova First

The VILLANOVAN learned Monday that upon completion of the 1956 football season Villanova University was ranked number one in the nation among major colleges in pass defense. Although coming from a reliable source, these final 1956 statistics had not yet been officially released by the NCAA.

Breast Stroke Champ

Coach Giesz has Lou Pinto, John Flynn, Jim Gregory, and Larry Palacio listed for the breaststroke. Palacio, sophomore from Conshohocken, was the National Interscholastic Catholic Breaststroke Champion while at St. Joseph's High School. Going in the back stroke will be Couig, who also competes in the individual medley, and sophomore Jerry Cechony. Mike Rafferty and Jim Corey will head the list of divers; while Schoener, Bob Duffy, Mike Klesius, and sophs Joe Lynch and John Rumbarger are slated to go in the distance events.

The Wildcats will be one of the best dressed teams in the nation when they open the season in New York against Holy Cross on December 8, for they'll be sporting the completely new uniforms purchased by the administration this year. And the uniforms will be getting a good deal of service as the team meets Penn, LaSalle, East Straudsburg, Temple, PMC, Swathmore, Adelphi, LIU, Delaware, Georgetown, and Loyola of Baltimore in the toughest schedule a Mainline swimming team has ever faced.

Wildcat Harriers Finish Campaign With IC4A Meet

By BILL VINCENT

On Nov. 19, at Van Courtland Park, New York, Villanova's cross counrty team, minus Olympian, Ron Delany, placed 14th in IC4A cross country meet. John Kopil and Alex Breckenridge, who finished seventh and eighth respectively, led the Wildcat harriers. Al Peterson, George Browne, and Vic DeMaio were the other Villanovans who scored in the meet.

Michigan State won the team championship with a total of 34 points. Spartan distance star, Henry Kennedy won the meet for the second year in a row in the record breaking time of 24 minutes 1.8 seconds.

Season Over

The IC4A Championship was the last meet of the cross country season for the Wildcat harriers. Only the IC4A Championships and a triangular meet with Pitt and Navy prevented the Wildcats from a perfect record. In the triangular meet the Wildcats placed second behind Pitt. However, Villanova downed Georgetown, St. Joseph's, Seton Hall, LaSalle, and Fort Monmouth during the season.

With the indoor track season approaching, Villanova can again boast of its great array of talent that has been so outstanding both inside and outdoors during the past two years. This group includes Charley Jenkins, Olympic 400 meter champion, world record holder of the 500 yard run, and anchor man on Villanova's great relay team; Don Bragg, first collegian ever to clear 15 feet in the pole vault; Phil Reavis, who has cleared 6'10" in the high jump; George Sydnor, world record holder in the 60 yard dash; Ron Delany, four minute miler and Olympic 1500 meter champion; and many other great track and field men. Presently, Phil Reavis, Charley Jenkins, and Ron Delany are competing in the Olympics at Melbourne.

First Indoor Meet

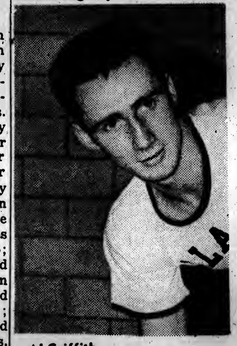
The first meet of the season is the Boston Knights of Columbus Games on January 19. January 25, the Wildcats will travel to Convention Hall in Philadelphia for the Inquirer Games. Other highlights of the indoor season are the Washington Star Games, the Milrose Games, the AAU Championships, and the IC4A Championships. The last three are held in Madison Square Garden in New York.

Potential All-American Set To Lead Griffins Attack

By BOB THOMAS

Villanova opens the 1956-57 basketball season tonight in the second game of a Palestra double header against Canisius College of Buffalo, N.Y. Head Coach Alex Severance enters into his twentyfirst year at the helm with six returning lettermen and promising talent from last year's freshman squad.

Captain Jim Smith, back for a half-season of college competition, will help form the nucleus of the Wildcat attack along with other senior lettermen Jack Weissman, Al Griffith and Jim Fahey. Tall juniors Tom Brennan and Jack Kelly in their second varsity season will give the Mainliners reserve strength in the height department.



Scoring Punch

Joe Ryan, the highly-touted sophomore, is expected to add scoring punch to the Villanova attack. Besides leading the freshman team in scoring last year, Ryan also displayed fine ball-handling and defensive ability. Ken Harrison, another newcomer to the varsity, should prove valuable with his great rebounding ability.

Canisius has three returning starters from last year's team which posted an impressive 19-7 record. Last season the Griffins were the Western New York Little Three Conference Champions and they advanced to the Eastern Regionals Final of the NCAA before bowing to Temple.

Nowak

Hank Nowak, the team captain, is being tabbed as a possible All-American candidate. The six-three forward tallied 467 points last year for an average of 18.6 points per game. He had a shooting percentage of 43.8 and he pulled down 321 rebounds to be the team leader in that department for the second straight year. In his first varsity season, Nowak scored 418 points to set a sophomore scoring record at Canisius.

Al Griffith ... best rebounder

This will be the ninth meeting between these two clubs in a rivalry in which each team has won four games. Canisius has been victorious in the last three contests. Last year the visitors tallied an 89-81 triumph and in the 1954-55 season the Griffins trounced the Wildcats 86-63 in the regular season game and then knocked the Blue and White out of the NCAA tournament with a 73-71 win. Villanova's last win over Canisius was a 61-57 decision in the 1953-54 season.

Persistence Pays Off

By JOE SLAVIN

Amid the stenched air of the slaughter yards of Chicago, an animal referred to as a "Judas goat" performs a very gruesome task. It has the odius responsibility of leading the cattle to the slaughter houses. Its function is one of a leader and not an active participant.

Throughout the football seasons of 1954 and 1955, Coach Frank Reagan had the thankless duty of leading the Villanova football team. Each Saturday he directed a group of athletes onto the gridiron only to be defeated by superior opposition. Nothing could have been more frustrating than to have had a team consisting of players trained under another coach who used a different system and another group of unseasoned players who had to compete against some of the nations top teams. However, for two years Frank Reagan worked arduously to form a squad which would be a true representative of Villanova.

Reagan was plagued with bad breaks. Injuries to some of his outstanding players in addition to the departure of line coach "Otie" Douglas added to his many problems. Besides commanding the respect of the team, he also won the respect and admiration of the student body. Whenever the team returned to campus from an away game, it was Reagan who received as much applause as any of the outstanding players.

The disastrous results of his first two seasons as coach at Villanova caused many to wonder why Reagan wanted to remain a football coach. Surely many other jobs could be found which would be more rewarding. Coach Reagan's determination to produce a winning team has proved beneficial to the followers of the Wildcats.

Scoring Mark

Frank Reagan's association with football extends over the past 20 years. He first gained gridiron fame playing for North Catholic High School in Philadelphia. As a hard-running halfback he was recognized as one of the top prospects in the Philadelphia area. He played college football at Pennsylvania at a time when they were considered a power in football. He soon won acclaim as one of the nation's outstanding gridders. Reagan's reputation was enhanced when he bested Michigan's All-American Tommy Harmon in a widely publicized duel at Franklin Field. A year later, he scored 31 points against Princeton to establish a still-unbroken scoring mark.

Pro Football

After graduation, Reagan played several games with the New York Giants before entering the U.S. Marine Corps, where he attained the rank of captain before being discharged in 1946. Rejoining the Giants he led the team to the Eastern Division Championship, but suffered a severe jaw-fracture in the play-off game against the Chicago Bears. From 1949 until 1952 he continued his participation in football, mainly as a defensive halfback with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Although his three years at Villanova have not been as noteworthy as his previous association with the sport, Coach Reagan is to be commended for his efforts. We sincerely hope that he will be able to be associated with football for at least another three more years here at Villanova.

Taller Players Indicate Good Varsity Prospects

Freshman basketball coach Maje McDonnell is in the happy situation of being well supplied with height as he prepares his squad for an eleven game schedule which opens Dec. 15.

Although McDonnell has not as yet chosen a starting line-up, he is certain of having an appreciably taller quintet than that which romped to an impressive 14-3 log last year.

Height

Included in the present squad of 12 players are nine who top the 6'2" mark, the tallest of whom is John Driscoll, 6'7" pivot man who was named to the "All - Catholic" team last year while at Philadelphia's West Catholic.

All-State

Raveling, who has shown himself to be a strong rebounder as well as a point-producer, and bespectacled McGovern, extremely sharp from the outside for a big man, earned Pennsylvania "All-State" recognition at St. Michael's Prep of Scranton and Lykens High, respectively.

Rieder, after four years as the mainstay of Gloucester Catholic (N.J.), had a sparkling year at St. Francis Prep, Spring Grove, Pa. George's primary offensive weapon is a deadly jump-shot.

Goudlock and Rolls are both products of Roman Catholic of Philadelphia. The former garnered "All-Catholic" honors last year. He is unusually quick, driving well against a man-to-man defense. Rolls is a muscular youth who needs a lot of work, but coach McDonnell is pleased with his willingness to learn.

Football Players

Both Heron and Norton have just reported for practice after completing their work-outs with the freshman footballers. Heron is a local lad, coming to Villanova from LaSalle High. Norton attended Rice High in New York prior to a military service tour.

Ward, from Malvern Prep, has impressed in the early drills.

Ryan, Ferruolo and Flynn Receive Awards at Annual Football Dinner

You wouldn't believe it, but Delurey Devil end Jim Koczak was able to catch this pass during the Intramural football championship game played last week. Delurey beat the Junglebunnies, 14-0, to win the crown.

Captain Joe Ryan, John Ferruolo, and Mike Flynn were recipients of the three major awards presented at the 35th annual football dinner last Monday night at the Benjamin Franklin hotel in Philadelphia. The banquet given annually by the Villanova Club of Philadelphia honors the varsity football team and its coaches.

Ryan, who was elected captain for the season, was given the Martin J. McLaughlin Memorial Award which goes to the captain of the team.

The National Alumni Award to the most valuable player was presented to halfback John Ferruolo and the Cyril J. Burke Trophy for the most consistent lineman was awarded to guard Mike Flynn.

McKenna Speaker

Featured speaker of the evening was John McKenna, head football coach at Virginia Military Institute and former standout center on the Wildcats' unbeaten 1937 team. While here at Villanova, McKenna played under Harry Stuhldreher and Clipper Smith. He was nominated on several "all" teams in the 1937.

McKenna began his coaching career at Malvern in 1946 after service duty and following an unbeaten season in 1946, he returned to his alma mater as line coach under Jordan Olivar. In 1952 he joined the VMI staff and in one year was named head coach.

Delurey Devils Win 'Mural Laurels On Late Scores

By CHARLES CARROLL

Scoring on two plays in the closing minutes of the game, the Delurey Devils downed the Jungle Bunnies, 14-0, on Nov. 29 to clinch the 1956 intramural football championship. The two teams battled evenly in a scoreless first half on Austin Field.

Late in the third period the Devils broke the ice when Kieran trapped the Bunnies' Devery in the end zone for a safety and two points. Then, with but a few minutes left in the game, Delurey ran rampant. DeCicco hit Kockzak with a touchdown pass covering 40 yards. Minutes later Egizio tore loose on a 35 yard scoring run to end the scoring and put the 1956 season into the record books.

The only event remaining on the fall schedule, the annual golf tournament, was held at the Mainline Golf Course on Nov. 7. Low man was sophomore Owen Klein with a score of 71.

Winter Program Begins

The winter intramural program was ushered in Nov. 27 in Alumni Gym. The evening featured a rope-climbing contest won by Steve Carton and a basketball foul-shooting contest copped by Terry Lynch, who sank 41 out of 50 shots.

The basketball league has attracted the greatest interest and largest participation among the winter sports. The league will open on Monday, Dec. 10. Intramural Council President Jim Moran has announced that this year the 4:30 and 5:30 leagues on Monday and Wednesday will be reserved for varsity and freshman athletes only.

Due to the large turnout, the department has announced that probably both Alumni Gym and the Field House will be used for games. Team applications are available around campus and must be turned in to the Intramural Office, 112 Alumni Hall.

Team Captain Anticipates Successful Court Season

By JACK CURTIN

One man who should know. Jimmy Smith, sandy haired captain of the 1956-57 Villanova Basketball squad, feels that this is the year for the Wildcats. Smitty says that the team has "good material and good spirit. In fact, we have the best prospects we've had since I've been here."

Graduates in February

Smith himself will play in only 16 of the team's 27 games this season. A philosophy major in the Liberal Arts division, he will graduate in February.

A native Philadelphian, Jim played his high school ball at West Catholic. Upon graduation, he matriculated at Loyola College in California. Deciding to return to the Philadelphia area, Smitty found Villanova to be the school of his choice.

Named All-City

Smith began playing varsity ball for the Mainliners in his Sophomore year. Last year he captained the Villanova team and was the only Wildcat named to the all-city team.

Looking ahead, Jim feels that the Canisius opener in the Palestra tonight is the key to the season. If they win this one, and he says they should, he thinks the team will be given that extra little push for a great season.

Top Scholastically

The achievements of Jimmy Smith do not end on the basketball court, however. He is one of the top men, scholastically, in the Arts school, and was the only athlete named to the National Collegiate Who's Who last year. Another outside activity which might be noted is his interest in a young lady from Overbrook Hills, Barbara Sullivan.

Like everyone else on campus, Smitty is looking forward to a possible game against Notre Dame in the Christmas Festival in New York, but for a special reason. Bob Devine, one of the Fighting Irish stars, has been Smith's roommate at summer camp in Straudsburg, Pa., for three years.

After his graduation, Jim would like to go into Marine Intelligence Service, and someday hold a diplomatic post with the State Department.

Smitty has another ambition too, to become the sixth man in Villanova's history to join the select 1000 point club. He has 820 now, and will have to average around 12 points a game. If he succeeds, you can be sure there will be few, if any, losses on the Villanova record when the stalwart captain finishes his final game.

AIEE-IRE Chapter Tours RCA's Cherry Hill Plant

Villanova's American Institute of Electrical Engineers-Institute of Radio Engineers made an inspection trip Thursday through the Radio Corporation of America's Cherry Hill Center in New Jersey.

Among the features noted by the 75 engineers who made the afternoon-long tour were demonstrations of the company's black-and-white and color TV development laboratories, missile test instrumentation, radar and communications devices.

AIEE-IRE held its regular monthly meeting Monday, highlighted by the showing of "Underwater Giant," a movie produced by the Okonite Corporation.

The story of the famous Bonneville Submarine Cable featured in LIFE magazine, the film described the years of planning, manufacturing, testing and installation of the world's largest rubber-insulated high voltage cable.

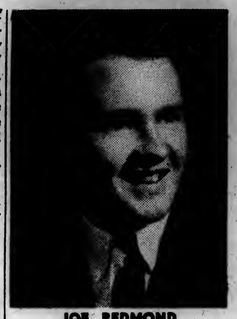
in "Catherine of Aragon." This production won the intercollegiate drama festival at Harcum Junior College for that year.



Chuck Brockman has been cast in the role of Captain Vere, the master of the British warship which has impressed Billy Budd into service. Chuck is a Pre-Law major from Phoenixville, Pa., and is a favorite of the Belle Masque followers.

A freshman from San Diego, California, Vic Buono, has been cast in the role of Claggart, the Master of Arms. Although he is a frehman Vic ha had a great deal of experience in high chool productions and stock companies on the West Coast. While in high school he appeared in "The Barrets of Wimpole Street", "Hamlet", "The Great Big Door Step", and two original plays written by an Augutinian.

Tickets are on sale in Dougherty Hall all day tomorrow and Friday. They can also be purchsed from any member of the Belle Masque organization. General admission is $1.25 and student tickets cost $1.00.

Redmond Names Date For T'n'T Production

JOE REDMOND
T 'n T President

Joe Redmond, president of Turf and Tinsel Society, has announced that the club has finally acquired a new date for its 1957 musical comedy production. Finding the old date, May 8, an impossible time to stage the show because of its immediate precedence by Holy Week and Easter vacation, T 'n' T has attained March 7, 8 and 9 for the production.

For some time there had been much confusion in getting a new date. But now the problem is solved and the show will definitely be held.

Seniors Write Book

In order to form a more self-contained organization, the show will be written this year for the first time by two Villanova students. Senior Bob Schiller and Bernie Conway are well on their way to completing the book for the show. Bob Whelan, Villanova's business manager of athletics, who has formerly composed all the music for the show, will act this year as an advisor to Schiller and Conway.

A general Turf and Tinsel meeting will be held for all members as well as those interested in auditioning for the show tomorrow.

SPORTS CHATTER

Persistence Pays Off

By JOE SLAVIN

Amid the stenched air of the slaughter yards of Chicago, an animal referred to as a "Judas goat" performs a very gruesome task. It has the odius responsibility of leading the cattle to the slaughter houses. Its function is one of a leader and not an active participant.

Throughout the football seasons of 1954 and 1955, Coach Frank Reagan had the thankless duty of leading the Villanova football team. Each Saturday he directed a group of athletes onto the gridiron only to be defeated by superior opposition. Nothing could have been more frustrating than to have had a team consisting of players trained under another coach who used a different system and another group of unseasoned players who had to compete against some of the nations top teams. However, for two years Frank Reagan worked arduously to form a squad which would be a true representative of Villanova.

Reagan was plagued with bad breaks. Injuries to some of his outstanding players in addition to the departure of line coach "Otie" Douglas added to his many problems. Besides commanding the respect of the team, he also won the respect and admiration of the student body. Whenever the team returned to campus from an away game, it was Reagan who received as much applause as any of the outstanding players.

The disastrous results of his first two seasons as coach at Villanova caused many to wonder why Reagan wanted to remain a football coach. Surely many other jobs could be found which would be more rewarding. Coach Reagan's determination to produce a winning team has proved beneficial to the followers of the Wildcats.

Scoring Mark

Frank Reagan's association with football extends over the past 20 years. He first gained gridiron fame playing for North Catholic High School in Philadelphia. As a hard-running halfback he was recognized as one of the top prospects in the Philadelphia area. He played college football at Pennsylvania at a time when they were considered a power in football. He soon won acclaim as one of the nation's outstanding gridders. Reagan's reputation was enhanced when he bested Michigan's All-American Tommy Harmon in a widely publicized duel at Franklin Field. A year later, he scored 31 points against Princeton to establish a still-unbroken scoring mark.

Pro Football

After graduation, Reagan played several games with the New York Giants before entering the U.S. Marine Corps, where he attained the rank of captain before being discharged in 1946. Rejoining the Giants he led the team to the Eastern Division Championship, but suffered a severe jaw-fracture in the play-off game against the Chicago Bears. From 1949 until 1952 he continued his participation in football, mainly as a defensive halfback with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Although his three years at Villanova have not been as noteworthy as his previous association with the sport, Coach Reagan is to be commended for his efforts. We sincerely hope that he will be able to be associated with football for at least another three more years here at Villanova.

Taller Players Indicate Good Varsity Prospects

Freshman basketball coach Maje McDonnell is in the happy situation of being well supplied with height as he prepares his squad for an eleven game schedule which opens Dec. 15.

Although McDonnell has not as yet chosen a starting line-up, he is certain of having an appreciably taller quintet than that which romped to an impressive 14-3 log last year.

Height

Included in the present squad of 12 players are nine who top the 6'2" mark, the tallest of whom is John Driscoll, 6'7" pivot man who was named to the "All - Catholic" team last year while at Philadelphia's West Catholic.

All-State

Raveling, who has shown himself to be a strong rebounder as well as a point-producer, and bespectacled McGovern, extremely sharp from the outside for a big man, earned Pennsylvania "All-State" recognition at St. Michael's Prep of Scranton and Lykens High, respectively.

Rieder, after four years as the mainstay of Gloucester Catholic (N.J.), had a sparkling year at St. Francis Prep, Spring Grove, Pa. George's primary offensive weapon is a deadly jump-shot.

Goudlock and Rolls are both products of Roman Catholic of Philadelphia. The former garnered "All-Catholic" honors last year. He is unusually quick, driving well against a man-to-man defense. Rolls is a muscular youth who needs a lot of work, but coach McDonnell is pleased with his willingness to learn.

Football Players

Both Heron and Norton have just reported for practice after completing their work-outs with the freshman footballers. Heron is a local lad, coming to Villanova from LaSalle High. Norton attended Rice High in New York prior to a military service tour.

Ward, from Malvern Prep, has impressed in the early drills.

Ryan, Ferruolo and Flynn Receive Awards at Annual Football Dinner

You wouldn't believe it, but Delurey Devil end Jim Koczak was able to catch this pass during the Intramural football championship game played last week. Delurey beat the Junglebunnies, 14-0, to win the crown.

Captain Joe Ryan, John Ferruolo, and Mike Flynn were recipients of the three major awards presented at the 35th annual football dinner last Monday night at the Benjamin Franklin hotel in Philadelphia. The banquet given annually by the Villanova Club of Philadelphia honors the varsity football team and its coaches.

Ryan, who was elected captain for the season, was given the Martin J. McLaughlin Memorial Award which goes to the captain of the team.

The National Alumni Award to the most valuable player was presented to halfback John Ferruolo and the Cyril J. Burke Trophy for the most consistent lineman was awarded to guard Mike Flynn.

McKenna Speaker

Featured speaker of the evening was John McKenna, head football coach at Virginia Military Institute and former standout center on the Wildcats' unbeaten 1937 team. While here at Villanova, McKenna played under Harry Stuhldreher and Clipper Smith. He was nominated on several "all" teams in the 1937.

McKenna began his coaching career at Malvern in 1946 after service duty and following an unbeaten season in 1946, he returned to his alma mater as line coach under Jordan Olivar. In 1952 he joined the VMI staff and in one year was named head coach.

Delurey Devils Win 'Mural Laurels On Late Scores

By CHARLES CARROLL

Scoring on two plays in the closing minutes of the game, the Delurey Devils downed the Jungle Bunnies, 14-0, on Nov. 29 to clinch the 1956 intramural football championship. The two teams battled evenly in a scoreless first half on Austin Field.

Late in the third period the Devils broke the ice when Kieran trapped the Bunnies' Devery in the end zone for a safety and two points. Then, with but a few minutes left in the game, Delurey ran rampant. DeCicco hit Kockzak with a touchdown pass covering 40 yards. Minutes later Egizio tore loose on a 35 yard scoring run to end the scoring and put the 1956 season into the record books.

The only event remaining on the fall schedule, the annual golf tournament, was held at the Mainline Golf Course on Nov. 7. Low man was sophomore Owen Klein with a score of 71.

Winter Program Begins

The winter intramural program was ushered in Nov. 27 in Alumni Gym. The evening featured a rope-climbing contest won by Steve Carton and a basketball foul-shooting contest copped by Terry Lynch, who sank 41 out of 50 shots.

The basketball league has attracted the greatest interest and largest participation among the winter sports. The league will open on Monday, Dec. 10. Intramural Council President Jim Moran has announced that this year the 4:30 and 5:30 leagues on Monday and Wednesday will be reserved for varsity and freshman athletes only.

Due to the large turnout, the department has announced that probably both Alumni Gym and the Field House will be used for games. Team applications are available around campus and must be turned in to the Intramural Office, 112 Alumni Hall.

Team Captain Anticipates Successful Court Season

By JACK CURTIN

One man who should know. Jimmy Smith, sandy haired captain of the 1956-57 Villanova Basketball squad, feels that this is the year for the Wildcats. Smitty says that the team has "good material and good spirit. In fact, we have the best prospects we've had since I've been here."

Graduates in February

Smith himself will play in only 16 of the team's 27 games this season. A philosophy major in the Liberal Arts division, he will graduate in February.

A native Philadelphian, Jim played his high school ball at West Catholic. Upon graduation, he matriculated at Loyola College in California. Deciding to return to the Philadelphia area, Smitty found Villanova to be the school of his choice.

Named All-City

Smith began playing varsity ball for the Mainliners in his Sophomore year. Last year he captained the Villanova team and was the only Wildcat named to the all-city team.

Looking ahead, Jim feels that the Canisius opener in the Palestra tonight is the key to the season. If they win this one, and he says they should, he thinks the team will be given that extra little push for a great season.

Top Scholastically

The achievements of Jimmy Smith do not end on the basketball court, however. He is one of the top men, scholastically, in the Arts school, and was the only athlete named to the National Collegiate Who's Who last year. Another outside activity which might be noted is his interest in a young lady from Overbrook Hills, Barbara Sullivan.

Like everyone else on campus, Smitty is looking forward to a possible game against Notre Dame in the Christmas Festival in New York, but for a special reason. Bob Devine, one of the Fighting Irish stars, has been Smith's roommate at summer camp in Straudsburg, Pa., for three years.

After his graduation, Jim would like to go into Marine Intelligence Service, and someday hold a diplomatic post with the State Department.

Smitty has another ambition too, to become the sixth man in Villanova's history to join the select 1000 point club. He has 820 now, and will have to average around 12 points a game. If he succeeds, you can be sure there will be few, if any, losses on the Villanova record when the stalwart captain finishes his final game.

AIEE-IRE Will Hold First 'Ladies Nite' Since '54 Tues.

For the first time since 1954, Vilalnova's American Institute of Electrical Engineers-Institute of Radio Engineers will hold a Ladies Nite next Tuesday.

Highlighting the evening will be lecture - demonstrations of stereophonic sound.

An elaborate program has been planned which will be of interest to the ladies, said chapter president Harry Fatkin. AIEE-IRE members are encouraged to bring dates. In addition, girls from neighboring colleges will be on hand, Fatkin added.

Attending the meeting, besides faculty members, will be the head of District 2 for the national organization of the AIEE.

Mr. Cullen T. Pierce, vice president of the AIEE district, will give a short talk describing benefits to be received from participation in Institute activities—as an undergraduate and a professional engineer.

Mr. Albert Borkow, of Magnetic Recording Co., will deliver a lecture describing the operation of his company's stereophonic sound system.

Philosophy Club Begins Year-Long Egidius Collection

The Philosophy Club of Villanova, following its plan to pursue a single, year-long study in philosophy, has begun work on this year's topic, Egidius Romanus (Giles of Rome). The Club, under the direction of Dr. Roland Houde, is compiling a complete bibliography on Egidius, requiring original scholarship and research.

In this work, the skills of linguists and writers, of history, philosophy and business students are needed. By programs of this nature, the Club seeks to enrich the world of letters and to promote the basic aims of Villanova as a Catholic cultural center.

At the Nov. 28 meeting, Tom Tripodi presented a paraphrased translation of the biography of Egidius in a nineteenth century critical study in Italian. Egidius, an Augustinian monk, lived from 1247 to 1316.

All students and faculty members interested in this year's original and challenging project are invited to attend the next meeting on Dec. 9 at 3 p. m. in 206 Mendel.

SENIORS

Selection of a band for the Senior Prom will be discussed at senior class meetings tomorrow and Monday, according to President Vince Sullivan.

One meeting will be held at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow in C & F Auditorium. The other session will meet Monday at 11:30 a.m. in 206 C & F.

Behind LaSalle and Drexel:

Paced By Passarella, NROTC Rifle Team Wins

Villanova's NROTC Rifle Team, which is sometimes lost sight of due to the limelight surrounding the championship varsity, has been doing well for itself this season against high-caliber opponents and with a largely novice team.

The NROTC team at present occupies third place in its league, ranking just behind Drexel and LaSalle. Leading the team is junior Fred Passarella, the only holdover from last year's team. Passarella has been the spark plug of the team, responsible in measure for its success so far.

Passarella is second in the entire league in individual scoring, with a 281 point average. Passarella has been consistent high scorer for Villanova NROTC team.

The current team record is two wins, one loss, with eleven opponents still to face. This Saturday will find the team facing Drexel and Valley Forge Military Academy in a dual match.

A tremendous burden is on the freshmen with three or four holding the team up behind Passerella.

So far, the team has beaten St. Joseph's 1305 to 1269, and Penn 1287 to 1284 with Passarella's high score of 256 providing the margin of victory. Penn has taken the measure of Villanova once though with a score of 1326 to 1305.

The freshmen team won over Temple's frosh 1274 to 1179 and lost to The Drexel frosh 1302 to 1281. Walsh and Murtha were high scorers respectively.

Donohue Appointed Student Director By Singers' Prexy

President Charlie Ross has announced the appointment of senior Gene Donohue to the post of student director of the Villanova Singers.

Donohue will assist Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein, moderator, in the direction of the Singers.

First Appearance

In their first appearance of the season ,the Singers performed at the annual Villanova alumni football banquet Monday night at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. Featured at the Concert were new arrangements by Mr. Frank Delcamp, O.S.A., a Seminarian here at Villanova, and Joe D'Aquila, vice-president of the organization.

Their next appearance will be at the annual Villanova faculty Christmas banquet, Tuesday, Dec. 18. During the week preceding Christmas vacation, the Singers will go carolling at the various neighboring girls' colleges.

Chorul Festival

Plans are also in the making for a collegiate choral festival combining 450 voices from eight college glee clubs to be held in the Villanova Field House this spring.

Cafeteria Head Promises To Try Some Suggestions

By TOM SMITH

Several suggestions for improved dining hall service made by students are scheduled to be put into effect, the VILLANOVAN learned Monday.

An informant said Cafeteria Manager Paul Spescha was "extremely receptive to everything presented" to him by a special Student Council Committee Friday.

The committee conferred with Mr. Spescha about a list of 31 suggestions made by students at a special Council meeting last Tuesday night to discuss dining hall operations.

Silverware Moved

Although it was not known when the measures would be tried out, the informant listed these as the principal points promised:

1. Silverware will be moved to a new spot to facilitate faster moving lines. This change would enable diners to pick up their eating utensils earlier in the line and reduce tie-ups at the end of the line.

2. The daily menu will be posted in a prominent place showing what the three meals for the day will be.

3. Catsup will be served with hamburgers and mustard will be served with frankfurters, according to Mr. Spescha.

4. Caps will be worn by all employees.

Tea At All Meals

5. Tea will be served at all meals on a trial basis. If students are receptive, coffee will also be made available, Mr. Spescha indicated.

1. To insure that enough student help is available, a weekly schedule will be set up for their working hours.

Villanovans Treat Johnnies Saturday; Proceeds From Dance Pay for Party

"Johnnies" To See Movies And Santa

This Saturday will be the big day for the "Johnnies" from the orphanage when they are taken out on the town by Villanovans who will try to give the boys a chance to enjoy Christmas in a special way, they otherwise would not receive.

Paul Laughlin and Don Luzzi, co-chairmen of the affair, urge all Villanovans, including coeds and law students, to take one of the boys on the trip, which will include a tour of Lit Brothers Toyland, a lunch at one of the downtown Horn and Hardart's Restaurants and a two and a half hour show at the 69th Street Theater.

Santa To Lead Tour

The tour of the toyland will be led by Santa Claus himself, who will speak with the "Johnnies" individually, while they receive cookies and milk from Santa's helpers.

The eventful affair will start about 9 a.m. when the boy is picked up at the orphanage at 49th and Wyalusing Ave. by a Villanovan, who is encouraged to bring along a date. They then will depart together to the first stop, the long awaited toyland.

Lists are located in various sections of Dougherty Hall and all are urged to sign up as soon as possible to take out one of the lonely youngsters.

The Orphans' Weekend as well as the outing has been a yearly tradition here at Villanova for the last 10 years and a Junior Class-sponsored event for the past four. However, all Villanovans are invited to attend both the dance and the outing.

All the chairmen of the weekend stress that this is one of the best ways for Villanova students to show their charitable spirit and encourage their full support and cooperation.

Lou Denison To Play For Charity Ball

Looking forward to its second successful weekend within the past month, the Junior Class will sponsor the annual St. John's Orphanage weekend, commencing Friday night with the Charity Ball in the Field House from 9 till 1.

The last social endeavor of the Class was the inauguration of the Basca Award and Jazz Concert in November.

Denison To Play

Jim Egizio, general chairman of this year's weekend, announced that Vince Caracio, chairman of the dance, has signed Lou Denison and his 12-piece orchestra to provide the musical chores for this informal affair.

The spirit of the Christmas season will fill the Field House with gaiety as well as being the appropriate theme. This will be helped along by the Junior Class decorations committee under the direction of Tom Sprenger, Bill Fallon, and Mike Delany.

Tickets On Sale

Tickets are only $1 a couple. They are now on sale in Dougherty Hall and may also be purchased from members of the ticket committee. The donation will be $1.50 if bought at the Field House door on Friday night.

John Muller, Fred Herr and John Lyons, directors of the ticket committee, urge all students to buy a ticket even if they are not going to the dance, since the proceeds will be used for the expenses of the charitable weekend.

Gifts, Fun, Skits Are Big Features Of Orphans' Party

To conclude the Johnnies' "weekend of the year" Monday, a group of Villanova juniors and football players will bring Santa's workshop, including Santa Claus (Don Luzzi) to entertain the youngsters with fun, gifts and a dinner.

Co - chairmen Mike Mancuso and Lou Donatucci said the party's success depends entirely upon the contributions of Villanova students in religion sections and in the Dougherty day hop cafeteria.

MIKE MANCUSO

Proceeds from tickets to last Friday night's Charity Ball will also be used to finance the party.

Junior Class coeds are also involved inthe project. They are decorating the gifts and the home for the party.

Also contributing to the weekend are the ticket committee under chairmen Fred Hurr, John Muller and John Lyons; publicity committee under Leo Rogers and Frank Bonner; and decorations committee under Bill Fallon, Tom Sprenger and Mike Delany.

Safety Commission Formed; New Pike Lights in Offing

Villanova University's administration and students have taken positive action to solve the Villanova safety problem.

More than 2,212 students have signed a petition asking for the reduction of the speed limit from 35 to 15 miles per hour on Lancaster Pike near the college.

The Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., dean of men, is scheduled to take the petition with him sometime this week when he goes to Harrisburg to discuss the situation with Joseph Lawler, secretary of the Department of Highways, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The petition is an immediate result of the accident which occurred Nov. 30 in front of the Field House. David Carney, a C & F freshman, and Eve T. Kenny, his date, were seriously injured.

Protest Rally

On Nov. 3 the students held a protest rally, after-which Father McLaughlin spoke to a committee representing the students. He and Francis Bonner, Bill Kelly, Charles Nash and Henry Miller spent two and a half hours discussing the petition. Father McLaughlin gave full administration support to the project.

First Soph Class Meeting Introduces Father Weeks

The first official meeting of the class of 1959 to be held tomorrow in the C & F Auditorium at 10:30 a.m. will include three important matters: the introduction of Rev. Henry F. Weeks, O.S.A., newly-appointed class moderator and the officers of the class; a "progress report" on activities undertaken to date; and a discussion of future plans.

Ken MacGillivray, sophomore class president, said that Father Weeks would give a short address. Father Weeks returns to Villanova after a five-year absence spent in mission work. He formerly taught from 1946 through 1951. The class officers elected last year will also be introduced.

Executive Committee Formed

The progress report will include a financial statement by class treasurer Bill Hixson, a report on the Sophomore Cotillion by Jack Curtin, chairman of the dance, and MacGillivray, co-chairman of Freshmen Orientation, will relate its effects.

The purposes and functions of the newly-formed executive committee will be explained. This step forward in class administration is composed of the elected officers and representatives of the class. It was formed "to create a closer bound between the president and the class by acting as an advisory to the former." The details of the committee's recently-adopted constitution will also be explained. This pioneer undertaking was felt by the class officers to be a move towards better and more active administration.

Banner Year Predicted

The date of the Soph-Frosh dance to be held in the second semester will be disclosed at this meeting along with preparations completed to date. MacGillivray asked that any suggestion regarding the dance be submitted at the meeting.

In speaking of the prospects the Soph President said "Because of the fine display of enthusiasm by the class and the excellent cooperation given by the Administration, I am more than pleased with our progress thus far and fully expect a banner year for the Class of '59."

Billy May Orchestra to Play For Sr. Prom on March 1

The Billy May Orchestra and the band which was praised at last May's Junior Dinner-Dance have been signed for performances during Senior Weekend.

The May group will provide music for the Prom March 1 and Leo Zollo and his orchestra will work the Dinner Dance March 2.

Announcement of the contract signings were made last week by Den Rinkacs, Prom co-chairman, and Bill Hattrick, Dinner Dance chairman.

The band signing was announced to seniors at class meetings last Thursday and Monday. The Thursday meeting was attended by approximately 30 members of the Class of 1957.

Hattrick said other details for the Dinner-Dance, to be held in the ballroom of Philadelphia's Broadwood Hotel, are still pending.

Zollo and his music makers drew aproving comments from juniors who attended last May's Junior Dinner Dance.

The Broadwood's ballroom will accommodate more couples than the Benjamin Franklin, where the class held its Junior Dinner-Dance last May.

DEN RINKACS

Rinkacs said the contract calling for the May orchestra's appearance in the Field House from 9 till 1 was signed last Wednesday with the William Honney Agency in Philadelphia.

Den Rinkacs, Prom co-chairman with Ray Clarke, said the May band is noted for "even dancing music with a brassy sound."

The Students' Voice

The Student Council took an important step in adding to its prestige last week in conferring with the Administration about student suggestions for faster and improved cafetreia serice.

At a special meeting, Chairman Joe Martin and councilmen listened to ideas and opinions of about 150 residents and day hops. Council then went to the appropriate member of the Administration to consider these suggestions, the Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President for Student Affairs.

By the end of the week, the Council's special committee had been allowed to meet with the cafeteria manager. A report on the committee's findings was expected at Monday night's Council meeting.

This calm, deliberate action by Council should wake indifferent students up to the fact that the men representing them on the Council are sincerely willing to work for the students.

The Council constitution states that "all regular students of the University shall be members of the Student Council." Yet, at regular business meetings—which convene every other Monday night at 7:15—only 15 or 20 students are present to watch the men who represent them perform their duties.

If the Council achieves little else in this latest attempt to help their fellow students, it would be commendable if their efforts caused Villanovans to realize that the Council is working for them.

A Good Sign

Please forgive the pun, but it strikes us as a healthy sign that The Sign, national Catholic magazine, has reached a new peak in circulation.

A print order for the December issue of 400,000 copies is a new high for the publication which has grown circulation-wise from a figure of 200,000 in December 1948.

And the content of the magazine has been improving along with the print orders. The periodical, published in Union City, N.J., could never be considered "preachy." It employs first-rate wirters—one striking example is Jim Bishop, author of the best seller of a few years back, The Day Lincoln Was Shot, and an incisive biography of comedian Jackie Gleason.

The Passionist Father's magazine naturally emphasizes Catholic ideas, but they are presented in the manner of the big circulation "slick" magazines, and concern all phases of everyday life, from science to government to sports.

One of the Sign's monthly contributors is Red Smith, syndicated columnist of the New York Herald-Tribune, whose column appears in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Villanova's faculty has been represented in recent issues. Two members of the history department, Mr. Henry Rofinot and Mr. Charles Bruderle, contributed book reviews in editions appearing during the summer.

A Little Fun

We hate to be the proverbial party pooper, but it's a cold, cold fact that just 18 days from the time you come back from Post Office duty and New Year's Eve celebrations the professors will be waiting with blue books in hand.

But who worries, now? The important thing is that ten shopping days remain until Christmas.

Political Round-Up:

US Wisely Kept 'Hands Off' At Start of Hungarian Crisis

Once again the datelines appearing on stories on the front pages of today's newspapers are originating from Budapest. The strife-torn nation of Hungary is saturated with the seeds of discontent.

This saturation gives vent to the question, "Why didn't the gets to press, another revolution may be taking place.

This saturation gives vent ta the question, "Why didn't the United States do more when the revolution first broke out in October?" Many people feel that the U. S. should have offered the people of Hungary more aid, either economic or military, or at the very least, conferred diplomatic recognition upon the Nagy regime.

DONOHUE

What most of these people fail to realize is the proximity of Hungary to Russia, and the determination of the Russians to keep Hungary a dominated satellite nation. Hungary borders directly upon Russia and is a key link in the chain of satellite nations joining Rumania and Czechoslovakia. Russia, therefore, treats any infringement on the soil of Hungary as a personal affront.

The State Department, therefore, very wisely decided that the best policy that this country could follow was an attitude of "hands off." This immediately brought comment from idealists who insist that the U. S. is the champion of freedom and defender of the oppressed. These well-meaning people do not seem to realize that the time has passed when one country can interfere in a situation such as this and remain above everyone else.

The idea is not that Hungarians do not count, as some cynics try to say, but that the government of the United States has a duty first to the people of the United States, and then to the rest of the world. If the U. S. were to take any action to aid these oppressed people that would bring us into a Third World War, then it is forsaking its responsibility to the American people.

None of these advocates of U. S. aid to Hungary could be in favor of such actions if they were to take hese facts into consideration. Russia considers Hungary essential to her own security. Therefore, Russia will tolerate no interference in it by any western nation and will fight to maintain it as a satellite. This brings us to the devastating fact that in a war between the United States and Russia, no one would be the victor.

Worthwhile TV

It was a pleasure to take time out from work Thursday night and view NBC's new documentary, "The Jazz Age." In this day of all sorts of fantastic quiz shows, boring second-rate plays in adoration of deceased heroes, stereotyped comedy shows, and worn out extravaganzas, the "Jazz Age" was a welcome relief.

It combined education and entertainment in a delightful hour of film from the famous "Roaring Twenties." In the space of this hour, one was able to see people, places, and things, that have been recorded forever in the pages of American history.

There was a film clip of the meeting of the "Big Four" in London after World War I with close-ups of Woodrow Wilson, Lloyd George, Orlando, and Clemenceau. There was also a stirring close-up of the sad, defeated face of Woodrow Wilson after his ideals had been shattered by Congress, before the failure of the League of Nations.

We also saw Warren Harding, Calvin Coolidge, Al Smith, and Herbert Hoover. There were shots of Wall Street and of the almost unbelievable activity in the stock market. Tickertape and money flowed as fast as bathtub gin.

The Twenties were an age of recklessness and abandon. They got out of hand. God was pushed aside and morals were forgotten. There were great film clips of gang violence in Chicago where the word of "Scarface" Al Capone was law. The bootlegging business soared to an all time high as white lightnin' and other homemade booze made a mockery out of prohibition.

There were some memorable scenes from the the "Speakeasies." There were the Charleston and the Black Bottom, and there were Texas Guinan and Lorali Lee. There were the Americans in Paris, "innocents aboard."

There were Charles Lindberg and his famous "Spirit of St. Louis." The story of the "Lone Eagle's" dramatic flight across the Atlantic from New York to Paris recounted on film for the TV audience. His return to the United States was one of the biggest events of the period. He was showered with tickertape from city to city.

Then there was the crash. The golden age was over; the lost generation was shocked into reality. The party was over. It was time to go home.

All this and more in an hour . . . a brilliant narration by the late, great Fred Allen . . . what more could the TV viewer ask?

We might mention in passing that the best weekly program on television today is the Sunday night show, "Omnibus." It is difficult to find a more pleasing and educational series on TV. Recent productions have included renditions of George Bernard Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion," William Saroyan's touching "My Heart's in the Highlands," and Everet Everet Hale's famous "Man Without a Country." Another presentation of the "Ominbus" series was an interesting history of musical comedy.

It is shows with the calibre of the aforementioned that stick out like a beacon in the night and prove that television still has some fine shows for the American people.

All Serious

(Reprinted from the Philadelphia Daily News)

Too often news about what college students are doing gets in the papers only when they stage a panty raid or a Rowbottom. Glad to read that students at Villanova University are tackling a serious problem seriously.

They're worried about traffic conditions on Lancaster Pike. Held a rally, and will present a petition to the faculty protesting speeding. They got stirred up after a student and his date were seriously injured.

They want the speed limit on the pike near the college cut from the present 35 miles an hour to 25. Might be even better if the present speed limit were enforced. If you drive along that stretch at the legal 35 miles an hour today other cars swoop around you at 55 or 60.

But we hope the Villanova students get something done as a result of their protest.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

It is the desire of the editors of the VILLANOVAN that the "Letters to the Editor" column be one of the prominent features of the paper each week. Letters from students voicing their opinions on campus topics can provide most interesting reading matter for the student body.

Joey Was A Johnnie Who Was Out On The Town; And A Person Or Two Just Might Remember Him

If You Want A Day To Long Remember, Take Out A Johnnie, And Be Prepared

By BILL JONES Associate Editor

His name was Joe, just plain Joe, and as soon as I saw his wide-eyed and shiny little face peering at me from under a mop of tangled brown hair I knew my number was up.

He was eight years old and an orphan from St. John's Home in Philadelphia, and I was his "Daddy" for the day. And it was going to be a day to remember.

As we left the Home that cold, sunny Saturday morning last December, he looked like a little angel with his wings neatly tucked inside his snappy-colored mackinaw. But looks are pretty deceiving.

Saved By The Trolley

We were on our way to the trolley stop when Joe casually asked "Mister, you got a lot of money?" "Cough, cough, choke," I answered, "what makes you ask?" In his innocent little-boy logic he surmised, "Well, you're a growed up man, so you must be rich." "Joe," I said, "that's a pretty tricky sillogism. You make about as much sense as my logic teacher does." "What does that mean?" my little angel inquired. "Skip it Joe," I said, "here comes the trolley."

The trolley ride went all right for a while. Joe was bursting with enthusiasm and I felt sort of good inside to see the kid so happy.

My First Mistake

Then I made my first mistake, I let him out of my sight for a split second. The door buzzer was ringing loudly but there was no one getting off the trolley. The tune sounded like a rock 'n roll version of "Jingle Bells," and the conductor was fit to be tied. As for Joey, he was having a grand old time, hanging on the cord. I couldn't become angry with him, it was too funny. After the situation had been explained to the conductor, everyone in the trolley smiled warmly. "Oh," they said "He's so cute." He was cute all right, cute like a fox. Joey was really going to make a day of it.

Our first stop was at the toy department in Gimbel's, and Joey's eyes made their first stop and stayed there, fastened on the Lone Ranger Super De-Luxe Cap Pistols. Sold. His eyes beamed like a Villanovan with a home-cooked dinner in front of him. Then the proverbial roof caved in. Joey took up the role of Tom Mix in the middle of Dirty Dan's outlaw camp. No one in the toy department was safe. He murdered every one of them, "deaderin makrel." He shot off a role of caps before I could even pay for them. The floor walker was not exactly pleased by it all. Quickly I pulled out the script and told him what was going on. By this time, a minor crowd had gathered. "Oh, isn't he cute," they said.

"Gotcha Flatfoot"

After a short stop for earmuffs and gloves, we were on our way again. But we didn't get very far. Tom Mix was at it again. But this time he had picked up Roy Rogers and Gene Autrey to go along with him. What would they do? Why, hold up a store on Market Street, of course. But first they had to take care of the cops, naturally.

Tom Mix wasted no time. He ran right up behind the nearest policeman, jammed the gun in his ribs (it looked like he broke about three of them) and fired away. "Gotcha flatfoot," Joey hollered in his best South Philly lingo, "deaderin a makrel."

What happened next was hysterical. The officer thought that his number was up. His time had come. It was the end of the world. He spun around open-mouthed and white-faced, only to be met with another "barrage." Everyone who had witnessed the little melodrama was in stitches. "The law" turned very red and very angry. I visioned spending Christmas behind bars. But out came the script, and the day was saved, for a while anyway.

Custer's Last Lunch

Next came lunch in the automat. It was like trying to chow down in the middle of Custer's last stand. The floor was ankle-deep in spent caps and a thin film of gunpowder was in just about everything. Did you ever see a couple hundred orphans with cap guns all in one place at the same time? Man, you haven't lived. The most humorous incident of the lunchtime was when Tom Mix and his gang chased Jesse James and his mob into the ladies' room. "Oh," exclaimed the onlookers, "aren't they cute?" "Oh," exclaimed the ladies, "get out of here."

After lunch the line to see Santa Claus looked like the Villanova chow line so we decided to hop in a cab and get over to the movie early.

A Speechless Cabbie

We almost didn't make it. We hailed a cab and jumped in. I felt a little safer, after all, what could Joey do in a cab? My question was quickly answered. The cabbie was innocently waiting for a red light when I noticed that Tom Mix had his six shooter about one inch from the cabbie's unsuspecting ear. It was too late, the hammer was back. Bang, bang, bang. "Arrrgh!" yelled the poor frightened cab driver. I think he thought the cab blew up. Joey laughed to beat the band. The cabbie opened his mouth, but at first nothing came out. He was speechless. But when he regained his senses, I had to do some fast talking. Once more, the script saved the day. When we got out at the theater, the cabbie was still shaking.

The movie turned out to be a football picture which held the kids' interest about as well as a lecture on the history of Afghanistan. The result; "Crazy Legs Hirsch" was literally transformed into "Gunsmoke." Amid pleas from the panic-striken manager, long runs by Crazy Legs and the deafening uproar of perhaps the world's fiercest gun battle, the kids wound up the day with colors flying.

Just Ask For Joey

It was a hectic day, a humorous day, and one I'll always remember. What did I get out of it? I got a big smile, and an even bigger thank you, and that was plenty.

So how about it Villanovans, get a script ready, square your shoulders, and go over to St. John's Saturday. And just for kicks . . . why don't you ask for Joey?

"Hey Santa, who said you didn't have real whiskers?" Orphans at the Catholic Center in Philadelphia visit Santa with visions of stockings chock full of presents dancing in their heads. Santa will move to Lit Brothers department store this Saturday to meet the "Johnnies" from St. John's home Saturday.

Previewing this coming Saturday, members of Phi Kappa Pi's engineering fraternity entertained orphans during their annual Christmas party for the boys at the Catholic Center in Philadelphia. More of the same will be seen throughout Philadelphia Saturday when Villanovans entertain St. John's "Johnnies" all day in center city and 69th Street.

'Billy Budd' Gets Hanged But Pleases BM Audiences

By Joe Wheeler

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday last week, the Belle Masque dramatic society presented its fall production, "Billy Budd." On Broadway this play was received with mixed reactions. The critics gave it rave notices but the public was rather cool and indiferent in its acceptance. Here at Villanova Billy Budd was an overwhelming success.

The number of people in the audience for the three nights was a little over 1,000 but with the special matinee for religious Saturday counted in the total, the number of viewers is over 1,500.

The show ran smoothly from the very begining with all the desired effects achieved. The cast was excellent, but mention should be made of the superb manner in which Charlie Brockman, Bill Brown and Vic Buono conducted themselves. In the supporting roles there were many who in a year or so will be quite capable of taking lead parts.

There was only one complaint voiced by the audience and that was the poor acoustics. This it was readily admitted was not the fault of the Masque but due to the architecture of the building and the heavy drapes that would muffle an actor's voice when he turned his head.

German Student Airs Sentiments Of His People About Hungarian Problem

By KLAUS-JURGEN POPP

We all certainly agree in condemning Russia for its terrible and brutal bloodshed in poor Hungary. But what is the reaction after these events in the Soviet zone of Germany where the population suffers under the Russian occupation as much as the Hungarians, perhaps more? Here the Soviets have changed a whole country into an army camp, only to keep the Poles in their tongs.

The Seventeenth of June

We have to remember that in the so-called DDR (German democratic republic), the first rebellion against the Russian tyranny took place on June 17, 1953. This day is still a national holiday in western Germany today.

In contrast to Hungary, the German resistance to the Russion tanks had no arms at its disposal and was soon crushed by the Soviets. Therefore it is no surprise that the seventeen million east Germans observed the events in Hungary without taking advantage of the chance to rise once again. The east Germans fought alone against the Soviets once and didn't care to repeat the experience.

Passive Resistance Employed

But the Germans of the Soviet zone thought that if no active resistance were possible, passive resistance was. The universities became more and more critical in passionate discussion of the government's policies.

Of course the communists (their party is the SED, Social-Unity party of Germany) could not tolerate these open speeches and began a new series of imprisonments including a well-known professor of Marxism-Leninism.

Comminist Consessions

The communists had to make some unimportant concessions, though, such as restricting lessons in the Russian language,

Written, Oral Exams Needed For FS Post

By FRANK DELANY

Last week we examined the general field of employment with the Foreign Service, the qualifications necessary, the opportunities and the benefits of such employment. Assuming you meet the qualifications and are interested, you might ask just what specific positions are available in the Foreign Service.

Since the likelihood of anyone starting out as a minister or ambassador is small, we'll skip over these positions to Foreign Service Officer, class 6.

A candidate for this position, the highest available to a newcomer in the field, must apply with the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, completing such application by July 1.

Test And More Tests

The candidate then must undergo a written examination spread over several days covering general knowledge and special knowledge in the fields of history, government, economics and a foreign language.

Following the written exam is an oral exam to determine appearance, personality and character, and a physical examination.

The State Department forsees an increased and continuing need for Foreign Service Officers in class 6.

Varied Staff Positions

Most candidates will find a position as a Foreign Service Staff employee in one of the following categories:

Secretary, Stenographer-Clerk; entrance salary is $3150 plus allowance. Applicant must be single. All applicants must pass aptitude, typing and shorthand tests. The job is self-descriptive.

Accounting Clerk: entrance salary is $3150 plus allowance. Applicant must be single and qualified to perform such duties as posting, checking reports, verifying accounts, tabulating, preparing payrolls and checking invoices.

Code Clerk: entrance salary is $3150 plus allowances. Applicant must be single and able to type forty-five words per minute.

Just Like The Movies

Diplomatic Courier: entrance salary for this motion-picture glamourized position is $3531 plus allowances. Applicants must be single and capable of performing duties calling for constant travel and trying conditions, protection of official correspondence and the reporting of information to Foreign Service. Preference is given veterans and those who have been abroad.

Nurse: entrance salary is $4323 plus allowances. Females only, and single ones at that. Nurses will assume charge of health rooms at certain Foreign Service posts. Two years of experience is desiable.

The Uncouth Not Wanted

Internation Information Administration: there is a continuing need for persons experienced in the cultural, informational and public affairs fields. Applicants should have a working knowledge of a foreign language and a specialized overseas area knowledge. Positions in this department are Cultural Affairs Officers, Public Affairs Officers, Radio Officers and Engineers, Press Officers, Librarians, Exhibits Officers and Diesel Engineers and Technicians.

Technical Cooperation Administration: this department serves as a coordinating agency for all activities of the Technical Cooperation Assistance Program. Positions include Budget and Fiscal Officers, Procurement and Supply Officers, Fiscal Accountants, Disbursing Officers, Economic Advisers and Financial Advisers.

Trial Run

All Staff Officers and employees are required to serve a probationary period. Unsatisfactory work performance during this period may result in termination from the Foreign Service.

But then there's always unemployment compensation.

Crew of the "HMS Indomitable" get set to bury shipmate in act one of "Billy Budd" presented last weekend by Belle Masque at the Field House. Crew stands at attention for the buryal at sea. Outfits are copies of the typical seafaring garb of the Royal Navy during the 18th century.

West Coast Freshman Aspires To Be First Villanova Dramatic Major

By Joe Wheeler

In the recent Belle Masque production of "Billy Budd" Villanova saw for the first time an eighteen-year-old freshman from the West coast, Vic Buono. Though a newcomer to the the Villanova acting scene Vic is no neophyte to the profession.

A native of San Diego, Vic has been active in the theater for the last five years, both in high school and in local stock companies.

Buono Dominates Scene

Built more like a football tackle than an actor, he is six foot two-and-a-half inches tall and weighs two hundred sixty pounds, his very presence dominates nearly every scene in which he apears.

While a student at St. Augustine's High School in San Diego, Vic was featured in numerous plays. A few were: King Claudius in "Hamlet," Mr. Barrett in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and T. J. Crochet in "The Great Big Door Step."

Shakespeare In San Diego

His talents in high school were not confined to school productions for he also appeared last summer in The National Summer Shakespearean Festival of San Diego. This festival is the third largest in the world following Old Vic of London and The Globe Repertoire Company of Canada.

VIC BUONO
Had Tux, Travelled

The first presentation of the Festival was "Volpone" by Ben Jonson. In this play Vic was cast in the lead role. Other productions of this troupe that season saw Vic as Snug in "Midsummer Nights Dream" and as the Abbot of Westminister in "Richard II."

When the festival ended Vic was voted the best actor and the show "Volpone" was picked as the best production. The judging was conducted among the theater audiences and critics of the San Diego area.

Buono, Laughton and Greenstreet

Principally a character actor, Vic gives the impression of a mixture of Charles Laughton and Sidney Greenstreet. In the recent Belle Masque presentation he was cast as a man who was the personification of pure evil, a role he handled quite well.

Vic has appeared on numerous television shows on the West coast both as an actor and as an interviewed personality. When Dave Garroway was last in California he showed a great interest in Vic and had him on his "Today" show as a featured guest, in connection with his work in "Volpone."

Future Drama Major?

When questioned on his plans for the future he said he would probably graduate as a English major but had an ambition to become the first Drama major. This degree is at present under consideration by the administration.

Vic's principal reason for coming to Villanova was "to act under Fr. Krupa and to go to a good Augustinian institution." Much to Vic's chagrin Fr. Krupa has since been transferred to Massachusetts.

Commenting on this he said, "well it's still an Augustinian institution and the Masque is a fine organization with good direction."

Here Are The Hints, Fellows; All You Need Now's Money

By SANTA ANNE

This letter was received at the North Pole the other day: "Dear Santa: I want to buy my girl a Christmas present. With the 25th getting closer, I still need an idea for her gift. Please give me a clue about what she is wishing for this year. Worried Villanovan."

The jolly old jelly-bellied man put me on this assignment right away, and here are some of the things Worried's girl (and a lot of other female friends of Villanovans) are hoping will be found under their trees on Christmas morning.

Nearly every coed, secretary and nurse will be dreaming visions of cashmere and fur-blends Christmas Eve and a wise Santa will take the hint.

Oodles of Colors

This year, the oh-so-soft knitwear is being shown in dozens of unusual designs and colors. Ranging in price from about $13 to $32.50, the lady-pleasing man can decide on his price range and choose a sweater to match his wallet and delight his girl.

One of the most wanted styles is the new, collared sweater featuring three-quarter sleeves and a changeable neckline which can be worn buttoned or open.

Another attractive skirt topping is an Italian fur blend cardigan which can be worn buttoned up the front or back. A special neck trim and interesting design down the back add to the turnabout effect. This is priced at about $23.

Fur-Blends Cheaper

The fur-blend sweaters are very popular with the economy-minded shopper who hesitates at splurging $32 on a single cashmere.

If Santa is in the mood to surprise the lass with a practical but attractive gift, he might select one of the new lady electric shavers.

These are modestly priced between $14 and $20 and her father will appreciate the gift as much as his daughter. Dads are always fuming about their offspring using their razors. (Nice way to make a hit with the girl and her Dad, too.)

For the girl who likes music, books or painting, her gift will be fairly easy to select.

There are numbers of special albums out that will be welcomed additions to her record collection.

For The Readers

If she likes to read, pick the category and the rest will be simple. Publishers have dozens of humorous collections, best-selling fiction works and historical volumes on everything from jazz to the history of man to please the library customer.

The artisically inclined miss will be excited over receiving the biography of a famous painter or a book or reproductions she can enjoy for years.

To provide the amateur painter with a good start toward a masterpiece, skillful artists have designed "paint the numbers" canvases the talented lady can complete and be proud to show later.

Gifts in leather are both practical and attractive. Small pieces of a matched luggage set are nice surprises for a travelling co-ed or weekend visitor.

Items Under $5

Less expensive articles made of leather are billfolds, glass cases, key holders and cigarette cases. For an exciting gift, a clever Santa will combine two of these in matched leather or design. Most of these items are priced under $5.

One of the more clever and economical gifts being displayed in department stores this season is a clothes vacuum cleaner. Sounds impossible, but the cleaner is designed like a flashlight and has a heavy brush head over the vacuum opening. A small denim bag catches the lint particles cleaned by the battery-powered cleaner. This sells for only $1.98 and comes in several colors.

Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., seems to be enjoying himself as much as Spanish Club members and their guests at Noche Espanola celebration Friday night in C & F Auditorium.

Guida, Conway Are Named Chairman; Inter-Collegiate Variety Show Next Semester

Mr. Martin Durkin, president of the Philadelphia Region of the national Federation of Catholic Colleges, recently announced that two Villanova seniors, Mike Guida and Bernie Conway, were named chairmen and producers of the third annual Inter-Collegiate Variety Show.

The two have been auditioning talent at the local Catholic colleges for over a month and are planning to announce the outcome of these before Christmas vacation. Arrangements are also being made to present the show at four local schools during the second semester.

Last year the show was successfully held at Immaculata and Holy Family Colleges. Bob Laurence, who conducts the "On the Town" program nightly at 11:50 over .WIP , reviewed the show at its Immaculata performance. The following night, Laurence said on his program that this was one of the best college show he had ever seen in his years of covering them, and that many of the acts are capable of turning profesional with fine results. He named in particular, the Murphy Sisters, singing group from Immaculata, and the Villanovans.

Schiller Praised

Laurence, who is a great blues fan, said over the air that Bob Schiller's Villanovan's arrangement of "the St. James Infirmary Blues" was the best he had heard. Both of these acts will be featured in this years show.

Clark, Senior Chem Major, Is Recovering

Senior Joe Clark, recovering from a serious kidney operation, has withdrawn from school and will not return before next September.

The chemistry major underwent an operation early in November and doctors advised him to rest at least until next year.

Clark, who would have graduated in June, was co-circulation director of the VILLANOVAN with Ed Tomezsko; secretary of the Villanova chapter of the American Chemical Society, and a member of Turf 'n Tinsel and the Astronomy Club.

Tomezsko has already been appointed circulation director by Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith.

Debaters Win Novice Meet Over Temple

The novice debaters of Villanova won their second novice tournament, the "Temple Circuit," on Thursday, Nov. 29, by defeating Temple in the final round. The Mainline team also captured the Immaculata tournament two weeks ago.

The total for the circuit tournament was eight wins and no defeats. These included victories over Swathmore, Immaculata, Penn and Temple.

Win 11 Out of 16

Competing against 48 different colleges, the novice debaters, composed almost entirely of freshmen and sophomores, gained 11 victories out of 16 debates in the Temple novice tournament held Dec. 1.

The novice team of Jim Corey and Jack Serafin was unbeaten in the latter tournament with four victories.

The over-all record of the Villanova novice's for the season stands at 24 wins against six defeats.

Father Farrell Ill After Operation

The Rev. William Farrell, O.S.A., assistant chaplain, underwent an intestinal operation last Thursday and was reported "not responding too well to treatment."

This report was made at Masses in C & F Auditorium Sunday by Rev. John Klekotka, O.S.A., chaplain, who asked students to pray for Father Farrell's recovery.

The assistant chaplain came to Villanova in September and is an instructor in the civil engineering department, moderator of Belle Masque dramatic society and prefect in Good Counsel Hall.

BUSINESS WHIRL Meets Tomorrow

Staff members and anyone interested in working on the BUSINESS WHIRL, C & F School magazine, will meet tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in 201 C & F.

Editor-in-Chief Bob Di Joseph said new members are particularly urged to attend.

Villanova Singers Set Plans For College Choral Festival; Will Be Held Here March 23

The Villanova Singers have announced that the collegiate glee clubs' Festival will again be held at Villanova this spring.

Preparations have already been started for the event, which is scheduled for the Villanova Field House on Saturday, March 23.

Eight glee clubs from neighboring colleges will participate in the Festival.

This group is composed of the glee clubs of three girl's colleges Chestnut Hill, Immaculata, and Rosemont; and five mens' schools, Pennsylvania, St. Joseph's, St. Peter's (Jersey city), Temple and Villanova.

Few Like It

"Only when the Big Ten universities gather annually in Chicago is there such an assemblage of college singers," reported Dr. Harold Gill Reuschlein, Villanova's Dean of Law and director of the Villanova Singers.

The presidents of all the participating glee clubs have already met here at Villanova to begin formulation of this year's enlarged program.

One Addition

All the colleges which took part last year are returning and one more school has been added —Chestnut Hill College.

Over 450 voices sang in this outstanding event last April, but that number will be far outstripped this March with the addition of many more singers.

The highlight of the program will be a thundering massed chorus composed of all eight schools.

The sound of the Festival has spread as far as New York City, for Manhattan College asked to be included in this year's performance.

Considerations of size, however, made it necessary to limit the participants to the Philadelphia area.

Girl Injured In Car Mishap Gains Slowly

The 16-year-old high school girl struck down on Lancaster Pike is reported "improving very slowly but steadily."

Bryn Mawr Hospital attendants gave the report on Eve T. Kenny. She was struck down, along with her escort, David Carney, a Villanova freshman, as they crossed the pike to the Field House Nov. 30.

They were planning to attend the Mardi Gras Ball.

Hospital attendants said Carney is "much improved." His fractured right leg has been placed in a cast. Carney regained consciousness soon after the accident but the Kenny girl had still not regained consciousness Monday.

The couple were injured when struck by a car driven by a 17-year-old Ardmore boy. The accident touched off a student drive to have the state lower the Pike speed limit from 35 to 15 miles per hour.

Carney suffered a brain concussion in addition to the fractured leg and multiple cuts and bruises. The Kenny girl, a student at Notre Dame of Moylan, suffered a fractured left hip, head injuries and multiple cuts and bruises.

Fr. Weeks Is Also Rosemont Chaplain

"I found a greater Villanova, not only in the increased enrollment, but also in the smooth coordination of the Administration and the magnificent spirit among the students: all of which makes me very happy to return and become part of it." These are the words of Rev. Henry F. Weeks, O.S.A., in describing his return to Villanova University.

"I am happy to be the moderator of a class which seems to be one of those rare groups that comes once every several years; a class which is alive and able to inject a new spirit among the students on campus."

Fr. Weeks, easily recognized by his six foot three inch frame, graduated from Villanova's seminary with the class of 1942. He then proceeded to the Catholic University of America in Washington D.C. where he received his Master's degree in mathematics. This was followed by further graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania.

Toured The East

Between 1946 and 1951 he served as a member of Villanova's faculty teaching both mathematics and reliigon. Has was then called upon to serve as a member of the Augustinian Mission Band touring the East coast conducting a series of retreats and missions.

Since his return to Villanova, Fr. Weeks has been a busy man, having been appointed moderator of the sophomore class. In addition he teaches both freshman and senior Religion courses, acts as chaplain at Rosemont College and serves as prefect of Dwyer Hall.

Longer The Better

He seems well-satisfied with this heavy schedule and has taken a particularly active part in the activities of the Sophomore Class. We are sure Father Weeks will be with us for some time to come, and the longer the better.

Maybe he's thinking about the 70-degree weather he left in Australia . . . Ron Delany looks sad as he's greeted Sunday night by about 50 students, Athletic Director Ambrose Dudley (left) and Track Coach Jim Elliott at International Airport.

Junior Week Events Chairmen Announced

Chairmen for all events to take place during Junior Week next May have been appointed and are already busily engaged in preparations for Villanova's most publicized social week.

Co-chairmen for the entire week which extends from April 28 to May 4 are Jed Dioguardi and Tom Brennan.

The opening affair, Mother's Day, will be directed by Student Council vice-chairman Pat Nicholson and Mike Rafferty.

Although no definite plans have been scheduled for the middle of the week as yet, Karl Smith and Dave Belcher will be chairmen of Wednesday's program while George Fraunces and Norm Peer will oversee Thursday's highlight.

The memorable weekend commences Friday with the Promenade in the Field House and concludes the following night with the Dinner-Dance at the Benjamin Franklin in center city.

Gene Fogarty and Ralph DeCicco head a large Prom Committee while Clem Birch will be sole chairman of the wek's final event.

For the girl who isn't quite the bridge partner she might be, a perfect gift is a compact Autobridge board. Designed by one of the world's best known bridge experts, the small game will help her improve her game and provide hours of enjoyment while she does it. Price of this suggestion—$1.50.

Cosmetic manufacturers cater to the Christmas shopper by packaging their products in beautiful gift sets. With the help of a saleswoman, a male shopper can select a scented set to please the dainty one.

Some of the more standard items which make good Christmas surprises are personalized stationery, fountain pen and pencil sets and carefully selected costume jewelry.

In case she doesn't have one, or has broken her old one, a neat portable radio would be a cherished gift. The larger appliance companies are featuring the small, personal sets for as little as $13 and they range up to the very expensive transistor types. Any of these will be appreciated additions to a dormitory room or bedroom.

These are just a few of the wishes included in Santa's mail from lassies. Decide on the gift that will please her most—and shop early.

Journalism Grads Can Apply For Admission To Stanford University

The Stanford University Department of Communication and Journalism is now receiving applications for graduate scholarships in journalism for the 1957-58 academic year. The scholarships carry stipends from $1,200 to $2,400.

Requests for particulars should be addressed to the Executive Head, Department of Communication and Journalism, Stanford University, Stanford, Calif. February 15 is the deadline for completing applications.

Tells What to do In An Air Raid

By HARRY & GERRY

In view of the recent world crisis, Hary and Gerry have decided to tell you exactly what to do in case of an A-bomb attack.

1. As soon as the bombs start dropping, run like hell. It won't do any good, but it helps keep your mind off the more important things. It doesn't matter where you run, as long as you run into large crowds and in a zig-zag course. Thus you will knock down the maximum amount of Red Cross workers and stretcher bearers.

2. Always and under all circumstances get excited and shout bloody murder. It will not only add to the confusion, but it scares the devil out of little kids.

3. When the raid starts, convince all your neighbors that this is only a practice drill. Laugh it up at all times, and, if possible, get your picture taken.

4. Remember, hero stuff will get you nowhere in a raid. Cowardice is the by-word. Stick with the old ladies and little children (preferably crippled). When the situation becomes desperate, you can easily overpower them for the best position.

5. Go to the nearest phone and start calling all your friends. Someone might want to call the Fire Department, but they will probably be busy and will not want to be bothered.

6. If you find an unexploded bomb, always pick it up and shake it. The firing pin is probably stuck, and a bomb in that condition is a constant source of danger.

7. Always eat heavily of garlic and limburger cheese and drink strong wine before entering a shelter. This makes you a bit unpopular, but it is surprising how much more room you get. Knock down those in charge if they start telling you what to do. They alway save the best seat for themselves anyway.

8. If you should be the victim of a direct hit, don't let it upset you. Don't, under any circumstance fly to pieces. Just lie down and relax. You're dead.

Coach Jim Elliott gets the shoulder treatment along with Ron Delany after the Olympic champion's return to campus Sunday night.

Grievances Listed By Student Council

On Tuesday night, December 3 the voice of the student body of Villanova was raised in protest through a special meeting of the Student Council.

Approximately 400 students including 45 voting members of the Council met to discuss a solution regarding the recent demonstrations in the resident cafeteria. Joe Martin, Chairman of the Council opened the meeting with a request for order at the meeting and called for concrete suggestions.

Sophomore - class representative, Don Kempf, introduced a three-point motion stipulating that a specific list of grievances be drawn up and submitted to the administration and that action and comment on this list be returned to the Council by its meeting Dec. 10; that a committee of council members be formed to submit this list and that the VILLANOVAN conduct a poll among students to determine the favorite and least-favorite meals served in the dining hall. The floor was then opened for suggestions as to specific grievances.

The committee formed consisted of the council officers and three council members.

University Library Receives 2 Letters Of Historical Note

During the week of Nov. 26, two letters of historical note were presented to the University library by Mr. Stephen Nagy of 8 South St., Phila., a dealer in all prints. The communications were written by Commodore John Barry, "Father of the U.S. Navy," to John Brown, acting secretary of the Marine Committee during the Revolutionary War. They will be on exhibition in the library as of the week of December 10.

For reference, four biographies of Commodore Barry's life (1745-1803) are available in our library; those by William Clark, Martin Griffin, Joseph Gurn, and William Meany.

Chem, Physics Clubs to Hold Sunday Fete

Members of the Villanova Chemical Society and the Physics Club will attend a Joint Communion breakfast Sunday in Stouffer's Restaurant, Wynnwood. The breakfast will be served after the 9 o'clock Mass in the University Chapel.

Chemical Society President, Herb Rammrath arranged the breakfast. This gathering is following a precedent set by the society in past years. Dr. Clarence Heininger, society moderator, and Mr. William Driscoll, head of the Physics department, will attend.

The main address will be delivered by Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., Dean of the Arts and Science School.

All members of the two societies are invited to attend. Tickets may be purchased from Herb Rammrath or Jim Shea, Physics Club president.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor:

I think your VILLANOVAN is a very interesting paper with very high qualities; I read it with great pleasure and enjoyed also your article very much. When I saw your paper I thought what a pity it is that we haven't such an important paper, which is read by nearly all the students. We only have some very small and very bad ones. I envy you this good opportunity to discuss all the happenings and opinions in university-life!

Here the pupils at secondary schools are even more active than college students; at my school, for instance, we had a rather good paper. But the students—it's a pity!

Klaus-Jurgen Popp

Thoughts for today, only

"A reasonable price," I said and bought

Miss Phyllis Randolph has no reason to be jealous of Grace Kelly's Cinderella wedding.

This Saturday she will have one of her own when she marries the world king of the 400 meters, Villanova's Olympic champion, Charley Jenkins, in St. Richard's Church in Boston.

Miss Randolph, a secretary, was Charley's date at last May's Junior Week and was a candidate for Junior Queen.

The previously planned quiet wedding became national news when the prospective bridegroom won two gold medals at the Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia.

Jenkins won the 400-meter run by defeating world record holder Lou Jones. He won his second gold medal as a member of the victorious United States 1,600-meter relay team.

His 400-meter medal was the first ever won by a Villanova athlete and Charley is also the first Wildcat Olympic double winner.

His high school track coach, Mr. Thomas Duffy, will be Jenkin's best man, and Phil Reavis, Villanova's Olympic high-jumper, will be an usher.

Ernani Replaces Seville; O-C Plans More Concerts

Verdi's "ERNANI" will be heard at 7:30 tonight in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall instead of Rossini's "BARBER OF SEVILLE" which will be offered Thursday, January 3, 1957. This evening's recording is designed to prepare the student for the Metroplitan Opera production on December 18, at 8:00 P.M. in Philadelphia. The cast will include first class artists such as Mario Del Monanco, Leonard Warren, and Zinka Milanov.

A student concert will be given on Monday, December 17 at 8:00 P.M. by the Philadelphia Orchestra. The program includes Bach-Caillet "Pastorale" from Christman Oratorio and Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 4. Rudolph Serkin will be heard with the Philadelphia Orchestra in Mendelssohn's Concerto No. 1. Tickets are available at $1.25.

Opera-Classica will begin distribution of free librettos in conjunction with the Opera House program on Station WVIL. Mr. Charles Fritz will be in charge of the distribution.

Season Basketball Tickets Available To Student Body

Student season ticket books are available to all students for basketball games at the Palestra and may be obtained for $5.00. The book entitles holders to see the 13 double-headers in which the Wildcats will participate this season.

All student season books will contain coupons for the number of games in which each school will participate in the Palestra program. Students must exchange coupons at the school ticket office in the Field House for $2.50 reserved seat tickets prior to 12 noon, the day of the game.

"Date Tickets"

Students may arrange to have "dates" located alongside their seat-location by paying for the $2.50 reserved seat and requesting the location at the time of the exchange of their season ticket coupon. On nights designated as "Special Date Night" students may purchase an additional reserved seat ticket for 50 cents each at the time of the exchange of their season ticket coupon. The additional seat location will be alongside the season ticket location.

Individual Game Tickets

Student individual game tickets will be available for all doubleheaders at the price of 50 cents each and may be purchased at the ticket office of each "Big Five" school upon presentation of a student matriculation card. The ticket sale closes at 12 noon on the day of the game except on Wednesdays when it closes at 1:30 p. m.

Students properly identified will receive a $2.50 reserved seat location in the general section assigned to the school for each particular game.

Individual game purchasers may also obtain "date" tickets by requesting them at the time of their purchase and by paying for the $2.50 reserved seat adjacent to the one purchased as a student location.

On nights designated as "Special Date Night", students may purchase two reserved seats at 50 cents each upon presentation of proper identification. The additional ticket seat location will be adjacent to the one purchased as a student location.

First "Date" Night

The first "Special Date Night" will be on Saturday, December 15 when Villanova plays William and Mary.

Auditions For T'n'T Show Begin Jan. 7

The Turf and Tinsel society will hold auditions for the dancing chorus of its spring musical comedy production Monday, Jan. 7, in the Field House, it was announced Monday.

Auditions for the speaking cast were held yesterday, and anyone who missed them and is still interested in trying out should contact an officer of T and T immediately.

The speaking cast will be directed by Villanova graduate Jack Kelly, as it has been in the past years.

Co-business managers Ed Tomezsko and Mike Guida announced Monday that the advertisement campaign for the program is now underway. Students who think they can help out by soliciting even a single ad are asked to pick up an advertisement blank from anyone on the business staff and take it home with them over the Christmas vacation.

All help will be warmly welcomed. Students are also requested to be on the lookout for donations to Turf and Tinsel, it has been announced by Al Lutz, treasurer of the organization.

Publicity Needed

A large publicity campaign is being drawn up by the officers who ask that any ideas on Turf and Tinsel publicity for the Show, March 7,8 and 9, be immediately brought to their attention. Every idea will be considered.

The speaking cast will consist of approximately 18 men, and it will be anounced after the Christmas vacation.

Accounting Society Hears Revenue Man

Villanova's Accounting Society heard the advantages of work in the Internal Revenue Service at last Thursday's meeting.

In his talk, Charles A. Wilson of the Internal Revenue Service explained the duties of a revenue agent and outlined the benefits of government service for accountants.

President Jack Patrick announced that the society's membership drive had resulted in a total membership of 100.

He said that criteria employed in screening applicants for government service are grades in accounting subjects, participation in extra curricular activities and the result of an oral interview.

formerly required of every student. But, though things have become better lately, the population remains restive, especially since the radio stations in Western Germany and the American station in Berlin have informed the Soviet zone very well about affairs in Hungary.

The most effective danger of communist influence that is to be feared is that the youth of eastern Germany have never seen a democratic government. This danger must be observed very seriously!

Re-unification And The U.S.

All of Germany hopes in the U.S.A. concerning re-unification as the U.S. has become the greatest moral power in the world. We cannot rely on Eden or Mollet and Nehru has refused mediation. So Germany is hoping for an agreement between Washington and Moscow. Generally, the Germans foresee a total European system of security including a united Germany prepared by American-Russian conferences.

The population of eastern Germany can do nothing until then but wait and hope. The happenings in Hungary have secured them in their hope that no tyranny is able to suppress permanently a free nation only by rough force of arms.

BILLboard

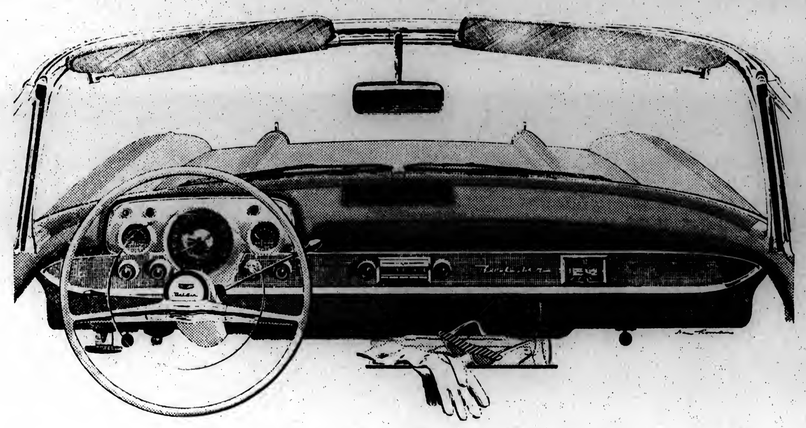
Once again in a pre-Christmas spirit, men of Villanova demonstrate their well known Spirit. This Saturday morning a large group of young men and women will gather at St. John's Orphan Home (49th and Wyalusing). This event is sponsored each year by the Junior Class, but should by no means be restricted only to them. The small amount of money that each will spend on these kids will be rewarded by smiles and "thank you's" at the end of the afternoon. Let's see if we can get more Frosh, Sophs and especially Seniors to support this Outing.

REICH

The Charity Ball being held Friday for the benefit of these same kids, will, I'm sure, meet with great success. The band for the Ball will be Lou Denison and his Orchestra. In order to save a few needed pennies be sure to get tickets in advance. The ducats will be $1.50 at the door and only $1.00 before hand. I'm sure that this "half" will come in real handy.



To continue our great support of the Wildcats in Basketball, let's all get down to the Palestra, Saturday night, for the William and Mary game. This game will be a date game, so bring your girl for an additional fifty cents. That's a total of only one buck for both of you.

Menasha Skulnik, a real great comedian, just opened at the Locust in Philadelphia. The play, a first class comedy, is called "Uncle Willie." For many laughs be sure to try and get to see it, before it leaves Philly for Broadway. Mr. Skulnik really puts on a good show.

Elsewhere in Philadelphia there are two excellent movies to be seen. At the Randolph is Cecil B. DeMille's "Ten Commandments." "Oklahoma" is still being seen by many at the Midtown.

Strolling through Sullivan Hall the other day, a Freshman was surprised to see three Seniors and a dog playing poker. Pausing to watch, he commented on the extraordinary performance of the dog. "He's not so smart," said the dog's partner in disgust. "Every time he gets a good hand he wags his tail."

Delany, Jenkins, Reavis Wildcats Well Worthy of Acclaim

By JACK CURTIN

Throughout their lives, men strive to be the best living person in their particular field. Anyone who achieves this perfection is deemed a success, for this is the basis for our judgement of a man. Most men never realize this ambition in their lifetime, so it would seem that when comparative youngsters have proved themselves better than anyone else in the world, they are worthy of special acclaim. Villanova certainly has men who fit this category.

It should be obvious that the men spoken here are the Wildcat Olympians, Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins and Phil Reavis. The facts are these: Ron Delany, Olympic 1500 meter champion; Charley Jenkins, Olympic 400 meter champion and a member of the champion United States 1600 meter relay team; and Phil Reavis, sixth in the Olympic high jump. Perhaps it would be interesting to delve into the background of this trio and discover what it is that has made them the champions they are.

Delany Was Criticized

A logical starting point would be with the man who won the feature race of the Olympic track and field events for his native Ireland, Ron Delany, youngest of the four-minute milers and the first Irishman to win an Olympic gold medal since 1932. This is the man who, last season, was criticized by American sportswriters and fans alike for his attitude of running only fast enough to win and even for the way he ran. This is the man who they said was overrated when he ran two relatively slow races in losing to mile record holder, John Landy of Australia, last spring. He is also the man who became the seventh man to break the four-minute mile less than a year after he started running the distance and is now an Olympic champion. In the face of this severe criticism, the smiling Irishman has proven himself potentially the greatest miler the world has ever seen.

The other Villanova champion, Charley Jenkins, brings two gold medals back to the Main Line campus. Jenkins almost didn't make the United States team, barely taking third place in his distance in the Olympic trials in California. However, in Australia, it was a different story. The Wildcat ace was the only American to finish among the top three in the 400-meter-run and ran the fastest lap of the 1,600 meter-relay-race. When the chips were down, Charley Jenkins raced to victory, proving that he was one of the world's best.

Reavis Didn't Win

The story of Phil Reavis is a little different; the Villanova high jumper didn't win. Perhaps an old basketball adage holds true in the high jump also, "when it comes to a choice between a good big man and a good little man, take the big one." Only 5' 9" and used to a firmer approaching area, the Villanovan was unable to match his taller opponents. However, none of these men, not even the fabulous Charlie Dumas, can claim to have jumped over a foot above their own height, as can the courageous Wildcat. It could be that Reavis deserves more respect and admiration than either of the men who are coming home with Olympic gold medals.

These are the men who have brought track fame to Villanova. All we can do to show our appreciation is to extend to them our heartiest congratulations on a job well done, and let them know that we are all waiting for that day in the upcoming season when they will team with a couple of other record holders named Bragg, Sydnor, and Breckenridge, and several other fellows who look like they may go out and set a few records of their own, to bring the national collegiate track championship to Villanova.

Wildcat Five Splits Opening Games; Face William and Mary Sat. Night

Face Veteran Virginia Five In Third Tilt

By BOB THOMAS

Villanova's courtsters play their third straight game at the Palestra this Saturday night in the second game of a twin-bill. William and Mary College, with a veteran quintet, supplies the Wildcat's opposition after St. Joseph's and Lafayette clash in the opener.

William and Mary has four returning starters along with a standout transfer and a service returnee. Captain Jim Kaplan, Bob Hoitsma, Harry Cornell, and Bill Ousely are the starters returning from last year's squad which posted a 12-14 record. Don Engelken, the service returnee, was a starter two years ago and Al Miller, who transferred from Utah, was the leading scorer on that freshman team two years ago.

Won Title

Boyd Baird, in his fifth year as coach of the Indians, is expecting to improve last year's below .500 record. Last season the Tribe won its first Virginia Big Six title since 1951-52 and also finished fifth in the Southern Conference with a 9-7 record. Coach Baird does not have one outstanding scorer on the team but he does have a good combination of shooting ability, speed, and height.

Jim Kaplan is playing his third and final year on the varsity. The six-one forward averaged 12.4 points per game last season after having a point average of 8.6 in his sophomore year. Senior Bob Hoitsma holds down the other forward position. Standing at six feet three inches, Hoitsma averaged 12 points a game last season and rebounded with men several inches taller than he.

Wildcats Led By Griffith In Both Games

By HANK NICHOLS

Villanova's basketball Wildcats made an impressive showing in their first two games although they lost the opener to a highly touted Canisius team 66-62. Following that loss the Cats righted themselves with a 79-59 victory over Delaware Saturday night. Both games were played at the Palestra.

In the Canisius game Villanova played well enough to win but several mistakes that usually accompany an opening game hurt the home team just enough to provide the margin of difference.

The first half was a nip and tuck affair with Villanova leaving the floor at the intermission with a slim one point advantage.

Wildcats Rally

Immediately upon resumption of play the Griffins from Buffalo with All-east performer Hank Nowak leading the way, raced to a 46-38 advantage. The visitors maintained this lead until the 4:28 mark when the Wildcats caught fire and rallied to take over the lead 58-57 with two and a half minutes remaining.

With the score tied at 60, Canisius hit for three straight baskets and the final count read 66-62.

On Saturday, Delaware proved to be no match for the well-balanced Wildcats and the game was never a contest after the opening few minutes. Al Griffith was easily the outstanding player on the floor as he made better than 50 per cent of his shots and scored 21 points.

This game provided Coach Al Severance with an opportunity to see how some of his sophomores reacted under the pressure of actual game situations.

Swimmers Rout Holy Cross For Opening Meet Victory

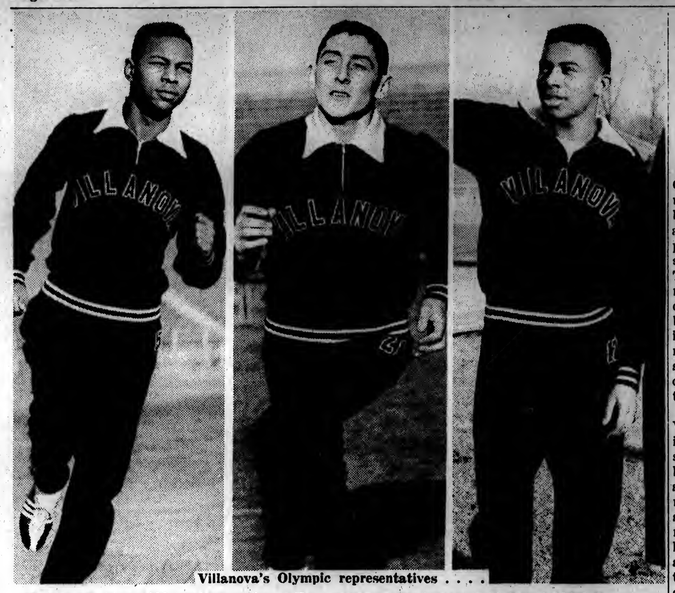
Villanova's varsity swimming team opened the 1956-1957 season Saturday in New York with a brilliant 55-30 victory over the Crusaders of Holy Cross. Swimming mentor Ed Giesz and his 15-man squad topped off the weekend with a water polo match against the New York Athletic Club, National Junior Water Polo Champions of last year. However, the Wildcats lost the encounter in a close, hard-fought battle, coming out on the short end of a 9-8 score.

The Mainliners captured six of the ten events scheduled against Holy Cross, including both of the new additions to college swimming, the 400-yard-medley relay and the 200-yard butterfly breststroke.

Senior Don Couig headed the list of winners with victories in both the 200-yard butterfly breaststroke and the 200-yard backstroke. Team captain Lou Schoener won the 220-yard freestyle and took second place in the 100-yard freestyle. Senior Den Rinkacs took a first in the 50-yard freestyle sprint and third in the 100-yard freestyle.

Villanova finished one and two in the diving with Mike Rafferty and Jim Corey finishing first and second respectively. It was an all - sophomore team which won the 400-yard medley relay. The quartet of Jerry Cechony, Jim Gregory, Larry Palacio, and Ken MacGillivray beat out a Holy Cross foursome in 4:28.3.

Rifle Team Beats Princeton, Drexel



The varsity rifle team continued its winning ways this week by traveling to Princeton and beating the Tigers 1381-1345. By this win the shooting Cats remain undefeated.

Hank Miller led the Cats with 282 followed by Jim Abernethy with 281. Closely behind were Villanovans Klaus, Carini and Ventura with 279, 274 and 265 respectively.

The NROTC team didn't do as well however. The St. Joseph's Hawks came out to the Main Line to defeat the Navies 1320-1308. The loss last Thursday gave the team a 2-2 record.

Fred Passarella was high for VU with 282 and Mel Ventura was next with 273. Middies Walsh, Palizotto and Spada

Ron and Charley Triumph, Gain Olympic Gold Medals

By BILL VINCENT

Two weeks ago Villanova's Ron Delaney and Charley Jenkins won three gold medals at the Olympics in Melbourne. Jenkins won the 400 meter run and then ran a sizzling 45.5 third leg on the victorious U. S. 1600 meter relay team. Delany won the 1500 meters in the Olympic record beating time of 3.41.2, thereby giving Ireland her first track and field gold medal since 1932.

Delany ran a brilliant race. Allowing the other runners to set the pace, the Dublin flash stayed far back behind the leaders till the final 100 meters. Then the ace miler raced around the outside with his typical last lap sprint to win by several yards over Klaus Richtzenchain of Germany and John Landy of Australia, who holds the world record for the mile. Delany beat four other four minute milers in winning this race.

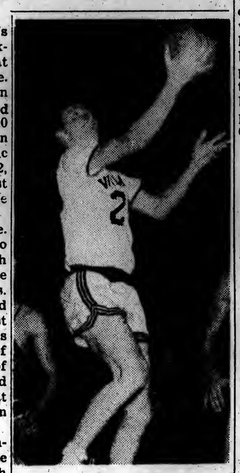
Jenkins, a senior from Cambridge, Mass., also won his race with a great stretch drive. With only a few yards remaining, Jenkins passed 400-meter world record holder Lou Jones of the United States Army and Russia's Aradalian Ignatiev and then staved off oncoming Karl Haas of Germany to win by a yard in the comparatively slow time of 46.7. A few days later Jenkins ran the third leg of the 1600 meter relay race for the United States in 45.5, the fastest lap of the race.

Another Villanovan, high jumper Phil Reavis, took sixth place in a tough field.

Second Luzzi Gains Honors, Comes to V.U.

Don Luzzi's younger brother, who's already decided to attend Villanova, added another football honor to his growing collection last week.

Joe Luzzi was named to a tackle position on the Connecticut all-state football team.



A 16-year-old senior at Wilbur Cross High School in New Haven, Joe stands 5-11 and weighs 228 pounds—about the same as Don.

Two weeks ago he was named outstanding high school player in the New Haven area and won a sportsmanship award.

Joe visited Villanova over the Thanksgiving recess and announced that he wanted to come here. Don said he had not tried to influence his brother's decision but was glad he was interested in playing here.

Villanova Captain Jim Smith drives in for a layup in 79-59 victory over Delaware at the Palestra Saturday night. Smith had 16 points for the night.

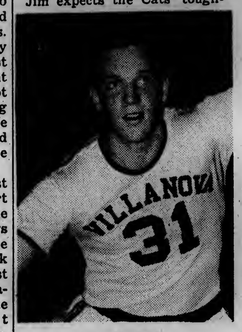
Harry Cornell, a six-six junior, is in his second varsity season at center. Cornell, who holds the William and Mary frosh scoring record, averaged 8.3 points a game last season. The guard positions are filled by Don Engelken and Bill "Fumbo" Ouseley. Engelkin, a six-three junior, was not in school last year but in the 1954-55 season he had an average of 5.9 points a game. The five-ten Ouseley averaged 5.3 points a game last season as a junior.

Dixie Tournament Was Jim Fahey Chance For Stardom, Provided Biggest Thrill

By FRANK FLEMING



Last season at the Dixie Classic in North Carolina Villanova coach Al Severance gambled against overwhelming odds and started a man who in his two previous appearances could score only a total of four points. The gamble paid off. Jim Fahey not only made good in his first collegiate starting assignment but was the Wildcat bright spot in an otherwise disappointing mid-season tournament. He scored 49 points and pulled down 26 rebounds during the three game stand in Raleigh.

Fahey is one of the first Villanova athletes to take part in two sports during the same season. Big Jim not only plays basketball but also throws the shot-put at the indoor track meets during the winter. Last season he surprised many Villanova fans by starting for the hoopsters on Friday night against Duquesne at the Palestra and shot-putting in the IC4A championships in Madison Square Garden the next evening.

The 6-5, 225-pound athlete is a native of Erie, Pa., and while at Cathedral Prep there won letters in football, basketball and track. During his senior year he led the Prep hoopsters to the Pennsylvania State Catholic Championship by downing a very strong Harrisburg Catholic five. The same spring the big red-head won the state shot-put crown. Despite winning these two championships Jim lists as his biggest thrill his fine play in the Dixie Classic last Christmas.

Jim believes that this year's Wildcats are the best Villanova team to take the court since he has arrived.

Jim expects the Cats' toughest competition this season to be Indiana and West Virginia. Indiana is one of the best teams in the Big Ten while West Virginia boasts the clowning Hot-Rod Hundley.

JIM FAHEY
Redhead From Erie

"Reds" on graduation from high school was besieged by scholarship offers from many colleges both as a result of his basketball and track endeavors, but selected Villanova over all of them because of his desire for a Catholic education.

The Senior Education student plans to fulfill his obligations with Uncle Sam after graduation.

Rules Satisfy Students; VU Senior Quoted by ACP

A Villanova senior is quoted in an Associated Collegiate Press poll which concludes that college students, on the average, are little bothered by restrictions of various sorts placed on them by college administrators.

Commented the senior, who was not identified by the ACP: "The administration requires minimum standards of personal conduct to maintain orderliness."

The ACP adds that its conclusion is qualified by the fact that restrictions are unique for each individual college. Students may be very satisfied at one particular institution and very unhappy at another, adds the ACP.

No College Escapes

In addition, this situation may vary within the confines of any one college, say between students living on campus and students living off campus, or between students in one particular line of learning and those in another. But whatever else may be said upon the subject, one can feel fairly safe in saying that no college escapes the problem, be its intensity slight or weighty.

To get some information on this issue from the student's point of view, Associated Collegiate Press asked the following question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

DO YOU FEEL THAT YOUR COLLEGE ADMINISTRATION IS TOO RESTRICTIVE IN GOVERNING YOUR PRIVATE LIFE WHILE YOU ATTEND COLLEGE?

The results:

	Men	Women	Total
Yes	20%	15%	18%
No	76%	82%	78%
Undecided	4%	3%	4%

Coeds More Content

Indications are that coeds appear to be a shade more satisfied with their present status than do college men. But of greater interest is the fact that all but a very small percentage have opinions either one way or the other on this issue.

Most students who feel the regulations laid down by their college administrations are fair, justify their opinion with the observation that rules are necessary. "They have to have most of these restrictions for a large group" is the way a freshman coed at Alabama College (Montevallo) puts it. And a sophomore coed at Christian College for Women (Columbia, Mo.) stresses this point: "Three hundred seventy-five girls away from home need quite a bit of reasonable governing."

Students Offer Example

Students who feel they are hindered with restrictions generally offer specific examples. And most of them advance the hypothesis that it is impossible to mature as responsible adults when they are treated like juveniles. For example, a senior at a large midwestern university puts it this way: "The college administration informs the student how mature he is when he starts college, but yet lays down rigid laws to control the student," while a graduate student at the same university states, "It is paternalistic to the Nth degree."

The small percentage of students who are undecided on this issue generally offer the comment that "it depends upon the school." A few haven't made up their minds yet and "just don't know."

The next day Captain John Murphy, of the Villanova Security Police, met with Radnor Township Police Captain James Bones. Captain Murphy requested Radnor police protection for social functions and more adequate markers. They agreed to the installation of blinking caution lights in the middle of the Pike 200 feet each side of the Field House.

The Student Council approved the action last week and appointed Bonner, Nash, Kelly and Miller the members of the Villanova University Traffic Safety Commission.

Yesterday the Commission met with Captains Murphy and Bones and discussed establishment of police regulation of traffic on the pike between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. Signs announcing the boundaries of the University and installation of arc lights were also considered.

Local Police Agree

The local police are in full accord with the proceedings and urged the formation of a student safety program.

Bonner reported that engineering students had made a study of the traffic flow and discovered that the majority of cars disobeyed the speed limits.

"This is the speed limit we want on the Pike," points out Frank Bonner (Left). He's backing petition for Villanova Traffic Safety Commission with Charley Nash, Hank Miller, Bill Kelly (sitting).

Charley Jenkins, Olympic 400-meter champion, and Phyllis Randolph, will be married this Saturday in Boston.

Cafeteria Head Promises To Try Some Suggestions

ative.

This was the special committee appointed by Martin at last Tuesday's meeting.

Mr. Spescha reportedly thought the idea of milk tickets a good one. A practical system for its operation would have to be worked out by Council. The source said: "It is possible that such a plan, if not properly investigated, could slow up the line."

The informant said one thing noted in the meeting with Mr. Spescha was that "one factor that slows up the line most is a slow student."

Tour Kitchen

After the conference, the four Councilmen were taken on a tour of the entire kitchen by Mr. Spescha. Said the informant: "We were shown, to the satisfaction of all of us, that we have here at Villanova a setup of which we can be proud. We saw first class meats in the freezer (12 degrees below zero inside). The system is not perfect but an effort is being made in that direction."

About 150 day hops and residents attended the special Council meeting and many voiced their opinions from the floor. Their comments and suggestions covered: coordination among cafeteria employees, choice of meals anytime, increasing quantity of food, system of meal tickets, resuming last year's number-taking system (at the bottom of the ramp).

Strictly Opinion

By PAUL FINAN

How many times have you given some thought to the unfortunate situation that an orphan finds himself in? It could be true that you never have, and quite naturally not, for we all seem to be inclined to take for granted one of our greatest gifts, our parents.

They provide for our every need, whether spiritual or physical, and we just accept all of this as something which is owed to us. As parents, it is of course their obligation to care for us, but don't they really give us something which we cannot actually put our finger on? There is a certain amount of love and warmth which revolves about the family life, something which makes a house so much more than a fulfillment of an architect's plans. A house suddenly becomes a home.

No Family For Orphans

But it is due to our parents—to the entire family—that we always have a sentimental feeling for it. All of the rewards and comforts of family life are completely unknown to the orphan. To him, a home is something which lies just beyond his grasp.

FINAN

On this Saturday, the Junior Class is sponsoring the annual Orphans' Outing which is given for all the children from St. John's Orphanage in Philadelphia. This is one of the finest traditions ever to be established here at Villanova. It is really worthwhile and it is rewarding not only to the orphans but to all Villanovans as well. It is difficult to determine who receives more enjoyment from this big day.

Date Optional

The Villanovan, with or without a date, takes his newly-found friend into Philadelphia and vicinity to visit the toy departments of the big stores, stops off during the day for a nourishing meal, and then maybe ends up with a good movie featuring five of the very latest Mickey Mouse cartoons. And, of course, there is always the very important visit with Santa Claus!

The student returns his weary charge to the orphanage after a busy day, one that was filled with excitement and the true Christmas spirit. Whatever activities might be chosen, it can easily be seen why this day is one which will long be remembered by orphan and Villanovan alike.

Laughlin and Luzzi Co-Chairmen

This year we are hoping to give the orphans a better time than they have ever had before. If you can possibly take part, do not pass up the opportunity. A little goes a long way with these youngsters and expenses are not at all great.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY, HOLY 1957

While last-minute shoppers hustle along the streets and the Christmas lights blink down from their perches, it's a good time to pause and consider all the things Villanovans have to be happy about in 1956. And hopeful for in the year ahead.

And we did have many things to be proud of during the past year, in academics and in athletics.

The United States might have lost the unofficial Olympic team standings to the Russians, but we produced two world champions . . . Charley Jenkins, the Massachusetts boy who once preferred to play basketball rather than run, and Ron Delany, who won for his native Ireland after almost not getting to Australia because of finances.

And there was the first winning football season in four years. It felt good to be able to greet the victorious ball payers when they returned from their geography lessons in Michigan, Ohio and points north and south. The invasion of Boston, planned by Pat Nicholson and his committee with the same care General Eisenhower and his staff used in setting up the D-Day invasion, impressed Philadelphia sports writers and Boston hotel managers and policeman.

Academics did not lag behind, either. There were new instructors when tanned Villanovans returned from ditch-digging chores or the shore in September. And a new cut system, which may or may not prove to be workable, but which has made more than a few undergraduates aware of the benefits to be gained from consistent class attendance.

Physically, the campus was changing, and smudging shoes with mud, but the new Commerce and Finance Building will provide some much-needed classroom space . . . the new dormitory will unite the resident student population by bringing the freshmen who have been forced in the past to live off campus, onto the grounds . . . and Garey Hall will probably bring about the permanent acceptance of Villanova's four-year-old School of Law by the American Bar Association (this had been held up until the School was provided quarters of its own).

And Villanovans could be thankful that the mess in the Suez and the Middle East was alleviated, at least enough to remove the shadow of imminent war from the United States and the Pentagon.

With this backward glance at 1956, it's almost time to make those New Year's resolutions, and to cheer and drink to the coming of 1957. First, though there is midnight Mass Christmas dinner, a dab of egg nog, the Christmas ties, the starry-eyed look of younger brothers and sisters when they spot what Santa brought them.

So the VILLANOVAN staff, from the editor to the most timid cub reporter, wishes each of their readers a merry Christmas and a holy and prosperous new year.

US Finances Foreign Debts But There's No Other Way

By Gene Donohue

Since the end of the Second World War it has been the common knowledge of most Americans that the United States has been footing the bills for our allies whenever they manage to get themselves into trouble. It is therefore the same foregone conclusion among these individuals that this present Suez crisis will be no exception.

But perhaps before we judge this policy too harshly we had better look into the need for this aid. The background of this need for financing Europe has been played with so much in this country's periodicals that it would be ridiculous to go into it here. However, not too many people are familiar with the need itself and the reason why supplying this relief is important not only to Europe, but also to the United States.

Dependent On Oil

To begin with, during the past five years, Western Europe has become heavily dependent upon oil to supply the power for its factories. The era of the coal supplied factory has fast disappeared from the European scene. Now most of this oil has come from the Middle East, partially from the pipe lines that have their terminus on the coast of the Mediterannean, but mostly from the tankers that continually ply a path through the Suez Canal.

Due to the recent developments in the area, not only has the supply from the canal itself been cut off, but the output of the pipe lines has been reduced to a trickle because some of these lines have been sabotaged. The question then arises, "where, then, will the oil come from?" The natural answer to this question is that it will come from the Western Hemisphere and from the tankers that will go around the Cape of Good Hope. The whole trouble is that there just aren't enough tankers to make the trip and still keep Europe supplied with oil.

U. S. Steps In

This is where the United States comes in. Naturally we can sell Europe the oil, again, not enough to fill her needs, but enough to make life bearable for these people. The main problem in this affair is that the European countries have nothing to buy this oil with. Their dollar reserves are down to a bare minimum. So, as a result of this, the United States is footing the bill.

The next item is the reason why it is important that the United States supply this aid. Many people feel that the English and the French brought this situation on Europe and it is therefore up to them to bail themselves out. The whole trouble with this argument is that these two nations have no means to accomplish this feat. The United States, then, is the only power left that can help.

Extremely Important

It is extremely important for the United States to maintain the economic stability of the Western nations in order to combat the influence of Communism. It is an established fact that Communist philosophy reaps its greatest gains in areas of discontent . . . and what greater discontent can there be but economic discontent. Were Western Europe to fall into a state of economic chaos, there would be nothing that the United States could ever do then to stop the spread of Communism.

Aside from the philosophical reason, there is also the hard, cold fact that a destitute nation cannot possibly supply an army to face possible Russian aggression. Were these European nations to fall into this condition, the United States would have to become an armed fortress and even this would be useless against an atomic or hydrogen attack.

Relieve Dollar Shortage

The United States government must relieve the dollar shortages in these countries and this might mean that tax cuts will be postponed again. But the American citizen should be made to realize that this money is being spent for the benefit of the United States and not for some foreign nation. Unless this is accomplished, the taxpayer might put such tremendous pressure on Congress that it will be forced either to lower the amount of this aid, or to cut it completely. Such a turn of events would be disastrous to the free world.

PUBlicly Speaking

By BOB & MIKE

Something new in the history of PUBlicly Speaking . . . for the very first time, a look at some of the leading campus personalities by way of a gossip column.

Vince Sullivan seems to have emerged victorious from a dispute with Student Council President Joe Martin. The object of the dispute . . . Dottie.

Is it possible that anyone could be lost for a whole weekend in Devon? Seems Jack Decker was. Ollie Finan, new Commando-in-Chief at Rosemont, has a heck of a time over there, he can't find anyone to teach him bridge. Speaking of Rosemont, Jim Judge, DPM President has been caught hobnobbing with Joan Finnerty quite a bit of late.

Anyone reading Santa Anne's helpful hints to the bewildered male Christmas shopper in last week's VILLANOVAN should know the bare facts behind the story. Santa Anne is in reality working news gal, Betty Wright, pinned to Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith. Get those hints, Tom?

Speaking of Smiths, Karl Smith is no longer a stag, seems he found a friend to help him spend $46 last weekend . . . the name's Peggy. Junior Class President Bob Mulcahy has just informed Terry that he'd rather spend Dec. 26 in the Garden than at the New Rochelle Holly Hop. Quiet please, no one's supposed to know.

Warren "Centi" Mangan and Eileen Moriarity have been setting Long Island on its ear. Sanctuary Society President Dick McEntee's brother doing him out at St. Rose's College in Albany. Dave Belcher, of Joyce Kiely Mile fame, spending a lot of time in Hoboken lately. Pat sending Bill Magee too much literature for him to cope with.

George "Baby" Brandeweide, intramural scholarship holder, voted "most athletic man on campus." Friends tell Junior Bob Powers he studies Navy too much, say it's his only love. Jim Stewart taking full advantage of new cut system, carrying 16 credits at Penn.

"Well Known Junior" Leo Rogers still trying to "worm" his way into a date; hasn't had one all year. John Nettleton really under a Camden thumb. Where was that you found her picture the other day John? Stan Wilson under the thumb too, but this time it's from Erie. Pre-med Senior Tom "Rathair" Roddy and Suzy really hitting it off.

What did Ron Delany smuggle out of Australia in that stuffed Kangeroo? The whole third floor of Sullivan kept awake nights from it. Ed McCarthy found a new love, an embrassing one at that. Vince Bresan noted making mysterious long distance phone calls and disappearing every weekend; looks bad! And what's this about John Kiernan getting engaged.

IRS may need a new president after Christmas, it looks like Gene Donohue may elope. Seems he can't wait till June. Don Mattingly finally gave Ellen Chambers a break; took her to the Belle Masque party.

That's all for now girls, maybe some more some other time.

. . . At the way the orphans' outing went so smoothly until the Villanovans hit the Santa Claus line. Santa now has nine orders for invisible cars to bring on campus, menus printed in English, blind dates that don't bark, prefects without watches, teachers who get stuck on the first two letters of the alphabet when taking roll and the return of dime beers.

Merry Christmas . . .

No, Clement, There Is No Santa Claus

By FRANK DELANY

Besides being the birthday of Christ and perhaps the happiest day of the year, Christmas means a little something special to each of us, from the trivial to the important.

To me, it is a time when a lot of people take it upon themselves to write little polemics telling "what Christmas means to me." With this in mind. I decided to ask and not tell. For better or worse here are some of the things that Christmas means to Villanovans.

Spiritual Significance

To Joe Redmond, senior, Christmas is a time to take a fresh look at the spiritual aspects of life and more important, a time to do something about them.

Al Lutz, senior, looks upon the holidays as a time for revival: sleep, money, girls, studies . . !

Frosh Bill Vincent looks forward to all the Christmas traditions: Christmas Mass, gifts and dinner.

Junior John O'Sullivan feels that Christmas is an example of how over-commercialization can distort a religious holiday.

John Curtin, sophomore, voices as well nigh universal desire for "sleep, sweet sleep, that knits up the ravelled cares of time" over the yuletide.

Gerry Sullivan, sophomore, is looking forward to two weeks off to catch up on the work he should have been doing the previous eight weeks.

Night school student Agnes Berger thinks of Christmas as a time to renew old friendships and kindle up a new one or two.

Senior Mike Guida feels that Christmas is a time for families to be more closely united.

Fifth year man Walt Gould thinks he knows why Scrooge was so miserable. He was a postman.

Hank Nichols, junior, is afraid that Christmas means terrible neckties. However, they come in handy for his father's birthday present.

Chach wishes to tell all his fans, "Ach! Weinachts!"

No Clem, There Is No Santa

Junior Clement Birch was sorry to say that Christmas just hasn't been the same since he discovered three years ago that there really isn't a Santa Claus!

And of course there's always the minority viewpoint. Fred Ellis sums it up with, "Bah, humbug!"

Whatever Christmas means to you, we wish you, in the immortal words of J. Pierpont Morgan, "Merry Christmas."

Students Select Penn State, Penn In Grid Poll; Conference Also Approved

By BOB STRAYTON Managing Editor

When Villanova Athletic Director Ambrose "Bud" Dudley organized a campaign for the formation of a Northeastern Football Conference, he was unaware of the reaction which his proposal would have upon Villanova students. He didn't know whether they favored the conference, or were against it.

According to the results of a football poll run several weeks ago in the VILLANOVAN, Dudley has good reason to consider himself possessor of some psychic talents. The results of the VILLANOVAN poll show that the students were unanimously behind his suggestion.

Penn State, one of Villanova's foremost grid rivals in the past, was in first place acording to the overall voting. The Nittany Lions totalled 1,538 points. Penn, a local rival, was second in overall point total with 1,392. Army was third with 1,257 points; Syracuse fourth, 1,014; Navy fifth, 906; Notre Dame sixth, 780; Pittsburgh seventh, 644; Boston College eighth, 583; Holy Cross ninth, 579; and Boston University tenth, 544.

Penn, ND Exceptions

Penn, which is a psychological opponent, and Notre Dame, a perennial target for all football teams, were the only teams listed in the top ten which are not included in Dudley's proposed conference.

The point system, which was based on ten points for a first place vote, nine for a second place vote, eight for a third place vote and so on, showed Penn an overwhelming choice for first place. The Quakers took 970 of the possible 2,350 first place points. Notre Dame, with 270, and Army, with 210, were the closest rivals which Penn had.

Penn State, Oklahoma, and Syracuse were the only other teams which recorded triple figures in first place voting. Penn State had 190 points, the Sooners 140, and the Orangemen 110.

Penn Finished Second

Penn, although it was a unanimous first place choice on the ballots, finished second in the overall vote. Although it appeared on most ballots for each position, it fell off greatly from second to tenth place. Its 99 second place points, as compared with Penn State's 423, is an indication of how radically the vote for Penn dropped off.

The Nittany Lions, on the other hand, were strong and consistent in every position: 360 votes were cast for third place, 203 for fourth, 114 for fifth, 105 for sixth, 76 for seventh, 51 for eighth, and 16 for tenth. No ninth place votes were cast for Penn State.

Others As Consistent

Army, Syracuse, Navy and Notre Dame were much like Penn State in that each of these teams received a consistent number of votes for each of the ten positions. Pitt, Boston College, Holy Cross, and Boston University also were consistent in the tabulations.

"Home-and-Home" Liked

The problem of where to play the games—at home or away—was also unanimously decided in most cases. A "home-and-home" series was the hue cry of almost every ballot.

There were several variations to this, however. A game with Penn was unanimously chosen as an away game; Boston University was also an away game on most ballots, but Boston College was a "home-and-home" choice.

Strong away-game selections included, besides Penn and BU: Penn State, Syracuse, Yale, Army, and Miami of Florida. The home-game preference was clearly indicated, with almost no exception, for all games with Pacific Coast teams, mid-western and southeastern teams, and

The Holiday Season Was Approaching In 1941, But The Spirit Was Missing

By JOHN D. KENNEDY

Christmas 1941 was not particularly merry. Dec. 7 had ended American dreams of remaining aloof from the international mess.

The Dec. 16, 1941 edition of the VILLANOVAN was, on the surface, the usual collection of campus news.

Basketball Losses

Coach Al Severance explained just why the Wildcats lost to St. Francis of Brooklyn. Siena and Niagara had also beaten Villanova. It was hoped that we would win that night at Colgate.

Austin Hall led Fedigan in intramural touch football. The Penn A.C. track meet was to open the indoor season Jan. 15.

On the female front, the Villanova German Club was being entertained by the Chestnut Hill German Club. Tickets for the Jan. 18 Rosemont-Villanova Choral Concert were on sale for $1.50.

Remain Calm

At the Garrick Theatre, in Norristown, Alice Faye and Carmen Miranda were starring in "A Weekend in Havana." The Spanish Club was giving a dance.

College life seemed to be flowing placidly in its usual course.

Dec. 7 made some disturbance to the Christmas cheer.

On page one, the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O.S.A., college president, urged all students to remain calm, cautioning them against panic and hysteria. The president also announced the formation of four new committees to handle civil defense on campus. Air raid wardens, fire wardens and a first aid committee were to be supervised by a fourth general committee.

Rumors Even Then

A front page box denied rumors that graduation would be advanced and that seniors would be given diplomas despite failure to complete courses.

Editorials on page two were devoted to pious expressions of the Christmas spirit and with a wistfully expressed hope that Russia might give America bases in Siberia for use against the Japanese. Russia was told not to place trust in the "heroic actions" of Japan.

Father Bartley in a column, "Faculty Comments," blamed nationalism for the war and traced it to the start of World War I. He hoped that a stronger, more positive organization than the League of Nations might be set up after the war to forward international cooperation.

A Four-Year War

At Swarthmore College, a Marine Corps captain was quoted predicting a four-year war.

Also on page four, John J. Parson, ex-'42, had completed basic flight training at Randolph Field, Tex. Parson, it was noted, had been chairman of the Junior Prom the year before.

On page seven, a sports writer voiced a fear that Uncle Sam would blast athletic hopes by drafting promising athletes.

Free Prom

On the eighth and last page, all former members of the senior class, now in the service, were invited to attend the Belle Air Ball (Senior Prom) free of charge.

The next issue, on Jan. 20, contained new names in the masthead—all juniors of the Class of 1943. No seniors were listed.

'More Things Are Wrought By Prayer'

While the mother of a Villanova senior kneels at midnight Mass on Christmas she may whisper a prayer of thanksgiving to St. Jude.

For the patron of hopeless cases has been one of her favorites for more than two decades.

It was after the death of her first child that this mother began offering petitions to St. Jude.

Would the saint please intercede for her that she might soon have twins? Not long after, her prayers were answered, and her prayers to St. Jude have never ceased.

Now her son is six months away from a college degree and his twin sister is working as a Lab Technician.

AIRPORT VISITORS

A group of Villanova celebrants are becoming as familiar around Philadelphia's International Airport as Wilt Chamberlain when he was touring the country trying to decide where he wanted to rip basketball nets.

They're the crowd that gathered at the airport twice last Sunday to greet returning Olympians. At a cold, windy 8 a.m., they were disappointed when Charley Jenkins didn't appear as scheduled.

Fourteen hours later they were back, these 20, and some 40 more happy students, to meet Ron Delany.

The collection of sophomores and juniors doesn't plan any more early morning excursions, but the airplane greeters seem ready to head back down into South Philly at any other hour.

NO BUTTS, NO ENTER

To save room-hoppers searching for cigarettes a few steps, a pair of Sullivan roommates posted this sign on their door the other night:

"We have no smokes, so keep out."

Senior Bill Fecko can claim the campus sound-sleeping title anytime he wants it.

The other night the civil engineer remained asleep and unshaken while his roommate and two friends pecked out English assignments on three typewriters for an hour and a half.

Den Rinkas Resigns As Co-Chairman; Promgoers' Theme Still To Be Decided

Senior Prom Co-Chairman Den Rinkacs has resigned his position because of the "press of studies."

Class President Vince Sullivan said no replacement would be named. He said Rinkacs asked to be relieved of his duties so he could concentrate on his school work.

Ray Clarke, the other co-chairman, today announced committee chairmen for the March 1 Prom. The Billy May Orchestra has been signed to play.

Heading the decorations chew will be Joe Jenkins and Dick Cooke. The theme has not yet been announced, and the nature of the refreshments, to be handled by Vince Pavese, has not been made public, either.

Tickets And Favors

Co-ticket Chairmen Pat Gallagher and Tom Scanlon have begun working on the ticket arrangements, while Jack Fraser is negotiating for the favors.

Program Chairman Bill Farrell is handling program arrangements which are already underway.

The band committee which was instrumental in signing the May aggregation is headed by Tom Curran and Jack McNeil, who worked on many possibilities before selecting one of them. Publicity for the entire affair is in the hands of Art Odabash and Leo Calabrase.

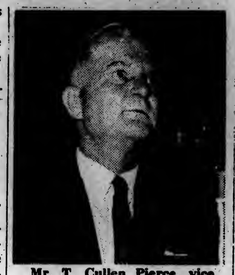
Evenly Flowing Music

The Billy May orchestra is noted for its evenly flowing dance music with its characteristic brassy tones. It is one of the outstanding bands in the popular music field and has recorded many top tunes. Among some of the hits have been: "Charmaine," "Perfidia," "Please Be Kind," "Tenderly," and its theme, "Lean Baby Lean."

'Jazz for Santa' Will Rock the Pad During Vacation

A new conception in jazz concerts will be offered to the public Dec. 29 from 3-6 p.m. at the Pad, Seventh Avenue and Sheridan Square, New York City.

"Jazz for Santa" will feature the top young musicians from New York and Philadelphia, selected on the basis of contests run by jazz organizations in both cities.



Best College Group

The George Braithwaite Quintet will head the New York contingent as chosen by Jazz Unlimited. Philadelphia will be represented by the Jimmy DePreist Quintet, selected as the outstanding college jazz group in the East by the Music Society of America.

The concert marks the first time two groups, spotlighting young musicians, have been chosen to represent their particular City in concert form.

On Steve Allen Show

The Jimmy DePreist Quintet has appeared on the Steve Allen Show and is represented in part by the National Jazz Fraternity. Recently they concluded a series of Philadelphia Jazz workshops.

Singers Perform At Dinner, Carol At Girls Schools

The Villanova Singers performed last night at the Villanova Faculty Dinner in the Field House, under the direction of Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of the Villanova Law School.

Traditional Christmas songs as well as popular and folk tunes were featured. Soloists included Don Mattingly, Chuck Brockman, Dick Dressler and Hank Nichols.

Following the dinner, the Singers went carolling to neighboring girls' colleges. Rosemont, Immaculata, and Chestnut Hill were tentative stops on the carolling tour.

The Padded Cell

Wishes Its Readers

A Merry Christmas

By HARRY & GERRY

The Padded Cell takes time from its capers to wish our man and varied supporters a happy, holy, holiday season. We especially wish to thank those groups who in their own little way have greatly contributed to our weekly efforts.

Therefore, we extend a special Merry Christmas to the editors of the VILLANOVAN, who by their clever, under-handed dealings have connived to sneak our columns past the ever-watchful censors. Those editors, whose complete disloyalty to the principles of good literature has made our column possible.

. . . . The members of the History Department, without whose heartfelt and sincere evaluation we never could have continued. Their uninhibited public acclaim of our work very often has embarrassed us.

. . . The various English professors who have deliberately gone out of their way and on their own time to offer us seemingly caustic and yet constructive criticisms, such as "Your column is an irrelevant, unorganized mess" and "The Padded Cell is a vicious body blow to the scholastic standard of Villanova". We will never forget this frank appreciation of our endeavor.

. . . The many grateful fans who brought tears to our eyes with thoughtful little notes or praise like, "This school isn't big enough for you and me" and "Frankly, old chaps, I advise you to get out of town."

. . . The Maintenance Crew who uncomplainingly swept up the piles of discarded newspapers, discarded, no doubt, by our many followers.

. . . And, finally to the bearded midget . . .

May Santa fulfill their every little wish, and may their stockings overflow with toys and goodies on Christmas morn.

ICG Prepares Convention

Preparing for a state convention next April, the Intercollegiate Conference on Government worked on legislation Thursday that it will submit at the convention.

Chairman Bill Lesko said the Villanova delegation, which is usually the largest at the gathering, will continue working on the bills it will offer.

Lesko said the Villanova ICG will meet again Jan. 10 at 10:30 a.m. in 204 C & F.

This year's convention will set up a model state legislature. In alternate years the gathering sets up a model Congress. This was the case last year at Harrisburg.

Convocation Set To Honor Olympians

Villanova's Olympic representatives—Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins and Phil Reavis—will be honored at a convocation-pep rally during the second week of January, the VILLANOVAN has learned.

Pat Nicholson, head of the Student Council Spirit Committee, said no date had been decided on, but the reception would include a rally for the opening of the indoor track season.

Collection For Gifts

The Wildcats open their season Jan. 19 at the Knights of Columbus Meet in Boston. The rally would probably be held the week before that, Nicholson said.

Planned for after Christmas is a collection from students to pay for mementos for the athletes, the chairman added.

Jenkins, Reavis Delay

Nicholson's committee had originally planned a celebration last Thursday and the matter was discussed at last Monday's Student Council meeting.

However, Jenkins and Reavis informed school authorities that they would not be back from Boston in time, so the rally was postponed by Nicholson.

Jenkins was married Saturday to Phyllis Randolph.

Students to Tour Stock Exchange

Villanova's Finance Society will tour the New York Stock Exchange Jan. 9, President William Haley announced at a meeting Thursday.

Club members will leave campus early that morning and will be in New York when the exchange opens for the day's business.

They will see the market open and how it is set up. They will then tour the market, according to Haley.

The president said there was the possibility that seniors would be interviewed for jobs during the tour.

During Thursday's meeting, Mr. Patrick Dougherty, society moderator, outlined for members the advantages of the finance course at Villanova.

Turf and Tinsel Schedules Meeting, Auditions Jan. 7

Monday night, Jan. 7, The Turf and Tinsel society will hold a general meeting for all members as well as an audition for the dancing chorus of the musical comedy to be held March 7, 8 and 9 in the Field House.

The meeting will be at 7:30 in the Blue Room of the Field House. Although cast auditions were held last week, another cast tryout will take place Jan. 7 at the general meeting. All those who missed last week's auditions and are interested in a part in the cast are urged to attend.

Still Spots Open

There are still several spots open in the 18-man cast.

Members of the organization have decided that the choreography will be slightly innovated this year. It will include entirely new modern dance routines as well as the time-honored Turf and Tinsel kicks.

Co-business managers Mike Guida and Ed Tomezsko have announced that quite a few slots are still open on the business staff and anyone wishing to join is asked to come to the general meeting Jan. 7.

Book Nearing Completion

The book for the show is nearing completion by Seniors Bob Schiller and Bernie Conway. The name of the show has not been announced yet, but it is known to be based on a Grecian theme with flowing togas dominating the dress.

Sophs Attend First Meeting; HearFr.Weeks

The first official meeting of the Class of 1959 was held on Thursday in the C&F Auditorium.

The meeting was opened with a prayer by Rev. Henry Weeks, O.S.A. Following this, Class President Ken MacGillivray introduced the officers and representatives of the class to the assembled students. MacGillivray expressed disappointment with the turnout of approximately 150, but said that he hoped it could be attributed to the poor weather and the fact that more engineering students had classes during the period.

Orientation Innovations

The president then gave the class a general rundown of the past orientation period, stressing the new nighttime activities innovated by the class. He said that John Rumbarger and Al Lepore were co-recipients of the outstanding "White Hat" award.

Treasurer Bill Hixon then gave a financial report to the class, following which Soph Cotillion Chairman Jack Curtin gave a talk on the different aspects of preparing the dance.

New Committee

MacGillivray then explained the new Executive Committee of the class, made up of the officers and council representatives, to help him plan class activities. He stated that a class constitution had been drawn up in conjunction with this.

Father Weeks closed the meeting with a talk.

Wm. & Mary Outclassed By Wildcats for Second Win

By BOB MULCAHY
Sports Editor

With Captain Jimmy Smith and Al Griffith leading the way, Villanova's basketball team recorded its second victory of the young season Saturday when it defeated visiting William and Mary 81-73 as the feature of "Date Night" at the Palestra.

Smith scored 29 points, eight of them coming in the closing minutes of play, to put on the best offensive performance for any individual Mainliner in the last two seasons. Another bright spot in the game was the play of Tommy Brennan, who scored 15 points and captured 13 rebounds.

Halftime Edge Grows

Leading all the way, Villanova had a comparatively easy time of it until the final few minutes. A 36-28 halftime advantage was increased to 61-43 midway through the second half. It was then that the visitors took advantage of a cold streak of the home team and drew up to a six-point deficit at 74-68. The margin remained the same until a foul by Joe Ryan and field goal by Griffith put the game out of reach.

William and Mary started off with a fancy display of outside shooting by guard Don Engelken but soon slacked off as the Wildcats led by the driving tactics of Smith and Griffith dominated the game.

Played In Spurts

Although Villanova at one time was ahead 30-19, William and Mary closed to a 36-28 deficit at the intermission.

The Cats played in spurts and at times looked unbeatable as their passing and shooting left the visitors in a bewildered state.

A good stretch finish by forward Bob Hoitsma who scored 21 was a major factor in the comeback of the Williamsburg Virginia quintet. Hoitsma was seventh in the nation in field goal percentage last year.

Villanova hit on 42.9 per cent of its shots from the floor. Its top three scorers, Smith, Griffith and Brennan, hit on 27 of 51 field goal attempts, better than 50 per cent.

Villanova Opens Holiday Festival Play Against NYU; Oppose Indiana Beforehand

By DON KEMPF

Villanova's Wildcats take on highly rated Indiana tomorrow night in the Paestra. It will be the Mainliners final game in the Palestra before travelling to New York where they will open against N. Y. U. in the annual Holiday Festival in Madison Square Garden on Christmas afternoon.

Indiana, rated among the top 20 teams throughout the season, will be spearheaded by team captain, Archie Dees. Dees, a 6-8 center, rated near the top in Big Ten scoring last season with a 17.4 average, and was second only to All-American Wally Choice in team scoring.

Al Griffith drives past William and Mary defender for a field goal.

Another factor which will make the Hoosiers tough is the return of eight lettermen, including all but one of last year's starting five. Both guards are back from last season's sixth place Big Ten team — Hallie Bryant, sporting an average of 9.3 points per game last season and Charlie Hodson, who sank an average of 6.5 shots per game. Also returning is forward Jerry Thompson, who hit for 8.5 points per game.

However, the Widlcats have a good deal of experience themselves. And besides, the have a group of promising sophomores who look better every game. Al Griffith has led the Wildcats in scoring while showing it's not always the big man who gets the rebounds. Team captain Jim Smith, who may become the sixth member of Villanova's 1,000 point club and Joe Ryan, a 6-3 soph from St. Joseph's Prep, have been handling most of the chores as guards, while Jack Weissman and Jim Fahey have been filling out the starting lineup, except for the William and Mary game, when Tom Brennan replaced the injured Fahey.

Should the Mainlines beat NYU on Christmas Day in the Holiday Festival, they will advance to the next round to take

Schoener Foresees Another Good Year For Swim Team

By BOB THOMAS

Last season Lou Schoener was a star on Villanova's crack swimming team which posted a record of nine wins and two losses. This year, besides being a main-stay, he is the captain and thinks the squad should have another fine year.

In fact, Lou feels that this year the team might even improve on last year's record. The captain sums up the team's situation by saying, "There's great

Basketball Potential

By JACK CURTIN

Last year the Villanova basketball record was 14 won, 12 lost. The Wildcats combine finished a weak fourth in the Philadelphia Big Five competition. It was, in fact, one of the worst records a Villanova court team had posted in several years.

Now, a year later, predictions of great accomplishments are showered on the Wildcats from all directions. They are chosen as a team to contend with in this year's round robin tournament in Philadelphia, and one magazine even went so far as to pick them as a dark horse contender for national recognition. When tournament invitations were extended at the beginning of this season the team that won the Big Five title last year was ignored and had to go searching for a holiday festival in which to play, while the Wildcats were immediately chosen for the E.C.A.C. Christmas Tournament in New York.

Six Veterans Return

However, when we look at this year's squad we see that its nucleus, in fact, its very backbone, consists of the same men who comprised last season's squad. Only three men have been lost, none of whom played the entire season last year. What then is the reason for this amazing optimism shown by the basketball experts when speaking of the Villanova hoopsters?

Let us look at the six men returning from last year—Jim Smith, team captain and chosen one of the top players in Philadelphia last season; Al Griffith, a little guy named desire who proved that basketball isn't just for the big men; Jack Weissman, owned of the deadliest jump shot in the city; Jim Fahey, who found stardom in the Dixie Classic; Tom Brennan, a big man who can drive; and Jack Kelly, one of the team's top rebounders.

An impressive array of talent, but still basically the same team that won only 14 last year. The court prowess of these veterans would not be enough to bring about the pre-season ratings given this year's Wildcats. The answer then must lie within the ranks of the newcomers to the team, men like Joe Ryan, Kenny Harrison, Bill Money, Gene Opella, George Emma, and Ralph Kowalkowski. Men who were as yet untried under the pressure of a varsity game when the pre-season predictions were made.

Rated On Potentiality

The point I am trying to make is this: the early season ratings accorded Villanova were based on potentiality—the potential ability of her rookie players. While a team made up of only the returning veterans would be one to be reckoned with, when these six men team with the incoming sophs, they create a basketball machine capable of defeating anyone in the country.

Now that the season has begun we can see that we are indeed lucky, for this potentiality has blossomed into reality. One sophomore, Ryan, is a member of the starting five, and in the 79-59 routing of Delaware University, an all-soph team played ten minutes against the opposing varsity and maintained the lead they were given by the Wildcat starters. This is more than can usually be expected of first year men.

To Meet Notre Dame

While the rest of us are home next week, the Wildcats will be in New York for the E.C.A.C. tournament mentioned above. This, of course, is very important to them, for, should they win, the blue and white hoopsters will bear out those early ratings. However, there is also another reason this tournament is important. After (not if) Villanova beats NYU on Christmas day, she will meet Notre Dame on Dec. 26.

Notre Dame is supposedly the top Catholic University in the country, both scholastically and athletically. Despite this, indirectly we have outshone them on the gridiron, in the Olympics, and in displays of student spirit during these past few months. At last, on the basketball court, Villanova meets Notre Dame face to face. There's certainly no sense in stopping now.

Freshman Five Trounces St. Joseph's for First Win

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Villanova's freshmen basketball team opened its 11-game schedule on a winning note by defeating the yearlings of St. Joseph's 70-60 in the Field House Saturday.

George Reider paced the Kittens to the triumph, garnering 18 points on four field goals and a perfect 10 for 10 from the foul line. George Raveling and Jim Rolls followed Reider with 11 and 10 tallies, respectively.

Lead At Half

St. Joseph's led only in the first ten minutes of play and the Kittens left the court at halftime with a 26-23 advantage.

In the second half the Kittens height edge began to assert itself. With center John Driscoll, Raveling, and Rolls controlling the boards, they opened up a lead which at one point stretched to a margin of 20 points.

Subs Enter

It was only when Coach Maje McDonnell inserted some substitutes in the closing minutes of play, that the Hawks narrowed the margin to any degree.

High scorers for the visitors were Reilly with 17, Clark with 16 and McNeil with 15. This was the second loss suffered by St. Joseph's, against one victory.

Villanova which hit on 20 of 27 from the foul line met the freshmen of LaSalle yesterday.

Griffith Named 'Player Of The Week'

By JOE NIVALS

Recently two freshmen were discussing the basketball team here at Villanova. One commented on the mistake appearing in the VILLANOVAN. He stated that they had Griffith's picture with the caption of "leading rebounder". "They must have mixed the picture up with someone else." he remarked.

Certainly they aren't the only ones who are amazed at the rebounding ability of Al Griffith. He leads the squad in rebounds in the statistics of the first two games. His timorous personality is immediately changed the moment he steps on the basketball court, whether in a practice session or in a game.

"Quick Hands"

Griff's greatest asset is his highly sensitive pair of hands which cause opponents to be deliberate in their ball handling. He has a natural ability to be where the ball is which enables him to overcome his deficiency in height. Standing just six feet tall and weighing slightly over 160 pounds, he constantly battles under the boards with opponents who appear twice his size.

Probably his greatest achievement occurred two years ago against a tall North Carolina State squad led by All-American 6' 10" Ron Shavlick. In that contest "Griff" pulled down 15 rebounds while scoring 25 points. For this feat he was acclaimed "Player of the Week" by the Philadelphia Sportswriters.

Al first gained basketball recognition while playing at Hollidaysburg (Pa.) High. After being on the starting team for three years, in his senior year he led the team to an undefeated regular season, losing only in the state play-offs. Villanova was chosen over other Catholic schools because of his desire to play "big-time" basketball at a Catholic institution. An interesting sidelight to note is that the St. Francis (Pa.) basketball team is coached by his family dentist and neighbor "Skip" Hughes.

Starting Berth

On arriving at Villanova "Griff" immediately won a starting berth on the Freshman squad. His defensive ability quickly drew the attention of Villanova followers. A seemingly insurmountable task faced Griffith in his sophomore year. The varsity squad consisted of five returning "seasoned" veterans. But the opening game found him in a starting berth on the varsity squad.

In the few games played this year, "Griff" has proved to skeptics that Villanova has a team which can be regarded as one of the tops in the east. His all-around playing ability has not only gained recognition of Villanova fans but also of the Philadelphia Sportswriters who gave him the "Player of the Week" award last week.

His future plans after graduation are indefinite except for his serving in the Armed Forces where it is hoped that he will continue to prove that the "small man" has a place in basketball.

Holiday Festival Ticket Sale Will Last Until Thurs.

Student tickets for Villanova's game with New York University Christmas afternoon in Madison Square Garden's Holiday Festival will be on sale here through Thursday.

The $1 tickets may be purchased on showing matriculation cards at the Field House ticket office, open from 9:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. each day.

After NYU Game

If Villanova wins the 2 p.m. game with NYU, it will oppose Notre Dame Wednesday night, Dec. 26.

Student tickets for this game will go on sale immediately after the NYU game at the Garden ticket office. They will remain on sale until game time.

No Specials For Dates

These tickets will also cost $1, with matriculation cards.

No reduction in rates is allowed for date tickets, but they may be purchased at regular prices in the student section.

'Art and Culture' Lecture Given

In its initial appearance this year, the Villanova Forum presented Mr. Edward I. Watkin. The world-famous British philosopher and aesthetician delivered a lecture entitled "Art and Culture." in the Barry Hall library last Tuesday.

Discussing Baroque architecture, Mr. Watkin interested and informed an audience with a profound perception of the past, pre sent and future of religious edifices.

on Notre Dame in a game which, while not yet a sure thing, is already the talk of Villanova students.

NYU is a powerful, yet underrated team which has already pulled a couple of surprising upsets. Notre Dame, like the Cats, has returning veterans and some promising sophs and will prove a tough match. Led by Bobby Devine, brother of Jack Devine, former Villanova star and captain, and Mike Ireland, 6-8 soph center, Notre Dame will be the team to beat.

Joseph Marmora, Senior Accounting Major, To Be Wed

A Villanova senior, Joseph Marmora, will be married on Dec. 29 to Miss Virginia Crandall.

Marmora, an accounting major from Neptune, N.J., will be wed at a nuptial Mass at Holy Spirit Church, in Asbury Park, N.J., his fiancee's home town.

Miss Crandall is a graduate of St. Vincent's Nursing School in New York City.

Quarterdeck Society Plans Film, Speaker

Villanova's Quarterdeck Society will hold its next meeting Monday, Jan. 7, it was announced last week. Films will be shown and a speaker engaged.

Dec. 10 saw a joint meeting of the Quarterdeck Society and ASCE take place in the library of John Barry Hall. The main topic of the meeting was "Careers in Civil Engineering in the Navy."

Capt. W. W. Moore spoke on the advantages to be had through service with the Naval Department of Public Works.

He was followed by Lt. L. W. Stiffler who pointed out the opportunities to be had in the varied fields of research in the Navy.

Four Chemistry Students Visit Princeton Univ.

Princeton University held a Chemistry Open House on Dec. 1. A party of four senior chemistry majors and Dr. Heininger of the Villanova Chemistry Department accepted the Princeton invitation.

Bob Fredricks, Herb Rammrath, Ollie Ludwig and Ed Tomezsko were the Villanova representatives among eighty others from twenty-five other colleges and universities.

The delegates were given a guided tour of the graduate school Chemistry Department and later were shown around the Princeton campus.

Once again we take leave of our academic responsibilities and engage in some seasonal social life. Where ever we may roam, we are sure of finding lots of parties and good times. Many of us, after a hard day in the Post Office or any other place of employment, may not feel up to painting the town red. For these, there is always the medium of television. This Christmas Season, we are told, we will have the best in T.V. coverage. Many top stars will grace our screen and the annual New Year's Day Bowl Games will be viewed by millions. Just keep in mind your spiritual obligations over these next two weeks. A few minutes out to remember the true meaning of Christmas will be rewarded.

"War and Peace" Recommended

If you want to take in a flick, we can recommend very highly "War and Peace." It's a bit long but is really worth it. No matter what movie or show you see make sure it's a worthwhile one and is up to the standards we must follow.

Our record pick of the week is Frankie Laine's Columbia recording of "Moonlight Gambler." This is by far and away Frankie's most commercially successful disk in a long time. Reports from around the nation indicate that it is coming up very fast and could very well be in the top 25 in another week or two.

On behalf of all who aid in writing this column, we want to wish you all a very Merry Christmas and prosperous New Year. Take and remember, though there's a line on the ocean where, by crossing, you lose a day, there's also one on the highway where you can do even better.

VOL. 32—No. 12 VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. January 9, 1957

Resignation of Athletic Director Caused by Difference in Policies

Villanovans' Jazz, Ballads Fraternity Ball Features

For the first time since 1947 the Interfraternity Ball will make its appearance on the Villanova campus, Friday night, Jan. 11.

The affair will be sponsored by the combined efforts of DPM, LKD and DPE.

Up to 1947 the Interfraternity Ball was a major part of the Villanova social calendar. It is the hope of ball chairman Bill McCloud that the event will be re-established as an integral part of the University's social functions.

The music will be supplied by Bobby Schiller and his Villanovans. They will mix their well-known Dixieland jazz with slow-moving ballads from 9 to 1 in the Field House.

Tickets on Sale

The tickets at $2.00 per couple are now on sale in the day-hop cafeteria and may be purchased from the members of the three participating fraternities. Jack Dunn is in charge of the tickets.

Marty Dohany is taking care of the publicity, while the refreshments and decorations are in the hands of the arrangements committee, headed by Dunn and assisted by Jim Stark and Al Lepore.

BILL McCLOUD

Open to All

The dance is open to all Villanovans and their friends. It is definitely not a closed affair.

The future of the event on the Villanova campus depends on the enthusiasm shown by the student body this year.

Juniors Say Thanks

The officers of the Junior Class and the chairmen of the orphans' weekend, on behalf of the "Johnnies" of St. John's Home, would like to thank all Villanovans who helped in any way to make the weekend, the dance, the outing, and the party the success that it was.

Final Exams Begin Jan. 17; No Change For Registration

BY JOE KINNEY
News Editor

"In order to relieve the pressure of a six-day examination period, the first semester finals will be spread out over nine days and will begin on Jan. 17," announced the Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., Vice-President for Academic Affairs last week.

The examinations were previously scheduled to begin Jan. 21.

"Last spring we initiated the longer period," continued Father Boyle, "and planned to employ the nine-day schedule again this semester, but failed to make the correction in the compilation of the Student Handbook," which was the cause of the misunderstanding about the change among the faculty and students.

The last day of finals will be Jan. 26 as previously reported in the handbook.

The rearrangement will have no effect upon the retreat for the Freshman and Sophomore Classes beginning Sunday night, Jan. 27 and concluding on Wednesday, Jan. 30. The junior and senior male students and nurses will have their retreat from April 14 to 17.

Registration for the second semester will also be unaffected. The Commerce and Finance School will register on Feb. 4; the Arts and Sciences Division, on Feb. 5; and the School of

FATHER DONNELLON BUD DUDLEY

They represent the two views of Villanova's intercollegiate football policy.

Rev. Lorenzo Lozano Dies Suddenly in N. Y. Theater

FATHER LOZANO

On Friday, December 28, the Reverend Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A. died in New York City at the age of 66.

The Divine Office was chanted in the University Chapel on January 3 at 10:30 and a Requiem Mass followed at 11. Father Lozano was buried in the Monastery graveyard.

Originally from Escoral, Spain, Father Lozano joined the Augustinians in that town in 1907 and was ordained in 1916. After his ordination Father Lozano was assigned to parish work in Spain.

In 1931 he came to the United States and four years later he joined the Villanova faculty.

A familiar figure about the campus he could be most often seen at football practice or watching some of the other varsity teams go through their paces.

It was his interest in athletics that led him to New York to see the Wildcats in the Holiday Festival. After attending the games he went to a movie house that featured short films.

Later in the day when the theatre management investigated they found Father Lozano dead in his seat.

Father Lozano was the chairman of the Spanish Department and the moderator of the Spanish Club which has expanded under his careful guidance.

Through his efforts the Spanish Club now sponsors two events a year, Noche Espanole in December and Cervantes Day in the latter part of April.

Change In Football Policy Not To Bring De-Emphasis

The pending change in Villanova's football policy does not mean a regression from "big time" to "small time" play.

This was learned from an Administration source, which added that the renovations in policy are not intended to bring de-emphasis.

The source said the Administration desires to see an Eastern conference put into effect with the Wildcats playing teams of the calibre of those selected by students in the opponent poll released in the Dec. 18 VILLANOVAN.

This would be in line with the school's announced desire to schedule teams on a geographic basis. Under this plan, the varsity footballers would engage such teams as Syracuse, Pitt, Holy Cross, Boston College and Boston University.

The source emphatically denied reports in Philadelphia newspapers that Villanova would play such teams as Lehigh, Bucknell and Lafayette.

Regional Contests Desired by School Athletic Officials

By JOE SLAVIN
Sports Editor

The resignation of Ambrose F. "Bud" Dudley as director of athletics at Villanova University was announced last week by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Villanova President. The resignation became effective January. 1.

Always an advocate of "big time" football Dudley said a current change in the University's athletic policy looking to a revision in type and location of potential opponents was not in line with his theories of scheduling and competition.

Dudley, who served as Villanova's athletic director since 1953 said that in light of this change "I feel it better that they be permitted to pursue the course they seem best suited for their purpose without interruption."

Not De-emphasizing

In announcing Dudley's resignation Father Donnellon confirmed that a sweeping analysis of Villanova's football policy was under way but that it did not constitute out-and-out de-emphasis. "The University's geographical area of competition will be carefully reviewed with the desirability of playing teams closer to home" the University President said, "and no team will necessarily be attracted to Villanova's schedule solely because of a lofty football reputation.

In short, Villanova intends to seek a more suitable and level area of football competition."

Notre Dame Graduate

Dudley began his association with athletics while attending St. Joseph's Prep and Kiska Prep in Pennsylvania where he excelled in three sports. His greatest achievements in athletic competition came while attending Notre Dame, where he participated in football and baseball. After graduating from Notre Dame in 1942 Dudley entered the Air Corps as a navigator and advanced to the rank of Captain. For his outstanding service he was honored with the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal and received 7 major battle stars.

From his discharge in 1946 until 1953 he operated a wholesale wallpaper business in Philadelphia. During this period he was closely associated with collegiate athletics, doing scouting for Notre Dame, Georgia and Cornell. In January 1953 Dudley was appointed Athletic Director by the Athletic Board of Villanova.

He'll Be Missed

Villanova's basketball team lost one of its most faithful followers when Father Lozano died.

Students who knew him would not have considered a home game official if they had not spotted the greying priest leaning over the rail, his eyes intent on the court.

Basketball was Father's favorite sport. He once told a Spanish class about his introduction to baseball, soon after his arrival in Chicago from Spain. A priest kept extolling the virtues of a fellow named Babe Ruth to Father Lozano, and finally dragged the young priest out to Comiskey Park.

"So this Babe Ruth comes up to the plate and he hits one, and everybody starts screaming and yelling, and I didn't know what they were yelling about," explained Father Lozano, who decided then that there wasn't enough action in the national pastime for him.

Spanish-speaking Villanovans and students learning the language will no doubt join the basketball players in missing Father Lozano.

He Liked the Big Time

From the time he walked into the Villanova athletic office in January 1953, Ambrose (Bud) Dudley made it clear he was planning to propel Villanova's athletic teams to "big time" heights.

It wasn't long before he realized what kind of job he had undertaken. Soon he had organized a mammoth sports day—Blue-White Day it was called—for that May. This event, which may remain part of the school's athletic calendar despite Dudley's departure, brought former Wildcat sport stars back to their Alma Mater, and enriched the school's athletic treasury.

That summer he stayed awake nights trying to think of ways to dispose of the piles of tickets already printed for the opening football game with Georgia. When he talked a Philadelphia supermarket chain into giving the tickets as premiums, the idea raced across the nation's press wires, bringing personal publicity to Dudley and spreading the Villanova name.

Later that season he staged a fashion show in Connie Mack Stadium. This idea, like the "grocery bowl" stunt, met with some student criticism. But the critics were definitely in the minority. Many students who would have criticized the athletic director shrugged off the charge that he was a combination P. T. Barnum and Bill Veeck. They felt Dudley had been hired to carry the Wildcats as high as possible in the magical world the sports writers call the "big time," and any means he used would be acceptable.

Now Dudley is gone. The wire services and Administration officials announced that his resignation followed differences of opinion in the way Villanova's athletic set-up would be operated in the future.

In announcing the athletic director's resignation, the school said that a complete deemphasis of football is not planned. But the school would prefer that teams closer to home be played.

The pros and cons of such a policy will not be reviewed here. But it is hoped that the school will never erase the fall sport from the athletic picture here. The pep rallies, victory parades and occasional bonfires are a major part of the autumn extra-curricular life.

Dudley left the Wildcat footballers with some rugged opponents for next fall. He also left with many friends who will be watching his next move and silently wishing him luck.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Enclosed are a few ideas that I think will help to make Villanova a university in the very fullest sense. Villanova has the great but challenging opportunity of national leadership in Catholic higher education.

Below is a list of possible additions to the academic structure:

1. School of theology. With the new seminary building there will be ample room for the complete education of priests for the Order.
2. A girls' College of Saint Clare of the Cross named for the Augustinian nun, providing the benefits of a wide range of studies in conjunction with the other schools of the University.
3. School of dramatic arts in conjunction with the much needed auditorium.
4. School of architecture—a Catholic school in this field is needed in the East.
5. School of social service—Catholic principles need a home in the nation's third largest city.
6. School of education—the Religious of the Archdicoese alone point to the need of the expansion of this department of the school of arts and sciences.

An obvious shortcoming is the lack of an award or medal of national significance given annually by the University. Catholic U. and Notre Dame are the most outstanding in this field, although some of the smaller colleges have medals of note, e.g., La Salle. Such an award, while honoring some outstanding Catholic layman, also bring prominence and prestige to a school.

Aside from the establishment of entire new schools within the University, departments in various schools can be expanded and new ones established such as the department of Metallurgical Engineering, department of Nuclear and department of Aeronautical Engineering, all within the School of Engineering.

As far as buildings are concerned, the present chapel should not be destroyed in the event of the coming larger one. It has stood as a symbol of our school when it was quite young and it should stand as an inspiration for the future. A central location is needed for the new chapel, perhaps between St. Mary's Hall and the Classroom Annex opposite Dougherty Hall.

Eisenhower Trying to Rid Mid-East Russian Problem

By GENE DONOHUE

Since the failure of the British and French action in the Suez area, it has been agreed upon by most statesman that a vacuum has been left in the Middle East. It has also been agreed that the existence of this vacuum is very advantageous to the Russian cause. Naturally this opinion is not unanimous, but it is held by many, including the State Department. It was as a result of this realization that the President issued his so-called "Eisenhower Declaration."

The main provisions of this declaration, as tentatively outlined, are two. First of all, Congress would authorize the President to undertake military and economic cooperation with "free nations" in the Middle East in order to "strengthen and defend the independence of these nations." Secondly, Congress would authorize an appropriation of 400 million dollars to carry out a two-year plan of economic aid that is contemplated under the resolution.

DONOHUE

What The Country Needs

In its essence, this policy is exactly what this country needs in the way of a Middle Eastern foreign policy. The big argument that will develop is whether this country should go it alone or should we work through the United Nations. The first impulse that many people have is to go through the United Nations and avoid any unilateral action. The whole trouble with this system is that it could very easily be possible that the machinery of the U.N. is too clumsy to act fast enough. By the time the U.N. took action it might be too late.

On the other hand, if unilateral action were taken, it would have to be done very delicately so as not to antagonize the people in the Middle Eastern countries. Should these nations be able to brand the United States as imperialists, we could chase them into Russian camps. The situation, therefore, becomes a dilemma; and exactly what the best policy would be is more than this columnist can answer. But one thing that is imperative is that we have a strong foreign policy. Let the other nations of the world know just where we stand.

We Cannot Back Down

This declaration should serve as a warning to the Russians that we cannot back down on. Before this it was taken for granted that the United States would take action if it was necessary to preserve the Middle East . . . now there can be no doubt of it. Above all we must make decisions and not pass the buck or leave the rest of the world in the dark on our policy. The "Eisenhower Declaration" is a step, a big step, in the right direction. Let us make sure that we keep that good foot forward and don't turn back.

Peering . . .

with NORM PEER

. . . At that menu put up each day at the top of the ramp. It takes as long to read the menu as it does to eat the food. We saw one item called roast rib of sneaker that we couldn't warm up to, though.

. . . At all those who returned talking about the stone they bestowed on some wily woman "back home." Take heart . . . this is a good time to reconsider and you can pick it up during inter-semester break. Remember the life you save is your own.

. . . At the plan to eliminate April and May to insure that no one will know anything at all when exams do get here. We hear Junior Week is being moved up to the first week of the second semester.

PEER

. . . At all the disappointed faces when students returned to find that not one new building had been started and none of the rising buildings finished. Must have had a strike or maybe the workers took jobs at the Post Office like everyone else.

. . . At the changes in the athletic policy. They don't know whether to build a 60,000-seat stadium and play Drexel or leave the stadium alone and play Oklahoma. Way things are shaping up, the student trip to Germany for the University of Munich game next fall may be called off.

To Join Library Staff:

Mrs. Mary Quam 'Retires' After 7 Years, 400,000-Plus Miles and 8,000 Hours of Penn Railroad Commuting

Villanova University will have a new library staffer in February, and riders on the Pennsylvania Railroad between Paoli, Pa. and New York City will miss a face that has become quite familiar in the past seven years.

Mrs. Mary B. Quam, wife of Villanova's chemistry department chairman, Dr. George Norman Quam, has led a most interesting life for these seven years.

25 Years Ago

The story, however, begins 25 years ago when Mrs. Quam commenced working in the New York Public Library's main branch in the heart of the city. For 18 years she toiled within its confines and became quite popular with all its employees and many of its daily and weekly visitors.

Then, seven years ago, her husband was appointed chairman of the Villanova chemistry department and they moved from New York to Paoli, Pa., about 15 miles west of Villanova on the Main Line. Mrs. Quam had to make a decision between giving up her library work or a lot of sleep. The sleep went.

All In A Day

Her new rising time was 4:30 a.m. Scurrying around in the pre-dawn darkness, Mrs. Quam managed to get the chores started for the day and get to the Paoli station in time to catch the 5:45 Penn-Texas Express which got her to New York by 8:20, in time to begin work at the library. At 4:30 in the afternoon she was back at Penn Station in New York and boarding the Washington-bound Congressional, destination, Philadelphia. Aboard the old reliable, the Paoli Local, Mrs. Quam was home in time for 7:30 supper with her husband.

In these seven years she spent some 8,000 hours traveling on the railroad. And is interesting to note that 8,760 hours make up a full year. But Mrs. Quam seems undisturbed by all this commuting.

Clack, Clack, Clack

As quoted by the New York Times, she says that "It wasn't "at all bad . . . I've done more reading and corresponding in the past seven years than I ever found time for before. Nothing is more conducive to concentration," she said, "than the wonderful quiet of a car full of sleeping passengers and the hum of train wheels."

In February Mrs. Quam plans to begin work in the Villanova library, some 120 miles closer to home than her previous destination. Sleep will once again become a reality to her and her working schedule will return to that of the average, everyday business woman.

Like Part Time

Mrs. Quam points out that "it will seem more like a part-time job." For it is quite evident that for the past seven years she has not exactly led the humdrum life of the average business woman.

Checks Cashed

Students are reminded that checks are cashed only on Mondays and Wednesdays between 1 and 4 p.m. and on Fridays between 10 a.m. and noon and 1 and 4 p.m. in 117 Mendel.

Matriculation cards must be presented at this time, and a service charge of ten cents must be paid for each check cashed.

Life at V. U. Has Changed Since Grandpop Was Here

By JOHN KENNEDY

Life and rules at Villanova have changed mightily in 86 years.

The twentieth annual catalogue of Villanova College, for the academic year 1870-71, bears witness to the Victorian moral tone: "No student is admitted without producing satisfactory testimony of his having a good moral character."

"Premiums will be awarded on Commencement Day (last Wednesday in June) to those students who shall have passed a satisfactory examination. Premiums for exemplary conduct and gentlemanly deportment will be also distributed on that day."

"All students will be required to assist at Mass twice a week (Sunday and Thursday) and to be present at the other exercises of public worship. Catholic students will be obliged to attend Confession once a month."

Supervised Play

"The recreation grounds, containing ball-field, ball-alley and complete gymnasium, are large and well shaded. The students cannot leave the bounds unless accompanied by a Prefect and they must at all times act with respect and obedience towards their Professors and Prefects, and avoid everything having a tendency to injure the morality or discipline of themselves or companions."

"I Must Be A Good Boy"

"Expulsion is incurred by repeatedly violating the rules, by indulging in profane language or writings, or by committing other flagrant offences detrimental to morality and discipline. Less grave violations are punished by obliging the offender to say from memory a number of lines taken from some of his class books, and learned during recreation time. The use of tobacco and intoxicating liquor is positively prohibited."

"Books, papers, etc., are examined before allowed circulation among the students."

At this time, Villanova presented a seven-year course, three years of which were college preparatory, and four years of college itself. Courses offered included the classical (a full seven years), the scientific (six years), and a sort of primitive C&F (a brief two years). Important subjects on the curricula of the various courses were both catechism and penmanship.

Ten-Month School Year

"The Academic Year begins on the first Monday in September and ends on the last Wednesday of June. It is divided into two sessions of five months each. At the close of each session, a strict examination of all the classes is made by the Faculty."

Prospective Villanovans were acquainted, by the catalogue, with a list of college expenses: "Board, Tuition, Bed and Bedding, Washing and Mending Linen, per session of five months (in advance) . . . $125.00." Extra and secondary charges were to be paid for the use of the piano, for a band instrument, for the teaching of modern language, drawing, and music.

"Students who wish to spend their Summer vacation at the College will be charged $40.00."

Fees payable, half-yearly, in advance.

Bring Your Shawl

"Each student, on entering, must be provided with three suits of clothes, three pairs of boots or shoes, six pocket handkerchiefs, six pairs of stockings, six towels, and either an overcoat, shawl, or cloak."

The regimen of life at Villanova in 1870 was not easy; for the serious student in search of higher education, this iron discipline offered no unconquerable barrier.

Night School Expanding By Degrees: Six Are Available

Villanova's after-dark partner, the Villanova University Evening Division, is approaching its full maturity in the midst of an impressive eight-year program of expansion in quality and quantity.

The present enrollment of the Evening Division is at an all time high, six hundred and seventy students. Four hundred and fifty-four are men, two hundred and sixteen are women. Five hundred and sixty-eight are on the undergraduate level while one hundred and two are graduate students.

These students are distributed among eleven general courses of study. Master's degrees are offered in Chemical Engineering and Statistical Quality Control. Undergraduates may obtain degrees in Accounting, Business Administration, Electrical and Mechanical Engineering and certificates in Accounting, Engineering and General Business. Other programs are offered in Education and Nursing.

Seekers After Truth

Included in the "special" category are one hundred and thirty-eight students taking various courses for no other apparent reason than a pure love of knowledge. Several Ph.D's are in this category.

CONSTANCE BURCZINSKI
Night School Publicist

Twenty-seven day students are making courses in the Evening Division a profitable extra-curricular activity.

The mission of the Evening Division is to provide course work and planned curricula for those who wish to further their education without the necessity of foregoing their daily occupations. As part of this mission the Evening Division attempts to bring its students closer to the university.

"The Butcher, The Baker, etc."

All sorts of people from the plumber and the office boy to pretty young school teachers have seen fit to avail themselves of the opportunity for education offered. The students come in all ages, sizes and shapes and contribute to Villanova its most cosmopolitan atmosphere.

Cohesive forces in the Evening Division are common religious services opening each semester and during Lent and the Evening Division Student Council moderated by the Dean of the Evening Division, Eugene P. Powers, Ed. D.

The Council, consisting of representatives elected by each class in the Evening Division and headed by an executive council of students, acts as a coordinating unit between the administration and the student body disseminating information concerning the day school and planning for the Evening Division.

'Peep' Roams Ohio Bringing Back Future Villanovans and Good Jokes

Each year when it pauses to honor the varsity football team, the Villanova Club of Philadelphia presents a "loyalty" award.

To an undergraduate attending the dinner, it might seem a rather routine presentation to an old grad who has long since tossed the pennants and racoon coat into the nearest trash can.

Kept 'em Smiling

That's why it was such a surprise to sit back, a few weeks ago, and watch this year's winner give an acceptance speech.

William (Peep) Sheehan was a short, chunky individual who appeared to give a Gillette extra heavy duty. He didn't look like the kind of speaker who would keep his listeners smiling.

But he did. Now a prosperous pipe fittings salesman in Cleveland, Peep recited some of his adventures tracking down prospects all over Ohio and surrounding states who offered any hint that they might like to attend Villanova.

His Job, Get Him

As Mr. Sheehan explained it, Father Thomas Burke, University registrar, would flash Peep the name and location of the prospect, and no matter how distant the outpost might be, the alumnus would hop in his car and take off.

It might be noted that his recruiting activities have helped channel a few promising athletes this way. He was the main force in bringing basketballer Jack Kelly and baseball catcher Terry Hayes here. Both live in the Cleveland area.

The award winner also made a couple of humorous references to the unavailability of results of Villanova athletic events to alumni in his area.

Confessional Referee

And he included a story about an alumnus who hadn't missed seeing or hearing a broadcast of a Villanova football game in the 25 years since his ordination. Then, this past autumn he was assigned to hear Saturday afternoon confessions.

Undaunted, he took a wrist radio into the box with him. Nobody apparently noticed until an elderly Irish lady came out and told her friend she was confused by her penance.

"I told father I took three apples from a fruit stand and he gave me 15 yards for clipping."

Someone To Beast About

Maybe the story was something Mr. Sheehan dreamed up, and if so, it just proves that the

Suburban Bill Brown Finds Fame In Acting

Just ask Bill Brown why people of all ages and description find him so likeable! "Because I like them," he may well reply.

William Joseph Brown is his formal name, Ardmore is his home, West Catholic is his high school alma mater and he lives with his parents, Mary Elizabeth and Francis Xavier Brown, thus qualifying as one of the campus commandoes, more commonly known as dayhops.

Talent And Then Some

Particularly talented, he showed it at an early age, meriting a weekly disk jockey show on WCAU while in high school.

Bill's chief claim to fame at Villanova is as an actor. His latest performance was the title role in the recent Belle Masque production of "Billy Budd."

Former triumphs included the role of Henry VIII in the play "Catherine of Aragon," a scene of which won the one-act play competition at Harcum Junior College in 1955.

National Recognition

Brown's talent was recognized with membership in Alpha Psi Omega, national honorary dramatic fraternity.

This year Brown received further recognition with membership in the national collegiate Who's Who.

Other Activities

Activities sandwiched in are a copy editorship on the BELLE AIR and studies.

On the side Bill Brown dabbles, literally, in painting.

After graduation, Brown hopes to escape the long arm

Biting: Capek And Brown

His not unsteady date, Rita Capek, Immaculata junior, can't seem to find the connection between Brown's winter status as an English major and his summer job as an electrical lineman.

Perhaps Bill will be best remembered for his impeccable style in dress which equates collegiate with tasteful and has earned him accolades for sartorial splendor.

Morehouse Asks Sr. NROTC ME's To Pick Elective

Dean of Engineering Stanley Morehouse reminds Junior and Senior NROTC mechanical engineers to select their elective as soon as possible and inform him of their first and second choices in 120 Mendel.

This procedure will avoid schedule congestion during registration, the dean said.

The dean lists the following as possibilities:

S. Catholic Alumni Will Hold Retreat

The alumni of Southeast Catholic-Bishop Neumann High School make their annual retreat at St. Joseph's-in-the-Hills Retreat House, Malvern, Pa., this weekend.

Villanova students who are graduates of the school may make reservations by contacting Joe Kinney in the VILLANOVAN office (on the second floor of Dougherty Hal) today between 3:30 and 4:30 p.m.

Alumni will leave Friday night and return Sunday afternoon.

Students Injured In Pike Accident Are Recovering

Eve Kenny, the 16-year-old high school girl, and David Carney, a Villanova freshman, victims of an automobile accident on Lancaster Pike six weeks ago, are reported "doing very well" by attendants at Bryn Mawr Hospital.

Miss Kenny, recovering from a fractured left hip, head injuries and multiple cuts and bruises, is a student at Notre Dame of Moylan. She is expected to be released from the hospital within a week.

Although no definite date of release has been set for Carney, his physician comments that the boy has progressed steadily since his admission to the hospital for a brain concussion, fractured leg and multiple cuts and bruises.

The couple were planning to attend the Mardi Gras Ball in the Field House on Nov. 30 when they were struck by a car driven by a 17-year-old Ardmore boy on the Pike. The accident touched off a student drive to have the state lower the Pike speed limit from 35 to 15 miles per hour. Action on the petition is still pending.

The Johnnies and their Villanova escorts were treated to cookies and milk and led to the Toy Department by Santa Claus himself, where the jolly man presented the youngsters with Mickey Mouse rings.

Free parking was also provided for Villanova students' cars.

SPORTS CHATTER

An Era Ends

By BOB MULCAHY

Every Villanovan student or alumnus should welcome the recent change in athletic policy concerning football here at the University. The resignation of Ambrose Dudley as athletic director because of a conflict in football policy has opened the way for Villanova to seek more of its own level of competition on the gridiron.

Announcement of the change is not as drastic or pronounced as some newspapers had intimated but is merely the decision of the University to seek its own strata of competition in its proximate geographical area. This means teams of the calibre and ability of Boston College, Holy Cross, Colgate, Dayton, which are powers in their own right, and teams which we can engage on an equal basis and with whom a rivalry can be established.

Scheduling as such teams as Baylor, Miami and Mississippi is what is trying to be avoided. Upon close scrutiny this should certainly meet with approval since most of these games are booked away from home and at a great distance. The only chance for participation accorded to the student body is a chance to cheer at a rally before the team leaves.

No Prestige

Many people argue that these games bring Villanova publicity and prestige ,yet what prestige do you obtain from a defeat? People do not remember scores, only the winner. You can not build a following both losing and playing away from home.

A school the size of ours can not compete on the same level as these football powers because of the tremendous investment these schools put into their athletic programs in general and football in particular. Scholarships, like scholastic schedules and other aids are given athletes to put the school on the football map.

Apparently the novelty of promotional games at Municipal Stadium has worn off. This year the team entered the Florida State game with three straight victories—the best since these games were instituted—and yet drew the worst crowd. The failure to draw fans to the games at the campus stadium indicates the lack of a local following. This could easily be aroused by the building of rivalries and scheduling of teams as now is anticipated.

Students Agree

The conclusive proof that this new policy is directly in line with the thinking of students is illustrated by the recent grid poll sponsored by the VILLANOVAN. Among the first sixteen selections of the students appeared Dayton, Syracuse, Penn, Pitt, Boston College, Holy Cross, Colgate, West Virginia, Temple, Boston University, Florida State, Princeton, Penn State, Army and Navy. These teams were chosen before Texas A & M, Oklahoma, Miami, Houston, Baylor, Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Maryland and teams of the same calibre.

These selections by the students were made before any change was announced.

Also very strongly indicated was the desire for home and home relationships and games within a reasonable distance, thus affording the undergraduate and alumnus the opportunity of observing the team in action. This will increase the following.

Must Follow Through

At the present time Villanova's schedule is composed of an assortment of teams. Naturally the contracts already made must be fulfilled but results should be forthcoming within five years. It is understandable that not all nine opponents every fall will be these "ideal" matches but a majority of them will. Only time will tell the result but the fact is that the big step has been taken. All that remains is the following through of this policy. This is anxiously being awaited.

Reagan Stays; To Be Coach And New Athletic Director

Coach Meets With Board Of Athletics

By BOB MULCAHY and TOM SMITH

Frank Reagan added Villanova's athletic directorship to his head football coaching duties Monday night, with assurances from the Administration that the Wildcats will continue "to take part in major college football competition."

Reagan met with the Athletic Advisory Board and after the meeting his decision to accept the athletic director's post, left vacant by the resignation of Ambrose Dudley, was announced.

No Salary Listed

He was given a substanial salary increase which was not listed.

In a statement, he said:

"I am deeply gratified that Villanova has seen fit to place two of its most important athletic positions in my hands.

"It is a fine personal compliment and I intend to do everything in my power to show them that their confidence in me has not been misplaced.

Fine Relations

"My decision to remain at Villanova stems in part from my fine relations with the Administration, athletic officials, student body, alumni and the many personal friends I have made. I know my future association will be every bit as pleasant as that during the past three years.

"After a lengthy discussion with the Father President, I have been assured that Villanova will continue to participate in major college football competition, with primary limitations on travel and geographic area of opponents."

Replaced Raimo

Reagan, standout halfback on University of Pennsylvania teams in the late 1930's and early 1940's, was appointed head football coach in July 1954, replacing Art Raimo.

After Dudley's resignation, it was rumored that Reagan would accept a position as backfield coach at Penn. He had denied this report.

Reagan's 1956 Wildcat football club recorded a 5-4 record after first two teams won only one game while losing nine.

Villanova Courtmen Defeat Indiana and Muhlenberg For Only Wins Over Holidays

By JACK CURTIN

It was a rough holiday season for the Vilanova Widlcats. Playing in six games, including the disastrous Holiday Festival, the Mainliners were able to conquer their opposition only twice.

This particular phase of the court season came to an end last Saturday night when the Villanovans were crushed 85-69 by St. Bonaventure. The exceptional marksmanship of the Bonnies propelled them into a 33-11 lead midway through the first half. The outside shooting of the New York team forced the Wildcats to abandon their zone defense for a man-to-man style of play, but even an all-court press in the second half could not stop the Bonnies.

Rugged Rebounder

Kelly, Fahey Spark Team

High man for the game was forward Jack Kelly, whose improved play during the past weeks has been one of the few highlights of a discouraging series of games. Kelly scored 21 points, but was closely followed by Jim Fahey's 19. The only other man to hit double figures for the Villanovans was Joe Ryan with ten.

Again it was Kelly and Fahey who sparked the team two days earlier, but this time it was to a victory over Muhlenberg, 71-67. Jim scored 19 points and commanded the backboards with 22 rebounds as the Wildcats ended a three-game Mule winning streak and their own losing skein. This was an all-time high for the big center in the rebound department.

Kelly came off the bench in the second half to toss in 13 points and aid Fahey on the backboards. Another spark for Villanova came in the person of Al Griffith who led all scorers with 21 points.

Ryan Excels in Festival

The Holiday Festival in New York's Madison Square Garden, excluding the fine play of sophomore Joe Ryan, would best be forgotten by Villanova rooters. Still unable to break the Garden jinx, the Wildcats were the only team to go through the tournament without winning a game.

The Mainliners were knocked out of contention for the title in their first game on Christmas Day by NYU, 73-66. The underdog Violets depended upon strong rebounding and an effective fast break to offset the Villanova zone. Fahey dropped 20 points through the hoop for the Mainliners, while captain Jim Smith added 12.

Joe Ryan's fabulous shooting and 30 points were not enough to carry the Villanovans through

Villanovans Meet Hundley And West Va.; Need Upset

By DON KEMPF

Villanova's on-again off-again basketball team travels to West Virginia Saturday to take on the nationally ranked Mountaineers of West Virginia University — featuring the highly touted All-American "Hot Rod" Hundley.

After a thrill-packed game which saw them upset nationally ranked Indiana, the Wildcats went to the Holiday Festival in New York with the press tagging them with the label of "favored dark-horse" and with a student body ready to follow them with visions of a Notre Dame victory dancing in their heads. However the unpredictable Wildcats were upset in the opening game by another dark horse, NYU, and then suffered two additional drubbings.

Must Stop Hundley

The Mainliners will be travelling to West Virginia with one aim in mind; to spring an upset which will place them back where Villanova boosters think they should be, in the national basketball spotlight. To accomplish this the Cats will have to stop the colorful antics and the high scoring of All-American Hundley. Last year they did it, holding their ace scorer to 17 points. Hundley finished last season with a 26.6 point per game average, scoring 798 points in 30 games.

West Virginia will also be aided by the fact that the rest of last year's starting five, except for one man, has returned for the 1956-1957 campaign.

Ryan Finds Himself

One good point in the Holiday Festival was the fact that Sophomore Joe Ryan seemed to "find" himself as far as the scoring column is concerned. This, coupled with the already well-known abilities of Jim Smith, Al Griffith, Red Fahey, Jack Weissman, Tom Brennan, and Jack Kelly, is what Villanovans will be counting on as the Wildcats go to West Virginia to upset the Mountaineers.

Big Five Ace To Win "Food Fair" Trophy

The Food Fair Stores Inc. of Philadelphia announced last week that they would again donate a trophy, the Food Fair Trophy, to an outstanding basketball player from the "Big Five" Philadelphia schools.

The award will go to the athlete selected for outstanding qualities of scholarship, sportsmanship and leadership from basketball teams of Villanova, LaSalle, Penn, Temple, and St. Joseph's.

The player will be selected by the athletic directors of the Big Five Schools.

Sophomore Sensation Joe Ryan Breaks Into Lineup

By FRANK FLEMING

Villanova University's basketball teams have for the last decade been built around one high scoring player. During these years, such men as Joe Lord, Larry Hennessy, Bob Schafer and All-American Paul Arizin have been the keys to Coach Al Severance's success. This year Severance has not only a high scorer but an excellent all-around ball player to fill this spot in Sophomore Joe Ryan.

The good looking, always smiling red-head had basketball experts bestowing on him such titles as, "the second Paul Arizin," "Villanova's next All-American" and "the man most likely to succeed Tom Gola as Mr. Basketball" before he took the varsity court.

out of the city scoring honors by South Catholic's Jim Grazione who now quarterbacks the Wildcat football squad.

Leading Scorer

The court wise men base their opinions on Joe's outstanding play in high school and as Captain and leading scorer of last year's Wildcat freshman team. While attending St. Joseph's Prep School in Philadelphia, Joe made quite a name for himself. He led his team in scoring all four years at the school. He was elected captain of the "Preppers" in both his senior and junior years. As a Sophomore he made All-Catholic in the Philly league, a spot which he kept throughout his high school career. To this he added High School All-American honors his last two seasons.

In his senior year Ryan was chosen to play in the annual All-American game in Murray, Kentucky. That year he averaged 22 points a game in regular season play but was nosed out of the city scoring honors by South Catholic's Jim Grazione who now quarterbacks the Wildcat football squad.

Led Frosh

After turning down scholarship offers from most of the nation's top court schools in order to pursue a Catholic education close to home, Joe led the Villanova frosh through a 15-2 season. As the Kittens' captain he scored over 550 points during the 22 game season's averaging 25 points a game.

During this year's E. C. A. C. Holiday Festival, Joe became the center of quite a controversy. The New York scribes accused the Wildcats of freezing out Ryan when he approached a Madison Square Garden scoring record. "It's not true, my teammates aren't like that," was the way in which he disputed that city's press. Joe, the man who knows best what happened during the St. John's game, explains it differently than the sportswriters. With eight, minutes left in the ball game, the Johnnies shook up their man to man defense. Pascal was taken off Ryan and replaced by Dick Duckett. At that point the Villanova star had 30 points and was within nine points of a Garden scoring record. Duckett proved to be an excellent defensive player. As Ryan puts it; "I wasn't open for a shot the rest of the night."

Free Throw Record

Although his press clippings do not show it, the 19-year-old who stands 6-3 and weighs 180 is much more than an accomplished shooter. He is an accomplished back-court man as well as an excellent defensive ball-player. While scoring 16 points, Joe contributed many assists to lead the Wildcats to their brilliant upset of Indiana earlier this season. Foul shots are the C&F, Marketing major's greatest pride. In Junior season in high school he made good on 102 out of 105 from the free throw line. Last year he converted 82 out of his first 87 for the Kittens.

When coach Severance gave Ryan the starting nod for the season's opener with Canisus he set the tables for Joe to become one of the few men to start every game of their eligibility, barring any unforeseen difficulties. But knowing Joe Ryan and his record this will be one of the smallest of the many great honors he will bring to himself and Villanova in the next three years.

Reagan, Luzzi, Ferruolo Get All-American Honors

By BILL JONES

Villanova's strong 1956 football Wildcats have still a few more laurels to add to their string of post season honors.

The Tablet, a prominent Catholic, New York City newspaper has honored the Cats with its fifth annual "All-American" football team.

"Coach Of The Year"

Coach Frank Reagan was chosen "coach of the year" among Catholic colleges and universities in lieu of his fine 1956 season after two discouraging years at the Wildcat's helm.

Previous winners of the Tablet's "coach of the year" award were Notre Dame's Frank Leahy and Boston College's Mike Holovak.

Notre Dame quarterback Paul Hornung, a one-man team, was chosen "player of the year."

Luzzi, Ferruolo Chosen

Two of Villanova's standout performers during the season were chosen on the Tablet's 1956 "all-American" team. Junior tackle, 230 pound Don Luzzi and senior scatback John Ferruolo were honored with the title "all-American." Boston College was the only other team to place two men on the squad.

Beside being chosen "all-American," Luzzi, along with ends Steve Junker of Xavier, O., and Dick Arcand of Holy Cross, was voted one of the top linemen in major Catholic college football.

Ryan Also Honored

Also honored was Villanova captain, center Joe Ryan with an honorable mention for the "all-American" squad. Ryan was up against such standouts as Dick Campbell from Marquette and Notre Dame's Ed Sullivan.

Delany, Jenkins, Elliott to Attend Banquet in Phila.

Villanova's Olympic gold medal winners, Ron Delany and Charlie Jenkins, along with their coach, "Jumbo" Jim Elliott will be among the guests of honor at the 53d annual banquet of the Philadelphia Sportswriters Association, January 28 at the Broadwood Hotel.

The two runners and their coach will be feted by the sportswriters along with other prominent guests from the world of sport.

These other guests will include Yogi Berra, New York Yankee catcher; George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins; Joe Garagiola, former St. Louis Cardinal catcher and now a St. Louis sportscaster, and Dale Long, Pittsburgh's homer-hitting first baseman.

to victory against St. John's in the consolation bracket as they were downed 76-64. Kelly scored 14 in the defeat.

Villanova was handed its third tourney loss by Niagara on Dec. 29. Once again the Cats were outrebounded and thus defeated. Ryan and Griffith tied for scoring honors as each tallied 21. Smitty also broke into double figures as he posted 17.

Villanova's best game of the holiday season came way back on Dec. 20, when it upset Indiana, 79-61. Putting on the greatest team display yet seen in the Palestra, the Wildcats staged a thrilling comeback victory.

Five men hit double figures for the Mainliners, Griffith leading the parade with 19. Smith and Ryan each had 16, while Brennan and Fahey tied with 12. This last duo pulled down 32 rebounds between them, Brennan having 18.

Belle Masque Holds Dinner Dance Sat.

Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of Villanova's Law School will address Belle Masque dramatic society's annual dinner dance Saturday night.

Members and their dates will gather at the Wynnemore Inn in Ardmore.

Soph Kloss High Gun:

Rifle Team Hands Lehigh First Defeat; Downs Temple

Villanova's top-caliber varsity rifle team successfully defended its undefeated record last Saturday against previously undefeated Lehigh, whipping them by a score of 1385 to 1380.

Top scorer for Villanova was Chris Kloss with a blistering 289. Copping second place was Fred Passarella with a 281. Hank Miller had a 276, Jim Abernethy a 275 and Pete Carini a 264.

Only A Soph

Kloss's performance is especially gratifying since that he is only a sophomore and can be expected to bolster the team's hopes in the next two years.

The Villanova NROTC team scored a victory over Temple last week by a score of 1331 to 1306.

Fred Passarella took the honors for the NROTC team with a high score of 282. Mel Ventura scored a 267, Lou Spevetz a 264, Dan Spada a 263 and Joe Polizzotto a 255.

Miller Over-All High

Varsity captain Hank Miller is overall high scorer for the team with a four match average of 283. Close behind is Chris Kloss with an average for four matches of 282.5.

The NROTC team overall high scorer is Fred Passarella with a five match average of 280.2.

'CATS LOSE SIXTH

Villanova's luckless Wildcats dropped their sixth game of the season last night, as they lost to arch-rival Duquesne, 57-45, at the latter's home court. The game was Villanovaa's fifth loss in six games played on the road. The Wildcats have only four victories to their credit this season.

George Rieder Important Man on Frosh Hoop Squad

George Rieder has proven to be a vital factor in the plans of freshman basketball coach Maje McDonnell. His sparkling jumpshot has impressed all who have seen the frosh practice in recent weeks.

Rieder gives credit both for his ability to hit on that particular shot and for his being in college to John McCarthy, the coach at Gloucester N. J. Catholic High, where he played his high school ball.

Rieder operated four years on the varsity team at Gloucester Catholic averaging over 20 points per game for his entire career there. Yet he claims he was not a complete basketball player until McCarthy became his coach in his senior year.

12 Goals, 13 Shots

During his first three years at Gloucester, George played the pivot. Everyone agreed that he was among the best at that position in the schoolboy ranks. In one game against Sacred Heart of Vineland in his junior year, he bucketed 12 field goals in 13 shots in an uncanny exhibition of marksmanship.

Excels in Tournament

Gloucester Catholic went to the finals of the New Jersey Group B Catholic tournament in McCarthy's first year. Aided by Rieder, they led at half-time over St. Mary's of Elizabeth, called by some the best team in the state. Rieder fouled out at the start of the second half and Gloucester ended up losing the game. But George Rieder had impressed everyone with his brilliant play.

Al Severance, Villanova's head coach, thought enough of Rieder to offer him a scholarship. Most of those who have seen George play think he'll help Severance considerably next year as a member of the varsity.

Students Select Wildcat Safari As Top WVIL Show

A recent student survey taken by Radio Station WVIL indicates that "Wildcat Safari" heads the list with Villanova upperclassmen. Designed to highlight the most favorable wanderings of the Wildcat in the "jungle" of social life, the show presents an active half hour of listening every Thursday evening from 8:30 to 9.

The show which was begun last year, is moderated by Bill Kelly and Beth Mulaney of Rosemont who bring in the aspect of the social weekend while interviewing the campus leaders.

The original purpose of the program was to fill a last minute need for informing the on-campus students of the events of the coming weekend. However, it has become more complete and now covers all campus events.

Rather than simply listing campus events, persons involved in running the affairs appear on the program and explain the circumstances and happenings which are to occur. Last minute parties and final reviews of events and their success are the mainstays of the program.

Since the show is basically fluid, it has the advantage of being able to cover news practically on the spot.

Finance Society To Visit New York Stock Exchange

Dudley Resigns As Athletic Head

10 Game Schedule

Many problems faced Dudley when he began his duties as athletic director. The Villanova 1953 football schedule consisted of 5 opponents. He left immediately for the NCAA meeting with the result that Villanova played a 10 game schedule that season. Six weeks before the opening game with Georgia at Municipal Stadium the Athletic Department was shocked to find out that very few tickets for the game had been sold.

What occured in the next six weeks is athletic history. The largest single bloc of tickets, 40,000, was sold to the Acme Stores in what was the first of Villanova's "Grocery Bowls."

Dudley's present plans are indefinite but he stated that he is weighing offers from both industry and other educational institutions.

Bill Haley, president of the Finance Society, announced last week that the society has made definite arrangements for a field trip, Jan. 9, to the New York Stock Exchange.

A chartered bus will leave the Villanova campus for New York at 8 a.m., Wednesday with 45 Villanovans aboard.

When in New York the group will visit the brokerage house of Merril & Lynch, the Federal Reserve Bank and the Exchange itself.

Jerry Lynch and Joe Ianaconi, co-chairmen of the special events committee, were responsible for making the trip arrangements.

The society will be accompanied by Mr. Dougherty, its moderator and Messers Angeline and Pierce.

Shakespearan Comedies to Be Presented in N. Y.

Two Shakespearean comedies, "Measure For Measure" and "Taming of the Shrew," will be staged by the American Shakespeare Festival Company from Jan. 22 to March 10 in the Phoenix Theatre, New York.

Under the direction of John Houseman, the production of "Measure For Measure" will run from Jan. 22 through Feb. 17.

"Taming of the Shrew" will be presented from Feb. 20-March 10.

Smith, VILLANOVAN Editor, Wins LYNX Essay Contest

Top prize in the LYNX's recent essay contest was awarded Tom Smith, VILLANOVAN editor-in-chief, for his work entitled "Virginia's Schools: Liquidation or Integration," on view in the current issue of the LYNX.

Runner-up was Richard Madara with "The Navy's Case for a Balanced Force" which was reserved for publication in the next issue.

New Contest in Offing

A short story contest is contemplated for an upcoming issue.

The delay in the circulation of this issue of the LYNX was attributed to unforseen complications in the engraving of two illustrations. Copies are now on sale in the Pie Shoppe.

Contributors are reminded of a January 18 deadline. As has been stressed before, any type of material is acceptable if done well.

Material Wanted

The next issue will have a United Nations theme with several of the essays and stories having a foreign theme. Satire and humor are two quantities much in demand by the LYNX. Science fiction authors are also especially invited to contribute, as are any writers of one-act plays or narrative poetry.

Material submitted for last issue will be returned before the semester vacation.

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

We've just about recovered from the past holidays and already our 1957 social calendar is well on it's way to being filled. Friday night here on our own Villanova campus we will all be dancing and enjoying the fine music of Bob Schiller and the Villanovans. DPM, LKD and DPE will present the Interfraternity Ball. The dance will run from 9 to 1 and will cost $2.00 per couple. With good support this year, I'm sure that this dance could once again become an annual affair.

Immaculata College will also be holding a dance over this weekend, while Belle Masque will have its dinner-dance Saturday. As you can see 1957 should prove to be a very prosperous social year.

REICH

From our recapitulation of 1956 records hits we found these to be the Top Five Hits of '56.

1. Wayward Wind
2. Poor People of Paris
3. Memories are Made of This
4. Moonglow and the Theme from Picnic
5. Don't Be Cruel

This Is A Story?

This story was going around campus before Christmas. It seems a prefect unexpectedly entered a frosh's room and was heard yelling, "What's the idea of all these beer bottles in your room?" The frosh just turned and casually said, "But sir, they ran out of cans."

Lesko Prepares ICG Convention Agenda

The Intercollegiate Conference on Government will meet tomorrow morning at 10:30 to prepare legislation for the state convention at Harrisburg in April.

Chairman Bill Lesko said the group will meet in 204 C & F.

At a meeting before Christmas the ICG drafted two bills it plans to offer at the model state legislature.

Villanova with 25 delegates will probably be the largest delegation at the assembly. The number of delegates is decided by a school's participation in regional and state ICG work, Lesko explained.

During the first week of March the Villanova conference will take part in a warmup for the state convention in a meeting at Haverford College.

This year at Harrisburg the ICG will set up a model state legislature. Last year it organized a model Congress.

Alumnus Named General Counsel For LaRosa Foods

A Villanova alumnus has been named general counsel of America's largest manufacturer of macaroni and Italian specialty foods.

Mario Piazzolla, Class of 1951, will head the legal department of V. LaRosa and Sons, Inc., and will serve as assistant to the vice president.

Temple Law Degree

After graduating from Villanova, Mr. Piazzolla received his law degree with honors from Temple University School of Law.

He is a member of the boards of director of the South Philadelphia branch of the American Red Cross and the Health and Welfare Council and he is an active assistant district commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America.

Clary Law Clerk

Since 1954, he has been law clerk for the Hon. Thomas J. Clary, U.S. District Judge. He is admitted to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court and all its lower courts and is also a member of the Federal Bar.

In his new job he will assist with the management of the company's advertising policies.

Opera-Classica Invites Students

Anthony Angeline, Opera-Classica moderator, extends an invitation to all Villanovans to attend the club's opening presensation of the new year tonight at 7:30.

Although I am a day-hop, I realize the necessity of keeping the University a residents' school. The school should strive to keep the day students and residents balanced evenly, even though there is great pressure being exerted by the Archiocese for a greater share of its students. Residents can and do participate more fully in the life of the school and to limit them to a small percentage of the total enrollment would be unfair and injurious to the welfare of the University.

Villanova cannot hope to beat other schools in numbers at least for a while but we can gain more and better publicity. In the field of radio we need to find a station which will broadcast our grid games without interruptions for complete Notre Dame games. We seem to have a traveling football team, at least until we have a "stadium," so let's make the most of it and try to get a little noise on the air. It's okay when we're playing on a Friday night, Saturday night or Sunday afternoon, and the game is within 300 miles of Philly, but let us go outside this seemingly magic circle or let us, shame, play on a Saturday afternoon, then no radio coverage. Something should be done.

To the Editor:

The appearance of the Villanova Singers at the football banquet given by the Villanova Club of Philadelphia on Dec. 3 was an occasion of distinct pleasure and pride for all the alumni in attendance. By their appearance, their technical proficiency and their conduct, they reflected a great credit on the University.

It should not be thought that the interest of the average alumnus is limited to the activities of Villanova's representatives of the athletic fields—although we are certainly more vocal about such activities. The undergraduate who participates in the glee club, in the debating society, in the VILLANOVAN and in the BELLE AIR just as certainly represents Villanova as does the football player or the track man.

Those of us who attended the football banquet were paying a well-deserved tribute to the football team and the coaching staff. It gave us added pride to see other aspects of Villanova life so well represented.

Career Conference Offers Interview Tips Tomorrow

By JOHN FIXL

A Career Conference for June graduates will be held tomorrow morning in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium at 9:30. Three speakers will discuss the strategy of job hunting in general terms with particular emphasis on the job interview. The interviews will take place later in the semester.

All seniors will be excused from classes from 8:30 a.m. until 2:20 tomorrow to attend the conference.

Question-Answer Period

This conference has proved most helpful to the seniors in the past. In addition to the panel speakers, approximately 75 representatives will be present. A question-and-answer period follows the panel talks providing an ideal time to gain information concerning selective service, salary scales, and the other topics of interest to the senior.

To insure a worthwhile meeting and the continuance of the conference, a large and alert group is needed. All seniors are expected to attend.

Interviews On Campus

Interviews will begin on Monday, February 18, in the training table room on the second floor of Dougherty Hall and continue until April 21.

To register for this interview, the student must appear in person in the Placement Office from Monday to Thursday during the week prior to the date of the employer's visit. He must register for each separate interview and make particular note of the time for which he is scheduled.

When signing for the interview, the student must obtain and study any available material published by the employer. This material is of great importance and a thorough knowledge of its contents will aid immeasurably in obtaining a successful interview.

Promptness Required

Each student is expected to be neat and maintain the conduct expected of a college senior and a job applicant. He should be at the interview room at least five minutes prior to the scheduled time.

All the applications which must be filled out prior to the interview will be given to the senior at the time of registration. He is expected to complete the applications and bring them along to the interview.

Cancellation Notice

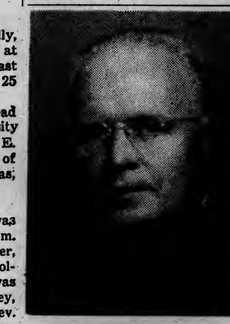
Any student missing an interview without prior notification to the Placement Office will not be allowed to register for further interviews. Notice of cancellation must be given no later than the day before the scheduled interview.

Seniors are advised to sign at the Placement Office for appointments for interviews or questions about the Career Conference.

Father Richard J. McNally, Veteran Professor, Dies

Rev. Richard J. McNally, O.S.A., profesor of philosophy at Villanova University for the last 21 years, died on January 25 after a short illness.

The Divine Office of the Dead was chanted in the University Chapel. The Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of the Province of St. Thomas, presided.



Buried on Campus

Solemn Mass of Requiem was offered January 29 at 11 a.m. by Rev. James B. Gallagher, O.S.A. The Rev. Joseph C. Molloy of the Erie Diocese was deacon, Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A. was sub-deacon and Rev. William J. Lunney, O.S.A., was master of ceremonies. Seminarians from St. Mary's Hall filled the minor offices.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Joseph J. Burns and Father Greenlee gave the final absolution at the grave in the adjoining Monastery cemetery where the Benedictus was chanted.

Father McNally was born in 1902 at DuBois, Pa. In 1919 he entered the Augustinian Preparatory Seminary and entered the novitiate there June 25, 1921. He took the vows of religion the following year and was graduated from Villanova in June, 1925.

After a year in St. Rita High School in Chicago, he returned to Villanova where he remained. For the past 14 years Father McNally also taught at Rosemont College and assisted over the weekends in St. Patrick's parish in Norristown.

Attending the meeting were representatives of the Philadelphia Bar Association and lawyers representing the American Society of Immigration and Naturalization.

Guidance Office Installed; Registrar's Duties Divided

By JOE KINNEY
News Editor

Due to the increased enrollment at the University this semester the Registar's Office has been divided into two sections and an Office of Guidance and Councel set up by the Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., Vice-president of Academic Affairs.

The Rev. Thomas A. Burke, O.S.A., is the new head of the Office of Admissions and Mrs. Meta Skow is the secretary of the Recorder's Office. Her job is to record and maintain all academic records and her office is located on the first floor of Mendel Hall.

In order to serve all Villanova students in academic matters, class courses, and other related problems, Father Boyle has installed the Office of Guidance and Counsel in the row of recently opened offices on the first floor of Mendel.

Murray New Counsellor

He also announced that Mr. William Murray, professor in the Commerce and Finance Division, is the new Director of the office which is not intended as a substitute or replacement for advice from individual faculty members.

Mr. Murray intends to make available professional advice, information, suggestions, and diagnosis for the improvement of the student's work.

Functions

His main functions will be to assist Deans, department heads, and teachers in checking the academic progress in relation to the student's expected performance.

Information and advice will also be afforded to those interested in attending graduate school and obtaining fellowships and scholarships to the various post-graduate schools.

Student Records

Gradually the office will accumulate personnel records on all students in order to help them determine in what profession each student is best suited.

All Villanovan editors and news staff members have been asked to attend a reorganization meeting this afternoon at 3:30.

Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith said the meeting will be held in the publications office, second floor of Dougherty.

Senior Dinner Dance Tickets On Sale In Dougherty Hall

Seniors have until Feb. 22 to purchase tickets for the Senior Weekend Dinner Dance March 2 at Philadelphia's Broadwood Hotel.

Bids were placed on sale in the Dougherty snack bar Monday and will be sold there each class day, announced Ticket Chairman John Allen, Dick O'Brien, and Dick McEntee.

Must Buy Table

Seniors will be required to buy the whole table—for five couples—at the same time. This was the procedure followed for last year's Junior Dinner Dance.

Tickets are priced at $10.

Dinner Dance Chairman Bill Hattrick said that the Broadwood's grand ballroom can accomodate all couples on the main floor.

This means, explained Hattrick, that tables will not have to be moved for dancing.

Zollo To Play

The dinner dance, which is open only to seniors, is scheduled for 6 o'clock. It ends at 1 a.m.

Leo Zollo, who drew favorable comments for his performance at last May's Junior Dinner Dance, has been contracted to play for dancing, scheduled to begin at approximately 9 p.m.

Zollo told the class band committee that he will bring a 12-piece band, an increase of two members over last year's group.

Comedian Signed

Dinner music will be played by a segment of Zollo's band from 6 until 9, Hattrick announced.

Comedian Paul Benson has been signed to provide special entertainment after dinner, according to Ron Howell and Jim McCormick, entertainment co-chairmen.

Benson has played the RKO Palace in New York, the Olympia in Miami and Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe in New York, according to the co-chairmen.

Comedian Bob Hope has termed Benson a "classy performer," added the co-chairmen.

Book Warfare

Villanova's ever-expanding Library has armed itself for bloodless warfare against the illicit movement of books from the premises.

Books placed on reserve by faculty members have been moved into the room formerly used by law students as a reading room. Students must ask for the books from the attendant, and may not take books from the shelves as they could previously. This is expected to prevent students from removing from the room books which classmates have also been required to read.

A uniformed attendant has been placed at the front door to check students as they leave for books which were not checked out at the circulation desk. Other security officers will probably be assigned to duty in the library, according to a faculty member who played a prominent role in establishing the new reserve book set-up.

The problem of book-smuggling is not a new one with the library, nor is it peculiar to Villanova. Even big-city libraries face the problem daily, along with the endless problem of library visitors snipping pictures and pages from books and periodicals.

New York City library workers were especially exasperated several months ago when thoughtless patrons ruined irreplaceable library holdings in searches for clues and answers to puzle contests sponsored by circulation-hungry New York newspapers.

Faculty members and Villanova students who recognize the amount of money tied up in books—many of which cannot be replaced if mutilated—will applaud the library's steps to fight book-snatching.

They realize that supplementary reading assignments are essential for a complete university education. To be effective, however, these reading programs must not be hampered by thoughtless classmates robbing others of the opportunity to read the assigned material.

While the library is continuing to discourage the illegal removal of books, it is to be hoped that the stacks will not be closed. Much it to be gained from students having access to browse through the shelves and discover literary works which they would not have found otherwise.

Ultra-Modern Monument

If the School of Law felt cramped in its former quarters in the University Library, the ultra-modern facilities on the hill across the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks must feel as wide open as a Texas prairie.

From up-to-the-minute furnishings in the comfortably large library and classrooms and faculty offices, the visitor may stroll into tastefully-furnished lounges and relax in the soft-cushioned chairs

The real eye-catcher is the authentically-constructed court room, complete with judge's stand and jury and witness boxes. Here, the embryo lawyers will have the opportunity to get accustomed to the atmosphere that will dominate their professional careers.

Villanova faculty members, students and alumni have every reason to boast about the new law school facilities at the intersection of County Line and Spring Mill Roads.

They are a monument to the practice of law—and to Harold Gill Reuschlein, the ambitious dean who four years ago started the school from scratch and raised it to a prominent position among the nation's best in the time it takes to say "court adjourned."

Political Round-up:

Israel May Survive If Wrongs Corrected

By GENE DONOHUE

For the past few weeks we have been hearing about all the trouble that has been occurring in the Middle East as a result of the refusal of Israel to give up the Gaza strip and the territory around the Gulf of Aqaba.

The U.N. troops have done a good job so far in clearing Egypt of invasion forces with the cooperation of these forces. The Israelite army seem to be the exception. They are the only troops that have fired on the United Nations Emergency Police Force and who are holding on to territory that was illegally gained.

American Press Pro-Israel

This action on the part of Israel is not unexpected on the part of one who is familiar with what has been going on in this section of the world for the past five years. Many people read the newspapers every day and consider themselves experts in the field. What these people fail to realize is that the American press is tremendously pro-Israel. Many of the atrocities that are committed by Israel are either never foun! in the newspapers or are put in an inconspicuous place.

Since its beginning the State of Israel has been shamefully breaking international law and the mutual trust that should exist between nations. The State of Israel has been censured many more times by the Security Council than have all the rest of the Arab States combined and these condemnations have been brushed off by this infant state as just so many words.

This fact becomes even more ridiculous when put up against the fact that Israel is being portrayed in this country as a weak nation striving for its very existence. Does a weak nation continually attack and provoke its "stronger" neighbors?

DONOHUE

Perhaps just one more instance of Israel's policy of territorial expansion is the fact that Israel has taken over almost all of the demilitarized zones that were established in the Armistice agreement. When asked to leave these various territories by the United Nations on a complaint by the Arab States, this too was dismissed as just so many words.

Israel Limited Threat

Drawing from the above instances and many more which can be related, it would seem that the State of Israel is a threat to peace in the Middle East. This is true, but just in a modified sense. Israel will remain a threat to peace only as long as it retains its belligerent attitude toward the rest of Araby States.

Quite often the Arab States would be willing to negotiate a settlement but they will not be bludgeoned into it.

Negotiation implies some sort of compromise but the Israelies are unwilling to do this. They insist that they are being persecuted by the Arabs and that any concession that they would make would be impairing their sovereignty. This is not entirely true. In order for a person to enjoy the most words; a person must be willing to give up some of it. In other words a person must be willing to submit to law in order to enjoy the maximum amount of freedom.

Nation Must Submit To Law

The same is true of a nation. In order for a nation to derive the greatest amount of freedom it must be willing to law, even if that law is world public opinion and it carries no immediate sanction. By following a policy such as this, the nations derive the most in the way of freedom, both economic and political. Perhaps the best example of this that exists today is the state of affairs between the United States and Canada. These two nations respect each other and act with a

How the Draft Works

One of the most consternating problems facing college students today is the fulfillment of military obligation. Since the present draft law went into effect prior to the outbreak of the Korean war, students have been faced with the inevitability of serving the government in some form of military capacity.

Over the past six years, however, the obligations of military service have changed considerably. More and more new opportunities for youths of draftable age have been afforded, and there has been a constant and confusing shift in the amount of time which must be served.

In the February 8 issue of U.S. News and World Report, an article dealing with the draft problem considers the various alternatives afforded to youth of draftable age.

The present draft law, the article mentions, will be in effect until 1959. This means that students can expect that " a draft law will be in operation definintely for the next two and a half years. . . ."

Many of today's college students, realizing this fact, have already taken steps towards planning for their future military obligations. Many, for example, have joined Reserve Officers Training Programs at school or enrolled in home town Reserve units. Others have taken the college deferment tests offered by the draft boards which guarantee completion of the college course for a student who passes them. Pertaining to this latter group, however, "fewer and fewer take the 'college qualification test. . . .' " says the article, "because there is no great chance that anyone under 22 will be called."

Should students, then, concern themselves with the draft question while in college? Since the draft age at present is 22, students—particularly underclassmen—need have no worry of being called right away. They should, however, study the different means by which military obligation can be fulfilled, and decide which branch of service would be best suited to their desires and aptitude. Consideration of the draft problem now, when there is no pressure from the threat of induction in the near future, can save much heart-ache and dissatisfaction when one finally is called.

The importance of selecting the proper branch of service—and understanding exactly what its merits and disadvantages are—cannot be stressed too strongly. We all must participate in universal military training, so we must reconcile ourselves to the fact it will be at least six-months—and for most two years or more—spent away from civilian life. The time spent in the service can be fruitful, or it can be frustrating, depending on our knowledge of what we are getting into. Studying about the different branch now will prepare us for the future, and help us in our selection of a specific branch of the service.

Seniors, especially, should be mindful of the draft situation. Induction for them is imminent if they are clasified 1-A and near age 22. Excluding the draft from their future plans would be a serious mistake, one which could have a totally bad effect on their later lives. There is still better than three months remaining before graduation—sufficient time to prepare for military life. A college degree is a great asset to anyone entering the service, and seniors should take advantage of this. Every branch of servce offers specialist fields and officers-candidate courses, and even the regular Army has technical fields for which a college degree is almost a necessity. Seniors should seize these opportunities, if only for the obvious reason that such training will be beneficial in future life.

Many seniors have already committed themselves to business firms upon graduation, and are concerned with their standing in the firm because of the inevitability of military service. They have little to fear in this respect, however, as the U.S. News and World Report article points out: "jobs are less and less affected by the draft standing of an individual." This situation is much less serious than it was several years ago because employers are realizing the inevitability of young employees being drafted, and so compensate for it in other ways.

But, whether a senior or freshman, every college student should resolve to study the various branches of the service and make plans for entering one of them. Willful ignorance of the problem will only confound and irritate an inductee; knowledge of the situation will lead to an understanding, and oftentimes, to an appreciation of it.

DEAD AS A DODO:

Anyone Interested In Reviving The A.S.V.C.?

By JOHN KENNEDY

Glancing through yearbooks of yesteryear's classes at Villanova reveals an unfamiliar Villanova, both physically and socially. But if buildings and students were few, clubs and other organizations flourished mightily.

Only a few, however, survived to the present time; most were short-lived. The Belle Air for 1930 records the activities of such hardy perennials as the College Band, the Villanovans, the Belle Masque, and Beta Gamma. Phi Kappa Pi and Lamda Kappa Delta descend unbroken from this time.

The Sporadic DPE

Delta Pi Epsilon appears in the 1930 edition, mentioning a four-year life. In 1934 and 1936, DPE is strangely absent. An early Arts fraternity, the Epsilon Phi Theta, occurs in 1930 and again in 1936.

Popular twenty-seven years ago were area clubs, somewhat on the order of the Greater Pittsburgh Club at the present, differing only in having official recognition. The Jersey City Club put in a brief appearance in the 1930 Belle Air before its disappearance into the limbo of the extinct extra-curriculars. The Atlantic City Club also vanished after the same issue.

North Jersey Forever

Clubs for Wilkes-Barre and North Jersey enjoyed a longer span of life, being featured in the 1930, '34, and '36 yearbooks, apparently distintegrating some time thereafter. Alany, Connecticut, and Lawrence Mass.) clubs had a brief heyday—the 1934 annual duly notng their existence. By 1936 they ere no more. An organization ejoicing in the peculiar name f The Coal Crackers Club epresented the natives of the p-state anthracite regions in 930.

Philadelphia-area Villanovans did not forget their high school loyalties Alumni formed clubs for graduates of LaSalle High, West Catholic, Roman Catholic, and Malvern (formerly Villanova) Prep; the 1930 Belle Air recorded all this for posterity. Four years later, no trace remained.

Students of Italian ancestry organized an Italian Club that lasted over five years, dying sometime between 1931 and 1934.

Extra-Curriculars Anonymous

The A.S.V.C. became a part of the Villanova scene in 1933 and joined the passenger pigeon and the dodo before 1936. Amateur aviation enthusiasts led to the birth of the Aeronautical Society of Villanova College. Such titillating topics as "The Controllable Pitch Propellor" were discussed at bi-monthly meetings.

Maintenance of the pamphlet racks and distribution of Catholic literature were duties of the Catholic Press Apostolate predecessor to the pamphlet committee—according to the 1936 yearbook.

The Villanova Symphony Orchestra did not rank, perhaps, with the New York Philharmonic, but filled relatively the same position with regard to Villanova. Founded in 1927, the orchestra dissolved before 1934.

The Undaunted Day-Hop

Day-hop feeling of separateness were apparent as far back as the late '20's with the 8.15 Club which evolved into the Day Student's Club in 1933. Its avowed purpose was to bring day-hops more closely into the social and athletic life of the school. The organization breathed its last prior to 1936.

The members of present-day clubs and societies are laid on the foundation of ancestral and forgotten organizations.

The Lights Went Out, And Four Seniors Went to Work

By BILL JONES
Associate Editor

To most students residing in Sullivan Hall the power failure Wednesday night, Jan. 23, during the middle of exams was just another typical incident in a string of four years at college.

Students merely gathered up their books and notes, took another dab at the continual stream of sweat rolling from their wrinkled brows and left their rooms en masse, amidst soft mutterings of discontent, for the brightly-illuminated confines of the C & F Building.

Four Nonconformists

That is, that's what most students did. For four others it was a different story. These four were watchmen for the Joseph R. Farrell Construction Co.

The job of a night watchman usually is an easy one. Kerosene burners are lit by the retiring construction workers at 6 p.m. in order to keep the freshly-poured concrete from freezing and cracking. The watchman need only keep these burners lit throughout the night by keeping them well supplied with kerosene.

Burners Flaked Out

But these burners are supplied with an electric spark and cannot run without electricity. And when the lights went out in Sullivan Hall, so did the burners in partially-constructed Sheehan Hall.

Now the temperature that night was in the vicinity of 15 degrees. This presented a problem. In a matter of hours the concrete would begin to freeze.

Thus, the watchmen went into action. A call to construction foreman Tom Leary notified him of the problem at 11 p.m. It also assured him that a plan was in progress.

Guard Intervenes

A couple hundred feet of electrical line was procured from the tool shed and attached to the main burner on Sheehan's second floor. Down the newly-constructed corridor and out one of the temporary plastic wind breaking windows it led. There another length of line was attached to it and strung out to the lampost by the guard house, which supported a brightly-shining light. Within a matter of minutes the light came out of the socket and within a matter of seconds the security officer on duty out of the guard house. He assured the watchmen that they would have to secure permission for this venture from the Rev. John J. Curran, immediately.

It was about 11:30 and Father Curran was contacted. Permission was granted on the condition that the watchmen call the chief electrician and find out if the proposed plug-in would blow out the rest of the lights on campus. This, too, was done and his assurance obtained that no ill effects would occur.

Still No Juice

Everything was ready, a little insertion of plug into socket and once more the burner's red glow would warm the cooling concrete.

In went the plug into the socket in the lampost, and there it was, the burner, colder than ever. The deduction was brilliantly arrived at that the burner was getting no electricity. A systematic check of the line revealed that the plug-in to the lampost was defective. The temperature now was about 12.

A suitable plug was found on the end of another wire, and with the aid of an electrician who appeared almost miraculously from nowhere on his way off the campus and who loaned the struggling students a good sharp knife, the transfer of plugs was accomplished. It was now after 12.

Still Nothing Happened

Once more everything appeared ready. Once more the plug was inserted. Once more nothing happened. Four muttering men marched into the building.

But one of them had a brainstorm. An ignition switch was flipped and the stubborn burner gave in. A loud roar broke the silence of the room and the burner's warm red glow lit up four smiling faces.

The triumphant watchmen called Mr. Leary at 12:30 and informed him that everything was under control. He was pleased.

Three To Bed

So it was back to the C & F Building and books and the notes and the perspiring brows wrinkled in disbelief at the amount of material to be digested.

Soon three of the watchmen were free to fall heavily into their sacks and dream not too pleasant dreams of the morning's final, while the one remaining student was left to make his hourly rounds of the glowing burners and the settling cement.

Senior's Dinner Date Cost $50--Including Class Ring

Senior civil engineers are still kidding one of their number about a dinner date that cost him $50.

While dining with his steady date, a Rosemont sophomore, the senior dropped his class ring onto the carpeted floor in an expensive restaurant near-by.

The Rosie leaned over, picked it up and handed it back.

"Keep it," replied the engineer firmly. So she's been wearing it ever since.

The dinner tab came to eight bucks. The ring cost him $42.

SAD NEWS TRAVELS

Villanovans who travel from distant points for their college educations find themselves constantly searching their home-town papers in vain for news about their Alma Mater's athletic accomplishments during vacation periods.

That's why this department did a swift double-take the other week while glancing through the afternoon paper at home.

He noted a filler at the bottom of a column headed "Professor Dies," and passed over it.

Then he realized the Father McNally mentioned in the obituary had been his ethics professor last semester.

CONFUSING GREEN DOOR

Several weeks back a sophomore staff member was dispatched one night to Long Publishing Co., where the Villanovan is printed, with a bundle of copy.

He had never made the trek along the dark Cherry Street neighborhood, but had been instructed to watch for a red door.

Obeying orders, he strolled past the publishers, and a block or so away he backed up, began another search and finally found Long's—which had just painted its door a bright green.

WHO'S CHARLEY

The name "Charley Jenkins" was flashed all around the world last November when he raced to victory in the Olympic 600-meters.

When he was married a few weeks later, the Associated Press sent a photo of Charley and his bride over its national wirephoto network.

Then Charley returned to school and found his name on a bulletin board. "Charles L. Jenkins" had never filled out a card for the Public Information Office.

Flying Saucers Are Proven Real By History and Theory

By CLEM BIRCH

The story of the UFO's began many years before the Second World War or even the "Great War" but for our purposes its "modern" history has been traced since World War II.

Foo-Fighters Sighted

During the war, although few reports ever reached newsprint, there appeared to many fighter pilots, German and Japanese as well as American, objects called at that time "foo-fighters." These machines would circle dog-fights or actual combat for a time and then in a tremendous burst of speed disappear. At the time these sightings were merely recorded as unidentifiable.

On June 24, 1947 a private pilot from Idaho, Ken Arnold, sighted a formation of nine silver discs over Mount Rainier flying at nearly 1,200 miles per hour. He unfortunately referred to them in his report as "saucer-like."

Probe Instituted

Throughout the year the sightings came in off and on many of them being complete and utter hoaxes. At this time the Air Force was asked to institute a probe which did not come until January 7, 1948 when the most famous case demanded it.

Early in the afternoon, one Capt. Thomas Mantell and two other flyers were on a training flight over Godman Air Force Base near Fort Knox in Kentucky when he received a call to check a UFO which was supposed to be in the vicinity.

A huge disc close to 250 feet in diameter had been seen by hundreds over Marisonville, Kentucky and was plotted at tremendous speed headed for Fort Knox. Mantell spotted the object and proceeded on the chase. His dialogue to the air field described it as metallic and making "his speed and better." He was going to follow it up to 20,000 feet.

Mysterious Death

Later that day after no further word, his disintegrated plane and body were found some 90 miles away. Neither pictures

Pictured Left to Right: During the summer of 1952, Warrant Officer Delbert C. Newhouse and his wife were taking a leisurely trip through Utah on a vacation. At 11:10 a.m. on July 2, near Tremonton, the couple spotted a formation of eight bright objects against the blue of the day.

Newhouse was assigned to the Oakland Aviation Supply Depot as a Navy Photographer. At the sighting his first instinct was to set up his equipment which included a telephoto lens. He immediately shot forty feet of film.

1,000 Miles Per Hour

Although the pictures were not taken at close enough range to give much detail they did show a few things quite plainly. The bright spots were machines of some sort, maneuvering at speeds calculated close to 1,000 miles per hour, and in such a way that all experts claim could not be duplicated by any craft of known production.

This incident is not the most famous of cases listed as Unidentified Flying Objects but we will see it is most important.

Cameraman Travels City:

John's A Photographer With High Hopes and Swollen Feet

By FRANK DELANY

This is the intriguing story of a man and an idea. The man is John Alshefski; the idea was the photographing of the city of Philadelphia for a feature in the Lynx.

John Alshefski is a senior marketing major and co-photography editor for the Villanovan.

Philadelphia at night sounded good and so we picked John up one Post Meridian about three. Full of high hopes but few concrete ideas, we went forth into the heart of the Quaker City.

Operation Turin Grotto

After much good-natured haggling, we agreed on the first objective of the evening—food.

Fortified by spaghetti and wine and chastened by the fact that we had managed to produce nothing in four hours, we decided to set out on foot in quest of the photographic.

New York has its Bowery but Philadelphia has its Tenderloin. This is an area roughly bounded by Callowhill, Arch, Fifth and Tenth Street and densely populated by a rather alcoholic population.

Tripod slung over shoulder and camera in hand, we made our way to the social center of the world of inebriation, Eighth Street. At Ridge Avenue, there is the local cinema, the New Garden, a sort of flop house with pictures.

Immoral Camera-Wielding

But it was the Gay Nineties that caught our eye and we took our first picture. We are already beginning to attract a little attention and were soundly scored by a fuzzy-looking old gentleman for the immorality of our camera-wielding. He was apparently a slightly unsteady customer of the establishment.

Undaunted, we sauntered down the gay pink way, Race Street, beginning to feel rather self-consciously collegiate. At a couple of points we established a beachhead, set up our tripod and focused for a few minutes on a local establishment to the alternate disgust and amusement of the passers-by.

While we stood there, someone asked for a dime for a bowl of soup. I had nothing smaller than a quarter and as he had no change at the moment, he reluctantly accepted the two bits. He offered to allow me to accompany him to prove his good intentions but I politely declined. Some minutes later we passed a luncheonette and there he was, drinking soup, of all things.

A Willing Model

It was probably about this time that John indicated he wasn't too happy with his assignment ("I hate Philadelphia!"). But on we went looking for our masterpiece, someone who could represent alone the sordidness of the entire area.

A fruitless search of doorways ensued and just when we had about given up, a gentlemen of high artistic sentiments gallantly offered his services as a model. After a brief perusal, though, we had to inform him that he was unsuitable. He just wasn't suitably seedy. Perhaps next time.

Back To Civilization

It was now about 10 p.m. Skid Row suddenly lost it charm and to John's undisguised relief, we made tracks to the relative civilization of Market Street.

Two hours of walking and we had our pretzel vendor and a few other uninspired shots. John now complained of five hours of Philadelphia by foot. Unfortunately for him, he had gallantly volunteered to carry the camera at the beginning of the evening. The rest of us took turns carrying the tripod. So we found the car again and cruised down to the waterfront.

A Mile Hike

We debarked again at Fifth and Race and started the half-mile hike out to the center of the Ben Franklin Bridge. John stalked ahead of us muttering gentle curses against the Lynx softly under his breath.

Once more we set up our tripod and while the bridge gently swayed in the breeze, John clicked away at the wharves and factories lining the waterfronts of Philadelphia and Camden. It was now one o'clock in the morning.

A half-mile later and we were back at the car. John was muttering a little louder now. Over the evening he had managed to form a low opinion of us as well as our city.

Cruising Down The Delaware

Ignoring John's protestations about Villanova, bed and an eighty-thirty class, we cruised down Delaware Avenue. It was about one-thirty when we spotted a lonely figure welding something in the middle of the deserted and darkened street. We swung the car around and pulled up beside him. After eyeing us oddly he consented to be photographed. But in the meantime we discovered a companion down a manhole. This was obviously more interesting than a mere welder.

This thought occured to Johnny at about the same time and he gave forth with a vigorous no. A little persuasion, physical and otherwise, changed his mind. (The welder kept staring at us with that quizzical expression. We thought middle-of-the-night welders were pretty odd too). Threatening to send us the cleaning bill, John descended into manhole, and produced our own personal favorite picture.

Docked At Dock Street . . .

Dock Street was a beehive of activity at two a.m. Tons of produce lined the streets and handlers worked furiously loading them onto the trucks to carry them out into the provinces like arteries from the heart.

This might make a good angle for a shot. No. I guess not. How about here? No. Not that either. It was strange how people stared as we opened and closed the tripod. After a half-hour of this sort of thing, it became apparent the evening was over. John was heading back to the car with that indispensible camera too disgusted even to complain anymore about his maltreatment.

Three a.m. and we were back where we started, 12 hours later.

Three more trips and many pictures later, we had our essay. We're doing another now. And even John has learned to like it though I don't know as he'll admit it.

Placement Work Easier Since War

By JOHN McGEE

To better acquaint all students and especially seniors with the work of the Villanova Placement Office we feature two articles for their benefit.

To describe college placement itself is a bit hazardous, for situations differ according to the size, type, location and philosophy of each institution. However, at Villanova it may be considered "a service by which the student is helped to find a suitable and worthwhile occupation upon graduation."

College placement today is simplified somewhat because of the great need for college-trained men and women resulting from the vast industrial expansion since the War and also the present uncertain, critical world situation. Employers have found campus recruitment an efficient and effective means of securing these badly-needed personnel.

Placement Is Big Business

As a result, a complex, multiphase operation costing millions of dollars a year and involving thousands of workers has developed. It has been estimated that the total number of employers and schools involved has increased five hundred percent since 1935; that the average company spends between five hundred and one thousand two hundred dollars per college graduate recruited. This gives you a concept of the growth and scope of college placement as we know it today.

Having briefly viewed college placement in general, let us look at it specifically in relation to its role at Villanova. We can place the duties of the Placement Office into two general categories.

Employer Contact Important

First, the Placement Office must establish and maintain contacts with as many employers as possible. These employers should encompass many different job fields and should be in a geographic distribution consistent with the character of the student body. All these companies must be kept informed of developments influencing their hiring of Villanova graduates.

The Placement Office here enters the field of public relations. In this realm success depends upon the combined cooperation of student, faculty, administration and the Placement Office. Contact with employers then, is the first duty of the office.

The second duty of the Placement Office is supplying information to students and to employers. The student's first need is knowledge of job content. This can be gained in many ways.

Through consultation the Placement Office will attempt to give an accurate and useful description of occupations in which the student may be interested.

Faculty members can and will give helpful and accurate information based on past experience in their fields.

Membership in professional societies and attendance at meetings where speakers describe particular fields of interest gives valuable job information. Publications which briefly list job descriptions are of assistance in giving general outlines of various occupations. The "Dictionary of Occupational Titles" in the Reference Room of the library lists about thirty thousand different jobs.

In addition to these sources, a person's family and friends are an important reference for job information.

Individual Information

Once the student has made a tentative decision as to his choice of occupation, his next task is to acquaint himself with specific opportunities within the field. Here again, the Placement Office supplies him with information about the individual companies.

This information includes the history, size, location, type of product or service offered; also salary and benefits, and the name of the person to be contacted. A file in the Placement Office contains such material as company brochures, information sheets, advertising reprints, etc., and is available to interested students.

In addition to information supplied to the student, the Placement Office also supplies information to employers. This information concerns the university and the individual student.

Information about Villanova includes the size, location, type of school, curriculum and graduation requirement.

Information concerning the student includes his educational background, scholastic rating, extra-curricular activities and faculty references.

With some idea, therefore, of the scope of college placement and the duties of the placement office, we will discuss how the student can prepare himself for employment next week.

Confessions of a PLC Gyrene: Quantico Is Just Like This

By ED DODD

On June 17, I reported to Quantico, Va., for my first training period in the Marine Corps. After wading through miles of paper work and issuing (not the last things we waded through), we reported to our home for the next six weeks, Camp Goettge. When we arrived a short, stocky captain welcomed us by telling us that we were entering upon some of the toughest training in the world and we'd be lucky if we half finished the course. As the ranks thinned we began to perceive that the captain was not given to exaggeration.

The following is a typical day.

Typical Day

At five a.m., we were gently roused from sleep by the squad bay lights snapping on and the soothing voice of our sergeant informing us that we had just twenty minutes to shave, clean up, dress in the uniform of the day, square away the squad bay area and fall out for muster.

Next came breakfast. And if anything could taste good at that hour of the morning, Marine chow would. All you can eat is the order of the day.

At seven a.m., the real fun began. Things started off with a bang with a two mile hike at the leisurely pace of four to four and a half miles an hour to our first class.

First Class

Our first class offered a few helpful hints. If you get sleepy, stand up. If you fall asleep on your feet you will quickly awaken as the deck comes up to meet you.

With this in mind, we ran the obstacle course at ten a.m.

Then it was chow time again. To help digestion, we took a fifteen mile hike through the surrounding countryside. This was a fairly effective way of killing an afternoon and so it was chow time once more.

Day Really Began

And then at 4:30 p.m. the day really began. There was studying for tests, cleaning gear, polishing boots, cleaning rifles and, for relaxation, writing letters.

And so to bed.

We wondered many times why we took that rough physical and mental training and the constant harrassment designed to make or break us, but we were proud to stand up and be counted with that one-half that made it.

On the way home we could even almost laugh at all the the great spirit of cooperation. As a result, more trade flows across these borders than almost anywhere else in the world. This is the situation that should be strived for in the Middle East.

Must Treat Arabs As Equals

Naturally a task as monumentayl as this cannot be accomplished overnight. But steps can be taken in the right direction. A feeling of trust must be built up but can only be done with a complete reversal of policy by Israel. If they begin to treat the Arabs as equals and learn that more can be gained by compromise than by force of arms against a united world opinion, then peace will come to the Middle East.

This should not be taken as the view of an anti-Semetic. White-washing the wrongs of Israel will serve no purpose but to aid in the eventual downfall of Israel. When a nation's wrongdoings are hidden for a period of time and are finally brought out, they become distorted beyond all recognition. If this is done Israel stands no chance of survival as a nation. But, if these wrongdoings are corrected in time, Israel can become one of the more prosperous nations in the Middle East.

Honorable James H. J. Tate, President of the Philadelphia City Council, is shown presenting citations to Villanova Olympic champions Ron Delany and Charley Jenkins during ceremonies honoring the two athletes at City Hall on Thursday, Feb. 7. Track coach Jim Elliott was also presented with an award.

Law School Moves; Garey Hall Dedication in April

Three days of dedicatory ceremonies for Garey Hall are planned for April 25, 26 and 27. The theme for the dedicatory ceremonies is "The Concept of Peace", prompted by Saint Augustine's "Peace is the Tranquility of Order." There are to be symposia dealing with international peace, interracial peace and industrial peace; a dinner; a pontificial Mass and a convocation at which Chief Justice Earle Waren of the Supreme Court will receive academic honors.

Last week the School of Law moved into its new building named for the late Eugene Garey, Esq., eminent member of the New York Bar and generous benefactor of Villanova.

Ground for the new structure was broken last Sept. 22, the feast of St. Thomas of Villanova, in the presence of His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, the Most Reverend John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., Archbishop of Phila. and the Honorable Horace Stern, Chief Justice of Pa.

Gothic Style

The building, designed by Henry D. Dagit and Sons, is located upon a commanding site overlooking the Villanova campus. It is built of native stone and limestone and conforms to the modified Gothic, characteristic of postwar Villanova buildings.

Built to accomodate 300 students, the building consists of three wings. One enters the center wing through a stately door flanked by life-size figures of Saint Ives and Saint Thomas More, the work of the contemporary sculptor Edward Fenno Hoffman.

The library is housed in an entirely separate wing, consisting of a panelled reading room seating 150 with the offices of the librarian and the cataloguing room adjoining. Below the reading room are two levels of stacks equipped with study alcoves. The book capacity in the reading room and stacks is 160,000 volumes.

It is hoped that in the future a residence hall for graduate students will be erected immediately adjacent to Garey Hall. Sufficient ground has been reserved for this purpose.

Garey Hall, the new Law School building, is now being used by the students. It is the first graduate school structure at Villanova.

IRS To Visit 3 Agencies In D.C. Next Wednesday

International Relations Society is planning its biggest event of the year next Wednesday.

President Gene Donohue has announced that the organization will go to Washington and visit such agencies as the State Department, the U. S. Information Agency, the Studios of the Voice of America and the Polish Embassy.

Through the courtesy of the Pennsylvania Railroad the group will go at a reduced rate, Donohue said. A rough outline of the trip was given to the group at a short meeting Monday and it ran as follows:

Trip Outline

Leave Penn Station about 7 a. m.
Meeting with the State Department at 10 a. m.
Meeting with the U. S. Information Agency at noon
Lunch
Tour of the Voice of America Studios at 2 p. m.
Meeting at the Polish Embass at 3 p. m.

When these things have been accomplished, members of the organization have the rest of the day to tour the "historical" spots in Washington, Donohue said. No time has been set for their return to Philadelphia.

Final Arrangements

Final arrangements for the trip will be made at the regular monthly meeting of IRS tomorrow night at 7:30 in 201 C&F. The highlight of this meeting will be an address by an Indian citizen on the neutralist policy followed by that country.

Donohue has stressed that anyone who is interested in the organization and its work, including the Washington trip, should be at the meeting.

Medical School Candidates Urged To Undergo Test

Candidates for admission to medical school in the fall of 1958 are advised to take the Medical College Admission Test in May.

The Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test for the Association of American Medical Colleges, made the announcement.

Given Twice

These tests, required of applicants by almost every medical college in the country, will be given twice during the current calendar year.

Candidates taking the May test, however, will be able to furnish scores to institutions in early fall, when many medical colleges begin the selection of their next entering class.

Candidates may take the MCAT on Saturday, May 11, or on Tuesday, October 29, at administrations to be held at more than 300 local centers in all parts of the country.

Objective Tests

The MCAT consists of tests of general scholastic ability, a test on understanding of modern society and an achievement test in science.

Copies of the Bulletin of Information, which gives details of registration and administration, as well as sample questions, are available from pre-medical advisers or directly from Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N.J. Completed applications must reach the ETS office by April 27 and October 15, respectively for the May 11 and October 29.

Low-Cost Trips Offered Students During Summer

American students who want to travel this summer have the oportunity of going on a wide variety of low-cost hosteling trips in the U.S. and aboard, announces Mr. Richard Golder, president of the Philadelphia Council, American Youth Hostels, 1520 Race St., Philadelphia.

In addition to the 25 different trips planned by the National Headquarters for small co-educational groups, said Mr. Golder, hundreds of other trips are planned by local councils throughout the United States, most of which cost as little as $1.50 a day.

Inexpensive hiking, cycling and canoeing, with overnight stops in hostels maintained by interested persons and organizations, has long been a popular mode of travel for young people aboard and is attracting many followers in this country.

Trips Start In June

Trips sponsored by the AYH National Headquarters will range in length from four to eleven weeks and will start in late June and early July. Estimated costs range from $135 for a New England trip to $775 for a trip to Switzerland and the Rhine Valley.

V.U. Law School Students Addressed On Social Work

A new development in teaching domestic relations law was introduced to Villanova's School of Law when a social worker addressed law students on the relationship between social work and law.

Sister Ann Joseph, supervisory consultant of intake of Philadelphia Catholic Charities, told the senior law class Jan. 16:

Lawyers May Benefit

"Lawyers have much to gain from knowing what social workers do and how the social worker can often be of help to the lawyer."

Explaining the mutual grounds of social work and law—both aiming to "bring man closer to his ultimate end," Sister Ann Joseph listed in detail the techniques of handling custody, adoption and support cases at Catholic Charities.

Work Area Related

She also stressed the relationship between the social agency's area of work and that of the lawyer and the court.

A member of the Missionary Servants of the Most Blessed Trinity, the speaker is a graduate of St. John's Law School and studied social work at Catholic University of America.

She holds a master's degree in social science from Fordham University and was a member of the Governor's Committee for revision of adoption laws in 1953.

Student Education Association Meets Tomorrow Morning

Mr. George A. Harris, Chairman of the Education Department, has announced that an organization meeting for the Villanova Chapter of the Student Education Association will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in room 215 Mendel.

All students majoring in Education or preparing to teach after graduation are urged to attend.

Villanova Chapter

The Villanova Chapter of the SEA will be the local unit of the state and national SEA, all of which are under the auspices of the National Education Association with its affiliated associations.

An individual member of the SEA chapter is a student member of the NEA with all rights, privileges and responsibilities of an associate member.

This membership also entitles the student to a subscription to the various Educational publications.

Purpose Of SEA

Some of the purposes of the SEA are to promote personal and professional growth of its members and to promote a better understanding of the history, ethics and program of the organized teaching profession.

The association also hopes to encourage participation in work on professional and community problems and to interest capable students in teaching as a career.

Beta Gamma Announces Season Schedule

The Beta Gamma Debating Society opened its spring semester schedule Feb. 1 at Baltimore by bowing to the debaters from Johns Hopkins University in a close match.

Yesterday, the society gave an exhibition debate for the Knights of Columbus in Philadelphia.

Kings Tournament

Mr. Richard McDonough, moderator of the society and a member of the Speech Department has announced that Beta Gamma will participate in the Seventh Annual Debate Tournament at Kings College in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., this Saturday.

In the midst of its heavy schedule the Villanova debaters will go to Brooklyn College for its tenth annual tournament next month.

Regional Next Month

To conclude their tournament activities for March, the debaters will travel to St. Joseph's College for the West Point Regional Tournament.

A file in the Placement Office contains such material as company brochures, information sheets, advertising reprints, etc., and is available to interested students.

In addition to information supplied to the student, the Placement Office also supplies information to employers. This information concerns the university and the individual student.

Information about Villanova includes the size, location, type of school, curriculum and graduation requirement.

Information concerning the student includes his educational background, scholastic rating, extra-curricular activities and faculty references.

With some idea, therefore, of the scope of college placement and the duties of the placement office, we will discuss how the student can prepare himself for employment next week.

Confessions of a PLC Gyrene: Quantico Is Just Like This

By ED DODD

On June 17, I reported to Quantico, Va., for my first training period in the Marine Corps. After wading through miles of paper work and issuing (not the last things we waded through), we reported to our home for the next six weeks, Camp Goettge. When we arrived a short, stocky captain welcomed us by telling us that we were entering upon some of the toughest training in the world and we'd be lucky if we half finished the course. As the ranks thinned we began to perceive that the captain was not given to exaggeration.

The following is a typical day.

Typical Day

At five a.m., we were gently roused from sleep by the squad bay lights snapping on and the soothing voice of our sergeant informing us that we had just twenty minutes to shave, clean up, dress in the uniform of the day, square away the squad bay area and fall out for muster.

Next came breakfast. And if anything could taste good at that hour of the morning, Marine chow would. All you can eat is the order of the day.

At seven a.m., the real fun began. Things started off with a bang with a two mile hike at the liesurely pace of four to four and a half miles an hour to our first class.

First Class

Our first class offered a few helpful hints. If you get sleepy, stand up. If you fall asleep on your feet you will quickly awaken as the deck comes up to meet you.

With this in mind, we ran the obstacle course at ten a.m.

Then it was chow time again. To help digestion, we took a fifteen mile hike through the surrounding countryside. This was a fairly effective way of killing an afternoon and so it was chow time once more.

Day Really Began

And then at 4:30 p.m. the day really began. There was studying for tests, cleaning gear, polishing boots, cleaning rifles and, for relaxation, writing letters.

And so to bed.

We wondered many times why we took that rough physical and mental training and the constant harrassment designed to make or break us, but we were proud to stand up and be counted with that one-half that made it.

On the way home we could even almost laugh at all the the great spirit of cooperation. As a result, more trade flows across these borders than almost anywhere else in the world. This is the situation that should be strived for in the Middle East.

Must Treat Arabs As Equals

Naturally a task as monumentayl as this cannot be accomplished overnight. But steps can be taken in the right direction. A feeling of trust must be built up but can only be done with a complete reversal of policy by Israel. If they begin to treat the Arabs as equals and learn that more can be gained by compromise than by force of arms against a united world opinion, then peace will come to the Middle East.

This should not be taken as the view of an anti-Semetic. White-washing the wrongs of Israel will serve no purpose but to aid in the eventual downfall of Israel. When a nation's wrongdoings are hidden for a period of time and are finally brought out, they become distorted beyond all recognition. If this is done Israel stands no chance of survival as a nation. But, if these wrongdoings are corrected in time, Israel can become one of the more prosperous nations in the Middle East.

Tate, President of the Philadelphia City Council, is shown presenting citations to Villanova Olympic champions Ron Delany and Charley Jenkins during ceremonies honoring the two athletes at City Hall on Thursday, Feb. 7. Track coach Jim Elliott was also presented with an award.

Law School Moves; Garey Hall Dedication in April

Three days of dedicatory ceremonies for Garey Hall are planned for April 25, 26 and 27. The theme for the dedicatory ceremonies is "The Concept of Peace", prompted by Saint Augustine's "Peace is the Tranquility of Order." There are to be symposia dealing with international peace, interracial peace and industrial peace; a dinner; a pontificial Mass and a convocation at which Chief Justice Earle Waren of the Supreme Court will receive academic honors.

Last week the School of Law moved into its new building named for the late Eugene Garey, Esq., eminent member of the New York Bar and generous benefactor of Villanova.

Ground for the new structure was broken last Sept. 22, the feast of St. Thomas of Villanova, in the presence of His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, the Most Reverend John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., Archbishop of Phila. and the Honorable Horace Stern, Chief Justice of Pa.

Gothic Style

The building, designed by Henry D. Dagit and Sons, is located upon a commanding site overlooking the Villanova campus. It is built of native stone and limestone and conforms to the modified Gothic, characteristic of postwar Villanova buildings.

Built to accomodate 300 students, the building consists of three wings. One enters the center wing through a stately door flanked by life-size figures of Saint Ives and Saint Thomas More, the work of the contemprorary sculptor Edward Fenno Hoffman.

The library is housed in an entirely separate wing, consisting of a panelled reading room seating 150 with the offices of the librarian and the cataloguing room adjoining. Below the reading room are two levels of stacks equipped with study alcoves. The book capacity in the reading room and stacks is 160,000 volumes.

It is hoped that in the future a residence hall for graduate students will be erected immediately adjacent to Garey Hall. Sufficient ground has been reserved for this purpose.

Garey Hall, the new Law School building, is now being used by the students. It is the first graduate school structure at Villanova.

IRS To Visit 3 Agencies In D.C. Next Wednesday

International Relations Society is planning its biggest event of the year next Wednesday.

President Gene Donohue has announced that the organization will go to Washington and visit such agencies as the State Department, the U. S. Information Agency, the Studios of the Voice of America and the Polish Embassy.

Through the courtesy of the Pennsylvania Railroad the group will go at a reduced rate, Donohue said. A rough outline of the trip was given to the group at a short meeting Monday and it ran as follows:

Trip Outline

Leave Penn Station about 7 a. m.
Meeting with the State Department at 10 a. m.
Meeting with the U. S. Information Agency at noon
Lunch
Tour of the Voice of America Studios at 2 p. m.
Meeting at the Polish Embassy at 3 p. m.

When these things have been accomplished, members of the organization have the rest of the day to tour the "historical" spots in Washington, Donohue said. No time has been set for their return to Philadelphia.

Final Arrangements

Final arrangements for the trip will be made at the regular monthly meeting of IRS tomorrow night at 7:30 in 201 C&F. The highlight of this meeting will be an address by an Indian citizen on the neutralist policy followed by that country.

Donohue has stressed that anyone who is interested in the organization and its work, including the Washington trip, should be at the meeting.

Medical School Candidates Urged To Undergo Test

Candidates for admission to medical school in the fall of 1958 are advised to take the Medical College Admission Test in May.

The Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test for the Association of American Medical Colleges, made the announcement.

Given Twice

These tests, required of applicants by almost every medical college in the country, will be given twice during the current calendar year.

Candidates taking the May test, however, will be able to furnish scores to institutions in early fall, when many medical colleges begin the selection of their next entering class.

Candidates may take the MCAT on Saturday, May 11, or on Tuesday, October 29, at administrations to be held at more than 300 local centers in all parts of the country.

Objective Tests

The MCAT consists of tests of general scholastic ability, a test on understanding of modern society and an achievement test in science.

Copies of the Bulletin of Information, which gives details of registration and administration, as well as sample questions, are available from pre-medical advisers or directly from Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N.J. Completed applications must reach the ETS office by April 27 and October 15, respectively for the May 11 and October 29.

Low-Cost Trips Offered Students During Summer

American students who want to travel this summer have the opportunity of going on a wide variety of low-cost hosteling trips in the U.S. and aboard, announces Mr. Richard Golder, president of the Philadelphia Council, American Youth Hostels, 1520 Race St., Philadelphia.

In addition to the 25 different trips planned by the National Headquarters for small co-educational groups, said Mr. Golder, hundreds of other trips are planned by local councils throughout the United States, most of which cost as little as $1.50 a day.

Inexpensive hiking, cycling and canoeing, with overnight stops in hostels maintained by interested persons and organizations, has long been a popular mode of travel for young people aboard and is attracting many followers in this country.

Trips Start In June

Trips sponsored by the AYH National Headquarters will range in length from four to eleven weeks and will start in late June and early July. Estimated costs range from $135 for a New England trip to $775 for a trip to Switzerland and the Rhine Valley.

V.U. Law School Students Addressed On Social Work

A new development in teaching domestic relations law was introduced to Villanova's School of Law when a social worker addressed law students on the relationship between social work and law.

Sister Ann Joseph, supervisory consultant of intake of Philadelphia Catholic Charities, told the senior law class Jan. 16:

Lawyers May Benefit

"Lawyers have much to gain from knowing what social workers do and how the social worker can often be of help to the lawyer."

Explaining the mutual grounds of social work and law —both aiming to "bring man closer to his ultimate end," Sister Ann Joseph listed in detail the techniques of handling custody, adoption and support cases at Catholic Charities.

Work Area Related

She also stressed the relationship between the social agency's area of work and that of the lawyer and the court.

A member of the Missionary Servants of the Most Blessed Trinity, the speaker is a graduate of St. John's Law School and studied social work at Catholic University of America.

She holds a master's degree in social science from Fordham University and was a member of the Governor's Committee for revision of adoption laws in 1953.

Student Education Association Meets Tomorrow Morning

Mr. George A. Harris, Chairman of the Education Department, has announced that an organization meeting for the Villanova Chapter of the Student Education Association will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in room 215 Mendel.

All students majoring in Education or preparing to teach after graduation are urged to attend.

Villanova Chapter

The Villanova Chapter of the SEA will be the local unit of the state and national SEA, all of which are under the auspices of the National Education Association with its affiliated associations.

An individual member of the SEA chapter is a student member of the NEA with all rights, privileges and responsibilities of an associate member.

This membership also entitles the student to a subscription to the various Educational publications.

Purpose Of SEA

Some of the purposes of the SEA are to promote personal and professional growth of its members and to promote a better understanding of the history, ethics and program of the organized teaching profession.

The association also hopes to encourage participation in work on professional and community problems and to interest capable students in teaching as a career.

Beta Gamma Announces Season Schedule

The Beta Gamma Debating Society opened its spring semester schedule Feb. 1 at Baltimore by bowing to the debaters from Johns Hopkins University in a close match.

Yesterday, the society gave an exhibition debate for the Knights of Columbus in Philadelphia.

Kings Tournament

Mr. Richard McDonough, moderator of the society and a member of the Speech Department has announced that Beta Gamma will participate in the Seventh Annual Debate Tournament at Kings College in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., this Saturday.

In the midst of its heavy schedule the Villanova debaters will go to Brooklyn College for its tenth annual tournament next month.

Regional Next Month

To conclude their tournament activities for March, the debaters will travel to St. Joseph's College for the West Point Regional Tournament.

Miss Boyle Appointed Dean of Women's Office Functions Under Father Kemme

Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, R.N., M.S., a member of the Villanova faculty for the past three years, has been named Dean of Women, announced the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Villanova President.

An instructor in the nursing division, Miss Boyle will succeed the Rev. Joseph Burns, O.S.A., who has been serving as acting Dean of Women since 1955.

The office of Dean of Women will operate under the Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President for Student Affairs, Father Donnellon said. Miss Boyle will be the responsible officer for women students in discipline and housing, social affairs and extra curricular activities.

Responsible For Coeds

This responsibility will apply to all sections and divisions of the University in which women are matriculating, including the evening, summer and Saturday sessions. Many of Villanova's women students are enrolled in its nursing school and more than 2,000 nuns attend the University's summer school program each year.

MISS DOROTHY BOYLE
New Dean of Women

Villanova's new dean of women attended Immacauatta College and was graduated from the Bryn Mawr Hospital School of Nursing in 1941.

Villanova Graduate

A resident of Berwyn, Pa., Miss Boyle received a Bachelor of Science Degree from Villanova in 1953 and was awarded her Master's degree in Education from the University of Pennsylvania in 1956.

A member of the Navy Nurse Corps for three years, she is a member of the American Personnel and Guidance Association, the American College Personnel Association and the Pennsylvania Association of Deans of Women. Miss Boyle is also affiliated with the American Nurses Association and the National League of Nursing.

Opera-Classica Resumes Schedule Moderator to Talk

The Opera-Classics Music Society resumed its activities on February 7 with a lecture given by Mr. Angeline, moderator, entitled "Wagner and the Ring."

The next meeting will be held next Wednesday night at 7:30 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall Compositions by Chopin, Liszt, and Khachaturian will be featured.

On WVIL

The Opera-Classica Club also presents "The Opera House" every Monday and Thursday on Radio Station WVIL. Tomorrow at 10:15, Verdi's "Il Trovatore" with Tebaldi, Del Monaco, and Simionato will be presented. Next week's offering will be "La Favorita" by Donizetti.

For the first five minutes of the program, Mr. Angeline, moderator of the Music Society, will discuss "Why You Hate Opera" in an effort to overcome the prejudice students have against operatic music.

Kirsten At Academy

Tomorrow, Dorothy Kirsten will star in Puccini's "Madam Butterfly" at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia at 8:30. Tickets cost from $1.00 to $4.00.

Tebaldi Recital

Tickets are still available to the Renta Tebaldi recital on March 18 on the Telephone Hour. Opera-Classica is scheduling a field trip to Carnegie Hall for the recital.

A&S Division Lists 10 Courses For First Time

The following courses are now being offered for the first time to the undergraduates in the school of Arts and Sciences.

Cytology is being offered by the Biology Department while the Chemistry Department is offering Student Research in Chemistry.

The English Department is conducting courses in Modern American Poets, Modern American Fiction, and Writing of Poetry. Historical Geology is being given by the Geography Department.

The Padded Cell visits A Basketball Star

By HARRY & GERRY

The last game of Dribbling U's current basketball season had been most gratifying. Playing before 10,000 screaming fans in Morris Fathead Auditorium, old Dribbling had rolled up its 52nd consecutive victory. All this had been due to an unassuming, mild-mannered midget named Wolf Larson, who had dunked in 58 points, slightly below his average.

I entered the uproarious dressing room and approached the private lockers of this fearless All-American.

"Hello Son, I'm Blurp of the Bulletin," I said

Wolf turned from the mirror where he had been combing his hair and padded over to me. He reached up and grabbed my lapels saying in his most amiable, easy-going manner, "I'm sick and tired of youse snoopy reporters." You couldn't help liking this soft spoken youngster, I thought, as he dropped me on the floor. Wolf shuffled back to the mirror and continued combing his locks.

Genuine Sense of Humor

"You played a whale of a game tonight, Wolf," I said, hoping to draw him out of his shyness. He grunted, returned to his locker, and started dressing.

He looked like an athlete alright. His 250 pounds were evenly distributed over his five-foot frame, giving one the impression of a hairy bowling ball.

"Do you think Dribbling will remain unbeaten, Wolf?" I asked. A quizzical expression crossed his pudgy face, then he snickered. I was beginning to realize this boy had a fine sense of humor.

Wolf's short stubby hands returned to the task of tying his elevated combat boots. His deft fingers tore at the laces as he struggled to make a knot.

No Help Wanted

"Here son, let me help you with that," I said, as I bent down to offer my assistance. Suddenly a hairy arm threw me to the floor and in a flash Wolf was sitting on my chest, freely punching me in the face.

"Sorry old chap," I said, as I got up to brush off his pants.

"Sorry old boy," I said, patting him on the shoulder. He bit my hand. Great little competitor, thought I; he never stops battling, even when he's off the court.

This was certainly true, for Wolf Larson was famous for his unscrupulous tactics on the hardwood.

"Is it true that you're such a dirty player?" I asked rather hesitantly. Wolf lit a cigarete and walked over to me. He looked mad.

"Listen Blurp, sure I'm dirty, so what? Little guys like me gotta get all we can, understand—get all we can and kick the hell out of the underdog, that's my policy." Suddenly he ground his cigarette into my forehead with a fiendish giggle. He certainly had a fine sense of humor.

Hang the Little Ones

"Do you have any tips for the up and coming champions of our nation," I asked, relighting his cigarette and handing it to him.

Wolf turned and faced me. I waited with my pencil poised, ready to record some fatherly advice for the youth of the country.

"Hang your little champions!" he screamed.

Just then we were interrupted by Doc Feeble, Dribbling's fine old trainer, who timidly told Wolf that his cab was waiting.

"A last question, Wolf," I said. "Do you think of prolific scoring will ruin the game?" "I certainly hope so," he said with a laugh and headed for the door to the street. I watched as he playfully kicked old Doc Feeble out of the way, then returned to stuff the screaming trainer down the laundry chute. Popularity hadn't seemed to dull his fine sense of humor.

Red Cross Lists Aquatic, Small-Craft Sessions

This summer at camp sites American Red Cross will conduct aquatic and small-craft shools for the 36th season. During intensive ten-day sessions students will receive training in swimming, the use of small craft, the principles of water safety and first aid.

Schools are open to competent swimmers who are 18 or older and are approved as being physically fit by their doctors. Small-craft schools have the additional requirement that prospective students must hold a senior lifesaving certificate or have equivalent training.

Offer Advanced Courses

At aquatic schools, water safety instructors with a background of successful teaching may elect special advanced courses, such as competitive, recreational, and synchronized swimming; also first aid instructor or small-craft instructor. Not all schools offer each elective, however.

Insturctor training may be elected in any two of three courses: boating, canoeing or sailing at small-craft schools. In the third course, students may enroll for basic training. No formal swimming or first aid instruction is offered at small-craft schools.

Applications Available

Tuition ranges from $45 to $50 and includes board, lodging, texts and other materials. Further information and applications may be obtained from local Red Cross chapters or from area offices of the American National Red Cross in Alexandria, Va.; Atlanta, Ga.; St. Louis, Mo., and San Francisco, Calif.

Eight Colleges In Choral Festival; Dance To Follow

For the second straight year glee clubs from neighboring colleges will participate in the collegiate glee clubs' Festival to be held at Villanova on Saturday, March 23.

Glee clubs from eight colleges in the area will take part in this year's program, which is scheduled to begin at 8 p. m.

Returning for this year's performance are glee clubs from Immaculata, Rosemont, Pennsylvania, Temple, St. Joseph's, St. Peter's (Jersey City) and Villanova. A new member to the 1957 Festival is the club from Chestnut Hill College.

More Than 450 Participate

The singing will extend over an estimated two and a half hour period and each club will be al lotted ten minutes for its performance. The program will be climaxed with the singing of two joint numbers by the more than 450 collegiate singers representing the eight clubs.

Of the joint numbers, one will be a sacred hymn and the other a secular piece. Last year's joint selections were "Prayer of Thanksgiving" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Favorite Numbers Featured

Some of the other numbers to be featured in the show will be: "With a Little Bit of Luck" from "My Fair Lady," "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," 'Ava Maria" by Vittoria and several Victor Herbert favorites.

Leaders of the eight clubs aiding in the organization of this year's Festival include: Joan A. Neumann, of Chestnut Hill; Julie Amersbach, of Rosemont; Gail M. Griffin, of Immaculata; Vic Sjostrom, of Temple; Henry A. Shields, of St. Peter's; Stephen J. Giovanisci, of St. Joseph's; Gordon K. Bohn, of Pennsylvania and Charles B. Ross, of Villanova.

Following the singing, a dance has been tentatively planned and will be open to all those attending the Festival. Refreshments will be available throughout the evening.

Villanova In Charge Of Business

Business arrangements are in charge of the Villanova Club and President Charlie Ross has appointed members to three committees including: Business, with Frank Connolly and Vince Cardella; Publicity, with Gene Donohue and Ed Karrer, and Ticket, with Jim Corey. Staging of the Festival will be in charge of Ross.

The collegiate glee clubs' Festival is a unique singing performance, for according to Dr. Harold Gill Reuschlein, Villanova's Dean of Law and director of the Villanova Singers: "Only when the Big Ten universities gather annually in Chicago is there such an assemblage of college singers."

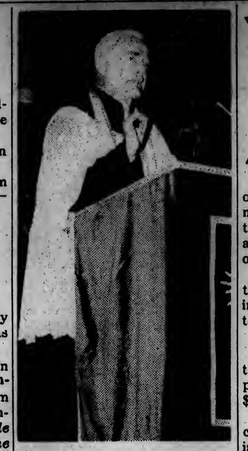
Villanova Library Receives Gifts Of Books, Notes

Villanova University library has received gifts from two of its more famous citizens.

The first a familiar name in Villanova news, Ron Delany, contributed two books given him while at Melbourne for the Olympics. They are Australia's Trade Relations and The Land of the Southern Cross, Australia and are at present on display in the showcases.

The other benefactor is the Rev. George J. McLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Men. His presentation was given to the library as a Christmas gift. It consists of a gilt-edge black frame in which are enclosed two five-dollar National Bank notes from the First National Bank of Avoca, Pa.

The unique feature of these notes is their validating signatures. The first is signed by John F. McLaughlin, Father McLaughlin's father, who was president of the bank from 1907-1929, and the second by Thomas J. McLaughlin, who presided over the bank between 1929 and 1932 and is an uncle of the Villanova priest.



Meets Tomorrow

There will be an important meeting of the French Club tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. in 101 AC. At present, there are about 30 members. However, any student is welcome to join.

The officers are: Ray Cullen and Joe Lynch, President and Vice-President, respectively, and Kenneth Miller a junior English major is the Secretary-Treasurer of the French Club.

Miller is the oldest and the most active member and has been associated with the club for his three years here at Villanova.

First salute to the American flag was ordered by a French admiral as Capt. Paul Jones' "Ranger" sailed into Quiberon Bay, Feb. 14, 1778.

The Rev. John Corley, O.S.A., addresses freshmen and sophomores at the four-day retreat, Jan. 26-30.

Don Nalty, Pre-Law, Re-Enters Villanova

Don Nalty, who was critically injured in an automobile crash last May, has returned to school for the second semester.

The C&F pre-law major was near the end of his junior year when he was injured.

After partly recuperating, he travelled to his New Orleans home in August.

A former diver on the varsity swimming team, Nalty was a star athlete at Georgetown Prep in Washington, D.C., before enrolling here.

Vice president Harry Truman was inaugurated president on April 12, 1945.

Yearbook Drive For Ads Lagging; Ask Student Help

Mike Ford, business manager of the 1957 Belle Air, has announced that this year's advertisement campaign "is not going as well as was anticipated at its outset last fall."

Ford stated that the cooperation of all students "is of utmost importance if the program is to meet with any success."

Three Ad Types

The format consists of three types of subscriptions—sponsor, patron and donation—which cost $100, $50 and $25, respectively.

Ford said commission for solicitors of ten per cent of the total is offered on all old, or previously used advertisements, and a commission of 20 per cent is offered on all new advertisements.

Feb. 28 Deadline

Deadline for all advertising copy is Feb. 28, and all advertisements must be turned in by that time to be included in the yearbook; explained the business manager.

Ford emphasized that this campaign is not limited to Belle Air business staff members or to seniors. Underclassmen are urged to participate.

For further information on the advertisement program, students may contact Ford in the Belle Air office (on the second floor of Dougherty) or Joe Martin (8 O'Dwyer).

Graduate Study Is Offered In Switzerland And Austria

Opportunities for American graduate students to study in Switzerland and Austria during the 1957-1958 school year have been made available by Swiss universities and societies and the Austrian Government. The announcement was made by Kenneth Holland, President of the Institute of International Education.

In Switzerland, the universities of Basel, Bern, Fribourg, Geneva (including the Graduate Institute of Interational Studies), Lausanne, Neuchatel, and Zurich; the Federal Institute of Technology, Zurich; and the School of Economics and Public Administration, St. Gallen all offer tuition grants. These will be supplemented by stipends from 2,000 to 3,500 Swiss francs given by the Swiss educational institutions and societies under the Swiss American Student Exchange. The grants were established in 1927 in appreciation of those given by American colleges and universities for Swiss students.

Fields of study open to American students in Switzerland include architecture, chemistry, engineering, geology, physics, international law, economics, banking and insurance, as well as language and literature.

Austrian Scholarships

Four scholarships for graduate study in Austria during 1957-58 are also offered to American students by the Austrian government.

The scholarships include eight monthly stipends of 2,600 Austrian schillings (approximately $100), enough to cover room and board as well as tuition and incidental expenses. One travel payment of 1,400 Austrian shillings(approximately $55) will be offered. Grantees will be responsible for all other expenses, including round-trip travel. Applicants may, if eligible, apply for Fulbright travel grants to cover the costs of international travel.

Study In All Fields

The awards may be used for study at an Austrian university or institution of higher learning in all fields, including history, social sciences, language, literature, and other liberal arts subjects.

Eligibility requirements for both the Swiss and Austrian grants include: U. S. citizenship; bachelor's degree by date of departure; demonstrated academic ability and capacity for independent study; good moral character, personality and adaptability; proficiency in the German language; and good health. Preference will be given to candidates who have not already studied abroad.

March 1 Last Day

March 1, 1957 is the closing date for the competition, which is open to unmarried American citizens.

Application blanks may be secured from the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th Street, New York 21, New York.

First formal celebration of Lincoln's birth was held by Congress in Washington Feb. 12, 1866.

DPM Dinner Dance Date Disclosed; Denison Due, Too

DPM members and their dates will be dancing to the music of Lou Denison and his band Saturday night at Kostick's night club in 69th street at the fraternity's annual dinner dance.

It was announced last week at the monthly DPM meeting that Kostick's had been chosen for the occasion. It is a well-known night club at 69th and Marshall rd., and will house DPM in its upstairs club room.

A turkey dinner will be served to the dancers. The price will be $7.25.

Tickets may be purchased from fraternity officials for the affair.

Council Reinstates Yearbook

The BELLE AIR Yearbook was restored to its former voting membership at the last meeting of the Student Council. The organization's vote had been suspended for one school term because of an infraction of the Council's by-laws.

The Spirit Committee of the Council was included in three motions at this meeting. The first gave the Committee supervisory powers over the selection and training of cheerleaders. Secondly, Council approval was sought and obtained for a student trip run by the Spirit Committee to the IC-4A Track Meet in New York on March 2.

Another motion passed provided for the presentation of merit awards to deserving members of the Committee. Candidates would be chosen by the Chairman of the Committee and approved by its moderator, the Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A.

Joe Martin, Chairman of the Council, reported on the workings of the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia. At a recent organizational meeting, its work for the year was outlined.

Nine Subjects Discussed

Its schedule will include the discussion and exchange of ideas on nine subjects. Those to be discussed at the next meeting are: the procuring and price of bands in this area, student elections and the possibility of obtaining student discounts for member colleges from local merchants.

It "corners" with all the solid assurance of an honest-to-goodness sports car. Chevy doesn't throw its weight around on turns because it carries its pounds in the right places.

Villanova Forum Presents Dr. Yves Simon, March 14

The Villanova Forum will present its second speaker of the season Thursday evening, March 14.

The renowned political philosopher, Dr. Yves Simon of the University of Chicago will be the main speaker.

Dr. Simon's topic is not known at the present time but it is expected to pertain to activities in his major philosophy field, announced Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, Forum moderator.

Watkin First Speaker

The Forum, in its first appearance of the academic year in December, presented Mr. Edward L. Watkin, world-famous British philosopher and aesthetician who delivered a lecture on "Art and Culture."

Subject Of Speech

Discussing Baroque architecture, Mr. Watkin informed his audience in Commodore John Barry Lounge with a perception of the past, present and future of religion edifices.

Mr. Bruderle said it has not been decided where the March 14 lecture will be held.

"Man In The Grey Flannel Toga" To Romp T&T Stage

Joe Redmond, president of the Turf and Tinsel society, campus musical comedy organization, has disclosed that its forthcoming annual production will be "The Man in the Gray Fannel Toga". May 9, 10 and 11 are the dates set for performances.

For the first time, the book, music and lyrics have been written by a student. Bobby Schiller, of Villanovan's" fame, has composed a musical comedy set in ancient Greece, peopled by gods and goddesses.

Jack Kelly is directing the rehearsals now in progress most evenings in the Field House.

Chancery Office Approves Monthly Dialogue Mass

For the first time at Villanova, the Chaplain has received permission from the Chancery Office in Philadelphia to say a Dialogue Mass.

This Mass is being offered for the members of the lay faculty and will be held on the first Thursday of each month at 10:30 a.m. in the Chapel until the end of this semester.

Unique Sacrifice

The first of these Masses will be said on March 7 by Rev. William Farrell, O.S.A., Assistant to the Chaplain.

A Dialogue Mass is unique in that the congregation answers in the place of the server and in this case they will also say the "Gloria" and the "Credo."

Open To Faculty Only

By order of the Archbishop's Office, this Mass is open only to the members of the Villanova faculty.

Those members of the faculty who are interested should contact Mr. Bernard F. Reiley of the History Department.

Student Council Views

by Joe Martin, SC Pres.

All of us are glad to see some of the Student Council proposals of first semester begin to appear in Dougherty Hall. There will be more than candy and cigarettes to intercept the passerby on the first floor now. The trophy cases that we saw come in during exam time are now full of things to brag about.

Some of us have never been lucky enough to see all the awards and prizes that are on display in the new cases now; there are even more such honors yet to be seen. One Council member learned from Father O'Donnell, who has been in charge of securing the cases and arranging the displays, that he hoped we would be able to eventually get everything on display.

The long awaited bulletin boards are here. At last we will have a nice clean spot where class news can easily be found and read. No longer will Messrs. Sullivan, Mulcahy and MacGillivray hear the old familiar excuse for missing class meetings. Notices will no longer be covered by pleas for rides to Podunk.

Eve Kenny, the 16-year-old girl who was injured in an automobile accident in front of Villanova last semester, is doing well. Just before I went home for semester vacation I received a letter from Mr. Kenny, the girl's father. I have never read a nicer letter. Since it was intended for the student body, I want to use this column to pass his words on to you . . .

"On behalf of Mrs. Kenny and myself I wish to thank you for your wonderful kindness and solicitude in connection with my daughter, Eve, who was injured in the accident at Villanova . . .

"I shall never forget your wonderful charity—your prayers, phone calls, visits to the hospital, and I know that Eve, too, is deeply grateful . . .

"God has heard these prayers and has spared our beloved daughter from a tragic death. If there is one thing good about this unfortunate incident it is the great comfort that we have had, and will always have, from the realization of how much love and human kindness was poured out in behalf of this pitifully injured little girl. In this no one surpassed the great charity of . . . the wonderful boys at Villanova.

"I want to especially tender our deep gratitude to the boys who gave their blood that Eve might live, and in this I want to include many who would have done so, but, fortunately were not needed. All that I can say is that their sacrifice will be remembered by me when I look upon the face of Him who first gave His blood for us, and I know that Eve, too, will not fail to think of, and to pray for them.

"Eve is coming along very well, but she still has a long way to go, so please keep up your prayers for her."

In a short while the election of two new members of the Student Council will take place. Here, the Class of 1960 will get its first opportunity to select leaders in their class. The orientation program this fall indicated that the freshmen are a fine class, so that picking two men to represent them will be no easy task. I hope that our new Villanovans will nominate and select their candidates carefully. Good men will benefit the Class of 1960, and the Student Council can always use representatives who are willing to work for Villanova.

IC4-A Tickets Now On Sale

Five hundred special student tickets for the IC4A Indoor Track Championships go on sale today in the snack bar from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The meet will be held at Madison Square Garden in New York on Saturday, March 2.

A special student section of tickets was obtained through the Spirit Committee, the organization sponsoring the excursion.

Tickets Sold Daily

Tickets will also be sold daily in the Field House Ticket Office as well as in the snack bar.

This year Villanova will field virtually the same team that came within two points of tying Manhattan last year, even though we captured five first places.

Will Hold Rally

Prior to the meet, a gaint rally will be held to honor Villanova's Olympic stars, Ron Delany, Phil Reavis and Charley Jenkins, and to salute Villanova's track, basketball and swimming teams. In particular it will encourage the Wildcat track team to bring home the IC4A Track Championship to Villanova, the center of collegiate track.

ENGLISH MAJORS

All English majors are urged to attend a meeting tomorrow morning to discuss the possibility of the formation of a campus literary club.

Interested junior and senior English majors will assemble in 204 C and F during the Activities Period at 10:30 a.m.

John A. Moritz Appointed V.U. Placement Director

The newest addition to the administration is Mr. John A. Moritz, Placement Director. Mr. Moritz succeeds Mr. James Redfern, now studying for his Doctorate at Temple University.

Mr. Moritz was born in Philadelphia and attended Roman Catholic High School. He received his Bachelor of Arts Degree from the University of Pennsylvania and later a Masters Degree from the same institution.

High School Teacher

Mr. Moritz taught at his high school alma mater from 1919 until 1938; while there he was Chairman of the Science Department.

In 1938, the new administrator joined the faculty of St. Joseph's College High School as a mathematics and science teacher. He remained there until last Dec. when he contracted to replace Mr. Redfern. Mr. Moritz also taught in the Philadelphia Diocesan summer schools for 11 summers.

He was elected to the Phi Delta Kappa, a professional teachers fraternity and is a member of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Other Activities

He has also served on the Evaluating Committee of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and is a member of the Catholic Science Teachers Association of Philadelphia.

Mr. Moritz is a resident of Philadelphia, married, and has one child—a daughter.

Saucers

of his body, nor pictures of the plane crash were released to the press although Major Donald Keyhoe, of whom I shall say more later, states that "there was one detail the Air Force preferred not to make public, though there was nothing mysterious about the (Mantell's) wound."

From this point Air Force Intelligence created Project "Sign" to investigate under top secrecy. After this, sightings began to increase rapidly, not only from the United States, but from all parts of the world.

Project Bluebook

In 1952 Project "Sign" was enlarged and changed to Project "Bluebook." Its staff, already made up of Intelligence Officers, rocket experts, aeronautical engineers, an astrophysicist and top scientists, was expanded to hold more experts, most notably one Dr. Donald H. Menzel, professor of Astrophysics at Harvard University.

After digging fairly deeply into the subject from both the pro and con aspects, one definite conclusion has come to the fore. Flying Saucers do exist!

Inter-Planetary Craft

Inasmuch as they have been sighted at speeds close to 17,000 miles per hour many times and in different places, the theory that they are of English, Russian or even American manufacture does not hold much water. At such a speed they might very easily have come from another planet outside our solar system. Plantier's theory would also support this claim.

And finally as the capping point, remember that these reports that I have dealt with are those of recognized men of science and those many reports implied to be related with the problem, are still classified "top secret," E.g., the Tremonton, Utah or "U" pictures mentioned at the start of this writing.

The second of two articles on flying saucers will appear in next week's Villanovan.

Melpar to Interview Engineers, Physicists and Mathematicians

One Of Nation's Leading Electronic Firms Offers Unique Opportunities

Mechanical and electronic engineers, as well as those majoring in physics and math will want to investigate the unusual opportunities for rapid professional growth and advancement offered by Melpar, Inc., one of the Nation's leading electronic research and development organizations.

A subsidiary of Westinghouse Air Brake Company, Melpar is now engaged in a program of expansion involving both increases in staff and facilities. The organization's headquarters laboratory is located in Fairfax County, Virginia, only 10 miles from Washington, D. C.

No Formal Training Period At Melpar

The college or university graduate who joins Melpar is not required to undergo a formal training program. Instead he immediately becomes a member of a project group and is assigned to work with an experienced engineer whose guidance and assistance enable him to advance rapidly. Members of Melpar project groups gain experience in all phases of engineering problems by free and frequent interchange of ideas during group meetings. Such experience is valuable in leading to eventual managerial responsibility.

Financial Assistance Offered by Melpar for Graduate Work

The list of universities located near Melpar laboratories that offer graduate and undergraduate courses in engineering subjects includes: Georgetown University, George Washington University, American University, Catholic University, University of Maryland, University of Virginia, Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Northeastern University, and Boston University. Melpar offers financial assistance for study at these distinguished schools.

Melpar Locales Offer Fine Living Conditions

Melpar's R & D operations are centered near and in Washington, D. C. and Boston, Mass. Both are rich in cultural and educational facilities. The Washington, D. C. area in which Melpar's headquarters laboratory is located is within easy driving range of beaches, lakes, mountains, as well as other recreational and scenic points. The climate allows outdoor recreation 215 days of the year. Fine homes and apartments in all price ranges are readily available.

Melpar's Boston area plants allow engineers to enjoy the pleasant tempo of New England living coupled with Boston's splendid cultural and educational advantages. Melpar pays re-location expenses.

Booklets Available

An attractive, fully-illustrated booklet describing living conditions prevailing in the Washington, D. C. area can be obtained from your campus Placement Officer.

Performance Determines Advancement At Melpar

At Melpar there is no waiting period for "automatic" advancement. Instead, an engineer, regardless of his age or tenure, may move ahead as rapidly as his skill and performance dictate. Each engineer's achievement is reviewed at least twice a year. In this manner engineers deserving advancement can be quickly "spotted" and promoted. As soon as an engineer is ready for more complex responsibilities they are given him.

Qualified Graduates Offered Paid Inspection Trips

After a personal interview on their campus, qualified candidates may be invited to visit Melpar's headquarters laboratory near Washington, D. C. at Company expense. Information on opportunities available for graduates together with details on living conditions in the Washington, D. C. area is available by simply writing: Mr. William Schaub, Melpar, Inc., 3000 Arlington Blvd., Falls Church, Virginia.

Company Policies Geared To Engineer's Needs

Melpar's personnel policies emphasize individual consideration, objective treatment, and opportunity based on ability. Specifically, these policies are implemented by promotion from within, wherever possible, merit reviews that are truly meaningful, work assignments in keeping with the engineer's most obvious capabilities.

In addition, of course, the Company makes available to each of its staff members a wide program of company benefits, including group insurance with life, sickness, hospitalization and major medical expense features, a retirement plan, and provides for paid sick leave, vacations and holidays.

Salaries at Melpar compare most favorably with those of the industry as a whole.

Many University Courses Offered At Melpar's Main Lab

Melpar staff members, both holders and non-holders of degrees, may take advantage of the many fully-accredited courses in engineering subjects which are offered at Melpar's headquarters laboratory.

Melpar Expanding Steadily Every Year

Founded in 1945, Melpar has doubled in size every 18 months for the past 11 years. Recently it completed erection of a complete new headquarters laboratory near the Nation's Capital, and is presently making substantial additions to its Watertown, Mass. laboratory (6 miles west of Boston), and to its research department in Boston.

Located on a 44-acre landscaped tract, Melpar's main laboratories encompass over 265,000 square feet under a single roof. Fully air-conditioned, they are equipped with every facility. In addition to the new, ultra-modern headquarters plant, Melpar maintains additional facilities in Arlington, Virginia, Boston and Watertown, Massachusetts, encompassing a total of 460,000 square feet.

Challenging Openings Available At Melpar In Many Fields

Engineers who join Melpar may choose their assignments from one or more of these challenging fields:

Flight Simulators • Radar and Countermeasures • Network Theory • Systems Evaluation • Microwave Techniques • Analog & Digital Computers • Magnetic Tape Handling • UHF, VHF, or SHF Receivers • Packaging Electronic Equipment • Pulse Circuitry • Microwave Filters • Servomechanisms • Subminiaturization • Electro-Mechanical Design • Small Mechanisms • Quality Control & Test Engineering.

Members of Melpar's research and engineering staff are ably supported by many designers, draftsmen and technicians. Coordinated supporting services include a chemistry laboratory, a quality control group, an environmental test laboratory, a number of shops, and other specialized facilities.

V. U. Students Speak:

Three Villanova Students Quoted On The Suez Issue In Collegiate Opinion Poll

Three Villanova students are quoted in this week's Associated Collegiate Press poll of opinion on the nation's campuses on the Suez Canal issue.

Comment was varied and vociferous in many quarters when England and France landed armed forces in the Suez canal area recently. Many people abhorred the Anglo-French action, but felt the United States should have stood by its allies. Others thought France and England should have notified us of their intended action and due to this breach of faith we were justified in supporting United Nations action against France and England.

To get the general reaction of the collegiate public on this issue the ACP asked this question of a representative national crosssection of college students:

Do you think the U.S. has erred in relation to its Foreign Policy in the Suez Canal, Egypt, and the Near East crisis? Why?

The results in percentages:

	Men	Women	Total
Yes, has erred	38	32	36
No, hasn't er'ed	42	31	38
Undecided	20	37	26

Need Strict Policy

By far, the overwhelming majority of those who believe the United States has erred, hold the opinion that much of the trouble is due to our failure to adopt a strict policy, which bothers our allies, causes us to lose prestige, and permits the communists to fill the power vacuum. Some students feel the Aswan dam issue started the squabble. Others blame Secretary of State John Foster Dulles for the trouble. And some think we failed our allies. Here are several typical comments:

"Withdrawing the Aswan dam support and a lack of action in the Suez crisis has just made the situation worse," is the feeling of a Villanova University freshman, while a freshman coed attending Barnard College (New York City) feels we "should have wholeheartedly supported Britian and France."

A Villanova sophomore believes our "inconsistent foreign policy" helped give rise to the issue. And a sophomore at the Bernard Baruch School of Business, City College of New York, expresses his opinion in this manner: "Our foreign policy has no courage of conviction in any direction."

Support of action within the United Nations is much in favor with those students believing the United States has not erred in its policy and actions in the Suez crisis. Some feel we did the wise thing by not getting too involved, and others think we did about the only thing reasonably possible to do.

A different approach is taken by an Ohio University (Athens) sophomore who feels that we did the right thing, "because it has gained support of many of the Near East countries," and a sophomore coed of Christian College (Columbia, Mo.) says simply: "I believe in our nation's leaders."

A Villanova senior takes one of the two general positions held by students undecided on the question as he says: "Only the people in the future will know." A senior coed attending Southeastern State College (Durant, Okla.) expresses the other position in this manner: "I do not fully understand the situation."

"Our actions show the world we want peaceful solutions to these problems," says a freshman at the Rochester Institute of Technology (Rochester, N.Y.)

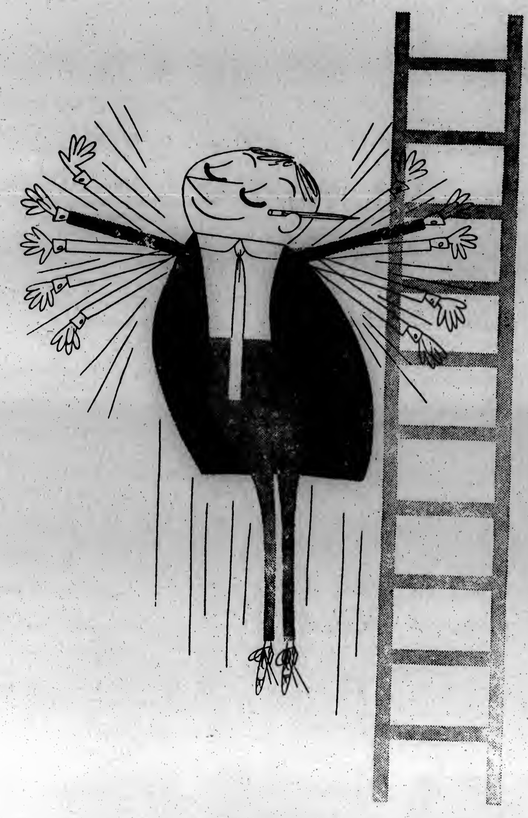
'My King and I' Theme of IC Soph Cotillion

The Sophomore Cotillion heads the Immaculata social calendar for the spring semester. The formal dance will be held on Friday at the school.

The underclassmen will have as their theme "My King and I," while dancing to the music of Lester Lanin.

The Villanova Glee Club is scheduled to appear on the Immaculata campus Feb. 28.

An informal social has been scheduled for March 1.



Villanova In Third Place For Sportsmanship Award

Villanova is currently in third place in the contest for the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia Sportsmanship Award.

Recently the judges complimented Villanova for the fine school spirit shown thus far and for the courtesy given officials and opposing teams. They chided a few Villanova students for their occasional ungentlemenly action, especially after unfavorable calls.

Judging the local colleges for the award are Charles Gibley, Penn Police; Stanley Sakolas, Phila. Police and sportswriters Bob Vetrone, Bulletin and Herb Good, Inquirer.

The Villanova student council was highly instrumental in the enactment of the award. Pat Nicholson, Spirit Committee chairman, urged students to cooperate and help bring the award to Villanova.

ENGINEERS and SCIENTISTS

we'll be on the campus February 18-19 to discuss your future at Boeing

...where you can rise to the top

Right now you're in the process of making one of the most important decisions of your life.

Your decision is important to us, too, because we are interested in engineers and scientists who want to get ahead. We're coming to the campus to give you the facts you need to judge whether Boeing can help you reach the goal you have in mind.

The fact that Boeing is an "engineers' company" is important to your success. At Boeing, you'd work with, and for, engineers—men who talk your language, understand and appreciate your work.

Boeing encourages graduate study, reimbursing full tuition and fees, plus an additional amount for incidentals. Every six months, each Boeing engineer is given a merit review—a personal opportunity for recognition and advancement. The company's steady, rapid growth assures plenty of opportunities to move ahead. At Boeing, engineers hold positions right to the top.

Another advantage: Boeing assignments are interesting. You'll work on such famous projects as the 707, America's first jet transport; the intercontinental B-52, the nation's principal long-range jet bomber; the supersonic BOMARC guided missile, and top-secret programs that probe beyond the frontiers of the known. At Boeing, you'll be in a young, expanding industry, one with its major growth still ahead.

So whether you plan a career in civil, mechanical, electrical, aeronautical or industrial engineering, physics or mathematics (or related fields), drop in for a person-to-person discussion about your future at Boeing.

Jim Smith — From 1,000 Point Club to Marines

By JACK CURTIN

Back in 1950, when the greatest basketball player in Villanova history and one of the game's all-time stars, Paul Arizin, closed out his career with All-American honors, there was a special two page section in the Villanovan praising this man who had carried the Wildcat name so highly into sportsworld prominence. Equally stressed with his outstanding abilities was his immense importance to the team—his intangible contributions to each victory.

Two weeks back, Villanova lost another court standout. He was no All-American, nor was he even particularly famous. He was instead a man whose greatness lay in his immeasurable contributions to the team. This was Jim Smith, Villanova captain.

There was perhaps a tendency to underrate Jim Smith on the Villanova campus. Everyone knew he was a fine basketbal player but in many cases his true value was not recognized. However, in the end, when he closed out his Villanova career, he left like a true champion. Although all Wildcat fans hated to see Smitty go, the were proud and happy to see him go the way he did.

Farewell to Villanova

Smith played his last game in a Villanova uniform on Jan. 30 when the Mainliners crushed Drexel in the University Field House. This was the game in which he became the sixth Villanovan ever to score over 1,000 points as he led all scorers with 24 points. It was a great game with which to end a career, but it is not the one which will be remembered as Smitty's last. Jim Smith's farewell to Villanova had come four nights earlier.

The record reads Villanova 95 - Seton Hall 92, but those who saw the game won't remember the score, they'll remember Smitty. After the Wildcats had come back from an eight point deficit with two minutes to go and thrown the game into overtime, the sandy-haired court captain, who had scored the two points that tied the score, took charge. He scored eight points in the overtime period and put on a one man freeze reminiscent of the fabulous Bob Cousy. For his performance in this contest,

Jim Smith, Villanova's basketball team captain for one and one-half seasons, poses with his fiance, Miss Barbara Sullivan, during the Villanova-Drexel game last week.

Smith was chosen "play-of-the-week" by the Philadelphia sports writers.

A native Philadelphian, Smith played his high school ball at West Catholic. He was one of the four members of that school's 1952 city championship team to play for Big Five colleges.

Although Smitty loved Villanova when he graduated it wasn't always the school of his choice and the story of how he entered the college is an interesting one. Upon graduation from high school he matriculated at Loyola College in California. Later he decided to return to the Philadelphia area for his education. Since most schools in the area weren't receptive to second semester students it looked as if he would have to wait a year. Then his high school coach referred him to "Maje" MacDonald, Villanova freshman coach, and the rest is history.

Smith broke into the Widlcat line-up as soon as he became eligible in February of his second year and led them out of a five game losing streak in his first game. His fierce competitive spirit and all-around play were recognized by coach Al Severance and he was named captain in his junior year. He was the only Villanovan named to the all-city team that year.

As captain this season Smitty led the team to a seven won, eight lost season including two major upsets over Indiana and Seton Hall. Averaging close to 13 points a game this season, he finished his career with 1,014 points to join a select group of Villanova greats. The night he played his last game on the Villanova campus Smith received a standing ovation as his thousandth point, on a long jump, dropped through the hoop. It was well deserved.

A Top Student

The achievement of Jimmy Smith didn't come to an end on the basketball court either. He was one of the top men scholastically in the Liberal Arts school in which he was a philosophy major. Last year he was the onl Villanova athlete named to the National Collegiate Who's Who.

Now that he has graduated Jim intends to go into the Marine Corps Intelligence Service. Someday he hopes to hold a diplomatic post with the United States State Department. Someplace in this crowded schedule he has to find time for a wedding, for he became engaged to Barbara Sullivan of Overbrook Hills during he Christmas vacation.

Jimmy Smith, athlete and scholar, is gone from Villanova. He has left behind an excellent list of accomplishments and his name will remain in the record books and hearts of all Wildcat fans. Smitty was a man of whom the University could be proud. Villanova will miss him.

Jumbo Seeks Collegiate Track Title

By BILL VINCENT

Villanova's track team, having opened its 1957 New York indoor track season successfully, will compete in the New York A.C. meet this Saturday. The following three weekends the Wildcats will compete in the National AAU, the IC4A, and the New York K. of C. meets.

Last year Villanova won four championships in the New York A.C. Games and broke one world record. Charley Jenkins established the record by winning the 500 yard run in 56.4 seconds. Other winners were George Sydnor in the 60 yard dash, Ron Delany in the mile, and the mile relay team.

The following week, a year ago, Villanova placed second behind the New York Pioneer Club in the National A.A.U. Indoor Championships. In this meet Delany captured the mile-run, Jenkins, Gene Maliff, Sydnor, and Al Peterson combined to win the Sprint Medley Relay, and Don Bragg won the pole vault by jumping 15'1" to become the first collegian to clear 15 feet indoors.

The victors included Jenkins in the 600 yard run, Bragg in the pole vault, Delany in the mile, Phil Reavis in the high jump, and the mile relay team.

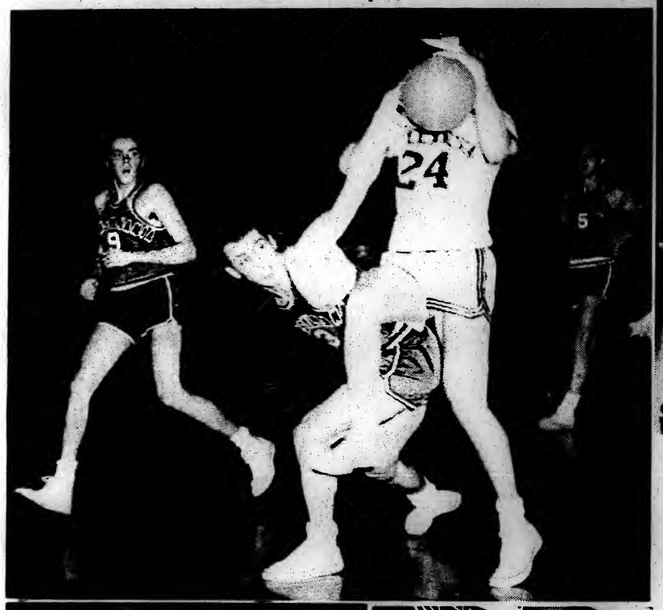
Bragg Did 15'5"

In the New York Knights of Columbus Meet last year the Wildcats won five championships. They were Delany in the mile again, Sydnor in the 60 yard dash, Jenkins in the 600 yard run, the mile relay team, and Bragg who became the second highest pole-vaulter in history by clearing 15'15".

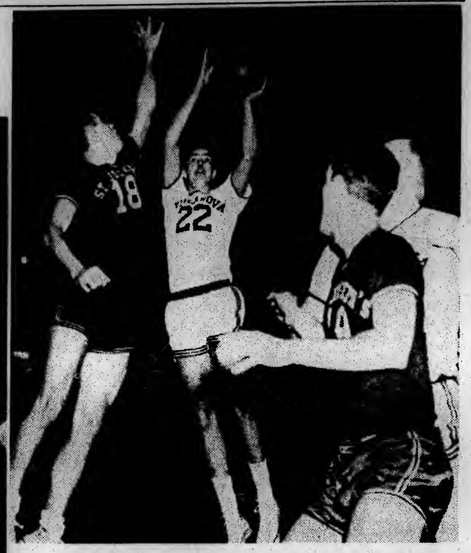
Reavis And Stead Take High Jump

Ron Delany, Phil Reavis, and Charlie Stead were the only Villanovans able to cop first place honors in the New York Millrose Games on Feb. 9. In a meet in which two world records fell and the second highest pole vault in history was achieved by two men, the Wildcats were far below par.

Delany, still undefeated on the indoor banked boards, easily won the Wanamaker Mile for the second straight year. Ron's 4:06.7 clocking enabled him to beat fellow four-minute miler Lazslo Tabori by ten yards. The victory enabled the Dublin flash to retire the Wanamaker trophy.



Reavis, Stead Tie



Reavis and Stead tied for top honors in the high jump competition with leaps of 6'8". Reavis has yet to lose a contest this season although he has been tied by Stead, a newcomer to the high jump, twice.

Otherwise, Villanovans had to be content with lesser honors. Defending champion Charlie Jenkins was upset in the 600 as was the previously undefeated mile relay team, due to a slip on the first turn, losing valuable yardage which the Wildcats just Dayton center John Palmer (31) is caught in the act of fouling Tommy Brennan (32) as the two men go up for a rebound. Awaiting the outcome are Villanova's Ken Harrison (5) and the Flyer's Al Sickling (22) and Carmen Riazzi (23).

Wildcats Kenny Harrison (5) and Tom Brennan (32) battle Dayton's John Palmer (31) under the boards for a rebound. Dayton Captain Carmen Riazzi (23) is visible in the backround.

Jim Fahey fights for a rebound during the Drexel game, which Villanova won, 87-66. It was the first game played in the Field House this season, and increased Villanova's home court winning streak to 73 games.

Jim Smith — From 1,000 Point Club to Marines

By JACK CURTIN

Back in 1950, when the greatest basketball player in Villanova history and one of the game's all-time stars, Paul Arizin, closed out his career with All-American honors, there was a special two page section in the Villanovan praising this man who had carried the Wildcat name so highly into sportsworld prominence. Equally stressed with his outstanding abilities was his immense importance to the team—his intangible contributions to each victory.

Two weeks back, Villanova lost another court standout. He was no All-American, nor was he even particularly famous. He was instead a man whose greatness lay in his immeasurable contributions to the team. This was Jim Smith, Villanova captain.

There was perhaps a tendency to underrate Jim Smith on the Villanova campus. Everyone knew he was a fine basketbal player but in many cases his true value was not recognized. However, in the end, when he closed out his Villanova career, he left like a true champion. Although all Wildcat fans hated to see Smitty go, the were proud and happy to see him go the way he did.

Farewell to Villanova

Smith played his last game in a Villanova uniform on Jan. 30 when the Mainliners crushed Drexel in the University Field House. This was the game in which he became the sixth Villanovan ever to score over 1,000 points as he led all scorers with 24 points. It was a great game with which to end a career, but it is not the one which will be remembered as Smitty's last. Jim Smith's farewell to Villanova had come four nights earlier.

The record reads Villanova 95 - Seton Hall 92, but those who saw the game won't remember the score, they'll remember Smitty. After the Wildcats had come back from an eight point deficit with two minutes to go and thrown the game into overtime, the sandy-haired court captain, who had scored the two points that tied the score, took charge. He scored eight points in the overtime period and put on a one man freeze reminiscent of the fabulous Bob Cousy. For his performance in this contest,

Jim Smith, Villanova's basketball team captain for one and one-half seasons, poses with his fiance, Miss Barbara Sullivan, during the Villanova-Drexel game last week.

Smith was chosen "play-of-the-week" by the Philadelphia sports writers.

A native Philadelphian, Smith played his high school ball at West Catholic. He was one of the four members of that school's 1952 city championship team to play for Big Five colleges.

Although Smitty loved Villanova when he graduated it wasn't always the school of his choice and the story of how he entered the college is an interesting one. Upon graduation from high school he matriculated at Loyola College in California. Later he decided to return to the Philadelphia area for his education. Since most schools in the area weren't receptive to second semester students it looked as if he would have to wait a year. Then his high school coach referred him to "Maje" MacDonald, Villanova freshman coach, and the rest is history.

Smith broke into the Widlcat line-up as soon as he became eligible in February of his second year and led them out of a five game losing streak in his first game. His fierce competitive spirit and all-around play were recognized by coach Al Severance and he was named captain in his junior year. He was the only Villanovan named to the all-city team that year.

As captain this season Smitty led the team to a seven won, eight lost season including two major upsets over Indiana and Seton Hall. Averaging close to 13 points a game this season, he finished his career with 1,014 points to join a select group of Villanova greats. The night he played his last game on the Villanova campus Smith received a standing ovation as his thousandth point, on a long jump, dropped through the hoop. It was well deserved.

A Top Student

The achievement of Jimmy Smith didn't come to an end on the basketball court either. He was one of the top men scholastically in the Liberal Arts school in which he was a philosophy major. Last year he was the onl Villanova athlete named to the National Collegiate Who's Who.

Now that he has graduated Jim intends to go into the Marine Corps Intelligence Service. Someday he hopes to hold a diplomatic post with the United States State Department. Someplace in this crowded schedule he has to find time for a wedding, for he became engaged to Barbara Sullivan of Overbrook Hills during he Christmas vacation.

Jimmy Smith, athlete and scholar, is gone from Villanova. He has left behind an excellent list of accomplishments and his name will remain in the record books and hearts of all Wildcat fans. Smitty was a man of whom the University could be proud. Villanova will miss him.

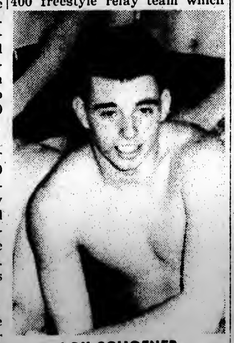
Swimmers Win Number Five By Crushing Seton Hall; Relay Team Sets Record

The Wildcat swimmers of Coach Ed Giesz traveled to South Orange, New Jersey on Saturday and returned with their fifth win of the season, swamping the host Seton Hall team by a lopsided 59-27 margin. The Mainliners won seven of the ten events on the card and set a pool record in the 400-freestyle relay while downing the Pirates.

Captain Lou Schoener captured first place in the 200-yard backstroke and coasted to second place behind Lou Pinto in the 50 yard freestyle. Pinto also swam a leg on the winning 400 yard freestyle relay.

Couig, Gregory Win

Senior Don Couig took another Wildcat first, winning the 200 breaststroke in 2:46. He was followed closely as teammate Larry Palacio captured his second place of the day, having finished behind Jim Gregory in the 200-yard butterfly breaststroke. Gregory's winning time was 2:45.2.



Sophomore Ken McGillivray coasted to an easy victory in the 440 yard freestyle event after lapping his opponent, winning in the comparatively slow time of 6:30.6.

Villanovans also finished one-two in the 220-yard freestyle. Nelson Baker won in 2:49.3 and was followed across the finish line by sophomore Joe Lynch.

Seton Hall swimmers took first in both the 100 yard freestyle and the 400 yard medley relay and managed to outscore Villanova in the diving for their only victories of the afternoon. third place went to Villanovans, Donnelly and Rumberger in the 100, and Rafferty and Gilholl in the diving.

Relay Team Sets Record

The best performance of the afternoon was turned in by the 400 freestyle relay team which added the seventh first place to the scoring column. The team of John Flynn, Denny Rinkacs, Lou Pinto, and Bob Pinto won the event and set a new pool record of 4:08.2.

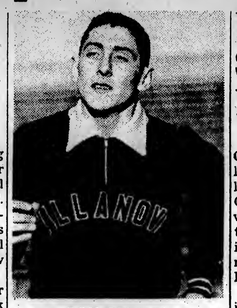
The Wildcats will meet P.M.C. this afternoon in the field house with the hopes of capturing their sixth win.

Delany Defeats Tabori; 'Cats Prepare for IC4A's

Jumbo Seeks Collegiate Track Title

By BILL VINCENT



Villanova's track team, having opened its 1957 New York indoor track season successfully, will compete in the New York A.C. meet this Saturday. The following three weekends the Wildcats will compete in the National AAU, the IC4A, and the New York K. of C. meets.

Last year Villanova won four championships in the New York A.C. Games and broke one world record. Charley Jenkins established the record by winning the 500 yard run in 56.4 seconds. Other winners were George Sydnor in the 60 yard dash, Ron Delany in the mile, and the mile relay team.

The following week, a year ago, Villanova placed second behind the New York Pioneer Club in the National A.A.U. Indoor Championships. In this meet Delany captured the mile-run, Jenkins, Gene Maliff, Sydnor, and Al Peterson combined to win the Sprint Medley Relay, and Don Bragg won the pole vault by jumping 15'1" to become the first collegian to clear 15 feet indoors.

Second In IC4A Meet

The following Saturday a year ago Jim Elliott's trackmen

placed second behind George Eastment's Manhattan squad in the IC4A Meet. Villanova won five championships to become the first school to win five first places in the history of the meet. The victors included Jenkins in the 600 yard run, Bragg in the pole vault, Delany in the mile, Phil Reavis in the high jump, and the mile relay team.

Bragg Did 15'5"

In the New York Knights of Columbus Meet last year the Wildcats won five championships. They were Delany in the mile again, Sydnor in the 60 yard dash, Jenkins in the 600 yard run, the mile relay team, and Bragg who became the second highest pole-vaulter in history by clearing 15'15".

Reavis And Stead Take High Jump

Ron Delany, Phil Reavis, and Charlie Stead were the only Villanovans able to cop first place honors in the New York Millrose Games on Feb. 9. In a meet in which two world records fell and the second highest pole vault in history was achieved by two men, the Wildcats were far below par.

Delany, still undefeated on the indoor banked boards, easily won the Wanamaker Mile for the second straight year. Ron's 4:06.7 clocking enabled him to beat fellow four-minute miler Lazslo Tabori by ten yards. The victory enabled the Dublin flash to retire the Wanamaker trophy.

Reavis, Stead Tie

Reavis and Stead tied for top honors in the high jump competition with leaps of 6'8". Reavis has yet to lose a contest this season although he has been tied by Stead, a newcomer to the high jump, twice.

Otherwise, Villanovans had to be content with lesser honors. Defending champion Charlie Jenkins was upset in the 600 as was the previously undefeated mile relay team, due to a slip on the first turn, losing valuable yardage which the Wildcats just

Wildcats To Play Fordham Tonight, Richmond Next

Scranton On Campus Mon.

Three games in six days face the hard pressed Villanova basketball team. Beginning tonight with a game against Fordham at New York the Wildcats meet Richmond Saturday night at the Palestra and then travel upstate to play Scranton University at Scranton Monday night.

Fordham will be looking for revenge after last year's double overtime loss to the Mainliners at the Palestra. They have Jim Cunningham back who set a new sophomore scoring record for the Rams and has been the high point producer again this year as a junior. Cunningham was picked on some All-America teams before he even played a varsity game.

Returning Veterans

Also back to help Coach John Bach are center Bill McCadney and guards Ron Kuehn, the captain, and Ed Bugniazet. A battle between Ed DeGroat, John Brady and Fred Wagner will determine the fifth starter.

Lack of rebounding strength may hinder the Rams as they strive to better last years 11 won, 14 lost record.

Wildcats Winless

The Palestra encounter with the U. of Richmond will be the third contest between the two clubs and the Wildcats are still looking for a victory. Only two holdovers are counted on to help the team, Captain Warren Mitchell and Curt Adkins. Last year Mitchell was the fourth highest scorer in the Rebels history. Since Freshmen are eigible the team is largely an unknown quantity.

Biggest name among the incoming players is Butch Lamiotte who earned All-American honors as a high school star last season. Richmond should have a good fast team that may be lacking experience.

Richmond plays a 1-3-1 zone marks the return of the Miners defense and has good height.

Jack Kelly and Tom Brennan are all set to rebound but the foul shot was successful. Dayton players looking on are Bill Almashy (15) and John Palmer (31).

Al Griffith, Jack Weissman New Villanova Basketball Captains; Replace Smith

By TERRY ROCHELLE

Al Griffith and Jack Weissman will co-captain the Villanova basketball squad for the remainder of the 1956-57 season. The new captains were announced by coach Al Severance two weeks ago following the graduation of backcourt ace Jim Smith. Smith, sixth Villanovan to join the 1000 point club, led the Wildcats last year and the first half of the present season.

Both Seniors

Griffith and Weissman, both seniors, have been members of the Villanova court squad since their sophomore year when both were surprise starters.

Griff, a slight six feet, has been one of the team's leading scorers and rebounders all season, and his 25 points sparked the team to an exciting upset victory over Seton Hall earlier in the year. His quick reflexes and limitless energy make him a fierce and spirited competitor. He was honored as Player of the Week by the Philadelphia Sportswriters for his fine play against Delaware and Indiana.

Weissman has been somewhat of a disappointment this season after a fine junior campaign and has been relegated to the role of substitute. However, this seasoned veteran adds a steadying hand to a young squad and is noted for his clutch play. He was an All-State selection while playing for Yeadon High in Pa., and led them to the State Championship.

Lost In Debut

The Wildcats were downed 81-72 by Temple in a City Series contest which marked the debut of the duo as team leaders. However, both men hope to guide the team to several victories before the season draws to a close.

Arizin Day Scheduled Sun.; Ex-Villanova Great Feted

Next Sunday, one of Villanova's greatest athletes, Paul Arizin, will be honored as the feature of the Philadelphia Warrior game that afternoon. Officially known as "Paul Arizin Day," the affair will mark the second time that Paul has been honored in his short career as a professional basketball player.

Pop Nugent, a retired post office employee, is heading the committee to fete Arizin. Pop was Paul's first grade school coach at St. Monica's Parochial school in South Philadelphia.

Rookie Of Year

Before Paul entered the service he was tendered a day when he was named "rookie of the year."

While at Villanova, Arizin received many honors and awards. He was named the player of the year by the Sporting News, and was the nation's top major college scorer in his senior year. During that season his total number of points scored became the second highest figure in college basketball up to that time.

Top Scorer

Arizin was the storybook player who didn't even go out for basketball when he came to college but wound up the nation's top scorer.

In recognition of his achievements, the students of Villanova will present him with a suitable award.

SPORTS CHATTER

A Threat to LaSalle

By BOB MULCAHY

Surveying the campus sports scene:

The swimming team is enjoying another successful season as evidenced by its five and one record to date. An indication of the strength of the team is shown by the fact that the tankmen were able to have men swim strange events and still beat Seton Hall 59-27. Right now Villanova is rated as the toughest contender for LaSalle in the city championship. Earlier in the year the 'Cats dropped a meet to LaSalle and would like to gain revenge.

With teams like Temple, Drexel and Penn on the remainder of the schedule the prospects of another great record appear excellent. Hats off to the swimming team!

Student Trip To IC4A

Another student trip, this time to the I.C.A.A.A.A. track meet March 2, in New York is already provoking a lot of interest. Again being run by the Spirit Committee under Pat Nicholson, tickets will go on sale on Friday of this week in Dougherty Hall. Biggest obstacle in the path of Jumbo Elliot's quest of the championship is again Manhattan. As usual the Jaspers are loaded with solid performers who consistently score. Last year Manhattan under its shrewd coach George Eastment beat the Wildcats in both the indoor and outdoor I.C.A.A.A.A. meets by a total of four points. This was despite the fact that Villanova established two new all-time records for winning the most individual championships. Manhattan gains its points by consistently scoring in each event even though they don't win many first places. Manhattan impresses with its depth in the Millrose Games.

Perhaps the biggest disappointment has been the play of the basketball team. Highly touted in pre-season predictions the Wildcats have failed to live up to their notices. There have been moments of brightness however, as shown by the victories over Indiana, Muhlenberg, and Seton Hall. At the present time Indiana is leading the Big Ten. Maybe the team is ready to shake its slump and play the brand of ball observers believe that it can. Following the Fordham game tonight the courtmen play three home contests in a row. The biggest boost the students can give the team is to support it in these games. This will be a test of Villanova's much publicized spirit. Is this spirit only for a winner?

Advocates of the importance of the small man in basketball should take notice of the fact that 5'9" Chet Forte of Columbia was leading the country with the highest average per game of any college player including Wilt Chamberlain.

Exams Take Toll

Midyear examinations took a heavy toll of college players. North Carolina State fielded a team of four sophomores and one junior after its co-captains Maglio and Hafer were declared ineligible. That was nothing compared to the disaster caused at Hofstra College in New York. Coach Bill Van Bredakolff found himself with one starter and four reserves following the exam period. This caused a frantic search through the intramural leagues to find enough players to field a team to complete the schedule.

With spring approaching Wildcat fans wil be anxiously awaiting the opening of the baseball season. Coach Art Mahan must find replacements for two hard hitting outfielders, Frank Cofone and Sam Feretti, who dropped from school because of marks. The biggest problems will be finding a whole new outfield and the depth of the pitching staff. The pitching burden will fall upon three returnees, Dick Black, Bob Scalzi, and Jack Kelly.

Of note in viewing next year's football schedule is the absence of any Municipal Stadium promotional games. Florida State, last season's "Olympic Bowl" opponent, is slated for Villanova Stadium.

Three Campus Games On Football Schedule For Next Season's Campaign

Football comes once again into the spotlight with the announcement of next fall's schedule. Highlights of the new schedule are three home games on campus and the absence of any Municipal Stadium contests for the first time in five years. The end of the promotional games in the big Philadelphia stadium was recognized with the appointment of Frank Reagan as Athletic Director.

All three home games will be played in Goodreau Stadium, with two of the season's first three games at home. The Wildcats open the season Sept. 21 at Waco, Texas against Baylor and then return home for successive contests with Furman on the 28th and Florida State October 5th. The third home game will close the season, as the opposition will be provided by Wichita.

Another newcomer to the schedule is V. P. I. better known as Virginia Tech. The game will be played in Blacksburg, Virginia. Boston will be bracing Oct. 19 when the Mainliners invade Beantown to oppose Boston College. No doubt Villanova will be well represented in this game.

The complete schedule is as follows: Sept. 21, Baylor, at Waco; Sept. 28, Furman, home; Oct. 5, Florida State, home; Oct. 12, V. P. I., at Blacksburg; Oct. 19, Boston College, at Boston; Oct. 26, Indiana, at Bloomington; Nov. 1, Miami, at Miami (night); Nov. 9, Detroit, at Detroit (night); Nov. 16, Open, and Nov. 23, Wichita, home.

Composer Lectures

Luigi Dallapiccola, distinguished Italian composer and exponent of the 12-tone system, will give a lecture recital in the Philadelphia Art Alliance Auditorium, 251 S. 18th St., at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

There is no admission charge.

Sketches of 'Cat Trackmen Seeking Team Championship

With the important track meets coming up the Villanovan here presents a thumbnail sketch of the team's personnel as a help to all the students. Particularly important are some of the lesser known men who must come through if the 'Cats are to cop such important team meets as the IC4A's.

Jim Elliott—Villanova 1935. Now in his twenty-first year of coaching at his Alma Mater, he has been responsible for the tremendous prominence Villanova has gained as a track school. A standout middle distance runner in college Elliott has produced some of the outstanding runners of the era. He has tutored six Olympians.

Jim Tuppeny—LaSalle 1950. Captain of LaSalle's 1950 track squad he led the school to its first championship, winning the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate crown. He was three times Middle Atlantic AAU high hurdle title in 1947.

George Sydnor, 20, Junior, Haverford, Pa.—Sprints. On two occasions he equalled the world record for 60 yards. He defeated Dave Sime three of the four times they have met.

Don Bragg, 21, Senior, Penns Grove, N.J.—Pole-Vault Record holder for intercollegiate indoor and outdoor competition. IC4A indoor and outdor champ in 1955 and 1956. He has cleared 15 feet 16 times.

Alex Breckenridge, 22, Senior, Glasgow, Scotland.—Two Mile IC4A indoor mile champion in 1955 and outdoor champion in the two mile in 1956. Outstanding at longer distances. He was one of the mainstays of the cross-country team.

George Browne, 20, Senior, Bayonne, N.J.—Two Mile. He was a member of the National Interscholastic Medley Relay Championship of America in the Penn Relays in 1953.

Ed Collymore, 19, Sophomore, Cambridge, Mass. — Hurdles, AAU National Interscholastic Indoor 440 champ in 1955 and a member of the mile relay team.

Ron Delany, 21, Junior, Dublin, Ireland.—Mile. One of the top milers of the world. He has turned in a 3:59 mile and won the 1500 meter race in the Olympics. Undefeated indoors.

Vic DiMaio, 19, Sophomore, Jersey City, N.J.—1000. A member of last year's freshmen relay team, Vic is enrolled in the Engineering school. He was a New Jersey State half mile champ.

Bob Holup, 21, Junior, Perth Amboy, N.J.—Hurdles, Broad Jump. A top schoolboy hurdler, he has given promise of great things.

Charley Jenkins, 22, Senior, Cambridge, Mass.—440, Mile Relay, 1956 Olympic 400 meter champ. Charlie lost only one race all last indoor season, competing in the 500 and 600 yard events.

Johnny Kopil, 21, Senior, Bayonne, N.J.—Mile. National Scholastic mile champion. He finished second in the mile in the 1955 Indoor IC4A's.

Gene Maliff, 21, Senior, Jersey City, N.J.—Mile Relay, 880. He has been the lead-off runner on the mile relay team for the last two years. He is rated as a tough competitor.

Al Peterson, 21, Senior, Bayonne, N.J.—Mile Relay, 440. Anchored the sprint medley relay team to the N.A.A.U. championship in the 1956 indoor season. A member of the relay team.

Bill Rahn, 20, Sophomore, Upper Darby, Pa.—220, 440. Pennsylvania State Catholic 220 and 440 champion in 1955. He ran on the freshmen relay team and now runs on the varsity relay squad.

Phil Reavis, 20, Junior, Somerville, Mass.—High Jump. Finished sixth in the 1956 Olympics. He has cleared 6'10". Phil was the IC4A indoor and outdoor champion of 1956.

Charlie Stead, 19, Sophomore, Cambridge Mass.—High Jump. Has been the surprise of the indoor of the season. He tied for first at 6'8" in the Millrose Games last week.

Wildcats Win 3 of Last 7, Including Seton Hall Upset

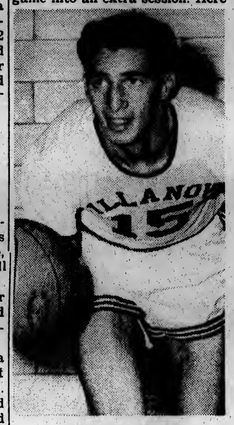
By BOB MULCAHY

Three victories were all the Villanova basketball team could salvage in their last seven starts. Wins over Penn, Seton Hall in overtime, and Drexel were offset by defeats by West Virginia, St. Joseph's, Temple and Dayton.

The Wildcats started their City Series play with an easy 63-47 victory over Penn. The Quarkers didn't hit with a field goal until almost ten minutes were gone in the first half. A 30-17 halftime bulge was increased to as much as 25 points in the waning moments of play. High scorers for the Mainliners were Captain Jimmy Smith with 14 and Jack Kelly with 13.

The Penn victory was sandwiched between losses to West Virginia and St. Joseph's.

Hundley Gets Revenge



Gaining revenge for last year's one point defeat, the Mountaineers, led by Hot Rod Hundley, riddled Villanova's zone defense hitting on 41% of their shots. Hundley's 34 points led all scorers. He hit for 18 of them in the first half to help his team to a 41-31 intermission lead. Villanova reduced this margin to 49-42 before West Virginia pulled away. High point producers for the 'Cats were Ryan, Kelly, and Smith with 17, 16, and 15 points respectively.

St. Joseph's marred Villanova's city series record by scoring a 59-51 victory. Despite Al Griffith's 19 points the Wildcats didn't have that important basket in the clutch. Trailing all the way in the second half Villanova pulled up to within one point at 45-44. Here Jack McKinney and Kurt Englebert scored eight successive points between them to put the game out of reach.

Against Seton Hall it was a different story as the Mainliners rebounded to record a sterling 95-92 overtime win. Trailing all through the second half and still down six points with two minutes to play, Villanova pulled off a tremendous comeback.

Smith Takes Over

A one-handed push shot by Tom Brennan was followed by layup by Joe Ryan after he stole the ball. Then with 17 seconds to go Jimmy Smith calmly sank two free throws to send the game into an extra session. Here

JACK WEISSMAN

Smith scored eight and the contest was over.

Highlight of the Drexel rout was the 24 points of Captain Smith. This put him over the 1000 point mark for his college career. The game was never close as the Wildcats scored an easy 87-66 win.

Against Temple and Dayton the script was almost the same. In both games the Wildcats started so poorly that they could never recover. In the 81-72 loss to Temple the bright spot was the play of the three sophomores Joe Ryan, Ken Harrison, George Emma. The team played without Ryan, one of its top scorers, against nationally ranked Dayton, which hit 55% of its first half shots. Emma led the scorers with 18 points in the 102-70 loss.

couldn't make up.

Alex Breckenridge and John Kopil placed third and fourth in the two mile run while George Sydnor took third in the 60. Bob Holup was disqualified in the hurdle semi-finals, as was Don Bragg, far from his usual self, in the pole vault.

Three Other Meets

In the three meets prior to their appearance in New York the Wildcats thrilled the fans with much stronger showings. In the season's opening meet the Knights of Columbus in Boston, Jenkins won the Prout Memorial 600 by four yards, Phil Reavis took the high jump with a leap of 6'9" and Stead finished fourth with 6'4", and Don Bragg took pole-vaulting honors with a 15 foot jump. The mile relay team was victorious, tying the meet record of 3:19.6. George Sydnor was second in the 50 while Kopil and Breckenridge finished fourth in the mile and two mile respectively.

Entering the largest group of athletes in history in the Philadelphia Inquirer Games, the Wildcats were again outstanding. Jenkins again won the 600 and Reavis and Stead were part of a five way tie in the high jump. Bragg cleared 15 feet again to win the pole vault and the mile relay team won impressively. Sophomore Vic DiMaio won the 1000 yard handicap. Many other Villanovans took second, third, and fourth positions.

Delany Wins First

Ron Delany made his first start of the season in the Boston A.A. track meet and turned in a 4:07.5 mile to win easily. Reavis won again with a 6'8¾" effort and Stead was third. The relay team (Maliff, Rahn, Peterson, Collymore) continued undefeated with a 3:19.2 clocking. Bragg cleared 15 feet again but was second to Rev. Bob Richard's 15'3".

Ex-Coach Little, Elliott Praise Athletic Pickup

"Athletic competition is secondary to the academic." This is the philosophy of Lou Little, recently retired head football coach of Columbia University.

Mr. Little was guest speaker at the Malvern Prep Father and Son banquet in the Sheraton Hotel last Thursday.

"College sports have come a long way during my 37 years of coaching," Mr. Little continued. "At first we were unorganized and unimaginative, but we had that spirit. Today I can see the steady progress and take pride in being part of it."

Organized Differently

"But the present athletic system is organized differently, and rightly so. The academic requirements are stiffening and are producing real athletes and scholars."

"The present trend in education is toward increased enrollment, yet greater selection of students. As a result the quality is improving. Modern secondary school students should think first of the academic and then of sports."

Other Guests

Sharing the guest table with Little were the Very Rev. Joseph A. Grifferty, Prior, and Very Rev. James Donnellon, University President. Other sports figures included Jim "Jumbo" Elliott and Jim Tuppeny, Villanova track coaches.

Elliott discussed the underdevelopment physically of the American youth in this "gas age." He called on the American youth to engage in some form of competitve athletics.

Villanova trackmen came in for a large share of Elliott's praise. He commented on the recent track successes and called Phil Reavis, "for his size, the greatest high jumper in history."

All Villanovan editors and news staff members have been asked to attend a reorganization meeting this afternoon at 3:30.

Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith said the meeting will be held in the publications office, second floor of Dougherty.

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

Here we go again. Welcome back to Villanova. Many have returned with nice sun-tans that give evidence of a few glorious days in the Florida sun; others return with injuries that remind us that winter sports can be dangerous. There's also that select few who spent their vacation in front of a case of beer and a TV set.

BILL REICH

This is what is commonly called the Spring Semester. It may not look that way now, but (sooner than one expects) we'll have forgotten about snow and will be occupied with thoughts of where to hold our next picnic. Yes, picnic season will be here again when the ambitious Villanovan sets his books aside, puts on his bermudas, orders some refreshments, gets a date (optional—only needed on American picnics) and sets out to find some peaceful countryside. Villanovan picnics have been known to last from one-to-forty-eight hours (depending on the type of picnic, the nearest inhabitants, and most of all, the supply of refreshments remaining).

Some Still Remain

A small contingent of 1956's S. A. P. A. still remain, so we will be sure of good organization when the time comes. Till then, indoor activities will provide our diversion for awhile.

To open this semester's social calender, D. P. M. will hold its annual dinner-dance on Saturday evening. For the other Villanovans there's a top double-header at the Palestra when the Wildcats meet Richmond in the opener, followed by a clash between La Salle and Duquesne. On Monday Villanova will be entertaining Scranton at the Field House.

Do You Know

Do you know that the average girl's bathing suit covers 500 square inches of skin, leaving 3,000 inches exposed? Any slide-rules handy?

That's Reich

Christy, Macri Cheering Heads

At the last meeting of the Student Council a motion offered by Vice-chairman Pat Nicholson passed which incorporated the cheerleaders as a branch of the Spirit Committee.

A revitalization of the squad will include a call for new members from the Spirit Committee and student body in general.

Tryouts for cheerleaders are scheduled for tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in 207 C&F.

Bill Christy and Ted Macri, recently appointed by Nicholson to head the revitalization of the cheerleading group, urge all who are interested to attend this meeting.

Sheehan Hall Named in Honor of Former Provincial

The new dormitory presently being constructed across from Sullivan Hall is to be called Sheehan Hall.

This new dormitory is named after the late Rev. John T. Sheehan O.S.A., former professor and provincial of the St. Thomas of Villanova Province.

Father Sheehan was born in Philadelphia in St. Augustine's parish, Jan. 9, 1881. He entered the novitiate in Feb. of 1898.

Villanova Graduate

A bachelor of arts degree was conferred upon Father Sheehan at Villanova on June 19, 1900, and he received his master's in June 1902.

Father Sheehan went to Rome in September 1902 to study at the Augustinian International College of St. Monica. He was ordained July 25, 1903.

Father Sheehan received a degree in Canon Law at the Appolinare June 26, 1905.

On his return to the United States in August 1905, he was assigned to the Villanova faculty.

Pastor And Provincial

In 1914, he was transferred to St. Nicholas parish in Atlantic City and made pastor. He held this position until 1934 when he was elected provincial of the St. Thomas of Villanova Province.

While provincial Father Sheehan was made President of the Board of Trustees. It was under his guidance that the Centennial celebration in 1942 was planned far in advance, and as a result of this planning, so successfully carried out.

Back To Atlantic City

Father Sheehan held his position of provincial until he was relieved in June 1944. He returned to Atlantic City and resumed his duties as pastor of St. Nicholas Church.

Sheehan Hall, new student dormitory, was named after former Augustinian Provincial. Building will house 400 students. It is expected to be completed by the fall semester.

Sheehan Hall, a $1½ million domitory, should be ready for use by September.

The differences between Sheehan and Sullivan are slight.

Gotham Skyline Brightens Senior Prom Decorations

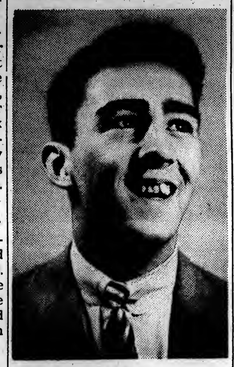
By MIKE MANCUSO

Mr. Francis Gillen, a representative of the Burroughs Corporation, addresses seniors on job opportunities during last Thursday's Career Cinference in Commerce and Finance Auditorium. Conference was attended by some 500 seniors. Representatives of more than 30 firms were on hand.

The Class of 1957 will commence one of the most memorable weekends in its college career when it ushers in the annual Belle Air Ball in the Field House on Friday evening, March 1, from 9 till 1.

Tickets for the formal affair which may be obtained at the door on the night of the dance are also on sale every day in the Snack Bar from 11:30 to 2:30 at a cost of $6.

Open To All



This Senior Prom, which is open to all students, will feature the smooth, dancable melodies of the nationally-famous Billy May Orchestra.

The May band, under the baton of Sam Donahue, features 16 music makers along with the song stylings of a popular female vocalist.

While promenading to the notes of the band, all will enjoy the unique theme selected from a popular Broadway show, The Manhattan Towers. This theme will provide scenes of the famed New York skyline with an elaborate centerpiece.

Adding Glamour

Every possible provision has been included to add to glamour to the affair, stated Vince Sullivan, Senior Class president. Sullivan added that if many students attend the prom, bigger and better bands may be acquired to add to the enjoyment of all attending future dances.

RAY CLARKE
Senior Prom Chairman

Chairmen of the Ball have also provided for a prominent band to play during intermissions of the featured group. The band was not named.

Photos Offered

Along with the chairman of the affair, Ray Clarke, Joe Keffer is in charge of programs; Joe Jenkins heads the decoration committee; Vince Pavese and Jack Dunn will provide unique refreshments; Tom Scanlon and Pat Gallagher, head the ticket

Infirmary Urges Students To Undergo Polio Shots

The University Department of Student Health urges all students who have not been immunized against polio to start their shots now.

The complete series consists of three shots. To acquire reasonable immunity in time for this year's polio season, the first shot should be received by the end of this month; the second, after an interval of three or four weeks; the third shot, four to six months later. The complete series of three shots is necessary for the basic immunity which is the purpose of the Salk Vaccine.

Two Shots Offered

This term provision is being made for any student who wishes to receive his first and second shots, at cost, while at school. The charge is $1 per shot, the cost of the Salk Vaccine. The third shot can be administered at home by the family physician at his discretion.

Apointment Only

The Infirmary will administer shots by appointment only. Appointments may be made at the Chaplain's Office in Mendel Hall or at Miss Kelly's Office in the C & F Building, according to the following schedule:

Seniors and Juniors Feb. 20

Parents' or guardian's consent in writing must be presented by all students at the time the shot is administered. Parental consent forms will be available at both offices when the appointment is made. The $1 fee for each shot is payable at the time the shot is given.

Five New Editors Appointed to Villanovan Staff

Five new editors were appointed following a reorganization meeting of The Villanovan to "increase efficiency in the paper's editorial departments."

Appointed were:

Junior John D. Kennedy, a feature editor to assist Frank Delany.

Juniors Ed Karrer and John Fixl, replacing Kennedy as copy editors.

Junior Joseph Kulick and freshman Joseph McMahon, morgue editors in charge of keeping the paper's files in order. This is a new position.

During a reorganization meeting last Wednesday Managing Editor Bob Strayton announced a new system of deadlines.

In the future, all feature copy must be submitted by 4 p.m. on the Wednesday before publication. Early news and sports copy must be turned in by 4 p.m. on the Wednesday prior to the paper's appearance. Late sports news is due by 4 p.m. Thursday.

Strayton has requested all organization heads to comply with the new deadlines to insure "a larger Villanovan, to be produced with the maximum of efficiency."

Church and State Institute To Hold First V.U. Meeting

Professor Mark DeWolfe Howe, of Harvard University Law School, will deliver the opening address at the first conference of the Institute of Church and State to be held tomorrow and Friday in Garey Hall.

Sponsored by Villanova's School of Law, the Institute is housed in Garey Hall and is independent of the instructional program of the school.

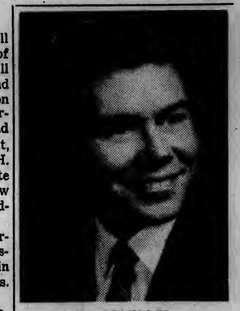
Conference Theme

Theme of the conference will be the Juridicial Status of Churches. Professor Howe will deal with the general topic and his views will be commented on by Dr. Harold F. Hartman, chairman of Villanova's History and Political Science Department, and by Monsignor Joseph H. Brady, rector of Immaculate Conception Seminary in New Jersey and writer on first amendment problems.

The second day of the conference will be devoted to a discussion of the role of religion in child custody and adoption cases.

Second Day Speaker

Principal speaker will be Professor Joseph M. Snee, S.J., of the Georgetown University Law Center, Commentators will be Willard C. Heckel, assistant dean of Rutgers University Law School, and Leo Pfeffer, New York attorney who has written extensively on these questions.



The conference will open tomorrow afternoon under the chairmanship of Thomas J. O'Toole, director of the Institute and assistant dean of Villanova's School of Law.

Issues Discussed

The main address and commentaries will be followed by a public discussion of the issues. A reception and dinner for persons attending the Conference will be held tomorrow night, along with a discussion of the future role of the Institute.

At the time the Institute was established in January 1955, it founding was occasioned by "a rapid rise in the number and variety of legal issues affecting church and state relations."

Among these issues are problems concerning church-sponsored schools and tax-suported services, and the role of religion in adoption and custody cases, zoning to exclude church buildings and schools and independence of church administration and discipline.

BOB SCHILLER
Conducts Election

Frosh Nominate Men for Student Council Posts

Freshmen get their first exposure to Villanova political campaigning tomorrow when they nominate candidates for two Student Council positions.

Names of candidates for a day hop and a resident seat on the Council will be accepted at 10:30 a.m. in C & F Auditorium.

Schiller Chairman

Bob Schiller, chairman of the Council elections committee, said the election will be held "as soon as the names can be screened" by Administration officials.

Freshmen do not have to be present at the nominations to be nominated.

The two winners will hold places on Council from their election until the end of their sophomore year.

Candidates Screened

Freshmen nominated will be screened by the Administration for academic and disciplinary standing and resident students will be checked for chapel attendance.

Juniors Inaugurate Hunt For Junior Week Queen

Co-chairmen Andy Iaccarino and Ted Macri have announced that the Class of 1958 Junior Week Queen contest is now open. Entries are being accepted in 109 and 11 Sullivan Hall and in the Student Council office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

In addition to the Queen, a lady-in-waiting and a three-member court will be chosen. The regal court will reign for the entire week of social activities sponsored by the Class of 1958 from April 29 through May 4.

Crowning of the Queen and the official presentation of her Court will be made the night of the Junior Promenade, Friday, May 3.

Contest Rules

Rules and information concerning the contest are as follows:

1. All members of the Junior Class, and only the Junior Class, may submit entries.
2. The contest will be judged from photographs only.
3. Only one entry may be submitted.
4. Photographs must be 5" x 7" or larger.

The following information should be attached to each photograph:

1. Your name, division in the University, major, home and campus address and telephone numbers.
2. Your date's name, age, height, color of eyes, color of hair, occupation (name of school attending or type of work), home or school address and telephone number.

The deadline for submission of entries has been set for Wednesday, April 10, so that judges will have ample time to select the winners.

Awards To Winners

The Queen and her escort will be awarded free tickets to all the events they attend. The lady-in-waiting will receive a free ticket to the Prom, and each member of the Queen's Court will be given floral bouquets.

Pictures of early entries will appear periodically in the Villanovan during the contest, and

Enhancing Name Of Law School

Villanova's School of Law makes a concerted bid for national recognition tomorrow and Friday with the convening of the first conference of the Institute of Church and State.

Prominent speakers will address an audience which is interested in the phases of law which are related to religion, both Roman Catholic and Protestant.

The views they express will be commented upon by laymen and priests who are deeply interested in the matter to be covered.

This first conference of the Villanova School of Law's Institute of Church and State has been in the planning stage since June. Originally, the conference was scheduled for November, but the conference dates were postponed pending completion of Garey Hall, where the Institute will make its headquarters.

Mr. Thomas O'Toole, a graduate of Harvard University and Harvard School of Law and assistant dean of Villanova's School of Law, is chairman of Villanova's Institute.

He explained that the Institute merely serves as an instrument for bringing speakers together; the Institute will not take sides on the questions discussed. The ideal situation develops when speakers with divergent opinions are brought together. He indicated that this will be the case in Friday's conference when Father Snee and Leo Pfeffer will outline conflicting opinions on the question of religion in adoption cases. Both Thursday's and Friday's conferences will be held in the Garey Hall court courtroom and are open to the public.

The Institute of Church and State was organized in December, 1955, to enable Villanova's first graduate school to make contributions in research. Mr. O'Toole said that it is considered necessary that all graduate schools make such contributions.

Church and State was selected as Villanova's research field, explained Mr. O'Toole, because no extended research has been attempted in this field; because it is a field that should be of interest to a Catholic institution; and because it is a field which could not be explored by a state university because of political and religious pressures.

Another important factor which influenced the selection is the increasing number of cases which find their way into the courts involving religion in such cases as zoning, taxation of church property, censorship, marriage and divorce law, religious education and discrimination by reason of religion.

Mr. O'Toole emphasized that these matters do not pertain exclusively to Roman Catholics but could also certain aspects which would interest non-Catholics.

An example of the type of case in which the Institute would be interested was mentioned by Mr. O'Toole. Not long ago, the Archdiocese of Philadelphia sought permission to build a parochial school on a plot of land not far from Villanova. The zoning board turned down the request but indicated later that it would have granted permission for the erection of a public school on the same property.

Mr. O'Toole said that institutes similar to Villanova's and studying other fields are functioning in other law schools—Southern Methodist University's law school sponsors an Institute on Natural Law—but Notre Dame is the only other Catholic law school with such an institute.

Spreading the reputation of Villanova's four-year-old School of Law is an important function of the Institute and there is evidence that this purpose is already being realized. Just last week The New York Times called on Villanova's Public Information Office for details about the Institute.

Political Round-Up:

Israel's Antagonism May Lead to Destruction

By GENE DONOHUE

It seems that this column provoked a bit of controversy last week, both on the campus and off. This bit of anxiety is exemplified by a letter which this columnist received the day after the paper was published. Aside from the fact that my character was questioned and my process doubted, I was informed that "Israel would survive BECAUSE of its present policies, and in spite of 'brains' like your." For this reason I believe that it is necessary to delve into the subject for another week.

As I stated last week, it would be impossible for Israel to suprvive as a state in the Middle East if it were to continue its present policy of antagonism toward the Arabs. Again repeating myself, a nation that poses as struggling for survival over tremendous odds does not go and attack its stronger neighbors.

Like Farmers On A Hunt

Any doubt of the military prowess of Israel was answered when she swept through the Sinai peninsula and handed Egypt a tremendous setback. Of all the Egyptian soldiers that were captured in this campaign, hardly any of them were troops of a disciplined variety. If Egypt had any uniformed troops, there certainly were no pictures taken of them. The only pictures that were seen in newspapers and magazines looked like farmers out on a hunt.

Surely this cannot be the vast military force that Israel claims is threatening her "very existence."

I do not want to paint the picture of Israel as the villian and the Arab nations as the angels who do no wrong. There is wrong on both sides but it is more prevalent on the side of Israel. During the past few years the United Nations has censored Israel more than the Arabs. The United Nations does not pass a resolution of censure without first looking into the facts completely and thoroughly. This is fact and not opinion that can be substantiated very easily by a little research in a library. I realize that this statement is a very touchy one, but it is a fact.

A Strong Selling Point

The next item that would come under consideration would be the possible reasons why Israel would put up this front. The only reason that I can think of is that it provides a strong selling point for American aid to Israel, not only by the government but also by the private individuals. It naturally makes a greater impression on people when asking for contributions picturing the recipient as "underdogs locked in the struggle for survival."

Israel needs this American money to survive right now but that is because they are economically cut off from the rest of the Middle East. In order to be relieved of this boycott she must be willing to cooperate with the Arabs. She cannot maintain this feeling of superiority and belligerency and still obtain the cooperation that is necessary.

An Eventual Downfall

Again I must repeat myself from last week. Whitewashing the wrongs of Israel wil serve no other purpose but to bring about its eventual downfall. Using the example of a child and his parents; when a child is sheltered from criticism for his wrongs, he grows in a world of unreality. When a time comes that his wrongs are not passed over but are bared for all to see he becomes confused and does not know how to handle himself. The end result is a man that is useless to society and can never stand on his own.

The same is true for a country. It it sheltered from criticism it too will be useless and never able to stand alone. The conception that most people have of a sovereign nation is one which can accomplish this, and if Israel continues on this policy she will never be able to stand alone without the protective cloak of the United States.

If Israel is to be independent, she must be realistic. The policy which she is following now is certainly not realistic. You don't make friends with people by sticking a gun in their backs.

A Bestseller Comes To Dinner

A week in February is a most apropriate time to celebrate National Bible Week. The whole month, and the Bible is considered the greatest best seller of all time.

Pastors all around the country are urging their flocks to become acquainted, or re-acquainted, with Holy Scripture this week. One charge that non-Catholics take a delight in making is that Catholics don't know enough about the Old and New Testaments.

There are some grounds for this accusation. Catholics, in their grammar school days, concentrate on learning catechism. And all their lives they have the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass and the Holy Eucharist to serve as the central factors of their religious life.

Non-Catholics must content themselves with a thorough study of the Bible. More than a few of them are highly proficient at reciting passages.

A convenient way for Catholics to introduce themselves and their children to Holy Scripture has been passed on to seniors in a religion course, which is primarily concerned with advice to future Catholic fathers and mothers.

At the principal meal each day—in the 1957 United States this is usually the evening meal—the father might pick up a copy of the New Testament and an episode of seven or eight verses. It would not require more than five minutes at the most. The father would firmly establish himself as the head of the household, and even children in the toddling stage would begin to apreciate the stories about Our Lord's birth, the founding of the Church, the owner of the vineyard, and the man without a wedding garment.

At the same time the Bible is being introduced, Catholics of all ages might pick up copies of their diocesan newspapers and nationally-circulated Catholic magazines.

Both these media have been undergoing changes which have improved format and raised editorial standards so that they rank with the big selling "slick" magazines. Diocesan newspapers have been dipping into the metropolitan press and hiring editors with a keen news sense. Papers have also expanded their editorial pages to include opinions on matters other than religion.

Being Natural Counts More

In attending the Career Conference the other day we picked up some valuable tips on how to go about a job interview. We are grateful to all the men of industry who journeyed to Villanova in order to help us out. We feel they have helped us a great deal.

But we also feel that with all the actual technical ideas they gave us, one important thing was not emphasized. We were told what questions to ask and how to ask them. All of which is certainly very important.

We were told that the best way to impress our prospective employer was to dress neatly and cleanly. Naturally, this is to be done at all times.

But we feel that the most important thing is that the applicant should be himself. We feel that the thing that sticks out like the proverbial sore thumb to the skilled interviewer is a false air. A student can do nothing worse, in our opinion, than to put up a false front.

It seems to us that a student can gain much by merely going into the interview with the resolution that for better or for worse he will present himself to the interviewer entirely as himself.

A company, any company, wants a man for what he is, not for what he pretends to be. If a student lays his cards squarely on the line and gets the job we are sure he will like the job because the interviewer is a skilled man and can simulate the man to a position, usually without error.

If he does not get the job, he was not the right man for it.

On the other hand, if a student does manage to bluff his interviewer and get a job he is not suited for, then, most assuredly, he will be unhappy in his work, either because he does not like it, or because he cannot do it.

The man who is rejected once need not fret. Every job is not suited for every man. He will wait for the position that fits him best; he will take it; and he will be happy with it.

Therefore, we can only say to the senior, and even to the junior, sophomore and the freshman, even if you feel you may not get the job that way, be yourself. Be honest with yourself and with the interviewer.

And you might be surprised at the results, too.

Villanovan's Ideal Girl: Wise, Witty, Winsome

By FRANK DELANY
Feature Editor

It would seem to be one of the undeniable realities of life at Villanova that the object most on the mind of the average student, with the possible exception of the nursing population, is the female, either specifically or in general.

After twelve to sixteen years of Catholic education the Villanova man has some pretty definite ideas on just the girl he'd like to go through life with. They're pretty definite ideas too and some girls are going to have a rough time measuring up.

Don't Call Us

The ideal girl of a cross-section of Villanovans would seem to be a paragon of feminine virtues, being wise, witty and winsome.

Specifically, David MacDermott, freshman, requires of his girl that she be good looking, a good conversationalist, have good taste, be a good dancer, have a car and be willing to travel.

John Moynihan, junior, demands of 'dream girl' that she be merely attractive, not necessarily beautiful. From here on, John probes deeper, for he demands that she like people and get along with them.

Quiet Extrovert

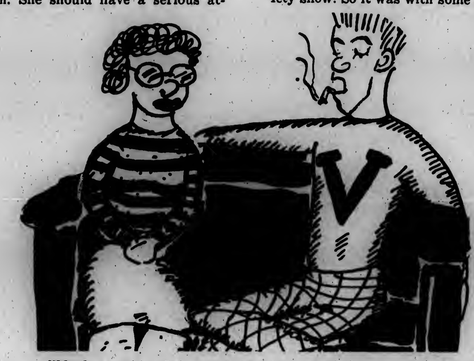
Moynihan goes on in his description, "She has a keen mind, though not necessarily practical one. This woman is an extrovert in a quiet way and she is an entertaining conversationalist. She knows life and is able to handle it, but her moral character is above reproach. Often she gives men an impression of helplessness. In Hollywood she is personified by the Dana Wynter type."

The above quote comes close to a campus wide evaluation. But if the residents of Rosemont, Immaculata, et al are beginning to feel a little left behind, they haven't heard anything yet, to borrow a cliche.

Redheads Unite

Senior Stephen Fritsky describes dream girl as "sweet and quiet, but not dull. She has brains but is not an 'intellectual.' She is not bossy! She is an efficient homemaker and is neither too yielding nor too stubborn. She is always neat and clean in appearance and —— she has red hair!"

All glamour girls, except redheads, can now quietly retire unless deep down inside they're really sugar and spice.



If you'd like a clearer picture of dream girl, senior John Di Giallorenzo takes the composite approach. Dream girl "has the looks of Ava Gardner (re-enter glamour girls), the innocence of Debbie Reynolds (re-exit glamour girls), the sincerity of Loretta Young and the figure of Marilyn Monroe (here they come again)."

Leilani O'Leary

Senior Jack O'Leary looks beyond the wedding ceremony and requires of dream girl that she love children and be willing to make sacrifices for them. She should have a serious attitude on life in general. If this sounds too easy, Jack prefers that she be of Hawaiian-Irish extraction. The line forms on the right.

Junior Joe Kinney wants a girl who can give aid and comfort as well as constructive criticism in his professional life.

All this sounds pretty formidable for girls who have such human traits as bad moods, as well as likes and would like a man just a little less smart than they are (but not know it). But even for the vast majority of American womanhood, there is a place, despite the search for near perfection.

"Ya know, Martha, you bring out the gypsy in me—I think I'll hit the road."

T'n'T Production Result Of Mythological Research

By JOHN D. KENNEDY
Feature Editor

"The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," brainchild of the Turf and Tinsel Society, represents the pooling of the talents and brains of the entire organization. Conspicuous in this pooling are the talents of Bobby Schiller, who has made T'n'T history by being the first undergraduate to author the entire production—book, lyrics and music.

Well-known as the leader of the Villanovans, Shiller makes his debut as playwright and composer with "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga." His previous experience—in high school—consisted of sketch-writing in a variety show. So it was with some qualms that Schiller began work on the musical.

Title Inspired

His sole guide in writing the story was the idea coveyed with the title—"The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga."

The title itself arose rather as an organizational bull session.

Schiller, a senior accounting major, began reasearch on Greek mythology in the University Library just before Thanksgiving. After much hard work and some anguish, the play was completed last week. "It was a tough job," said Schiller. "I'm glad it's over. Although I'm fairly well-satisfied, I'm anxious to see it on the stage."

Character Difficult

A chief difficulty, he found, was the creation of a type of character, together with the writing of dialogue to fit the type. Love interest in an all-male production must be handled delicately. Sentimentality has to be avoided; the effect must be genuine. The technical points of the drama Schiller throught difficult in arranging—the gimmicks and gradual rise to the climax. "Above all, the creation of comic lines was the toughest."

Twelve or 13 songs had to be fitted carefully into the dialogue for smooth continuity of action. According to an alumnus closely connected with the T'n'T the songs are of "Broadway caliber." Jack Kelly, director, and Bob Whalen, muscial adviser, both helped.

Bobby Schiller, playwright and composer, will make his debut on May 9-10-11. If public approval is equal to the enthusiasm aroused within the organization, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga" will rank among Turf and Tinsel's biggest hits.

Old Line Gets New Twist; Gallen Displays Noted Wit

The old story about "always a bridesmaid and never a bride" has a new twist.

Val Brasher, senior chemical engineer, knows what's it's like to be "always a best man and never a groom."

The other week, Val stood beside his younger brother, Tom—a freshman engineer at Villanova last year—while Tom exchanged "I will's" with Mary Margaret Farley, in Ridgewood, N.J.

Last year, Val performed the same task for his widowed father, who was taking his second wife.

GOOD-HUMORED PROF

John Gallen, Fifty-ish head of Villanova's civil engineering department, is respected by his students for the dry-witted humor he displays while lecturing.

But last Thursday most of the senior class had a chance to see him in action. And they seemed to enjoy the experience.

As he introduced each speaker during the Career Conference, Mr. Gallen recited a joke.

One is especially worth repeating.

In the confessional one afternoon, a priest listened attentively while a penitent confessed that he had swiped a pile of lumber. The priest reminded the man about his duty to make restitution and absolved him.

The next week the man returned and the priest recognized him, as the same same sin was confessed. Once again the priest urged the man to change his ways.

When the penitent returned not long after with the same sin, the priest decided he should try a more positive approach. "Have you ever made a novena," he asked the man.

Without hesitation the man replied: "No Father, but if you can get some plans I know where I can get you some lumber."

Be Cultured! Stop, Look And Like A Painting

All too many college men are limited by the idea that all their education and knowledge is obtained during their four-year stay at the university in classroom lectures and basic textbooks.

Much is lost by ignoring the advantages of developing a fuller appreciation of the fine arts.

Many feel that these cultural pursuits should be left to the so-called intellectual groups. This idea is far from the truth and by holding such an opinion, much that is pleasurable as well as worthwhile is needlessly elliminated from the present and future life of the student.

Art Takes Effort

Like all worthwhile experiences, art takes some effort on the part of the individual desiring to understand, appreciate and reap the rewards it offers. One must be patient.

I would like to offer a few pointers in the examination of art so that the unschooled eye may extract the most from the observation of a work of art.

One basic thought in studying a painting is the color. The best paintings do not have the loudest or sharpest colors. It is the delicate touch that can create effects of depth and shadow with a brush and oils.

Artist's Eye Sensitive

Knowing where to combine or mix color and where to use a 'flat' surface often makes the difference between an average painting and a great painting.

The artist's eye is sensitive enough to distinguish more than blue in the sky or green on the ground. Nature conceals much color that is overlooked by the passive eye but caught by the attentive artist.

The subject of the painting is actually unimportant. How well the artist handles the subject is what counts.

Refused To Conform

The impressionists of the later 19th century refused to conform to the confined requirements of the traditional school and went out to capture the commonplace people and the comonplace scenes as they were impressed on the artist's eye.

The question to ask of a painting is whether or not the canvas lives. Has the artist created a person who could laugh or cry? Has the the artist gone past the surface of a face? Has he made you see, smell, taste and feel nature as portrayed in his painting?

It should not be a superficial reproduction that we look at, for we can find this with a box camera. Instead, the painting should impart to us the feeling or presence and experience.

Painting Personal

It should be mentioned that the viewer should not be disturbed if he finds the subject of the painting distorted, for painting, as other forms of art, is personal and the presentation of the subject is the artist's sincere interpretation.

The artist may be attempting to create the physical object or his emotional reaction as a result of studying this object.

The ideal situation is to have the viewer experience the same or a similar emotion upon his examination of the painting.

Much of the modern school of art finds its appeal in an intellectual rather than an emotional appeal.

Student Role In Job Interviews Explained; Climax of Education

By JOHN McGEE

We have discussed in last week's article the scope of college placement and how the Villanova Placement Office helps the student find information concerning jobs and employers. This week, Mr. James Redfern, former Placement Director, emphasizes the role of the student in obtaining a worthwhile occupation after graduation.

The student's major and elective courses are prime preparation for a career and are balanced by his extra-curricular activities. It follows, therefore, that these and other factors will be considered by a senior's prospective employer.

Marks Mean Much

The courses chosen are a determining factor for qualification in various occupations. In general, employers consider marks to be a definite indication of future sucess; if two students are equal in other qualifications, marks may be the deciding factor in selection. Of course, the importance of marks are also dependent upon the type of position applied for. A's and B's will be required of students considered for research, but C's and an ability to meet people may satisfy for a sales applicant.

Participation in extra-curricular activities is looked upon by employers as an indication of leadership ability and personality interests. Especially is membership in professional societies important. The holding of an office in any society has great weight with all interviewers in evaluating cadidates.

Past Experience Helpful

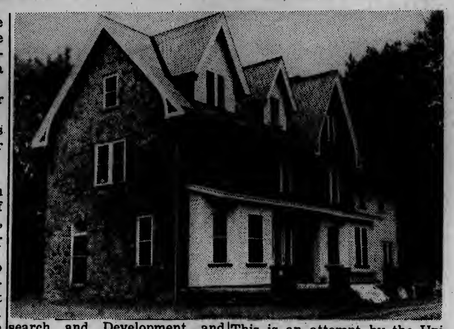
Past experience in the type of work or in related work for which the applicant is being considered is often used as an indication of future success.

All this college preparation for a career has its climax in the job interview. The Placement Office sponsors a career conference each year which is designed specifically to help seniors prepare to be interviewed by any company in which they are interested and any job for which they qualify. This year 150 companies are scheduled to interview Villanova seniors on campus. Each senior is permitted to take as many interviews as he wishes.

Proper Interview Procedure

Because job interviews are so vital in obtaining a position after graduation, Mr. Redfern has given these directions for proper procedure in the interview. The first step is to prepare for the interview. This means learning as much as possible about the employer—history and scope of the company, its location, and so on. The applicant will then be able to answer questions and also to ask questions of the interviewer not covered in company literature.

In the second phase of job interviews—the actual interview—it is the student's responsibility to convince the interviewer of his worth. Special attention should be given to good-grooming and overall neatness. The student should take care to be neither overanxious nor condescending. The usual course in the interview is to paint an accurate, pleasing picture of the company as a place to work. The senior will also very probably be asked questions concerning his interest in the type of work being considered, his reasons for desiring work with this particular company, his future plans and ambitions.



Decision Will Be Made

From the interviews, the transcript and faculty references, a decision will made either to reject or consider the applicant further.

If the applicant is to be given further consideration, the final step will be a follow-up interview, usually at the place of the prospective job. At this time he will meet other members of the organization, be given a more intensive look at the company, be told of the specific benefits and opportunities of employment with the company, and be given a formal offer. Naturally this is the crucial interview and the last step in job placement.

In these two articles we have shown how the Placement Office, the seniors and the employers work together for college job placement which is of benefit to all concerned. We have seen that cooperation between all three is essential for truly effective results, and we hope that these two articles will be of some benefit in helping some students obtain that occupation they are striving for.

Galberry, Once Protestant Parsonage, Guards Secrets

Not too many years ago the building at the eastern end of the campus next to Goodreau Stadium was a parsonage for a Prostestant minister.

Later, a Philadelphia lawyer resided there.

Now, Galberry Hall houses more secrets than any other building on campus.

Organized In 1949

Since 1949, Galberry has been the home of the Department of Development and Research, which was organized at Villanova in that year.

Before that, from 1947 to 1949, the building was a dormitory for maintenance department personnel. These employees seem to have a knack for a gypsy-type existence. When they were moved from Galberry, they were housed in Brown Prep, a stucco structure which was demolished to make room for Dougherty Hall.

The workers now reside in a small building near the western extremity of the campus.

'Off-Limits'

The question, "What is Research and Development and what are its activities?," is not an easy one to answer.

The department is surrounded by strict rules and regulations. In fact, this reporter was informed by department officials that the building and grounds around it are considered off-limits to students.

One function of R & D is the operation of the Villanova Press. This is an attempt by the University to reduce the present-day high cost of printing by producing its own printing needs.

Publishes Texts

The Press also serves as an outlet for certain types of textbooks written by faculty members. A maintenance spokesman said that manuals written by faculty members probably could

Chemical Society Carnival Planned For High Schools

Villanova's Chemical Society will conduct a Chemistry Carnival for high school seniors in the Philadelphia area Friday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The Carnival is being held in Mendel Hall in cooperation with the American Chemical Society to promote an interest in chemistry among high school students and to give graphic examples of chemistry on the university level.

Villanova chemistry majors will conduct the Carnival under the supervision of the Chemistry Department faculty.

All students who attend will be admitted with a ticket and after the Carnival, refreshments will be served.

The Chemistry Department estimates that over 500 high school seniors will attend. To date, 200 tickets have been requested from one school in Philadelphia alone.

Summer Placement Guide Published; Employers Listed

The Advancement and Placement Institute announces publication of The World-Wide Summer Placement Directory. This has been prepared as an aid to educators and students who want new ideas for ways to earn while they vacation.

The Directory gives descriptions of the type of work available with names and addresses of employers regularly needing additional summer employees. Included are summer theaters, dude ranches, travel tour agencies abroad, work camps, study awards all over the world, national parks, summer camps and resorts and others.

Additional information may be secured from the Institute at Box 99B, Greenpoint Station, Brooklyn 22, N.Y.

Handbook Mentions 74,000 Fellowships, Scholarships

More than 74,000 international scholarships and fellowships are offered by government, universities, foundations and other institutions in over 100 countries and territories. They are listed in the latest edition of Study Abroad, and international handbook published by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

15,000 Scholarships In '48

This total compares with the 15,000 scholarships and fellowships listed in the first edition published in 1948. It includes fellowships awarded by eight countries not previously listed as donors, amongthem the Republic of Korea, Morocco and Panama.

This current edition of Study Abroad lists the results of UNESCO's annual survey of foreign student enrollments at universities and other institutions of higher learning throughout the world. A survey covering the years 1954-55 showed that an estimated total of 126,000 students were studying outside their own countries.

Percentage Breakdown

Of this total 27% are in the humanities and education, based on a report from 19 countries. Next come social sciences and law, 19%; medicine, 18%; engineering and technology, 16%; and natural sciences, 14%.

Law Aspirants Given Test In Garey Hall

Candidates planning to pursue graduate studies in law at law schools throughout the country gathered at Villanova Saturday for the administration of the Law School Admission Test.

Although it has just recently been opened, Garey Hall, the new Law School building, was the site of the test.

This test is required by the Villanova School of Law as well as by most other law schools in the United States.

Psychology Office Gives Graduate Info

Students interested in information on graduate study in psychology may call at the Psychology Office, 222 Mendel.

Mr. L. N. Recktenwald said information on facilities and financial assistance in 166 colleges and universities and Canada is available, covering the nature and amounts of aid and closing dates for applying.

No Masses Sunday

There will be no Sunday Masses in the C&F auditorium on Feb. 24, the Chapiain's Office has announced. Due to the holiday weekend, the next masses will be on March 3rd at 10 A.M. and 12:15 P.M.

The Chaplain also urged those resident students who have a legitimate excuse for missing Chapel Exercises to report to the Chaplain's office as soon as possible.

Beta Gamma Offers Students Lively Debates

Beta Gamma Debating Society offers each member a chance to actively participate in debates. The society's coach, Mr. McDonough of the Speech Department, and president Jack McGee urge all students interested to attend the meetings held every Thursday morning at 10:30 in 206 C&F.

Students interested in joining the copy staff of the VILLANOVAN should report to the Publications Office tonight or tomorrow night at 7 o'clock or contact either Ed Karrer in 245 Mendel or John Fixl in 4 Sullivan.

Cressman Addresses Club:

Student Education Groups Elect Dressler President

The Villanova Chapter of the Student Education Association held its organization meeting Thursday and elected Richard Dressler President pro-tem.

Dr. Cressman, moderator of the Association, addressed the group on the aims and purposes of the organization. He said that the purpose of this organization is to give the student-teacher practical experience in professional organization work and a familiarization with professional teachers' organizations.

John O'Donnell was chosen secretary pro-tem.

Committees Named

The following committees were formed pro-tem till a constitution has been adopted. At his time new elections will be held.

The constitution committee is composed of John Hughes, chairman, Peter Longworth, Joe Sopone and James Fox, who are the class representatives on the committee.

The membership committee is composed of chairman Joe Kulick, Joseph Coppola, John Cronis and Bill McFadden.

Publicity is being handled by Jim Moran, Pete Sheldon and Joe Wheeler.

Safety Group To Meet With Pa. Engineer

Frank Bonner, chairman of Villanova's Safety Committee, has announced plans for a meeting of the committee with the regional state engineer for this area.

The committee was formed in November after a near-fatal accident in front of the Field House.

Reply Received

Its first action was to draw up and circulate a petition requesting reduction of the speed limit on Lancaster Pike. This was sent to the State Safety Commission and a reply has been received.

Bonner said interest in the suggestion was expressed and the matter has been turned over to the regional state engineer.

Action Promised

A report will be made by that office and action will be taken in accordance with this report, Bonner added.

On the local level, Radnor Township police met with the commission in November and more complete traffic protection was promised.

Blinking traffic lights were to be set up and two policemen were to be stationed on the highway during all social events at the Field House. As yet, no action has been taken on these proposals.

Indian National Explains Neutral Policy for IRS

Mr. Prabhu Vasudeva, an Indian National, addressed the International Relations Society at its regular monthly meeting last Thursday night. All who attended the meeting deemed the talk a success according to President Gene Donohue.

Mr. Vasudeva informed the group of the Indian policy of neutralism and the reason for it. He is presently taking graduate courses at Temple University.

The main order of business at the meeting itself was the Society's trip to Washington which is being made today.

The Opera Classica Music Society meets tonight in the East Lounge at 7:30.

Its program opens with the Concerto No. 2 by Chopin. It will also hear the Hungarian Rhapsodies, No. 3, 4 and 6 of Liszt.

After a short intermission, the Gayne Ballet Suite by Khachaturian will be played by the Philadelphia Orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy. The musical program will conclude with Verdi's Act 1 of La Traviata with Renata Tebaldi and Giuseppe Campora. Free Italian-English librettos will be available. Immediately after the music refreshments will be served.

A Rare Event

On Friday, February 8, the Society traveled to New York to see Tebaldi and Tucker in Puccini's La Boheme in the Metropolitan Opera House. Miss Tebaldi received a 17 minute standing ovation and took a "solo" curtain call—something quite rare at the Met. Her voice was beautiful as usual.

The following Tuesday, February 12, the Opera saw their first Wagnerian opera, the Walkuere. Margaret Harshaw, Philadelphia born soprano, in the role of Brunnhilde was the star attraction of the evening. The Opera also attended the third student concert featuring the Philadelphia Orchestra under the baton of Eugene Ormandy.

Broadcast Schedule

The following is the Opera Classica Broadcast Schedule for the coming week:

Feb. 21 Donizetti: La Favorita with Simionate, Peggi, Bastianini and Hines. (London FFRR)

Feb. 25 and 28 Delibes: LKME with Robin, DeLuca, Borthayre. (London FFRR).

COLLECTION

Spirit Committee members will be taking up a collection today and tomorrow. And the collection will be for a student present of appreciation to Villanova's Olympians, Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins and Phil Reavis.

The gift will be presented at the IC4A track rally next Wednesday, Feb. 27.

Check Those Seams, Girls, You're Being Watched Closely Right Now

A group of freshman student nurses, attired in their most becoming pledge clothing, walk in front of Sullivan Hall during last Thursday's initiation for the Phi Theta Chi sorority. Sophomore trackman Eddie Collymore seems to enjoy the outfits almost as much as the girls themselves.

Villanova's coeds are being observed these days on their appearance—and the winner will be entered in a national contest.

The Villanovan, in cooperation with Glamour magazine, is sponsoring the local competition to select "the best dressed girl" on the Villanova campus.

Since last Friday, a committee of male students, coeds and faculty members has been observing undergraduate coeds in the classroom and on campus.

National Contest Waiting

The winner will be selected by the committee and announced in the March 13 edition of The Villanovan.

But that isn't the big prize. Her picture will be submitted to Glamour and will be judged with pictures of coeds from colleges and universities around the country who have been selected for the same honor on their campuses.

Winner In Magazine

Winner of the national competition will be pictured in the first issue of the magazine to be devoted entirely to college fashions.

Villanovan Editor-in-Chief Tom Smith and Marge Bonner, a sophomore coed, are co-chairmen of the local contest. They have selected other students and faculty members to evaluate the coeds' appearance and grooming.

In announcing the contest, Smith noted that it was the first time Villanova's coeds have had an opportunity to participate in such a contest.

"We certainly hope our candidate in the national competition will spread Villanova's name around the country by winning first place." Smith added.

Rev. J. Crawford, Former Physics Chairman, Dead

The Rev. John Haldane Crawford, O.S.A., former chairman of Villanova's physics department, died Feb. 12, of a heart attack at Merrimack College, Lawrence, Mass.

For the past year he had been sub-prior and had formerly been head of the Merrimack engineering department. He was buried in Lawrence.

Villanova Alumnus

A native of Canada, he was ordained at Villanova in 1923, after receiving his bachelor of arts regree here two years earlier.

He earned a master's degree from the Catholic University of America in 1924, another master's degree from John Hopkins University in 1940, and a doctrorate in science from LaSalle in 1951.

Studied At Hopkins

Father Crawford studied physics at Johns Hopkins from 1933 to 1939, and was a resident at the Passionist Monastery in Baltimore. He later resided with the Xaverian Brothers at the Augustinian College in Washington.

In 1939, he returned to Villanova as chairman of the physics department. He celebrated his jubilee in the priesthood in 1948.

In June 1951, he was appointed Dean of Engineering at Merrimack.

Old Dining Hall Becomes New Faculty Offices

A plan desired for years and in the development stage for three months unfolded this week as the former dining hall in Mendel became the site of the faculty offices.

The section features offices for all the various departments and a refreshment room. The offices are done in tan tile with green walls while the refreshment room has yellow tile and pink paint.

Mail and Supplies are now available to the faculty members in the section thus eliminating the faculty mail slots in the business office and a trip to the Mendel basement stockroom for stationery.

The Guidance Office under Mr. Murray is in 132, the Dean of Women Miss Dorothy Boyle has her office in 134, and the Dean of the Evening School Dr. Eugene Powers is in 144.

The Religion, Philosophy, Psychology, Education, Sociology and Engineering Departments also are in the new row.

The new mail office has 252 boxes, one for each of the individual professors.

Mr. Hahn -- Fine Night Div. Addition

During the years Villanova's Evening Division has been expanding rapidly. One of the main forces behind this expansion is the group of men that staff the evening school and one of the more outstanding examples of this faculty is Mr. Tobias Hahn, instructor of algebra, analytics and calculus.

Scholarship To Penn

Born in Philadelphia, Mr. Hahn graduated from Central High School with honors and was awarded a scholarship to study medicine at the University of Pennsylvania and one to study mathematics. He accepted the latter, and during his four years at the undergraduate school, he was elected to Phi Betta Kappa, Sigma Xi, and Pi Mu Epsilon.

After graduating in 1917 with a Bachelor's Degree in Arts and Science, he continued his study of mathematics as a Harrison Scholar. Because of World War I, however, Mr. Hahn became a mathematics instructor at the Naval and Marine officers school at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. There he also did mathematical research work in the Radio Research Laboratory.

A University Scholar

In 1921, Mr. Hahn was able to continue his studies in mathematics at the University of Pennsylvania as a University Scholar. At the same time he began his teaching career in the Philadelphia secondary schools. Besides teaching in secondary schools for over 35 years, Mr. Hahn was employed in other phases of teaching.

From 1942 to 1945, he was head of the Department of Mathematics at the San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center where he taught Turkish officers. He also taught for three years in Pennsylvania area colleges before joining Villanova's faculty during the summer of 1956.

Mr. Hahn, who insists upon "good mathematical housekeeping" in his teaching, is married to a former school teacher and has a son who hopes to enter Harvard Medical School next fall.

Sociology Dept. Attends Meeting

The Villanova Sociology Department attending a meeting of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Catholic Sociological Society last Saturday.

The meeting was held at St. Joseph's College High School. The principle speaker was Mr. Dennis Clark of the Philadelphia Catholic Housing Council and Commission on Human Relations. Mr. Clark spoke on the "General Look at Housing."

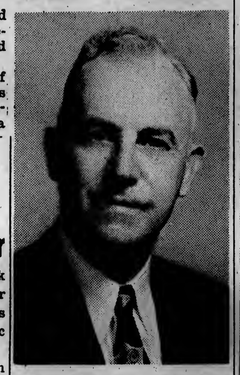
A report was also given on the annual convention of the American Catholic Sociological Society by local members who where in attendance.

Dean Morehouse Feted By 'Engineer Of The Year' Title

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of Engineering, will be honored tonight as Delaware County's "Engineer of the Year." The presentation of a scroll will be the high point of a dinner being held on campus.

The Delaware County Chapter of the Pennsylvania Society of Professional Engineers chose Dr. Morehouse for his "many years of distinguished service as an engineering educator, as an administrator, inspiring to young engineers and students, and as a pioneer in accreditation of engineering colleges and universities."

Dean And Author



Dr. Morehouse has been dean of engineering at Villanova since 1931. He is the author of several books, including Test of Mechanism, 1930, and Ventilation and Air Conditioning, 1932.

He is a member of the American Society of Engineering Educators, Newcomen Society of England, the Engineers Club of Philadelphia, and an ASME fellow. He serves as the American Society of Mechanical Engineers' representative to the Engineering Council for Professional Development.

Doctor of Science

Dr. Morehouse received his ME degree from Stevens Institute of Technology in 1921, and his doctor of science degree from Villanova in 1956.

The award to Dr. Morehouse is part of the Delaware County Chapter's observance of National Engineering Week. William W. Reeder, president of the chapter, announced that the society intends to make such an award every year to further interest in professional engineering and the engineering services to the improvement of the general living standards of mankind.

Catholic College Students to Visit Bermuda at Easter

Bermuda during Easter Week will be a new port of call for Catholic student tours, it has been announced by the Catholic Youth Travel Office.

Chaperoned groups of fifteen students each will fly to the island on Easter Monday, April 22, from New York, Boston or Washington. The return flight will be made Sunday, April 28. Included in the moderate tour price of $215 are all expenses for travel, first class accommodations, and vacation activities of Bermuda's well-known "College Weeks". Headquarters for the tour group will be the Princess Hotel. Student travelers will benefit from the private recreational facilities of the famed hotel.

Information and applications for the Bermuda trip may be obtained from sophomore Frank Fleming, NFCCS delegate on campus.

Alumnus Don Blot Named Treasurer Of Investment Fund

Donald R. Blot, Class of 1952, has been appointed assistant treasurer of the $47 million Delaware Fund, a mutual investment company with shareholders in the United States and abroad.

A resident of Camden, Blot joined the Delaware organization in September 1955. He is a Marine Corps veteran.

Strictly Opinion

By PAUL FINAN

Within the past month, an interesting and quite shocking article appeared in the Advocate, a New Jersey Catholic newspaper, which exposed some 166 doctors for signing a petition which appealed to the New Jersey legislature on behalf of the legalization of enthanasia.

Euthanasia, incidentally, is a fine flowery word which means nothing more than mercy-killing, or, in even simpler words, legalized murder. It is the decision of a doctor, and this term is used quite loosely, to put to an end a patient's suffering by taking away his very existence.

PAUL FINAN

But whether these patients have some incurable disease, or old age is beginning to take hold, the fact still remains that these doctors cannot take a patient's life, regardless of any circumstances. They would be violating a quite simple and vital principle.

What Justification?

This principle is that God alone gives life, and therefore no individual other than God has the right to take life away.

How can these doctors' who are at least obligated to some medical principles, and supposedly devoted to life itself, possibly consider any justification for euthanasia?

Their own lives are supposed to be dedicated to the health and general welfare of their patients, yet some have organized in favor of a plan which would set them up as judges of life and death. They actually want the power to decide whether or not a person may hold on to life.

A doctor caring for some hopeless individual might, at times, become impatient, and with good reason. It might even seem a waste of time and effort to administer medical care in some hopeless cases, but the doctor must remember for a moment that he does not happen to be God Almighty.

Corruption Must Be Curtailed

Everyone should understand what the legalization of euthanasia would mean. It is concerned directly with human life. And this corruption within the medical field must be nipped in the bud; its growth precented at all costs.

Doctors must be more conscientious. They must recall to mind their purpose and duty to the human race. The sincere young medical student must dedicate his practice to the preservation of life.

Many good, sound doctors are always in demand: Not only Catholic doctors, but men of any faith, for a doctor who believes in a maker cannot for a single moment consider the righteousness of euthanasia.

BM's Antrobuses Live By The Skin Of Their Teeth

Mr. Richard Duprey, director of Belle Masque Drama Society, has announced that the spring presentation will be Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth."

The play will be presented April 4 through 7 in the Villanova Field House.

'Skin Is Satire

Auditions were held for the five major roles by Mr. Duprey in the Student Organizations Office Thursday and Friday. Selection of unit managers has not yet been made.

"The Skin of Our Teeth" is a satiric story of the extraordinary adventures of the Antrobus family down through the ages, from the time the great ice wall creeps over the world to the end of the war . . . any war.

The Antrobuses have survived flood, fire, pestilence, the seven year locusts, the ice age, the black pox and the double feature, a dozen or so wars and as many depressions.

Ultimately bewitched, befuddled and becalmed, they are the stuff of which heroes are made . . .heroes and buffoons. They have survived a thousand calamities by the skin of their teeth, and Mr. Wilder's play is a tribute to their indestructibility.

23 Frosh Nurses Go Through Busy Initiation Day

With covered heads and arms bound in slings, 23 freshman nurses suffered through initiation day Thursday.

Their goal was reached that night when they were accepted into Pi Theta Chi, basic nursing sorority, by President Betty Ann Curran.

But before that the nurses, minus any make-up, had to do just about everything—from collecting autographs of students and faculty members to selling paper towels (for a penny) and acting as hostesses at the top of the resident cafeteria ramp.

NECESSARY EVIL

At least one senior English major wasn't overjoyed at the passing of last semester. He has three classes scheduled for Thursdays. Last semester he had the day off.

REAL STARTLER

Residents who thought posting a menu was the last word in dressing up cafeteria service should have passed down the ramp Thursday.

A freshman pledge for Pi Theta Chi sorority had been ordered to greet each diner as he gave his number and daintily announce the lunch menu.

Too bad the initiation lasted only one day.

How KEARFOTT'S Training Program Works...

A "learning by doing" philosophy is basic at Kearfott. As an assistant Project Engineer, you are given assignments in several engineering laboratories to determine in which you can make your best contributions and find your greatest satisfaction. Under the guidance of senior engineers and specialists, each man takes his project through from inception to final production, thus acquiring a broad experience background. Success depends on individual initiative and resourcefulness.

KEARFOTT
is interviewing on your campus
Wednesday, March 6
Make your appointment now with your College Placement Office

Kearfott's leading position in the development and production of aircraft control and navigation instruments makes the company a fertile ground for the young engineer to develop his talents and gain the experience which means success in his chosen profession.

Assisting in the design and development of today's most advanced systems, the graduate engineer quickly gains in knowledge of the functions and applications of the gyros, synchros and other components which comprise systems. You will share in Kearfott's vital role in TACAN, inertial guidance, stable platforms and other servo mechanisms for today's most important jet aircraft and industrial development.

In addition to close association with the engineers whose work has set new standards for the industry, you enjoy an educational assistance program to help you further your formal education, supplementing the "learning by doing" program through which you will choose your field of special interest.

Decentralized plants provide ample opportunity to become familiar with top management and distinguish yourself through initiative and imagination. Salaries and benefits are liberal, and advancement is based on your own value and contribution.

Van Osten's Fiancee:

From Junior Queen Hopeful To Heart Fund Sweetheart

The pretty girl smiling down from Heart Fund posters this month was an entrant in last year's Junior Queen Contest.

Theresa Rigler, a 22-year-old, blue-eyed brunette, is the Sweetheart of the 1957 Heart Fund.

She's also engaged to Dave Van Osten, Villanova senior and a varsity basketball player.

Had Rheumatic Fever

Terry's selection as sweetheart of the fund is appropriate. In 1944, she and three brothers and sisters had rheumatic fever at the same time.

Terry developed a heart murmur, but has completely recovered from both, desipite the fact that one of the principal causes of heart damage is rheumatic fever.

Makes Hats

A graduate of Little Flower High School, Terry is a secretary at Veterans Administration Hospital, studies millinery at Olney High School at night, and makes all her own hats.

She's the second Junior Queen entrant to be selected a queen in Philadelphia. Bonnie Halfpenny, Bill Wescott's date last year, was chosen "Miss Philadelphia TV" last November.

Fellowship Offered For Cuban Study

Competition for the Father Felix Varela Fellowship for study in Cuba is open to American graduate students.

Offered by the Cuban-American Cultural Institute, the award honors the widely-known Cuban educator who lived more than half his life in the United States as Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore and New York.

April 1 Deadline

The fellowship is for study at the University of Havana during the 1957-58 academic year.

Closing date for the competition is April 1. The award covers tuition and most maintenance expenses. The successful applicant must provide his own travel, plus funds for incidentals and other expenses.

Preferred Fields

Candidates in the fields of philosophy, Spanish and Spanish- American literature, history, education, social sciences and law are preferred. Preference will be given to students under 30 years of age not primarily interested in research.

Applicants must be U. S. citizens. Other eligibility requirements are: a bachelor's degree from an American college or university of recognized standing by the date of departure; demonstrated academic ability and capacity for independent study; good moral character; personality and adaptability; good knowledge of Spanish; and good health.

Applications may be secured from the Institute of International Education, 1 E. 67 St.

Remain Secret

As far as other R & D operations are concerned, however, there must remain some mystery. The Rev. John Vrana and Capt. J. J. Guida, Conway Head NFCCS Variety Show

The Philadelphia Region of the National Federation of Catholic College Students has announced the appointment of two Villanova seniors, Mike Guida and Bernie Conway, as producer-directors of the organization's third annual Variety Show, to be presented at several area colleges during the coming months.

Guida In Villanovans

Both men are in complete charge of staging the show, are talented musicians and have been associated with show business in the past. Guida is the clarinetist with the Villanovans Dixieland band. He is also quite familiar with the business, as well as the performing end of the field, having served on the business staffs of several productions.

At the present time he is serving as business manager for the Turf and Tinsel Society which each year presents an original musical comedy.

Conway Pianist

Conway, who also studies in the Commerce and Finance Division, is an accomplished pianist who does quite a bit of dance band work.

The Variety Show, which serves both as a social and fund raising activity of the NFCCS, is patterned after an old fashioned vaudeville show and is composed of student acts from Villanova, LaSalle, St. Joseph's, Immaculata, Chestnut Hill, Rosemont, Gwynedd-Mercy, Holy Family and Manor.

Please Excuse Our Error

The VILLANOVAN wishes to correct an error that appeared in last week's issue. On page seven, the date of the Westinghouse Company's senior interviews was erroneously reported as Feb. 18. Westinghouse representatives will not be on campus until March 15.

Government Offering Summer Jobs

Looking for a summer job? The government has some in Washington. They are offering jobs leading to Statistician positions upon completion of requirements for Bachelor's Degree.

The government says that you can earn and learn at the same time. They want undergraduates who can pass a general aptitude test, and are working in a course which when completed includes not less than 15 semester hours of mathematics and statistics of which 6 hours are in statistics.

For more information students are urged to write to the Personnel Officer, Bureau of the Census, Washington 25, D. C.

Seniors Briefed by Industry Heads On Job Interviews and Applications

What seniors need to know in preparing for job interviews was outlined by three speakers during Villanova's eighth annual Career Conference Thursday.

About 550 seniors gathered in C & F Auditorium heard tips on what the industry recruiter looks for in the applicant; what the student looks for in the company; and how the interviewer evaluates the senior.

Speaker Listed

Speakers were: John R. Toner, market analyst for Sun Oil Company; Charles E. Ruff, personnel officer of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers; Frank J. Gillen, supervisor of college relations for Burroughs Corporation.

Toner, a veteran of 26 years in the petroleum industry, and Ruff are graduates of the University of Pennsylvania. Gillen holds bachelor of science and law degrees from Fordham.

Gallen Chairman

John J. Gallen, head of Villanova's Civil Engineering Department, served as chairman of the panel discussion and directed the question-and-answer period.

Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President, opened the two-hour program with a prayer and welcomed some 50 representatives attending from companies which will be interviewing on campus.

Democratic Youth Mark Anniversary

The Young Democratic Clubs of America will officially open the celebration of their 25th anniversary year with a four day schedule of events to be held at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C., on March 21-24, it was announced by Dick Murphy, YDCA Executive Secretary.

David A. Bunn, President of the YDCA, will preside over the four-day meeting, which will be highlighted by the keynote address of Senator Estes Kefauver (Tenn.) at the National Committee meeting March 22, and the National fund-raising dinner on March 23.

Role Of Youth Discussed

Featured at the dinner, which will emphasize the role of youth in the Democratic Party, will be Democratic Chairman Paul M. Butler, YDCA President David A. Bunn, and five youthful Democratic Senators and Congressmen, representing all sections of the nation. Contributors of fifteen dollars to the YDCA will be guests of the Dinner Committee.

Chairmen Named

President Bunn has designated Dick Murphy, YDCA Executive Secretary, as coordinator for the four day gathering and Stanley Bregman, President of the District of Columbia Young Democrats, as chairman of the Dinner Committee.

Founded 25 Yrs. Ago

The Young Democratic Clubs of America was founded 25 years ago as the first official youth organization of a major American political party. James A. Farley was at that time Chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Tyre Taylor of North Carolina served as the first President.

VU Singers Plan Busy Schedule For Springtime

The Villanova Singers neared completion this week of what promises to be their biggest schedule in recent years. Chief items on this schedule include the second annual Choral Festival to be held at the Field House on March 23 and the dedication of the Law School on April 26 and 27.

Several concerts at neighboring parishes have also been scheduled for April and May.

Other appearances will include a round of the local girl's colleges — Rosemont, Immaculata, and Chestnut Hill beginning on Feb. 28. On March 8 the Singers will appear at Notre Dame Academy for an afternoon concert.

Several alumni groups have contacted the Singers.

Here Are The Rules, Men

In connection with the contest described on page 5, "Glamour" magizine has listed ten points on "how to spot the 'best dressed girl' on campus."

Here they are:

1. She has a nice figure . . . a well-dressed woman is never careless about her shape.

2. She knows that a great deal of her beauty depends on good grooming.

3. She's aware that a college campus is not the place for an extravagant wardrobe, spends only an average amount on clothes. She uses imagination in managing her clothes budget.

4. She dresses according to the customs on her campus. Being "well dressed" is being appropriately dressed.

5. Although she understands her own college's fashion rules, she does have individuality. The way she uses color, the kinds of accessories he wear will make even and everyday outfit unmistakably hers.

6. She knows the difference between good fashion and good college fashion. Away from college she drops fads that are too collegiate for off-campus life.

7. She knows how to wear make-up, but doesn't overdo it.

8. She's fussy about her hair. Makes a point of keeping it clean and shining, wears a hair-do that's becoming and fashionable.

9. She knows her type and sticks to it. It a campus fad doesn't suit her style, she doesn't feel obliged to wear it.

10. She has an over-all wardrobe plan and has probably learned how to use accessories to creat different kinds of looks for her basic wardrobe.

Rosies and Villanovans Aid WVIL In Gaining Popularity

By OWEN KLEIN

On Dec. 9, 1947, WVIL was officially on the air for three hours nightly, a far cry from its present range of operation.

But this was not the first time a radio station has been in operation on campus, because Villanova, in the early 1920's, was one of the first colleges to establish a radio station after the invention of the medium.

This original setup was dismantled during the depression.

Longest Program

For the past nine years WVIL has progressed steadily to a near-professional operation, occupying three rooms in Dougherty Hall.

Among its undertakings is the quiz show, "I Doubt It," presently the longest sustained show on the station.

Quizmaster and Station Manager Ed Shea originated this battle of wits between Rosemont and Villanova as a freshman four years ago. The show, designed to promote a good relationship between the Rosies and Villanovans, consists of questions on current events asked alternately of the two factions, with the answers open to challenge by the opposite team.

More than 100 members of both schools have sat before the mikes each Tuesday at 8:30 and matched wits.

Shea said he hopes the show will continue for years to come and will be the first step in linking the two schools through radio.

More Girls

Another cooperative effort with local girls' colleges is the show, "Do You Know Music," moderated by Gary Mara. This involves a panel on music, in which the opposing girls stay on the show as long as they keep winning.

Begun just last year, is "Wildcat Safari," popular production program on current events in local colleges.

Other top form broadcasts are "Wet Wax Works," the most popular of the disk jockey shows and two other disc productions featuring girls from Rosemont and Immaculata.

With The Teams

In-the-spot sportscast with Shea and Jim Judge announcing have become an integral part of the broadcasting program.

Aside from the student productions are two Lucky Strike-sponsored programs on news and sports, which are nightly presentations.

Foreign Service Bureau Offers Overseas Jobs

Young men and women, 21 to 35 years of age, single with no dependents, who are American citizens in excellent health are being sought by the Foreign Service Bureau of the United States Department of State to fill positions as typists, stenographers, communications clerks and general clerks overseas.

Experience or a substitution of education for no more than two years of experience is a requirement, as well as performance tests for typists and stenographers. Requirements are 50 words per minute for typists and 80 words per minute in shorthand for stenographers. General clerks are required to type at the rate of 35 words-per-minute and communications clerks 45 words-per-minute.

Starting Salary $3390

The starting salary is $3390 a year plus overseas allowances. Government housing is provided or a housing allowance is given to all overseas employees. After two years the employee is returned at the expense of the Government for a six week's home leave. This leave is in addition to a 13-day vacation leave and a 13-day sick leave given all employees at their posts.

Also, overseas positions are open for nurses, between the ages of 25 and 40, single, with four years experience as a graduate nurse. Beginning salary is $4650 per annum plus overseas allowance and free housing.

Positions At Home

Positions in Washington D.C. are open as typists and stenographers to anyone who is 18 years of age and possesses a high school diploma. Typists begin at $3175 per year and stenographers at $3415.

Miss Kathryn Groot, Personnel Officer with the United States Department of State from Washington, D.C., will conduct interviews at the Pennsylvania State Employment Service Office, 5616 Woodland Avenue, Philadelphia, until March 8; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and until seven p.m. Tuesday and Thursday nights.

Qualified candidates are urged to come in for an interview or telephone Belgrade 2-8300.

Mr. Ratigan To Moderate Literary Club

Several junior English majors have organized a Literary Club with Mr. Joseph Ratigan, associate professor of English, assuming the duties of moderator.

The club will be open only to junior and senior English majors.

Joe Kinney, Ted Macri, Leo Rogers and Dave Belcher, all of the class of 1958, are presently developing a constitution which will be presented at the next meeting Feb. 28.

Sale of IC4A Tickets Ends Feb. 28

Tickets for the IC4A Track Meet Saturday, March 2, and the student trip to New York for this occasion will remain on sale in the day hop cafeteria until February 28.

Spirit Committee Chairman Pat Nicholson has announced this date as the termination of ticket sales.

500 Tickets

Villanova has 500 tickets, conveniently located in Madison Square Garden as to afford a full view of the track, priced at one dollar. These tickets are sold at the Garden for two to three dollars.

Students are urged to purchase tickets as soon as possible in order that extra tickets may be purchased before the meet if necessary.

Sold In Field House

In addition to the 11:30-1:30 ticket hours in the cafeteria, tickets are also being sold daily at the ticket office in the Field House till 6 p. m.

Last year the Mainliners' lost to the Green and White of Manhattan, but this year Coach Jumbo Elliott feels that the Wildcat trackmen have a fine chance to cop the title. This opinion is also shared by the New York Herald Tribune, as it has predicted that Villanova will be crowned new IC4A champions.

Support Essential

Mr. Elliott feels that student support at the Garden is essential to a victory.

Nicholson announced that buses will be charted for New York as they were for Boston during the football season.

He also revealed plans for a giant student rally next Wednesday, Feb. 27.

He's Just A "Hound-Dog":

Hey Elvis! Tweeds Say Don't Be Cruel

Perhaps the most controversial entertainer in our country today is Elivs Presley. Much comment concerning him has been about his way of shaking, jiggling, etc. while he sings, and less about his actual singing voice. Comment has come from all types of people. He has been both hotly criticized and praised by the clergy, by politicians, by other entertainers, and by about everyone else who has heard him. And probably by some who haven't seen or heard him.

In order to get the collegiate slant on Elivis, Associated Collegiate Press asked the following question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

DO YOU ENJOY LISTENING TO ELVIS PRESLEY?

The results in percentages:

	Men	Women	Total
Yes	35	44	38
No	54	46	51
Undecided ..	11	10	11

It is interesting to note that coeds are a bit more favorably inclined toward Elvis than college men. Just what this means, however, is open to speculation, expecially since many of the coeds say they enjoy listing to Elvis but "can't stand watching him."

Don't Like His Looks

This ability to enjoy Presley's singing but not his looks is, however, not restricted to the coeds by any means. It is the dominant qualification of all students answering that they enjoy his singing. In fact, few students give Elvis an unqualified "OK." Typical is the response of a South Georgia College (Douglas) sophomore who says: "I like his voice but he is too vulgar to watch."

Here are a few comments by other students who like his voice, but!!! A freshman attending the University of Denver says : "Some of his slower tempo songs are not bad, and he does have a fairly good voice minus the gyrations," and a Wake Forest College (Winston-Salem, N.C.) senior coed thinks "his voice sounds all right when he's out of your sight."

"I enjoy some of his songs; mainly from the beat and rhythm angle," is the comment of a graduate student at Rochester Institute of Technology

Some Say He's "Enjoyable"

Some students do give Elvis 100% aproval, however. "I think he is a talented singer" is the way a Tyler Junior College (Tyler, Texas) freshman puts it. And a Maryland University (College Park) junior has this interesting comment: "Some of his hits are very enjoyable. But many people who do enjoy him don't admit it for fear of degrading themselves."

Students answering NO to the question have a wide variety of comments as to why they dislike his voice. The most frequent remark is that Elvis lacks talent, or as a University of Whyming (Laramie) sophomore puts it: "He is not a musician in any sense." Also frequent are comments that both his voice and actions are "repulsive."

"Immature And Emotional"

"In very small doses he can easily be digested, but in large doses he upsets my stomach" is the feeling of a junior coed at Ohio University (Athens), while a Wake Forest College junior says: "'Love Me Tender' is the only Elvis Presley song I like because it doesn't sound like him." And a University of Denver coed echoes another element of student feeling with this statement: "His appeal is too immature and emotional."

ENGINEERING OPPORTUNITIES AT MELPAR TO BE DISCUSSED ON CAMPUS SOON

One Of Nation's Leading Electronic R & D Companies To Interview Engineering, Physics, Math Majors

Unusual opportunities for rapid professional growth and advancement at Melpar, Inc., one of the Nation's leading electronic research and development organizations, will be detailed to interested engineering, math and physics majors in a series of interviews to be held on campus soon.

A subsidiary of Westinghouse Air Brake Company, Melpar is now engaged in a program of expansion involving substantial increases in staff and facilities.

Despite Melpar's rapid expansion, the highest standards of personnel selection are constantly maintained. This selective process has produced a vigorous organization of great experience and competence in all fields of electronics.

Younger men who wish to apply their engineering knowledge to problems of a varied and challenging nature are required to fill important posts in Melpar project groups. Plan to interview the Melpar representative when he visits your campus.

No Waiting For "Automatic" Advancement at Melpar

At Melpar there is no waiting period for "automatic" advancement. Instead, an engineer, regardless of his age or tenure, may move ahead as rapidly as his skill and performance dictate. Each engineer's achievement is reviewed at least twice a year. In this manner engineers deserving advancement can be quickly "spotted" and promoted. As soon as an engineer is ready for more complex responsibilities they are given him.

Melpar Gives Financial Assistance For Advanced Study

The list of universities located near Melpar laboratories that offer graduate and undergraduate courses in engineering subjects includes: Georgetown University, George Washington University, American University, Catholic University, University of Maryland, University of Virginia, Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Northeastern University, and Boston University. Melpar offers financial assistance for study at these distinguished schools.

Many Extra Benefits

Melpar's personnel policies and salary structure compare most favorably with those of the industry as a whole. The Company maintains a liberal program of benefits too extensive to detail in this space.

Choose Assignments From Varied Fields

Engineers who join Melpar may choose their assignments from one or more of these challenging fields:

Flight Simulators • Radar and Countermeasures • Network Theory • Systems Evaluation • Microwave Techniques • Analog & Digital Computers • Magnetic Tape Handling • UHF, VHF, or SHF Receivers • Packaging Electronic Equipment • Pulse Circuitry • Microwave Filters • Servo-mechanisms • Subminiaturization • Electro-Mechanical Design • Small Mechanisms • Quality Control & Test Engineering

Fine Living Conditions Offered By Melpar Locales

Melpar's R & D operations are centered near and in Washington, D. C. and Boston, Mass. Both are rich in cultural and educational facilities. The Northern Virginia area in which Melpar's headquarters laboratory is located is within easy driving range of beaches, lakes, mountains, as well as other recreational and scenic points. The climate allows outdoor recreation 215 days of the year. Fine homes and apartments in all price ranges are readily available.

Melpar's Boston area plants allow engineers to enjoy the pleasant tempo of New England living coupled with Boston's splendid cultural and educational advantages. Melpar pays re-location expenses.

Booklets Available

An attractive, fully-illustrated booklet describing living conditions prevailing in the Washington, D. C. area can be obtained from your campus Placement Officer.

Grads Go To Work At Once

The college or university graduate who joins Melpar is not required to undergo a formal training program. Instead, he immediately becomes a member of a project group and is assigned to work with an experienced engineer whose guidance and assistance enable him to advance rapidly. Members of Melpar project groups gain experience in all phases of engineering problems by free and frequent interchange of ideas during group meetings. Such experience is valuable in leading to eventual managerial responsibility.

Melpar Experiences Sure & Steady Growth

Founded in 1945, Melpar has doubled in size every 18 months for the past 11 years. Recently it completed erection of a complete new headquarters laboratory near the Nation's Capital, and is presently making substantial additions to its Watertown, Mass. laboratory (6 miles west of Boston), and to its research department in Boston.

Located on a 44-acre landscaped tract in Fairfax County, Virginia, only 10 miles from Washington, D. C., Melpar's main laboratories encompass over 265,000 square feet under a single roof. Fully air-conditioned, they are equipped with every facility. In addition to the new, ultra-modern headquarters plant, Melpar maintains additional facilities in Arlington, Virginia, Boston and Watertown, Massachusetts, for a total of 460,000 square feet.

University Courses Offered at Melpar

Melpar staff members, both holders and non-holders of degrees, may take advantage of the many fully-accredited courses in engineering subjects which are offered at Melpar's headquarters laboratory.

Qualified Graduates Offered Paid Inspection Trips

After a personal interview on their campus, qualified candidates may be invited to visit Melpar's headquarters laboratory at Company expense. Information on opportunities available for graduates together with details on living conditions in Northern Virginia is available by simply writing: Mr. William Schaub, Melpar, Inc., 3000 Arlington Blvd., Falls Church, Virginia.

Make Appointment Now For Melpar Interview February 28

To secure an appointment with the Melpar representative when he visits your campus, contact your Placement Officer today. At the same time ask him for booklets on Melpar and the Northern Virginia area. We believe you will find them of unusual interest.

SPORTS CHATTER

Look To The Future

By BOB MULCAHY

It is hard to find something to praise during a losing season, but there were evidences pointing toward a more sucessful season in the future during last Saturday's Palestra battle with Richmond.

Despite the basketball team's lack of success on the court, few who have seen them play will deny that the men in Villanova uniforms possess a great deal of ability.

The starting team against Richmond was comprised of a senior, Al Griffith; two juniors, Jack Kelly and Tom Brennan; and two sophomores, Ken Harrison and George Emma. It was a smooth working unit which domniated the game for the first 30 minutes and gives us a basis to hope that next year's quintet, with the now injured Joe Ryan filling in for the graduating Griffith, will be a team to contend with. Brennan was especially impressive, garnering 26 rebounds, a new season's high.

What Is The Reason?

Despite some unaccountable losing streaks, this year's Wildcat five still stands a chance to avoid a losing record by winning the remainder of the games on the schedule. Because of the high pre-season rating given the team by many experts the resulting record is a big disappointment.

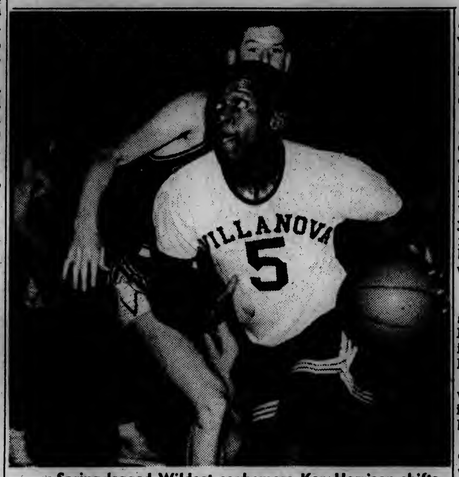
Still, the much vaunted Villanova spirit of last semester must not die out. Now it is needed more than ever. The men who are fighting their hearts out for Villanova on the basketball court need and deserve the student body fully behind them. We hope, as do all students, that whatever is causing the team's problem will eventually be found aut and remedied.

Another Student Trip

On the brighter side of Villanova athletics is the track season which is now in full swing. The IC4A Indoor Track Championships will take place in New York's Madison Square Garden on March 2. Five hundred special student tickets to the meet are on sale daily in the snack bar thanks to the Spirit Committee. Here's your chance to see our world famous team in action in what is probably the most important meet of the indoor season. Tickets are only one dollar, so let's dig into those wallets and give New York the same kind of show we gave Boston last October.

Dwyer's Nightmare

Fred Dwyer, who has emerged as America's foremost miler, has done a lot for Villanova University. Fred still runs in a Villanova jersey, and when he is mentioned in the nation's press, his name is usually prefixed by the words "Villanova alumnus." Dwyer is also one of the main reasons that one of the world's top milers, Ronnie Delany, is running for Villanova. When Fred was in Ireland, he told Ronnie of the school. So, Freddie brought Delany here from Ireland, and now, by a quirk of fate, the Dublin flash will probably be the only man the ex-Wildcat will be unable to beat during the track season.



What's In A Name:

Speaking of Delany, he is a man who was forever plagued by a terrible affliction—no one could spell his name. When Ron became the youngest man to break the four minute mile, the national press associations all mispelled it, but by the time he became Olympic 1500 meter champion they had learned the correct spelling. Unfortunately, after the champion's name had been flashed around the world correctly, the Philadelphia Inquirer misspelled it in its headline above the story.

Finally, as the indoor track season rolled around, it looked as though everyone had conquered this mysterious malady. All the newspapers and wire services had his name right, and it seemed Ron Delany was free of his affiliction. However, this was not to be.

In the Villanova University athletic trophy cases in Dougherty Hall in one spot, Delany's name is misspelled.

Track Team Scores With Four Firsts In NY Meet

Spring-legged Wildcat sophomore Ken Harrison shifts into high gear under Richmond's basket last Saturday night at the Palestra. It's eyes up and the ball too as Kenny gets set to net two points for the 'Cats. Richmond defender is unidentified.

Ron Delany and Phil Reavis continued on their undefeated ways while Charley Jenkins broke a two week slump at last Saturday's New York Athletic Club games in Madison Square Garden.

It's beginning to look like the excitement in any race Delany enters will be the battle to see who can finish second. Ron scored his 11th straight indoor mile victory by beating Villanova alumnus Fred Dwyer by ten yards. The Irish ace, who is a member of the Wildcat squad because of the efforts of Dwyer, was clocked in 4:06.8.

Ron, Phil Desert Foes

Reavis also extended a season-long undefeated skein. While Delany is running his oposition into the ground, Phil is leaving his on the ground. He set a new meet record in the high jump with a leap of six feet, 9¾ inches, beating his nearest rival by two inches.

After losing in his last two outings, Jenkins returned to the victory trail in the same meet in which he had set a world's record one year ago. Charley led all the way to win the Buermeyer 500 in 57 seconds flat, only six-tenths of a second slower than his record performance in 1956.

The mile relay team, which was beaten for the first time this week before in the Millrose Games, raced to another victory, being timed in 3:19.6. Participating Wildcats were Gene Maliff, John Furlinger, Al Peterson, and Jenkins.

Sydnor Pulls Muscle

However, all was not well with the Wildcats. George Sydnor pulled a leg muscle in the last ten yards of the 60-yard dash and probably will be unable to run in this week's National A.A.U. championship meet. Sydnor was second to Willie Williams of the Army, missing his first victory of the season by inches.

Villanova's mighty pole vaulter Don Bragg tied for third in his event with a vault of 14 feet, 9 inches. Alex Breckenridge, the Wildcat from Scotland, was fifth in the two mile run. This event was won by a recently vanquished foe of Delany's, Laszlo Tabori, in 8:53.4. Bob Holup fourth in the high hurdles.

Swimmers Defeat PMC For Second Win In Four Days

By DON KEMPF

Villanova's swimming team continued their winning ways last Wednesday as they trounced Penn Military College by a one sided 54-28 score in the Villanova pool for their second win in four days.

The Wildcats of Coach Ed Geisz were again spearheaded by Captain Lou Schoener and Senior Don Couig. Schoener captured first place for the Mainliners in the 220 yard freestyle event in the time of 2:27.5 with sophomore Joe Lynch taking second. Couig came home first in the 100 yard freestyle edging another Villanovan, sophomore Ken MacGilivray in the time of 0:58.1.

50 Yard Freestyle

Villanovans also finished one-two in the 50 yard freestyle with Lou Pinto winning in 0:26.2 and John Rumberger finishing second.

Junior Mike Rafferty was awarded first place in the diving with sophomore Bill Gilhool placing second for the Wildcats. Two more first places were won when sophomores Jerry Cechony and Jim Gregory splashed to victories in their events. Cechony won the 200 yard backstroke in 2:40.3 and Gregory won the 200 yard breaststroke

Wildcats Suffer Two Last Second Defeats To Fordham And Richmond

by Hank Nichols

Succsesive one-point defeats at the hands of Fordham and Richmond extended the current Villanova losing streak to four in a row last week. The season's log now stands at 7-12, as Villanova is experiencing its worst on the hardwoods in over 10 years.

Against Richmond, the Cats raced to an early ten-point lead. They managed to hold the spread throughout the first half and leave the floor at intermission on the long end of a 35-25 score. Excellent outside shooting by George Emma and Ken Harrison provided most of Villanova's first-half scoring punch, while Tom Brennan did yoemen work off the boards, garnering 15 rebounds.

Bad Ball Handling

Emma and Harrison lost the range in the second half, but Al Griffith came to life and took up the slack to keep Villanova out in front. Richmond kept plugging away from outside, however, and took advantage of some atrocious Wildcat ballhandling to take the lead 59-58, with five minutes remaining. The two teams matched baskets until Ken Cole, one of three freshmen who helped sink the Mainliners, hit on a long one-hander to give the Spiders the lead 63-62 with 2:39 to go.

Villanova got possession with 1:23 remaining. Kelly then missed a jump shot with less than a minute left, but Harrison grabbed the rebound, only to have Emma lose it on a violation with 40 seconds to go. Richmond converted two of four free-throw attempts, and upped its margin to 65-62. Griffith's layup at the buzzer made the final 65-64.

Griffith High Scorer

Griffith topped Villanova with 16 points, Tom Brennan followed with 14. Brennan was a work horse under the boards as he gathered 26 rebounds, before fouling out in the latter stage of the game. Cole and Theryl Willis both hit for 14 points to lead the Spider's scoring, but it was a 6-7 freshman, Wayne Cheek, who turned the tide for the Southerners as he scored all ten of his points in the second half, and added some outstanding rebounding to lead his team's comeback victory.

Fordham's homesteading Rams eked out an overtime thriller last Wednesday night, as the Wildcats ran out of gas after rallying to force the extra session.

The first half lead see-sawed back and forth, as both clubs proved to be slightly off in their shooting, until the Rams scored four quick two-pointers to gain an eight-point advantage, 33-25, at halftime. They maintained this margin until the Cats caught fire and rallied to tie at 62 all on a jump shot by Griffith as regulation time ran out. Griffith hit six jump shots in the second half.

Fahey and Brennen both fouled out late in the second half, and Villanova played the overtime without its two leading rebounders. Even at this, the Cats almost pulled it out, but Jack Weissmann's long jump shot at the buzzer failed to find the mark, and the final score read 69-68.

Harrison Has 20

Hard-driving Jim Cunningham led the Rams as he tallied 29 points. Harrison, just recently elevated to a starting role, continued his fine play as he topped the Wildcat offense with 20 markers. Griffith, Jack Kelly and Jim Fahey followed in the point production with 14, 12 and 10, respectively.

Wildcats Stop Scranton 84-68

The Villanova basketball Wildcats squeezed by Scranton University at the Field House Monday night 84-68 and kept their home court winning streak in tact at 74 straight games.

The score read 38-35 at half time and the Mainliners didn't pull comfortably ahead until the last five minutes of the game. Their record now stands at 8 won, 12 lost.

Jim Fahey and Ken Harrison led the Villanova attack with 22 and 18 points respectively. Al Griffith and George Emma netted 12 apiece.

Tom Keefe collected 21 points for Scranton and high-scoring sophomore Ed Kazakavich bucketed 19.

The Wildcats next home game is also at the Field House, against Brandeis, Tuesday, Feb. 26.

Reavis Aims for World's Record; Greatest for Size

"For his size, the greatest high jumper in history." This is the tribute that Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, Villanova's great track coach, pays his ace high jumper, Phil Reavis. Of course, it is not unusual for a coach to praise his own men, or even to over-emphasize their abilities, but a look at Phil's record will prove that Elliott's claim is no exaggeration.

He Was Better

The 20 year old Wildcat star was born in Cambridge, Mass., but was living in Somerville when he entered high school and began his climb to fame. Reavis ran a leg on the mile relay team during his three years on the team in high school along with his jumping, but decided to concentrate on the latter because, as he says, "I was better at it." "Better" is hardly the word.

While a member of the Somerville High School team Phil's highest leap was 6' 6¼", but there is a slightly shorter jump that he remembers much better. His 6' 5⅛" leap set an indoor schoolboy world's record.

Recommended to the school by his friend, Charley Jenkins, who was then a freshman, Phil matriculated at Villanova after his graduation. Participating only in the indoor meets, he reached 6' 7" as a freshman.

The Crowd Stayed

Since he is only 5' 9", many track experts did not expect Phil to be able to match his taller opponents when he entered varsity track competition. However, when he vaulted 6' 10" in the 1955 Inquirer Games to earn his niche as one of Villanova's "Fabulous Five," they were forced to eat their words. Most of the crowd stayed long after the meet was over that night to watch with awe as the lithe lad in the Villanova jersey leaped high above his own head. His ability to jump more than a foot above his height is still the subject of much discussion.

This year Reavis is undefeated in four meets although he has been tied twice.

Aims For Record

Reavis would like to teach after graduation, perhaps English or History, but at the moment he has his eyes set on a more immediate objective — on the track boards.

When asked what his big ambition was, he replied, "To clear seven feet." Then he thought a moment. "No, change that. Say I'd like to set a world's record."

Well, all Villanova fans would like to see him do it. So would "Jumbo" Elliott. To him, Phil Reavis is the greatest.

Rinkacs, Navy Frogman, Now 'Cat Champ

Senior Denny Rinkacs, in his last year on the Villanova swimming team, has built an enviable swimming record for himself. Since the beginning of his career, which dates back to 1948 when he was a freshman in high school, Denny has been a top man in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle.

Rinkacs was a standout performer on the Duquense high school team in western Pennsylvania for four years. In 1950 he was runnerup in the 50 yard freestyle state finals. And in 1951, his senior year, Den was the state 50 yard freestyle champion. He also finished third in the 100 yard freestyle event.

From Pitt To Navy

After graduation from high school, Rinkacs attended Pittsburgh University on a swimming scholarship. He stayed there for one semester and then entered the navy early in 1952. He matriculated here in the fall of 1953 on an N.R.O.T.C., fleet scholarship.

DENNY RINKACS
Senior Swimmer

While in the fleet, Denny finished first in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events in the Fourth Naval District. He also served as a frogman before matriculating to Villanova.

Active On Campus

Besides his swimming, Den has also been active in many other campus functions. An Arts and Science student, he is in the Delta Pi Mu fraternity and is a member of the intramural council. Rinkacs has helped to provide the senior class with many successful social events. Denny served as band chairman this year for the Belle Air Ball and has been a key figure in the designing and building of decorations for his class's social functions since his freshman year.

While in the Navy, Rinkacs served as an underwater frogman. Ask any of his opponents, they'll tell you he must have been a good one.

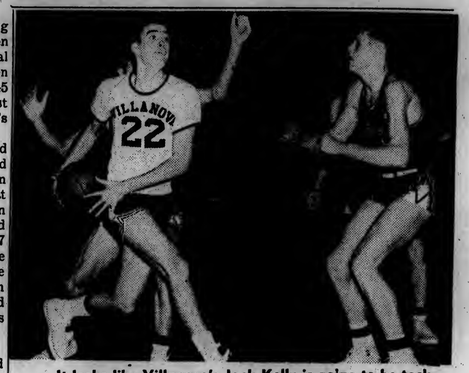
Reider Breaks Freshman Scoring Record With 45 Points Against St. Joe's

By BILL CHRISTY

George Reider, the big scoring gun for Villanova's freshmen team, has broken the individual scoring record for freshmen competition at Villanova with 45 points in the game played last Thursday against St. Joseph's College.



The record was formerly held by Sherman White, who played a half-term for the Wildcats in 1948. It was on Jan. 14 of that year that the Wildcats took on Rutgers University in the Field House and White garnered 37 points for a dual record of the most points per freshmen game and the most points scored in any game played at the Field House. The latter record was later broken by Paul Arizin.

Averages 28

Reider has consistently scored well, averaging over 28 points per game in the last four contests. Although the team has won only half of these last four tilts, its playing has surpassed the story told by the scores.

George Raveling and Jim Rolles have taken over the rebounding chores left weakened by John Driscoll's departure at mid-term, and have ably carried out this assignment. The team effort has been further aided by the consistently smooth assist play of Bob Goudlock.

The St. Joseph's College game, in which Reider copped the scoring record, ended after three over-time periods, with the Wildcats on the short end of a 104-95 score. The regulation game ended in a deadlock at 80 and was followed by additional ties at 84 and 95.

It looks like Villanova's Jack Kelly is going to be tackled, but actually he's about to dunk two points for the Wildcats against Rishmond at the Palestra last Saturday night.

Lost Four Men

Not until Villanova had lost four men—Raveling, Goudlock, Ward and Rolles did St. Joseph's pull ahead. These men, along with Reider, had starred and upon their departure, St. Joseph's gained the edge.

Lose To Pirates

Four days earlier at Seton Hall, the 'Cats succumbed after a close, hard fought contest by a 82-75 score. This game was won in the second half. Both teams were tied at 36 at half-time. Reider again took scoring honors with 23 points.

The Penn game, on Jan. 16, despite the final score of 62-61, had Villanova leading all the way. Raveling and Reider shared the high-point laurels with 20 each.

Hank Miller, Chris Kloss Lead Villanova Shooters

Sgt. Molcany, coach of the Villanova University varsity rifle team, last week announced the individual standings of his marksmen for the first half of their season. Captain Hank Miller led the squad in the first five matches with an average of 284.2 points per meet. Miller's overall average was greatly helped by his near perfect shooting in the season's opener against Western Maryland when he shot a score of 290 out of a possible 300 points. In doing so he became the first Villanova Marksman to break the 290 point barrier.

Chris Kloss is a close second to Miller in the scoring race maintaining an average of 282.8. Kloss who also shots for the Wildcat NROTC team is in second place in the Philadelphia ROTC League scoring race with an overall average of 278.4. He also has shot the highest individual score in the league, a 287.

Other scoring leaders of the team are—Jim Abernethy-274.8, Fred Passarella-272.8, Pete Carini-272.6, Frank Moser-266, Jim McCurley-254.2.

Cats Beat Fordham

The Villanova marksmen recently downed a strong Fordham University team 1398-1364. Captain Miller again led the team scoring with a very impressive total of 298 points. Chris Kloss fired a 284 for the winners. Frank Moser, Fred Passarella, and Pete Carini accounted for the other Wildcat scoring contributing 276, 275 and 274 points respectively.

The riflemen earlier this season downed Western Maryland, Princeton, LaSalle, and Lehigh. They have yet to meet John Hopkins, Penn State, St. John's and a very strong Manhattan team. They close their season in March with the National Rifle Association's Intercollegiate sectional Championships. Last year the Cats finished second in this match. At this meet the marksmen of Sgt. Molcany will complete against some of the best teams in the East.

event with a 2:43.5 timing.

Jim Donnelly captured another first for the Mainliners as he coasted to an easy victory in the 440 yard freestyle event with a 6:21.5 clocking.

Eighth First Place

Villanova's team of Gilhool, Bob Pinto, Rumberger, and Nelson Baker captured the 400 yard freestyle relay with a timing of 4:38.5 to give the Wildcats their eighth first place in the ten event meet.

The 'Cats have hopes of boosting their season's record to seven and one by winning the two meets scheduled for this week. They take on a strong Temple squad today in the University pool and travel to Drexel for another meet on Friday.

Fr. Dunn, Ed Geisz, Council Direct Intramural Activities

By FRANK FLEMING

Villanova University can be very proud of its fine and extensive intramural system. The system which is completely student-operated may be compared with that of any intramural program in the country. The backbone of the organization is the Intramural Council. This group of students governs the University's entire program and provides most of the officials for the non-varsity contests.

The entire program is under the guidance of Intramural Director Ed Geisz. He not only works with the Intramural Council in planning and carrying out the programs of his department, but does most of the actual physical work necessary to such an extensive system.

Geisz Lines Fields

He may be seen about campus throughout the year clad in mud-smeared clothing lining fields, installing bases on the softball diamond, or revamping the horseshoe pits on Mendel Field. This jovial friend of Villanova is cften to be seen in the snack bar posting schedules and notices of coming events or arranging for members of the council to officiate coming events. In addition to his intramural chores Ed finds time to coach the varsity swimming team, which in its four years of existence, has turned into one of the leading tank teams in the area. At the present time the former LaSalle swim captain is working for his master's degree in the Villanova Evening Division.

Always Around

The entire program is overseen by Rev. John Dunne, faculty moderator of the department. Father Dunne is probably the best known member of the Intramural Department. He has become a campus tradition at intramural events. Throughout the year he can be seen at events sponsored by the department encouraging and assisting the athletes.

Another member of the department who has become a campus tradition is Intramural Council Presdent Jim Moran. Jim is perhaps the best known official, intramural or varsity, to Villanova students.

Consider Protests

Moran and his three commissioners — Pete O'Brien, Jim Corey and Al Stoughton —are responsible for most new ideas and programs which are added to the system each year. They prepare most of the schedules and make the decsions on protested games and problems of that nature.

ED GEISZ
Coordinator of Intramural Program

This year the department has arranged 28 programs. These events are geared to give every student an opportunity to participate in his favorite athletic pursuit, be it football, basketball, swimming or horseshoes, ping pong, or even checkers and chess. Last year over 2,700 students participated in these programs and all individual champions and members of championship teams were awarded Intramural Keys.

Field House Used

Several inovations have been made in the system this year. One of these is the organization of an evening basketball league competing in the University Field House. This league plays four games each evening. The addition of this league provides opportunity for 80 additional players to take part each evening in the program. Last week, the Council approved the formation of a weight lifting club which will work under the Intramural program. This group has secured a wing of the field house for use in their body building exercises.

Many students have in the past complained of a lack of facilities for the intramural program, but a survey of the facilities available immediately kills these arguments. The department provides four football-softball fields which are spread out over various parts of the campus.

Alumni Gym Open

Students may use Alumni Gym for basketball and the Field House is used for additional evening leagues. During the spring and fall, four outdoor courts are available at the Field House. There are several tennis courts behind the old Pie Shoppe near the railroad. There are several horseshoe pits set up near Mendel Field.

The swimming pool is open to students every afternoon when the varsity team is not in a practice session. Alumni Gym is fitted with devices with which Villanovans may work out.

Provides Equipment

In addition to these, the department supplies complete equipment for all sports.

Working for the students, Villanova's Intramural Department can be ranked with any other such system in the country. This is due to the efforts of Father Dunne, Ed Geisz and the Intramural Council.

Basketball Team Opposes W&L, N.C. State, Brandeis

The Villanova Wildcats move into three more tough games in the next week as they try to avoid the first losing season in ten years. Plying in three different locations the Mainliners will be hampered by the loss of sophomore ace Joe Ryan, out of action with a knee injury.

The week's scheduling will begin tonight as the 'Cats face a high scoring Washington and Lee quintet. The Generals feature sharp-shooting junior Dom Flora, who has tallied 1140 points in his first two years of competition. Teamed with him as a double barrelled threat will be center Lee Marshall, who scored 346 points last year although he was out a large part of the season with injuries. Marshall will co-captain the Generals with Lee Storick, a forward.

The whole team from down Virginia way will be made up of returnees from last year's aggregation that won 11 of its 14 games. It is an experienced five, well capable of springing an upset.

Then The Wolfpack

The following Saturday night the Wildcats will travel to Raleigh, North Carolina, to face the Wolfpack of coach Everett Case. When North Carolina State was riding high in the national ratings Villanova always seemed to hold a jinx over them, and it will be interesting to see what will happen when hostilities are renewed after a year's lay-off. Villanova holds the distinction of being the first team to ever score more than 100 points against a Case-coached squad, two years ago when the Wildcats downed the Wolfpack twice.

The Wolfpack received a setback three weeks ago when co-captains Maglio and Hafer were dropped for academic reasons, but the Mainliners will still have to contend with 6' 11' center Bob Seitz.

Next Tuesday the Wildcats will abandon the teams from Dixie to face Brandeis on campus in an attempt to keep alive a 73 game winning streak in the Field House.

Villanova Gains Second in Race For Spirit Trophy

Villanova University is now in second place in the race for the Sportsmanship Trophy.

This advancement in the Big Five standings came about after the high rating given Villanova for the Temple game.

The judges commended the Villanova student body for the spirit exhibited even though the team trailed throughout the game.

Pat Nicholson, Spirit Committee Chairman, urges students to "continue the good work and aim for first place."

Intramural Group Meets, Schedules Due for Revision

There will be a meeting of the Intramural Council tomorrow at 10:30 A.M. at Alumni Gym. All intramural basketball managers or captains must attend this meeting. Team captains and managers are also reminded to post the scores of all their games on the bulletin board in the Intramural Office — 112 Alumni Hall. If the games are not posted by tomorrow, they will be counted as forfeits.

At this meeting there will be a revision of the basketball schedules and plans will be discussed for the future round-robin tournament for the seven league leaders. This tournament will begin March 11 and each of the five Alumni Gym Leagues and two Field House Leagues will be represented by their first place team.

Pictures Taken

Pictures of the members of the Intramural Council will be taken for the Yearbook. The final things to be discussed is the Spring intramural activities, including the softball league. Entry blanks for this league will be given out soon.

However, James Moran, President of the Intramural Council, emphasizes that this meeting is being called chiefly for the captains of the respective intramural teams who have been lax in submitting scores of the intramural basketball games to the Intramural Office in Alumni Hall.

Jim Donnelly captured another first for the Mainliners as he coasted to an easy victory in the 440 yard freestyle event with a 6:21.5 clocking.

Eighth First Place

Villanova's team of Gilhool, Bob Pinto, Rumberger, and Nelson Baker captured the 400 yard freestyle relay with a timing of 4:38.5 to give the Wildcats their eighth first place in the ten event meet.

The 'Cats have hopes of boosting their season's record to seven and one by winning the two meets scheduled for this week. They take on a strong Temple squad today in the University pool and travel to Drexel for another meet on Friday.

Fr. Dunn, Ed Geisz, Council Direct Intramural Activities

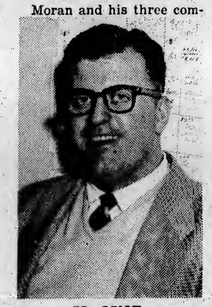
By FRANK FLEMING

Villanova University can be very proud of its fine and extensive intramural system. The system which is completely student-operated may be compared with that of any intramural program in the country. The backbone of the organization is the Intramural Council. This group of students governs the University's entire program and provides most of the officials for the non-varsity contests.

The entire program is under the guidance of Intramural Director Ed Geisz. He not only works with the Intramural Council in planning and carrying out the programs of his department, but does most of the actual physical work necessary to such an extensive system.

Geisz Lines Fields

He may be seen about campus throughout the year clad in mud-smeared clothing lining fields, installing bases on the softball diamond, or revamping the horseshoe pits on Mendel Field. This jovial friend of Villanova is often to be seen in the snack bar posting schedules and notices of coming events or arranging for members of the council to officiate coming events. In addition to his intramural chores Ed finds time to coach the varsity swimming team, which in its four years of existence, has turned into one of the leading tank teams in the area. At the present time the former LaSalle swim captain is working for his master's degree in the Villanova Evening Division.



Always Around

The entire program is overseen by Rev. John Dunne, faculty moderator of the department. Father Dunne is probably the best known member of the Intramural Department. He has become a campus tradition at intramural events. Throughout the year he can be seen at events sponsored by the department encouraging and assisting the athletes.

Another member of the department who has become a campus tradition is Intramural Council Presdent Jim Moran. Jim is perhaps the best known official, intramural or varsity, to Villanova students.

Consider Protests

Moran and his three commissioners — Pete O'Brien, Jim Corey and Al Stoughton —are responsible for most new ideas and programs which are added to the system each year. They prepare most of the schedules and make the decsions on protested games and problems of that nature.

ED GEISZ
Coordinator of Intramural Program

This year the department has arranged 28 programs. These events are geared to give every student an opportunity to participate in his favorite athletic pursuit, be it football, basketball, swimming or horseshoes, ping pong, or even checkers and chess. Last year over 2,700 students participated in these programs and all individual champions and members of championship teams were awarded Intramural Keys.

Field House Used

Several inovations have been made in the system this year. One of these is the organization of an evening basketball league competing in the University Field House. This league plays four games each evening. The addition of this league provides opportunity for 80 additional players to take part each evening in the program. Last week, the Council approved the formation of a weight lifting club which will work under the Intramural program. This group has secured a wing of the field house for use in their body building exercises.

Many students have in the past complained of a lack of facilities for the intramural program, but a survey of the facilities available immediately kills these arguments. The department provides four football-softball fields which are spread out over various parts of the campus.

Alumni Gym Open

Students may use Alumni Gym for basketball and the Field House is used for additional evening leagues. During the spring and fall, four outdoor courts are available at the Field House. There are several tennis courts behind the old Pie Shoppe near the railroad. There are several horseshoe pits set up near Mendel Field.

The swimming pool is open to students every afternoon when the varsity team is not in a practice session. Alumni Gym is fitted with devices with which Villanovans may work out.

Provides Equipment

In addition to these, the department supplies complete equipment for all sports.

Working for the students, Villanova's Intramural Department can be ranked with any other such system in the country. This is due to the efforts of Father Dunne, Ed Geisz and the Intramural Council.

Basketball Team Opposes W&L, N.C. State, Brandeis

The Villanova Wildcats move into three more tough games in the next week as they try to avoid the first losing season in ten years. Plying in three different locations the Mainliners will be hampered by the loss of sophomore ace Joe Ryan, out of action with a knee injury.

The week's scheduling will begin tonight as the 'Cats face a high scoring Washington and Lee quintet. The Generals feature sharp-shooting junior Dom Flora, who has tallied 1140 points in his first two years of competition. Teamed with him as a double barrelled threat will be center Lee Marshall, who scored 346 points last year although he was out a large part of the season with injuries. Marshall will co-captain the Generals with Lee Storick, a forward.

The whole team from down Virginia way will be made up of returnees from last year's aggregation that won 11 of its 14 games. It is an experienced five, well capable of springing an upset.

Then The Wolfpack

The following Saturday night the Wildcats will travel to Raleigh, North Carolina, to face the Wolfpack of coach Everett Case. When North Carolina State was riding high in the national ratings Villanova always seemed to hold a jinx over them, and it will be interesting to see what will happen when hostilities are renewed after a year's lay-off. Villanova holds the distinction of being the first team to ever score more than 100 points against a Case-coached squad, two years ago when the Wildcats downed the Wolfpack twice.

The Wolfpack received a setback three weeks ago when co-captains Maglio and Hafer were dropped for academic reasons, but the Mainliners will still have to contend with 6' 11' center Bob Seitz.

Next Tuesday the Wildcats will abandon the teams from Dixie to face Brandeis on campus in an attempt to keep alive a 73 game winning streak in the Field House.

Villanova Gains Second in Race For Spirit Trophy

Villanova University is now in second place in the race for the Sportsmanship Trophy.

This advancement in the Big Five standings came about after the high rating given Villanova for the Temple game.

The judges commended the Villanova student body for the spirit exhibited even though the team trailed throughout the game.

Pat Nicholson, Spirit Committee Chairman, urges students to "continue the good work and aim for first place."

Intramural Group Meets, Schedules Due for Revision

There will be a meeting of the Intramural Council tomorrow at 10:30 A.M. at Alumni Gym. All intramural basketball managers or captains must attend this meeting. Team captains and managers are also reminded to post the scores of all their games on the bulletin board in the Intramural Office — 112 Alumni Hall. If the games are not posted by tomorrow, they will be counted as forfeits.

At this meeting there will be a revision of the basketball schedules and plans will be discussed for the future round-robin tournament for the seven league leaders. This tournament will begin March 11 and each of the five Alumni Gym Leagues and two Field House Leagues will be represented by their first place team.

Pictures Taken

Pictures of the members of the Intramural Council will be taken for the Yearbook. The final things to be discussed is the Spring intramural activities, including the softball league. Entry blanks for this league will be given out soon.

However, James Moran, President of the Intramural Council, emphasizes that this meeting is being called chiefly for the captains of the respective intramural teams who have been lax in submitting scores of the intramural basketball games to the Intramural Office in Alumni Hall.

Here Are The Rules, Men

In connection with the contest described on page 5, "Glamour" magizine has listed ten points on "how to spot the 'best dressed girl' on campus."

Here they are:

1. She has a nice figure . . . a well-dressed woman is never careless about her shape.

2. She knows that a great deal of her beauty depends on good grooming.

3. She's aware that a college campus is not the place for an extravagant wardrobe, spends only an average amount on clothes. She uses imagination in managing her clothes budget.

4. She dresses according to the customs on her campus. Being "well dressed" is being appropriately dressed.

5. Although she understands her own college's fashion rules, she does have individuality. The way she uses color, the kinds of accessories he wear will make even and everyday outfit unmistakably hers.

6. She knows the difference between good fashion and good college fashion. Away from college she drops fads that are too collegiate for off-campus life.

7. She knows how to wear make-up, but doesn't overdo it.

8. She's fussy about her hair. Makes a point of keeping it clean and shining, wears a hair-do that's becoming and fashionable.

9. She knows her type and sticks to it. It a campus fad doesn't suit her style, she doesn't feel obliged to wear it.

10. She has an over-all wardrobe plan and has probably learned how to use accessories to creat different kinds of looks for her basic wardrobe.

Closed Dinner Dance

The senior dinner dance, providing the concluding affair of the weekend, is open to the four-year men only. It is to be held at the Broadwood Hotel in Philadelphia.

Tickets may be purchased in the Snack Bar until Friday of this week at a cost of $10.

Music will be furnished by Leo Zollo.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

by Joe Martin, SC Pres.

JOE MARTIN

The Spirit Committee has reported that it will be conducting that trip to the IC4A track championship meet coming up next week. As everyone knows, this is the big one we have been just missing during the last few years. This committee, with exuberant Pat Nicholson leading, really hopes to see our student body there to insure a victory on this attempt.

The Spirit Committee has come a long way in just one short semester. During a football season that had both its ups and downs, the spirit on this campus was probably unequalled at any other college in the country. The crowning glory came when a local sportscaster, who had commented freely in his newspaper about lack of spirit here, was treated to the sight of close to 4,000 people cheering wildly at a bonfire rally.

When our track team made its appearance at Convention Hall, the roaring student section dominated the stands. During a basketball season in which they have been handicapped by a losing record and a coach's order not to hold rallies, the Spirit Committee led a display of cheering during the St. Joseph's game that caused one of the officials on duty to comment: " . . . it was this loyal support that made the game exciting."

We should all be proud of the work that his group has done; the best way to show we do appreciate their efforts is to cooperate with them by faithful support of their projects. An easy way to start is to go up to Madison Square Garden March 2.

At the last meeting of the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia, the five schools approved the purchase of the trophy for the Sportsmanship Award they will present at the end of the basketball season. This is the award that will be presented to the school in the "Big Five" that displays the best spirit and sportmanship at the City Series games at the Palestra. The trophy will be beautiful, to say the very least. As soon as the jeweler finishes the award, it will be displayed at the entrance to the Palestra. Everyone will agree, when they see it, that it would surely make a beautiful addition to our trophy case.

According to the report in last week's Villanovan by Pat Nicholson, we are presently third in the judging. This week shows us now in second place. We have one more chance to really show that the Sportsmanship Award belongs at Villanova. If we all turn out to see the LaSalle game and show plenty of spirit and courtesy, we should centainly succeed.

Last Monday night the regularly scheduled meeting of the Student Council was held. Although there were a few students other than voting members present, the number was disappointing. I would like to see all meetings so crowded that it would become necessary to hold them in the Field House. In our student handbook there appears the constitution of our Student Council. In Article III, membership is said to include "all regular students of the University . . ." "Regular students" are defined as "those students carried as 'regular students' by the University Registrar." The privilege that is given to those members that are elected or appointed is that of voting. This means that all students are not merely welcome to attend the meetings, but are actually members of the Council and urged to come. Everyone is permitted to present motions from the floor as well as participate in any discussion. I hope that we see many more students at the next meeting March 4.

Senior Prom, Dinner Dance Scheduled For Weekend; Billy May, Zollo Featured

By MIKE MANCUSO

Friday night, the last memorable college social weekend for the Senior Class will begin with the musical strains of the nationally-famed Billy May Band and will close early Sunday morning when the June graduates walk from the main ballroom of the Broadwood Hotel, the site of Saturday night's long-awaited Dinner Dance.

The Senior Prom, or the Belle Air Ball, which is open to all students, will feature, along with the Billy May group, an elaborate theme based on the Broadway show "Manhattan Towers."

SAM DONAHUE
Leads Billy May's "Slurping Saxes"

Tickets for the formal affair are still on sale every day in the Snack Bar from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at a cost of six dollars. For the last-minute purchasers, tickets will be on sale at the door the night of the dance.

Sixteen Piece Band

The May aggregation under the leadership of Sam Donahue, features the music of 16 top-flight musicians along with the song stylings of a popular female vocalist.

The "Manhattan Towers" theme will provide selected New York sky scraper replicas to transfer the confines of the Field House into a mythical city. The famed Empire State Building will be the center of the little metropolis.

Intermission Band Secret

Chairman of the Ball, Ray Clarke, has also provided for a prominent band to play during intermissions. The name of this band is being kept secret until the night of the dance.

Vince Pavese and Jack Dunn, Prom refreshment co-chairmen have provided unique victuals for the dance goers. Sophomore Bill O'Brien will take photos and snapshots of all wishing them during the evening.

Dinner-Dance at Broadwood

On Saturday evening at 6 p.m., the Dinner Dance will commence in the main ballroom of the Broadwood Hotel in Philadelphia.

The affair, which is open only to the Class of 1957, will feature the 12 piece orchestra of Leo Zollo.

A segment of Zollo's band will play the dinner music from 6 until 9.

Comedian Paul Benson has been signed to provide special entertainment after dinner.

Tickets were sold until Feb. 22 and seniors were required to buy the whole table—for five couples—at that time. This type of sale was favorable among the four-year men, stated Dinner Dance chairman Bill Hattrick.

No Tables Removed

Hattrick also said that the grand ballroom can accomodate all coupes on the main floor.

DPM Pledges Meet Today; Annual Breakfast Apr. 7

Any members of the Arts and Science school who wish to pledge to the Delta Pi Mu fraternity must attend the first pledge meeting today at 4:30 p.m. in the C and F auditorium, DPM President Jim Judge announced Monday.

Only those attending this first meeting will be considered for the fraternity. Following pledge meetings will be closed.

Pledge Board Meets

The Pledge Commission Board of DPM will conduct the meeting. This board consists of senior counsellors Tom Curran and Bill McCloud, junior pledge masters Mike Klesius and Norm Peer and sophomore advisor Al Dombroski. These men have complete charge of the pledging.

At today's meeting application blanks will be given out to all prospective pledges.

Breakfast April 7

At the fraternity's monthly meeting Monday a pledging system was drawn up and it was announced that the annual DPM Communion Breakfast will take place Sunday, April 7 in Dougherty Hall.

Miss Debbie Brown, lovely vocalist of the Billy May band, will appear at the Field House Friday night for the Class of 1957 Senior Prom.

Juniors Formulate Plans For 'Week' At Last Meeting

The Junior Class held a general meeting last Thursday, at the 10:30 student activity period. The general purpose was to announce to the class of '58 a brief sketch of the Junior Week events.

Co-chairman of Junior Week, Jed Dioguardi, gave a short run down on the activities of each day of Junior Week beginning with the NFCCS Variety Show on Sunday, April 28, and ending with the Dinner Dance in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel on Saturday, May 4.

Outlines Week's Features

Some of the other features of the week, Dioguardi announced, will be Mother's Day on Monday, The Junior Queen Contest, The Diaper Dan Contest, a jazz concert on Wednesday and The Junior Prom on Friday.

Tentative plans are being made for a special Mass for the Juniors and their dates on Sunday May 5, Dioguardi added. More specific information will be offered on this and other questions in the near future, he said.

Mulcahy Urges Interest

Bob Mulcahy, class president, presided over the meeting and urged all juniors to check the new Junior Class bulletin board in Dougherty Hall at regular intervals. "This," he said, "will alleviate the confusion brought about by the many notices on the main bulletin boards."

Closing the meeting Mulcahy urged all the students to purchase patrons in the Junior Prom program and to give serious consideration to the forthcoming questionaire concerning Junior Week, which will be distributed to every Junior within the next week.

Religion Department Adds Five New Priests to Staff

By ED KARRER, Copy Editor

The Villanova Department of Religion has recently announced the addition of five new instructors—two Augustinian and three diocesan priests.

The two Augustinian priests are the Rev. Joseph A. Maher, O.S.A., and the Rev. James E. Warne, O.S.A., each of whom has his Master's Degree in Religious Education from Catholic University.

Diocesan Priests

The diocesan priests include: the Rev. Louis A. Eltz, J.C.D.; the Rev. Joseph L. King and the Rev. E. Ward Knebels, each of whom has had long experience in the school systems of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia.

This brings the total of diocesan priests in the Department to six. Diocesan priests continuing from last year are the Revs. John G. McFadden, George E. Uricheck and John H. Walsh.

New Assignments

The Rev. John P. Maher, O. S.A., former chairman of the Religion Department, has been assigned parochial duties at St. Nicholas Parish in Atlantic City, N.J.

The Rev. William J. Lunney, O.S.A., for many years Instructor in Religion and in German, has been assigned parochial duties at St. Genevieve's Parish in Flourtown, Pa.

The Rev. Robert E. Regan, O. S.A., former Associate Professor of Religion, has been appointed Acting Chairman of the Religion Department.

Classes Cancelled Today; Trackmen Lauded At Rally

Students will be afforded an opportunity to honor the three Villanova Olympians and their A A U-Championship teammates and coaches this afternoon in a giant rally scheduled for the Field House at 1:30.

The administration has called off all classes between the hours of 1:30 and 2:30 p.m. to enable students to attend the affair.

The rally, which has a dual purpose of honoring the team and giving it verbal student support for the forthcoming IC4A Championship to be held in New York on Saturday, was unanimously passed at the Student Council meeting held last Monday. The day will be called "Villanova University's Track Day of Champions."

Pat Nicholson, Council Vice-President and head of the Spirit Committee, originated the idea of a rally as a dual purpose expression of gratitude by the student body. In urging every student to attend, he said: "This is a great opportunity for students of Villanova to pay tribute to three very deserving athletes and their great associates—the best track team and coaches in the country."

ATHLETIC DIRECTOR FRANK REAGAN
Addresses Students at Today's Rally

Featured at the rally will be the three Villanova Olympic participants, Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins, and Phil Reavis. Each of these men will be given gifts from the student body, and will deliver short speeches. Joe Martin, Council President, will award the gifts, which have not as yet been announced.

The administration will also present gifts to the Olympians. Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Dean of Student Affairs and Athletic Moderator, will present the gifts on behalf of the administration. The entire track team will then be introduced to the student body.

A short skit will follow the presentation of the awards and the introduction of the track team. It will be a farcical comedy lampooning the Manhattan track team. Manhattan, last year's IC4A winner, is Villanova's biggest competitor for the title this year.

Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, the track coach, will give a short address thanking the students for their support in the past and urging them to take advantage of the student trip planned for the IC4A meet. Frank Regan, head football coach and newly appointed Athletic Director, will also

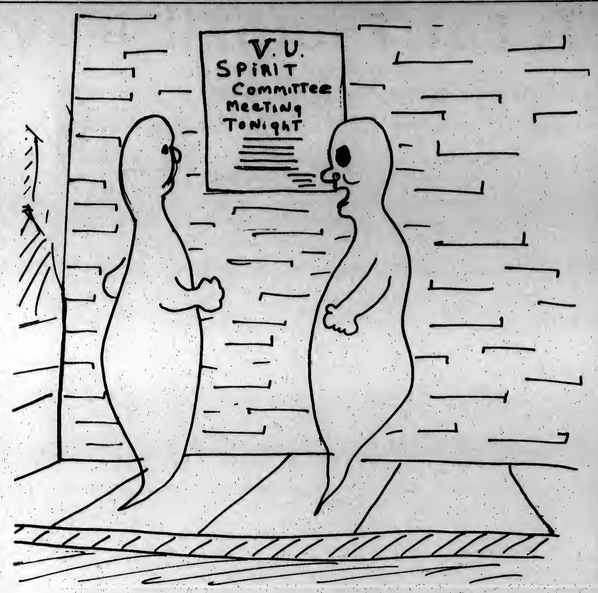
Tribute Well Paid For Job Well Done

We feel it is time that the fine Villanova track team was saluted as a whole.

Our three Olympians have brought much fame and good name to the University and we are rightly proud of their achievements. But we feel that the lesser lights of the team have been neglected by the student body.



Without the performances of these men, no matter how many firsts our stars pick up, it would be impossible for the Wildcats to be in contention for the IC4A track crown this Saturday in Madison Square Garden.

The track team is a whole unit, right down to the last man. We are virtually assured of more than one or two firsts Saturday. It will be the fourths and fifths that will tell the final tale.

Villanova has trailed Manhatten College annually in the IC4A carnival, both indoor and outdoor, by the smallest possible margins.

We feel that this is the year for turning the tables on the Green and White.

So let's all get out to that track rally today and get behind the most successful Villanova varsity. And while we're there, let's reserve an extra loud cheer for the men who haven't a chance of finishing first, but who will win the IC4A championship for Villanova University.

"Awww heck!! I thought our first job would be haunting a house."

Social Pressures Cause Student Apathy

One of the most interesting things that has happened on campus during the past several weeks is the formation of the Literary Club. Since it is a small organization and composed almost exclusively of English majors, the Literary Club has restricted campus appeal, which is natural. It is not in the creation of that particular club that universal interest lies, however.

Rather, it is what the Club represents that is of importance. Students interested in literature are behind its organization because they feel that through the medium of weekly or bi-monthly meetings, they can attain a greater konwledge of literature. Not knowledge that comes many times from a roommate's class notes or from a two-week cram session at the end of a semester, but knowledge that comes from a serious discussion of various authors and their works—from a mutual exchange of ideas outside of the classroom.

This type of serious consideration of literature is just one phase of a college education, and it doesn't appeal to everyone on campus. It does, we think, illustrate one of the fundamental principles of education, however, and that is that students must have a desire to learn.

Our present generation is going through college without giving the slightest sign of interest in its courses. This apathetic outlook is not wholly our fault, though. We are victimized by society—society which demands that a person have a college diploma before he can make his way with any degree of success. Colleges have adapted themselves to the situation as it stands, and most of them operate similar to Henry Ford's mass production system in that they take students, afford them opportunities to study in various curricula, and at the end of four years hand them diplomas. Generally, there is no stimulation by the colleges themselves of a student's faculties for learning; this is true because of the obvious lack of interest by the student himself, who has no real zeal for learning and would not be affected by such stimuli even if they were offered. This again is not the fault of the student; nor are the colleges to blame, for they have been forced to comply with the demands of our "advanced" social system.

How many of us, for example, prepared for our entrance into college with the idea that we would have vast new opportunities to learn? How many of us were anxious to get here so that we might study more extensively? Few of us at most. When we graduated from high school we were fully aware of the necessity of a college education. Our parents or guidance counsellors had vigorously stressed its importance for four years, and when those of us fortunate enough to have the advantage of college education packed our bags that first September, our minds danced with flighty thoughts of never-ending parties and beer-drinking sessions and fraternal kinship. All of these things have great merit, and should be enjoyed, but contemporary society has distorted the value of them in relation to the actual purpose of a college education.

Personality development, acquisition of social graces, breeding men-of-the-world—all these interesting terms have been thrown up in defense of our present educational system. They have been more than sufficient in making us believe that we are, after all, getting something from college that is of greater value than numerous parties and bull-sessions. And though these social facades may be well-used at Westchester parties or in asking one's employer for a raise, they do not carry with them the sincerity of having been unconsciously developed as a part of a complete education. The disproportionate balance between actual knowledge gained from zealous application of oneself and mock knowledge accrued by four years of experience with various types of people is appallingly heavy in favor of the latter group. This type of gregarious hypocrisy—engendering as it does only a minimum of true education—is a serious problem not only for the individual in whom it is imbued but for society as well. Our world of phantasmagoria can go on for only so long before the bubble of disillusionment becomes too large to contain itself and pops—with who knows what results.

The pitiable aspect of the entire problem is that we can learn well in our colleges and universities, but cannot orient ourselves to the necessary frame of mind that is the essential pre-requisite. Our ineptitude in this regard again reflects the constant social pressures upon us—for we must be productive as soon as possible if we are to avoid business and financial stagnation, which is another way of saying complete failure according to present-day standards.

Proper education is the ideal, we feel, which will be the safest catalyst in returning our society to a solid bedrock of more profound thought. It is the ideal which all of us should attempt to achieve for our own self-interest and self-satisfaction, and for the benefit of what is at best a morally-decadent society in which we must live.

It is for that reason we feel the Literary Club's fomation is of such importance. It is a sincere and spontaneous gesture on the part of students who feel that its existence will be an instrument for furthering their own knowledge. We hope that this encouraging sign is precursory to a reaction against today's apathetic outlook towards education; and hope as well that students in other curricula will follow suit.

Political Round-Up:

Polish Ties Come From Past

"When I go to my home in Warsaw, I hear the same records on the radio that I do in my hotel room in Washington," was the statement of a Polish correspondent last Wednesday. He said that back home they can turn on the radio anytime and hear the latest recordings of Perry Como, Bing Crosby, Rosemary Clooney and, unfortunately, Elvis Presley.

This all goes to show that there is a big connection between the people of Poland and the people of the United States. The Polish people try to understand what the Americans are thinking but so far they are without much success.

Lost Six Million People

These doubts arise from the fact that the average Polish peasant cannot comprehend how the United States can fight as an ally of Poland against Germany in World War II and turn around and support her a few years later. The Poles lost over six million people in the last war with Germany and almost every family was directly affected. They find it hard to erase this memory from their minds and therein lies the problem. They look at only what is immediate and not the long range aim. In this, one cannot blame the man who hardly sees past his own native village.

U.S. Has Historical Ties

The United States has many historical ties with Poland which we too often overlook. The children of both countries are taught of the efforts of such heros as Koszciusko and Pulaski. Aside from this there are a vast number of Americans of Polish decent who bring Poland to this country and in return send their impressions of the United States to their relatives back home.

Perhaps the most concrete example of the Polish interest in America is the fact that before they held their October elections in which they elected the new government, they asked that an American film be shown over their television network. This film delt specifically with the American electoral system, from nominations to the election itself and was received with great success.

Read Polish Authors

The only unfortunate part of this situation is that it is all one-sided. Naturally it would be foolhardy for one to advocate that the American public spend their time listening to Polish records and the like. But it would be beneficial if they would read more of the Polish authors in translation who depict life as the Poles see it. This alone could help matters greatly.

Much Heartening Understanding

On the whole there are good relations between the two countries. There is a greater amount of true understanding present here than in any other country behind the "Iron Curtain." It was this understanding which made the bloodless "October Revolution" possible. From contact with American ideas and our way of life, the Polish people came to know that there were better things possible for them than they had at present.

This is the basis of all political settlement and "peaceful co-existence." People must make a sincere effort to understand one another. They must be willing to see the other person's point of view and understand it even though they do not agree with it. Then and only then will we find a way to actual peace.

RALLY THIS AFTERNOON!!

BE THERE!

1933 T'n'T: For Football Players Only

By JOHN D. KENNEDY—Feature Editor

With all that has been written on the long-last traditions of Villanova's past, it is a pleasure to write of one that is still alive and literally kicking, the Turf and Tinsel musical comedy Society.

"The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga" represents the latest effort in the line of Turf and Tinsel Club productions. Within living memory might be recalled such past hits as last year's "Barbara of Seville," and still previously, "Jessica James" and "Wish You Were There."

Few people, however, can remember the founding of the T 'n' T and its initial production, "Look Who's Here." Bob Whalen, of the University ticket office, remains on the campus scene—the only remaining member of the T 'n' T founding fathers. Others, since departed from Villanova, included Harry Stuhldreher, then coach, and Martin L. Gill, a faculty member at that time.

Muscles And Music

The depression-plagued spring of 1933 saw the birth of a new organization pledged to comedy and music. Eager volunteers in spreading this message were the athletes making up the all-male cast. Because of these athletic male participants, the word "turf" was an obvious choice for part of the new club's name. Frivolity, sparkle and the general gay lightness of musical comedy suggested "tinsel." And so—the Turf and Tinsel Club was christened.

With "Let's Go Places," the second show, an enduring tradition began. The awe-inspiring chorus became an integral part of each T 'n' T production. Energy, agility and some grace were shown as the "ladies" of the chorus bared their hairy legs in an approximation of the dance. The massive frames of football players were decked out in all the manner of female finery. Querulous voices were raised in song.

Handsome Villanovans pose with their very beautiful escorts—most of whom took time off from football practice to pose with their beaus—during one of Turf and Tinsel's hilarious musical comedies. This year's show will maintain the tradition of hilarity. It is entitled "Man in a Gray Flannel Toga."

Down But Never Out

Despite this strong opening spurt of activity and audience response, the next year the organization entered into a period of decline from which is was not to emerge until Ad Dominum 1947.

Turf and Tinsel lived on, however, in the mind and person of Bob Whalen, who, with the aid of choreographer extraordinaire George Heger Noake, presented T 'n' T to the public once more with a smash hit entitled "John Smith, Esq." To the benefit of the society's terpsichorean efforts since, Mr. Noake has remained as T 'n' T's choreographer to this day.

Titilating Titles

With "John Smith, Esq.", another T 'n' T tradition was born, that of the coy title. The effectiveness of this convention may be seen in a compilation of the shows since "Smith," including such provocative titles as "Cleo was a Lady" ('49), "Wish You Were There" ('54), Jessica James" ('55) and last year's "Barbara of Seville."

T 'n' T had certainly arrived when the Armed Forces borrowed the society's 1950 hit "Piper Heidsick, '98" and produced it with the more mundane title, "Circa '98."

The Age of Maturity

And now at the virile age of twenty-four, T 'n' T prepares for "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga" with the confidence and enthusiasm that only years of success can muster.

Much of the credit for this success must go to producer Jack Kelly who must coax or cow his leading 'ladies' into the proper degree of uninhibitedness. That he always does so is proof of his reputation for indefatigable good spirits. His extemp songs and stories keep morale in high gear during the sometimes tedious round of rehearsals.

Double Alumnity

T 'n' T membership took on a more than transitory value with the formation in 1954 of the Turf and Tinsel Alumni Club to make lasting the ties that bind the Villanova men of musical comedy.

If people continue to enjoy performing, singing and dancing, and reproducing the glitter and dazzle of musical comedy at Villanova, and even more people thoroughly enjoy watching, as seems more than likely; then with the passage of another twenty-four years, the Turf and Tinsel Society with its muscular maidens will still be Villanova's liveliest tradition.

Oedipus And The Law; Plus Some Class Wit

It took Villanovan Sports Editor Bob Mulcahy a long time to find out what happened to King Oedipus the other day. Bob was reading the Greek tragedy Oedipus Rex while a passenger in the back of a car bound for New York and the Villanova-Fordham game two weeks ago. While cruising along route 1 in New Brunswick, N.J., Bob was rapidly approaching the conclusion of the play. As a matter of fact he was down to the very last page when the trip was rudely interrupted by a New Jersey state policeman.

The good officer insisted that the roving Villanovans were roving too fast and they would have to follow him to the pokey to pay a fine. Hearts hanging heavy they followed the law to his lair. After a short wait and the exchange of some hard-earned U.S. currency between the offenders and the State of New Jersey, it was back to the open road, at a slightly slower pace.

Suddenly, Bob realized that he never did find out what was the fate of poor Oedipus. He quickly polished off the final lines and then surmised that he doubted if anyone else in the drama class had taken one hour to read the last page of Oedipus Rex.

OUCH, THESE HURT

A couple blood-curdling jokes were picked up the other day in this senior's Marriage Guidance course. The instructor, being in an exceptionally good mood, came out with these gems.

Did you hear the one about the police trap for the bandit who was pilfering Charlie Chan's priceless teakwood collection? It seems that the only clue was the footprints of a small boy leading away from the scene of the crimes. When the culprit was finally captured it turned out actually to be a big bear with the feet of a boy. This prompted the local newspapers to flash the banner heads about the "boyfoot bear with teaks of Chan."

Smiling with his success, Father followed up with this one. Did you hear about the group of Arthurian knights who had a midget in their midst who had to ride a big dog because he couldn't mount a regular horse? It seems that one particularly stormy evening they all stopped off at an inn for food and shelter. All the mounted knights left their horses at the livery stable around the back. All the knights except Sir Herman the midget, that is. He rode his dog right into the hostelry.

The woman of the inn was furious and was in the process of ejecting Herman when the maitre-de-hotel arrived on the scene. He strongly berated his wife for forgetting the golden rule and motto of the inn, "Never put a knight out on a dog like this."

Video For College Students: Red Eyes Not The Only Effect

By PAUL YURCHAK

Behold the red-eyed and yawning student; a victim of neither cramming nor parties, but a late-show addict. This unfortunate misfit is a double failure: he has been unable to adapt his schedule (five 8:30's a week) to his taste for B-grade movies or heterogeneous "variety" shows, and, much worse, he lacks the critical standards to integrate his TV watching with his classroom work.

Television offers the college student an invaluable and nearly painless supplement to his intellectual and cultural development.

Threefold Worth

In particular, students should recognize the special worth of TV in the reporting of current events, in the highlighting and analysis of critical problems of the day (e. g., debates, round-table discussions, and "Meet the Press" type programs), in presenting outstanding plays and films, and in developing a form of drama specially for television.

In light of the primary goal of the student—to learn—it would seem that a student approach to television should be directed towards this end.

Valuable Viewing Desired

This, then, is the student's aim in watching TV: to find application for the principles and methods learned in school and to increase and broaden his knowledge of current affairs.

To ensure this, the student must develop a critical method and a careful selectivity in planning his viewing.

Taking the four suggested categories of interest in the order presented, let us first consider news programs. To fully realize the potential of the viewing medium, a news program must make careful use of films and pictures to illustrate the reporting.

Video Vs. Audio

Too many films with little or no accompanying commentary are an evasion of the reporter's primary task: to inform the audience of the facts and of the implications and ramifications of the story. Too sparing use of pictures and films is a betrayal of the very advantages of television and fails to inform the viewer any better than radio.

As a corollary of this last rule, a commentator should not project his personality into the program to the extent that he remains "on camera" for most of the program when pictures would add clarity to the story.

Foremost of the panel discussions is "Meet the Press," which is a cross-questioning by reporters of a figure in the news. Other programs of this type are student debates and round-table analyses of the news.

A sprinkling of plays of established literary merit and occasional famous motion pictures will be found in most weekly program schedules. Several of Shaw's works have been presented during the past year and recently a short play by Somerset Maugham was featured. All of these are worth watching and some of them are televised in color.

The Long and Short of It

Television writers are developing a drama-form especially for TV. This literary type is of two kinds: the half-hour show and the hour—or ninety-minute—long show.

The shorter (half-hour) shows are comparable to the one-act play. Television offers some advantages over the theatre play, however, especially in its ability to make close-up shots and in the possibility of using intricate sets (for example, movement from room to room) and multiple sets without a break in the drama. Other advantages will be apparent, but of course the viewer loses some of the personality-projection and warmth of the theater show.

In conclusion, it must be emphasized that the student should learn to adopt a critical attitude towards the dramatic productions in order that he will not waste his time on second-rate shows.

Furthermore, a news or current-events program should be chosen on the criteria of factual, balanced reporting and fullest utilization of the advantages of the television medium. It these two admonitions are heeded, the student can enjoy and profit from watching television.

Want A Stronger Alumni? Be A Strong Student -- Be Active

By PAT NICHOLSON
Vice-President, Student Council

Is Villanova receiving the most benefit possible from its Alumni association? If she is not, why? A strong alumni is the direct result of an interested student body, one that contributes to the betterment of the University, and derives satisfaction from the work they do.

The student body and the administration must work together to establish more programs which will enable the students to actually participate in the management of student affairs and to actively assist in the building of this great University.

Activity Urged

At the present time funds and support from alumni, parents, and other friendly sources are not as large as might be expected. Even though Villanova has many loyal men among its alumni, they alone are not able to carry the burden. Every effort should be made to get increased activity in all fields from those concerned with Villanova. Under administration leadership, the Student Council could improve present activities and develop new tie-in activities that would help to change spirited, interested Villanova students into loyal, hard working, contributing alumni.

By encouraging the formation, on the campus, of Student Area Clubs, representing all large cities and metropolitan areas, the Student Council can furnish the driving power that will lead to the formation of active alumni groups over a large part of the United States. With Area Clubs functioning at both student and alumni levels, more former Villanova students will become active, working alumni.

Let's Grow In Spirit

It is not too important that Villanova grow bigger and bigger; it is very important that through participation in outstanding traditional university activities, more students and alumni get imbued with the wonderful Villanova spirit.

Those of us who have been Villanova students for three or four years have seen many great changes. Physically, with the construction of so many fine buildings on the campus, there has been the transition from college to university status. More students are actively participating in college affairs. The University Faculty has been strengthened.

Expansion In All Directions

The Student Council has greatly increased its activities and other campus organizations have grown in stature. Alumni and parents have been drawn more closely into the Villanova picture, but not to the extent desired. An increasing number of students have demonstrated a capacity for handling important responsibilities.

Both the student body and the administration have come to realize there may be two sides to vexing campus problems ,and the Vice President's Committee has been established to find a solution to these problems.

Council Achievements Noted

Our present class officers and Student Council members have made some important contributions. The school year started out with an outstanding Orientation Program. A great improvement in campus spirit has been achieved and a football trip has become an impressive reality. The Council sought and received administration cooperation in bringing about an improvement in cafeteria operations.

The Villanova Student Council took the leadership in getting the Collegiate Conference of Greater Philadelphia to establish the Sportsmanship Award. Under Student Council leadership the monetary limit formerly placed on procuring a Prom band has been removed and Villanova's first big name band, Billy May, will be on campus this Friday for the Belle Aire Ball.

SC Serves As Focal Point

Our Student Council has tried to coordinate the ideas and efforts of students. It has sought the cooperation of administration officials and faculty members. The Council has attempted to build up the interest of students, alumni and parents; above all else, the Council has tried to create a great Villanova spirit that more than matches the structural progress that we've witnessed.

As upper classmen well know, there is still much to be done. For the good of the school—more students must become active in campus affairs; closer relationships between dayhops and residents should be aggressively encouraged; new traditional activities stimulating 100% participation should be developed; natural rivalries in sports must be established with leading universities of the East and the Midwest to complement those already existing with Detroit and Boston, for example.

Area Club Revival

Area clubs should be formed to more actively promote Villanova in all major cities; the Council itself should be better organized with every member participating in at least one important activity, and the whole Council being more concerned over constructive ideas and important problems.

The Student Council should cooperate with the school administration in every possible way to develop a carefully organized program welding Villanova students, alumni, parents, and friends into a vital driving force that will assure a great destiny for our beloved school.

Student Responsibility

To make Villanova the oustanding educational institution that all of us want it to be, every effort should be made to develop a better, more active student body. Students are the heart of a school. They make the school what it is. The Student Council should be recognized as the Voice of the Student Body.

Any student having ideas on any school problems should be welcomed to express his opinions before Council. The school administration should assign the Council certain areas of operation in which the Council would have the power to work out its own problems; e.g., in the field of student relations, and social activities the Council should be given practically complete authority.

SC Wants Effective Voice

On matters concerning the student body and not affecting school policy, the Council should be able to make its own final decisions; on matters affecting school policy, representatives of the Student Council should be able to present the problem to an administrative board for decision. This board, similar to the present Vice-Presidents Committee, but more extensive in representation, should meet regularly to discuss Council motions and other student affairs.

Within its own field of operations, the Council should be given authority commensurate with its ability to operate responsibly. Such a relationship will provide an opportunity for outstanding student leadership. A Student Council given such recognition by the school administration would certainly stay away from considering any action that could not be defended as in the best interests of Villanova.

Sell Villanova Program

In a good many ways, the Student Council can help to build a greater Villanova. It can help to develop increased alumni activity and greater interest on the part of parents. The Council can develop a program to better sell Villanova to high school students. Under Council's leadership, the dayhops could develop an aggressive organization that would do a continuing, year around selling job in all of the Philadelphia area High Schools.

PAT NICHOLSON

Pat Nicholson, a member of the Class of 1958 and Vice-President of the Student Council, is featured as the Villanovan's guest columnist this week. The Detroit-born student, who heads the Spirit Committee, is one of the most active and popular students on campus.

Advice To The Lovelorn

By HARRY & GERRY

How To Win Dates and Influence Girls

In line with its new policy of helping the underprivileged, the Padded Cell hereby presents its myraid followers with some valuable advice on a pertinent subject. There is no doubt that girls are a problem to all college men. Thus we feel it our duty to part with some sure-fire tricks, gathered after years of experience, which will not only make the reader a more interesting and daring companion but which will completely confuse anyone he wishes to conquer. There are several approaches to the female problem:

a) "Cave Man" approach—always works well on basketball stars and girl weightlifters. The true cave man is afraid of nothing and no one. It is best to be unshaven and shabbily dressed when picking up date. Never ring the bell but drive casually onto lawn while honking horn. Upon arriving at party, make a grand entrance by stripping to shorts and carrying date on shoulders. Chug-a-lug all comers and further impress girl by picking fights with every boy who talks to her. Do not be afraid to stand on your head or do push-ups if the situation requires it. Sing boisterous college songs while sitting on the piano and throw beer in the face of anyone who objects. If at anytime someone says something you don't understand, immediately punch the speaker's face in case it was a wise crack.

b) "Cool" or "James Dean" approach—to be a really cool date you must develop a perpetually bored expression and wide yawn. Also, sneer continually even while alone. Bring two or even three dates to a party and then never talk to any of them. At the same time let them know you're not shy by making a big play for the host's mother. Learn interesting little talents like cracking your knuckles and rolling your own cigarettes. Grumble to yourself at all times and blow smoke rings in everyone's face. Also, you can show your individualism by wearing a leather jacket and T-shirt under your sport coat.

On the way home with a really square girl, you might have to drive from the front seat. Don't let this get you down. In extreme cases, you have one more trick. As soon as your date leaves the car, jump out and flip a match into the gas tank. This not only adds a definite air of excitement and mystery to you, but will brand you forever as a nut.

c) "Continental" approach—is an excellent one for deluded romantics who frequent the movies. The "continental" put on a big front but never spends money. Instead he worms dinner invitations. Call for your date fashionably late, say about 10:30, attired in a black tuxedo with a flowing black cape. Upon arriving, kiss her hand and present her with a monstrous orchid. Then, suavely mistake her mother for her sister. During dinner, keep up a running stream of conversation about mysterious foreign ports like Naples, Lisbon, Marseilles and Wacker Junction. Get out of helping with the dishes by offering to show little brother how to smoke Turkish cigarettes. Now entertain the entire family by waltzing with Grand'ma. As a grand exit kiss every one's hand again, removing any rings, and bid adieu to your date. Tell her you must leave tonight on a secret mission to the Orient. Now go home and take off that silly outfit.

d) "Intellectual" approach works well when dating college freshmen. They usually have a fantastic picture of a typical university man and will swallow anything. Be careful about what you wear; we suggest a tweed sport coat, heavy horn rims and a large pipe. Also, carry a worn anthology of some obscure Latin poet. Have her drive the car so you can be free to point out the stars while quoting verse. When you get to a party, remain aloof from all her friends but be quick to correct their English. Now play the absent-minded professor and forget your dates name. In fact forget everyone's name, even forget where you are and wander about quoting poetry and bumping into things. At first just knock over a lamp or two so people will notice you. Finally wander out the door. Now wait until the height of the party for a dramatic entrance. Suddenly reappear, strumming a Greek lyre while singing ancient ballads. This will not only bring out your fine sense of humor but will impress your date with your great knowledge of the classics.

TEN SURE-FIRE QUOTES

"Baby, you're the first woman that ever frightened me . . ."

"I don't know how to tell you this, but you've got ketchup all over your ear."

"There's this little French place, see, with real gypsy music . . ."

"That's right waiter, six martinis for the lady . . ."

"Someday when you remember this, and you will, be kind . . ."

"Whad'ya mean I'm drunk? I oughta punch you right in the . . ."

"Wanna see a straight V with dual carbs?"

"Ever hear of my father—greatest swordsman in France."

"More sausage, Dear?"

Seven Freshmen Nominated For Student Council Seats

The Class of 1960 took its first step towards selecting two of its members to represent it on the Student Council by naming seven freshmen as candidates for Council seats.

Under the direction of Bobby Schiller, Chairman of the Council Elections Committee, the first-year men entered two Arts men, Don Phillip and Tom Hoffman, and an engineer, Ron Dobies, in the race for the resident seat.

A day-hop representative will be chosen from Tom LoCasale, Engineering; Frank Wagner, Commerce and Finance; and Bill Vincent and Don McCoy, both in the Arts and Sciences Division.

Elections Soon

Schiller said that the election for both these offices will be held "as soon as the names can be screened by Administration officials."

As usual Alumni Gym will be the scene of the elections following a brief campaign period in which the names of all candidates will adequately made known to all eligible voters.

The two winners, one a day-hop and the other a resident, will immediately take office on the Council and continue to maintain the position until the close of their sophomore year.

More Elections In April

The class will elect officers and an additional day-hop and resident representative when the Sophomore and Junior Classes hold their annual elections in April.

This is the second time this school year that the Elections Committee supervised an election. In the beginning of the first semester the committee conducted the special election held to select a Student Council President to succeed Jack O'Rourke who entered the seminary.

Registration Notice

The Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., Dean of the Arts and Sciences Division, has announced that any student incorrectly registered through class substitution or section changes is personally responsible for any absences he might incur.

These incorrections must be attended to as soon as possible.

Sullivan Hall Reserved For Frosh In Fall

Since Sheehan Hall will be inhabited mainly by upperclassmen next semester, Sullivan Hall has been reserved exclusively for freshmen, according to the Administration.

All resident members of the class of 1960 will be situated on the University campus. Sophomore, junior and senior residents must also must live on campus unless a very serious reason accompanied by the permission of the Rev. George J. McLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Men, allows otherwise.

No Off-Campus Residents

Father McLaughlin, however, will have the privilege of bringing off-campus residents, who may not live in apartments, on campus at any time.

Student Council President Joe Martin named seniors Rick Ellis and Jack Chabay, and sophomore Bill Christy to supervise the room reservation procedure which will commence later this semester.

Council Requests Old Method

At a meeting last week the Council unanimously passed a resolution requesting the Administration to retain the method employed whereby seniority was the main factor in room selection.

The purpose for this resolution was that the incoming freshmen class would be more consolidated by placing its members in Austin and Alumni Halls.

A larger number of counsellors would also be available in these two halls.

Sophomore Chemistry major Paul Gallagher explains some of the apparatus in the Chemistry lab to his parents, Mr. E. J. Gallagher, and his sister, Pat, during the local high school Chemistry Festival held on campus last Saturday. The Gallagher family resides in Conshohocken.

NFCCS Variety Show To Be Held During Junior Week

Villanova students Mike Guida and Bernie Conway, producer-directors of the NFCCS's third annual variety show, have announced today that the show will be presented on the Villanova campus Sunday night, April 28.

The show, which will be held in the Villanova Field House, is being presented in conjunction with Junior Week. The production will be staged the evening before the Junior Class' Mother's Day in order to provide entertainment for early arrivals for the annual fete.

Held In Field House

This is the first year in the show's three-year existence that it has been scheduled for the Villanova Field House. The show, which in previous years has been held at various area schools, has had many good reviews. Last year's show received tributes from the Philadelphia press and radio.

Two Other Performances

Conway and Guida also announced that the show will be presented at Immaculata College on March 10 and at Chestnut Hill April 7. All three preformances shows are open to the general public. Tickets will be on sale on campus and can be obtained from the Villanova NFCCS delegation and at the door on the evening of all performances.

Father Burns Appointed To Fill Vacancy

The Rev. Joseph J. Burns, O.S.A., counsellor in Alumni Hall, has been appointed to the Advisory Board of Discipline, it was announced by the Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President for Student Affairs.

The appointment will fill the vacancy left by the departure of the Rev. John P. Maher, O.S.A.

The Board is selected by Father Kemme and the Rev. George J. McLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Men.

The remainder of the Board consists of Rev. John R. Dunne, O.S.A., counsellor in Delurey Hall; Rev. Robert E. Regan, O.S.A., counsellor in Simpson Hall, and Mr. John Monaghan, prefect in Fedigan Hall.

Meetings of the Board are held to consider disciplinary violations.

Carnegie Concert Tickets Available Through OC Club

Renata Tebaldi, soprano, will be guest artist on the Telephone Hour, Monday, March 18, at 9 p.m. in Carnegie Hall, New York City. Reserved tickets are free through the courtesy of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company the Opera-Classica Club announced last week.

Excellent Program

During the program the Bell Telephone Orchestra, under the baton of Donald Vorhees, will play Intermezzo from "L'Amico Fritiz," by Mascagni; Intermezzo from "Suor Angelica," by Puccini, and Prelude to Act III from "L'Amore die tre re," by Montemezzi.

Miss Tebaldi will sing "Io son l'umile ancella" from "Adrianna Lecouvreur," by Cilea; "Son pochi fiori" from "L'Amico Fritz," by Mascagni, and "Addio" from "La Boheme," by Puccini.

25 Seats Available

The broadcast will be preceded by an organ recital. Since it is impossible to secure tickets when Miss Tabalbi apears at the Metropolitan Opera, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has graciously consented to reserve 25 seats in the first two rows of Carnegie Hall.

Anyone wishing further information should contact Mr. Anthony Angeline, Opera-Classica Society moderator.

ASCE Plans Field Trip To Pottstown Concrete Pipe Co.

The American Society of Civil Engineers will go on a field trip March 13 to the American Marietta Co. in Pottstown. The Marietta Co. makes pre-stressed reinforced concrete pipe.

The Society met last Monday and nominated officers for next year, as well as planning the trip.

Three Fellowships Offered By Dutch Government

Three fellowships for graduate study in the Netherlands during 1957-58 are available to Americans, it was announced by the Institute of International Education, New York City.

The awards, offered by the Netherlands Government, are named the "Hendrik Willem van Loon," "Edward W. Bok," and "Hendrik Anton Goenen Torchiana" fellowships. Each award carries a cash stipend of 2,500 guilders to cover room and board expenses for the academic year. Tuition fees are waived.

Closing date for application is this Friday.

Applications and further information may be obtained from the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th St., New York City.

Bill Lesko, ICG Prexy, Calls Club Meeting

The Inter-Collegiate Conference on Government will meet in room 204 C & F tomorrow morning at 10:30. At this meeting final preparations will be made for the Southeastern Regional Convention to be held at Haverford College on March 2.

Other schools participating in the convention affair include: Bryn Mawr, Drexel, Immaculata, Pennsylvania Military College, Rosemont, Swarthmore, Temple, Pennsylvania and West Chesfer State Teachers'.

Will Outline Procedure

Chairman Bill Lesko announced that at tomorrow's meeting the 25-member delegation will receive final instructions as to the convention procedure and proceedings.

This year the Villanova Chapter will chair the Committee on State Government. In addition, Villanova will hold two important positions at the Convention including First Parliamentarian and Sergeant-at-Arms.

The purpose of the Convention is to provide a means whereby students may gain knowledge of the practical operation of good government in a non-partisan manner.

Model Legislature

At the Convention a model legislature will be set up and bills will be submitted by the chapter attending. Each bill passed at this convention will go to the state convention to be held at Harrisburg later in the semester.

Publications Offer Advice About Europe

If you are planning your first trip abroad—for pleasure, study or work—you will find helpful a new publication by the Council on Student Travel titled, Europe: Sources of Information, and priced at 25 cents. It is a 24-page booklet compiled as a service to students and young people traveling on limited budgets.

The booklet lists, with brief descriptions, more than 50 current self-help books, pamplets, directories and other guides.

For quick reference the booklet also lists names and addresses of European government tourist offices and railway offices in the United States, and student travel bureaus in Europe.

Europe: Sources of Information can be obtained by writing to the Council on Student Travel, 179 Broadway, New York 7, N.Y.

Meeting Of Pre-Law Club Hears Law Students Speak

Last month, the Pre-Law Society heard two top students of Villanova's law school speak on a student's life and experiences in Law School.

Ed Fitzsimmons and Joe Mahoney, the speakers of the evening, discussed the various requirements needed for entry into a prominent law school. They also interested the audience with their discussions on the types and methods of study used in the post-graduate school.

Practice Sessions

A question and answer period following the talks brought several other interesting topics to the floor.

All the members of the club were invited to attend the practice court session held every Friday afternoon at 2 p.m. by the law students in the new moot court in Garey Hall.

New Co-Moderator

Mr. Richard Ruane attended the meeting as the new co-moderator of the society along with Mr. Howard Riley. Both Mr. Ruane and Mr. Riley are members of the Commerce and Finance school in the Business Law department.

Edward Lis, Prominent Artist, Exhibits Here

By JOHN FIXL, Copy Editor

Oil paintings, water colors and drawings by Edward Lis will be exhibited at the Villanova University Library from March 10 through April 3. The exhibition will be open to the public daily from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., on Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and on Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

The faculty wives will sponsor the exhibition and will serve as ushers. Mrs. Alex Severance, president of the Villanova Faculty Wives' Association, will direct the proceedings.

Edward Lis, popular both as a teacher and portrait painter, is presently exhibiting oils and watercolors of Cape May and Colorado in The Women's Club of Swarthmore, 118 Park Ave.

Lis Was Prisioner-of-War

Lis, who was born in Poland, settled in the Philadelphia area four years ago. He began his art career in 1939 when he was captured by the Germans in World War II. At this time, he had as fellow "guests" six of Poland's foremost artists who became his teachers while they were held captive in a series of prisoner-of-war camps.

Lis was liberated by the Armed Forces in 1945 and by this time he had painted some 600 pictures—many on mattress covers in lieu of canvas. Immediately upon liberation he joined the Polish Second Corps in Italy where he remained until his outfit was sent to England and finally demobilized.

He remained in England to study at the University College in Leicester and for two years at the Sir John Cass Technical College of Arts and Crafts in London where his flair for portraiture manifested itself.

Critics Laud Lis Works

Dorothy Grafly, editor of AMERICAN ART IN FOCUS and well-known national art critic, said upon seeing his work, ". . . Basically a realist, he delights as much in tridimensional form (in portraits especially) as in water reflections. What he sees and how he sees it will give the public a rest from modernism. Never gross, tawdry, nor sensational, it is always the product of a mentality sensitive to charm and refinement."

Landscapes and dock scenes predominate in the current exhibition, nevertheless there are a few portraits present. It is interesting to contrast the painting of Colorado with those of the New Jersey Coast.

In the former, forms are big and rugged; light is stronger and more directional; atmosphere is dry and clear. Lis is particularly sensitive to play of shadows (especially in the West) and to water reflections (along the shore).

In Cape May watercolors and oils, boats, pilings and piers work together to develop composition subtly integrated by geometric interplay of realistic forms and their reflections.

In painting of Colorado, background mountains, foreground lakes and intermediate evergreens provide design material. In some watercolors, however, interest lies in fantastic land and rock formations and in the strong color of their shadows.

Wherever he paints, Lis delights in the intimacy of woods and waters—the charm of a pool or the twist of a tree. As a result, his work is readily understood and enjoyed by the layman.

A very prolific and hard worker, Lis has painted many prominent Pennsylvanians since his arrival in America. He has had over a dozen one-man shows and his painting are owned by many private collectors in the United States and aboard.

He is a member of The Philadelphia Art Alliance where he also serves as a member of the Oil Painting Committee. His present studio home is located on Montgomery Avenue and Gypsy Road, Gulph Mills, Pa.

LYNX Hopes to Publish In Mid-March

The Lynx staff decided this week to try for a publication date in mid-March for the next issue. To meet this schedule, the next magazine will have to be ready for the printer by the first of March. Therefore all would-be Villanova authors are strongly urged to submit any material before the end of this week.

Any type of material is suitable for publication as long as it is well written. Short stories, essays, poems, satires and practically any other genre of writing is needed.

Art Work Stressed

Art work will be an important feature of the upcoming issue due to its popularity in the last Lynx. Several different modernistic designs are under consideration for cover of the next issue.

Work has already begun on the next photo essay for an upcoming issue. This essay, to be shot once more by John Alshefski ,will be a total departure from the effort of the last issue and will feature posed pictures with denizens of the local college campuses, including our own, serving as models.

Essays Get More Room

The next issue will correct the deficiency of the previous one in the essay department. Already on hand are essays ranging from the life of a central European folk hero to an analysis and description of the colorful and unique Kabuki theater of Japan.

Bob Strayton, layout editor, said that the effort of the Lynx staff is to make the magazine a more vital force on campus and to use it as an outlet for the artistic talent here at Villanova. Editor-in-Chief Frank Delany said that to this end, each issue will be an attempt at presenting as wide a variety of material as contributions will allow and at the same time to try something new with each issue for reader reaction.

Students Invited To Help

Any Villanova student with ideas for improvement of the magazine in either content or layout is cordially invited to bring his idea to the attention of one of the editors.

Satire and science fiction are two types of material which are most welcome for submission. It should be stressed at this point that more contributions are desired from the Engineering and C&F schools. The Lynx is not an Arts school magazine and writing ability is not restricted to English majors.

The issue of the Lynx which came out Jan. 8 was a complete sellout, thanks to the efforts of Circulation Editor Gerry Sullivan and his staff.

"What's it like to be

A PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT ENGINEER AT IBM?"

Three years ago, college senior Gerald Maley asked himself this question. Today, an Associate Engineer and leader of a nine-man team, Jerry reviews his experience at IBM and gives some pointers that may be helpful to you in taking the first, most important step in your engineering career.

"What really sold me," says Jerry, "was the way they conducted engineering. I'd expected rooms full of engineers at desks. Instead, I found all the informal friendliness of my college lab."

Gerald, an E.E., came directly to IBM from the University of Buffalo, in 1953. Starting as a Technical Engineer, he was immediately assigned to work, with two others, on designing a small calculator. The supervisor of this project was Dr. R. K. Richards, author of "Arithmetic Operation in Digital Computers." Jerry learned a great deal about computers in a very short time. Incidentally, his particular machine is now going into production. As Jerry says, "It makes an engineer feel good to see his project reach the production stage—and to be able to follow it through."

Assigns problems to his group

Promoted to Associate Engineer after 16 months, Jerry is now the leader of a nine-man team. He assigns problems to his group for solution, approves their block diagrams and the models they build. Perhaps an hour a day goes into paper work such as requisitioning equipment for his group and reviewing technical publications, in counseling members of his team and preparing for trips to technical society meetings. Apart from his regular responsibilities, he teaches at night in the IBM school.

Why Jerry chose IBM

Of course, there were other reasons why Jerry selected IBM. He was vitally interested in computers, and IBM was obviously a leader in the field. He comes from a scientific family (his brother is a mathematician) and is fascinated by these mathematical marvels which are revolutionizing man's ways of doing things in so many fields. He enjoys working on large equipment . . . and on "pulses." "It's more logical," he says. "In computer work, you can actually see things happening, which is not the case with all electronic equipment today. And it's not all solid math, either. What's more, this field is so new, that pretty soon you're up with everybody else."

This field is so new

Gerald has done recruiting work himself for IBM and believes he understands some of the college senior's problems. "I usually begin an interview by determining a man's interest," he reports. "Then the diversity of work at IBM enables me to offer him a job which will challenge that interest." Gerald distinguishes between two kinds of engineers—those who like to work on components, such as circuit designs, and those who are interested in the part the component plays. The latter is his own interest, which is why he is in advanced machine design. He points out that IBM is careful to take these factors into consideration—another reason, perhaps, why turnover at IBM is less than one-sixth the national average.

Reviewing technical publications

What about promotions?

When asked about advancement opportunities at IBM, Jerry says, "You can hardly miss in this field and in this company. They tell me sales about double every five years—which in itself makes promotion almost axiomatic." He endorses the IBM policy of promoting from within, with merit the sole criterion. The salary factor, he remembers, was not his first consideration. While excellent, the tremendous advancement potential was of far greater importance.

IBM hopes this message will give you some idea of what it's like to be an E.E. in Product Development at IBM. There are equal opportunities for I.E.'s, M.E.'s, physicists, mathematicians, and liberal arts majors in IBM's many divisions—Research, Manufacturing Engineering, Sales and Technical Service. Why not drop in and discuss IBM with your Placement Director? He can supply our brochure and tell you when IBM will interview on your campus. Meanwhile, our Manager of Engineering Recruitment, R. A. Larry Hennessy: Once Legend, Now Student

A tall student, his hair flecked with gray, has been walking around campus for the last two weeks unnoticed by his schoolmates. To Larry Hennessy, an unassuming Class of 1953 graduate and ex - professional basketball player, things have changed at Villanova! Four years ago, it would have been a peaceful day if Larry could have made it from Mendel Hall to Fedigan without at least several hellos.

Was An All-American

But that was four years ago, when Larry Hennessy was the celebrity of college basketball — an All-American. When he graduated, Larry took his B.S. in Economics degree and his basketball and went into the Army, where he served as player-coach on several Army teams. When he was discharged last year, Larry was immediately picked up by the Philadelphia Warriors, and played the entire season for George Senesky's pro championship team. At the end of the season, he was traded to the Syracuse Nationals, where he played for half this season, scoring as many as 14 points in a game, before returning to Villanova.

Wants to Teach, Coach

Asked why he left pro ball to re-enter Villanova, the soft - spoken athlete commented: "I want to teach history and coach basketball in the Philadelphia area, and in order to do this I must become certified in Pennsylvania, therefore I'm taking Education courses." To become certified, Larry must take 18 credits in Education and practice teach. This semester Larry is taking 13 Education credits and a course in sociology.

"Lot More Buildings"

The four years of absence from the campus saw a great many changes take place, changes that Larry hadn't seen before. On this subject, Larry said simply: "It sure has changed in four years—a little more mud and a lot more buildings."

Scored 1737 Points

While he was a student at Villanova, Hennessy was a threat to break all former scoring marks. He ended his career with a total of 1737 points, and, but for a bad break which disqualified him for the second half of the season, was the biggest threat of the '52-'53 season to surpass the 2000-point mark.

LARRY HENNESSY

Returns to Campus to take Credits in Education.

He averaged 23.2 points per game while playing for Villanova from 1950 to 1953. He had a 38.8 field goal average, and was 73.7 from the foul line.

Set Palestra Record

In 1953 Larry broke two Palestra records in one game—scoring 44 points, and dropping in 18 field goals—against Canisius.

Council Votes For Wearing Of The Green; March 18 Student Free Day

The tradition of a long St. Patrick's day weekend has been preserved for Villanovans this year.

The Student Council, at its meeting last Monday chose March 18th, the Monday following the weekend as its annual free day. The motion, submitted by sophomore representative Bill Christy, was passed by a narrow majority after some discussion in favor of the Friday preceding St. Patty's Day. The majority of the Council felt that more students would prefer a Monday as a free day.

Additional Request

Christy then moved that the Council request that the Administration ask the scheduled drill to be held by the NROTC students on March 17 be cancelled or postponed so that all Villanovans could enjoy the holiday.

Another sophomore representative, Don Kempf, introduced a motion which was passed unanimously requesting the retention of the system of room selection employed last year. Rev. Dante Girolami moderator of the Council, then read a letter which stated the changes to be made by the Administration next year.

After appointing a committee to aid in handling the system as used last year, council President Martin said that the disadvantages of any changes, as pointed out by the Council members, would be presented at the next meeting of the Vice-President's Committee.

Underpass Improvement

Kempf then suggested the formation of a committee to investigate the possibility of improving the existing conditions of the underpass leading from Villanova to the Pennsylvania railroad and the post office. This motion was also passed.

Other proceedings included: a report on coming freshman elections by Bob Schiller; a report on progress to date on the proposed student milk tickets, suggested at an earlier Council meeting; the passage of a proposal by Spirit Committee Chairman Pat Nicholson proclaimed today "Villanova Olympic Day."

Villanova coed Ellen Chambers works out the intricacies of the script of Belle Masque's spring production of "The Skin of Our Teeth," by Thornton Wilder, with other cast members Joe Giusti, Lionel Barrymore, and Ed McCarthy. Final casting for parts in the show was held last week.

BM Meets Tonight; Three Colleges Included In Cast

By JOE WHEELER

The Belle Masque Drama Society is holding a general meeting tonight at 7:30 in room 101 C & F. "All those interested in working on the stage crews or in the make-up department should attend this meeting," said Mike Clark, society president.

The spring production of the Belle Masque, The Skin of Our Teeth, will be the most unusual play ever to hit the Villanova stage. Thornton Wilder used every bit of his imagination when he wrote it, as evidenced by the unique and unconventional method of staging.

March, Tallulah In Original

In the original Broadway production Frederick March and Florence Elderidge were in the lead roles of Mr. and Mrs. George Antrobus. Tallulah Bankhead was Sabrina, and Montgomery Clift played Henry Antrobus, the wayward son.

One of the main reasons that this play was so well reveived was the cast; the other was the fine book, but on top of this the play was directed by Elia Kazan, now famous for "On The Waterfront". Belle Masque has a high standard to meet.

Talk To Audience

A major point to consider in the success of this show is the unusual manner in which the characters step out of their roles and talk to the audience. This brings the audience into an individual catharsis with the members of the cast.

At the organization meeting held last week Mike Clark, Belle Masque president, was appointed General Production Manager.

Bill Brown who had the lead role in the fall production Billy Budd is the stage manager with Owen Klein as the assistant stage manager.

The publicity for the play will be the responsibility of Dick Dressler and Bob Lima. The House manager of this production is Tom Curran. The crew is Fred Leisentritt and he is assisted by Jim McCarthy.

Guisti Business Manager

Joe Guisti has been appointed general business manager. On his committee as assistant managers are Ellen Chambers, in charge of advertising, George Brecht, sales; and Ed McCarthy, tickets.

Mail and Supplies Office In Mendel Latest Addition

The Mail and Supplies Office began its operations last week. This office, the latest addition to Mendel Hall's numerous offices distributes the mail to the administrative offices and faculty members, and sends all administration mail to the post office for circulation.

The office, under the direction of Frank Walsh, is located at the main entrance to "faculty row," the departmental offices in Mendel Hall. It handles two bags of mail, weighing about 70 pounds every day. The mail arrives at the office before 8:30. the morning and an hour later is distributed in 210 boxes located in the far wall of the office.

There are actually 252 boxes, but these will not be utilitzed until necessary. The office also has room for storage of supplies.

Psychology Dept. To Be Available For Consultation

Philosophy professors will soon be available for consultation, the Very Rev. Edward M. Dyer, O.S.A., has announced. Office hours will also be posted, the Philosophy Department Chairman added.

This semester marks the first time that meetings between professors and students have been arranged. Responsible for this in part have been the new department offices located on the first floor of Mendel Hall.

Law School-Inspired Institute Of Church And State Holds First Conference Last Week; Garey Hall Successful Host

Last week, Villanova's newly-opened School of Law Building, Garey Hall, hosted a group of about sixty people who attended the first annual conference of the Institute of Church and State. The Institute was created by Villanova's Law School Department for the purpose of discussing openly the contemporary problems which affect the relationship between church and state.

Primarily composed of lawyers, professors, and specialists in fields related to church-state relationship, the Institute held its initial session Thursday afternoon.

Registration for the two-day event was held at 1:30 p.m. in the new student lounge, and the first session began at 2 p.m. The opening address of the first session was given by Professor Thomas J. O'Toole, the chairman of the conference and director of the Institute, who is also a teacher in the Law School.

Status Of Churches Discussed

Discussion during the first session centered around the subject; juridicial status of churches. Professor Mark DeWolfe Howe, a competent speaker from Harvard University Law School, gave the principal address on the subject, and included in his comments was an analysis of the church-state relationship as it was considered in the First Amendment to the Constitution. It was this initial address by Professor Howe that set the tone of the entire convention, which considered every problem, appropriately, in the light of the church and state relationship.

Commentaries and a general audience participation discussion period followed Professor Howe's address. Doctor Harold F. Hartman, chairman of the University's History and Political Science department, was one of the commentators; the other was Monsignor Joseph H. Brady, the Rector at the Immaculate Conception Seminary.

Reception, Dinner Followed

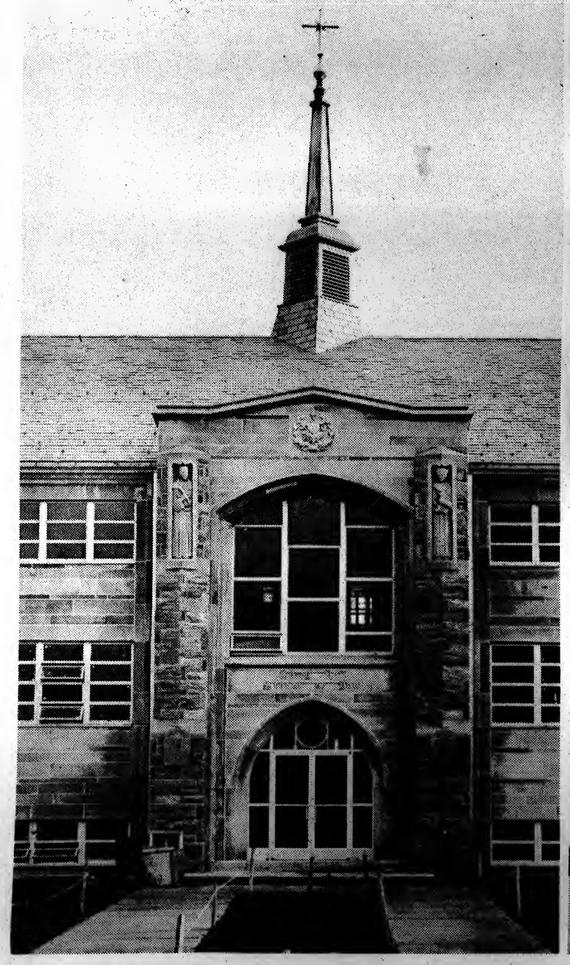
Following the general discussion the assemblage had a reception and dinner to close the first day of activity.

The extensive Law School courtroom, was the scene of the first session, Friday morning. The topic under consideration at the second session was: religion in adoption and custody, the principal address for which was given by Rev. Joseph M. Snee, a Jesuit Professor of Law at Georgetown Law School.

Floor Discussion Highlight

After his address, Father Snee was joined on the bench by Leo Pfeffer, a representative of the Commission on Law and Social Action for the American Jewish Congress, and Mr. Willard C. Heckel, Assistant Dean of the Rutgers University School of Law. The discussion from the floor on the comments of the three speakers was the highlight of the final session, which continued until 3:30 p.m. Friday, with only a brief luncheon recess.

Can Render Service



In establishing the Institute of Church and State, which is an entirely new type of legal forum, the Villanova School of Law felt "it can render a distinct service to our country by providing a center to which information and opinion may be brought and weighed by persons who—regardless of religious affiliation— sincerely desire to hear other men's ideas in this area and to achieve reasonable solutions of the problems considered."

The Institute further felt that consideration of problems dealing with the church-state relationship had been embroiled by subjectivity and disunity in the past, and as a result, "rancor rather than reason, had previously characterized this type of discussion.

Will Consider Other Problems

In the future, the Institute hopes to conduct inquiry into numerous problems related to church and state. Some of the subjects to be considered are: legal limitations on church administrations and discipline, charitable and legal bequests, church control over property, taxation of church property, public aid to religious activities, Sabbath laws, state regulation of religious education, and censorship and gambling.

The inquiry into the subjects will be limited only to the legal aspects of subjects. The Institute will also consider relative material from both comparative and international law at its future forums.

Garey Hall, the University's beautifully modern Law School, assumed the role of host for the first time last week when the first annual meeting of the Institute of Church and State, an orgainzation which will conduct inquiries into contemporary relations between the Church and State, was held. The Institute was founded by the Villanova School of Law.

Two interested Villanova Law School students, Charles Allen and Joseph Monaghan, sign registration blanks prior to the opening session of the Institute of Church and State in Garey Hall last Thursday and Friday. Mrs. Grace Kennedy, seated, and Miss Jane Hammond, registration clerks, look.

Mr. Leo Pfeffer, Director of the Commission on Law and Social Action at the American Jewish Congress, left, Chairman Thomas O'Toole of Villanova, acting Chairman, center, and Rev. Joseph M. Snee, S.J., a Professor of law at Georgetown University, right, were the main speakers at the Friday afternoon session, which dealt with the question of religion in adoption and custody. The relation between the Church and State was also a prominent topic at this final session.

Directing the first Institute of Church and State forum was Thomas J. O'Toole, a professor in Villanova's Law School. Mr. O'Toole, acting as general chairman of the proceedings, gave the opening address to the audience on Thursday morning. Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of Villanova also spoke to the gathering in the capacity of official greeter.

Professor Mark DeWolfe Howe, who teaches at Harvard's School of Law, was the central outstanding figure during the two-day program. In his initial address on Thursday morning, Prof. Howe discussed the Juridicial Status of Churches in the light of the relations between Church and State. This latter topic later developed into the main theme of the Institute's Second Session discussion.

The audience at the second session activities of the Institute take notes and listen attentively to the speakers. After an address by Rev. Joseph M. Snee, S.J., and brief commentaries by Willard C. Heckel, Assistant Dean of Rutgers School of Law, and Leo Pfeffer of the American Jewish Congress, the audience was asked to participate in a general discussion of the topics. The first sesion was conducted in a similar fashion.

Bohdan Procko, Eastern Rite Author And Expert

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE

Villanova University numbers among its faculty an author and well-known expert on the Eastern Rites of the Catholic Church.

Bohdan Paul Procko, Assistant Professor of History, has recently had published a pamphlet dealing with the history and origin of these rites.

Mr. Procko origionally wrote the piece for a Ukrainian Catholic Youth League publication. It was then published in the pamphlet form presently appearing on the Villanova pamphlet racks. The cover illustration is by Clement Birch, junior dayhop.

United With Rome

Mr. Procko writes concerning the religious break in 1054 between Rome and Constantinople. "As the centuries passed, Catholicism and Latinism became synonymous to many people in the West. Historically that position cannot be sustained. The modern Ukrainians continued their relations with the Pontiff at Rome after the schism."

The Byzantine Rite is the most widely used after the Latin. Of the approximately eleven million Eastern Rite Catholics in the world, close to nine million follow the Byzantine Rite. The Rite is further divided into disciplines, the largest being the Ruthenian with nearly six million members.

Migration To U.S.

It was not until the second half of the 19th century that those from Central and Eastern Europe came to the United States in great numbers, bringing their religious rites with them.

There are now approximately 342,000 Byzantines living in the United States. Philadelphia is one of three Ukrainian dioceses in the country. The Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception is the seat for the present Exarch, His Excellency the Most Reverend Archbishop Constantine Bohachevsky, appointed in 1924.

Gateway To Church

The Eastern Rites are very important to the Church. Canon law forbids the faithful to change their rite without the approval of the Holy See. They are serving as the gateway through which those Eastern Schismatics may return to Rome.

The Eastern Church has a glorious past producing great men such as Sts. Athanasius, Basil the Great, John Chrysostom and Gregory Nazianzen all of whom were Doctors of the Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Procko is well qualified to write this pamphlet, being born in Poland of Ukrainian parents and the son of a married men were permitted ordination in the Rite. Mr. Procko graduated from Albright College in 1945 and received his M.A. from Columbia in 1946.

Student of Eastern Rites

He has studied the Eastern Rites for some time and with a great deal of interest. Mr. Procko is a member of the Ruthenian discipline of the Byzantine Rite. With his wife Margaret, a member of the Latin Church, he attends Sts. Peter and Paul Church, a Ruthenian parish in Clifton Heights, Pa.

He appreciates the great beauty of the rite and feels that it is ideally suited to the Eastern mind.

The Eastern Rites are best known to Americans for the beauty of their ceremonies. But to 11 million people throughout the world including nearly a million in the U.S. these are the externals of a religion and faith deeply ingrained in their lives.

Second Annual Folk Fair To Be Held March 16, 17

Thirty ethnic groups, twelve more than last year, will take part in the Second Philadelphia Folk Fair which will take place Saturday and Sunday, Mar. 16 and 17, from 2 to 11 p.m. at the Commercial Muscum, 34th Street and Convention Avenue.

So great was the success of the First Philadelphia Folk Fair that participating groups decided to have one again in 1957.

Two Days Of Exhibits

The two days of folk dancing and singing, exhibits of arts and crafts, and international dining is sponsored by the International Institute, the Board of Trades and Conventions and the following ethnic groups: American, American Indian, Armenian, Austrian, Czechoslovakin, Dutch, English, Estonian, Filipino, French, German, Greek, Hungarian, Indian, Irish, Italian, Japanese, Kalmuk, Latvian, Lithuanian, Mexican, Norwegian, Polish, Puerto Rican, Romanian, Scotch, Swedish, Swiss, Ukrainian.

Four different programs of folk songs, dances and tableaux will be presented in the Ball Room of the Convention Hall each day, starting at 4 and 8 p.m. Folk dancing and folk singing for everyone will follow after each program.

Delicacies Served

Foods from fifteen nations will be served during both days. Delicacies such as "Nalisnyki" (cheese pancake), "Placenta Dulce" (fruit cake), "Chifle" (twisted filled cookies) and many other dishes and tortes with interesting names.

Admission cards (75c for adults and 25c for children accompanied by adults) can be obtained in advance at the International Institute. Mail orders will be handled up to March 11. Tickets can be obtained by writing to: International Institute, 645 N. 15th St., Phila. 30, Pa.

Star Gazers Plan Active Schedule

Beginning with tomorrow evening's meeting, the Villanova Astronomy Club will meet every other Thursday at 7:30 in the Physics laboratory on the fourth floor of Mendel Hall.

All those interested in joining the club can apply at tomorrow's meeting. Membership dues are three dollars per year, and include a subscription to Sky and Telescope Magazine.

For future meetings, the club has planned to show slides on various astronomical topics, including moon constellations and planets. Plans have also been made for a member of the club to present a speech on subjects of astronomy at each meeting.

It was further announced that the club will have access to motion pictures in the near future.

Dave Belcher Gets Title Role In T'nT Musical

Director Jack Kelly has already selected the cast for the T 'n' T production of "The Man in The Gray Flannel Toga" which will be presented during the weekend of May 9, 10, 11.

Those included are junior Dave Belcher in the title role as Man, seniors Gene Donohue as Zeus, Dan Mullin as Aphrodite and Joe Redmond as Hermes.

From the junior class are Mike Klesius, Andy Iaccarino and John Kennedy as Bacchus, Apollo and Artemis.

Representing the sophomore class are Art Kelly as Kyrene and Gary Tackus as Hera.

PUBlicly Speaking . . .

By BOB and MIKE

Anyone who has been around here for a year or more needn't look too far to realize that the spring semester is upon us. One can find evidence of this in many directions.

The social-minded student has looked into every available course and has chosen for himself those which are famous for minimum output and not-too-demanding teachers. In the classroom itself there is usually a tremendous jockeying for seats situated very near the windows. Such a situation is very conducive for the socialite's contemplations of parties, picnics and proms.

BOB and MIKE

Every socialite knows well the necessity of having a well-padded wallet in order that he may have a successful season. Subsequently, any sort of a job that doesn't demand too much of an outlay is in demand about this time. For example, the cafeteria has recently been deluged with would-be milk-handlers and pork-testers. Caddying will once again command top billing once the golf season gets into swing.

Spring cleaning for the socialite entails a vigorous array of odd jobs. First of all, there are the mugs that need to be cleaned and polished. Bermuda shorts and old SAPA hats have to be dug out of the trunk and sent to the cleaners. The more active and far-sighted campers have already undertaken intensive exploration in order to find new picnic areas free of Boy Scouts and ants.

Needless to say, in order that a social event be a successful one, the socialite must have a successful date. Furthermore, it is also needless to say that successful dates don't usually come about via the blind date route. Therefore, the spring campaign is underway. Swarms of optimistic Villanovans soon will be seen converging upon the local female campuses. It is here that the socialite may be observed at his very best. The campaign, as usual, will be earmarked by all manners and sorts of sly, behind-the-back dealings.

19 ENGINEERING GRADUATES 57

How KEARFOTT'S Training Program Works...

A "learning by doing" philosophy is basic at Kearfott. As an assistant Project Engineer, you are given assignments in several engineering laboratories to determine in which you can make your best contributions and find your greatest satisfaction. Under the guidance of senior engineers and specialists, each man takes his project through from inception to final production, thus acquiring a broad experience background. Success depends on individual initiative and resourcefulness.

KEARFOTT
is interviewing on your campus
Wednesday, March 6
Make your appointment now with your College Placement Office

Kearfott's leading position in the development and production of aircraft control and navigation instruments makes the company a fertile ground for the young engineer to develop his talents and gain the experience which means success in his chosen profession.

Assisting in the design and development of today's most advanced systems, the graduate engineer quickly gains in knowledge of the functions and applications of the gyros, synchros and other components which comprise systems. You will share in Kearfott's vital role in TACAN, inertial guidance, stable platforms and other servo mechanisms for today's most important jet aircraft and industrial development.

In addition to close association with the engineers whose work has set new standards for the industry, you enjoy an educational assistance program to help you further your formal education, supplementing the "learning by doing" program through which you will choose your field of special interest.

Decentralized plants provide ample opportunity to become familiar with top management and distinguish yourself through initiative and imagination. Salaries and benefits are liberal, and advancement is based on your own value and contribution.

NOTE: If you cannot attend an interview on this day, please write for more information to Robert J. Speri, Technical Placement Supervisor, Engineering Personnel Office.

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

This weekend the Senior Class advances into the BILLboard Spotlight. Beginning Friday night the Seniors will be having a ball . . . The Belle-Air Ball to be exact, featuring the band of Billy May. The theme of the Senior Prom will be Manhattan Towers, placing the imaginative Prom-goers right in the heart of New York's metropolis. This dance is open to all and will begin at 9 p.m., running until 1 a.m. The price is only $6.00 a couple and the Senior Class hopes that all Villanovans will support this affair.

Black, Midnight Blue In Order

The accepted attire this season is either black or the popular midnight blue formals with the certain touch of the plaids. The usual parties, a' la Villanova, will certainly be found along the Main-Line. These are always an unbeatable end to a pleasant evening and are enjoyed by all. Prices of these affairs will vary according to location and individual management.

BILL REICH

Zollo Will Play This Year Too!

Saturday evening at the Broadwood Hotel will be devoted exclusively to the Senior Class. Another formal affair, the Dinner-Dance, will be held in the Main Ball Room beginning promptly at 6 p.m. The music again this year will be furnished by Leo Zollo and his Orchestra. The Dinner-Dance Committee sincerely hopes that all Seniors have made arrangements for their tables. Tickets are $10.00 a couple and five couples are required to make up a table. Cocktail parties are the order of the day prior to Dinner and there are numerous top names in show business appearing in the Philadelphia area over this weekend. Formal attire, of course, is in order.

New York's IC4A Offers Thrills

The Seniors will be occupied here in Philadelphia Saturday, but for the other Villanovans, New York's Madison Square Garden will provide an abundance of excitement. The annual IC4A Track Meet will be held, pitting a strong Villanova Team against some of the top College Teams in the Nation, such as N.Y.U., and Manhattan. Through the work of the Spirit Committee, special ducats can be purchased in the Pie Shop and Field House for only $1.00. Let's get out and support our Champs.

U.S. Students Eligible For Scholarships

The University of Vienna Summer School at St. Wolfgang, Strobl, Austria, will offer courses open to American students from July 14 to Aug. 24, 1957, it was announced last week by the Institute of International Education, New York City.

Closing date for admission is June 15, 1957. Closing date for the competition for eight scholarships is April 15, 1957.

The curriculum features beginning, intermediate and advanced German courses and courses in the history of music and Austrian art, the formation of the modern European mind, and the history of Middle Europe. Psychology, political science, modern diplomatic history, and international law are also offered. Courses other than German will be conducted in English. To be eligible for entrance to the three or six-week courses, American applicants must have completed at least two years of college work by June.

Scholarships Offered

Eight scholarships for tuition, room and board, are available to well-qualified students who would be unable to attend the summer school without financial assistance. Applicants for these awards or for general admission should write to the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th St., New York City.

Washington Trip Biggest IRS Activity of Semester

The International Relations Society of Villanova made a trip to Washington last Wednesday that was the biggest club activity of the year, according to President Gene Donohue. Seventeen members of the organization went down for the one day excursion.

The group used the facilities of the Pennsylvania Railroad and left for Washington about 7 a.m.

Their first stop in the trip was the State Department. They were briefed on the Eisenhower Doctrine by Mr. Fry of the Department who was a former diplomatic attache in the middle East. After the briefing the members were permitted to ask questions on State Department policy in this area.

Went to Agency

From here the group went to the United States Information Agency and once again were well received, Donohue said. They were ushered into a small theatre and after a brief talk on the background of the organization, were shown a movie concerning the various areas of its activities. This was also followed by a question period. As a parting favor, the Agency showed the group a film that was just completed on the Hungarian revolt.

After lunch, the members were taken on a guided tour of the Voice of America Studios. Here too they were very cordially received, Donohue added.

Visited Polish Embassy

The next stop in the trip was, according to the members, the most interesting of all. This was the Polish Embassy. After a tour of the building itself for a look at the various works of art that it contained, an informal question and answer period was held. It was here that the group was afforded an opportunity to see just what the government of Poland thought about various issues. This meeting of minds that were almost diametrically opposed was the most interesting experience of the whole trip, the IRS president remarked.

A full and detailed report of the trip will be given at the next monthly meeting of the International Relations Society.

IRC Presents Father Comey Panel Mar. 13

On Wednesday night, March 13, the Industrial Relations Club will present the famed Father Dennis Comey Panel from St. Joseph's Institute of Industrial Relations of Philadelphia in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium at 8 o'clock.

A few years ago, this same panel appeared here at Villanova and was accepted with great interest by the audience.

The Panel consists of prominent representatives of both industry and unions.

Aided Waterfront Dispute

Some might recall the aid Father Comey and his group have given in settling the union-labor disputes concerning the Philadelphia waterfront.

The topic to be discussed at the meeting is "The Guaranteed Annual Wage," a subject of major importance in our present-day economy.

Attilio DiMartina, president of the club, has extended a cordial welcome to all Villanovans, faculty and students.

Speakers From AFL-CIO

Among its other activities, the club has monthly speakers from the AFL-CIO international union who usually present subject matter of a contemporary nature regarding union activities.

A field trip is also planned for all members of the club in the near future .

Tonight, a film entitled "Mining for Nickle" will be shown and all are invited to attend.

ACP Poll Takes Collegiate Opinion:

Ninety Percent Say Faith In Ike Meant His Re-Election

A Villanova sophomore states that President Eisenhower won in November because of his popularity, an Associated Collegiate Press poll of collegiate opinion discloses.

Many Republican politicians have attempted to interpret President Eisenhower's tremendous popular vote as an equal endorsement for the Republican party. Democratic politicians are prone to believe the people voted for the man, Eisenhower, more than for the Republican party.

To get some opinion on the matter, as far as collegians are concerned, ACP asked this question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER RECEIVED AN OVERWHELMING POPULAR VOTE ON NOV. 6 BUT THE VOTERS STILL RE-ELECTED A DEMOCRATIC SENATE AND HOUSE. DO YOU FEEL THAT IKE'S RE-ELECTION WAS MORE INDICATIVE OF THE PEOPLE'S FAITH IN HIM AS AN INDIVIDUAL, OR THEIR FAITH IN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY, OR BOTH, OR NEITHER?

The results in percentages:

	Men	Women	Total
Faith in Ike	90	91	90
Faith in Republican party	1	1	1
Faith in both	4	4	4
Faith in neither	4	3	4
Undecided	1	1	1

Voted For Ike

The figures show that nine out of ten college students believe the people voted for Ike and not the Republican party. And the great majority of this ninety percent justify their response by pointing out that the people also elected a Democratic Senate and House. Here are a few typical remarks:

"They voted for the individual, or else they would have selected a Republican Congress also," is the statement of a freshman coed attending Moorhead State Teachers College (Moorhead, Minn.). And a Villanova sophomore puts it this way: "I believe that Ike must have won because of his popularity since the people still re-elected a Democratic House and Senate." An Ohio University (Athens) sophomore states: "It's so obvious when the House and Senate are both Democratic."

Little Difference

Other students stress the point that Ike was re-elected because of his personal popularity or because of his ability to handle the world crisis and his background as a military man, etc.

A Rochester Institute of Technology (Rochester, N.Y.) freshman feels that there is "very little difference in the issues of the two major parties and people tend to vote for the individual," while a University of Nebraska (Lincoln) sophomore coed believes Ike's re-election is "indicative of the 'personality cult'." And a senior at Brooklyn College (Brooklyn, N.Y.) says simply: "Ike represents the 'father image'."

Faith in Ike is due "mostly to the world situation," is the feeling of an Arkansas University (Fayetteville) junior. A freshman at Jacksonville University (Jacksonville, Florida) says: "I believe people voted for Ike because they felt that he could keep the United States out of war."

Fear Change

A few students felt the large vote was not indicative of faith in either Ike or the Republican party. For example, a Barnard College (New York City) freshman coed puts it this way: "The vote is due to a fear of change in the administration because of the Middle East crisis, plus a lack of interest in long range plans."

Salk Vaccine Administered For Two Days

The first of the Salk Vaccine shots will administered to the students who have made appointments today and tomorrow in the campus Infirmary.

The parents' or guardian's consent in writing must be presented by all students at the time the shots is received.

Three shots are in the series. The second shot will be given about a month from now. The third shot, which is received after an interval of four to six months, can be given by the family physician.

The one dollar fee for each shot is payable at the time the shot is administered.

CAMELS OR STUDENTS?

Then there was the time we were sitting in a class that will go unnamed at the present when a student announced in the course of his reading that prohibition was the straw that broke the camel's back. The smiling instructor quickly corrected his pupil. "Mr. Schultz," he quipped, "camels have been known to go without something to drink for days on end. It's some of us around here who can't."

MY GOODNESS, ALREADY?

Two seniors cut through partially constructed Sheehan Hall last Wednesday loaded down wth freshly-done laundry. As they emerged from the ediface and walked through a group of lounging laborers, one man with a wheelbarrow did a double take and remarked, "Goodness gracious (or something to that effect but slightly stronger) don't tell me they've started moving them in already."

give his first talk to the student body in the latter capacity.

Concerning the student trip, Nicholson asked that every loyal Villanovan be on hand for Saturday's meet, which will be held in Madison Square Garden.

He emphasized that the best way to support the team "is to take part in the Spirit Committee's second student trip—everyone remembers the first one to Boston, and if you don't, you know by now what you missed—and be present in Madison Square Garden this Saturday night to cheer the team on to its first indoor collegiate track championship."

He added: "With the spirit of Villanova behind it, the team won in Boston, and with that same spirit behind it, the track team will win in New York."

Tickets for the Garden meet, which will begin the final running of each event at 7:30 p.m., can be purchased until Friday at the booth in the Day-hop Cafeteria from 9:00 a.m. until 1:30 p.m., or in the Field House ticket office until 5:00 p.m. every day.

Regular $2 seats can be purchased at a special student price of just $1. The seats are in a good location, in the lower balcony facing the turns, Nicholson said. He also mentioned that no busses will be going up to the meet, and asked that students find their own means of getting to New York.

The tickets enable students to see all the preliminary time trials as well as the final running of each event, he concluded. The preliminary events begin about noon and continue through the day.

Trackmen Win AAU Championship; Third College Team To Turn Trick

Wildcat Stars Aim For First ICAAAA Title

The scene is Madison Square Garden in New York. Below on the wooden, banked, boards young men clad in shorts and shirts are competing for the 1956 Inter - collegiate Amatuer Athletic Association Indoor Track Championship.

The public address sytem is continually naming the winners of the various events. The name Villanova is behind that of nearly every winner. Delany, Bragg, Reavis, and Jenkins are but a few of the names that are followed by the all familar postscript, Villanova. But for every win turned in by the Villanova athletes, a second and third or fourth and a fifth place are registered by the far less conspicuous stars of Manhattan College. When the last race is concluded and the meet results are announced, much to the surprise of those assembled, and the chargin of Villanova fans, the Wildcats' five first places are not enough to overcome the points accumulated by Manhatten's combination of 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th places.

That was 1956.

Scene, Players The Same

This Saturday night the scene will be the same. The actors will be, for the most part, those who competed last year. But the Villanova Wildcats are planning to change the final act and bring home their first IC4A Championship.

The men who contributed first places to the Wildcat accumulation last year will be attempting to do so this year for a winning cause. Coach Jim Elliott has added depth on his squad this season, and these additions have strengthed the 'Cats chances to win the inter-collegiate championship.

A big question mark for the forthcoming week is sprinter George Syndor. George, who pulled a leg muscle two weeks ago in the New York AC meet, is a questionable starter as a result of this injury which kept him out of the AAU championships last week. Syndor is one of the outstanding sprinters in the country. Last season George bested Duke's wonder boy, Dave Sime three times and tied the world indoor record for the 60 yard dash, covering the distance in 6.1 seconds.

Winners Out to Repeat

Villanova's Ron Delany, Don Bragg, Phil Reavis, and Charley Jenkins, along with the Villanova Mile Relay Team, are heavy favorites to repeat last year's winning performances. These men, teamed with such men as Alex Breckenridge, George Browne, Ed Collymore, Vic DiMaio, Bob Holup, Johnny Kopil, Gene Maliff, Al Peterson, Bill Rahn, Charley Stead, Jim McGroady, "Reds" Fahey, Joe Armon and Jack Van Dusen will be out not only for revenge but also Villanova's first IC4A Championship.

Timb-e-r! Villanovan's Jim Fahey looks squeamish as he contemplates the three-point landing he's about to make in last Wednesday night's game with Washington and Lee at the Palestra. The Wildcats won the game, 70-69, in overtime. Jim had 12 points and 16 rebounds in the game,

'Cats Defeat W&L For Ninth Win, In Overtime; Beaten By N.C. State

By BOB MULCAHY, Sports Editor

Showing the effects of a long, hard season Vilanova's court squad split even in two games last week. A 78-64 loss to North Carolina State last Saturday was preceded by a one point overtime victory over Washington and Lee on Wednesday.

Particularly inept was the shooting of the visiting Mainliners as they hit on only 21 of 90 shots, a 23.3 percentage. To make matters worse Tom Brennan and Jim Fahey fouled out with 14 minutes remaining. Up until this point Brennan had scored 15 points which was still enough to make him high scorer for the losers.

Washington and Lee's Generals who came to Philadelphia with an impressive 15 and 4 record almost pulled the game out in the overtime. Winning by nine points with 3:20 minutes left in the game, Villanova fell apart and allowed the visitors to finally tie the score at 60 all.

Harrison Wins Game

In the overtime the Generals hit on three fouls but Jim Fahey hit on a field goal. Then with seven seconds remaining Kenny Harrison scored on a jump shot from the foul line to win the game. Harrison playing a fine game led all scorers with 22 points.

Fahey with 16 rebounds and 12 points, Griffith with 18 points and Emma with 11, helped the 'Cats squeeze out their ninth victory of the season.

"Maje" McDonnell Resigns As Villanova Frosh Coach

Bob "Maje" McDonnell, Villanova's freshman basketball coach, announced last week that he is resigning from his present position. "Maje" has been associated with Villanova since 1941 when he played on the varsity basketball team. He entered the war in 1943 and returned to the basketball squad in 1956. In the following season he was appointed freshman basketball coach.

Phillies Coach

After basketball season McDonnell serves as coach and batting practice pitcher with the Phillies. He joined the Phillies in 1947 and was elevated to the rank of coach the following year. He is known throughout the National League as the "holler guy" for the Phillies. This term came about because of his constant shouting and the tremendous spirit he shows during the Phillies games.

In his eight years as freshman coach "Maje" compiled a very impressive record of 103 wins and 20 losses. He stated that he is leaving Villanova for personal reasons and would consider a coaching job elsewhere next season.

Delany, Jenkins, Reavis, Mile Relay Take Firsts

By JACK CURTIN

One down, one to go! The first of the two major indoor team championships belongs to the Villanova track team. The Wildcats are now officially national Amateur Athletic Uunion champions.

In a tremendous display of power, the Villanova trackmen took the National AAU Indoor Championships last Saturday night at Marison Square Garden with a total of 28½ points. Second was the defending champions, New York Pioneer Club, with 27. It was an amazing team effort for the Mainliners, for they performed without the services of sprinter George Sydnor against a Pioneer squad that was at least four times larger than the Blue and White entry.

With the victory, the Wilcats became the third college team in history to win the meet. Only NYU and Penn ever managed victory before. NYU won the title twice, in 1943 and 1947. Penn won it in 1918.

Delany, Jenkins, Reavis Lead

Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins, and Phil Reavis paced the Villanova victory, establishing two meet records and tying a third. The mile relay team also won its event. Don Bragg, Alex Breckenridge, John Kopil, anr Charley Stead accounted for other Wildcat points.

CHARLEY JENKINS

Ties Meet Record for AAU 600

Delany's mile was typical, but there was a new twist added. Ron wasn't taking any chances with this one. The fleet-footed Irishman still hung until the final laps, but he never allowed himself to fall back any further than fourth place.

The Dublin flash made his move with a lap and a half to go, moving around Hungarian Laszlo Tabori, fighting off a Dwyer threat, then pulling away to win his 12th consecutive indoor mile race by 8 yards in 4:07. Ron established a new meet record with the timing and destroyed an 18-year-old jinx which had never seen a mile victor repeat in the distance. Ron won the event last year in 4:14.5

High Jump Total Highest

Reavis, who cleared 6 feet 9½ inches on his third try, also established a new meet record in the high jump. The little Wildcat received a tremendous ovation from the crowd after he just missed his three tries at a new world's indoor record, 6 feet, 11 inches. Charley Stead picked up more points for the Mainliners when he tried for third in this event at 6 feet, 5½ inches.

The 6½ points garnered in the high jump was the highest total in a single event for the Wildcats. (Continued on Page15)

26 Games For Baseball Team Of Art Mahan

By TERRY ROCHELLE

With the opening game less than 5 weeks away, baseball coach Art Mahan has a difficult rebuilding job facing him, as he looks forward to a gruelling 26 game schedule. Gone from last year's diamond squad, which compiled a 12-8 record, are no less than 5 regulars, three of whom comprised the 1956 Wildcat outfield.

Dan Severino, ace of last year's mound corps, Tom Casey, the regular first baseman, and Ron Debiak, starting rightfielder, were lost through graduation, while center-fielder Frank Cofone, and left-fielder Sam Ferretti, decided to cast their future with the Cincinnati Reds after providing most of the Villanova batting power last season.

Nine Lettermen

Mahan will have to build around nine returning lettermen, including five seniors and four juniors. Two southpaws, Jack Kelly and Dick Black, and right-hander Bob Scalzi are expected to carry the pitching burden with possible help from Sophomore footballer, Jim Grazione.

Except for first base, the infield should leave no problem. Seniors John DiGiallorenzo and Ron LaMontagne will be back for their third season at second and third base respectively. Charlie DeGiavanni, another third-year man who saw action at second, third, and right field a year ago, may break into the starting lineup at the hot corner. John Donatucci will again hold down the short-stop position and along with DeGiallorenzo is expected to provide much of the offensive punch. After a mild mid-season slump last year, Donatucci finished strong and should be set for a banner year.

Hayes Back

Terry Hayes, like Donatucci a junior ,handled most of the catching chores a season ago, and is expected to be the number one backstop. The only left-handed hitting returnee, he will lend power to the Wildcat attack.

Junior Hank Nichols saw action in the outfield, behind the plate, and at first-base last year. He will back up Hayes as the number two catcher, and may be a starter at first base.

Non-lettermen Bob Cipriano and Jim Egizio, both juniors, saw limited action as outfielders and will be battling for a starting assignment along with sophomore Don Margraf.

Practice Started

Opening practice sessions have started in the Field House.

Swimmers Boost Record; Drexel Tech Seventh Victim

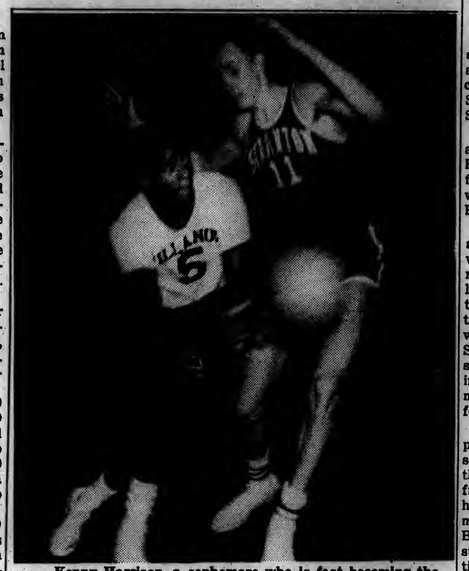
By DON KEMPF

The Villanova swiming team of Coach Ed Giesz scored an easy 52-34 triumph over Drexel on Saturday at the West Branch YMCA to boost their season's record to an impressive seven wins and only one loss.

The Wildcats were led by Senior Arts student Don Couig, who captured two first places for the Blue and White. Couig captured the 220 yard butterfly breaststroke in 2:36.1, rested while the diving and 100 yard freestyle were being held, and then came back to win the 200 yard backstroke with a clocking of 2:25.8.

Schoener, Rinkacs Win

Team captain Lou Schoener took a first place for the Mainliners in the 220 yard freestyle, winning with a 2:33.2 timing. Schoener was followed by sophomore Joe Lynch.



Denny Rinkacs won the 60 yard freestyle sprint with a 31.9 effort as Bob Pinto captured third for the 'Cats. Rinkacs also took a second place in the 200 yard breaststroke, finishing a close second to Lou Pinto who came home in an easy 2:46.8.

Nelson Baker captured the 440 yard freestyle for the Wildcats as he coasted to the finish with a 5:58.8 winning time. Sophomores Bobby Pinto and John Rumbarger finished two-three for the Blue and White in the 100 yard freestyle to give the 'Cats more points. And still more points were added when sophs Jim Corey and Bill Gilhool came in second and third in the diving.

Medley Relay Team Victors

It was Villanova touching home first in the 400 yard medley relay as Jerry Cechony, Lou Pinto, John Flynn, and Jim Donnelly combined their talents to win with a 4:38.6 clocking.

Villanova travels to Penn today to take on the Quakers in a meet in which the Wildcats will be out to avenge last year's loss to Georgetown in the University Field House Pool.

Kenny Harrison, a sophomore who is fast becoming the team's high scorer, drives past a Scranton defender en route to a lay-up. Villanova beat Scranton last Monday, 84-68, to lengthen its Field House winning skein to 74 games.

Villanova Courtmen Close Out Unsuccessful Season; LaSalle City Series Foe

By DON KEMPF

The long road of a losing season comes to an end this week as the win-starved Wildcats of coach Al Severance take on Mt. Saint Mary's Friday and LaSalle next Wednesday.

The Mainliners are matched against the Mountaineers from Emmitsburg, Maryland in the first half of a Palestra twin-bill which pits Temple against St. Bonaventure in the second game.

Four of the first five starters are missing from the squad which compiled a twenty and nine record for Mt. St. Mary's last year, and took first place in the post season Mason-Dixon tourney. However, the Mount will be bolstered by Captain Jack Sullivan, who at the start of the season, held eleven school scoring records and since the beginning of the year has added a few more.

Sullivan has averaged over 23 points a game for the last two seasons and has been chosen on the all-conference team since his freshman year. Jack, along with his younger brother Joe, sophomore sensation Bert Sheing, and Bill Williams, will provide strength with which the Mounties hope to upset the Wildcats.

The Wildcats conclude what will be their worst season in over a decade one week from today in the Palestra when they take on the Explorers from LaSalle in the second game of a double header.

The Explorers, much the same as the Wildcats, have been an in and out team this season. About the only difference in the two clubs is that the Explorers have been in more often than they have been out.

Senior Alonzo Lewis, recent addition to the 1000 point club, and Junior scoring ace, Tom Garberina, who was a doubtful starter early in the season, will be the key opposition for the Wildcats. Lewis, who will be making his final appearance for the Explorers, had a 13 point per game average last year and has averaged over 20 points in each contest this season. Garberina scored only 33 points for the entire season last year but has topped that total twice this year in individual games.

Walt Fredricks, Charlie Eltringham, and Big Ed Givnish have combined with Lewis and Garberina to pull quite a few upsets this season.

Jim Fahey, Jack Weissman, and Al Griffith will be making their final appearance in a Blue and White uniform as the 'Cats try to put a pleasant ending on a not-so-pleasant season.

CLASSES have been called off between 1:30-2:30 today in order that students be able to attend the Track Team rally in the Field House.

Kelly and Brennan Star—In Athletics, In Class

By FRANK FLEMING

In 1954-55 Villanova University turned out one of the area's leading freshman basketball teams. The Kittens of that year turned back the frosh teams of some of the East's best known basketball schools. But now, two years hence, only two members of this dynamic five are to be found playing in Blue and White uniforms. The fact that Tom Brennan and Jack Kelly were the only members of this squad to withstand both the athletic and academic tests is a great compliment in itself to these Villanovans.

But this has not been the only accomplishment of these two men. They have been cited many times for not only their outstanding play but for their fine team spirit and sportsmanship. Although they miss many classes while making road trips and find study time to be at a premium due to long practice sessions, both men are better than average students. Kelly's name is found on the Dean's List for two freshman semesters.

Both Marketing Majors possess an inborn quality of leadership which was immediately recognized by their classmates and teammates. Kelly was elected to captain the Kittens in his freshman year, while later that same year Big Tom was elected to serve as Class Vice-President during the next year. As Sophomores Tom was one of the most popular "white-hats" on the Orientation Committee of which he was Co-Chairman, and Jack was elected to the office of Class Secretary, a position which he is holding during the all important Junior year. Tom also holds a very responsible position in the Class, being Co-Chairman of Junior Week. Kelly also finds time to be active in Turf and Tinsel, NFCCS, and DPE Fraternity, in which he served as a pledge-master.

JACK KELLY
Clevelander by birth; basketeer by choice.

These two both came to Villanova with outstanding high school records. Kelly attended St. Edward's High School in his native Cleveland where he made both the All-Scholastic and the All-State teams. He also gained National honors by making the High School All-American team and being chosen to play in the annual North-South game in Murray Kent. While playing at St. Edward's he set two Cleveland area scoring records which have yet to be neared, let alone bettered. Not only did he rewrite the record books by scoring 48 points in one game, but he also captured the record for the most points scored in one season by totaling 680 tallies.

After graduation Jack was sought after by many colleges, but a combination of his great desire to further his education at a Catholic college and the efforts of Villanova Alumni, William "Peep" Sheehan and the late Cyril Burke, plus those of his brother, Pat, who has always been a great Wildcat fan, led him to Villanova.

Tommy Brennan, although a native of West Hempstead, Long Island, attended Chaminade High in Mineola. While there he was selected as a member of the Nassau County All-Scholastic Team as well as the Long Island All-Private team. He also rereived honorable mention on the Catholic High Athletic Association. In his senior year his team won the Brooklyn K ofC Tournament by downing the New York City Catholic Champions, LaSalle Academy. Tommy was outstanding in this game scoring a total of 21 points. The 6-6½ star still lists this as his greatest thrill in basketball.

Tom selected Villanova over many other schools because of his desire to attend "a Catholic college with a good business administration school."

Jack last spring combined basketball and baseball, a feat which he hopes to duplicate this spring. Last year he won three games while dropping two for Art Mahan's Wildcats. This past summer he pitched his employer's Collier Construction Co. team to third place in the Ohio State Championships. As a result of this accomplishment he was approached with offers from the Red Sox, Phillies, Yanks, and Braves major league clubs.

TOM BRENNAN

Brennan's most famous feat took place while he was still playing high school ball. In the middle of his senior year Chaminade met St. Francis' Prep. Playing for the Prep was Joe Quigg who now is a star of the number one team in the nation, undefeated North Carolina. This was Joe's final high school tilt and his chance to set a scoring record. To do so, the future great needed 20 points. Big Tom was assigned to guard him, and guard him he did, holding his bid for the record to 11 tallies.

Kelly gives his family much credit for his great success in his athletic endeavors. Of this he has said, "they gave freely of their time and money and made many personal sacrifices that I might take an active part in sports." Since his enrollment in Villanova Jack's family have become ardent Wildcat fans. They have frequently traveled to Philadelphia, Pittsburgh or Buffalo to see the 'cats play.

Tom and Jack are found daily at early Mass, and act as altar boys when Mass is offered for the team on the road.

Brennan has proved to possess exceptional rebounding talent. His 6-6 stature makes him a strong obstacle for opponents to surmount under the backboard. Tom had his biggest night of his college career last year against LaSalle when he threw in 19 points. This season, against Richmond, Tom scored 16 points while pulling down 26 rebounds, season's high for the team.

Both men plan to fulfill their obligations with Uncle Sam immediately after graduation next year.

Both Tom Brennan and Jack Kelly have brought and will continue to bring honors to Villanova and themselves both on and off the basketball court, because these two men are Catholic athletes in the truest sense of the words.

SPORTS CHATTER

Reagan Takes Over

By JACK CURTIN

The resignation of Ambrose Dudley as Villanova's Athletic Director and the subsequent assumption of that duty by Frank Reagan, to go along with his football coaching duties, were the main topic of discussion in the Philadelphia area two months ago. The athletic policy of the school was also a topic of much debate. Now that Reagan has settled into his new job it is easier to get a clearer picture of the situation.

In the short time he has held his new position, Reagan's touch has been evident in the school's plans. It is altogether fitting that the first important move on the part of the new director has come in his own special field. The recently released football schedule shows all three home games (Florida State, Wichita, Furman) for next season being played on campus.

No More Jinx

This innovation has been well received by the majority of students and alumni. A football game on campus is one of the most thrilling moments of collegiate life and such events have been all too rare around Villanova. Besides, there is no Municipal Stadium "jinx" to worry about.

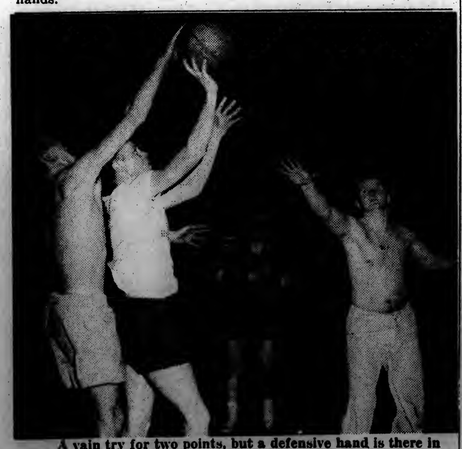
In an interview, Reagan was quick to stress that the only change in Villanova's football policy has been that of a travel restriction. The Wildcats will continue to play the present high calibre competition, but they will seek it closer to home. Of course, this cannot take effect until the games presently scheduled are played out. However, some changes, occasioned by the home schedule of next season, will be begun soon.

Reagan said improvements are being contemplated in Goodreau Stadium because of the increased activity there. Sanitary conditions in the rest rooms will be improved and a new press box built if possible. Then, if time and available money will allow, extra seats will be built to accommodate larger crowds.

'57 Schedule Tough

Assuming the role of football coach for a moment he said that next season's schedule will be "the tougest I've faced since I've been here." Still, he felt that the team would fare all right despite "the loss of some fine players." The schedule is complete as it now stands, the only addition being a pre-season scrimmage contest.

Villanova is planning a back-to-campus movement in basketball also. Reagan would like to see seven or eight games in the Field House next year along with the Palestra doubleheaders. Of course, this hinges on the schedule for the season, but it is another move that I feel would be welcomed.



Rumor had it that Blue-White Day would not be held this year. However, Reagan said that it would come on schedule, May 4. Again there are changes forthcoming. The program will be condensed into approximately four hours rather than extend throughout the day as before. Also, the football squad will scrimmage among themselves rather than play a team of oldtimers, a change which will make for a better game, stated Reagan. The oldtimers will still compete in basketball and possibly baseball.

That Reagan is a busy man can be attested to here, for the telephone rang four times during the twenty minutes I spent in his office. He claimed that the job is time consuming even during the evening hours. Reagan spends six to seven nights a week attending alumni meetings, sports banquets, and other such functions and many hours a week are consumed in the search for new athletic talent for the school.

Objective In Mind

It would seem that Villanova, while still not sure of its position in the athletic world, has ceased to grope in the dark, having now a definite objective in mind. Reagan stated it thusly, "I have every co-operation from the administration and only hope I can do the job asked of me. Right now, we have a clearer picture of where Villanova is heading and what it is trying to prove than we have had in a long time."

The opinion here is that the future of Villanova is in capable hands.

A vain try for two points, but a defensive hand is there in time to stop the shot during an intramural game in the 8:30 Field House League. Over 80 teams are in competition for the title.

No, it's not a session in ballet! Heated intramural action during an 8:30 Field House League game has three competitors straining for the ball. The finals in all intramural loops will be held in three weeks.

TROUBLEMAKERS UNDEFEATED

Benny's Troublemakers romped to a lop-sided 55-32 victory over the Tubes in a 7:30 Alumni League game last week. Buzzy Barron threw in almost half the points for winners, scoring 27 points. Team captain Tom Eschmann and Dick Murphy had 8 each for the Troublemakers, who are undefeated this season.

RYAN'S EDGES SULLIVAN

Football quarterback Billy Magee paced teammate Joe Ryan's Five to a close three point victory over Sullivan's Big Five in a game between two teams of football players. The score was 52-49. Magee threw in 22 points for Ryan's, making him the game's high-scorer. Mike Boruch tallied 19 for the losers. The game was played in the 7:30 Alumni League.

NEAL PACES JAZZERS

A 27 point contribution by John Neal paced the Jazzers in a runaway victory over The Boys, 79-49, in a 7:30 Alumni League contest. The Jazzers, who finished second in the championship play-offs last season, had Joe Mason score 19. Vince Bresan was high for the losers with 13 points.

MASHERS BEAT GUNNERS

In a game played in the 5:30 Alumni League, the Mongolian Mashers overpowered a smaller Gunners squad, 90-71. Walt France, who tallied 20 points for the Mashers, was the game's high scorer. France scored most of his points on a red-hot jump shot.

ROLLES GETS 52

Jim Rolles, no relation to Chuck Rolles of collegiate basketball fame, outscored the entire opposing team last week as he dropped 52 points through the hoop. Rolles, playing for the Gunners of the 5:30 Alumni League, led his team to a 48 point victory over the Hawks. The score was 89-41.

JIZZ AC EKES ONE OUT

The 7:30 Field House League saw the Jizz A.C. eke out a one point win over the Shooting Stars, 40-39, after trailing at halftime by 9 markers. Don Brass of the Jizz AC was the game's high scorer with 14. Ed Korepley and George Matook were high for the Shooting Stars with 13 apiece.

LKD WINS BY FOUR

Lambda Kappa Delta, the premed fraternity, sneaked by Marty's Marvels, 60-56, in a 8:30 Field House League contest. LKD's Greg Lignelli, who scored 22 points, was the game's high with an 18 point total. Harry Tappen (16) and Leo Gonsalves (15) were high for the Marvels.

TROTTERS ROMP DAIRY

Well-dressed but outplayed O'Brien's Dairy lost a lopsided 80-58 contest to Turse's Trotters in a game played in the 8:30 Field House League last week. Dick Goodwin with 16 points was high for the Trotters. Teammate Bruce Francis scored 14. Tom Murtha (16) and Dan Reilly (11) paced O'Brien's.

NORTHERNERS BEAT DEVILS

Hal Bauser, who scored 32 points, and Rocco Barbieri, with 25, led the highscoring Northerners to a 78-59 win over the Delurey Devils in a game played in the 8:30 Field House League. Hank Seiban, Devils Captain, was high for the losers with 18 points. Jerry Lynch of the Delurey squad had 14.

DEVILS EDGE MARVELS

Baseball catcher and ex-basketball player Hank Nichols tallied 25 points last Tuesday as the Delurey Devils made their bid for the championship round by rolling to a 90-74 victory over Marty's Marvels in the 8:30 Field House League. Harry Tappen and Jack O'Shea were high for the losers with 22 each. Larry Murphy had 20 for the Devils.

GYROS TUMBLE RABBITS

The Gyros, who won the Phoenixville summer league while playing together last summer, controlled the backboards during the entire game and won a low scoring 38-25 decision over the Rabbits in the 7:30 Field House League. The Gyros led 23-9 at half-time. Henry McCarthy was high for winners with 17 tallies.

Track Team Scores

Jenkins led all the way in tying the meet record for the 600 with a timing of 1:10.4. In winning, Charley defeated the only two men to best him in the event this year, Tom Courtney and Reggie Pearman. The Olympic 400-meter champion had to fight off a back-stretch bid by Courtney before he won the event.

Was Too Tired

Thirty minutes after his 600 victory, Jenkins returned to the boards to run the first lap of the sprint medley, but he hadn't time to regain his wind following the record tying performance and could but jog around the track resulting in a Wildcat withdrawal from the event.

Charley Gave All

Charley, playing the role of iron man in the absence of Sydnor, had earlier competed in the 600 and sprint medley trials. It was an outstanding performance by a great team competitor who gave his all for the eventual victory.

The mile relayers turned in the fourth Villanova first place finish, moving around the boards in 3:20.6. Running for the Wildcats were Gene Maliff, John Furlinger, Al Peterson, and Ed Collymore.

Don Bragg accounted for three more big points as he cleared 15 feet even in the pole vault for a second place. Bob Richards won the vault. Alex Breckenridge chipped in with three more points with a spirited second place finish in the three mile run. Johnny Kopil finished the scoring with fourth place in the 1000 yard run.

Elliott-Men Had Blazing Finish

Only one slight misfortune dimmed the Wildcat's joy. Bill Rahn, sophomore member of the relay team, was injured when he stepped from the arena while the hall was in darkness for the national anthem, and stumbled down a short flight of stairs. He was admitted to St. Claire's Hospital in New York City with head injuries.

However, now that one of the big ones that just managed to slip away last year has been caught, the Wildcats will tackle the other this Saturday.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

By JOE MARTIN, SC Pres.

Everbody loves a free day. The easiest and most pleasant job that the Student Council has during the year was taken care of at the last meeting. As everyone knows by this time the eighteenth of March will be free day as declared by the Council. Although the date was voted upon by the members present, the St. Patrick's Day weekend has become almost traditional in the last few years. The only thing left is to put the time to good use by watching the parade or just sleeping.

* * * * *

At a Council meeting held last semester, the Vice-Chairman made a motion that a suggestion box be placed in Dougherty Hall. This box would make it easy to get the ideas from the students on any particular question with a minimum of delay. Under the direction of Bill Wescott, and with the kind cooperation of Mr. Gorman of the M.E. woodworking shop, the box is now completed. The plan is simple. If anyone has any suggestion or complaint about any conditions, he can save a little wear on his roommate's ear and at the same time do more good by writing it down and putting it in the box. It would be a big help if they would be signed in order that the real good ideas can be investigated further with the help of the originator. With our new suggestion box I am sure that we will get many more, and better ideas than we could have gotten in the past.

The time for room reservations is almost here again. As revealed by Fr. Girolami at the last meeting of the Council, there will be some changes from the system used last year. The main differences are these: (1) All Freshmen will live on campus next year; (2) Sullivan Hall will be reserved for the use of the Freshmen; (3) Permission for any student to live off campus will be given only in few cases; (4) Except in rare instances resident students will be required to live with members of their own class. Let us look at these points one at a time, and see what they mean and what was said about them at the meeting a week ago.

As far as requiring that all Freshmen live on campus, I think that all will agree that this is a fine idea. When a person first leaves for college he has a whole new life to adjust to and it would certainly be a help if he were able to live on the campus under more direct guidance and counselling of the Augustinian Fathers and the upper classmen. Our students would become true Villanovans a lot faster and a lot easier.

JOE MARTIN

The decision to reserve Sullivan Hall for the Freshmen is the point that has been the subject of most of the campus talk lately. The administration has decided that the best way to properly orient the Freshmen is to have them all live in one dormitory. At the meeting the other night a motion was passed that rooms be given out on the basis of seniority. When the Student-Administration Committee meets (which at the time of this printing they will probably have done) the student members of this group will request that the administration consider choosing some other place for locating the Freshmen next year. If reasons exist that make this request impossible to consider, the facts will be learned at that time.

With the construction of Sheehan Hall, the facilities for resident students has naturally been greatly increased. For this reason the number of off-campus residents will be naturally reduced. The ideal of having all students live on campus, can now be more closely accomplished.

The rule concerning restricting roommates to classmates is seen, after a little thought to be in the interest of fairness in distributing the rooms. If a Sophomore were to live with a Senior who had an early choice of a room, he would, in effect, be getting a preference over another upper classman.

One point not mentioned earlier is one that will make everyone happy. No money will be required for room reservation.

Lou Gagliardi, Beta Gamma Vice-President, looks on as the debating society's President John McGee shakes hands with Eugene McGonigle, Grand Knight of the Holmesburg Chapter of the Knights of Columbus during an exhibition debate held at the K ofC Hall in Philadelphia last week. The debate consisted of a discussion of the national topic; "Resolved: that the U.S. should discontinue direct economic aid to foreign countries." Beta Gamma, one of the lesser-known campus organizations, has had a highly successful year thus far, having won 39 debates, while losing only ten. The society will hold its next debate tonight at 7:30 in room 215 Mendel against Bryn Mawr College. McGee urged interested students to attend.

Literary Club Elects First Officers

The newest organization on campus, the Literary Club, will adopt a constitution and elect its officers tomorrow during the Activities Period in 204 C and F.

A suitable name for the new organization will also be made.

Open only to junior and senior English majors, the club was recently initiated by a group of junior English majors who promptly went about the task of drawing up a constitution and selecting Mr. Ratigan of the English Department as moderator.

Juniors to 'Swing and Sway;' Sign Sammy Kaye for Prom

By LEO ROGERS

Junior Week co-chairman Tom Brennan and Jed Dioguardi have announced that Sammy Kaye and his orchestra will be featured at the Junior Promenade on May 3. "Hailed as one of the most danceable bands," Brennan announced, "Sammy Kaye's Band has proved through the years that it is also the combination for ideal listening."

Kaye is famous for his "Swing and Sway" music and has recorded such hits as "Tennessee Waltz," "Wheel of Fortune," "You" and "No Greater Love." He is also widely acclaimed for his radio-television feature, "So You Want To Lead a Band."

Brennan and Dioguardi also announced that most of the plans for Junior Week have been completed. The Junior social fling will begin on Sunday night, April 28, with the NFCCS Variety Show. This will be an added feature for the early-arriving mothers.

Mother's Day On Monday

On Monday the Juniors will pay tribute to their mothers. The event-filled day will begin with a Mass celebrated by the class moderator, Father Berra, at the Mother of Good Counsel Shrine. Co-chairmen of Mother's Day, Pat Nicholson and Mike Rafferty have made arrangements for a lunch for Juniors and their mothers, the planting of the Class tree by President Bob Mulcahy's mother, the announcement of a winner in the traditional "Diaper Dan" contest, Benediction at the shrine and a banquet to be held in the Field House. Entertainment will be provided for the mothers before the banquet.

Jim Egizio and Joe Murphy have been appointed to look into the possibilities of a Sports Night, a Junior-Senior Muff Day or an intramural track meet for Tuesday. No definite arrangements have been made as yet.

Jazz Concert Planned

A jazz concert, to be held on Wednesday, is under the co-chairmenship of Carl Smith and Dave Belcher.

Norm Peer and George Fraunces are looking into activities for Thursday. "Activities for this day," Peer and Fraunces commented, "will be limited to allow Juniors to rest up for the hectic weekend which will begin on Friday with the Junior Promenade."

The theme of the Promenade has not been disclosed but co-chairmen Ralph DeCicco and Gene Fogarty promise that the decorations will "border on the spectacular."

Dinner Dance at Ben Franklin

The climax of the entire week will be the Dinner Dance, under the direction of chairman Clem Birch and vice-chairman Joe D'Aquila. This affair will be held in the Ben Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia where excellent accommodations have been procured. All other arrangements and procedure for reservations will be announced by Birch in the near future.

JOE KINNEY
Literary Club President

Registration Notice

At the Monday meeting of the Student Council, it was decided that room reservations for the Fall 1957-58 semester would begin Monday. Instructions and further information on registration procedure are on page seven.

New Literary Club Chooses Officers; Kinney President

Joe Kinney, junior day-hop English major, was elected the first president of the newest organization on campus—tentatively known as the Literary Club last week.

Leo Rogers, Ken Miller and Dave Belcher, all juniors, were named to the remaining three offices at the same time. The constitution adopted at the meeting also provided for the appointment of a Program Chairman to prepare and supervise setting up the agenda for regular meetings. Tom Martinez, also a junior, was the choice for this position.

Suggestions for a more suitable and specific name for the club were made at a special meeting yesterday. The selection of the name however was not decided upon before the Villanovan went to press.

Discussions and Lectures

Open to all students of Villanova, the club intends to assemble at least semi-monthly and vary its programs with group discussions and lectures by members of the English Department as well as other prominent figures in the field of fine arts.

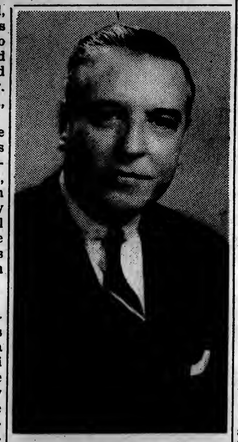
Villanova Graduate Judge Reimel Appointed to Board

Judge Theodore L. Reimel, Philadelphia Common Pleas Court Judge, has been elected to the Villanova University Board of Trustees it was announced last week by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President.

A Villanova graduate, Judge Reimel was the unanimous choice of board members to succeed the late Cyril J. Burke, Detroit industrialist who died in December. The Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of the eastern Province of the Augustinian Order, serves as chairman of the seven man Board of Trustees.

Directs Alumni Foundation

Judge Reimel has been identified with Villanova since his graduation. He is presently a director of the Villanova Alumni Foundation, a member of the Board of Consultors of the Law School, and a member of the Board of Associates of the University's Development foundation.



Judge Reimel, who is 53 years old, received the Bachelor of Arts Degree from Villanova in 1924 and was awarded an Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws in 1954. He was elected to the Board of Governors of the General Alumni Association in 1939 and served as its President in 1948 and 1949.

The Philadelphia jurist also is a member of the Sovereign Military Order of the Knights of Malta.

Has Written Five Books

Author of five books on Pennsylvania Law, Judge Reimel served at one time as a lecturer in Law at Temple University Law School and is currently President of the Law Alumni Association. He is a member of the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and American Bar Associations, Phi Alpha Delta Legal Fraternity, the Lawyers Club of Philadelphia, American Judicature Society, The Union League of Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Cricket Club and the St. Thomas More Society.

Judge Reimel is married to the former Marie Patricia Connor, daughter of the late Magistrate Edward Connor, and has two children Theodore L., Jr., a 1951 Graduate of Villanova and David Justin, who is a Villanova sophomore. His home is at 729 Westview Street.

Search for Junior Week Queen On; Deadline April 10

"The Class of 1958 Junior Week Queen contest is now well underway," announced co-chairmen Andy Iaccarino and Ted Macri.

About ten entries have already been submitted to the chairmen and they may continue to be turned in to them in 109 and 11 Sullivan and in the Student Council office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

The initial entries will be published in the next issue of the Villanovan while additional entries will appear periodically thereafter during the contest.

The photographs of the winners will appear in the special Mother's Day edition of the Villanovan during Junior Week.

Lent Begins Today, Men; Let's Make It A Special One

Today is Ash Wednesday, and once again the season of Lent is upon us. These 40 days preceding Easter Sunday and the Resurection of our Lord afford us perhaps our greatest chance throughout the year to show our devotion to the One who died for our sins on the cross.

There are many ways to spend this season of Lent and as Catholic College students we should pick the way in which we can derive the greatest amount of satisfaction for our spiritual life.

There are many times during the year when we take pretty good care of our body, now it is time for a little spiritual house cleaning.

The best way to begin, of course, is Mass and Communion on this the first day of Lent. The best way to begin every day of Lent is with Mass and Communion. But for those of us who have missed Mass today, there is still plenty of time to get over to the Chapel and receive our ashes.

It's an old saying, "Dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return," and we've all heard it many times. But have we ever really stopped long enough to ponder on the thought for more than a brief minute or two. We might try this when we get a spare moment for meditation during the next couple of weeks.

The editors doubt that we'll see any sackcloth and ashes around the campus, that custom, naturally, is uncalled for in our modern day society, but it certainly wouldn't hurt to see little penances being practiced here and there.

There are quite a few things we become accustomed to in our daily routine and these little things usually become habits with us. Some are good, some indifferent and some bad.

Good habits, fine. Keep them, all year round. Indifferent habits, smoking, eating between meals, dropping in on a movie or two when there's nothing better to do and the like have undoubtedly become attached to every one of us in one form or another and might prove rather difficult to give up, even for a while. A little self denial, however, never hurt anyone, and each and every one of us might try it in some size, shape or form.

You'd be surprised how good it feels to realize that you still can master yourself.

As for the bad habits, just trying to get rid of them isn't enough. We have to force ourselves away from them and that as they say "ain't easy." But now is the time for the crushing blow or final push against these habits that seem so attracted to out physical nature, but are, in reality, most repugnent to our spiritual nature and to our God.

And there's nothing like a little Santifying Grace to get us off on the right foot and keep us there, not only for Lent, but forever.

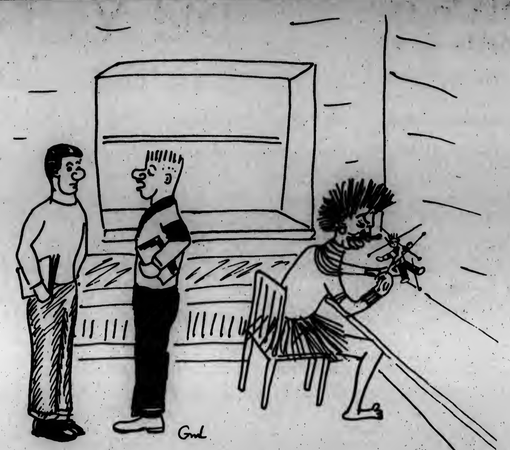
So we believe it is time to stop beating around the bush and putting off "till tomorrow" what should have been done a long time ago. It's just about time to take that proverbial bull by the horns and do something about this business of Lent. And there's no time like the present to start.

There's one more group of us who are heard occasionally grumbling about "these silly Lenten regulations," and this is the over-21 division. The question is often asked, "Why should I have to do this, that or the other thing?"

Our answer to that is that maybe it would do you a lot more good than harm to toe the line once in a while. We're still allowed three meals a day and no one is going to starve to death on that allotment. And it wouldn't hurt at all to offer up our missed chow and other tid bits for a special intention or two. Someone up there is always listening, no matter who's doing the asking.

So let's make this Lent a special one. Let's see if we can't bounce out of bed Easter morning perhaps just a little bit better men than we were when we climbed out of the sack today.

Congratulations On One Fine Weekend



Congratulations Prom and Dinner Dance Committees. It was a wonderful weekend. The seniors had a time they will not easily forget.

The decorations for the prom were great. And to these eyes which were focused on the interior of the Field House Thursday, and which came up blank, they were nothing short of fabulous.

This editors date was highly impressed and so was this editor. A salute to Sam Donohue and the Billy May Band. The music was great, too.

It appeared that everyone had a fine time at the Dinner Dance and that, again, everyone enjoyed the splendid music of Leo Zollo. The meal was good, the music was good and so were the refreshments.

Thanks fellas, it was great.

U. S. Compromise Only Way Out Of Mid East Dilemma

It seems as if the United States has given up the idea of imposing sanctions on Israel. In some quarters this decision has met with favor while in others it has run into opposition.

From the idealistic point of view, the imposing of economic sanctions is the only course which may be followed. Here the promise is that there must never be any gains given to aggression. All things must be returned to the point at which they started.

This, however, does not take into consideration the realistic aspects of the problem. Since the invasion of Egypt by Isreal, the attitudes of the various peoples involved have changed drastically. The Israelies themselves are now more sure of their military superiority and are encouraged by England and France. Egypt, on the other hand has had its national pride wounded and therefore will be touchier than ever.

DONOHUE

Western Powers Disagree

Added to this seemingly hopeless situation is the fact that the Western powers are not in agreement as to what should be done. England and France are set against economic sanctions against Israel and at one point, France even threatened to veto them in the Security Council. Russia, as might be supposed, is highly in favor of the sanctions as a means to gain Arab favor.

This is yet another problem which this country must face in its decision on economic sanctions. If it votes in favor of the sanction it is voting in direct opposition of its major allies. Such an event would not break up the alliance but it would put a deeper cleavage in it.

On the other hand, if the United States votes against the sanctions, she is alienating many of the uncommitted nations in the Middle East which the "Eisenhower Doctrine" is trying to entice into the Western camp.

Only One Solution

This then is the dilemma. In seeking its way out of the dilemma the United States is choosing the only way it can . . . a comprise. It is not insisting that sanctions be imposed. However, the U.S. is demanding that Israel remove its troops from Egyptian oil and the Armistice agreements of 1949 be enforced.

Neither Isreal nor Egypt is in favor of this stand by the United States but under the present world conditions, it is the only one that it can take and still retain a realistic outlook on its foreign policy.

A Salute To Our Track Team, Its Coach and 500 Noisy Villanovans

The time has come to salute our track team once again.

Winning the indoor Nationals was a feat well worth boasting about, for it had rarely been done before. But all eyes immediately focused on the IC4A meet the next week.

We had the stars they said, but the Jaspers had the all-important depth. As it turned out, however, Villanova had everything, the stars, the depth, most of the points and the Intercollegiate crown.

And Villanova had one more weapon, too, over 500 boisterous rooters packed into Madison Square Garden's end balcony. The editors have heard, from more sources than one who were on the infield, that the meet officials were pleasingly amazed at the tremendous show of spirit.

Every time a Villanova shirt would apear in motion around the Garden's big board track, more than a half of a hundred Villanova voices would drown out all other sound. And when the Wildcat's incomparible Ron Delany completed his unprecedented double the roof fell in, or so it sounded.

Ron has to get our first tribute. Nowhere on campus can one find such a combination of a brilliant athlete, a fine gentleman and a devout Catholic young man.

Our next tribute goes to the entire track team and their coach-of-the-year mentor. Messers Jenkins, Bragg, Reavis Stead, Maliff, Furlinger, Peterson, Colleymore, Sydnor, Breckenridge, Kopil, Holup, Rahn, DiMaio, Van Deusen, Brown, Armon and McGroarty, we are proud of you as standard bearers for the school.

And a healthy portion of the salute must go to Jumbo Jim Elliott, the most successful varsity coach in the history of the institution. Of him and of his boys we are extremely proud.

But there is still another bouquet of roses we must dish out, and that is to Pat Nicholson, his Spirit Committee and every last Villanovan who attended the IC4A meet. Their cheers had a lot more to do with the Villanova victory than many people realize.

With The Editor:

Hasty Seniors Learn Hard Way

This has been a hectic week for most seniors, making final arrangements for the big weekend and their last official ride on the collegiate social merry-go-round.

Some fourth-year-men had it a little rougher than others as they had to accept blind dates and spend the week or so before the prom bathed in cold perspiration and wondering just what was lying behind that "wonderful personality" they were locking horns with on the weekend.

CONSTANT CRIES

There were constant cries from the financially unsound and more weeping from those who couldn't dig up a ride, but none had it so bad as those hasty men who had asked the wrong girl a couple months ago and had fallen anew since then. The date breakers had it much worse than the date makers.

Only around term-paper deadline time has this editor witnessed more sudden ailments spring up about him. "But Myrtle, I can't take you to senior weekend. You see, I got so mad at my roommate last night I kicked him and broke my ankle, so I'll be laid up for at least three days. I knew you'd understand Mary . . . err . . . I mean Myrtle."

A BUSY STAGE

T'n'T seems to be headed for its best show since "Wish You Were There," three years ago. This coming production might be its funniest ever. A sample of what is to come can be ascertained from thinking about the junior's "vivacious" Moon Mullins bouncing daintly about the stage in his tight white sheath portraying Aphrodite, goddess of love.

WHO ARE THEY

Freddie the Frosh was overheard talking to his sidekick Sideburns Sam the other day. The conversation went something like this:

Freddie: Gee, the senior have Billy May for their Senior Prom and the Juniors have Sammy Kaye for their Junior Prom.
Sam: Yeah man.

Freddie: Wow, we may be able to get Bill Haley and his Comets for our Sophomore Cotillion. Wouldn't that be the most?
Sam: Now you're cookin' wit' gas, man. But it's impossible, he'd charge much more than those unknown bands.
Yeah man.

Did Ya Ever See A Saucer Flying? Well, I Did.....

By CLEM BIRCH

Since the printing of the last article, private discussion with many readers of the Villanovan has shown that there are points which must be clarified before going any deeper into the subject of UFO's.

The first of these "problems" is that of explaining that the conclusion "that flying saucers do exist" was not drawn from the few stated cases mentioned in the article alone but that it was based on thousands of similar cases reported by qualified personnel. (I repeat that these cases could not be explained and were confirmed by the ATIC-AIR Technical Intelligence Center).

The second is that dealing with "Plantier" and what his theory is. This particular situation I would like to go into roughly but as extensively as space will allow.

Plantier's Theory Of Travel

Plantier is a French Aviator and an accomplished mathematician, who in an attempt to escape the boredom of a garrison outpost formulated a theory of space flight.

His theory, of travel, which is just as complicated as most mathematical theories, centers about the ability of a craft to nullify the gavitational field around it and the like ability to create a separate force field of its own.

Plantier states that there is some substance in our atmosphere which can be converted into power and controlled as is the atom. This fact is substantiated by most physicists who state that there is little doubt as to the existence of such subtances which we, to date, have little knowledge of.

Force Field Created From Liberated Power

This power is then liberated to create this force field in degrees away from the craft so that we find, startlingly, the explanation which accounts for the absence of sound, metal-melting friction and the reality of an ability to travel at tremendous speeds.

Further review of the theory shows also that by directing this force field, 90 and even 180 degree turns, vertical and diagonal, and standstill maneuvers may be made at will without even disturbing passengers who are also free of our gravitational laws.

The change in color, from orange, yellow, to the blinding white, is then caused by the incandescence of air molecules "pulled" along by the machine. So much for Plantier's theory and its obvious connection to the sightings.

Clement, Do you think perhaps these nice little creatures might be "Flying Saucer" people? They seem to have a sense of humor, too. Too bad they're shy, eh, Clem?

In the time lapse between these two articles, I have had the opportunity to investigate the case for the UFO more thoroughly. As it turns out, the reason for the lack of publicity about confirmed sightings is traceable to a policy of the Air Force which has adopted with the changes in organization. This, Donald Keyhoe holds in his third book "The Flying Saucer Conspiracy," is to be found in the passage of two restricting and threatening statements. These two restrictions —JANAP 146 (Joint Army-Navy-Air Publications 146) and AFR 200—2 never reached public knowledge.

As space is fast restricting me, let me tell you of the discovery and announcement of an artifical bridge 20 miles long, 1½-2 miles wide 5000 feet high which gives all appearances of being an engineering project. This bridge, which is above the Mare Crisium cleavage in one of the Moon's mountain ranges, was later by spectographic analysis found to be METAL and not-natural.

To answer those sceptics who will say "Who said so?", I will merely add that the first confirmation belongs to Dr. H. P. Wilkins, one of Great Britian's top astronomers and that this fact was later confirmed by hundreds of less famous experts.

A most mystifying revelation also found through a slip in Air Force Security was that for the past two years, the government has had knowledge of two satellites which are orbiting the earth at a speed of approximately 18,000 miles per hour, There have been no statements as to the artificial nature of them but at the time of publication of my source (Keyhoe) they were not believed to be controlled as the saucers.

Not Asteroids Up There

Two definite facts are known about them though which should shake the hardiest of scoffers, the first of which is that one of the satellites is circling at a distance of 400 miles in our atmosphere and that the other is circling at a distance of 600 miles. The government had begun to establish three stations which would serve as tracking centers—one in New Mexico, one on Berlin, and one in Arizona. Whether they are now in operation, I do not know.

They are definitely not asteroids which might have entered accidentally. Unfortunately at the time we did have the proper equipment to continue the tracking job. The government though evidentally has pictures of them and data as to their operation. Why shouldn't the people of the country know?

I would like to present some simple mathematical figuring (my limit) just to show partially the extent of the cases that cannot be explained and that never unfortunately reach the public eye.

In 1954, a Pentagon leak from one Col. John O'Mara, Deputy Commander of Intelligence, ATIC, Dayton, Ohio stated that there were 700 sightings a week on the average in 1953 and the first five months of 1954. It we assume that 90% of them could be explained, as I would admit, there would still be more than 4000 sightings per year that the Air Technical Intelligence Center would admit they could not explain.

ACP On Athletic Preference:

A Tough Problem To Tackle, But Students Seem To Hoop For The Best

Minneapolis—(ACP)—If you had your choice to go to a football game or a basketball game, which would you choose? As far as college students are concerned the football game has the edge, but not by much.

College men however, would prefer football by a margin of almost 2-1, while the coeds would prefer basketball by the same margin.

Associated Collegiate Press gathered the collegiate view on this issue by asking the following question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

IF FORCED TO A CHOICE, WOULD YOU PREFER TO WATCH A COLLEGE FOOTBALL OR BASKETBALL GAME?

The results:	Men	Women	Total
Football	58%	35%	49%
Basketball	34%	57%	43%
Undecided	8%	8%	8%

Football enthusiasts are almost in unanimous agreement that football is more exciting and has more color, etc. "I think that there is much more color at a football game, and I have always enjoyed myself more," is the way a Villanova sophomore puts it.

"Color" Makes The Game

A sophomore attending the College of St. Catherine (St. Paul, Minn.) feels the "color, the many varied and intricate play patterns make for a more interesting game." And a Moorhead State Teachers College (Moorhead, Minn.) junior looks at it this way: "Basketball has too many rules on fouls. Football is faster, harder and more interesting to watch because of its complexity." But a senior attending Ohio University (Athens) sums up his opinion in one statement: "I don't like smelly gyms."

Hoop Action Is Faster

Students liking basketball over football feel that it has faster action, is easier to understand, and is played indoors out of inclement weather. Here are a few comments typical of these opinions:

"Action and comfort," is the short statement of a junior at the Newark College of Engineering (Newark, N.J.), while a University of Arkansas (Fayetteville) senior says: "There is action all the time." And a Rochester Institute of Technology (Rochester, N.Y.) sophomore feels the "game is much faster and more exciting."

Understanding Important

Another Rochester Institute of Technology student, a freshman, feels that basketball "is a more interesting game from the spectator's point of view because you can see what is going on better," while a sophomore coed at Mississippi College (Clinton) simply says: "I understand basketball and not football."

"I understand basketball, and besides you don't freeze to death," is the feeling of a Yakima Junior College (Yakima, Wash.) sophomore coed. But a University of Nebraska (Lincoln) sophomore coed gives her view in two words: "costs less."

Depends On The Teams

Students undecided on the question generally agree with the view expressed by a Georgetown University (Washington, D.C.) sophomore, a coed who says: "it depends on the teams," or else they echo the opinion of a Villanova sophomore coed who says: "I really like and enjoy both sports very much."

Just Like A Woman: VU Ideal Berated

Two weeks ago the Villanovan published the results of an inquiry to a cross section of Villanova men as to their conception of the ideal girl.

The bewitching piece of femininity that we came up with read something like Dante's Beatrice, only better. The ideal girl seemed to be perfectly imperfect.

Feminine Reaction

Feminine reaction was immediate and slightly on the indigant side. This reaction took the form of an open letter to the male population of Villanova from three of the opposite sex now attending Holy Family College in Philadelphia.

Here is the reaction of the Misses Loretta Cianfrogna, editor-in-chief of the Tri-Lite, Holy Family student newspaper; Helene Haggerty and Geraldine Wysocki, president of the Holy Family student council.

Feminine breaths were held throughout the collegiate world when Villanovan headlines announced the university's student's conception of the girl they'd most like to roll through life with (in her car, naturally).

Although it may indicate another "weakness" on the part of the already "weaker sex," we must admit that the paradoxical paragon conjured up as a result of reading the views expressed in the Villanovan seems improbable to say the least.

Erin Go Lei

Picture, if you can, a "self-sacrificing," "efficient," hula-skirted homeworker swaying to the strains of Aloha go Bragh, the while maintaining a "serious attitude on life in general."

Or, perhaps, a winsome "Dana Wynter-type" wife who, while struggling to maintain the unique statue of "quiet extrovert" "tender" "aid," "comfort," and "constructive criticism" to a husband who refuses to be bossed.

They Can't See It

Equally difficult to envision is the "impractical," "helpless," "non-intellectual" who, although possessed of what at first glance may appear to be definite handicaps, manages to earn the reputation of being "wise," "witty," and an "entertaining conversationalist."—Now Really Boys!

We like to think that the "ideal girl" survey was conducted at a time of mass hysteria—like exam week. How else can we explain the fact that nowhere in the aforementioned article could we find the pleasantly normal-type girl, who composes ninety-nine percent of the female population at parties, formals, dinner dances, and other boy-ask-girl affairs?

Spanish Clubbers Say "Si, Si" To Mr. DiVincenzo's Appointment

By TERRY ROCHELLE

MR. VITO DIVINCENZO
New Spanish Club Moderator

President Mike Ford announced last week that Mr. Vito DiVincenzo has been chosen to succeed the late Rev. Lorenzo, Lozano, O.S.A., as moderator of the Spanish Club.

Ford also noted that a second Month's Mind Mass, in remembrance of Father Lozano's untimely death in New York two months ago, will be celebrated in the University Chapel tomorrow morning during the 10:30 activities period.

He urged all members of the Spanish Club to be present at the Mass.

Mr. DiVincenzo, who succeeded Father Lozano as head of the Spanish Department last semester, has taught Spanish at Villanova since 1948.

Taught in Puerto Rico

Prior to that time, Mr. DiVincenzo had taught intermittently at Penn State from 1940 to 1948. He also taught English in Puerto Rican secondary schools while doing graduate work at the University of Puerto Rico from 1937-39.

During the Second World War, Mr. DiVincenzo served as a lieutenant in the U.S. Naval Reserve, and was stationed in San Juan, Puerto Rico. He served as an Educational Services Officer from 1943 to 1945, and held the same position when he was transferred to Corona, before his discharge from the navy in 1946.

Doctorate Candidate

The mild-mannered Spanish professor was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, but graduated from West Philadelphia High School. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Penn in 1937, and his Master's degree in 1947. At California, prior to his dispresent, Mr. DiVincenzo is a candidate for his docorate at Middlebury College, Vermont.

He has also done graduate work while teaching at the Universidad de Santo Tomas, Havana, Cuba.

The newly-appointed moderator has little idle time. Since Father Lozano's death, he has been burdened with the responsibilities of teaching elementary as well as intermediate Spanish courses.

Favorite in Class

A favorite with students, Mr. DiVincenzo conducts one of the most interesting and friendly courses in the Arts' curriculum. The numerous anecdotes which he relates in class serve well the dual purpose of entertaining students and maintaining their interest.

Commenting on the oppointment of Mr. DiVincenzo as Spanish Club moderator, Ford said: "I am overjoyed that Mr. DiVincenzo has been chosen to succeed Father Lozano. The Spanish Club will certainly benefit from his assistance.

March: Month of Vocations:

Positive And Negative Aspects Influence Choice Of Profession

The process whereby a person selects one way of life rather than another is most often a rather complicated affair. Very rarely does it happen that the individual choosing a profession, for instance, is fully aware of what that profession entails. Does Dick decide to become a lawyer because he knows a great deal about the legal profession and, by a process of cold logic, embraces it. If he does so, then Dick is a rare character indeed.

It seems that our big decisions in life are, for the most part, made without a fully dispassionate weighing of all the facts of the case. Indeed, to get all these facts, we would have to embrace the way of life itself.

Knowledge Negative

If this is true of the avocation, then surely one would only expect a like state of affairs when vocations are under consideration, for here we are dealing with a matter that concerns not a merely natural occupation, but one which is, of its nature, religious and so all the more personal and mysterious. Thus, an individual might very well have a vocation and at the same time know next to nothing about the religious life as a whole.

Suppose we just mention another negative aspect of a vocation before dealing with its positive side. At times a vague impression could be entertained that a prerequisite for a vocation is that one, from the beginning have a real liking for the religious life. This seems logical enough, but it is hardly borne out by the testimony of experience. If St. Teresa of Avila, to take but one instance, had waited until she experienced a liking for the life before she entered it, she would have had a long, long wait. It might well be that after a person has taken the step, a protracted distaste for the life might indicate the absence of a vocation, but before taking the plunge—and it is, in a sense, a plunge—likes and dislikes mean almost nothing.

It might seem, then, that a vocation is a very nebulous thing indeed, since we have said that a person knowing almost nothing about the religious life and actually having a distaste for what little he does know might well, in spite of all this, have a vocation.

Vocation in Calling

Perhaps the heart of the matter might be found in the very term "vocation" itself. A vocation is a calling — the word is passive in form and in meaning. In short, one has a vocation if he is called by God.

This call might be very clear in some unusual cases but in general it is not so. A young man asks himself: "Am I called by God?" Usually, even if he has a vocation, the most he can answer is: "I don't know for sure. I think I might be—so I'm going to find out." The Will of God is, then, the most potent force in any vocation and all other things are subjected to it as means to an end. Our Lord's words: "You have not chosen Me, I have chosen you", are the corner-stone of anyone's vocation. All other things will come in due time—the details of the life, the routine, the studies; these are, so to speak, "grown into" as the time passes.

It might be well to remark that the resolution of the doubt is not left up to the individual alone— what a weird place a novitiate would be were that the case. Rather, it is the office of the superiors of such a house to aid him in this matter, and their decisions, backed up by long experience, can be very safely followed.

There is no peace like the peace of one who had followed his vocation for he has the confidence assurance that he is heeding the invitation of Him Who said: "Come, follow Me." In the beginning, he was in doubt but surrendering himself into the hands of God, he said: "If He wills it—let it be."

Caring for the sick, helping the poor, administering the Sacraments—all these duties are a part of the daily routine of God's chosen men.

The Consecration, one of the three principal parts in the Mass, is the highest form of offering which a man can attain. Only priests in the Catholic Church have the power of transubstantiation.

Leading performers in Belle Masque's "The Skin of Our Teeth" pose in mock seriousness reminiscent of old tintype photos. In the front row are Tom Kimmel and Claire Sigerson. In the rear are Rita Capek, Walt Gould and Tonia deMarino. Jim Gilligan, who will narrate the story of the Antrobuse family, stands at the right.

Belle Masque Initiates Rehearsals; Neophyte Actors Cast Leading Roles

MIKE CLARK
Belle Masque President

Mr. Richard DuPrey, Belle Masque director, has released the cast listings for the forthcoming spring production, "The Skin of Our Teeth," a play by Thorton Wilder.

The major part of the cast has rarely or never appeared on the Field House Stage. This is something new to Belle Masque which has always been able to lean back on its veterans of the footlights.

The results, however, are expected to be better than ever.

The Announcer, who speaks to the audience and ties all the loose ends of the play into place, is played by junior Jim Gilligan. Rita Capek, an Immaculata junior, plays the Maid, Tom Kimmel is Mr. Antrobus and Claire Sigerson of Rosemont portrays Mrs. Antrobus.

Walt Gould Stars

Rosemont's Tonia diMarino is cast as Gladys, the daughter and Villanova's Walt Gould is Henry, otherwise known as Cain. Mr. Fitzpatrick, a type of stage manager as found in "Our Town," is played by Dick Dressler.

In the supporting roles, Sharon McCauliffe, Rosemont senior, is the Fortune Teller, while the Judge is Kevin Duff and George Browne plays the Telegraph Boy. Non-speaking parts of the Dinosaur and the Mammoth are

Letter to the Editor:

Spirit Drop Criticized By Joe Leonardo

To the Editor.

At the beginning of the present school year I wrote a letter of protest to the Villanovan in regard to the lack of spirit shown by the Villanova student body.

I commented that, at the time, the spirit was very good (The football team happened to be winning at the time). The question I raised was whether or not this same enthusiasm called spirit would be evident throughout all the sporting seasons.

Voicing my doubts as to Villanova's "true" spirit I stated that the Villanova student body wouldn't support a team if it were a losing one. Our basketball team is presently in the midst of a very disappointing losing campaign. As far as I'm concerned, the Villanova student body is now and has been for quite a few years, in the midst of a "losing season."

The basketball team's following at the Penn Palestra at present is practically nil. Game after game you can see the same loyal followers in attendance.

Even with this in mind I would like to express my congratulations to Mr. Pat Nicholson, present chairman of the Spirit Committee. He has done everything possible to bring out the spirit in his school's students. This energetic Villanovan has certainly done a commendable job.

However it would take nothing short of a super-human magician to wake up the "dead heads" who call themselves loyal Villanovans.

Sincerely,
Joseph Leonardo

Villanovan Advertising Is Increased

Paul Terruso, assistant business manager of the Villanovan, has recently received permission to expand the business staff. The expansion is a direct of the increase in the general advertising of the school paper.

As a result of the change in size of the paper, more advertising space is now available, and added circulation will give advertisers a greater number of readers from the buying public.

In order to obtain additional ads, the members of the advertising staff plan to contact Philadelphia and Main Line business establishments.

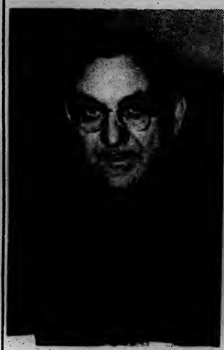
Terruso has asked anyone knowing of propective advertisers to get in touch with him personally, or to post the name and address of the advertiser on the bulletin board in the Villanovan Office.

He added that the advertising staff can use new members and anyone interested should contact him in the Villanovan Office from 1 to 4:30 p.m. on March 7.

Fr. Rongione Represents President At Meeting

In a pioneering move designed to improve relations between Latin American students and their academic courses in United States Colleges, a convention of the presidents of eight leading Catholic colleges in North America was held two weeks ago in Ponce, Puerto Rico.

Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., Dean of the Part-Time Division and moderator of the Villanovan, acted as representative for Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., President of the University, at the meeting, which was the first of its kind ever held.



To Cement Relations

The purpose of the meeting, which was held from Feb. 21-24, was to "cement relations between North and Latin American Universities with graduate schools," Father Rongione said.

The convention attempted to work out a plan whereby students from Latin American countries who will further their education with study in North America would first be indoctrinated with North American customs and the English language.

CU Indoctrination Center

Catholic University of Puerto Rico was designated as the indoctrination center by those attending the conference.

REV. LOUIS A. RONGIONE
Represents Father Donnellon

Host for the four day affair was Most Rev. James E. McManus, C.SS.R., Bishop of Ponce. Most Rev. James P. Davis, Bishop of San Juan, P.R., and a successor to Most Rev. William Jones, O.S.A., a former bishop of San Juan who is buried in the Villanova cemetery, also attended.

Ron Delany Interviewed In New LYNX

Featuring a lenghty interview with Olympic-winner Ron Delany about his native land, Ireland, the second edition of the Lynx for this school year will appear sometime this month.

Editor Frank Delany reveals that a tape interview was conducted with Delany the runner, from which the editorial staff edited the portions of the audio they felt would interest readers most.

Such questions as obvious differences between Ireland and the United States, the personalities of each country, and why the internationally-known Villanova junior is most proud of his Irish heritage, were put to him.

Another photo-easy exhibiting the photography of senior John Alshefski will highlight the literary magazine. This time posed pictures with denizens of the local college campuses, as well as Villanova's, serve as models.

Another interesting essay, of the strictly written type, has been submitted by Dave MacDermott about the colorful Kabuki theatre of Japan. MacDermott's contribution to the first edition was "October," an incident concerning the Hungarian revolution six months ago.

Other Features

The poetry of Dan Bartolini and the humor of Lynx perennial John Kennedy as well as the art work and poetic writings of Gerry LaKarnafeaux are additional features.

Third Edition

Although this second edition is days away from appearance on the campus, the editorial staff urges all students to submit any articles (short stories, essays, science fiction, satire and comedy) and poetry to one of its members in the Publications Office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall to be used in an unprecedented third edition to appear for sale sometime in May.

Local Catholic College Talent Will Be Featured In NFCCS Show Sunday

By ED KARRER
COPY EDITOR

The first performance of this year's National Federation of Catholic College Students variety show will be held this Sunday beginning at 8 p.m. in the Immaculata College Field House.

This year's show, the third that the NFCCS has offered, will feature the performances of students from all the Catholic colleges in the Philadelphia area.

Returning this year to provide the background music for the show will be the Villanovans, under the direction of Bobby Schiller. Schiller's group will also be featured with its familiar Dixieland Jazz.

Sissy DiMarino, sophomore soprano from Rosemont College, will be another of this year's returnees, in addition to the Murphy Sisters, singing duo from Immaculata College.

Villanovans Lead Show

Two Villanovans, Bernie Conway and Mike Guida, are producing the show, and Ed Shea, station manager of WVIL, will be master of ceremonies.

Villanova's Don Mattingly and Charles Brockman will each sing solos and then team up for a duet in the last act of the show. Another Villanovan, comedian Jack Nettleton, will also be one of the evening's performers.

In addition to the Murphy Sisters, Immaculata College will offer its eight-member chorus line and the versatile singing of Betsy Hepburn. A performance in interpretive dancing will be given by Carol Chapella.

Rosemont Will Sing

A 15-member choral group from Rosemont College will also render a selection of numbers.

St. Joseph's College will be represented by its highly regarded octet, composed of members of the St. Joseph's Glee Club.

More variety will be added to the show with the novelty dancing of Chestnut Hill College's

Lis Exhibition In Library; Mrs. Al Severance Director

An exhibition of oil paintings, water colors and drawings by Edward Lis will be held at the Villanova University Library from March 10 through April 3. The exhibition will be open to the public daily from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., on Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and on Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

Mrs. Alex Severance, president of the Villanova Faculty Wives' Association, will direct the proceedings. All faculty wives will sponsor the exhibition and will also serve as ushers.

Landscapes and dock scenes predominate in the current exhibition, nevertheless there are a few portraits present.

Lis Appeals To Everyone

Whenever he paints, Lis delights in the intimacy of woods and waters—the charm of a pool or the twist of a tree. As a result, his work is readily understood by the layman.

Lis, both a teacher and a portrait painter, is presently exhibiting oils and watercolors of Cape May and Colorado in Swarthmore, Pa.

Studio Near Here

He is a member of The Philadelphia Art Alliance where he also serves as a member of the Oil Painting Committee. His present studio home is located on Montgomery Avenue and Gypsy Road, Gulph Mills, Pa.

Student Travel Guild Proposes European Tours

The Guild of Student Travel of New York City, a leading operator of world-wide tours, is now accepting reservations for summer trips to Europe.

Beginning July 11 and lasting until Sept. 6, tourists will be afforded the oportunity to travel beyond Heidelberg by private motor-coach in addition to seeing England, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, and France.

New York Hotel Offers New Way To Meet Friends

Located in the Hotel New Yorker lobby, the Collegiate Register offers collegians a new way of meeting their friends while in New York.

The Register, a large volume resting on a podium, is divided into two sections. The first lists most of the colleges and universities in the Eastern United States. Each school has its own page on which students can register and leave messages. The second section is alphabetized for the use of those students whose school is not yet listed in the first section.

The Register facilitates locating friends from nearby schools who happen to be in the city and solves the problem of leaving them personal messages. The Register is for the use of all collegians. There is no obligation to be a guest of the hotel in order to use it.

New Book Gives Answers To Many Career Questions

The answer to college students frequent question, "What will this career or job pay me?" has been provided by a new book just published by Rittenhouse Press, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.

Title of the books is What You Can Earn in 250 Different Careers. Based on detailed research conducted by Career Research Associates, this book provides comprehensive information on the range of starting earnings for each career and occupation, and also after five to eight years of experience and the maximum earnings possible.

Career Categories

Career and occupation categories (applying to both men and women) covered in the book include health and medical; engineering, science and technical; financial, business and service; arts, education and community service; office occupations; building trades; electrical and electronic trades; printing trades; machinery manufacturing trades; maintenance and powerplant trades; and federal Civil Service.

To be revised and brought-up-to-date each year, the book is based on surveys and information obtained from such professional associations as American Dental Association, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and National Education Association and by the U.S. Dept. of Labor.

Books Available

If desired, copies of the book bound in a soft cover are available for one dollar, postpaid, from Rittenhouse Press, Inc., 2401 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Professor Named To Law Committee

William B. Ball, professor in Villanova's School of Law, has been appointed to the committee on Family Law of the Association of American Law Schools.

The appointment was made by Philip Mechem, newly - elected President of the Association, to carry on the activities during the coming year. The Association has a membership of 108 American law schools.

Chemistry Faculty Publishes Works

The Villanova Department of Chemistry has announced that several of its faculty members have recently published articles in professional journals.

The Science Counselor in December published an article on nuclear chemistry entitled "'Analyzing in the Products of a Nuclear Reaction," by Dr. Clarence Heininger.

Two new courses of science drawing and laboratory arts were described in the Journal of Chemical Education. Authors of this article were the Rev. E. F. Jenkins, O.S.A., the Rev. J. W. Paquette, O.S.A., and Dr. G. N. Quam, department head.

Big Opportunities Await '57 Grads At Philco Corp.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Mr. L. J. Woods, vice-president and director of Research and Engineering announced today that Philco's pioneering and continuing growth and expansion in the electronics field—notably in color television, transistors, computers, data processing systems and guided missiles has opened up unique and rewarding opportunities for young engineers and scientists to extend their professional development upon graduation.

Mr. Woods also pointed out that Philco's recent entry into the home laundry field, and the necessity for developing entire new lines of automatic washers and dryers, in addition to other household appliances, has created many new and attractive openings for beginning engineers.

The location of Philco's research and engineering laboratories in the Philadelphia area provides members of its professional staff with a choice of outstanding accredited universities and colleges in which they may continue studies at the graduate level.

The company's liberal, full tuition refund plan encourages staff members to enroll at the University of Pennsylvania, Drexel Institute of Technology, Temple University, Villanova University or St. Joseph's College.

Reservations Accepted For Rooms Mon.

A drawing of numbers for subsequent room reservations will take place this coming Monday and Tuesday in the Student Council office, second floor Dougherty Hall.

All students wishing rooms on campus next year must obtain a number which will be recorded by the Council and used in placing the student in line for actual room reservations Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 19, 20 and 21.

All classes will select numbers at any time Monday or Tuesday, but March 19, 20 and 21 will be reserved for the classes of '58, '59 and '60, in that order.

It has been announced by the Council that Sullivan Hall definitely will not be reserved for the freshman class next year. It will be open to picking by upperclassmen. Sheehan Hall will be open for residence in Sept. it was also announced.

Students must present matriculation cards at time of the number drawing Monday and Tuesday.

Students wishing to retain their present rooms must claim them before 10:15 a.m., March 19, 20 and 21. After that time they will be opened for reservation by anyone.

Reservations will take place these three days in the office of the Dean of Men, second floor Mendel Hall. The numbers drawn Mondy and Tuesday will be recorded there determining the time of appointment for room choosing.

Students are asked to room with someone in their own class. Very few exceptions will be made. Pleas for exceptions must be made to the Dean of Men. Only very important reasons will be considered.

When reserving rooms, both matriculation cards of the prospective roommates must be presented. One person may make the selection of the room for both men, providing he has both matric cards.

From Manhattan's Towers To Dinner At The Broadwood, Seniors And Their Dates Enjoy A Final Social Fling As Villanova's Class Of 1957

Ray Clarke, Prom Co-chairman, hands his ticket to classmate John Lammers as he walks into the Field House and "Manhatten Towers." Ray's escort, Beverly Bowden, was last year's Junior Prom Queen. She and Ray got engaged just two weeks ago. Nice way to celebrate!

"Any thing special you'd like," asks the leader of the Billy May Orchestra, Sam Donahue of Prom Entertainment Co-chairman Jim McCormick and his date Nancy Dalton. Band is in the midst of providing four hours of sweet-swinging music for the Prom-goers Friday night at the Field House.

Toastmaster Bill Hattrick addresse the seniors and their dates at the Broadwood Saturday night, and at least one person is a very interested spectator. Lovely Barbara Belfi, Bill's date looks enthralled.

Smiling seniors and their dates arrive at the Grand Ballroom of the Broadwood Hotel in Philadelphia Saturday for the Senior Dinner Dance. It looks like they're anticipating the happy hours in store for them dancing to the music of Leo Zollo.

"Gosh, Bob, if only I could hear Old Satchmo I'd swear we were at Basin Street," chirps Mike Guida to Bob Schiller during the Prom Friday night. Bob seems to agree and so do the senior's dates, Carol Chapla and Phyllis Murphy.

"So then I said to him . . ." Senior Class President Vince Sullivan keeps his date amused with a little story during a break at the Senior Prom Friday night at the Field House. Lovely lady is Miss Betty Sica.

"You know, someday soon I think I'll buy this building," Spirit Committee President Pat Nicholson tells his date as they stand beneath replica of New York's famous Empire State Building Friday night during the Senior Prom in the Field House. Prom was appropriately entitled "Manhattan Towers." Miss Pat McEntee is amused at the idea, but she wouldn't put it past Pat.

The dance wloor of the Broadwood winds itself put to good use Saturday night as a happy group of Villanova seniors dance to the music of Leo Zollo and his orchestra during the Senior Dinner Dance. Is Everybody Happy? Yes, Indeed!

We did it! Happy Villanova seniors and their dates shout merrily at the news that the Wildcat trackmen had trotted off handily with the ICAA track crown in New York's Madison Square Garden. Scene is the Senior Dinner Dance at the Broadwood Saturday night. News added just a little more gaity to the occasion.

Peering . . . .

With NORM PEER

At the disclosure concerning all the secrecy that goes on inside Galberry Hall. That hall is so secret that 99 per cent of the students didn't even know it existed. It must be something important, though, because who ever heard of a house that big on campus without at least fifty beds in it.

NORM PEER

At those squeeking voices heard on WVIL occasionally. Between giggles it's hard to tell whether they're young freshmen with unchanged voices, the Cleaning Woman's Hour, or Radio Free Rosemont trying to reach the outside world.

At that trek the law students have to take to get to class in their new Taj Mahal. One law student from Sullivan Hall got to class, found out that he had forgotten a book, and by the time he made a return trip he was a day and a half late for class.

At the proposed idea to fill Sullivan Hall with over 400 screaming freshmen next year, J. Edgar Hoover has been contracted and plans are in motion for an elaborate discipline system. Upperclassmen seem to thing that Alumni Gym would be a more fitting place for the mob.

At that contest to pick the best dressed girl on campus run by Glamour Magazine. That's more than a contest, that's a chore. Maybe it will start a trend, though, and they'll start wearing make-up and surprise eveyone. I think they all better drop orange and purple as their basic colors or it will come out to be no contest.

Turf And Tinsel Orders Togas; Ad Sales Begun

"Made in Rosemont" might well be sewn into costumes being made for the upcoming Turf and Tinsel production, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga." Satin togas — knee-length — for the gentlemen and Grecian gowns for the "ladies" are being manufactured by a local lady.

The business staff of T'n'T is still seeking recruits interested in publicity, in selling tickets and in soliciting ads. Anyone who wishes to join the practical, non-show side of the organization is urged to contact Co-Business Managers Ed Tomezsko and Mike Guida.

Especially needed are ads for the play program. A full page is $65.00; while one-half page is $35.00. The smaller sections of one-quarter and one-eighth page ads are $20.00 and $10.00 respectively. Blanks are available from any member of the T'n'T.

Besides ads, patrons and sponsors are being sought for the program. Patrons donate $2.00 and their names appear in the pram; sponsors donate $5.00 and in addition to seeing their names, are recipients of two $1.50 tickets to a performance of "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga."

Mulcahy Reminds Class To Donate

Junior Class President Bob Mulcahy reminds all juniors who have not been contacted by a Prom program representative to make their donations by Friday.

They should see resident representatives, Ralph DiCicco in 137 Sullivan or Leo Rudegair, second floor Mendel, or make payment at the booth located in the Day-Hop Cafeteria.

The goal is $1000, and Mulcahy said "everyone's help is needed to make this affair the overwhelming success it should be."

International 'Pax Romana' Day Coming

Tomorrow, the feast of St. Thomas Aquinas, is "Pax Romana" Day.

Pax Romana is an international movement of Catholic students and graduates which aims to create a true spirit of universal charity among the Catholic university leaders of the world; to enrich their Christian and human formation through contacts by correspondence and exchange; and to further the spread of the contribution of Catholic intellectual circles to international life and to international organizations.

Since the founding of the organization in 1921 attended by 20 countries until this year, Pax Romana has sought to solve the problems of the lay Apostolate and their communities in the light of the Church's teaching.

Develop Community Spirit

Since 1946 members have assembled annually in various cities throughout the world to discuss international problems of the delegates represented and to recite the Mass in commonsinging Compline—and thereby have developed a spirit of a Christian community from living together.

Role Of NFCCS

Although Villanova students who are members of the National Federation of Catholic College students will not be in attendance at the convention the NFCCS group will offer special Masses for the special intention of the Seminar and send a contribution to the General Secretariat in Fribourg, Switzerland, to be administered centrally.

He also stated that "students of any class and any division may join by reviewing a book designated by the officers and submitting a criticism of it before formal acceptance into the club."

WE CAN'T PROMISE YOU THE WORLD...

...but we can offer you a genuine career opportunity with the leading jet aircraft equipment manufacturer.

Hamilton Standard's tremendous rate of expansion alone is evidence enough of the obvious opportunities now open at this beautiful, modern plant. However, there are numerous other "plus" values which you will want to consider:

1) the opportunity for further, tuition-assisted study at R.P.I. Graduate Center.
2) the exciting, challenging projects dealing with fuel controls for both jet and nuclear engines, air conditioning systems, jet starters, and turbo-propellers.
3) the tremendous variety of openings, so that you may select the field which interests you most.
4) the ideal location, in beautiful Connecticut, within easy travel distance to Boston or New York.

These are just a few of the reasons it is essential for you to talk to Hamilton Standard.

Second 'St. Augustine Medal' To Be Given By Villanovan

The Villanovan will hold its annual staff dinner and dance at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia, Saturday, Apr. 6, managing editor Bob Strayton announced on Monday.

Final plans for the affair, which signifies the culmination of activties for the present editorial staff, were made last week.

Highlighting the evening's proceeding will be the presentation of the second annual "St. Augustine Medal."

James T. Quirk, editor of TV Guide magazine, was awarded the first "St. Augustine Medal" at last year's dinner dance.

No Candidate Chosen

No candidate has been chosen as yet to receive the second medal, but several people are being considered, Strayton said.

The medal is named after St. Augustine, the patron saint of printers and one of the most voluminous writers in history. St. Augustine, after whom the Augustinian Order is named, lived in the fifth century.

Must Have Contributed

To be eligible for the award, a candidate must have contributed something notable in the field of communications. This field includes radio and television as well as journalism.

Other features of the dinner-dance, which has returned to the Rose Garden of the Bellevue Stratford after a year's absence, wil include the introduction of next year's editorial staff and the presentation of senior keys to staff members who have been active on the Villanovan.

The diner will begin at 7:00 p.m., and dancing will continue until 1:00 a.m. The affair is open to all members of the Villanovan, and costs only two dollars per couple. It is informal.

Junior Class Ring Orders Taken Friday

Leo Rogers, chairman of the Junior Ring Committee announced last week that the salesman from Dieges & Clust will be in the Villanovan Office in Dougherty Hall on Friday, March 8, from 9:00 until 10:30 a.m.

At this time he will take orders and also deliver a number of new rings which have not yet been picked up. Rogers reminded all Juniors that payment of the balance due is necessary on receipt of the ring.

He also urged all Juniors who have not ordered a ring, and would like to have them before the end of the semester, to order as soon as possible. "A list of the times when Mr. Packer will be on campus for the rest of the year will be published shortly "on the Junior bulletin board and in Dougherty Hall," Rogers said.

Opera Society To Hear Renata Tebaldi In Verdi's 'Il Trovatore'

The Opera Classica Society will assemble in the East Lounge this evening at 7:30 for a night with Verdi's Il Trovatore.

The London recording features Reneta Tebaldi with Mario Del Monaco. This is in preparation for the March 19 trip to Philadelphia to hear the Metropolitan Opera presentation.

Last Tuesday the Opera traveled to Philadelphia for the Met production of Carmen by Bizet. Jean Madiera sang the title role while Richard Tucker sang the part of Don Jose. Ettore Bastianini was an effective Escamillio and Lucine Amara excelled as Micaela.

Last Wednesday a record breaking audience heard the listening session of Leoncavallo's Pagliacci in the East Lounge.

Student Concert Orders

The last student concert featuring the Philadelphia Orchestra will be held on March 25 at 8:00 P.M. Orders for the concert will be accepted until March 15 by contacting Mr. Angeline. The program for the concert includes Haydn's Symphony No. 88, in G Major; Mozart's Concerto No. 4, in E-Flat Major, for horn and orchestra and Rumanian Folk Dances by Bartok-Ormandy.

After a short intermission the Concert will continue with the Concerto in A Minor by Glazounow with John Pintavallo on the violin and Brahms' Hungarian Dances Nos. 18 to 21 with Eugene Ormandy conducting.

WVIL Schedule

The WVIL schedule "for those who hate opera" includes Giordano's Andrea Chenier with Renata Tebaldi with Jose Soler and Verdi's La Traviata with Renata Tebaldi and Gianni Poggi.

Those who have not yet received a free libretto for Giordano's opera "Andrea Chenier" should contact any member of the Opera Classica or the moderator Mr. Angeline. Renata Tebaldi and Richard Tucker will sing the last act of this outstanding opera, on Sunday, March 10.

The Society meets every Wednesday evening in the East Lounge and always has an enjoyable evening. The Society is open to all who have any interest in either cultural music or culture.

Chem. Dept. Receives Big DuPont Grant

The Villanova Department of Chemistry has been awarded a grant of $4,000 from E. I. DuPont de Nemours and Co. for the year 1957-58.

The purpose of this gift is to advance the teaching and study of chemistry on the university level. Villanova was one of several universities receiving grants from DuPont.

Several projects are now being planned by the department and others are under consideration. It is reported there will be a long range project begun this summer.

This is the first DuPont grant awarded Villanova. It was made last week.

Strictly Opinion

By PAUL FINAN

There are many worthwhile organizations on campus, and fortunately there are enough of them to keep the average student busy from September to May. Student activities are important to the college life, and regardless of academic work any student can find time for at least one in which he can participate.

Activities have characteristics which of course appeal to many individual talents and desires. Whether it be the Astronomy Club, the Villanova Singers or a fraternity, these activities along with all the others have something to offer to the interested student.

WVIL Open To All

It would be impossible to single out the activity from our wide selection and designate it as the very best that exists. This is easy to understand; a camera bug might not be very enthusiastic about the Belle Masque Society, for example. And yet, while we can not single out any one activity, praise can be offered to one that deserves it. Such an organization would be radio station WVIL. This activity is open to all students of the university. The operation of the station involves a staff of announcers' engineers, news reporters and librarians.

PAUL FINAN

Progress Made

Since it has moved into its new home in Dougherty Hall, WVIL has made great progress. Broadcasts are now received all over the campus, and programs themselves have became more professional in their presentation. The new location has afforded more space which results in better working conditions, and the purchase of new and modern equipment has also been a great help.

The chief announcer and student leader of WVIL is Ed Shea, experienced in radio work not only from the Campus station but also from work in the Philadelphia area. Sports coverage has been his specialty, and it was Ed who this year inaugrated the coverage of Wildcat away games from such distant locations as Huston, Texas.

Teamwork Essential

Any organization must have certain amount of teamwork to be a success, and WVIL is no exception. Such improvements as complete campus coverage and out-of-state broadcasts are not realized by dreaming about them, but rather by a lot of hard work and determination. And it is certain that Ed Shea would be the first one to admit that one man can not do the job. The station's success has been a combined effort on the part of everyone, and the continuance of this effort will determine the heights which WVIL can reach.

Night School Registration 675; Navy Unit Outstanding

Dr. Eugene Powers, Dean of the Evening Division, has released the figures for this semester's registration. There is a total of 675 students registered. This is divided into 493 undergraduates and 182 graduate students.

In the Engineering School there are 143 students, 117 in the Nursing Division, and 92 Education Students. The C & F School has 112 registered and there are 146 special students.

In the graduate school, 14 students are taking courses in Chemical Engineering, while 51 are registered in Statistical Quality Control.

A little known facet of the Evening Division curriculum is the Naval Reserve Officers Training School. 180 officers are taking naval science subjects.

Outstanding Class

Recently the Commandant of the Fourth Naval District, Bureau of Personnel, stated that the Villanova unit is the outstanding class of its type in the country.

The total registration of 675 is five more than were registered in the Fall and 126 more than last year at this time.

Villanovans Lead NFCCS Performers

Thea Grim and Sue Linton. Joan McDermont, also of Chestnut Hill, will be another of the evening's vocal soloists.

Show Praised

Mr. Bob Lawrence, of Radio Station WIP, stated last year on his program "On the Town" that the 1956 NFCCS show was one of the best of its kind. Lawrence added that two of last year's acts, the Villanovans and the Murphy Sisters, might well enter into successful professional careers.

Tickets for Sunday's performance will be sold at the door; they may also be puchased from any Villanovan NFCCS member.

Two additional performances of the variety show will be held later in the semester. The site of the second will be the Chestnut Hill Field House on April 7, and the third will be held at the Villanova Field House on April 28 during Junior Week.

Frosh, Sophs Sought For ENGINEER

The "Villanova Engineer" is seeking Freshmen and Sophomore Engineering students to fill positions on its staff. The "Engineer" will lose more than half of its staff with this year's graduation. Thus there is a need for new talent.

Under a new program the staff would like to see more Engineering students, especially Freshmen and Sophomores, participate in the publication of the magazine. In the past the task of putting together the "Engineer" has been accomplished by a few upperclass Engineers.

Many Positions Open To Underclassmen

"What will I do if I join the staff of the Engineer," you may ask. Among the various positions open to underclassmen are: Copy, Business, Circulation, Art, and Layout. No unusual talents or qualifications are demanded from the underclass Engineering student; only the desire to participate in the publication of the Engineering School's magazine in required.

"Engineer" Advantages

A special meeting will be held Thursday, March 7 at 10:30 in 304 Mendel. All Freshmen and Sophomore Engineering students interested in working for the Engineer are requested to attend this meeting.

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

With the beginning of Lent this week, we curtail our social activities to a bare minimum. Since the purpose of the column is to provide you, the reader, with information of social affairs around and about, we'll be pracitically defunct. Still we'll continue to provide you with the happenings in the World of Show Business, review a few records and as always, throw in few words of wit.

BILL REICH

The BILLboard Spotlight on Music still finds Capital's Sonny James and Tab Hunter of Dot way up top this week with "Young Love." Calypso is definitely here as is seen from so many new releases of all the different record companies. Harry Belafonte reigns as King of Calypso now, but many new as well as old names have hopped on the Calypso Bandwagon.

This week's BILLboard pick is that collegian Pat Boone and his Dot releases of "I'm Waiting Just For You" and "Why Baby Why."

'Cats Romp To First IC4A Title; Score 46 Points In Run-Away Win

Elliott-Men Made It One ToRemember

By JACK CURTIN

How do you write about this one? How can anyone put into words the stirring, crushing events of last Saturday night when the greatest track team of all time romped over all opposition for the IC4A Indoor Championship?

Maybe the answer lies in the words of a small boy who walked out of Madison Square Garden with his father at the end of the meet and had only three words to say. With awe in his voice he looked up to his father and said, "Boy, that Villanova—!"

"Boy, That Villanova—!"

That's about all that can be said about the whole night. This was Villanova's show all the way. From the overpowering, impossible performances on the Garden floor to the never-ending cheering of the students in the stands, the Wildcats dominated the scene.

When you break it down into individual performances, whom do you talk about? Do you mention George Sydnor, who, with his bad leg wound in tape, just missed beating Duke wonder-boy Dave Sime by scant inches? Perhaps you tell about Don Bragg, leaving his opposition far behind as he cleared the pole vault bar at 15 feet.

How about Phil Reavis and Charley Stead? How often is it that two men, on the same team attempt to set a new world's record in the same meet? You could talk about Charley Jenkins or the mile relay team, thoroughly outclassing all opposition.

Or maybe, just maybe, you talk about Ron Delany.

Ron Stole The Show

This was a meet for team glory, but as usual, Ronnie was the whole show. The standing ovation he received after accomplishing the impossible in the two mile run was ironic, since the same people had roundly booed him a season before. It took them a year to realize they were seeing the greatest runner in the history of trackdom.

Perhaps the greatest sight of the meet was the smiling Irishman, his arm high above his head, fingers forming a V for victory and Villanova, as he waved to frenzied Wildcat rooters in the balcony.

Jaspers Salvage Some Glory

You can't forget the others; Alex Breckenridge, John Kopil. Bob Holup—all scoring for Villanova. They teamed with the six first place winners to build the crushing Villanova point total.

No, this wasn't one to write about, only to remember. And the sentimentalists among us don't have to feel sorry for Manhattan either. The Jaspers have plenty to be proud about.

After all, they competed on the same track with the Wildcats.

It's the third leg of the mile relay final at the IC4A track meet in New York's Madison Square Garden Saturday night, and John Furlinger is handing the stick to Al Peterson in first position. Relayers widened lead and went on to win in 3:20.6. Manhattan was second.

Charley Jenkins breezes home first all alone for Villanova Saturday night at Madison Square Garden in the IC4A track meet. The Olympic 400 meter titlist won by 10 yards in 1:12.1.

Field House Streak Extended To 75 By Wildcat Win Over Brandeis; Emma Stars

By FRANK FLEMING

Last week the Villanova University basketball team ran its Field House winning streak to 75 straight victories when it downed a strong Brandeis squad 85-67. But moving from the home court to the Palestra Friday night the charges of Coach Al Severance lost their fourteenth encounter of the season at the hands of Mount Saint Mary's.

Moulded into a smooth working basketball machine for the first time since they upset Indiana early in the season, the Wildcats were paced by sophomore set-shot artist George Emma in their 85-67 route over the New York schol. The Wildcats' streak was never in jeopardy after the first ten minutes of the tilt. Brandeis had managed to gain the lead several times in what seemed destined to be a see-saw ballgame and was down by only two points midway through the first period when a mighty salvo from the Villanova guns completely destroyed all hopes for the Brandeis squad

Emma, Fahey Top Scorers

Emma threw in 25 points for the Wildcats, scoring on nine out of ten attempts from the free throw circle. Jim Fahey was Villanova's other big gun, hitting 21 points for the winners. Fahey was also hot on the foul line making good on all seven of his attempts

Mount Saint Mary's reversed the tables on the Cats later in the week by handing them a 86-70 thrashing. Villanova, like Brandeis, could stay in contention only during the first ten minutes of the encounter falling prey to a hot scoring trio. Bert Sheing, Jackie Sullivan and Bill Williams all hit double figures scoring between them 74 of the Emmitsburg, Md. team's total accumulation of 86 points.

Griffith Scores 24

Al Griffith was high man for the Mainline five tallying 24 points for the losing cause. Ken Harrison was the only other Wildcat to hit double figures, contributing ten points.

This victory was St. Mary's sixteenth straight and set their season record at 20-4, good enough to gain for them a spot in the NCAA "College division" tournament.

Mrs. and Mrs. George Bertelsman, Athletic Director of St. Joseph's College, with the members of the St. Joseph's track team, had Mass offered Sunday, February 24, for the quick recovery of sophomore track star Bill Kahn. They also offered their rosaries and five additional Masses during the week. The Very Rev. Joseph A. Kemme, O.S.A., Vice-President in Charge of Student Affairs expressed his public appreciation at the pep rally last Wednesday.

Delany's Two Triumphs Set Champs' Pace

By BOB MULCAHY

Villanova has done it! The Wildcat's greatest hour in track was reached last Saturday night as they completely dominated the indoor IC4A championships at New York's Madison Square Garden. It was the first time Villanova has won this long awaited title.

To call the 'Cats magnificent would be an understatement in describing the achievements of Jumbo Elliott's prodigies. So completely did they dominate the meet that if the point total of second place Manhattan was doubled, it couldn't equal Villanova's amazing 46 points which included six first places.

On their way to smashing this total, Ron Delany won both the 1,000 and the two-mile run, Charlie Jenkins the 600, Charlie Stead and Phil Reavis the high jump, Don Bragg the pole vault and the relay team the mile relay.

Delany Sets Record

Any description of the meet would have to begin with the accomplishments of Ron Delany.

JOHN KOPIL

Places in IC4A Mile Run

Scratched from the mile in order to score points in two events, Delany did something unprecedented in track annals when he won both the 1,000 and the two-mile run. In the process of winning the two-mile he set a new meet record of 9:06.6 with a 57.5 second last quarter.

Not to be outshone Reavis and Sophomore Stead tied for first place in the high jump, and in so doing also set a new meet record with jumps of 6' 9½" Competition from the rest of the field left at a height of 6' 5½"

Continuing his supremacy in the pole vault, Don Bragg won with a vault of 15 feet. His nearest competitor Van Zimmerman of Penn failed after reaching 14' 1". Bragg in an attempt to set a new meet record failed three times with the bar at 15' 4" However, he still holds the IC4A indoor meet record with his 15' 2" effort of last year.

Must A Dynasty End?

By FRANK FLEMING

Just as the Caesars of Rome, the Hapsburgs of Austria, or any truly great dynasties have had their declines, Villanova's track dynasty will begin its decline after this season. For three years the name Villanova has been synonymous with track. The Wildcats from Philadelphia's famous and exclusive Main Line were, by all standards, the greatest track team in the country. Men like Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins, George Sydnor, Phil Reavis, and Don Bragg have become national heroes. These five men carried the name of Villanova University to not only national fame, but they, through their athletic abilities, made Villanova a world renowned institution. Wherever and whenever track was discussed Villanova and its trackmen became a topic of conversation. Truly "Jumbo" Jim Elliott and his Big Five were the kings and the envy of the track world and the general public's interpretation of the word track.

This year seven of these young men wear the Villanova Blue and White for the last time in the glamorous indoor track world in which they have shone for so long. Bragg, Jenkins, Alex Breckenridge, John Kopil, Gene Maliff, Al Peterson, and George Browne will take part in their last indoor meet as Villanova students. With this last meet the dynasty begins its decline; two of the Big Five will be gone. Next year Ron Delany, Phil Reavis, and George Sydnor will draw the curtain on their collegiate careers.

Must They Part?

No doubt each of these young men will close out his career with the same splendor he brought to himself and to Villanova during his undergraduate days. But what then? Will the Big Five split up never again to compete together?

This action would be comparable to the act of dividing the United States into five separate independent republics each powerful in its own right but lacking the common bond which makes it insurmountable. Will each of these men go forth independently to compete for his favorite amateur club? Will these former teammates became competitors? Will these track greats never again compete for Villanova? These are the questions: the first answer to them is unavoidably, Yes.

There Is an Answer

But after closer examination, I have found that these questions, all important to every true Villanovan, can be answered negatively. If a group of Villanovans, such as the Alumni Association, or even the University itself, would take upon themselves the responsibility of forming and financing an athletic club comprised of former Villanova competitors, the problem would be solved. A small investment would bring great returns to Villanova. The Wildcats would for the forseeable future always possess a championship track team, and the great stars of "Jumbo" Jim Elliott, past, present, and future, could carry the colors of, and bring credit to their Alma Mater throughout their athletic careers.

Villanova A.C. would not only be composed of members of the present National Championship Team but would include such former Wildcat stars as Fred Dwyer, who is the United State's best miler; Browning Ross, who represented the United States in two Olympiads, Al Ligorelli, who captained last year's championship squad; Warner Heitman, who was a member of last season's undefeated mile relay team; and Joe Gaffney, who is a former Wildcat middle-distance star; to name but a few. These men would be joined in future years by the men Coach Elliott is now and will be grooming for stardom.

The Two Best

Through a Villanova A.C., the Villanova dynasty could be perpetuated and the many great Wildcat track stars could continue to bring honors to themselves and their Alma Mater long after their graduation from the institution. With such a set-up Villanova could have not only the best track team in the world, but the two best track teams on the face of the earth.

The challenge has been made, an important challenge which only Villanovans can meet. A cry similar to the admonition issued during the American Revolution, "Join or Die" must penetrate to the corners where help might be found.

THE VILLANOVA DYNASTY NEED NOT DECLINE AND EVENTUALLY DIE.

Villanova Pistol Team, One of Finest In East, Competes In Pro League

The Villanova University Pistol Team, one of the finest school teams in the Eastern United States, has been successfully carrying the Blue and White colors this year.

The team relatively unknown on campus has defeated such teams as the New Mexico Military Institute and the University of Wisconsin. Locally they compete in the Delaware Valley Pistol League and currently sport a 3-4 record.

Competes Against Pros

competes against professionals with up to 36 years of shooting experience.

Bill Wescott captains the team which includes seniors Lawler, Padula, McClellan and Santoro. Only one of the first string shooters had competitive experience before Villanova.

Wescott recently explained the scoring system of the game. The perfect score is 300. Thirty rounds are fired in each match with each bullseye worth 10 points. The slow-fire string calls for ten rounds in ten minutes, followed by ten shots of timed fire at 4 seconds to a shot and ten shots of rapid fire at two seconds to a shot.

Shooting meets are divided into pistol matches and shoulder matches.

Swimmers Win Two More; Schoener, Couig Shine

"Oh no you don't," says Villanova center Tom Brennan as he grabs for rebound against Brandeis in the Field House last Tuesday night. Other Wildcats in the picture are Kenny Harrison (5) and Al Griffith (20). Wildcats drubbed Brandeis, 85-67.

Seven Meet Win Streak For Mermen

By DON KEMPF

Led by Captain Lou Schoener and Senior Don Couig, the Wildcat swiming team scored two more victories last week, drubbing Penn by a 53-33 margin on Wednesday and sinking Georgetown on Saturday by another one-sided 55-30 score.

The victories were numbers eight and nine for the Mainliners who now boast a season's mark of nine victories against a single setback and a winning streak of seven in a row.

First Win Over Penn

The victory over Penn was the Wildcats first win in a 16 match series with the Quakers. Villanova won eight of the ten events held with Schoener and Couig accounting for four firsts, Schoener in the 220 and 440 yard freestyles, and Couig in the 200 yard butterfly and the 200 yard backstroke.

Bobby Pinto had his best day of the season, edging teammate Denny Rinkacs in both the 50 and 100 yard freestyle, and winning the latter in 0:56 seconds. Jim Gregory and Larry Palacio finished one-two in the 200 yard breaststroke for the 'Cats.

Couig, Schoener Again

It was Couig and Schoener who again led the way as the Blue and White sank Georgetown in the University swimming pool on Saturday, Shoener with repeat victories in the 220 and 440 and Couig again winning both the butterfly and the backstroke.

Gregory and Palacio again finished first and second in the breaststroke with Gregory being timed in 2:46.0. Diver Mike Rafferty scored 52.76 points to win the diving and another first for the Mainliners.

The 400 yard Medley Relay team of Gerry Cechony, Gregory, Palacio, and John Rumbarger, after being disqualified in the meet with Penn on Wednesday came back to beat Georgetown on Saturday with a 4:28.8 clocking.

Coach Ed Geisz sends his boys against Adelphia in the University pool this afternoon and on Saturday Long Island U.

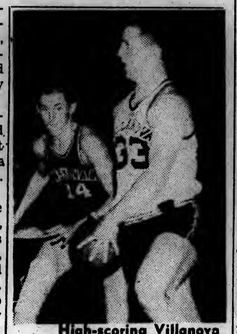
Int'l Basketball Playoffs Begin March 13; Softball Team Entry Blanks Ready

Villanova's Intramural Council, acting to increase the efficiency of its basketball program, announced a new schedule revision last week which eliminated 43 of the 73 teams previously entered in competition.

Jim Moran, head of the Council, said the change was designed to give the teams with the best records an opportunity to play a week of elimination competition.

Best Teams Remain

The 30 teams remaining on the schedule, Moran commented, were those with the best records to date. The teams dropped, either had poor records or had forfeited two games, he added.



First round championship playoffs begin next Wednesday in Alumni gym. Teams which survive the elimination round, which is being held this week, will be eligible to compete. The playoff schedule will pair the winner of the 7:30 Alumni League with the winner of the 8:30 Alumni League, the winner of the 7:30 Field House League with the winner of the 8:30 Field House League, and the 4:30 Alumni winner with the 5:30 Alumni winner.

Softball Entries Available

The Council also announced that softball entry blanks will be available tomorrow for anyone interested in forming an intramural softball team. Applications may be picked up in the Intramural Office, Room 112, Alumni Hall. Entries close March 20, and Moran emphasized that anyone wishing to enter a team in the softball league must file an entry by that date.

Three Added to Council

Three new members were officially added at the Council's meeting last week. Two sophomores, Jim McElhenny (Arts) and Harry Georges (C&F), and one freshman, Don McCoy (Arts) were named to the Council by the Intramural Director, Ed Geisz.

right away in the 600 and fought off all competition as he sailed home in 1:12.1.

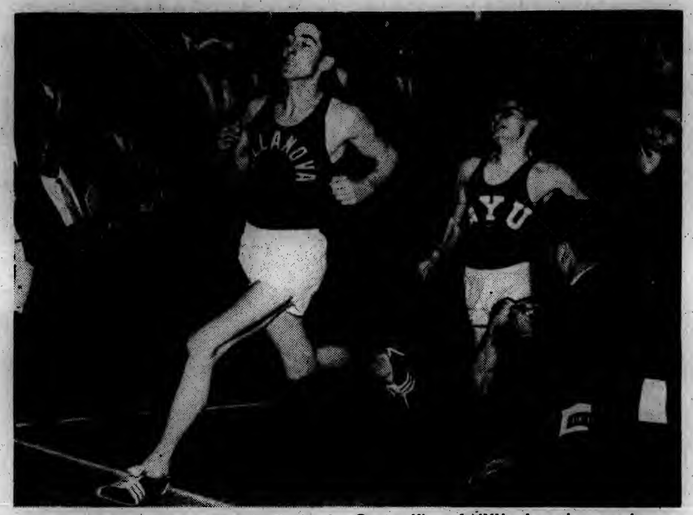
To complete the evening the mile relay team of Gene Maliff, John Furlinger, Al Peterson and Ed Collymore won their event in 3:20.6. The only serious challenge occurred in the third quarter when Manhattan passed Peterson but Al came right back, grabbed the lead and held it until he gave the baton to Collymore for the anchor leg.

The Mainliners displayed much more depth this year gaining one second, two thirds, and a fourth place in addition to the six first places.

George Sydnor, returning to the track after a week's layoff due to leg trouble finished second in the 60 yard dash to Dave Sime of Duke.

Kopil, Breckenridge Third

Three points each were added by the efforts of Johnny Kopil in the mile and Alex Breckenridge in the two mile. Kopil just missed second place in the mile won by Burr Grim of Maryland in 4:10.1. In the two mile Breckenridge led Delany around the track for three quarters of the race, but just couldn't close the gap on Stieglitz of Connecticut. It was then that Ron made his move, and the rest in history.



Two more points were added to the team total by Bob Holup with his fourth place finish in the 60 yard high hurdles. The winner of this event Lou Knight of Manhattan tied the meet record with times of 0:07.2 in both the trials and finals.

The Greates Coach . . . of the Greatest Team.

Ron Delany sails home first in finals of 1,000 yard run Saturday night at the IC4A meet in Madison Square Garden. Easy-striding Delany has just kicked past straining George King of NYU. Less than one hour later Ron was back on the track winning the two mile run for Villanova. His time in the 1,000 was 2:14.

A triumphant Ron Delany waves to his 500 wildly cheering Villanova rooters in the Garden Saturday night after he had accomplished the unbelievable stunt of winning both the 1,000-yard-run and the two-mile-run in less than 45 minutes. Delany's unprecedented iron man show brought down the house.

Wildcat's Phil Reavis easily clears bar at 6-6½ on way to tying teammate Charlie Stead for IC4A high jump title Saturday night at Madison Square Garden. First place tie meant nine points for Villanova.

Villanova high-jumper Charlie Stead tries in vain to clear the bar at 6-11½ after tying Wildcat's Phil Reavis at 6-9½. Stead could not quite make the height which would have been a new meet and world indoor record.

Villanova's Don Bragg attempts to vault 15-4 for a new 1C4A record in the pole vault, but narrowly misses clearing the bar. Don had already salted away first place in the event with a leap of 15 feet.

Shamokinaki Dance, Annual Charity Affair, March 22

Rev. Joseph O'Donnell, O.S.A., announced last week that work had been started on this year's Shamokinaki Mission Dance. The dance, which will be held this year Saturday, March 22, is an annual feature of the Villanova social calendar. This is the only dance held at Villanova during Lent.

Proceeds from the dance are sent to the Augustinian Mission in Nagasaki, Japan. This mission which is founded on the site of the second atomic bomb blast of the last war was founded by the Rev. Thomas Purcell O.S.A.

Four Years Ago

Shamokinaki originated four years ago as a means of raising funds to aid the mission when Father Purcell, then University Chaplin, departed for the mission field in Japan.

Shamokinaki, the name of the dance, is derived from Shamokin, Pa., the missionary's home town, suffixed by "aki" to provide Oriental flavor.

Once Square Dance

Originally started by classmates and friends of Father Purcell, the Shamokinaki has grown from a square dance sponsored by a small group to a university-sponsored, important social event.

Father O'Donnell also announced that additional help is needed on the various committees and that anyone interested in working on one of these should contact him or attend a meeting during activities period tomorrow in 207 C&F.

AIEE-IRE Meet Features Panel On Summer Jobs

The regular monthly meeting of the AIEE-IRE will be held on Monday March 11 at 11:30 a.m. in Room 215 Mendel Hall.

The meeting will feature a panel discussion entitled "What Can Engineers Expect from Summer Jobs." Three Senior Electrical Engineering students, who have held summer engineering jobs will discuss all phases of the topic—opportunities, selection, and experience gained.

AIEE-IRE Previous Successes

"Alumni Nite" will be held next Tuesday March 12. One-hundred Electrical Engineering alumni will attend, the first alumni meeting ever to be held on campus by a technical society. Last semester, the AIEE-IRE held a similar meeting, a "Ladies Nite" which was very successful.

An informal dinner will be held in the Day Students Dining Hall in Dougherty Hall at 6 p.m. Immediately following there is a meeting in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium at 7:30.

Boehne To Speak

Dr. E. W. Boehne, of the Electrical Engineering department at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will speak on the concept of "Dynamic Symmetry." The subject deals with the interrelationship of all things—created and invented.

The AIEE-IRE is inviting all Villanova engineers and scientists to attend.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

By JOE MARTIN, STUDENT COUNCIL

Just a week ago today, the Student-Administration Committee met in Fr. Kemme's office. This is a group composed of the Chairman, Vice-Chairman, and two members of the Student Council, along with Fr. Kemme who represents the administration. The purpose of the meeting was to review and discuss the motions of the Student Council.

The first topic that was covered was the motion of Student Council that the room reservation system be handled this year the same as it was under the method installed last year. This was meant to include that all rooms be chosen according to seniority. These four Council members were officially requesting that the administration reconsider its decision to use Sullivan Hall as a Freshman dormitory.

JOE MARTIN

The resulting discussion brought out several good arguments both in favor of and against the decision in question. Having all of the Freshmen living in one dormitory was certainly an advantage in supervising the new Villanovans. Did this advantage, however, offset the loss of the traditional upperclass privileges that was an unfortunate, but necessary result? These and many other points were considered objectively by all present.

As a result of this meeting, and discussion by Fr. Kemme with some other administration members, it was decided that the original plan to use Sullivan Hall for Freshmen would not be used.

It is important that the reasons for this decision be made known. When the administration first decided to use the Sullivan Hall for the Freshmen, they did so for a reason. It was considered in the best interest of the University that all of the Freshmen be housed in one dormitory so that they might be better supervised and counselled. The students of Villanova did not agree that the only solution to better supervision was the use of one dorm.

By the means of the Student Council action this disagreement was brought to the attention of the administration. Upon reconsideration of its decision, it has decided that its original aims may still be fulfilled without using Sullivan Hall as a Freshmen dorm. If, however, it feels at the end of next year that the most effective way of controlling the Frosh is to use Sullivan Hall, it will certainly do so. It should be remembered by all that it is the overall good of the University that is the governing factor for all of the administration's policy.

I think that the action taken by the administration is ample evidence that it is willing to consider the suggestions and complaints of the students when they are presented in the proper manner. The Student Council is the method of presenting such proposals that has the approval of the administration.

All of the potential Naval officers on campus were happy to hear that the plan to have them march in the St. Patrick's Day parade in Philadelphia was abandoned. It is interesting that the Council representative who made the motion that every effort be made by the Council to have this obligation lifted was not a member of the NROTC unit.

After talking it over, those in authority in the administration and the Navy, decided that it was not just to deprive three hundred students from enjoying the benefit of a three day weekend. This decision will probably increase the temporary population of New York City by close to three hundred young men on March 18.

Happy Saint Patty's Day To You All!

Juniors Reserve Entire Mezzanine:

Ben Franklin Hotel Selected As Site For Dinner Dance; Gresh Band Signed

The Junior Dinner Dance, the climax of the entire Junior Week, will be held at the Ben Franklin Hotel, 9th & Chestnut Streets in Philadelphia, on May 4.

Chairman Clem Birch and Vice-Chairman Joe D'Aquila have announced that Charlie Gresh and his society band will provide the entertainment for the night. Mr. Gresh will provide a trio to play dinner music and after the dinner a band of twelve will provide the music. "At some opportune time during the course of the evening," Birch has announced, "a group of seven of Gresh's band will hold a jazz concert."

Entire Mezzanine Reserved

A "first" for the Ben Franklin Hotel is that Villanova's Junior Class has reserved the entire mezzinine which will be set up as lounges. The lounges will open at 6:00 for the accommodation of early arrivals and will remain open throughout the evening.

The meal, a full course Turkey Dinner, wil begin at about 7:30.

Mike Mancuso, chairman in charge of photography, announced that group pictures of all those at a table will be taken, and opportunity will also be given for juniors and their dates to have their pictures taken together.

Reservations Limited

There will be seating accommodations for a maximum of 600 couples, with a scheduled 5 couples at each table. D'Aquila emphasized that "reservations should be made for groups of five couples—an entire table. Single reservations will not be available until a late date."

Functioning under Birch and D'Aquila are a number of other Chairmen. John Craft has taken charge of the signing of the band and John Witt is program chairman. Mike Mancuso is handling photography arrangements and the decorations are under the direction of John Kennedy. Pete Palmer and John Coffey round out the list of chairmen directing the dinner and general arrangments respectively.

Questionnaires Circulated

The Junior Class Permanent Publicity Committee, under the co-chairmanship of Frank Bonner and Leo Rogers, is currently distributing questionnaires to all juniors. Juniors are asked to fill out these questionnaires as carefully and accurately as possible since many Junior Week plans depend on them.

Any junior who has not received the questionannaire by the end of the week may procure one in the Student Council office.

Frosh Hoffman, Wagoner, Chosen In Class Election

Tom Hoffman and Frank Wagoner were elected to two-year terms on the Student Council by their fellow classmates in the first Class of 1960 election last Friday.

In a close vote which represented a turnout of 57 per-cent of the Freshman Class the two frosh received a combined total of 433 votes of the more than 1000 cast. Hoffman, a resident Pre-med student, polled 238 votes. Wagoner, a Commerce and Finance day-hop, received 195.

Must Be At Meeting

Bob Schiller, chairman of the Council Elections Committee, announced the final tabulations of the voting Friday afternoon. He said that the two new Class of 1960 representatives are expected to report to the next meeting of the Student Council to be officially accepted on the Council.

540 votes were cast in all, and there are 954 students in the class. The turnout was about average for the first election held by the Freshman Class.

Seven In Competition

The election, which was conducted in Alumni gym, had seven members of the Class of 1960 in competition for the two Student Council seats.

Wagoner and Hoffman will take office immediately and maintain their positions until new representatives for the class are elected in the May, 1958 general elections.

Three Arts Students Run

The five other candidates for the two seats were: Ron Dobies (192 votes), engineering, Don Phillips (110), Arts, for the resident seat; Bill Vincent (94) and Don McCoy (106), both Arts, and Tom LoCasale (137), engineering, for the day-hop seat.

The Class of 1960 will elect its first officers of the class in the general elections held in May. Additional Student Council representatives will be chosen at that time.

Those attending the NFCCS' Variety Show at Immaculata last Sunday night were entertained by Bobby Schiller and his Villanovans. The renowned campus favorites will again provide the music for the Shamokinaki Dance to be held Saturday night in the Field House.

NO CLASSES MONDAY

Classes will not be conducted Monday because of the Student Council declaration that March 18 is the University "free day" for the current scholastic year.

The Council selected this date in order to lengthen the St. Patrick's holiday weekend and provide at least one free day before the Easter vacation.

March 19-21 Selected As Room Registration Dates

By BILL CHRISTY

Room registration for next semester will be held March 19-20, 21 from 10:15 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. in the Dean of Men's Office in Mendel Hall, the Student Council announced last week.

Jack Chaby, head of the Council committee which is handling registration, announced the following schedule at the regular council meeting last Monday.

Selection By Numbers

The Class of 1958 will pick their rooms on Tuesday, March 19, the present sophomores (Class of 1959) will select theirs the following day, and the freshmen will choose their rooms on Thursday, March 21.

JOHN CHABAY
Chairman

Students will select rooms according to the numbers drawn last week and should be present at the following times:

10:15—10:45	No. 1-25
10:45—11:15	No. 26-50
11:15—11:45	No. 51-75
12:45— 1:15	No. 76-100
1:15 — 1:45	No. 101-140
1:45 — 2:15	No. 141-200
2:15 — 2:45	No. 201-280

Conversation with Delany Appears in Next LYNX Issue

Final preparation of copy for the Lynx, Villanova's quarterly literary magazine, is being made this week, and publication of the second issue this year is expected sometime within the next two weeks, editor-in-chief Frank Delany said Monday.

The issue, which will retain the format used for the past two years, will feature four short stories, several art reviews and several essays.

Many Poems Submitted

Special emphasis will be placed on the poetry, Delany said, because of the great quantity of acceptable poems submitted.

The major variation in the content of the magazine will be the addition of a conversation piece. Ron Delany, Villanova's Olympic and distance runner, will be featured in the conversation.

Comments On Ways Of Life

The genial Irishman's commentaries on Irish and American girls, the place of religion in everyday Irish life, and a general comparison between American and Irish ways of life will be included in the conversation piece.

Additions to the art staff have resulted in more complete illustrating throughout the magazine, Delany added.

Villanovans Scheduled For Mar. 22 Shamokinaki Dance

The Oriental and DixieLand Villanovans will provide the music for the annual Shamokinaki Dance, on Friday Mar. 22. Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell announced today.

The Shamokinaki Dance, traditionally the only affair held at Villanova during Lent, is for the benefit of the Augustinian Mission in Nagasaki, Japan. Rev. Thomas Purcell, former Villanova Chaplain serves at the mission. At his departure from Villanova four years ago students originated the dance as a fund raising idea and a social one.

Oriental Flavor

The door prize at the dance this year will be a 24 piece silver set sent from Japan by Father Purcell. There will also be spot dance prizes with an Oriental flavor. The Rev. George Krupa, former Villanova professor, arrived in California from Japan last week. He will be at Villanova for the affair.

Father Purcell returned to Japan after a short visit home last fall. He was born in Shamokin, Pa., hence the name Shamokinaki and the Oriental touch.

Committee Chairmen Named

Announcements of committee chairmen were made at a meeting last week. Al Lutz is the ticket chairman, Vic Cardella heads the program committee and Ed Tomezsko is in charge of publicity.

Tickets for the dance go on sale today in the Pie Shoppe and continue on sale until the night of the dance. The tickets are priced at .75c a couple until Wednesday, March 20 and then tickets will be $1.50 a couple.

All committee chairmen expressed their need for further assistance from the student body.

Political Round-up:

It's Time For A Change!

By GENE DONOHUE

This is the year of big improvements and the introduction of many modern advances, both in technology and in the field of administration. This is the year that will see modern science outdo its already major accomplishments. This is also the year that, according to most experts, the United States will continue to disregard the need for a major overhaul of the narrowest immigration law in the free world.

The McCarran-Walter Immigration Act was passed in 1952 and is the basic law which regulates immigration today. It still retains the antiquated quota system based on the 1920 census which is highly favorable to the northwestern European nations at the expense of those of southern Europe such as Italy and Spain.

Restricts Immigrants

This system admits a certain number of immigrants per year, between 154 and 155 thousand, by allowing each country a certain number. However, this quota is not filled each year for two reasons. First of all, not all of the countries fill their quotas. A great example of this is Great Britain, She has the largest quota of all and yet less than one third of it is ever used.

DONOHUE

Mortgaged Quotas

The second reason why the quotas are not filled is that those of eastern Europe are 50% mortgaged. This came about immediately after World War I when there was great number of displaced persons waiting to get into this country. In order for them to immigrate they had to ask for an advance on the number that they were allowed per year and thus the quotas were mortgaged.

President Eisenhower, in a special message to Congress last month, asked there be a drastic change made in this basic act. To begin with he wants the basis of the quota to be on the 1950 census and thereby make things more equal and in line with the present needs of the various nations. Secondly, he wants to establish a pool whereby those visas not used by one particular country could be made available to another which has already used up her share.

Immigration Necessary

The chances that these proposals will get through are almost negligible. But these are the main things that should be changed in order that the United States have at least a semblance of a modern immigration law. This country was built on immigration and in order for it to sustain its greatness this immigration must continue. Let us believe and practice as much as possible what is written on the Statue of Liberty:

. . . Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!

Let's Act As Men

The editors would like to wish each and every one of their readers a very happy St. Patrick's day and to extend our hopes to everyone for a fine weekend.

But we would like to remind those few students who may be planning to go off the deep end this weekend in New York that although the occasion is traditionally a time for fun and enjoyment, the wearing of the green does not signify a go-ahead-signal for immature folishness.

College students gathered together anywhere can have just as much fun as anyone, perhaps even a little bit more. But there are always those few who have to go a little bit farther and make fools out of themselves and those they are with.

Without trying to sound like lecturers, we would like to remind all Villanovans planning to spend the weekend celebrating in New York or any other place that they are representing Villanova University wherever they go and whatever they do.

There's an old saying that boys will be boys. But we feel that a slightly different slogan applies to students of Villanova, and that is, "Men should be men."

We have all outlived, it is our hope, the stage where in order to make a hit with the oppisite sex we have to drink more than anyone else. A few drinks on a festive occasion, proper permission assured, can add to the good times. But lets not overdo it, men.

Let's not act the old high school senior role and eventually embarrass everyone concerned, ourselves, our dates and our university.

Let's have a great time, but let's have it as men. Absolutely no one appreciates a babbling, half-lit boy, not even himself.

How About You?

In a couple of weeks Spring will be here, mid-term examinations will be over and a general air of complacency will settle over the Villanova student body.

And during this lazy settlings of spring fever, the only ones who keep the dust off the socialite's text books are the cleaning ladies going about their daily dusting. For you see, there isn't time for everything, so something has to go. Usually it's the books.

Then, all of a sudden, it's May, and the final exams are but days away.

Suddenly, the apathetic socialite comes to life in an amazing quest for enlightenment. Far through the night, dormitory lights flicker on, and it's cram, cram, cram.

They left things go a little too long, and they are no longer with us. What are your plans for the future?

PUBlicly Speaking

By BOB & MIKE

This is the big one coming up! This is the weekend when drones of Villanova druids, Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, Unfriendly Sons of St. Patrick and anyone else remotely interested in that beloved saint of Ireland will literally converge upon New York to honor him in their own special way.

In past years the St. Patty's weekend has proven to be one of the very best. No one ever seems to be missing. Almost everyone you have known seems to turn up sometime during the weekend. From all reports, this year will be no exception. It's really hard to find anyone who isn't going.

BOB MIKE

As usual, the mid-town hotels are expecting an overflow crowd of green monsters. For example, the management of the Biltmore has informed us that they have initiated a new policy of precautionary measures this year that includes barbed wire barricades and two National Guard units equipped with small arms. Don't let this dishearten you ladies, there are four or five other centers of convergence on the green weekend than the Biltmore.

Latest reports from the local female institutions indicate that large numbers of lovelies are planning to attend the festivities this year, as always. These reports further state that these groups, again, as usual, are comprised almost exclusively of those coeds considered "not too suave, too sophisticated, nor too sensible."

This is the weekend when Freddie the Frosh comes out in all his boyish splendor. He can always be found stumbling around in the vicinity of the Biltmore clad in white bucks, tweed jacket, a "university man" cap clutching dearly his Villanova pennant. He is quick to force himself upon you with long, intricate tales of drinking bouts, out of which he invariably emerges victorious.

Furthermore, it is interesting to note that Freddie, when the situation demands it, is capable of the most amazing recovery from his inebriated condition indicating to the observer that Freddie the Frosh usually wears his "I'm a big drinker air" as he would an article of clothing.

Experience has taught us that the way to get rid of friend Freddie is to pat him smilingly on the back, tell him he's as great a drinker as you've ever seen, vehemently protest that you don't go to Villanova and tell him you've got an appointment with Kim Novak in ten minutes.

Letter To The Editor

WHAT PRICE EDUCATION?

Dear Sir:

We, two freshman history students, have just returned from the library seminar where we have been pleasantly exposed to the economic status of Alexander Hamilton. This talk, given by a member of the faculty here at Villanova, was most enjoyable, intellectually stimulating and extremely worthwhile. However, not more than twenty-five people were in attendance.

All the talk we hear nowadays around campus about being loyal Villanovans is just a lot of air. Oh yes, attendance at athletic functions is acknowledgedly larger, and perhaps, for a just reason. However, we fail to see why this "loyal Villanova" spirit cannot be projected a bit farther to include academic pursuits. The question, "what price education?," goes unanswered.

It is indeed appalling that a group numbering a mere twenty-five persons responds to an historical topic that is so important to us college students attending, supposedly, an institution whose students are seeking to answer "what price education?" It is all the more distressing that the group was made up in large part of the History Department faculty. Are not our students interested enough in their subjects to attend an extra lecture enough in their stay in college? Wake up, Villanovans, and show some of your famous spirit! Attend lectures given by your professors. Let's show some interest!

Two historically-minded freshmen

With The Editor:

Seniors, Peanuts And St. Patty Hold The Spotlight

The Senior Weekend has come and gone, but not without its quota of humorous occurences.

One senior's date had a bad case of laryngitis the entire weekend. She could hardly utter a word and all her communication was done in a faint whisper. The senior could hardly believe it. Says he's never seen any member of the opposite sex so quiet for so long since he was able to put his first pair of baby shoes to work. Claims he didn't believe it was possible

Then there was the senior who after a few snorts at a party after the prom decided he could fly. He was going to prove it too, from upstairs. But he couldn't find a co-pilot, so this unscheduled flight was cancelled. That's the trouble with dates these days, no more yen for adventure.

The Prexy's All Wet

Of course, there was the four-year-man who originally invited one girl to the weekend, changed his mind, broke the date and invited another. And who should turn up at his table the night of the Dinner Dance? Right, the same jilted female with one of his buddies. It was sort of a case of "evening becomes electric." Well, the guilty senior thought the whole thing was pretty comical. That is, until his ex-date very nonchalantly emptied her drink right down the front of his tux. Then everyone though it was funny.

Then there was the date who had a rather lowly cut gown on the night of the Dinner Dance and was constantly hitching it up and getting redder all the time. One of the other men at the table had a brainstorm. He promptly offered her his suspenders. Alas, no sale.

It was a great weekend, however, and it appeared to this observer that everyone had themselves the old proverbial ball. And the most heartening note of all is that the population of the senior class is the same now as it was before the three-day social merry - go - round began. However, there were a few mortally wounded—they got themselves engaged.

Peanuts And The Poles

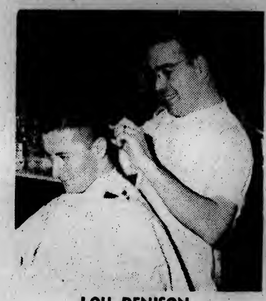
Never has one personality so completely dominated an election around these halls of learning. No matter who the candidates for the sophomore seats on the Student Council, they all seem to be favored by Charlie Brown and his supporting cast of funny little Schulzmen who make up the comic strip, Peanuts. Besides Good Old Charlie Brown; Snoopy, the sighing, flop-eared hound; Schroeder, the younger generation's answer to Beethoven; and even Charlie's cynical girl friend, Lucy seem to be in favor of all the candidates. With Harry and Burt Piel also throwing in their pleas to vote for about six different office seekers seeking the same office, it gets pretty confusing. About all this editor can say about it is . . . "Good grief."

And St. Patty, Too

Midterms are drawing near, and so is the St. Patty's Day weekend. These two occasions go together around here like beach parties and mosquitos. Arriving almost simultaneously this year, it looks like the mosquitos are shaking up some of the party-goers a good deal. But of course, there are some who wouldn't leave the party even if locusts descended. It's funny how that group changes so rapidly every year. New faces all the time.

Just a couple last words of wisdom. That green beer they serve around town on the 17th won't turn you green. If it did, I'm afraid some of the men around here would be quite colorful for the rest of their lives.

Oedipus Rex — Sophocles' Masterpiece Great Movie



By ROBERT FRANCIS LIMA

Highlighted by truly outstanding acting, masks that are unique works of art, and by staging techniques unparalleled in the movie industry's history, "Oedipus Rex" made its debut last week at the Lane Theatre.

Although the play was written more than two thousand years ago by Sophocles it has lived through the changing epochs of man's life—the best test of greatness—and comes to us in this latest interpretation based on the brilliant and powerful verse translation by William Butler Yeats.

Set On Simple Platform

The story is presented on a simple elevated platform towards the back of which are two columns that frame the entrance to the palalce of Oedipus. All the action takes place on this platform and very good use is made, by the Chorus, of the two pillars in the portrayal of the conflicts and fears that made the people of Thebes turn to Oedipus for aid.

LOU DENISON, THE BARBER

Tyrone Guthrie Director

It might apear to the reader that the concentration of the action in a relatively small area would make the plot drag, but under the very talented supervision of Tyrone Guthrie the opposite effect is achieved. By his careful direction of the Stratford, Ontario. Shakespearean Festival Players, and his unusual approach to camera technique, Mr. Guthrie has succeeded in bringing out all the good points, of this the greatest of all Greek tragedies.

LOU DENISON, THE BANDLEADER

Impressive and Impressionistic Color

Another of the impressive values of this film is in the almost radical use of color. In sense it is impresionistic. Oedipus, with his voluminous gold robes, mask and gloves, is made the center of attraction by the drab coloring in backgrounds and lesser characters. Jocasta, his mother, with whom he has been unknowingly living in incest, is clothed in a soft-hued blue that sets her apart from the other characters but at the same time places her behind the bright figure of Oedipus.

A high point of the film is the entrance of Tiresias, the seer, the white hollow expression of whose mask and the manner of whose dress made the audience gasp. Creo, on the opposite end, seems to blend with the Trebans —his dress is a dark brown with a somber green mantle. Outstanding as this use of color is, it does not diffuse one's attention, but, rather, becomes an integral part of the characters and thereby of the plot. In this lies its effectiveness.

Canadian Cast Applauded

The laurels must be shared by many, but perhaps the greatest single force responsible for the accolades given this motion picture is the acting. The fine cast is headed by a young Canadian, Douglas Campbell, in the role of Oedipus; Jocasta is masterfully played by Eleanor Stuart; Creon's righteous character is well developed by Robert Goodier; and Donald Davis gives a powerful portrayal of the wise man, Tiresias.

This Guy Pleases Everyone; From Haircuts To Music, Lou's Your Boy!

By JOE WHEELER

From barber shop to band stand is the transition one of our campus barbers makes nearly every weekend. Lou Denison, anchor man in the Dougherty Hall barber shop, is a barber, then some, being also the leader of his own musical aggregation, the Lou Denison Orchestra.

In 1942 Lou and two other high school boys began to play at local weddings, confirmations, bar mitzvahs and parties. This trio expanded to 6 members by 1944 and in 1945 the demand for a larger band forced the group to enlarge to 15, the current number.

Inducted into the Army in 1945 Lou played his electric guitar in the 371st A.S.F. Dance Band at Fort Meade N.J. Discharged in 1946, Lou reorganized his band and began to make local engagements. He entered Barber College in 1948 and was licensed in 1951. He came to Villanova as a regular barber in February of 1955.

Played Before General Van Fleet

In 1953, the Denison Orchestra was contacted to play at the 1st Airborne Division reunion weekend at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia! "This was one of my greatest thrills, the offer of this engagement, as the guest of honor was General James Van Fleet. We never got to play due to a union problem, but it was still a thrill," said Lou.

When asked what he would do if ever offered an opportunity to go big time, Lou replied, "If the right thing comes along I would take it, but only after first considering all possiblities. After all I have a wife and two children to consider."

Lou is married to the former Miss Louise Price of Bywood, Pa. They have a little girl of 22 months, a boy of 3 months and reside in Upper Darby, Pa.

Has Big Name Accompanists

The sidemen in the Denison Orchestra are not amateurs by any stretch of the imagination. Richie Kamuca on the tenor sax played for Woodie Herman and Stan Kenton. Vinnie Tano was a trumpet star for Stan Kenton while Frank Szostek played Bass in the Tommy Dorsey outfit. These are only a few of the members of this contingent.

In 1948 Lou DiFerdinando went to a lawyer and had his name changed under the Fictitious Name Act. Lou Denison was the new name. How was this name arrived at?" I heard a record by Count Basie," and Lou, "called Denisons Blues. The name Denison appealed to me; so for stage purposes I had it changed."

Two Former Beauty Queens Vocalists

Former female vocalists in the Denison band are Corinne Clemenceau, Miss Johnstown, and Randy Edgar, Miss Boulevard Pools of Philadelphia. Recently Lou has had only a male vocalist and a few members of the band as singers.

Denison patterns his slow numbers after the style of the Billy May, Claude Thornhill and Tommy Dorsey orchestras. The fast or jitterbug numbers are molded after Count Basie, Dizzy Gillespie and Stan Kenton.

Doesn't 'Shove It Down Throats'

At the mention of Stan Kenton the question arose as to Lou's impression of progressive jazz. Lou said "I like progressive jazz to the extent of three or four numbers in an evening. I don't try to shove it down the people's throats."

The arragements for the band are obtained from various name bands, such as Claude Thornhill, a personal friend of Lou's, and adapted to the smaller Denison Band.

Dancers 'Tell' Him To Play

To pace his program Lou watches the dancers during the first hour and notes their reaction to the various numbers "At Villanova we are always well received and can vary our program from the Rhumba to rock to roll."

Lou has an extensive record collection, approximately 1400 disks, ranging from the classics to the current popular tunes. The Denison Band has made recordings, but only for a few private colections.

The Denison Band has become familar in the Tri-state area by playing in numerous country clubs, high schools and at many college activities—as most of us know!

They Have A Little Romberg 'Student' In Them (Drink, Drink, Drink), But They're Not 'Princes'

By ED KARRER
Copy Editor

The story you are about to hear is true. The names haven't even been changed. It is entitled "Recipe for a Real Rouser."

Take a cold, rainy night in late February . . . . slowly add about 150 wide-eyed beauties from any one of America's female colleges . . . let's call it Immaculata College . . . sprinkle generously with some 60 members of a choral group from one of the country's leading male colleges . . . call them the Villanova Singers from Villanova University . . . then top off with a bus serving as means of transportation for the Singers . . . a bus suffering from a mechanical maladjustment in the form of frozen brakes.

The stage is set . . . now to the story.

It's a bleak and dismal February 28th evening as a Red Arrow Bus carrying members of the Villanova Singers pulls to a stop in front of the main building on the Immaculata College Campus.

. . . In The Green Room

The Singers disembark and head toward the "green room" to tune up for their way to the second-floor auditorium where the Singers are scheduled to appear. Then Dr. Harold G. Reuschlein, Director of the Singers, comes on the scene and signals the group to assemble.

The concert is begun and upon completion of the final number, the beaming faces of the audience attest to the success of the performance. The concert is over but the evening has just begun. Accompanied by student members of the audience, the Singers now make their way from the main building and into "Valley View" where the social end of the evening is to be staged.

Making Merry

Amid singing, dancing and orange punch, the evening rolls on. With the idea in mind that college still has its academic side, the evening's festivities are brought to a close and the lights of "Valley View" are dimmed as the Villanova men bid farewell to the IC campus and climb back onto the bus for the trek home. The time is 11:30 p.m.

But wait! Something's wrong! The driver has discovered that the brakes of the bus are frozen. It appears as though the evening isn't over yet and as the driver sets out to call for another bus, two schools of thought seem to be present among the Singers.

One group is heard mumbling "what about those six tests tomorrow?" while the other 90% break out with cheers and more songs.

Back Again

The rain has now turned to sleet and with the thought of an hour's wait in a cold bus, the boys decide to seek sanctuary in the main building. As they approach the entrance, the Singers are greeted by three apparently cheerful nuns who lead the Villanova men through a maze of corridors and into the very comfortable looking Gorman Lounge.

At this point the fatal mistake is made. One of the nuns just before leaving looks back into the lounge and says in a good-natured tone: "make yourselves at home, boys."

On goes a radio in one corner of the room. On goes a record player in another. Coke and coffee machines throughout the halls jump with activity until the "sold out" lights shine on each machine.

. . . Of Course She Will

Amid cries of "I've got eight tests tomorrow," "What's my counsellor going to say" and "Mother'll never believe this," an unguided tour is conducted in search of telephones, books and food to hold the boys over until the situation can be remedied.

Meanwhile . . . back at the lounge . . . things have slowed up. A typewriter can be heard above the music and several Singers seem to be studying. One senior is thoroughly engrossed in a thin-paper, brightly colored book, the title of which is "Superboy."

Many of the group have decided to call it a night and are sprawled in various positions of repose about the lounge with hats pulled over their eyes to keep out the light.

And So To Villanova

When the crusaders-for-food return empty handed, a pallid man wearing a bus driver's uniform once again makes his appearance and informs the Singers they are about to be delivered, for the bus company has at last come through with reinforcements. Off go the radio, record player and lights and out into the sleet and cold go the Villanovans.

As the last of the group leaves the building, they turn to bid goodnight to a small and weary, nun standing by the door.

"Come back again soon, boys," she answers with a smile.

IRS Members Quiz Polish Embassy Attache

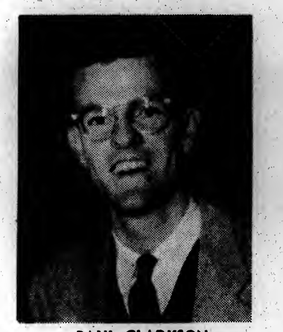
By PAUL CLARKSON

"Gentlemen, remember when we discuss political issues we must deal with realities." These words in Washington, D.C., began a two hour discussion between seventeen Villanova IRS students and three Polish Communists assigned to the Embassy.

It was 3:30 p.m. when IRS President Gene Donohue rang the doorbell of the Embassy, situated in "Embassy Row" away from the turmoil of downtown Washington. A smiling man with a stocky build greeted each of us individually. A taller and much younger gentleman urshered us upstairs and took us on a tour of the Embassy, showing various paintings, a letter from Kozsciusko to Jefferson and one of Paderewski's own pianos. At the completion of the short tour, the stocky man who was the Press-attache spoke, "Perhaps you would like to stay for a few minutes. We would be happy to answer any questions you might have about our country."

We seated ourselves in a semicircle with our three hosts at the open end.

Questioning Begins



"In light of the recent "evolution" of government which your country underwent, do you consider yourselves a satellite of the Soviet Union," asked Donohue. In answer the Press-attache made the statement quoted at the beginning of this article and then continued. "First let me make one point clear. In October we had a revolution not an evolution. We are not a satellite of the Soviet Union but we are in the Socialist block of nations."

Someone else asked, "How then would you describe your relations with the Soviet Union?" The answer was. "Soviet Russia is our friend, our neighbor and our ally." He continued smiling, "Gentlemen, with Russia as our next door neighbor and with her troops right near our borders, what else could she be but our friend and our ally?" Everyone, even our hosts, chuckled at the practical reply.

Next question: "How do the Poles react to the Russian occupation troops?" The attache spoke up quickly. "There is no occupation of Poland; we are not an occupied country. We do have some Russian troops in Poland but they are there as part of our Warsaw Pact agreement."

Gatyn Massacre Question

The next question was. "Since you consider the Russians your friends and allies, how do you account for the Gatyn Forest massacre of 1940 in which 15,000 Polish Army officers lost their lives at the hands of Russians?" The questioner went on to add that a recent Congressional investigating committee had proved beyond doubt that the Russians had been responsible. The Press-attache answered by stating first that it was the Nazis who were guilty of the slaughter and not the Russians. The questioner added. "But we have books and pictures that show it was the Russians who were responsible." Our host answered with a smile, "Your proofs say the Russians were responsible; our's say it was the Nazis."

PAUL CLARKSON

Paul Clarkson, this week's guest columnist, relates the interesting conversation held between the members of the International Relations Society and the Polish Embassy staff during a recent visit to Washington. The column is informative and provocative, and affords the reader a colorful look at conditions in Poland today. Clarkson, active in campus affairs, is Featured Editor of the Belle Air and a member of the Villanova Singers. He is a Senior English major.

At this point someone wisely changed the subject by inquiring about the increase of culture exchange between Poland and the U.S. Relieved, the Press-attache replied, "Poland has plans to greatly increase the cultural exchange; few Americans are aware of the great Polish literature and art. It is our hope that by these means America will come to know and understand us better."

Polish People Probed

The subject changed now to the Polish people themselves and their educational advantages. Question: "As a people how do the Poles look upon the presence of Soviet troops in their country?" The Press-attache again answered. "The Poles look upon the Soviet troops as their liberators. From 1940 to 1945 we were an occupied country and it was the Russians who liberated us from the hated Nazis."

Next question: "Does Poland have as much trouble getting their students to study scientific and engineering subjects as the U.S. does?" The attache replied this time. "Our students study whatever they are able to. Perhaps a boy wants to study chemistry but finds that all the facilities are taken. Well then he will study biology or literature or whatever field is open. But the main thing with him is to study and learn and progress."

Impressions of America

Our next question was, "What do the Polish people think of the U.S.?" "Really our two nations are very close," replied the attache. "We have mutual heroes and since there are six million Poles in the U.S., each family has at least one relative living in America and they exchange letters and ideas quite frequently."

Now the newspaper correspondent entered into the discussion with very fine English: "The Polish people are very interested in everything happening in the U.S. because they feel they have sort of a kinship with this country. When I go home to my apartment here on 17th St. and turn my radio on I hear Perry Como and Elvish Preshly. In Warsaw when I go home from work and turn my radio on I hear Perry Como and Elvish Preshly." We all roared at this and someone ventured an excuse for Elvish Preshly.

Our host continued, "We see many of your movies and hear all your popular songs. Our people are anxious to hear any news they can about the U.S."

The Church In Poland

Religion and Polish-German relations now became the topic. Question: "Just what is the position of the Catholic Church in Poland today?" The Press-attache answered, "Ninety-seven per cent of people are Catholic and they enjoy religious freedom. On Sundays our churches are well attended."

Someone then asked, "Is there still present a feeling of hostility between the Poles and the Germans, stemming from the war?" "Yes," the Press-attache answered. "That is something that will take three or four generations to erase. You must remember that our people lost five million countrymen during the war and many of these died in concentration camps and furnaces. I myself was in one of these camps for three and a half years and at this camp three million Poles were murdered. I show you my letter in camp." He opened his left shirt sleeve at the wrist and rolled the shirt up to his elbow. There, on the under part of the forear between the wrist and the elbow was a black letter R, about three inches long, imprinted in his flesh.

German Rearmament Feared

He was then asked what the Poles thought of the modern West German army. "The Poles are afraid that the West German army will march on them again. Thirty-six of its present generals were generals in Hitler's Nazi army," he replied.

We heartily thanked our three gracious hosts for their hospitality and before going I went over to the Press-attache and thanked him personally. He said, "This is the way to learn about each other, by means of free, open discussion. It is the only way our countrics' differencccs can cvcr really be settled." He shook my hand quite energetically and after thanking him again for a very informative afternoon, I made my way to the door and back to American soil.

Eight Colleges To Perform In Annual Choral Festival

A new addition to Dougherty Hall this semester is the trophy case situated in the corridor on the first floor. Joe Wheeler, junior Education major, admires the awards given Villanova athletes for outstanding performances in various sports.

Tickets are now on sale for the second annual Choral Festival to be held in the Field House of March 23 beginning at 8 p.m.

The Festival, the first of it's kind in the East, will feature the glee clubs of eight colleges in the area.

Featured are the new member to the 1957 festival, Chestnut Hill College, and returning clubs of last year's festival. They are: Immaculata, Rosemont, Pennsylvania, Temple, St. Joseph's, St. Peter's (Jersey City) and host, Villanova.

The singing will extend over an estimated two and one half hours of which each club will be alloted ten minutes for its performance.

The program will be concluded with the singing of two joint numbers by more than 450 collegiate singers, representing the eight glee clubs.

A sacred hymn and a secular piece will comprise the mutual selections. Last year's joint selections were "Prayer of Thanksgiving " and the popular "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Some of the numbers to be featured by the various clubs in the show will be: "With a Little Bit of Luck" from "My Fair Lady," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Ave Maria" by Vittoria and several of Victor Herbert's favorite standards.

Leaders of eight clubs who helped in the organization of this year's Festival include: Julie Amersbach, Rosemont; Joan A. Neumann, Chestnut Hill; Gail M. Griffin, Immaculata; Henry A. Shields, St. Peter's; Vic Sjostrom, Temple, Stephan J. Giovanissi, St. Joseph's; Gordon K. Bohn, Pennsylvania and Charles B. Ross, Villanova.

To conclude the show will be an informal dance immediately following the singing performances which will feature the famed Villanovans under the direction of Bobby Schiller.

Refreshments will be available throughout the evening.

The Villanova Club is in charge of business arrangements. President Charlie Ross has appointed Mark Connely and Vince Cardella in charge of business, Gene Donohue and Ed Karrer in charge of publicity and Jim Corey in charge of tickets. Ross takes care of the staging of the Festival.

Dr. Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of Law and Director of the Villanova Singers stated that only when the schools of the Big Ten gather annually in Chicago is there such an assembly of college singers.

Singers To Participate In Lenten Services Tomorrow

The Villanova Singers will participate in the annual Evening School Lenten services in the University Chapel tomorrow evening.

The Singers, under the direction of Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein for the past three years, have now reached a total of 70 members, 30 of whom were accepted this year.

All the members are also prepared to present one of their series of concerts next Wednesday at Chestnut Hill College.

The Singers will again appear in the local area on April 8 when they will share the stage with the Rosemont Glee Club in a joint concert at Rosemont.

Featured among their various selections will be a medley from the presently popular Broadway show, "My Fair Lady."

Father Kemme Featured In March Issue Of 'Alumnus'

The Villanova Alumnus, official publication of the Villanova Alumni Association, will be mailed to the members of the Alumni starting tomorrow said George Pequignot, Editor.

The March 1957 issue has as its lead article a feature by the Rev. Joseph W. Kemme O.S.A., entitled "Whither Football." Father Kemme, as the Vice-President for Student Affairs, has as one of his duties the directing of Villanova's Intercollegiate Athletic Program.

Explains Football Policy

In his article, Father Kemme explains the views and desires of the Administration for the Athletic Program. The reason "Whither Football" was written, said Father Kemme, is to allay the fears of some of the Alumni concerning the rumored de-emphasis of football. Father Kemme denied that any such move would be made.

A new feature article in this issue, which will become a regular feature in the Alumnus, is "Frank Reagan Speaking." Mr. Reagan, in his capacity of Athletic Director, makes mention of the plans of his department for the future.

Stadium Improved

In this issue, he speaks of the proposed improvement in the Stadium, such as a new press booth and improved sanitation facilities. He also mentions the proposed changes in the football schedule but refers the readers to Father Kemme's article.

Other articles include Club Notes and a list of recent appointments to the Administration and to the Board of Trustees. There is also included a list of contributors to the Alumni Foundation.

Villanova Graduate

Mr. Pequignot, Editor of the quarterly magazine, is a graduate of the class of 1951 and also a member of the Board of Governors. This is the first issue of the Alumnus to be published under his direction. Mr. Pequignot said that there will also be another issue published in May of this year. The subscription price of the Alumnus is $1 a year, and it is published in October, December, March and May by Villanova University in the interest of the Villanova Alumni Association.

Staff Initiates Work On Junior Week Villanovan

The traditional Junior Week edition of the Villanovan will be distributed on campus on Mother's Day, the opening function of the memorable week, Monday, April 29.

The entire issue wil be assembled by the present juniors on the Villanovan staff.

Any junior interested in helping in any way with this issue—either by writing stories or typing copy should attend a staff meeting tomorrow at 4 p.m. in the Publications' Office on the second floor Dougherty Hall.

Father Sullivan To Speak At Literary Club Meeting

After electing officers and adopting a constitution, the members of the Literary Club will sit back and relax in 215 Mendel Hall to night and hear their first guest speaker—Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Sciences.

The semi-monthly meeting will begin promptly at 7:30 p.m.

Since tonight's program features the club's initial speaker of the semester for the recently fromed organization, President Joe Kinney has extended an invitation "to all Villanova students as well as club members."

Open To All

Students who are not English majors desiring to join the Literary Club may do so by filing an application in secretary Ken Miller's room, 128 Sullivan Hall, and submitting a review of a book to be selected by the club officers. English majors may join by merely filing an application.

Admission fee for all students is $2 per semester.

Speakers and Discussions

Tentative plans include meetings at least twice a month, usually on Wednesday nights, at which several English professors on the Villanova faculty as well as other notable instructors of the arts of local colleges will speak on some interesting literary point. Group discussions among club members will fill the agenda when no speaker is available.

Library Role Explained On WVIL Show

"Meet Your Library," a new 15-minute program on Station WVIL opened Thursday evening, February 28, with the Rev. Joseph Boyle, Vice President in charge of Academic Affairs, as the first guest.

Fr. Boyle, answering questions with regard to the role of the library, called it the "heart of the University" and urged its frequent use as a prerequisite to an education. "The 50-minute period is not enough for a student to acquire an education," he stated in pointing out how essential it is that the student draw his intellectual nourishment from the library.

Rev. Daniel Falvey, Librarian, was the guest on the March program.

The program, which is presented by the Faculty Library Committee under the chairmanship of Father John Klekotka, is heard each Wednesday night from 8:15 to 8:30 The musical portion of the program is under the direction of Mr. Anthony Angeline.

The show is produced by Cas Bianowicz, of the WVIL staff, with Mr. Fredrick Burgess, Chairman of the Radio Subcommittee of the Library Faculty Committee, as moderator.

Sunday Mass Cancelled In C&F Building

The Rev. John A. Klekotka O.S.A., University Chaplain, has announced that there will be no Masses offered in the C and F Auditorium Sunday because of the three-day-week-end. He added that Masses will be resumed as before, at 10 a.m. and 12:15 p.m., the following Sunday.

The Chaplain's office also revealed that Archbishop John F. O'Hara of the Philadelphia Archdiocese has granted a dispensation from fast and abstinence Tuesday, March 19, the feast of Saint Joseph.

Confessions will be heard, as always during Lent, after each weekday Mass and after evening devotions.

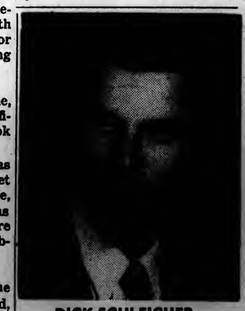
Yearbook Deadline Friday; Plans Publication In May

Editor-in-chief Dick Schleicher announced last week that a schedule revision has extended the final deadline for Belle Air copy and photographs until Friday.

Schleicher made the announcement following a meeting with Daniel Solari, representative for the William T. Cooke Publishing Co., on Saturday morning.

Will Be Out In Mid-May

Adherence to the new deadline, Schleicher said, will mean definite publication of the yearbook by mid-May.



The first deadline, which was set for December 17, was met without difficulty. At that time, the senior and faculty sections and fall sports programs, were submitted to the Cooke Co., publishers of the Belle Air.

Senior Weekend Included

Complete coverage of the Class of 1957 Senior Weekend, which was held Mar. 1-2, prevented the staff from meeting its final deadline, which previously had been set for Feb. 22. This is one of the few times that the Senior Prom and Dinner Dance of a graduating class has been included in the yearbook, Schleicher said.

The bulk of work on the book will cease after the Friday deadline has been met, with only the business deadline and circulation of the 1957 Belle Air remaining.

Schleicher also mentioned that a location for the annual staff dinner was being considered.

Students Offer Views On Coaches' Salaries

(ACP)—The life of a college football coach is apt to be a very hectic one, especially if he does not produce winning teams year after year. Generally they are given short-term contracts and their bargaining position depends a good deal upon their record of producing winning teams. And since their occupational longevity is so doubtful, they usually rate a pay scale higher than that of the highest ranking college professor.

In order to get an idea of what collegians think about this difference in pay scale, Associated Press asked the following question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

COLLEGE FOOTBALL COACHES ARE USUALLY PAID MORE THAN THE HIGHEST RANKING PROFESSOR. DO YOU THINK THIS DIFFERENCE IN SALARY IS JUSTIFIED?

	Men	Women	Total
Yes	24	15	20
No	64	72	67
Undecided ..	12	13	13

There appears to be some sex difference in the figures shown, with the coeds leaning more toward the side of the professors. Of all students favoring the coaches' point of view however, the following statement by a Villanova senior is very representative: "The coach is gambling that he will be around next year, the professor isn't!" Here are a few other typical statements:

'Coach Earns It'

"The coach earns it; the relative salaries in the different fields cannot justifiably be compared," is the feeling of a junior attending Newark College of Engineering (Newark, N.J.), while a University of Nebraska (Lincoln) senior looks at it this way: "A college will never have to worry about losing a professor because he is mediocre. Coaches are under a constant mental strain which cannot be measured by monetary standards." And a Wartburg College (Waverly, Iowa) junior believes "the work of the coach is harder; his is a 12 month and 24 hour job."

Education More Important

Among students favoring the professor's point of view two general feelings stand out: 1) the feeling that the professor has more time and money invested in his job, and 2) the feeling that education is more important than football and should be rewarded accordingly. Here are a few remarks typical of these and other opinions expressed.

"The professor works harder to attain his position than a coach," is the view of a freshman coed at Christian College (Columbia, Mo.). And a Mississippi College (Clinton) sophomore coed states: "Because of the more extensive and intensive education of a professor I think the difference in salary is by no means justified." The feeling of a sophomore at Northern Illinois State College (DeKalb) is expressed this way: "The fundamental college goal is education, sports are a secondary feature, consequently the service of a professor is more valuable."

Salaries Relative

"The difference in salary is not necessarily unjustified, it depends upon many standards, for example a brick layer may make more than a college graduate," is the feeling of a Georgetown University (Washington, D.C.) senior. And a College of St. Catherine (St. Paul, Minn.) freshman feels that "a man is able to get what he is worth."

REV. DANTE GIROLAMI
Cancels Frosh-Soph Hop Plans

Lack Of Suitable Date Rules Out Soph-Frosh Hop

The Soph-Frosh dance, initiated in 1955, will not be held this year because of the lack of a suitable date.

The announcement was made last week at the Student Council meeting by the Rev. Dante Girolami, Council moderator. A motion was introduced "to insure the holding of the dance," but it was defeated after Father Girolami's announcement.

NFCCS Presents 3d Variety Show April 28 In F. H.

The National Federation of Catholic College Students are presenting their third annual Variety Show at Villanova on April 28.

A special guest will appear for this show. Early arriving mothers here for "Mother's Day," the opening of Junior Week, will be able to witness the presentation.

Some of the talent which will contribute to this gala affair features the Villanovans, the Murphy Sisters and an all-star cast of college talent.

The first show opened last Sunday at Immaculata College. The second appearance will be performed on the Chestnut Hill College campus on Sunday night, April 7.

All shows will start at 8 p.m. and the admission will be $1.00.

Tickets for the show to be presented on the Villanova campus will go on sale shortly after the Easter vacation. Last year the NFCCS did not bring their show to the Main Line Field House but was seen in several of the other local colleges.

"What, me worry?" Walter Wyer seems to be saying as he receives polio shot in Alumni Gym recently. Shots were made available to the student body by the infirmary. Another shot is due next month.

NYU Extends 'Urban Lab' Sessions

"Junior Year in New York," a new plan through which college students across the country can take advantage for one year of the educational opportunities in the New York metropolitan "urban laboratory," will begin in September at New York University's Washington Square College of Arts and Science.

Educational Opportunities

According to Associate Dean Frank H. McCloskey of Washington Square College, who is administering the program, NYU's School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance, School of Education, and School of Retailing will help with the programs of Junior Year students who wish to specialize in these fields.

Applications by May 1st.

The students will be housed in University dormitories or by groups in other suitable quarters under University supervision.

Applications should be submitted no later than May 1 to Associate Dean F. H. McCloskey, Washington Square College of Arts and Science, New York University, New York 3, N.Y.

NO CLASSES MONDAY

Classes will not be conducted Monday because of the Student Council declaration that March 18 is the University "free day"

Semper Fidelis Society Elects Officers Tomorrow

The Semper Fidelis Society will meet tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in the lounge of Commodore John Barry Hall. All PLC's, whether sworn in or not, along with all NROTC Marines are urged to attend this important meeting at which elections of officers will take place.

Jack Goodyear and Bill Westcott are completing the organization plans for the society. Similar societies have already been organized on the Notre Dame and Fordham campuses.

Marine Motto Used

The name of the organization is taken from the motto of the Marine Corps. It shall provide students enrolled in marine officer training programs at Villanova an opportunity to prepare themselves physically, professionally and morally for their future duties as Marine officers.

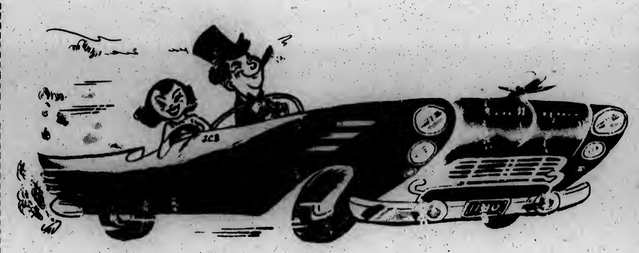
The Semper Fidelis Society hopes also to foster a better understanding of the Marine Corps at Villanova. Specifically this organization shall orient new members of the Platoon Leader Class, Officer Candidate Class and NROTC Marines in the requirements of summer training and shall unite Marine Officer candidates who have already completed summer classes in a spirit of fraternal advancement.

Result: Better Officers

Captain Grace, U.S.M.C., will be the moderator of this infant organization and personally believes, "that if the opportunities of this society are taken advantage of by the members, it shall result in many more, better qualified Villanovans in the Officer Corps of the Marines."

BM Business Staff Announces Opening Of Sponsor Sales

The Belle Masque business staff announced last week that they will be canvassing the dormitories this week in search of patrons for this year's program.



Ads co-chairmen George Becht and Ellen Chambers announced that all ads and sponsors must be in no later than March 20 in order to assure their appearance in the program. It will go to press on this date.

Business Staff General Manager Joe Giusti says that Ticket Chairman Ed McCarthy is making arrangements to put tickets for this year's performance, Thornton Wilder's comedy, "The Skin of Our Teeth," on sale this week. Tickets will be sold at Villanova and on the neighboring campuses.

Publicity for the production is being handled by Bob Lima, taking care of the local colleges, and by Dick Dressler, covering the Philadelphia area and the local papers.

WE CAN'T PROMISE YOU THE WORLD...

...but we can offer you a genuine career opportunity with the leading jet aircraft equipment manufacturer.

Hamilton Standard's tremendous rate of expansion alone is evidence enough of the obvious opportunities now open at this beautiful, modern plant. However, there are numerous other "plus" values which you will want to consider:

1) the opportunity for further, tuition-assisted study at R.P.I. Graduate Center.

2) the exciting, challenging projects dealing with fuel controls for both jet and nuclear engines, air conditioning systems, jet starters, and turbo-propellers.

3) the tremendous variety of openings, so that you may select the field which interests you most.

4) the ideal location, in beautiful Connecticut, within easy travel distance to Boston or New York.

These are just a few of the reasons it is essential for you to talk to Hamilton Standard.

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

A short hop up to Immaculata College last Sunday provided a most surprising as well as enjoyable evening of entertainment. Along with a few fellow Villanovans, your reporter viewed the first performance of this year's N.F.C.C.S. Variety Show. Having seen the 1956 edition of this same show last year we were looking forward to good entertainment, but never really expected the performance we received.

BILL REICH

Each member-College of the Federation presented excellent acts. But prejudiced as we were, we agreed with the audience as they cheered the acomplishments of the participating men of Villanova. Leading off with the background music and Dixieland Jazz of Bobby Schiller's Villanovans, the University was well represented. WVIL's own Ed Shea did a fine job as Master of Ceremonies, along with Jack O'Reilly as guest M.C. Don Mattingly, a veteran of T'n' T and N.F.C.C.S. shows, opened up with two songs, the best of which was "Lonesome Road." Don returned after the last act to team up with Charlie Brockman, another veteran performer, on a few duets. Charlie was as usual a real showman. Another Villanovan who added much to our evening's enjoyment was, senior Jack Nettleton. As no one need be told, Jack is a top flight comedian.

Though Villanova was well represented, we weren't the only ones there. A real big surprise this year was a young sophomore soprano from Rosemont, Sissy DiMarino. Sissy is back again this year in addition to Immaculata's Murphy Sisters. Also from I.C. was that high spirited and amusing Chorus Line, plus the versatile song styling of Betsy Hepburn. Besides Sissy DiMarino, our friends from the Tea House across the tracks were represented by their 15-member Choral group.

There were many more fabulous acts, too numerous to mention. St. Joseph's Octet, the novelty dancing of Thea Grim and Sue Linton from Chestnut Hill, and others, all contributed to a very pleasant evening of enjoyment. The two Villanovans who produced the show, Bernie Conway and Mike Guida are to be congratulated on a splendid job.

There are two more performances scheduled this semester, so make sure you are in the crowd attending one of them. April 7 finds this group up at Chestnut Hill's Field House and the other performance will be right here in our own Field House on April 28 during Junior Week . . . Make an effort to see this great show.

By the way have a real social ball this coming weekend . . . BUT BE CAREFUL. As the "governor" says: to avoid that run down feeling, be careful crossing the "pike" as well as New York Streets . . .

He Plugs Silverware, Too!:

Kimmel Gets Belle Masque Lead; Entire Cast Chosen

The lead role, Mr. George Antrobus, in the Belle Masque production "The Skin of Our Teeth" has been awarded to Tom Kimmel, junior math major from Rumson, New Jersey. Tom, originally from Chicago, is a first year man in the Masque.

His first acting experience was in the Fall Masque drama "Billy Budd." He had a minor role at that time. Specifically he walked on stage, spoke one line, and made his exit.

Sells Silverware

Tom, a 20-year-old off-campus resident, hopes that he will conduct himself before the Villanova audiences as have his Belle Masque predecessors. His main extra-curricular activity is "selling sterling tableware to young women for their hope chests." "That," he said, "may be considered a plug."

Mrs. George Antrobus, the controlling figure in the Antrobus household, is played by another newcomer to the footlights, Claire Sigerson.

Studies English

Claire is a Junior English major at Rosemont and a member of the Jest and Gesture Drama Society. Her only previous experience was a small role in "Career Angel" at Rosemont.

Mrs. Antrobus, commented Claire, is the symbol of the wife and woman throughout the ages. She has a hard core of sensibility.

Henry Antrobus, the son and symbol of Cain, is portrayed by Walt Gould, a fifth year civil engineer. Walt has never appeared before a collegiate stage, but his powerful voice when heard in the tryouts landed him this difficult role.

Rita Capek, a junior from Immaculata, plays the all-knowing Sabina, the family maid. Rita, an elementary school education major, plans to teach school out of state.

A member of Cue and Curtain under the direction of Sister Donatus, she has played roles in plays for three years for that society. She attended the Villa Maria Academy where she was on the copy staff of the newspaper. Rita's hobby is music.

Tonia diMarino is cast as Gladys, the daughter. Tonia, a sophomore sociology major at Rosemont, hails from Paulsboro, New Jersey.

Seminary Guild Show Cancelled Until Oct.

The Augustinian Seminary Guild Show, scheduled for Sunday evening, March 31, has been cancelled, the Rev. John J. Coffey announced today.

The cancellation is the result of an inability to get the overall top-flight talent capable of reaching the high standards of the six previous years, Father Coffey said.

He announced, however, that the show will definitely be held in October.

Here They Are Again, Fellas — Girls, Girls, Millions Of Lovely Girls! - But They're All Dating Juniors

JACQUELINE BELL

Lovely Jacki will be escorted to Junior Week activities by Bob Ericson, a junior Chemical Engineering student. She is 5-6, weighs a petite 115 lbs., and has hazel eyes complementing long brown hair. Jacki calls West Orange, N. J., her home and works there as a receptionist for the Thomas Edison Co. Ericson is also from West Orange.

MARION F. COLITZ

Marion, the wife of junior golfer Joe Colitz, is a secretary from Pottsville, Pa. The twenty-year-old honey blond stands a petite 5-5 and weighs 120 lbs. She and Joe were married over the semester vacation, and reside in Pottsville. Her husband is a Marketing major in the Commerce and Finance School.

YVONNE GOLDA

Elizabeth, N. J., claims this lovely entrant as a resident. Yvonne is nineteen years old, with blonde hair and green eyes, and stands 5-4. The date of Archie Whyte, a junior Marketing major in the C&F school, Yvonne works in her home town as a secretary. It's no coincidence that Yvonne and Archie met, for he lives in Elizabeth also.

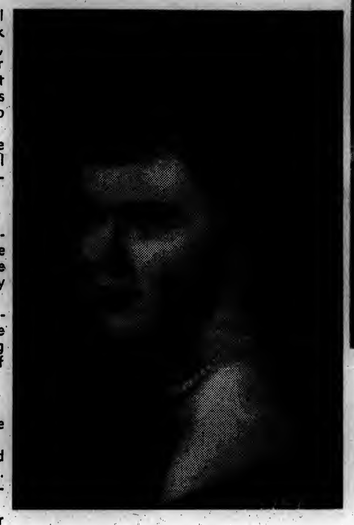
The photos on these pages are the initial entries in the "Class of '58" Junior Week Contest. Ted Macri and Andy Iaccarino, Contest Co-chairmen, urge juniors to enter their prospective dates' photos in the contest as soon as possible. Deadline for entries is April 10, so there is less than a month to go.

All entries should be turned in to the co-chairmen in 109 and 11 Sullivan Hall or in the Student Council office in Dougherty Hall.

ROYAL COURT TO BE CHOSEN

In addition to the Queen, a lady-in-waiting and a three-member court will be chosen. The royal court will reign for the entire week of social activities sponsored by the class from April 29 through May 4.

The Queen and her court will be announced in the Junior Week issue of the VILLANOVAN, and the official crowning of the Queen will be made on the night of the Junior Promenade, Friday, May 3.



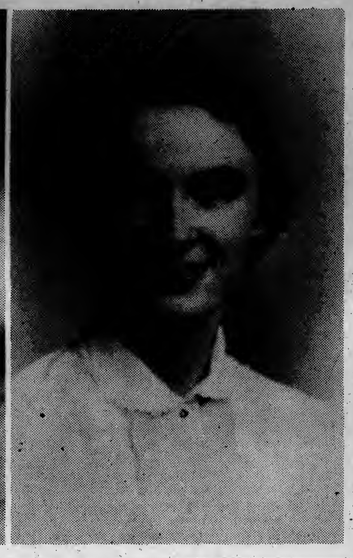
CONTEST RULES

Rules and information concerning the contest are as follows:

1. All members of the Junior Class, and only the Junior Class, may submit entries.
2. The contest will be judged from photographs only.
3. Only one entry may be submitted per junior.
4. Photographs must be 5"x7" or larger.

The following information should be attached to each photograph:

1. Your name, division in the University, major, home and campus address and telephone numbers.
2. Your date's name, age, height, color of hair, occupation (name of school attending or type of work), home or school and telephone number.



ROWENA LARKIN

Rowena will attend the Junior Week activities as the date of Finance major John Muller. She is presently attending the College of New Rochelle, where she is in her sophomore year. Rowena, who is 18 years old, is a red-head with blue eyes. She lives in New Hyde, N. Y. Her date lives in Garden City, N. Y.

JO MARTUCCI

The VILLANOVAN's contribution to the bevy of Junior Queen contest beauties, Josephine is the fiancee of News Editor Joe Kinney. A resident of Philadelphia, 5-2 Josephine is employed as an interviewer for the Beneficial Savings Bank in center city. She is 21, and offsets her green eyes with dark brown hair. Her date is an English major.

MARIE DIANE McDERMOTT

Marie is the hometown sweetheart of junior Bob O'Connor, who is majoring in Political Science in the Liberal Arts School. Both Marie and her date reside in Wilmington, Delaware, where she is employed as a stenographer for the Wilmington Trust Co. Eighteen years old, Marie has brown eyes, dark brown hair, and is 5 feet, 7 inches tall.

TERRY McGRATH

Terry attests to the fact when it comes to pretty girls, you can't keep a VILLANOVAN staff member out of the act. Twenty year-old Terry is the date of Sports Editor Bob Mulcahy, a junior History major. She is a sophomore at the College of New Rochelle, has brown hair, and stands 5-4. Her date, incidentally, is president of the Junior Class.

DIANE MOODY

Another lucky junior, Ed McCarthy, will esort Diane when the first week-end in May rolls around. Nineteen year-old Diane has blond hair and blue eyes, and is 5-7½. She is a resident of Malverne, L. I., and is taking student nursing at St. John's Hospital in Long Island City. Her date, a C&F Marketing major, lives in nearby Rockville Centre, L. I.

HELEN NEWHALL

Helen is the date and the fiancee of junior Hal Durgin, a tackle on the football team. A secretary in her home town of Lynn, Mass., Helen is twenty years old, and her credentials are light blue eyes and brown hair. She is 5-8, just tall enough to dance with her 6-4 date. Hal, also from Lynn, is an Education Major in the Liberal Arts School.

ANNE MARIE O'NEILL

Anne Marie is the second local girl to be an early entrant in the Junior Queen contest. Carl Licopoli, Jr., another Marketing major in the C&F School, will be her escort. Brown-eyed Anne Marie is a junior at Immaculata, and majors in Home Economics. She lives in Overbrook, Pa., and is 5-5, 123 lbs. She is a brunette.

GAIL PASTORINI

Another collegiate entrant, Gail is a freshman at St. Elizabeth's College, Convent Station, N. J. She has blue eyes, brown hair, and spreads 120 pounds delicately over her 5-4 frame. Peter Reilly, Jr., a junior from nearby Rosemont, Pa., is Gail's lucky escort for the Junior Week affairs. Gail lives in Bogota, N. J.

JILL SAVAGE

Nineteen year-old Jill, the Junior Week date of Alfred Holfelder, was one of the first lovelies entered in the Junior Queen contest. A student of Maymount Junior College in Arlington, Virginia, Jill is 5-5, with blonde hair and blue eyes. Her date is a junior C&Fer who is majoring in Industrial Administration.

JOAN WOYNER

A local girl, Joan is a resident of Upper Darby, Pa., and will be escorted by Christopher Minton, a junior Accounting major in the C&F School. With brown hair and brown eyes, Joan stands 5-4½ and weighs 110 lbs. She is twenty years old and works as a receptionist at the Philadelphia division of General Electric.

Mendel, Austin, Alumni New Frosh Halls

2:45 — 3:15 No. 281-380
3:15 — 3:45 No. 381-500

Prevailing Rules

There will be no room registration fee but certain rulings will prevail:

1.—Three halls—Mendel, Austin, and Alumni—will be for incoming freshmen only.

2.—No student may remove a class-equal from a room.

3.—A student from a higher class may remove one of a lower class. Exceptions to this will be made only in the case of close relations or some other more serious reason.

4.—Students who wish to retain the rooms they now occupy must claim them before 10:15 a.m. on the day assigned to their class.

5.—A student having the lowest number may present it with his and his roommates matriculation card and number at the appointed time. Matriculation cards of both residents of a room must be presented at the time of room reservation.

Council Reports

Reports from the standing committees of the Council included:

1.—The announcement by Pat Nicholson of a proposed reorganization of the Spirit Committee to include co-chairmen and a tighter-knit, though larger, organization. Nicholson also reported on the complete success of the IC4A Student Trip in which 500 tickets were sold.

2.—The coming social events, the Shamokinaki and the Singers Concert (March 22 and 23 respectively) were pointed out by Bill Wescott, Chairman of the Social Affairs Committee.

3.—Dick McEntee stated that the A.S.M.E. and the A.S.C.E. had both aplied to the Fraternities and Societies committee for admission to council as voting members.

Council Business

The floor was then opened to business:

A motion was made by Ken McGillivray, Sophomore Class President that the bulletin boards in Doughtery Hall be restricted in use; that the bulletin board adjacent to the dining room ramp be restricted to notices of organizations, activities, and the administration and that they remain there only for the necessary period; that all personnal messages and notices be allowed on but restricted to the bulletin board opposite the lounge.

This motion was passed as were the following:

1.—Don Kempf, sophomore representative, moved that the Inter-Fraternity Ball be a permanent part of Villanova's social calendar.

2.—A committee, to be headed by Paul Laughlin, was formed to look into the advantages and disadvantages of the formation of area clubs at Villanova, in compliance with a motion by Pat Nicholson.

3.—MacGillivray then suggested that the line before the residents dining hall be made less congested by respositioning the man taking numbers. This would involve the ramp but not the dining hall being opened earlier.

The meeting was then adjourned with a prayer by Father Dante Girolami.

Big Opportunities Await '57 Grads At Philco Corp.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Mr. L. J. Woods, vice-president and director of Research and Engineering announced today that Philco's pioneering and continuing growth and expansion in the electronics field — notably in color television, transistors, computers, data processing systems and guided missiles has opened up unique and rewarding opportunities for young engineers and scientists to extend their professional development upon graduation.

Mr. Woods also pointed out that Philco's recent entry into the home laundry field, and the necessity for developing entire new lines of automatic washers and dryers, in addition to other household appliances, has created many new and attractive openings for beginning engineers.

The location of Philco's research and engineering laboratories in the Philadelphia area provides members of its professional staff with a choice of outstanding accredited universities and colleges in which they may continue studies at the graduate level.

The company's liberal, full tuition refund plan encourages staff members to enroll at the University of Pennsylvania, Drexel Institute of Technology, Temple University, Villanova University or St. Joseph's College.

Jack O'Reilly, WPEN Disc Jockey, Meets WVIL Today

By BOB STRAYTON, Managing Editor

Happy Jack O'Reilly, the man with mellow voice and mellower jokes, will speak before the staff of WVIL at a radio station meeting in the Faculty Lounge this afternoon.

O'Reilly, author of the well-known "Jack O'Reilly Show" on Philadelphia's WPEN, will speak to the WVIL staff on the various phases of radio organization and the development of student talent.

Has Had Varied Career

The genial broadcaster, whose show runs from 5 a.m. to 9 a.m. Monday through Saturday, has had a lengthy and varied career in the radio business. He has held positions ranging from chief announcer to emcee on some of the country's leading networks.

Prior to opening his present morning show on WPEN two years ago, O'Reilly had acted as master of ceremonies for the popular musical show, "Lombardoland, U.S.A.," for 9 years. He also held the chief announcer's post for the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Had Highest 'Pulse' Rating

Although a disc jockey now, O'Reilly has also done numerous panel shows and still makes guest appearances at luncheons, dinners, and other functions. As a New York broadcaster, O'Reilly recorded the highest "Pulse" rating among competing disc jockeys with his "Music Hall" show.

Jack is no stranger to television either. He was a regular on the "Twenty Questions" panel show, and was an announcer and later sports director for New York's WOR-TV.

Speaks To 15,000 Monthly

With all his radio and television commitments, he still finds time to appear before more than 15,000 people monthly as guest speaker or selling products in his inimitable fashion.

His talent for putting over commercials is one of O'Reilly's strongest assets. Listeners to his morning show are familiar with the stylishly-executed commercials that has netted Jack a "fabulous 88% renewal record" with his sponsors.

Lives On Penna. Farm

When he isn't waking people up with his smooth line of chatter, Jack spends most of his time on his Plumsteadville, Pa. farm, where he pre-tests his sponsors' products on his wife, three children, and the farm livestock.

HAPPY JACK O'REILLY Speaks To WVIL Staff

WVIL MEET TODAY

Station Manager Ed Shea reminded all staff members to attend the WVIL meeting scheduled for this afternoon in the Faculty Lounge, second floor Dougherty. Shea said that Jack O'Reilly, noted disc jockey, (see story left) will speak.

Television Hosts Beta Gamma Meet Against Temple

Beta Gamma, the Debating Society, met Temple on the WRCV-TV show "Debate" last Sunday. The topic of the debate was "Resolved: The public schools should adopt a 'get tough' policy."

Other Beta Gamma debates scheduled for this month will be with Rosemont, Penn, West Chester, Ursinus, Temple and LaSalle.

The place and time for these debates will be announced. All students interested in competition and developing their speaking ability are invited to attend, John McGee, BG President, said.

Mass Requested Friday For Deceased Frank J. Linder

Members of the Class of 1958 have requested a Mass for Frank J. Linder, Villanova Junior, who died on March 1 as the result of an auto accident.

The Mass will be held on Friday at 12 o'clock noon in the University Chapel.

Linder was a pre-medical student and a member of Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity.

Funeral services were held at 10 a.m. last Thursday at St. Clement's Church in Darby, Pa.

Evening Division Suspends Class; Services Planned

The Villanova Evening Division announced last week that it will hold Lenten services tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the University Chapel.

Classes will be held as usual, but they will be recessed at eight for the services.

A Lenten sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Robert J. Welsh, O.S.A., Provincial Secretary of the Province of St. Thomas of Villanova. The Villanova Singers, under the direction of Dean Harold Reuschlein, will participate in the services which will include Sermon, Rosary and Benediction.

Classes will be resumed after the services.

The Evening Division also announced that classes will be held, as usual, Monday, March 18, a holiday for the undergraduates.

MULLIN ADDRESSES ICG

Last week, Mr. Martin Mullin, Esq., a member of the Pennsylvania State Legislature, addressed the Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government on "How Your State Laws Are Made."

Mr. Mullin, State Representative from the twenty-ninth district, is a graduate of the Temple University Law School and is a practicing lawyer in Philadelphia.

Youth Tours Are Offered To Students

The Catholic Youth Travel Office, in conjunction with its two sponsoring federations, NFCCS and NCCF, has recently announced the sailing dates for the entire series of 1957 tours.

Now in its eighth year of operation, the NFCCS-NCCF Travel Program allows groups of Catholic collegians to view the highlights of Europe at low cost. For example, CYTO Tour A takes the traveller through England, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and France for a minimal $695. Popular also, is Tour D. In 70 days, including 51 days in Europe, the tour-goer sees ten nations: Ireland, England, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, Spain, Portugal and France.

Birch's 'Saucers' Highlights Meet

Clem Birch, junior history major, will present a lecture entitled "Flying Saucers" at tomorrow's meeting of the Villanova Astronomical Society.

Birch, who has recently published articles on the subject in the Villanovan, will illustrate his talk with slides, to be shown by John Hunt.

The meeting will be held in the physics laboratory on the fourth floor of Mendel Hall.

DES Candidates Must Review Book

Candidates for the final nominations to Delta Epilson Sigma will be required to submit a typewritten essay reviewing one of the following books: In Search of Adam by Herbert Wendt or The Seven Story Mountain by Thomas Merton.

The essays must be turned in to Father Sullivan's office before 3 p.m. this Friday.

Dressler and Fox Nominated for SEA To Elect Tomorrow

Elections for Student Education Association officers will be held during the 10:30 student activity period in room 207 Mendel Hall, announced Joe Wheeler, chairman of the nominations committee. Those members of the organization nominated for President are Dick Dressler and Jim Fox; for Vice-President; Joe Sapone and Ron Damiane.

The office of secretary has Peter Longworth and John O'Donnell as nominees while John Hughes and Joe Kulick are nominated for Treasurer.

Floor nominations will begin at 10:30 and close at 10:45; the balloting will then begin and close at 11:15. The votes will then be counted, and results posted later in the day.

On March 6th there was a general meeting and the constitution was ratified after some slight changes. President protem Dick Dressler conducted the meeting.

Wescott Requests Underclassmen To Join Pistol Team

Pistol Team Captain Bill Wescott requests that any underclassmen interested in joining the Varsity team please contact him in Room 111, Commodore John Barry Hall, any time between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on class days.

Applicants are not required to have had previous pistol training, Wescott said.

The Pistol team, which has a 12-7 record in the pro Delware Valley League, has its largest double match of the season on Saturday.

At the conclusion of the present indoor season in three weeks, the Pistol team will hold its annual banquet, in conjunction with the Varsity Rifle team. Letters will be awarded at that time.

Richard Gallagher, Esq., Chief Deputy Sheriff of Philadelphia County, addresses the Villanova Law School Forum at its monthly meeting held last Wednesday night in Garey Hall.

OC Features Falla, Turina, Albeniz, a Millan Zarzuela

Opera-Classica will feature a program of Spain's best music tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall The first part of the program will feature: "La Vida Breve," a Spanish dance by Falla; "La Procesion del Rocio" by Turina; and "Iberia: El Puerto" by Albeniz.

After a brief intermission, the program resumes with A. Lopez Mohis Y Rafael Millan's "La Dogaresa," a zarzuela which is from a Spanish opera.

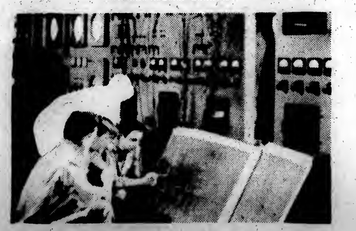
Spanish Zarzuela

Zarzuela arose in the seventeenth century and took its name from the Palace of Zarzuela near Madrid where these entertainments first became popular. The form is the use of a spoken dialogue between the songs. Some zarzuelas are tragic or melodramatic but most are humorous ranging from satire to burlesque.

Future Presentations

The Telephone Hour presents Renata Tebaldi at Carnegie Hall in New York City on March 18.

Verdi's "Il Trovatore" will be presented at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia on March 19. Jussi Bjoerling and Antonietta Stella will star. Tickets are available for $3.00 and $3.50.



The last Philadelphia Orchestra Student Concert will be given at the Academy of Music at 8 p.m. on March 25. Tickets can be purchased for $1.25 to $2.00

Step Into the Expanding Field of Instrumentation

Automatic control, or automation, or data reduction are all Instrumentation, and offer some of the broadest and most satisfying careers available to today's engineers and scientists.

Atomic energy, iron and steel, aircraft and automobiles, chemicals and chinaware, petroleum and electric power are only a few of the many industries which need instruments. This need creates permanent opportunities in many of our operations, including research and development, product engineering, industrial engineering, production, inspection, market development and customer contacts.

The products with which you would be concerned include automatic, high-precision instruments for controlling, recording and indicating temperature, chemical concentration, radiation phenomena, frequency and load and many other conditions. For heat-treaters we make furnaces and process equipment. For the worker in science—whether student or researcher—we make both automatic and manual laboratory-type instruments, with which you may already be familiar.

The Company has about 3000 people—is one of the biggest in its field, yet is compact enough for you to be able to "follow the score." Its reputation for progressiveness in industrial relations, and for quality of product is world wide.

Wayne L. Besselman, our Coordinator of Technical Employment, will be on the campus on March 25, 1957 with information which he will cordially share about our very modern opportunities and rewards for engineers and scientists. Your placement bureau will arrange an appointment with Mr. Besselman, at your request.

Bryn Mawr To Hold Mid-East Conferences

The Alliance for Political Affairs of Bryn Mawr College will present two conferences, today and tomorrow, on "Arab Nationalism in the Middle East." The conferences will take place in Goodhart Auditorium.

Today at 12:30 p.m., Dr. Fayez Sayegh, Acting Director of the Arab States Delegations Office of New York, will speak on "The Current Situation in the Middle East."

At 8:30 tonight His Excellency Moussa Shabandar, Ambassador of Iraq to the United States, will give a talk entitled, "Iraq in the Center of the Middle East."

BC Presents Plays

The annual Interclass Play Contest of Beaver College is being held tomorrow at 8 p.m. at Easton Road and Limekiln Pike, Glenside, Pennsylvania. The admission is $1.

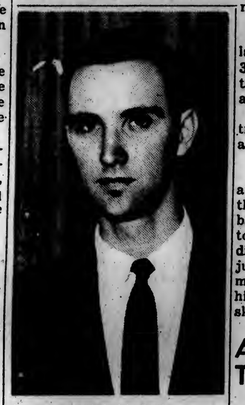
The four half-hour plays being presented are as follows:

"The Old Lady Shows Her Medals," by J. M. Barrie; "The Flattering Word," by George Kelly; An original play by Peggy Spare; and "The Intruder" by Maeterlinck.

Father Comey IRS Speaker Tonight

Industrial Relations Club will present the Father Dennis Comey Panel from the St. Joseph Institute of Industrial Relations of Philadelphia tonight at 8 o'clock in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium.

"The Guaranteed Annual Wage," a subject which is of primary importance in our present economic system, will be the topic for discussion.



The panel consists of prominent representatives of both union and management and promises to present a lively discussion.

Everyone is cordially invited.

Beta Gamma Records Sixth Place In King's Tourney

Beta Gamma, Debating Society gained sixth place in King's College Debating Tournament on Feb. 16. In winning five out of eight debates, Villanova triumphed over Lehigh, King's Point, Marywood, Fordham and Messiah. Misericordia, Waynesburg and St. Joseph's debating teams marred the Villanova team's record.

Oz Scogno, Vic Ludemer, Jerry LaKarnafeux and Bob O'Connor participated in the debates.

Leads Beta Gamma To Sixth Place

Beat Swarthmore

The overall record of the Villanova debaters now stands at 35 wins and 13 losses. Among the recent wins are Haverford and Swarthmore.

Last weekend, the debaters traveled to Brooklyn College for a tournament.

Based On Averages

Each college debates six times at a tournament. The winner is the team that wins the most debates and whose members (four to a team) have the highest individual average. The debater is judged on his method of argumentation, his use of evidence, his refutation and his delivery skill.

ASME Makes Field Trip To Colmar

Members of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers went on a field trip last month to the Link-Belt plant in Colmar, Pa., accompanied by the moderator, Mr. James McElhaney.

Future trips planned include a visit to either the Esslinger or the Schmidt Brewery.

ASME will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30 and feature a lecture on "The Torque-flite Transmission" by Mr. William Jeffe, manager of the transmission laboratories at Chrysler Corporation.

Joseph Ponas was elected president of the club. James McNamara, James Birle and Gerald Ratchford fill the remaining offices.

Spanish Club Meets Under DiVincenzo

The Spanish Club of Villanova University will hold its first meeting since the death of its late moderator, Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., tomorrow.

The meeting will be the initial gathering under the moderation of Mr. Vito DiVincenzo.

The main topic of the meeting will be the Communion Breakfast scheduled for the last Sunday of this month. The annual Dinner Dance in honor of Cervantes has been cancelled this year out of respect for the memory of Father Lozano.

The meeting will be held at 10:30 tomorrow in room 205 C & F. Nominations for officers for next year will be discussed.

Tomezsko, Ludwig Get Grad Offers

Ludwig, also of the Villanovan staff, was appointed to the Department of Chemistry at Carnegie Tech, where he will study theoretical physical chemistry.

Tom Higgins Takes First Prize, $50, In Paper Contest

At the annual meeting of the Student Chapters of the AIChE for the Middle Atlantic Region held at Princeton on March 9, Thomas W. Higgins, senior Chemical Engineer, received first place for his paper on "The Behavior of Condensate in Drying Drums."

This paper, among seven presented at the meeting, was based upon material collected for a senior research project and was accompanied by movie slides. The award for first place was $50.

Also present at the meeting were eight juniors and seniors, accompanied by Dr. Vincent Uhl, the student chapter counselor. The fifteen other schools in the district were also represented.

Last year senior Edward Fleck won second place at the meeting held at Penn State.

Spirit Spurs Trackmen

By BOB MULCAHY

Congratulations are in order for both the track team and the student body. The success of the trackmen in the past two weeks in winning the AAU and IC4A championships gives them the undisputed distiction of being the greatest college track team in the United States. However, not to be overlooked in the victory of the team is the part played by the students.

Like Football Crowd

For anyone not attending the IC4A's all he had to do was to read any newspaper account of the meet to find out about the activities of the students. All of the papers alluded to demonstration of spirit by Villanova. One writer said it sounded more like a football game than a track meet!. The importance of the student backing was evident in talking to assistant track coach Jim Tuppeny. He commented that the students were a terrific factor in the morale of the team because it put the right kind of pressure on the boys.

Appraising their success, Coach Tuppeny reflected that the Wildcats had been extremely lucky in the quantity of success achieved by the team. Normally a team loses men through scholastic troubles, injuries and follows not realizing their potential. Considering this, a team is fortunate when 33% produce throughout their college careers, but in the case of Villanova, the precentage is closer to an astounding 75%. A decisive factor in the point total rolled up was that nothing unforseen happened—except possibly Delany winning the two-mile. Last year Charlie Jenkins was bumped on the first turn and it cost us the title.

Swimming Team Frustrated

Villanovan's swimming team with only one loss to LaSalle marring its record will not get its anticipated chance for revenge. Every year the Philadelphia Metropolitan Swimming Championships are held to determine city supremacy. This year, because of lack of interest on the part of all the teams, aside from LaSalle and Villanova, the championships have been cancelled. Certainly this is a deplorable condition and must be exposed. Scheduled originally for Hutchinson Pool, Penn backed out. Then coach Ed Geisz stepped in and attempted to transfer the meet to our Field House. However, he could not generate enough interest.

Last year Villanova finished third behind LaSalle and Penn. This season Villanova defeated Penn decisively for the first time in 16 years and Penn among others backed out.

Hats off to the swimming team and its coach Geisz for another fine season. Keep up the good work and perhaps next year the other city schools will wake up and realize their mistake.

Villanova is entering its track team in both the Cleveland Knight of Columbus and Chicago Daily News meets. Chicago is where Cornelius Wormerdam set the world's pole vaulting record and this meet will bring together Bob Richards, Bob Gutkowski and Don Bragg.

Last year the Big Five of Bragg, Jenkins, Delany, Revis and Sydnor recorded 27 first places out of a team total of 38 in eight meets. This year in seven meets they are slightly behind with only 20 victories in a team total of 26.

Biggest find of the indoor season is Charlie Stead who high jumped 6-9½ in the IC4A's.

First outdoor home track meet is Blue-White Day, May 4, against LaSalle. Other home meets are scheduled for May 11 with Seton Hall and May 25 with Quantico Marines.

Delany Continues Streak; Phil Reavis Loses First

By JACK CURTIN

Suffering a slight slump after wrapping up the two major indoor national track championships in the two previous weeks, the Villanova trackmen were not quite up to par in last Saturday's Knights of Columbus meet in Madison Square Garden, although the contests were still dominated by Wildcat performances.

Perhaps the greatest disappointment to Villanova followers was the destruction of Phil Reavis's undefeated sreak in the high jump.

Reavis Streak Ended

Reavis, who had not lost this season previous to the meet, suffered "one of those nights" and went out at 6 ft. 4 inches. The event was won by George Dennis of Morgan State with a meet record leap of 6 ft. 9¼ inches, a jump that on most nights would only earn him a close second to Reavis. Villanova's Charley Stead tied for second in the event.

Other surprising upsets came in the 60 yard dash and mile relay events.

George Sydnor, Wildcat sprint ace who has been plagued by a pulled leg muscle recently, was beaten by Pitt University freshman Mel Barnwell in the 60. Sydnor took second with a 6.2 timing.

RON DELANY
Streak Still Going

The relayers, beaten only once before during the season when leadoff man Gene Maliff slipped on a turn in the Millrose Games, took second place to a Garden record-setting New York Pioneer Club quartet. The club runners were clocked in 3:16.9.

Ron, Charley, Don Win

However, the rest of the Wildcats ran true to form. The performances of Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins and Don Bragg were more than enough to win their respective events.

The Ron Delany legend went on in its old tried and true pattern as the Dublin lad won in his usual copyrighted manner. Delany waited until there were only two laps to go, kicked, and romped home in 4:09.4. It was Ronnie's 16th straight indoor victory.

Charley Jenkins defended his 600-yard crown with out any difficulty, leading all the way to win in 1:11. With Bob Richards competing in Milwaukee, Don Bragg had no serious competition in the pole vault and won easily with a 15 ft. 1 inch leap.

To Chicago Invitationals

Alex Breckenridge took third in the two mile run while Bob Holup finished fourth in the 60 high hurdles competition.

This weekend 11 of the fabulous Wildcats will travel to Chicago to compete in the Daily News Invitational Relays. It will mark the first time most midwestern track enthusiasts will get to see the world famous Villanovans in action.

Record Stands 10-15:

Wildcats Close Out First Losing Season In 10 Years; Defeated By LaSalle, 75-61

By FRANK FLEMING

Last Wednesday night the Explorers of LaSalle College tied St. Joseph's and Temple for the Philadelphia Big Five crown as they downed the Villanova hoopsters, 75-61, at the Palestra. This game completed the Wildcats first losing season in over 10 years. The charges of coach Al Severance finished their current campaign with a record of 10 wins against 15 defeats.

LaSalle, who earlier this season downed co-champion and NIT-bound Temple and lost a close decision to the Hawks, the other co-holder of the city crown, was paced by Bill Katheder and Al Lewis. Katheder and Lewis together scored more than half of the Explorer's points, contributing 26 and 17 tallies respectively. Katheder scored 15 of his points in the last nine minutes of the game to insure the LaSalle win.

Explorers Start Fast

LaSalle got off to a quick start, acquiring a 21-8 lead in the first nine minutes of play. From that point on Villanova could not get within six points of the Explorers who were playing a do-or-die game to win their first city championship.

Jack Kelly, a junior from Cleveland who combines basketball with his baseball talents, was the big man for the Wildcats. Jack scored 19 points while managing to pull down 13 re-

All Work, Little Glory For Maliff and Peterson

By JOE SLAVIN

For the past four years two Villanova trackmen have consistently run in championship form but have not received due recognition for their efforts. Since their freshman year Gene Maliff and Al Peterson have been outstanding performers on Villanova's nationally recognized mile relay team.

To write the story of one is sufficient to cover the exploits of the other for they have been teammates in the real sense of the word. Gene and Al arrived at Villanova four years ago and began their track career by running on the freshman relay team. Since their first race four years ago they have only missed one race each, due to sickness in both cases.

Despite their efforts the publicity has been given to such men as Delany, Reavis, Bragg, Sydnor and Jenkins. This oversight is not due to any deficiency on the part of sportswriters. The reward of a relay squad is not in personal recognition but in personal satisfaction. Another quirk is due to the fact that the relay is usually the last event in the meet, thus causing many out of town papers to omit the event in the early Sunday edi-

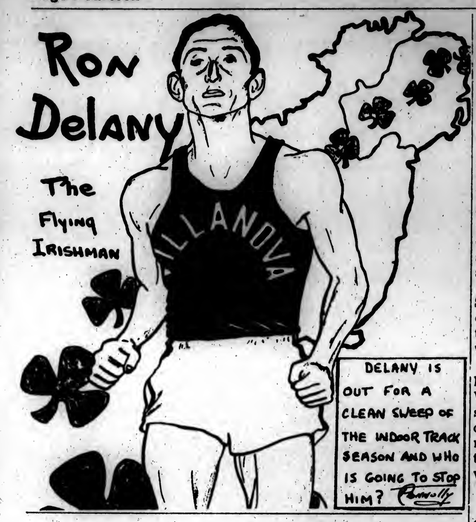
Gene Holds Records

Gene Maliff began his track career at St. Michaels High School in Jersey City, New Jersey. Gene gives much credit to his coach Tom Finn whose early training enabled him to enter college well trained in the fundamentals of running. Catholic High School records of New Jersey show that Maliff is still the holder of the 100 and 220 yards records.

Last year in a dual meet with LaSalle, Gene was entered in the quarter-mile run. He finished with the best time he ever accomplished, 48.7 seconds which broke the track record. The reward of running on such an outstanding squad resulted in Gene receiving third place honors behind Charlie Jenkins and Rollie Simpson.



His outstanding achievement occurred in his sophomore year in the Penn Relays when he was a member of two American Championship teams within one hour. At four o'clock he ran on the championship sprint medley team and returned at five o'clock to run on the winning mile relay squad.

Gene's future plans are indefinite, however he did make preliminary plans last Christmas when he became engaged to Jacqueline Helen Reilly of Jersey City.

Al's Extra Lap

Al Peterson's association with track began at Bayonne High School in New Jersey. Several times he ran against St. Michales and competed in the mile relay against Gene Maliff. Even in high school Al seemed destined to run for personal satisfaction as he competed often on the relay squads. He thinks his desire

Adelphi Win, LIU Forfeit Give Swimmers Eleven Victories

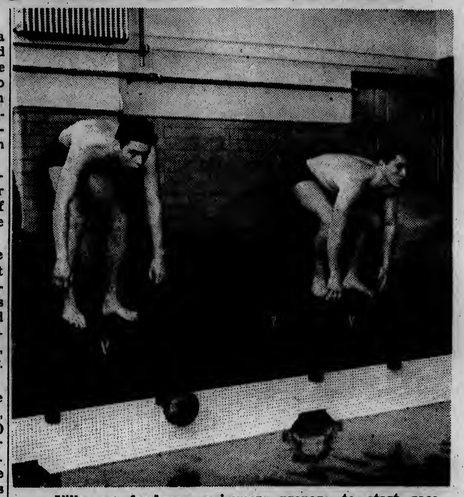
By DON KEMPF

A victory over Adelphi and a forfeit win over Long Island University last week enabled the Villanova swimming team to close out the regular season with an eleven win and one loss record for the most successful season in history of Wildcat swim squads.

The 'Cats, after losing to LaSalle early in the season for their only loss, won the remainder of the scheduled meets for a nine win victory streak.

Coach Ed Giesz's boys were host to the Adelphi mermen last Wednesday night in the University pool. When the meet was over, the Blue and White had rolled up its eighthstraight victory by a lopsided 52-34 score, winning seven of the ten events.

Schoener Wins Two



Captain Lou Schoener was the only double winner of the meet, capturing both the 220 and 440 yard freestyle events. Schoener won the 220 with a 2:25.5 clocking and came home first in the 440 with a timing of 5:36.5 as Nelson Baker captured third place for the 'Cats.

Senior Don Couig won the 200 yard backstroke with a 2:28.7 effort and came in second in the 200 yard butterfly breaststroke. Jim Gregory added another first for the Mainliners as he splashed to a 2:41.1 victory in the 200 yard breaststroke.

It was Bobby Pinto and Denny Rinkacs who shared victories for the Wildcats in the sprints. Rinkacs edged Pinto in the 50 yard freestyle, winning with a clocking of 0:28.8. However, it was reversed in the 100 yard freestyle as Pinto beat out Rinkacs, capturing first in 0:57.6.

Villanova's 400 yard Medley Relay team of Gerry Cechony, Gregony, Larry Palacio and Ken MacGillivray gave the team another first as they won a 4:22.3 victory.

Coach Giesz has decided to send eight of his swimmers to represent Villanova in the Intercollegiate Swimming League Championships to be held at Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass., on Saturday. Swimmers Couig, Schoener, Rinkacs, Palacio, Gregory, Cechony and both Pinto brothers will probably be combined into relay teams for the meet.

Villanova freshman swimmers prepare to start race against LaSalle last Saturday in the Field House. Much help is expected from these yearlings by the varsity next season because of the promise exhibited by them this past winter.

Mahan, Former VU Captain In Eighth Year As Coach

By FRANK FLEMING

In the spring of 1950 the captain of the 1936 Villanova University baseball team returned to his Alma Mater from the baseball mills to take over the reins of the Wildcat nine. Since that day when he first led his squad through practice drills, the teams Art Mahan has coached at the Mainline institution have consistently rated with the best college teams in the East. Yet to have a bad season while coaching the Wildcats, the former Villanova star has taken his team to the NCAA championship tournaments three times in the past seven seasons.

Art Mahan as an undergraduate at Villanova was starting first baseman for the 'Cats and in his senior year, 1936, was selected to captain the championship nine. Immediately after graduation the brillant fielding first sacker was besieged with offers from major league clubs. Some of the best big league teams were bidding for Mahan's autograph affixed to a contract. The Boston Red Sox suceeded in getting his signature.

Minor League Star

Mahan then reported to the Hazelton, Pa., farm team which played in the Eastern League. He then put in two seasons with Boston farm teams in Little Rock and Louisville and became one of the most talked about ball-players in the minor leagues.

At the start of the 1940 season the Red Sox sold Mahan to the Phillies for whom he quickly became starting first baseman. The first baseman's roster in the major leagues was most impressive that year. The Villanova alumnus found his name listed with those of many all time greats, Johnny Mize and Lou Gerhig to name but two.

The following year, along with most other ballplayers, Mahan signed a contract to play for Uncle Sam, but what he was playing was not a game. Commissioned a full Lieutenant the former major league star served in the U.S. Navy Air Force.

Returns As Manager

Discharged from military service in 1946, Mahan returned to baseball that same year, but not in the active capacity he left the sport. This trip he managed the Providence team in the New England League. This was meant to be the former star's last year in professional baseball, for after his season in New England he retired from active participation.

Mahan limited his baseball in the next few years to playing semi-pro ball. But in 1950 he answered the call of his Alma Mater and returned to Villanova to coach the ball club of which he once was a member.

Basketball Round-up

Wildcat Courtmen Close Poor Seasons

It's all over now! The sneaks are packed away, the balls deflated, the uniforms sent to the dry cleaners. On occasions, they thought it would never end. The Wildcats had it tough this year.

An opening loss to Canisius was easy to take; the team showed sparks of greatness in losing 66-62 to the Griffins. Then three straight, including the smashing 79-69 verdict over Indiana, and Villanova was where the pre-season pollsters said it would be—ranked number eleven nationally, but it lasted one day.

Festival Jitters Did It

The impetus of three jarring victories might have been enough to change the complexion of the entire season, but the Wildcats' chronic New York "jitters" spoiled that. Three straight defeats in the Holiday Festival patterned the remainder of the season: a season that was the worst in ten years of Villanova basketball.

Muhlenberg took it on the chin, 71-67, as the team tried to rebound from the New York devastation. But the pattern held true, and before the team regained its winning equilibrium, it had been trounced by St. Bonnie's, Duquesne and West Virginia. Victory over Penn was the prize of returning home, but the Wildcats lone City Series' win was no spark.

Spark Was There vs. Pirates

A 59-51 loss to St. Joe's bridged the gap between the Penn and Seton Hall victories, and in the latter win, the spark was there, and lasted until Drexel had been crushed. But Temple extinguished it, and it never again glowed. Sloppy wins over Scranton, Washington and Lee, and Brandeis were the best Villanova could do in ending a season that saw them win ten, while losing fifteen.

Smith Joins The "Club"

While lacking in victories, the Wildcats were far from lacking in outstanding individual performances. Jim Smith's flourishing departure from collegiate basketball was headlined by his 24 point effort against Drexel and made him the school's sixth highest scorer with 1014 markers; Al Griffith as a backcourt scrapper and rebounder, with quick hands and a deadly eye, gave a constant ray of nope to the season; Jim Fahey's smooth in side work accounted for nights like the Muhlenberg game, when Big Red had 22 rebounds. But these men are gone.

The promise of great things to come lies with the underclassmen, and Jack Kelly and Tom Brennan prepped for next season with 388 points between them. Joe Ryan's 228 in 20 games, George Emma's and Ken Harrison's contributions indicate future scoring potential, and the Frosh are big and can score. Wait'll Next Year!!!

"Like father, like son" is an old adage that may be applicable in a study of the 1956-57 Villanova freshman basketball campaign. While their varsity counterparts were experiencing their first losing season in ten years, the first year courtmen were also having their troubles.

Actually, the frosh still came up with a 5-4 winning record, but it was a far slip from the 17-2 log of last year's squad. Burdened by the loss of three key players at mid-season and the loss of the team coach later in the season, the junior Wildcats just couldn't seem to get moving.

The Two Georges

Leading the frosh through the season was high scoring George Reider, who smashed the three year-old freshman scoring record with a 45 point performance against St. Joseph's late in the season. Reider finished the year with 24.1 point per game average.

Most of Reider's support came from another George, one by the name of Raveling. Raveling, a rugged rebounder, ended the year with a 16.7 average. Other big scorers were Chuck Rolles, Jim Ward and Bobby Gouldlock.

The Villanovans opened the season on Dec. 15 by knocking off St. Joe's, 70-60, in the Field House. Reider led the scoring parade with 18 points.

In the next game Villanova romped over Steven's Trade of Lancaster, Pa., 93-55. Reider hit the 20 mark in points scored, with Raveling close behind at 17.

LaSalle Was Tough

Five days later the 'Cats met a LaSalle team which was to prove to be the best frosh squad in the city. The Explorers took a hard fought battle, 91-82. This time it was Raveling 26, Reider 20.

This same duo shared 40 points evenly in the next battle, a close 62-61 victory over Penn in the Palestra. This was followed by a loss to Seton Hall, 82-75. Four men hit double figures in the losing cause, Reider leading with 23.

Reider Cracks Record

Jan. 30 saw an easy 86-69 victory over Drexel as Reider basketed 24, Raveling 17, and Rolles 15. Two weeks later Reider broke the scoring record for an individual game with those big 45 points against St. Joe's, but the 'Cats lost in overtime, 104-95.

A rematch with LaSalle brought a disasterous 106-78 loss to the record as Rolles accounted for 17 points, but the frosh rebounded four days later to end the season with a victory, downing Penn, 83-77. Reider scored 37.

That's it for the freshmen in '56-57.

Villanova Sports of 20 Years Ago— Vastly Different But Very Familiar

By JACK CURTIN and DON KEMPF

There has been a big change on the Villanova scene in the past twenty years. Most present day students wouldn't recognize the Alma Mater if they could see it as it was just two decades ago; buildings, professors, courses—all were different. Athletically, too, things were far from the same, and yet, in many ways, a rundown of Wildcat athletics of the 1936-1937 season is surprisingly familiar to our eyes.

It was a young new coach, Maurice "Clipper" Smith, who manned the Wildcats on the football field that year. And after a disappointing season the previous year, things didn't look too bright on the Mainline campus. Still, most students embarked on the annual football trip to Penn State to watch the Villanovans battle the Nittany Lions in the season's opener. For the first time in the history of the series Villanova won, 13-0, giving a strong indication of what the season held in store.

'Cats Extended Streak

Smith's men ran their winning streak to five in a row before being downed by a strong Bucknell team. School spirit was at an all-time high and reached its peak on the weekend of the traditional Temple game. Vilanovans were disappointed that after a gigantic rally and parade, the team lost a close 6-0 ball game.

ART MAHAN

After the game there was the traditional moaning about what the officials did and did not see.

The 'Cats season's record was an impressive one—impressive enough to warrant an invitation to play Auburn in Cuba on New Year's Day as the crowning event in a week-long carnival of sports. The underdog Wildcats fought back from a 7-0 deficit at half time to tie the game in the waning moments. By winning the toss after the game the Mainliners were able to bring the trophy, which is currently on display in the new trophy case, back to the campus.

The most valuable player award that year went to one Art Raimo, a swift running backfield star who later became a Villanova coach himself. One of Raimo's teammates, who preceeded Art as a Wildcat mentor, was named on traditional rival Manhattan's all - opponent squad that year. His name was Jordan Olivar.

A New Coach

As the football season was drawing to a close all eyes were fixed on the University Field House where a new coach had just taken over the reins of the basketball squad. Young Al Severance, who had led the freshman team to an undefeated season the year before, was getting his first chance to coach a varsity team.

Severance didn't seem to have much to work with, and when injuries deprived him of three key men before the season began, it looked as though it would be a rough year on the court. However, the Wildcats upset Seton Hall, 23-21, in the season's opener and another unexpectedly victorious season had begun. Severance compiled a 16-7 record for the season against such familiar names as Duquesne, Temple and Indiana.

Boxing Was Big

However basketball had to take a back seat to another winter sport in those days in is what perhaps the most amazing difference between modern day Villanova athletics and those of two decades ago. There was only one sport which brought big crowds out of their homes to travel on a cold winter's night in the rumble seat of a Model T so that they could see some action; and that was boxing. Villanova was no exception to the rule, and rarely were crowds below 3000. There was a gathering of 8500 fans on hand to see the Wildcats take on the Badgers of Wisconsin.

While Villanova's season record wasn't one of the best in the nation there was one very bright spot. Senior Tony Salz won the intercollegiate 175 pound title for a record setting third year in a row. This, plus a disputed tie with Temple, kept discussions about right uppercuts and left crosses floating about the campus for the duration of the season.

Trackmen Weren't Winning

The baseball team in the spring of 1937 was on its way to another winning season as the school year drew to a close, and another familiar name greets us from the diamond. It was was noted in the newspaper late in May that Art Mahan, Villanova first baseman who had graduated the past June was hitting at .500 pace in the Philadelphia-New York professional league. Mahan now coaches the Wildcat diamond-men.

The swimming team had a 8-1 record that year and the golf and tennis teams were also winners. Only one squad didn't seem to be breaking any records. The Villanova track team, under one Jim Elliott, just couldn't seem to get moving. The Wildcats took none of three places expected in the Penn Relays and finished a distant second in most of the meets that year. It was a big and a great year in Villanova sports, except for the boys on the cinder track.

Things are a bit different nowadays.

Intramural Basketball

Duffers Edge Furriers

In the 8:30 Alumni League the undefeated Duffers edged the Furriers with a score of 32-24. In this game in which defense was the plan of the day, Mike Walsh lead the winners by dropping in nine field goals.

Jazzers Win 70-48

In the same league the Jazzers also defeated the Furriers to remain undefeated and remain tied with the Duffers for the league lead. John Meal paced the Jazzers to 70-48 rout with 22 points.

Small Five 69, Emanons 35

In the 7:30 Alumni League the Small Five handed the Emanons their second loss of the current campaign 69-35. In winning their third game of the season the Small Five moved to third place in this highly competitive league. The winners' Bill Somers was high scorer with 23 points.

Trotters Tied For First

In the same league the Hot Trotters remained undefeated and tied for first place in the championship race by downing the Mouseketeers 52-36. The high scorer in the tilt was Bill Smith who paced the winners with 20 points.

Swabbies Get Title

The undefeated Swabbies won their 5:30 Alumni League by downing the Mashers 48-34. This game closed out the Swabbies' regular season games and won for them their league crown and a spot in the championship tournament, which opens this afternoon in Alumni Gym.

Rolles Paces Gunners

In the same league the Gunners downed the Mashers by a score of 70-34. Jim Rolles paced the Mashers with 32 points, scoring most of these on his deadly jump shot from side court. Walt France threw in 12 points for the losers.

bounds. His fine defensive play repeatedly broke up LaSalle plays and his ball handling set up many of the Villanova scoring plays. The 6-3 star, playing in a reserve role, was the spark behind several Villanova rallies which threatened LaSalle's title bid.

Ryan Aids Kelly

Starting his first game since injuring his knee over a month ago in the Temple game, sophomore sensation Joe Ryan dropped in 18 points for the Wildcats. The tall red-head, although playing with his injured knee heavily braced and still limping slightly, played a good game, providing accurate scoring punch via his famed jump shot.

Although winning only one game in the City Series' competition Villanova, by virtue of the three way tie for first place, finished second in the league standings.

Little Glory For Maliff, Peterson

to gain personal satisfaction rather than recognition was instilled in him by his coach, George Peterson. Peterson was a member of the Bayonne squad which set world records in the two and four mile relay events.

While running on the four mile relay squad Al was a victim of a judge's error. He so completely outclassed the field that he lapped the other runners while running his mile leg of the relay. The judge lost track of him and signaled for Al to run an extra lap after he had finished his run. Despite the extra lap the team still set a world record. His greatest thrill at Villanova occured in the Penn Relays where he was competing in the sprint medley event. He was given the baton with a short lead over Olympic Champion Andy Stanfield. Pushing himself to his maximum he managed to hold the lead over Stanfield. Al's future plans are also indefinite but he indicated that Marilyn Loiacono of Bayonne is included in them.

Proud to Belong

Although running in the shadows of Olympians and not being the kind of competitors who gain the headlines, they can be proud of their accomplishments. Maliff has been a member of four IC4A, three American and two national championship relay teams. Peterson has been a member of four IC4A and two national championship relay teams.

The varsity pistol team, which is nearing the completion of its indoor schedule, has compiled a 12-7 record in competition against intercollegiate and professional teams. Posing in the front row, l-r, are Co-captain Lou Padla, Jim D'Arcy, and Co-captain Bill Wescott. In the rear: Joe Bizzane, Bill Scott, Captain J. J. Grace, USMC, Cas Lawler, and Ken Santoro.

1955 Grad Third Youngest to Own Wall Street Seat

In typical Frank Merriwel' fashion, a graduate of the Class of 1955 became the third youngest owner of a New York Stock Exchange seat two weeks ago and was named president of the Villanova Alumni Club of New York several days later.

Eugene M. McDonald, a Commerce and Finance student in his undergraduate days, received the seat on the New York Exchange through the brokerage firm of Peter P. McDermott, in which he is employed as a junior partner. The firm, located in New York City, has five other partners besides McDonald.

Third Youngest Owner

In the long history of the New York Exchange, McDonald, who just turned twenty-two, is the third youngest owner. His type of seat is presently valued on the market at $87,000.

McDonald's election as president of the New York Club was icing on his cake of good fortune. On Feb. 27, at a luncheon held in New York, McDonald was voted into the presidency of the Club, the youngest Villanova graduate even to hold the post.

Honorably Discharged

As a student, the native New Yorker majored in Finance and was active in Belle Masque Dramatic Society, Delta Pi Epsilon, and Intramurals. After graduation, he went into the Marine's PLC course and was stationed in Quantico, Va., where he served for a year before being honorably discharged for physical reasons.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

By JOE MARTIN, SC President

The main topic of debate at the last meeting of the Student Council was the social calendar. Several motions were made and the discussion was, to say the least, lively. The Council is very interested in this problem since it is through the Social Affairs Committee that the method of obtaining dates is set up. Last year, the committee initiated a system that at the time looked like the cure-all to the ills encountered in getting a date for any activity. The Social Committee, with Council approval, established a preference list for all the functions held on the campus.

MARTIN

At the yearly meeting where these dates are picked the Dean of Student Activities merely asked the representatives of the organizations on the list, in order, what date they wanted. In spite of this many difficulties were encountered. For one thing the representatives of the organizations that attended had no idea what dates the other people present wanted. In order to avoid that situation this year, Senior Class President Vince Sullivan made a motion that a preliminary meeting be held a short time before the regular one so that various organizations are able to "feel out" the other organizations present and be better prepared to choose their date at the official meeting.

Another difficulty encountered under this system was that the preference list was not upheld in some cases. Part of the blame in this may fall on the list itself. There are certain groups on campus that must have the whole weekend or more for their function. Turf 'n' Tinsel is such an organization. Due to Lent and several other activities that traditionally fall in second semester, there are actually few dates left to be chosen. Their problem and its effect on other organizations will have to be carefully considered when the preference list is drawn up this year.

This, however, is only part of the reason that the confusion resulted. Basically the preference was sound. Another big reason was the semi-tentative dates that were to be held on campus that were not student functions. These things are not in themselves a problem since they usually give a great deal of favorable publicity to Villanova. However, at last year's Social Calendar meeting, the Dean of Student Activities had not yet received definite confirmation of what dates would not be available for this year due to the above-mentioned activities. For this reason many dates were still very tentative when the meeting was ended. This year we are hoping that when we leave in June all the dates for the social season next year are settled.

A very sound suggestion concerning the chow hall line was presented at the meeting by Sophomore Class president Ken MacGillivray. The idea is to have the "matric" card numbers taken at the bottom of the ramp instead of at the top as is now done. In supporting his move MacGillivray pointed out that the ramp was designed to hold students in line whereas the hall was not. Everyone has probably noticed the crowd that forms in the main hall of Dougherty just prior to the opening of the ramp at lunch and dinner. Along with these lines comes the problem of people "cutting in" the line. By opening the ramp earlier, even though the food is not ready, these problems would be reduced to practically nothing.

Along with this comes news from another sophomore Don Kempf that final approval is being waited for on the use of milk tickets in our cafeteria. Though nothing is definite as yet, we are hoping to be able to announce that it is going into effect in a few weeks. The milk ticket plan that Kempf presented to the administration for approval provides a daily limit on milk per student to be used, at any meal on that day, that he chooses. Final news on this matter will be given as soon as it is available.

Finance Society To Hold Banquet, Form AFA Chapter

The Finance Society last Thursday ratified their constitution and defeated a measure to join the Student Council. The club is now open only to Finance students.

Social Chairman Michael Walsh announced plans for a Finance banquet. He invited all Finance majors that are interested to attend the final meeting before the banquet next Thursday, March 21, in Room 101 C & F.

Club Officers

Anyone desiring further information is requested to see any of the club's officers including Pres. William Haley, Vice-Pres. Walsh, Treasurer Larry Kirwin and Sec. Jerry DeGroft. Joe Iannaconni, Gerry Gardner, Thomas Gallen, Mike Dougherty and Tom Decker are also available for information.

The club also arrived at the necessary quota for forming a chapter of the American Finance Association. This is a national organization for men in the Finance field. Mr. Anthony Angeline, co-assistant moderator, was responsible for this opportunity.

Field Trip

Recently the club took a field trip to the New York Stock Exchange accompanied by the other co-assistant moderator, Mr. George Pierce. Mr. Patrick Dougherty, Chairman of the Finance Department, is moderator of the society.

Society president Haley advised students of the importance of the society. "In addition to the social advantages the actual finance experienced gained is invaluable," he said.

BM Presents Wilder's Poke At Humanity, Comical 'The Skin of Our Teeth', Apr. 4-7

Mr. George Antrobus, inventor of the wheel and the alphabet, will bring his entire family and retinue before the Villanova Field House footlights in the Belle Masque production, "The Skin of Our Teeth."

The Spring production, which will run April 4-7, will feature Tom Kimmel, Walt Gould, Rita Capek and Claire Sigerson in the lead roles. Tonia diMarino and Jim Gilligan have been cast in the chief supporting parts.

Star-Sudded Broadway Cast

The Broadway production starred Frederick March, Florence Elderidge, Montgomery Clift and Tallulah Bankhead and was directed by Elia Kazan.

The Belle Masque Drama Society is attempting a most difficult task since this Thornton Wilder drama is more than a comedy. The play is a study of humanity. Wilder is famous for such Broadway smash hits as "Our Town" and "The Matchmaker."

Funny Yet Humane

"The Skin of Our Teeth" is not only a fast-moving comedy but is also loaded with little tricks of the dramatic art. When Wilder wrote the play, he wanted to have more than a "funny" play, he wanted to tell the story of mankind.

In order to do this, he had to have more than the straight emoting of lines. He had to have a catch, and the catch is the staging. When the actor is in the process of presenting his character, the narrator will intrude to explain to the audience the plot of the play.

Unique Staging

The entire production takes place in the living room of the Antrobus home. However, the scenery is unique in that it moves at certain times in the production.

Ticket Chairman Ed McCarthy has announced that the sale of tickets has begun in the Pie Shoppe or they may be purchased from members of the Masque production staff.

Reservations For Jr. Dinner Dance Set To Open Mon.

The Class of 1958 will soon be able to make reservations for the dinner dance, to be held at the Ben Franklin Hotel on Saturday, May 4.

The permanent class ticket committee under John Lyons and John Muller will accept bids in the publications office Dougherty Hall everyday beginning Monday, April 1.

Five Couples Per Table

John Coffey, representative for the ticket chairmen on the dinner dance committee, announced that juniors must buy the whole table for five couples. The tickets are priced at $10 per couple and when the juniors make their reservations, they will be required to pay the full price, which is $50.

This procedure wil continue for a few weeks, and then individual orders will be accepted.

Importance To Be Early

Clem Birch, chairman of the dinner dance, stresses the importance of making reservations early.

The dinner dance, which is open only to juniors, is scheduled to begin at six o' clock and will continue till 2 a.m.

The Charlie Gresh Orchestra, prominent Philadelphia society band, will provide the music for the dance beginning at approximately 9 p.m.

Fathers Corley and Lanen To Conduct Easter Retreat

Preparations are now underway for the junior-senior Retreat to be held on campus, April 14 to 17. The annual event will begin with devotions on Palm Sunday evening and end Wednesday morning with Mass, general Communion and the Papal Blessing.

The Retreat has been divided into two section, one for all male students and one for all full-time women students.

The Rev. John P. Corley, O.S.A., who conducted the freshmen-sophomore Retreat in January, will be Retreat master for the men. The Rev. Stephen F. Lanen, O.S.A., will conduct the Retreat for the women.

Women's Retreat in FH

Conferences for the women will be held in the University Chapel while the men will have their Retreat exercises in the Field House.

University Chaplain John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., has announced that "the annual Retreat is a requirement for all Catholic students attending Villanova." No Catholic junior and senior student is excused from any of the Facenda To Receive Second St. Augustine Medal Apr. 6

by BOB STRAYTON
Managing Editor

John Facenda, dean of Philadelphia newscasters and former Villanova student, has been named recipient of the St. Augustine Medal, the Villanovan's annual award for achievement in the field of communications.

John Facenda, noted Philadelphia newscaster, has been chosen to receive the second annual St. Augustine's Medal for achievement in the field of communications. Facenda will receive the award as a result of his pioneering efforts on behalf of late-evening TV newscasts. (See story right.)

The medal, the second of its type to be awarded, will be presented to Facenda at the annual Villanovan Dinner-Dance, Saturday, April 6, in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia.

One of the leading television and radio personalities in the East, Facenda was chosen for the award over several other candidates because of his outstanding contributions to regional broadcasting.

Two TV Shows Nightly

The popular late-evening newscaster is presently seen twice nightly, Monday through Friday, at 6:30 and 11:00 p.m. on WCAU-TV. He also does a daily radio show at 5:35 p.m. over the same network, and an 11:00 p.m. news telecast every Saturday night.

Facenda has held his present position since 1948, when he pioneered for late-night television newscasts. Prior to that time, most eastern TV stations showed movies or signed off the air at 11:00 p.m.

Received Several Awards

Setting the precendent for the most popular form of television newscasting in the country today earned Facenda several coveted awards. The results of a local poll sponsored by TV Guide magazine in 1954 named him the television personality most worthy of recognition and the most popular broadcaster in the area.

Facenda's long career in reporting began 20 years ago, when he joined the news staff of the now-defunct Evening Ledger newspaper.

Directed News Service

From there, he went to the New York office of the Ticker News Service for two years, where he held the post of Program Director. He left newspaper work to do live reporting in 1948, when his "People and Things with John Facenda" show made its debut on WCAU-TV.

Since then, Facenda has become a nationally-known commercial announcer on numerous networks across the country. He was the "sponsors voice" on "I Love Lucy," "Public Defender," and "Philip Morris Playhouse."

Born in Virginia

A native southerner, Facenda was born in Portsmouth, Virginia, but moved with his family to Philadelphia in 1926. He attended Roman Catholic High

Annual Mothers' Day Begins Week of Junior Activities

Mother's Day, Traditional Junior Week tribute to mothers, will be held this year April 29.

Co-chairmen of the day, Pat Nicholson and Mike Rafferty, have announced that the memorable day will begin at 11:00 with the class moderator, Father Dominic Berra, O.S.A., celebrating High Mass at Our Lady of Good Counsel Shrine.

The class of '58 tree will be planted at noon, and at 12:30 there will be a luncheon for juniors and their mothers in the resident dining hall.

Villanovans To Entertain

Entertainment, featuring, among other things, the Villanovans and a skit from Turf n' Tinsel, will be afforded at 2 in the Field House. There will also be a varsity baseball game between Villanova and Temple at 2:30.

Winner of the Diaper Dan contest will be announced at 4:00 when juniors and their mothers will have an opportunity to look over the entries. A place for the Diaper Dan display has not yet been announced.

The day will be concluded with Benediction at 5 at the Shrine and a banquet to be held in the Field House at 6:30. The banquet will be closed with a rendition by the Villanova Singers.

Tickets On Sale Monday

Tickets for Mothers day will go on sale Monday, as will all Junior Week Tickets, and will remain on sale until Friday, April 26. The cost of Mother's Day tickets will be $8.50. Besides the above mentioned features, this includes favors and corsages for the mothers.

A questionnaire, recently circulated among all juniors, showed that 90 per cent of the class will attend Mother's Day. Nicholson urges all Juniors to buy their tickets as soon as possible so that some further indication of attendance may be arrived at.

An added feature, for early arriving mothers, will be the NFCCS Variety Show Sunday night, April 28, at 8. Rafferty stated that all mothers will be admitted to the Variety Show free of charge if accompanied by their sons.

I don't care if you are president, we're not going to the Junior Prom like that.

Just What Have You Accomplished?

Believe it or not, gentlemen, one more year is quickly fading into the crowded past. It won't be long before our college careers will be shortened one more annum.

It's high time, then, to appraise ourselves.

Have our college careers been what they should have been? Have we done everything that we are capable of, and done it well? Have we really put out and accomplished just that little bit extra?

These are the questions we must ask ourselves. Whether we be in our first year or our last we still have time to cast aside the lethargy in which we may have been floundering and do that little bit extra, both for ourselves and for our university.

What we are driving at is the opportunity afforded the average intelligent student for extra curricular activities.

There are numerous fraternities offering a most constructive and enjoyable way to spend a few hours a month.

There are clubs on the campus catering to the likes of almost any student. These organizations cover all phases of academic and social university life and are yours for the joining.

There at least a half dozen literary publications that rely solely upon the student for their publication. These pages of print are the voice of the university, and their vocal cords cannot function without the help of a vast crew of volunteers.

And if merely the satisfaction of doing something extra and of being known around the university outside of your own circle of associates isn't enough, it is interesting to note that the first question upon the lips of most job interviewers, come senior year, is, "I see your marks are good, but just what have you accomplished in the extra-curricular field?"

Yes, what have you accomplished?

Political Round-Up:

Nasser's Lack of Protocol Reopens Mid-East Problem

By GENE DONOHUE

A few weeks ago this columnist advocated a more conciliatory foreign policy on the part of Israel. I called for Israel to evacute all of the territory she had gained by her act of aggression against Egypt. Thanks to the leadership of President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles, this was accomplished. Israel pulled her troops back into her own borders.

This move, however statesmanlike on the part of Israel, has not been equal with statemanship on the part of Nasser. At last Israel seemed to be willing to bow to world public opinion and has been handed only insults by her neighbor. What is just for one side should also be just for the other.

Has Swallowed Pride

While it is perfectly true that an aggressive nation should not be allowed to capitalize on this act of aggression, the truism must be held in the light of practicality. Israel has swallowed its national pride and retreated before the force of world public opinion into its own territorial limits. This is something new in the world and is, as stated before, a statesman-like move on her part, as it was in the case of Britain and France.

However, the reality comes into the picture in the form of the power concept. A nation that has proven itself to be militarily superior to another is not going to allow itself to be pushed around indefinitely. Its national pride and nationalism itself will not allow this.

New Middle East Crisis

Aside from this, any government that allows this to happen would soon be replaced with a more radical nationalistic one. If this were to happen in Isreal, all that has been accomplished by the United Nations in the way of attaining some sort of peace in the Middle East would have gone out the window.

In the light of reality, it was exceedingly wrong of Colonel Nasser to send an administrative government into the Gaza Strip. This immediately provoked strong criticism not only in Israel itself, but throughout the world. To add to this, Nasser's refusal to allow Israel to use the Suez Canel is also in bad international taste.

Gulf Problem Touchy

But perhaps the most depressing order that the Egyptian government has issued is the one which keeps the Gulf of Aquaba closed to Israeli shipping. This is the provision that is especially touchy and Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion has threatened the use of force to keep the Gulf open.

Again the present situation in the Middle East is one where both sides are only partially right. However, the situation has changed from what is was a few months ago. Now it is Israel who is more right than wrong and it is Nasser who is being unrealistic.

A Professor's Comment:

God's Acceptance Is Spiritual Re-birth

By GENE DONOHUE

The other day one of my students came up to me and said, "Is there anything that you would like to write for The Villanovan, anything you would like to say to the students?" I said, "I don't know; I'll think about it." That which follows is the result of that brief conversation.

Surely the Lenten and Easter season is a most appropriate time for all Christians to acknowledge and bear witness to their common allegiance to our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, the Eternal Son of God. By so doing we encourage one another in the Christian faith and we glorify our Lord in the sight of unbelievers.

On These Hang The Law

Fundamentally, our Christian religion is very simple. Jesus gave us two commandments: (1) "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind"; (2) "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." "On these commandments," said He, "hang all the law and the prophets."

However, because we are human beings, we find that we are unable to obey these commandments. Even though our spirits may be willing, yet our flesh is weak. In order to follow Jesus we need something that is more than human, we need something that is divine. The sinful, selfish human life that is our natural inheritance needs to be replaced with the Eternal Life of God, which is His free gift to us through the sacrifice of His Son on Calvary. The blood of Jesus shed for us has power to wash away the stain of past sin and His resurrection has power to provide us with the new life that we must have if we are to follow Him in obeying His commandments. That which we could not do because of the weakness of our fleshly nature, God through the sacrificial death and victorious resurrection of His Son has accomplished for us. Our part is but to come humbly to the throne of grace, admitting our sinfulness, and in utter sincerity to ask God to apply to our lives the saving grace and regenerating power made available to all humanity through Jesus Christ our Lord.

He Loved Us First

Then when God accepts us, the new Life which is Christ enters in, and through the power of this Life, which is the indwelling Holy Spirit, we find that we are born anew and that we love God, not because it is a duty, but because we are genuinely grateful. We come to know Him not as a supreme Taskmaster or even as the omnipotent Creator and Upholder of the Universe, but as a loving Father Who cares for each of us personnally as a son. Also we find within us a new attitude toward our fellowman. Instead of a spirit of competition and a desire for personal supremacy, we begin to find our deepest satisfaction in helping others, in giving of our time and strength that others may benefit thereby. In the words of St. John, "We love because He first loved us."

I said that Christianity is simple. It is. God is Love. I am selfish. I need to be changed. Through Christ I am changed. It is not I that live, but Christ that liveth in me. "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Old quarries empty parking lots and any available vacancy may be the scene of one of these college men's answer to the cocktail party. If our fabulous Mainline weather is its usual uncooperative self the next one may have to be held in the library.

. . . . At the disappearance of resident cars as if into air. Inside information has it that the workers' green sheds in front of Sheehan Hall are filled with shiny but hot automobiles. License plates are hidden in text books as the annual game of hide and seek goes on.

. . . . At the ads around for Belle Masque's Spring production. We hear that there is a dinosaur in the show and also that girls from Rosemont, Immaculata and Villanova are in the cast. Wonder which school got the nod for that post?

. . . . At the rush to work in the cafeteria to have some cash for Spring activities. You have to wait in line to get a job to hand out food to those waiting to eat. It is so crowded now behind the counter that pretty soon a student employee will be given out with each cup of coffee

With The Editor:

(Ed. Note: Author Fired For Lying)

Let's start off with the one about the desperate young man who kept journeying from shipyard to shipyard in search of a cheap submarine. Everywhere he would go he would query, "Have you got a cheap submarine for sale?" Finally, one yard director said he had one, but asked the man, "Why in the world do you want to buy a cheap submarine?" "Because I'm poor," came the quick reply.

Please don't tear up your paper in disgust, we have a little grist here about one of our very own editors. This story is not a joke, although many thought it to be at first, it is true.

When one of our instructors was heard to say that this certain editor carries more weight around campus than almost anyone else, he was pleased. He was pleased for a moment, that is, until he realized that this weight wasn't influence, but just a lot of good old fashioned girth.

Alarmed, he quickly sought out a sturdy scale and stepped upon it. Damon Runyon's Fat Man had nothing on him. Weight: 254 pounds. There was only one answer . . . a diet. "What!" went up the cry, "HIM on a diet! Never."

That was two months ago. And much to the amazement of his colleagues, "HIM" is still on that diet and succeeding too. Hitched in waistlines and sagging suit jackets attest to the fact that no longer does said editor carry so much weight around campus. For today, the scale reads, weight: 215.

This phenominal suet shedding by almost a confirmed incurable has started a do-it-yourself Slenderella craze on campus. The motto is, "If HE can do it, anybody can!"

Reviewing St. Patty's weekend, it looks like everyone came back hale and hearty. It was a great time in New York as usual. The New Yorker looked like Dougherty Hall between classes. Familiar faces were to be seen everywhere escorting pretty little lassies to and fro.

Actually, many of the lassies were not exactly being escorted, they were being pursued. Funny, not many of them were running too fast. .It was a gay scene and not one drunk marred the fun in the eyes of this editor; a credit to the school indeed.

The infirmary seems quite busy these days. Crutches are being dusted off, bandages and liniments are being readied and the personnel is studying up on its Red Cross first aid manuals.

Spring softball season is upon us and soon our balloon ball warriors will begin the daily trek of gimping gladiators in search of first aid and excused cuts down at the infirmary.

The best safety device by far is a good pair of sneakers. Anyone who wears spikes on those intramural fields is crazy. Even major leaguers break ankles on the smoothest and softest of surfaces.

Take it from someone who found out the hard way..

Honest, Prof! That's The Way It Happened . . . I Read It In The Paper

By FRANK DELANY, Feature Editor

All of us who have tripped, however lightly, through Mr. Henry Rofinot's course in American History have gotten the official, albeit amusing version of American history.However, those in the know tell a different version of things. A case in point is the civil war.

The ultimate causes of the war were economic and cultural antipathy between the North and South. Economically speaking, the North had it and the South wanted it. Culturally speaking, the North and South both considered the way of life of the other section to be one level above the barbaric. There was something to be said for both points of view.

A more immediate cause was the growing ascendancy in both sections of those holding extremist views, North and South, they were the abolitionists and fire-eaters respectively. The fire-eaters naturally felt that they would be more in demand in war time. The motives of the abolitionists are harder to explain. Led by William Lloyd, there were about a garrison of them in the North. They ranged from those who merely wanted to abolish slavery in the territories to those who thought it might be nice to abolish the South. All in all, they were people with a large amount of moral sense and little of any other kind.

Indications of ill feeling before the war were such things as the Brooks-Summer incident and "Bleeding Kansas."

Lack Of Tact Attack

Senator Sumner of Massachusetts was famed for his speeches of bitter denunciation of the South and also for a few in which he told the truth. Rep. Brooks of South Carolina decided to revenge his state with an attack on Sumner. He used a cane, in keeping with the Southern code. However, he attacked Sumner when the Senator was unarmed. This was not demanded by the code but it showed commendable prudence on the part of Mr. Brooks. After all, the South would need every man in the coming struggle.

"Bleeding Kansas" is another misnomer. Kansas wasn't bleeding but everybody in it was. The fighting centered around the interesting fact that although there were more anti-slavery men in Kansas than pro-slavery men, the pro-slavery men won all the elections. Actually, this was due to amateur taxidermists from Missouri. They stuffed ballot-boxes.

Abraham Lincoln's election to the presidency brought the crisis to a head. Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida had been voted the states most likely to secede and now they showed that they desereved the title. President Lincoln wanted peace, so he held out the olive branch which had been hewn into a rifle.

It' All In The Name

With secession now an acomplished fact, there were now the necessary ingredients for a war: and area suitable for invasion and an army to invade it. The North had an army for invasion because Lincoln had goaded the South into firing the first shot by naming the fortress in Charleston harbor Fort Sumner.

After the shooting started, four more southern states seceded while four of them decided to remain loyal. President Lincoln very considerately provided a detachment of federal troops to help the Maryland legislature make up its mind on the question without any outside pressure. Probably out of gratitude, it decided for the union cause.

Actual hostilities lasted about four years. Despite the enormous losses on both sides, a good-natured rivalry was displayed throughout the war. At the battle of Bull Run, the Union forces ran faster than the confederates, but the South captured first place in the worst prisoner-of-war camp competition with Andersonville.

All This And Misic Too!

We needn't go into the various battles except to remark that they often took place at locations with picturesque names, such as Shilo, Hi Lili Hilo, and O Sole Mio.

As all of my readers from the north of the Mason-Dixon line know, the North finally won the war. General Grant, with superior tactics and more men, and more men and more men finally defeated Lee at Appomattox Courthouse. Since he was surrounded, Lee decided to settle out of court on the condition the southerners be allowed to take their horses and go home. (The southerners were great animal lovers.)

A Place For Carpetbags

The aftermath of the war was unfortunate. The North refused to forgive and forget. New England textile manufactures wanted the South helpless to resist the influx of their excess carpetbags. The South did proceed to forgive and foget. She forgave those who led her into rebellion and forgot the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments to the constitution as best she could.

There was a bright side though. Southern attempts at conscription provided the basis for the great American novel "Gone With the Draft."

The purpose for studying the history of any war is to learn a lesson. Our lesson is: it's better to fight foreigners than fellow-Americans . . . We don't clutter up our countryside that way.

Rahn Says 'Thanks'

I would like very much to express my sincerest thanks and appreciation to all Villanova's priests, faculty, students and my fellow members of the track team for remembering me in their prayers and Masses and for all the other kindnesses extended me. Thank you all very much.

Gratefully,

Bill Rahn

New York Was Painted Gaudy Blue and White

Begorra, and 'twas a fine weekend! Far from Ireland's sunny shores, in the great melting pot of New York, the sons of old Erin went about the celebration of the glorious feast of St. Patrick in their typical sedate way. Sure and the whole town was wearing the green, and mingled in with them all were those who wore the blue and the white; for, as always, Villanova was there.

Numerically, the Mainline students were easily the top group around. This was easily proven by a look at the register in just one large hotel which provides for the students to register under their respective schools. Villanova had four pages to all other school's one and even this was not room enough.

We Wonder Why?

Persentagewise though, the Wildcats had to concede to the sopohomore class of a college for young ladies up Boston way. Of the 68 members of the class, 65 were in New York for the weekend. Surprisingly enough, in their three semesters of college life no member of this class has ever made the school's Dean's list.

Credit for starting the first celebration probably goes to the group that checked into the hotel with the college register and found written in the register an invitation to one and all to stop up to their room for a party. Fortunately for them, only a few hundred guests showed up.

Delany Takes TV Bow

Villanova's famous Irishman, Ron Delany, entered the picture late Sunday. The great miler appeared on the Ed Sullivan television show that night, and a Villanovan staff member and friend decided that they should be there to see him. They managed to get two tickets from a passer-by in front of the CBS studios, and, with these, admitted their dates.

This, however, still left our two friends on the outside, a state of affairs was none too pleasing to them. They asked for the ticket manager, and, highly indignant, demanded the tickets left there for members of the Villanovan staff. After an hour of arguing, they were admitted to cover Delany's appearance—a 30 second wave of the hand.

Well, They Are Rather Speedy

Inside, they were told by an usher that a large group of Wildcat trackmen had come to the theater that afternoon and were sitting down front near Mr. Delany. Wondering how members of the team had reached New York from Chicago, they took a look at them. They found the "trackmen," eight members of Villanova's indefatigable spirit committee. One was the roommate of the Villanovan staffer, and was at least 50 pounds from being a trackster.

Track figured in another Villanova escapade too. The father of one lad, who lives in Chicago, had attended Saturday night's meet, spending most of his time on the track talking with the team members about the school; and, highly exuberant over the fine Wildcat performances, decided to call his son and tell him about it. So, he began calling all the hotels in the city until he found the one in which his son was registered.

Nice Try, Pop!

Since the boy wasn't in his room, dad called the lobby and asked whoever answered the location of the Villanova parties. Eventually, he caught up with his son. After a long conversation, the son rushed to the hotel lobby, commandeered the public paging system, and "scooping the New York papers by three hours" as he put it, announced the meet results.

Even the coeds got into the act. The girls were there in force, having just as good a time as their male counterparts. On the last day they must have felt like a group of hat check girls though, for they were the last Villanovans to check out of one hotel, and their room provided storage space for the luggage of many fellow students.

Scale Of Justice Askew

In the jumble, one student lost a suitcase full of clothes, but another gained a loose raincoat. Unfortunately, this didn't balance out in the eyes of the first individual.

The stories could go on forever. Tales of students trapped in elevators for hours, of other walking 32 floors to find a friend, of those who paid for rooms and never slept in them—all these will float around campus for weeks to come. Many fellows will spend just as long denying the stories they will hear about themselves, without being quite sure if they should.

St. Paddy's day is gone, and now we must again face reality, with only a memory of the past. But, cheer up, fellows. 'Twas ever thus.

Letter to the Editor:

Educational Dilemmas Voiced To Philosophy Club

A letter from a recent graduate of Villanova has questioned the practical value of the education he received here at Villanova in meeting the problems of complex life in the twentieth century.

The Philosophy Club of Villanova has undertaken to study the problems presented in the letter and, to this end, they ask for opinions from the student body on the questions raised by the former Villanovan. His letter is printed here for your perusal.

Philosophy Club:

I've been a soldier now for eight months and feel that I've grown a very great deal from the casual collegiate individual of pre-graduation days. The Army has left me with a very definite series of impressions and I have re-evaluated many of the principles that helped to shape the "Christian Gentleman, soundly educated."

I've become aware of the stark reality of life within this short period of time, which has shaken the foundations of that idyllic existence, College Life. I hold no bitter resentment toward the Army itself, but I am deeply concerned with the many problems that have been nurtured by this age-old problem we call "modern living."

As of August 1955, each man entering the Armed Forces is faced with a five-year obligation which is divided into two years of active service and three years service in the Active Reserve.

'Many-Headed Monster'

This means that the young man who is interested in pursuing a definite career is forced to relinquish his most productive (in establishment) years to the many-headed monster of the Army.

I am writing to you not for sympathy but for your opinions.

Recently I have been set upon a literary and philosophical self-improvement campaign through reading and discussion just as we spoke of last year at school. Along with courses in Short Story Writing and Drama that I will enroll in through the University of Chicago via the Army Extension Program, I am interested very deeply in philosophy.

Can you advise me in this pursuit?

Good vs Evil Considered

I wish to gain a firmer background in the study of philosophy, and not necessarily scholastic philosophy. The joint problems of Good and Evil and the metaphysical definition of motion have been constantly in my more sublime thoughts for quite some time.

The questions of freedom and capital punishment and some of the basic tenets of Thomism have been kicked about and logically attacked over and over again throughout the past half year. In many instances I revert back to my college studies in Ethics, Metaphysics and Epistomology, which are worthless

Klaus-Jurgen Popp Writes:

Technology, Management Praised By Germn Student

By KLAUS-JURGEN POPP

Klaus-Jurgen Popp, a student who lives in Germany, has been corresponding with Feature Editor Frank Delany for the past several months. In the succeeeding article, Popp discusses U.S. post-war influences on German ways of life.

What impressions do German's have of the U. S. and of American people in general?

Somebody said some time ago, that the Federal Republic was the most Americanized country in Europe. As far as I can see this statement is right. Now, we shall try to examine all of it the Federal Republic has taken from the U.S.A., and we shall also see from the results what "impression" the U.S.A. made on Germany.

The reason for the Federal Republic being the "most Americanized country" is that we have an American occupation since 1945. From this year on divisions of American troops have been in our country without any interruption.

U.S. First Friend

However, you will say that we have also had the English, French, and Russian occupation forces. The real reason constitutes the following: The U.S.A. was the first country that met us as a friend after the war with the use of Care packages and the Marshall Plan.

England and France are not friends of ours. They are just polite and honest allies, although their populations still hold understandable resentment towards us. The American people are friendly with us, if only in a private sphere.

The occupation by American soldiers is unfavorable to us on one count, and this point is also evident with the occupation troops of other countries, and that is that one in a thousand commits a crime against a civilian.

Evils Exaggerated

The penny-papers exaggerate these rare cases and immediately a wave of indignation rises among the people against "the Americans" in general. All the bitterness will be forgotten, but it would be better if the case never occurred. The last of these incidents appeared in the summer of 1956.

As mentioned above we will sum up all the important changes in the Federal Republic that were caused by the influence of the United States.

1) Technology. This field has been influenced by the U.S. more than by any other country. Automobiles have an American appearance; the houses are built in the style of sky-scrapers; automation has entered many works.

Management Praised

2) Way of life. The manager must be mentioned specifically, for he is a new type of man, coming from the U.S.A. He has his own problems and he is cerainly the most-discussed type of man in Germany.

The youth imitates American models. He loves Marlon Brando, Elvis Presley or James Dean. He imitates these models in their clothing, behavior and way of life.

Gigantic suburbias have grown up far from the city-centers, especially near Hamburg (the biggest town of the Federal Republic). Travel, be it by air, road or railroad, has the American rapidity and its extensiveness. This same trend will be found in advertising and public-relations.

American films (a pity that they are mostly bad ones) rule the movies; American records are the most popular on the radio and many of them receive a German text. The sound and rhythm of our bands is the same as those in America although the quality of the latter will never be reached.

Most Important Influence

3) Language. This is perhaps the most important American influence on Germany. There are hundreds of American words which have been accepted by the German language during the last ten years. Most of them cannot be replaced by German words with the same meaning. Some of these words are: party, public relations, teenager, make-up, okay, story, baby, understatement. This wave of Americanisms can only be compared to the French words that came with the occupation of Germany by Napoleon in the 1800's.

Although the American influence on Germany has been gigantic, one cannot say that German thoughts about America are absolutely positive. The negative thoughts concern: your nonchalance, exaggerated managership and materialism. Germany, and the whole of Europe looks at America from a high position, as if it were still the pioneer country of the mid-nineteenth century. These countries do not consider America as having matured in the literary and cultural fields.

The higher class consider themselves to be a superior people to the Americans. The opinions of the egg-heads and the artists is quite different, but this group is in the minority. They have a positive opinion of America. They frequent the U.S.-Information Centers, see American plays, read American books, and listen to American music with the right understanding and judgments. They at least respect America, and know that it is a real cultural power in the world, and many of them even admire it as we do.

THE PADDED CELL

By HARRY & GERRY

This week the Padded Cell proudly performs an important school service. Last week the Villanovan carried an article dealing with room reservations. Due to the large amount of confusion brought about by this over-complicated system, the administration has decided to inaugurate a completely new method of room-drawing.

This plan is thoroughly democratic and yet wonderfully simple in its construction. Since the Padded Cell is read by the most influential and thinking elements on campus, naturally it was chosen to be the vehicle of propagation for this new system.

It Goes Like This

Anyway, the way we get it, the system works like this: (a) All students wishing rooms on campus next year must obtain a number to place them in line for actual room reservations. On Monday, April 1, any student whose last name is composed of one letter will report to Dougherty Hall to draw for his number. On Tuesday, those with two, Wednesday, three, and so on, until April 27 when those with 26 letters will finish drawing.

At this first drawing, each student will pick a little green card containing some number. The student must now divide this number by the number on his matric card, subtract his age, add his social security number, and if the result is equal to his quality point average multiplied by the number of letters in his home town, he has passed the first test.

Each student is now issued three darts and has three tries to break a small balloon containing a number. If the balloon is broken, the contained number becomes the student's final code number and must be carried on his person at all times. The remaining persons now have passed the first plateau.

Any students failing to meet these requirements will be considered ineligible to live at Villanova next year.

(b) By reaching the second plateau, the student is guaranteed a room in Alumni Hall. He now has the option of taking this room or coming back next week to try for one of the better halls.

Budding Emerson Wanted

Only students submitting a 5000-word essay will be eligible to compete. This essay must be entitled, "Why I am Tired of Living Like an Animal." Entries will be judged on neatness, originality and aptness of thought.

Over-emotional pleas or a cowardly whimpering attitude will not be tolerated in these essays. No one is advised to use such trite, over-worked arguments as, "the roof leaks," "it's two miles to the nearest head," or, "my maid is a Communist." All students whose essays have been accepted have passed the second plateau.

Those students whose essays are rejected will naturally forfeit their room in Alumni Hall.

Final Plateau

(c) The third and final plateau is the most difficult since rooms in Sullivan and Sheehan Halls are at stake. Before competing, each student must pass a rigid physical and literacy test. Then he must take an oath that he is not now and never has been a member of the Communist Party. Notarized documents must now be submitted from the student's old roommate stating that he bathes at least once a day.

Extra recommendations like former memberships in the boy scouts, ground observer course or SAPA will count heavily in the final tabulation.

Einsteins Come Forward

Remaining students must then gather May 8 in front of Mendel Hall and march in formation to the Field House where isolation booths will be set up. Pertinent questions dealing with all the major fields of knowledge will be asked. Only those showing great familiarity and precise treatment of the subject matter will be allowed to go on.

All students who fail this test will be given Cadillac convertibles, but will be eliminated from the competition.

Winners will now assemble on the stage in the Field House before the entire student body. Gorgeous models will assist them in selecting final numbers from a large padlocked safe.

Finally everyone will rise and sing the Alma Mater and then everyone will be free to move in.

MISCELLANEOUS RULES

1. All students over seven feet tall must automatically have been on first floor Alumni where special accommodations have been made.

2. Those persons wishing to reserve their old rooms are required to paint a large red cross on their doors. Those students are advised to remain locked in their rooms until the period of drawing is over.

Go Man, Go

3. Any students failing to qualify for rooms by any of the above methods will assemble with their luggage on the far side of Lancaster Pike on the opening day of class. At the crack of the starter's gun, these men are free to charge onto campus and claim any uninhabited rooms.

4. All faculty members wishing to live on campus next year must pass a spelling test and have a note from their mother.

The above regulations are subject to change, probably immediately.

Garey Hall Dedication Set; Opens With Pontifical Mass

Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein has announced the general plans for the dedication of Garey Hall, new home of the Villanova School of Law.

The ceremonies will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 25-27.

All Catholic juniors and seniors of the Villanova Undergraduate Division will be required to attend the solemn Pontifical Mass which will open the ceremonies at 11 a.m. on April 25.

Freshmen and sophomores must attend a convocation which will be held Saturday morning, April 27, at 10:30 o'clock.

Attendance Mandatory

Thus each section of the Undergraduate Division is required to attend the one exercise to which it has been assigned. A student's failure to appear at his respective exercise will result in his being penalized five (5) class absences.

Student assembly cards will be issued in religion classes during the week of April 15. Any Catholic students not taking religion must pick up cards in the Chaplain's Office in Mendel Hall.

Archbishop Presides At Mass

The solemn Pontifical Mass opening the dedication will be celebrated in the Field House. The Most Reverend John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., Archbishop of Philadelphia, will preside; the Most Reverend J. Carroll McCormick, Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia, will be the celebrant and the preacher will be the Most Reverend Fulton J. Sheen, Auxiliary Bishop of New York.

On Thursday afternoon and Friday morning and afternoon, symposia dealing with the contribution of law to the cause of peace, international and domestic will be held. "Peace is ... ("Peace is the tranquility of order"—Saint Augustine).

Renowned Speakers

Among those leading the discussions will be the Right Reverend Monsignor Bela Varga, former president of the Hungarian Parliament; the Honorable Bernard M. Shanley, Secretary to President Eisenhower; Frank C. Nash, former Assistant Secretary of Defense; Professor Neill H. Alford of the University of Virginia; Professor Karl N. Llewellyn of the University of Chicago; and Dean Ralph H. Kharas of Sycracuse University.

Others include Professor Sheldon D. Elliott, Director of the Institute of Judicial Admnistration, New York University; Professor Godfrey P. Schmidt of Fordham University; Judge Harold Stevens of the Supreme Court of New York and the Reverend William J. Kenealy, S.J,. former Dean of the Law School, Boston College.

On Thursday night, a general open house will be held at Garey Hall with full opportunity afforded to inspect all of the facilities of the new building.

On Friday evening an invitation dinner will be held at the Warwick Hotel, honoring Chief Justice Jones of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. The Chief Justice will speak.

Chief Justice Warren To Speak

Saturday morning, April 27th, an academic convocation will be held at the Villanova Field House

Beta Gamma Society Wins B'klyn Debate

Beta Gamma Debating Society won seven out of 11 at the Brooklyn College Debating Tournament. The victories were over Union College, New Haven State Teachers, Rutgers, Johns Hopkins, Notre Dame of Staten Island, Worcester Polytechnical Institute and Rennsallear Polytechnical Institute. Losses were to Columbia, Corar-Neumann, Tennessee and Temple.

Jack McGee, Jerry LaKarnafeaux, Bob O'Connor and Oz Scogna participated in the tournament. Dr. Roland Houde was Villanova's representative judge at the tournament.

On March 22 and 23 Villanova debaters Jack Sarafin and John McGee participated in the West Point Regional tournament at St. Joseph's College. The win and place teams will go to West Point for the National debate tournament on April 24, 25, and 26.

The over-all record now stands at 47 wins and 15 defeats.

Dressler Named SEA Head

On March 14 the Student Education Association held elections for permanent officers.

Richard Dressler '58 was elected president and Joe Sapone, '59, was picked for vice-president. Jim Fox, '58, and John Hughes, '59, were elected secretary and treasurer respectively.

As his first official act as President Dick Dressler appointed the chairmen of the standing committees. John O'Donnell, '59, was appointed to head the important "Program" committee.

Parliamentarian for the organization and chairman of the Ways and Means committee is junior Joe Wheeler.

The elected officers were approved by the Administration and a program for the rest of the year is being planned.

Dressler urged all Education students not already members of the S.E.A. to join as soon as possible as it will benefit them now and when they graduate.

Mr. Thomas B. McCabe, President of the Scott Paper Co., awards junior Lou Pinto a Scott Foundation scholarship, worth $1000 a year, at a recent ceremony at the Hotel Barclay, Phila. Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., Director of Villanova's Development Fund looks on. The scholarship is based on a "Rhodes scholar" college career. (See story right.)

Fellowships Are Offered U. S. Students

Adventure and education will be offered to Catholic college students again this summer through the second Mexico tour sponsored by the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

In a forty-five day itinerary are included such points of interest as Moredia, Guadalajara, Guanajuato, Taxco, Acapulco, Pueblo, Veracruz and of course Mexico City. The tour will provide extensive opportunity for personal contact with and study of Mexican culture in this "Viaje de Amistad" - journey of friendship.

The tour is available to college students only.

Applications and information regarding the tour may be obtained by writing direct to Joseph Schmitz, S.M. University Cultural Tours Inc., St. Mary's University, San Antonio, Texas.

Brothers David John and Denis Luke, novices at Christian Brothers Novitiate, Ammendale, Md., reminisce about their good old days as Villanova students. The boys, who matriculated at Villanova in the Class of 1949, left last October to enter religious life. They will pronounce first vows within a year.

Villanova Graduate:

Fr. Warne Moderates T'n'T; Author of Musical, 'Utah'

A new moderator has been appointed to watch over the fortunes of the Turf and Tinsel Society. He is the Rev. James Warne, O.S.A., a 1952 graduate of Villanova. Shortly after his arrival on campus — Feb. 5 — Father Warne was named to succeed the Rev. John P. Maher, O.S.A. who has been re-assigned to Atlantic City.

T'nT's new moderator is no stranger to the field of musical comedy, having had practical experience of his own in that line. While in residence at St. Mary's Hall, Father Warne was co-author—with two other seminarians—of an original musical, "Utah." The show, with its 21 original songs, was presented for the enjoyment of the priests and other seminarians. "Utah" has been since produced at several colleges with another name and some revisions.

Hidden Talent Discovered

To Father, participation in an organization such as the T'n'T definitely has its benefits for participants. There are many opportunities to profit from these activities, the moderator believes; ultimately it is up to each individual to extract the most benefit.

Those taking part in the musical may acquire poise and polish hitherto lacking in themselves. Even more important is the fact that previously hidden talent may be discovered; the opposite is also true—the disillusionment of those who fancy they have talent. Material gains may be more apparent in an endeavor of this sort, says Father Warne, but the use of God-given talents may reap spiritual rewards.

Teacher and Counsellor

Father Warne thinks that a person learns to keep in step (especially in the chorus) with the others by joining in school group activities such as the Turf and Tinsel.

Besides the T'n'T, Father Warne's own activities include teaching sophomore religion and acting as the resident counsellor for the famed, vociferous second floor of Austin Hall. It is perhaps at the latter position that Father has become best known in the brief space of time that he has been at Villanova.

Mullin In Novelty Role

Willing to plug the current Turf and Tinsel production, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," scheduled for May 9-10-11, Father Warne adds that he is looking forward to the T'n'T presentation. If Father and the rest of the Villanova campus are on the alert for novelties in the show, junior Dan Mullin as Aphrodite in a black satin slit skirt promises alone to be well worth the price of admission.

Lou Pinto Wins Scott Award

Lou Pinto, Villanova junior and mainstay on the varsity swimming team was among seven students from six colleges along the eastern seabord to receive a scholarship certificate of $1000 from the Scott Paper Company last week at the Hotel Barkley, Chester, Pa.

The Scott academic scholarships were presented by the Company's president, Thomas B. McCabe.

With Pinto when he accepted the award was the Rev. Francis X. N. Mc Guire, O.S.A., director of the Villanova development foundation.

To Aid Colleges

Mr. McCabe pointed out that industry must continue in the future, as in the past, to look to the colleges and universities of America for the large share of its personnel.

He went on to say that it was toward the end of encouraging and assisting colleges and universities in meeting the rising costs of higher learning that a number of scholarship awards were created by the Scott Foundation.

These awards are set up in 14 colleges and universities throughout the country. Students are selected from the sophomore class to receive a Scott Foundation award during their junior and senior years.

$1000 Scholarship

These scholarships amount to $1000 for each academic year. Recognizing that that tuition does not cover the full course of a student's education, the Foundation also makes a separate, unrestricted contribution of $1000 to the college during each year in which one or more scholarship awards is effective.

To be eligible for the award, a student must have signified an intention of pursuing a career in business or industry and must have specifically demonstrated in extracurricular activities, as well as in the classroom, those qualities associated with the well-known "Rhodes Scholar."

Recipients of the award at the colleges selected by the Foundation are chosen by a committee composed equally of faculty and students.

Communion Breakfast Honors Late Fr. Lozano

The annual Spanish Club Dinner Dance will be replaced this year by a communion breakfast in honor of the late Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, it was announced by club president Mike Ford last week.

Father Lozano was Spanish Club Moderator until his sudden death in December.

The breakfast will take place Sunday, March 31 at the Viking Inn in Ardmore, Pa., after nine o'clock Mass in St. Mary's Hall.

Commemorative Wreath

Gene Donohue, club secretary, has been chosen general chairman for the affair. He stated that all arrangements were nearing completion. He also announced that after the special Mass a commemorative wreath will be placed on Father Lozano's grave in the University Cemetery by the members of the Spanish Club.

Members will then proceed to Ardmore for the breakfast.

Mr. Vito DiVincenzo, new Spanish Club Moderator, will serve as toastmaster for the breakfast. The Principle speaker will be Dr. Teodomiro de Aquilar of the Spanish Consul.

Awards to be Made

Awards will also be made at the breakfast to two members of the Spanish Club, yet unnamed, for their prize winning essay in Spanish and in English about the great Spanish writer Cervantes.

Highlighting the morning will be the posthumous awarding of the Cross of Isabella the Catholic to Father Lozano. The award will be made by the Spanish Consul for the Government of Spain.

Ford also anounced that a meeting of the Club will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 in 203 C and F to nominate officers for the coming year. Final arrangements for the communion breakfast will also be discussed.

School Receives Money Grant from New York Bank

Villanova is the recipient of a $1200 grant-in-aid recently from the First National City Bank of New York. It was one of 109 grants given by the bank to colleges and universities throughout the country.

Totaling $171,600, the grants are based on the number of college graduates who have been in the employ of the bank for five years or who have become officers, and they average $400 per employee this year. Villanova was eligible for three awards.

The grants are unrestricted as to use and are made to non-tax supported, four-year, degree-granting institutions.

It is the intention to repeat these grants each year that the employee remains in the active service of the bank. The current contributions have been made on the basis of 429 eligible employees.

Two lowly pledges of Phi Kappa Pi, Paul Kuhn and Tom Weiss, show the loneliness of aspiring members to the Engineering fraternity during pledging. With their T squares and caps they appear ready for all types of engineering duties.

Jake Krupa Suffers Bad Heart Attack

Mr. Jacob S. Krupa, set designer for the Belle Masque Drama Society for the past ten years, suffered a severe heart attack in his home on March 16. After spending the night at home he was taken to the Bryn Mawr hospital and is now there in very serious condition.

Jake, a familiar figure around campus, was the chief maintainence man in St. Mary's Hall, and moderator of the Villanova Chapter of Alpha Psi Omega, National Honorary Drama Fraternity.

Jake has two brothers in the Augustinian Order, the Rev. George Krupa, former Villanova professor, now stationed at the Augustinian Mission in Japan, and the Rev. William Krupa, past director of Belle Masque, now of Lawrence, Mass.

This year Jake was busy helping the Junior Prom Decorations committee as well as designing and supervising the construction of the set for the spring Masque production.

He has also worked on the Shamokinaki Dance decorations ever since its inception in 1953. Jake is known for his pleasant disposition and friendly word for all those who come into contact with him.

CYTO Dates Set; Chaplains Named

The Catholic Youth Travel Office, in conjunction with its two sponsoring federations, NFCCS and NCCF, has recently announced the sailing dates for the entire series of 1957 European tours together with naming the priests who have been appointed as tour chaplains.

Now in its eighth year of operation, the NFCCS-NCCF Travel Program allows groups of Catholic collegians to view the highlights of Europe at low cost. For example, CYTO Tour A takes the traveler through England, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and France for a minimal $695.

Most popular is Tour A's longest cousin, Tour D. In 70 days, including 51 days in Europe, the tour-goer sees ten nations: Ireland, England, Holland, Germany Switzerland, Austria, Italy, Spain, Portugal and France.

Literary Business Meeting Tonight; Movie Next Week

All Literary Club members as well as any student interested in joining the new organization are urged to attend an important business meeting tonight in 207 C and F at 7:30 p.m.

Membership cards will be distributed to those who have paid the semester dues of $2. Those who have not yet paid the fee for admission may do so at tonight's meeting and then obtain their membership cards.

An outline of the remaining club meetings for the semester will be discussed and suggestions for next year's meetings may be submitted by members.

A full length feature film, sponsored by the Literary Club, will be shown next Wednesday night to which all students are invited. The movie will be shown in C and F auditorium.

Several prominent speakers have been contacted to appear at future meetings and already Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of Villanova's Law School, has consented to discuss "The 19th Century English Novel" on May 8.

Students coming to tonight's meeting are reminded to use the rear stairs in Mendel so as not to disturb Evening Division classes.

Educational Dilemmas Are Voiced

simply because my experience with them was limited to obscure classroom lectures and insufficient small-group discussions.

While I was in college I was a very strong exponent of the small discussion group method and I still am. Incidentally, a group of friends at home are establishing a University. Yes!

Few Will Disagree

No buildings, professors, or presidents, just students and perhaps a pitcher of beer on the table at all times!

We meet anywhere, anytime anyone has an idea to speak upon.

All we demand is originality in thought, a constant effort to read the classics, and, of course a dollar for the "draught of vintage cooled a long age in the deep delv'd earth."

I believe this to be a healthy way to assail the great questions but many times we find ourselves against the wall of ignorance.

Can you suggest any basic works that we might begin with that will help to establish a firm foundation for right reasoning in the study of the various philosophical systems? I would indeed appreciate any advice you might have to offer.

(Name Withheld)

These problems are indeed serious ones and ones we may all have to solve if our future experiences are similar to those of the author of the letter.

Student comments and analyses of the problems may be sent to the Villanovan or left in the mailbox of the moderator of the philsophy club, Doctor Roland Houde, in Mendel Hall.

A summary of the problems and solutions will be printed in a future issue of the Villanovan.

Syracuse Offers Tuition Grants

The College of Law of Syracuse University announces a program of tuition scholarships available upon application to students who apply and are admitted to the three-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

A limited number of scholarships equivalent to full tuition will be awarded on the basis of outstanding promise and demonstrated financial need.

An additional number of partial tuition grants will be awarded to students of promise who have difficulty in meeting the entire tuition payment.

While all tuition grants are made for the academic year, such grants are renewable in the student's second and third years of residence if the students' need continues and if his progress in the law curriculum is satisfactory.

Application forms for grants and loans for the academic year 1957-1958 must be filed on or before April 19, 1957.

Parish Life Preparation Confraternity Day Theme

The NFCCS Philadelphia Regional Committee for the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, will present the second annual College CCD Day at Holy Family College this Sunday from 12:30 to 5:00 p.m.

The theme of the day will be "CCD—Preparation of the College Student for Parish Life." All Catholic college students are invited.

The program features addresses by the Rev. Bertrand J. Gulnerich, Field Representative of the National CCD Center in Washington, D.C., and Stephen Amato, National CCD Commission Chairman for the NFCCS.

Father Gulnerich will speak on "Why the CCD on the College Campus?" and Mr. Amato will explain the organization and activities of the CCD on the college campus.

Group Sessions Held

Following the speeches will be five work-group sessions to examine the program of the Confraternity. Each group will be chaired by an experienced worker in the phase of CCD activity under discussion. Two students from local colleges will speak on each panel.

This type of program is designed to stimulate interest in the CCD for the college student. The chief means of awakening such interest will be by participation in the work groups. Each college in the area has been requested to contribute at least ten students, so that two may attend each of the five groups.

Interested Villanova students should register in the Student Council office.

After the work groups the Archdiocesan Director of the CCD, Rev. Charles Mynaugh, will summarize the results of the day's discussion and will speak on spiritual motivation of CCD workers.

Teaching Class Held

At the close of the program, a special demonstration of a CCD catechist teaching a class of children will be presented.

Miss Mary Ann Vickers of Chestnut Hill College will be in charge of the demonstration.

Unfortunately, attempts to establish a CCD college unit at Villanova have thus far been unsuccessful. Interested Villanovans are urged to attend and take part in the CCD Day activities. Another effort will be made to organize a Villanova CCD program following next Sunday's meeting.

Easter Retreat

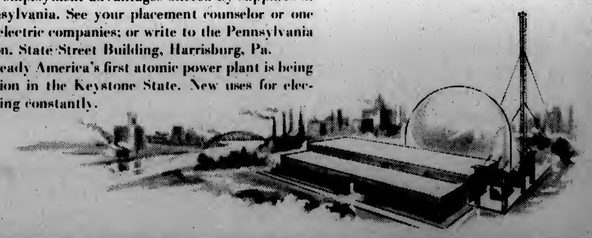
All upperclassmen will receive schedules and additional information in the near future concerning the retreat, the Chaplain's Office announced.

HOP ONTO THIS MAGIC CARPET FOR OPPORTUNITIES UNLIMITED



Nowhere are there greater challenges or opportunities for engineers than in the electric industry. And this will be just as true in the years ahead as it is today.

The development of atomic energy, the marvels of electronics, and the application of automation to everyday problems have created unprecedented expansion of electrical facilities. And this comes at a time when the industry has more than doubled its capacity and growth in the past ten years—and will double again in the next ten!

The electrical utilities of Pennsylvania offer tremendous job opportunities for young engineers with strong imaginations, initiative and ability.

Get the facts on employment advantages offered by suppliers of electricity in Pennsylvania. See your placement counselor or one of Pennsylvania's electric companies; or write to the Pennsylvania Electric Association, State Street Building, Harrisburg, Pa.

Don't delay. Already America's first atomic power plant is being readied for operation in the Keystone State. New uses for electricity are developing constantly.

MARY ANN CELLINI

All day, all night Mary Ann is the hue and cry of Denis Forrest, a Chemical Engineer who will escort this lovely miss to the Junior Week festivities. Nineteen, with brown hair and brown eyes, 5-2 Mary Ann lives in Upper Darby, Pa., where she is a secretary. Her date is also from Upper Darby.

KATHLEEN COWAN

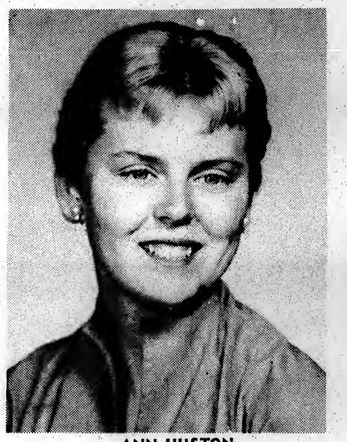
The first coed enters the race as the escort of C&F Marketing major Dick Poli. Kathleen, a nursing student (what else!), has dark brown hair and green eyes, and is 5-5. The twenty year old lovely lives in Lansdowne, Pa. Her date lives in Havertown, a short drive from Lansdowne.

FLORENCE DIIOIA

A Lansdowne, Pa. beauty, Florence will be the escort of Michael Diorio, a premedical student in the Arts and Science school. Chestnut hair and hazel eyes are two outstanding complements to Florence's 5-5, 115 pound frame. She is 17 years old. Her date lives in Vineland, N.J.

EILEEN FARRELL

Twenty year old Eileen is the Junior Week Queen entry of Frank McHugh, a C&F Marketing major. A resident of Haverford, the 5-8, chestnut-haired lovely is a junior at Immaculata College, where she majors in Home Economics. Her date also lives locally, in North Philadelphia.



CLAUDETTE GRAVES

Claudette is the entry of Olympic star, high jumper Phil Reavis, Education Major. A resident of Cambridge, Mass., the 20-year-old hometown sweetheart of the junior trackman is 5'5", has hair and eyes of brown, and is employed as a secretary for the John Hancock Insurance Co., in Boston.

ELAINE HALKA

A private secretary, Elaine is the date of Pre-Med student Vince Giardino. Eighteen years old, and a petite 5 feet even, Elaine's blue eyes and blonde hair are good qualifications for the Junior Queen contest. She lives in Garfield, N.J., and her date resides in nearby Clifton, quite convenient.

ANN HUSTON

The first entry from Harcum College makes her debut this week as the date of Vincent Caracio, a Finance major. Ann, who is nineteen years old, is 5-6, 120 pounds, with blonde hair. She lives locally, unlike her date, who hails from Roseto, Pa., when he isn't down at Harcum.

JUDY KENNEDY

A sure'n Judy is as fair an Irish Colleen as one's likely to see, and if you doubt it, just ask her date, Mechanical Engineer Buddy Christmann. Brown hair and hazel eyes, and a 5-3 frame, go well with Judy's 107 pounds. A junior in Marymount, Judy lives in Rockville Centre, L.I.

MARIE LAMAY

Winner of a Scott Paper Co. scholarship Lou Pinto has entered Marie in the Queen contest. The 5-5 secretary at the Eastern State Psychiatric Institute, who just turned 21, has brown hair and eyes. She lives in Drexel Hill. Pinto is a Mechanical Engineer and lives in Marie's neighborhood.

JANICE McLAUGHLIN

Hard-working Janice, a social studies student at St. Joseph's by night and a receptionist by day, is a 5-5, 125 pound resident of Philadelphia who will be escorted by Bert Gratz, a Political Science major. She has blue eyes and blonde hair and is twenty years old. Her date is from Collegeville, Pa.

JEANNE MELHAM

Black-haired and pretty Miss Jeanne Melham will be escorted to the Junior Week activities by Industrial Administration major Tony Lisa. Jeanne hails from Pittsburgh, Pa., where she works as a laboratory technician. Hazel-eyed and 20, she stands 5'5" and weighs 115 pounds.

ROBERTA NEEDHAM

A fellow Syracusean, Roberta will be on the arm of varsity guard Mike DeLucia. Eighteen years old, she works for the Syracuse Telephone Co., and is 5-6, with brown hair and blue eyes. Mike, who isn't nearly so pretty as his date, is a C&F Accounting major when he isn't playing football.

PEGGY OTT

Another local girl, Peggy is a secretary in a Philadelphia firm. Her 110 pounds are delicately spread over a 5-4 frame, which makes her date, Engineering student Joe McGuckin, a happy man. With brown hair and hazel eyes, Peggy lives in Mayfair, Philadelphia. Joe also lives in Philly.

JOAN SHERIDAN

Joan is the date of Bob Mahoney, an Industrial Administration major. One of several local entries, Joan hails from nearby Ardmore, and is a laboratory technician. Vital statistics read impressively: blonde hair, blue eyes, 5-3 tall, and 20 years old. Her date lives in West Hempstead, L. I.

JEAN SHINA

Miss Jean Shina, 18-year-old brunette lovely, will waltz through Junior Week with Hank Sieban, a marketing major. Jean calls Floral Park, L.I. her home and works there as a bookkeeper in a bank. Standing 5'4", this hazel-eyed lass will nicely decorate the Prom and Dinner Dance.

KAY STOVER

Twenty year old Kay, a secretary for the Bureau of Internal Revenue in her hometown of Reading, Pa., will be with Frank Simon during Junior Week. Five-foot-two with eyes of brown, and hair to match, Kay weighs 105 pounds. Her date, who is a Finance major in the C&F school, is from West Lawn, Pa.

LAURA MARIE TORCHICI

A Gwynedd-Mercy graduate now studying technology at Lankenau Hospital, Laura is the date of John Coffey, a pre-Law C&Fer. Blonde hair and blue eyes, and an inch above the magic 5-2 height, Laura lives in Overbrook, Pa., which is convenient for her date, who also lives there.

MARGARET WALSH

A Gywedd-Mercy High School senior, Margaret is 18 years old and stands 5-7. She possesses reddish brown hair and hazel eyes. The June graduate makes her home in Philadelphia but her date for the upcoming Junior Week festivities is Norm Hudy, Electrical Engineer, from Pittsburgh.

Jack O'Reilly, WPEN disc jockey, explains a point to Ed Shea, station manager of WVIL, while Gene Ruane, university public relations director, listens. This coffee break followed O'Reilly's talk to members of WVIL last week.

Dr. Nova Accepts IRS Post

The International Relations Society of Villanova will hold its most unusual meeting in several years tomorrow. The meeting, which will be held in Commodore John Barry Hall, will not be graced by a speaker as has been the procedure in the past. This time there will be movies in the offering.

Another unusual feature of the meeting will be the introduction of the new moderator, Dr. Fritz Nova. He succeeds Mr. Henry Rofinot.

Father's Day To Be May 11

Fathers' Day, last official function of the Senior Class before graduation, will take place Saturday, May 11 ,announces Dick Mason, chairman of the affair.

The day will consist of Mass in the late morning, out of doors at the Grotto, weather permitting, lunch, a baseball game, a track meet, dinner in Dougherty Hall and a Turf and Tinsel show in the Field House after dinner.

Navy Advantages To Be Explained

Lt. Comdr. Joseph Sobien, of the Procurement Office at Willow Grove Naval Air Station, will explain the operations of the Aviation Officer Candidate Program to seniors on April 3.

The talk will particularly be directed to those seniors who are interested in flying with the Navy as an officer after graduation. Students may obtain advice from Lt. Comdr. Sobien between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. in Dougherty Hall.

Candidate Requirements

Requirements for the Aviation Officer Candidate are that the candidate must be in good physical condition, have 20/20 vision and be in good scholastic standing. In addition to an interview, mental and physical examinations will be given.

The students who pass these examinations will be recommended for the training program which will be conducted at Pensacola, Fla., where sixteen weeks will be spent in training. Then the student will receive his commission.

Student Council Asks Addition To Discipline Board

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE

A proposal that a Student Council member be appointed to the University Board of Discipline was presented at the Council meeting Monday night.

The Council also refused seats to ASME and ASCE due to the organizations' failure to comply with the Council rules for admission.

All organizations that wish to retain their votes on Council resolutions must submit written reports by April 15. This is in compliance with the Student Council constitution as recorded in the University handbook.

Retreat Selection

Paul Laughlin, Junior Class resident representative, proposed that seniors and juniors be permitted to choose which retreat they desired to attend.

Bill Christy, sophomore dayhop representative, offered recommendations on the new suggestion box. He urged that the Council read the suggestions and submit the best ones for approval. All letters must be signed to merit consideration.

Area Clubs

Pat Nicholson, Spirit Committee Chairman, spoke on the recently-presented motion for the formation of Area Clubs. He urged the formation of a committee to organize the clubs. Council endorsed the club idea if acceptable to the administration.

Relay Tickets

The Council announced purchase of a block of tickets for the Penn Relays to be held the end of April at Franklin Field on the Penn campus.

Strictly Opinion

By PAUL FINAN

There is nothing very extraordinary about Augusta, Maine. It might be called a very typical medium-sized New England town. The biggest news these days up in Augusta is not very new or startling either. A legal question is developing there on an old and controversial issue.

"Should public funds, raised by taxes, be used to benefit Church schools?" The issue, more specifically, is whether the city of Augusta should provide bus transportation for children traveling to parochial schools.

PAUL FINAN

One of the Nation's principles for over 150 years has been the separation of Church and State, and this is the argument that has been used by those people who are opposed to state aid to the Church.

Principle Weakened By Court Decisions

But yet, the principle has been weakened in the past 30 years, especially by two unprecedented desisions by the United States Supreme Court. One of these, in 1930, upheld a Louisiana Law providing free textbooks to children in Church and other private schools. The other upheld a New Jersey Law in 1947 which authorized use of tax money to pay bus fares of children in Catholic schools.

Last December, the Catholic parents of Augusta obtained a referendum vote on the question and won the majority in favor of their request. The city of Augusta had taken no action until the parents of the Catholic children threatened to withdraw the latter from parochial schools and enter them in the city's public school system unless bus service was provided.

Disastrous Effects Would Ensue

If the threat of the parents was ever carried out it would mean that many new students would have to enter an already overcrowded public school system. New teachers would have to be hired. New classrooms or possibly a new schoolbuilding would have to be provided.

Supporters of bus service for parochial schools point out that this service would cost the city over $200,000 a year to take the parochial students into the public system.

Augusta Case Still Not Settled

If the Augusta case goes beyond the Maine Supreme Court, which might happen, the question will again become a national issue. The United States Supreme Court will again be asked to decide just how far communities may go in granting funds for parochial school use.

Opera-Classica Favorite Stars On Telephone Hour

The Opera Classica Society traveled to New York City on March 18 to hear and see Renata Tebaldi, internationally acclaimed dramatic-lyric soprano, as guest on the Telephone Hour at Carnegie Hall.

Before the broadcast, Mr. Tom Shirley, announced his gratitude for the presence of 25 students from Villanova University.

Vorhees Conducts

Mr. Vorhees, distinguished conductor of the Bell Telephone Orchestra, led the orchestral arrangements of music by Mascagni, Puccini and Montemezzi. The melodies and style of Mascagni and Puccini were evident in the interpretations of the Intermezzi from L'Amico Fritz and Suer Angelica.

Finally, Renata Tebaldi appeared and the audience responded with a spontaneous applause. Miss Tebaldi sang "Io sono l'umile ancella" from Cilea's Adriana Lecouvreur and "Son pochi fiori" from Mascagni's L'Amico Fritz. Shouts of "bravo" and "Viva Tebaldi" could be heard even from the amphitheater.

Meets Tonight

The Opera Classica Music Society will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall. The offerings for the evening are Giordano's "Andrea Chenier" with Renata Tebaldi and Jose Soler and Tchiakovsky's "Swan Lake."

"Opera for Those Who Hate Opera" on station WVIL will present "Louise" by Charpentier tomorrow at 10:15 p.m. On Monday, April 1, the selections will be "L'Elisir D'Amore" by Donizetti. Guiseppe Di Stefano and Hilde Gueden are the featured soloists.

Second LYNX Edition Out Next Week; Essays, Reviews, Conversation Featured

The second edition of Vilanova's magazine, the Lynx, will be on sale next week. Under the capable direction of the Lynx Circulation Manager, sophomore arts student Gerry Sullivan, copies will be on sale in the Pie Shoppe for day students and in the dorms for the residents.

Additional copies wil be available in the Book Store and copies will be made directly available to the Evening Division students.

Diversity of material and experimentation is the keynote of this edition. This issue will feature for the first time a conversation with a famous personality, in this case Ireland's number one export Ron Delany. A one act play is also featured.

Short stories by Ed Karrer, Bob Strayton, Gerry LaKarnafeaux and John Kennedy will be seen as well as non-fiction articles by David MacDermott and Richard Madara.

An art review on a Toulouse-Lautrec painting has been done by new illustrator Alan Guimmaris and a review on the "Famous Chinese Short Stories" has been written by junior engineering student George Fraunces.

The publication date of the next issue is entirely dependent upon the amount of material submitted in the next month. Managing Editor Bob Strayton said that a campus of Villanova's size should easily produce enough literary talent for three Lynx issues in a year. The magazine hopes to become more and more an outlet for the artistic talent of the entire campus.

Jesuit to Discuss St. Augustine at Villanova Forum

On Wednesday, April 3, Rev. Paul Henry, S. J. will speak at the Villanova Forum on the topic "The Originality of Augustine." The speech will be given at 8:30 p.m. in the C and F Auditorium.

Father Henry is of the Institut Catholique, Paris, and is presently Visiting Professor of Philosophy at the University of Pennsylvania, where he lectures on Plotinus, Greek Philosophy and Middle Platonism.

World-famous as an expert on Plotinus, Father Henry is the editor of the definitive text of the Enneads of Plotinus.

Plotinus was a student of Plato prior to Augustine's time, and there is interesting speculation on the extent of his influence on Augustine.

Goodyear First President Of Semper Fidelis Society

Villanova Law Student Chosen CALSA Vice-Pres.

Anthony Piccotti, of the second-year class at Villanova Law School, was elected vice-president of the Third Circuit American Law Student Association at the seventh annual Joint Circuit Conference of the Third and Eleventh Circuits held March 16 and 17 at Garey Hall, new home of the Villanova School of Law.

This is the highest office in the Third Circuit, which takes in the areas of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and the Virgin Islands.

Over 100 law students from American University, Catholic University, Dickinson University, Georgetown University, George Washington University Howard University, Rutgers University (South Jersey Division), University of Pittsburgh and Villanova University attended the affair.

Thomas J. Feeney, Jr., of the Villanova School of Law, was chairman of this year's conference.

Facenda Medal

School before entering Villanova, and later settled in Drexel Hill, where he now lives with his wife and son, John, Jr.

The selection of Facenda as the 1957 recipient of the St. Augustine Medal came about after lengthy consideration of several candidates chosen last fall by a committee consisting of Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., Villanovan Moderator, Mr. Eugene Ruane, Public Relations Director, Mr. James T. Quirk, TV Guide Editor and first recipient of the St. Augustine Medal, and Thomas E. Smith, Editor of the Villanovan.

Personal Assets Considered

Nominees were judged on their contribution to the communications world, moral character, personality, and present position. The final decision, which resulted in Facenda's selection, came about a month ago by unanimous vote of the committee.

The St. Augustine Medal is so-named in honor of St. Augustine, the patron saint of printers, from whom the Augustinian Order gets its name.

Astronomy Club Meets Tomorrow

Those interested may still join the Astronomy Club at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Physics Lab in Mendel Hall.

The club members will discuss comets and the planet, Jupiter, which can be seen best in the spring sky.

A trip to the Franklin Institute is also planned for the near future.

Auditions for the Villanova Singers will be held tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock in the C & F auditorium, it has been announced by Charles Ross, president of the Singers.

Those accepted as new members will begin their membership next September.

Jack Goodyear, junior arts major, was elected first president of the newest organization on campus, the Semper Fidelis Society.

At the March 14 meeting, Bill Wescott, senior engineering student, was chosen vice-president along with sophomore C and F students, Robert Simons and George Riehle as secretary and treasurer respectively.

All the elected officers have completed at least one summer training period at Quantico, Va. Goodyear, Simons and Riehle are PLC's, while Wescott is an NROTC Marine.

Dual Membership Established

The moderator of the Semper Fidelis Society, Captain John Grace, U.S.M.C., addressed a group of about fifty students at the meeting explaining the aims of the Society and the qualifications for membership as contained in the organization's constitution. According to Captain Grace, there will be two types of membership in the Society, active and associate.

Active membership will be open to any Villanovan enrolled in a Marine officer training program and any member of the United States Marine Corps stationed at Villanova. Associate membership will be open to interested members of Villanova's faculty, alumni and student body.

Captain Grace, in conclusion, reiterated the purpose of the Society, "the physical, professional, and moral preparation of the members for their responsibilities as Marine Officers." After Captain Grace's introduction, the constitution was ratified and elections were held.

Contact Committee Named

The nucleus of a contact committee was appointed, which included Bill Ganz, Bob Arkinson, John McNickolas and Bruce Irving. This committee's function will be to personally contact members and inform them of forthcoming activities.

Marines to Speak

Meetings of the Society will be held at least once monthly and will usually consist of informative lectures by speakers with Marine Corps background on topics of practical value for future Marine Officers.

Other activities of the Society will be aimed at the fostering of a better understanding of the Marine Corps at Villanova.

Chevrolet Wins Coveted Manufacturers' Trophy at Daytona Beach as "best performing U. S. automobile"!

Want facts about performance?

Then look at the official figures from NASCAR's* internationally famous Daytona Beach competition for stock cars. Here's what you'll find: Chevrolet, in two weeks of blistering competition, proved itself as America's Number One performance car. Nothing in the low-price field could touch it.

No other car, regardless of price, scored such a sweep. And Chevy walked away with the famous Manufacturers' Trophy, hands down!

The 1957 Chevrolet is, by all odds, the most astonishing performer ever produced in the low-price field. Best of all, this superiority isn't limited to just a few extra-cost high-performance models. Every type of Chevy—from the six-cylinder models right up to the 283-horsepower "Super Turbo-Fire" V8's, from the single-carburetor V8's with Powerglide to the stick-shift "270's"—is a championship car.

Trackmen Close Dazzling Season

Star In Chicago and Cleveland Meets, Delany Finishes Undefeated; Relayers Set New Record, Bragg Beats Richards

By STAN LUPA

Memo: To all students from the Midwest who complained that no one out there had ever heard of Villanova and her athletic squads—they have now!

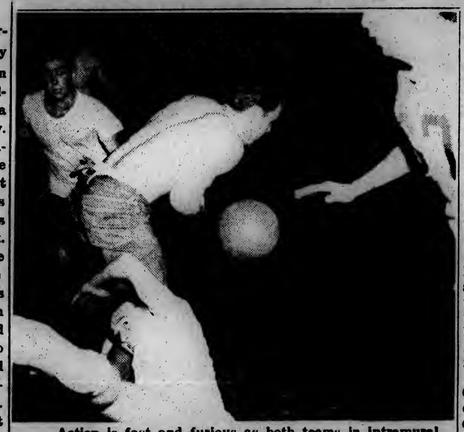
The team that may well be the finest athletic unit in Villanova's history, Jim Elliott's track competitors, closed out the indoor season in a blaze of power with awe-inspiring performances in Chicago and Cleveland in the past two weeks.

Wildcats Dominate Meets

The national indoor AAU and IC4A champions made their first appearance before Midwestern track enthusiasts the type of typical Villanova show that will have them clamoring for more. As always, the amazing Wildcat machine dominated each meet.

In the Cleveland Knights of Columbus meet, which officially closed the indoor season last Friday evening, Ron Delany closed his second year indoor mile competition undefeated, as he romped home in the comparatively slow time of 4:10.4. It was a patented Delany race, as the Irishman allowed others to set the pace and then moved ahead to win easily at the end of the third quarter.

Relayers Gain Attention



Other Wildcat victories came through the efforts of Charley Jenkins' 1:12 clocking in the 600, Phil Reavis' 6 foot, seven inch high jump, and the 3:19.5 timing of the mile relayers, who are starting to draw as much attention as Villanova's individual standouts. Combining for one of the fastest indoor miles of the season were Gene Maliff, John Furlinger, Ed Collymore and Al Peterson.

Charley Stead and Don Bragg tied for second place in the high jump and pole vault respectively, while Alex Breckenridge took third in the two mile run.

The real standout performances, however, came in the Chicago Daily News Relays.

Delany set a mile record for the meet, covering the distance in 4:03.8, only two tenths of a second slower than the world's indoor record. Ron ran his usual race, holding back until the last lap of the track, but an unusual-

Wildcat Sport Roundup

By JACK CURTIN

Looking around the campus sports scene:

Not that everyone, even the group in charge of the University trophy cases, has learned how to spell his name, Ron Delany is really getting to be known. An appearance on the Ed Sullivan television show and a syndicated feature on St. Patrick's day added to his prestige in the past few weeks . . . The track team as a whole, however, seems to be suffering from a siege of anonmity. Although newspaper coverage has been good, the national magazines that purport to cover sports world have almost ignored these headline making wonders . . . Al Griffith, Villanova's spunky court guard, was the only Wildcat named by Philadelphia sportswriters to the Big Five all-city basketball team. The slight Griffith was one of four all-city players who hovered around the six foot mark. This was a big year for the little man in basketball, as even the country's All-American ratings featured a six-footer, Chet Forte of Columbia . . . It was surprising to this writer ,and many others in the area, that Guy Rodgers made no higher than third team on many of the major All-American round-ups. Anyone who watched the Temple ace in action during the season should be willing to dispute this decision. Rodgers did, however, gain another coveted award. He was named the best visiting player to appear in Madison Square Garden this season by Manhattan sports writers . . . A look at the basketball roster convinces one that the two sport athlete has not disappeared from the college scene. Gridiron stars Jim Grazione, John Bauer, and Rollie West and courtmen Jack Kelly and George Emma are all out for the squad. Kelly turned the trick last year—serving as a court guard for Al Severance and a moundsman for Art Mahan . . . Speaking of Mahan, it will be interesting to watch what he can do with this year's squad. He lost his whole outfield and leading hitters at the end of last year . . . By the way, let's hope that Jim Elliott can turn out a team to compare with his track squad. Hmm, there's a two letter coach, come to think of it . . . There are quite a few students on campus who are working actively to initiate new intercollegiate sports at Villanova. Wrestling and crew both have a group of ardent supporters . . . A final word of congratulations to the Villanova swimming team is in order. The aquamen posted a 9-1 record this season against some rough competition. It's been a swift ride to the top for coach Ed Geisz and his boys since the sport was reactivated in 1954 . . . Add another pat on the back for the Intramural Council. This writer feels that they have done an excellent job this year with the facilities available . . . Finally a memo to those still interested in finding out the official administration stand on the football question. Pick up a copy of the latest issue of Villanova Alumnus. Inside is an article by Father Kemme which explains, in part, the official stand to the old grads.

Courtmen's Choice:

Rodgers and Hundley Top 'Cat's All-Opponent Squad

Last week the Villanovan polled the members of the varsity basketball team in order to compile an All-Opponent court team. Each Wildcat hoopster listed the five players he considered the best he played against this year. From these listings the Villanova All-Opponent Basketball Team was compiled.

Guy Unanimous

Temple's Guy Rodgers was the only unanimous choice in the balloting while All-American Rod Hundley, of West Virginia, ran a close second. Hot Rod was chosen by all but one of the players polled.

Mount Saint Mary's scoring star, Jack Sullivan finished but a few votes behind the two All-Americans. Also selected to the top five were Seton Halls' Dick Gaines and Nigara's sensational giant, Alex "Boo" Ellis, who scored 31 points while pulling down 32 rebounds against the 'Cats in the New York Holiday Festival in December.

FIRST TEAM		SECOND TEAM
Guy Rodgers	Temple	Archie Dees	Indiana
Rod Hundley	West Virginia	Jim Cunningham	Fordham
Jack Sullivan	Mt. St. Mary's	Cal Ramsey	N. Y. U.
Dick Gaines	Seton Hall	Jim Palmer	Dayton
Alex Ellis	Niagara	Hank Nowak	Canisius

HONORABLE MENTION

Don Lane, Dayton; Dave Ricketts, Duquesne; Kurt Engelburt, St. Joe's; Alonzo Lewis, La Salle; Gene Leone, Canisus; Ray Radziszewski, St. Joe's; Jay Norman, Temple.

Intramural Championships

Duffers vs. Team 5 In Court Playoffs As Season Closes

The Duffers met Team 5 in the Intramural basketball championships last Monday evening in Alumni Gym. The results will appear in next week's Villanovan since the game was played after the paper went to press.

The Duffers entered the playoffs by downing the Northerners, 58-41 in a semi-final contest. This contest was called by the officials with a little over a minute remaining because of spectator conduct. "Bunker" Brennan led the winners with 18 points.

Team 5 copped the title in the afternoon league a week earlier by beating the Swabbies 61-47. High man for Team 5 was varsity football quarterback Billy Magee with 20.

Other Playoff Results

Northerners, led by Hal Bauser's 22 points and the fine rebounding of team captain George Mitchell defeated Jizz A.C., 56-35.

The Small Five downed previously undefeated Hot Trotters, 32-17 to tie the early evening league, but in a playoff, Hot Trotters turned the tables, 42-40. Trotters were in turn defeated by the Northerners, 37-35., as the winners staved off a late rally. Bauser led the Duffers to a 64-55 victory over LKD.

BOWLING TOURNEY

The Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference will hold its annual match game championships in New York, early in May.

Any eastern college undergraduate is eligible for the competition, which will bring together the East's top collegiate bowlers.

All interested pin-splitters are urged to contact Mr. George Licbowitz, Bowlmore Recreation, 110 University Place, New York, N. Y. for further information.

SINGERS' AUDITION

Auditions for the Villanova Singers will be held tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock in the C & F auditorium, it has been announced by Charles Ross, president of the Singers.

Ron Impresses:

Delany Named Outstanding Athlete In Chicago Relays

Ron Delany has been booed in New York because of his refusal to race against the clock as he rounds the track just fast enough to win. In Chicago, on March 16, however, a fast pacing allowed the famous Wildcat to run his fastest indoor mile, being clocked in 4:03.8, two tenths of a second off the world's record.

As a result, Delany was named the outstanding athlete of the 21st Chicago Daily News Relays. The Midwestern crowd of over 16,000 gave the Irish wonder the kind of ovation he really deserved as a result of this tremendous effort to top off the evening.

Delany was named top man on seven of the nine ballots cast by the sports writers covering the event. The other writers named him as their second choice.

One of the two other first place votes was awarded to Villanova pole vaulter Don Bragg, whose vault of 15 feet 3 inches allowed him to beat the great Bob Richards for the first time in his career.

Bragg finished in a second place tie in the voting.

Villanova Alumni Toast Trackmen At Annual Dinner

The feting of the Villanova track team and its Olympic members, which is getting to be an almost weekly occurrence, was undertaken by the Villanova Alumni Association on March 19. The occasion was the second annual Villanova Track and Field Alumni banquet.

Ron Delany, probably the most famous of the fabulous Wildcats became the proud downer of the coveted George (Buck) Coleman Memorial trophy. The trophy is given in honor of a Villanova pole vaulter killed in a naval plane maneuver in 1953.

Villanova's two other Olympians, Charley Jenkins and Phil Reavis, were presented with special awards. Pole vaulter Don Bragg was presented with an inscribed tray.

Team Tributed

Coach Jim Elliott presented his 20 man squad and assistant coach Jim Tuppeny to the Alumni after Middle Atlantic AAU President Martin Conboy tributed the National AAU and IC4A champions, saying they had made Philadelphia the center of American track and field.

Elliott looked pessimistically to next year because of the graduation of six of his mainstays. The Wildcat mentor said that he had "the poorest freshman talent in many years."

The banquet was held at Kostick's Restaurant at 69th st.

Delany, Relayers Shine In Chicago

ly fast pacing allowed him to finish in the near record time.

Bragg, Relayers Star

On an even par with the performance of the great miler was the astounding effort of the mile relay quartet.

This time the participants were Maliff, Peterson, Collymore and Jenkins. These four Wildcats combined for a mile timing of 3:16. It was a world's indoor record for an 11 lap track and also the national collegiate record.

As if this weren't enough, Don Bragg put icing on the cake by defeating Rev. Bob Richards in the pole vault for the first time in their various encounters. Bragg vaulted 15 feet, 3 inches for the victory.

'Cats Will Be Remembered

Other Wildcats performed just about as was expected, that is, they won their events.

Charley Jenkins coasted home in the 600, winning by 15 yards. His time was an average 1:11.6.

Phil Reavis registered the other Wildcat victory, taking the h jump with a leap of 6 feet, 9¼ inches. This average Reavis performance was the second highest jump in the 21 year history of the relayers.

They'll remember us in the Midwest all right.

SECOND IN SPIRIT

Villanova, according to the balloting of the Philadelphia sports writers, finished tied for second place with Temple University for the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia's first annual sportsmanship award.

Villanova was credited with great spirit in lieu of the Wildcats' poor season.

St. Joseph's College was awarded first place.

Elliott, Tuppenny Guide Track Greats

By FRANK FLEMING

Villanova is truly what might be called the capital of the track world. Fittingly enough the king of the world of banked boards and cinders, Wildcat mentor, Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, rules this kingdom of track champions.

It is no mere coincidence that the greatest coach in the world guides the greatest accumulation of track stars in many years. For Elliott is the person responsible for bringing together this impressive array of talent—the man who has sold Villanova to some of the greatest athletes in the world and then moulded these men into the world's greatest track team.

A Former Track Star

Elliott, himself, is well known throughout the area as a track star in his own right. Due to his basketball abilities, the coach never gave the cinders a chance until his senior year at West Catholic High in Philadelphia then he tried out for the team. Not only did he make the squad, but the former hoopster immediately became the star of the team, leading the Burrs through one of the best seasons that a West team ever had and climaxed his own great year by winning the Catholic League Quarter Mile Championship.

The following year he entered Villanova and quicky won a berth on the Wildcat track squad, soon becoming the team's leading middle-distance man. With speed comparabable to that with which he ran, the Villanova athlete became one of the best and most famous of his time.

In his senior year "Jumbo" was elected captain of the 1935 Wildcat track team. Many people place this year as the beginning of the mentor's coaching career for as captain of the squad Elliott spent most of his time giving pointers to his fellow athletes and generally running the team.

The following year Elliott returned to his Alma Mater in the capacity of full time track coach. Since that time he has continually served

Coached Five Olympians

In his over 20 years of service to the school Jim Elliott has turned out some of the greatest track teams and some of the best in the East track states. He has sent five young Villanovans to the past three Olympiads. Last year his team was rated as the best college track team in the country, although they did not win major team championship.

This year was "Jumbo" Jim's best by far. His charges dominated by winning the A.A.U. and IC4A team championships.

By just comparing his record with that of any other track coach in the U.S. it can easily be seen why every one who knows any thing about track rates Villanova's "Jumbo" Jim Elliott as the best track coach in the world.

Ironic as it may seem, one of the men who has contributed the most toward bringing international fame to Villanova University is probably one of the least known figures about the Mainliner campus. Assistant track coach Jim Tuppeny has been one of the biggest factors in the great track successes of the past two years, but strangely enough he has not received many of the honors and recognitions deserving of the assistant coach of the world's greatest track team.

Three years ago Villanova University began its climb to the spot of overall predominance it holds today in the world of the spiked shoe. The university authorities recognized the fact that the building of a track team equal to any in the world was too large a job for one coach, despite his personal greatness. The search was begun to find for "Jumbo" Elliott the best assistant in the country. After more than a year of screening candidates, former LaSalle track great Tuppeny became the first assistant track coach in Villanova history.

West Catholic Star

Mr. "T," as the young mentor was soon dubbed by his prodigies, came to Villanova with a very impressive record as both a track star and coach. He began his brilliant career at West Catholic High School also, where he was a consistent performer in several events, specializing in the pole-vault.

Upon release from the Navy after the war, the tall lean athlete entered LaSalle College and continued his track endeavors, winning many championship ribbons and trophies. During his last year at LaSalle, Tuppeny set several pole-vaulting records, including a Middle Atlantic AAU mark.

Coached At Malvern

Tuppeny began his coaching career at Malvern Prep School. While coaching at the Prep he turned out many great track teams as well as several college stars. His greatest high school coaching accomplishment came when his Malvern teams won the Inter-Academic League section of the Inquirer Track Meet two years in succession.

At Villanova Mr. "T" specializes in guiding the participants in the field events. However, he may often be seen working with not only the pole-vaulters, jumpers and weight men, but also instructing hurdlers, sprinters and distance men.

Unsung Hero

Much credit is due Tuppeny for his development of Olympic high-jumper Phil Reavis, his jumping partner Charley Stead and pole-vaulter Don Bragg. No one but a person who has seen several practice sessions can know how much time the assistant coach has spent developing them to their present greatness. Under his expert guidance they have gained great glory for themselves and their school. Truly the unsung hero of track this year is Villanova's Jim Tuppeny.

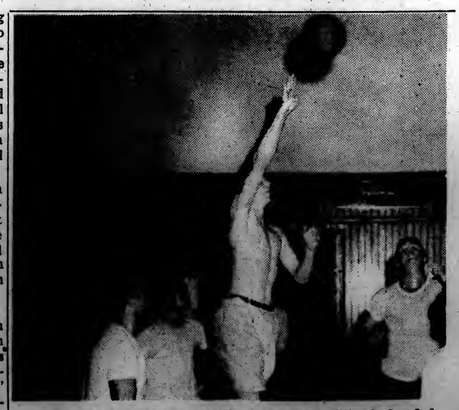
Spring Football Practice Begins 20-Day Run Mon.

While the coming of spring may signify many things for the average student, it means only one thing for the football player—spring practice. Next Monday, April 1, initiates another such season and it will continue for 20 days. Highlight of the spring sessions will be the fifth annual Blue-White Day.

Uppermost in the minds of Frank Reagan's charges as they prepare for next fall's campaign is the opening date they have with Baylor University at Waco, Texas.

The biggest problem will be finding suitable help for the returnees from last years team which produced the first winning Wildcat aggregation in four years. Among the leading candidates back from that eleven are backfield men Billy Magee, Dave Parr, Rick Sapienza, Jack Devereaux, Jim Grazione and Rollie West, and linemen Don Luzzi, Ed Michaels, Vince Cheverini, Mike DeLucia, Hal Durgin, Gene Opella, Paul Laughlin, Tony Varrechione and Bill Craig.

Baseball Season Opens On Friday, 'Cats Host Colby



The old adage that "In spring a young man's fancy turns to . . . baseball" is plainly in evidence around the campus these days. After many tough afternoons of practice, the diamond men of Coach Art Mahan will take on Colby in the season's opener on Fridey at 2:30 p.m. on the Villanova home field behind the Stadium.

Saturday the baseball team will play host to their most traditional rival, Penn, in the first of two games scheduled with the Quakers. Starting time is slated for 2:00 p.m. The Cats will then travel to Annapolis to take on Navy on Monday.

Work Cut Out

With a tough schedule which totals 26 games, among which are included the two area powers of Penn State and Lafayette, Army, Navy, all o fthe "big five" schools*, and other perennial diamond powerhouses, Coach Mahan an dhis boys will have their work cut out for them.

One factor the Cats are depending heavily is the return of a large number of last season's regulars and lettermen. The infield, with returning veterans John Donatucci, John DiGiallorenzo, Ron. LaMontagne, and Charlie DiGiovani, along with soph George Emma, looks fairly solid.

This may not be Paul Arizin, but a two-pointer is headed for the cords just the same during intramural playoff action in Alumni Gymn last week. Winner of this game moves on to the tourney final.

All Spring Sports Squads Preparing For Full Slate

With the final gun having been sounded for the 1957 banked board season in Cleveland last weekend, Villanovans will now move to the great out-of-doors for their sports thrills.

An exciting 26 game baseball schedule, outdoor meets on the new track—claimed to be one of the best in the east, a host of home matches with the area's best golfers, and Villanova's fifth annual Blue-White Day, a gala sports carnival featuring golf, basketball, baseball, track, football and swimming all in a single afternoon, should keep Mainline sports enthusiasts pretty busy during the spring weather.

The baseball season gets underway this Friday afternoon on the Villanova home diamond as the 'Cats take on Colby in the season's opener.

26 Baseball Games

All in all Coach Art Mahan's ball club will play fourteen home games and will be on the road for another twelve. It is not only a lengthy schedule, but also a tough one which includes last year's regional NCAA champ, Lafayette.

Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, who doubles as both track and Varsity Golf Coach will really have his work cut out for him this spring. Besides squiring the nation's number one track team, Jumbo will be out to improve upon last year's impressive golf team record.

The return of last year's captain, Ben Klemanowicz, along with veterans Joe Colitz and Jay Gibney should provide the Wildcats with many sub-par rounds during their thirteen scheduled matches, the first of which will be held on April 5 against Temple.

Golfers Face Rough Season

The linkamen have a total of ten games scheduled for the home green of Aronomink Golf Course. Included in this season's competition are all of the big five city schools plus Penn State, Muhlenberg, Seton Hall, and other area threats.

In addition to his chores as golfing coach Mr. Elliott will be at the helm of a Villanova track squad which is out to prove that it is the country's number one out-door, as well as indoor, track team.

The Blue and White's first test in the fresh air will come at the Queen-Iona Relays to be held in New York on April 13. The Mainliners are perennial powers in the meet and will be favored to add a few more trophies to the "Queen-Iona Collection."

After stopping off in Annapolis to participate in a triangular meet with Penn State and Navy the Cats will return to Philadelphia for the Penn Relays on the 26th and 27th. Track enthusiasts will remember last year's Relays where the Mainliners ran away from the highly touted relay team from Oxford University in England.

The Cats then take on LaSalle, Seton Hall, St. Joe's, and the Quantico Marines prior to the outdoor IC4A championships in New York on May 31 and June 1.

Blue-White Day Tops

The zenith of springtime athletics will be the fifth annual Blue-White day scheduled for May 4. In a three ring circus of sports the baseball team will play St. Joe's, the track squad will host LaSalle, the varsity golfers will take on the Alumni, the football team will hold an inter-squad game, the swimmers will put on several demonstrations and the basketball five will host an impressive Alumni squad.

Baseball Season Opens With Colby Friday; Penn Next

Catching Strong

The outfield positions are wide open with Jim Grazione, Jim Egizio, Rollie West, and John Bauer among the contenders. Behind the plate will be one of three returning vets, Terry Hayes, Hank Nichols, or Bob Sipriano.

Back from last season's mound staff are Bob Scalzi, Jack Kelly, and Dick Black, while newcomers include sophs Grazione, West, and Mitchell.

"Now if I can just quietly sneak past this guy," says Vince Sullivan during intramural basketball playoffs in Alumni Gym last week. But Skip Henshaw has other plans. Action took place as teams fought for the right to enter final round of the playoff.

Softball League Opens On Monday

Peter O'Brien, Student Director of intramurals, will throw the first ball to inaugurate the 1957 intramural softball season next Monday at 5:15 p.m. on Mendel Field. The other leagues will open on Tuesday on Austin, Simpson, and Mendel Field.

Team captains are reminded that all entries for the league must be in today and that they are also asked to attend a meeting in Alumni Gym tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. where the rules of the softball leagues will be explained by Intramural Council members.

Jim Moran, president of the Council, announced that the spring intramural schedule will include wrestling, tennis, track, and a special Learn How To Swim week.

Moran also asked all those who have Red Cross Life Saving Instructors Certificates to report to room 112, Alumni Hall tomorrow at 10:30. A life saving course will begin April 1 in the Field House at 7 p.m.

Bob Fortier, Chuck Trad, and Bill Vincent were added to the Council at the last meeting.

New Placement Directory Gives Vacation Earning Tips

To answer the needs of students and educators, The Advancement and Placement Institute announces publication of the Second 1957 Edition of The World-Wide Summer Placement Directory. The Directory is prepared as an aid to those who wish new ideas for ways to earn while they vacation.

The new Directory gives descriptions of the type of work available with names and addresses of employers regularly needing additional summer employees.

All 48 States

Included are government positions, dude ranches, travel tour agencies abroad, work camps, service projects, national parks, summer camps and resorts, career trainee opportunities, study awards all over the world and many others. Opportunities are presented for all 48 states and more than 20 foreign countries.

At the request of many students, a special new section has been added to the second edition for those students wishing to use their summer in trainee programs for future career opportunities. Positions are available in hundreds of firms in more than forty fields of business, industry, government, science, recreation and education.

Five Years Research

The Directory is the result of five years of research by the staff of The Advancement and Placement Institute which is a professional advisory and advancement service in the field of education.

Additional information may be obtained from the Placement Office or by writing to the Institute at Box 99C, Greenpoint Station, Brooklyn 22, New York.

Lucky Collegiate Shutter - Snapper To Be 'Life' Guest

Through the Twelfth Annual International Intercollegiate Photography Competition, some lucky college photographer is going to win an expense-paid week as a guest of Life Magazine where he will receive a general one-week observation course.

The event is being sponsored by Kappa Alpha Mu, the National Press Photographers Association and the Encyclopaedia Britannica, in cooperation with the Association of College Unions.

Six runners-up will receive sets of the Encyclopaedia Britannica and others will receive awards of merit for their work and skill in photography.

Any college or university student is eligible for the contest. He need not be a professional photographer.

Pictures will be judged in many different classifications. All contest rules will be posted on the bulletin board in the Publication Office, second floor Dougherty Hall. Application blanks may be obtained from Bill Jones, 211 Sullivan Hall.

The closing date is April 5. There are no entry fees.

Additional entry blanks, information and rules may be obtained by writing to Vi Edom, National KAM Secretary, 18 Walter Williams Hall, Columbia, Mo.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

By JOE MARTIN, SC President

The idea of insituting area clubs on our campus was brought up at the last meeting of the Student Council. This suggestion deals with the setting up of clubs for undergraduates consisting of people who live in one particular part of the country. There is already a group of students on campus who have taken some action on this matter on their own. Many who call Pittsburgh home have formed the Greater Pittsburgh Area Club. It was pointed out at the meeting by one of the members of this group that if some degree of organization was available, the task of keeping them active would be considerably reduced.

MARTIN

A committee of the Council is now looking into the feasibility of taking the initiative in the organizing of area clubs for each section of this or any other country that is represented at Villanova. The advantages of such clubs are fairly obvious. If men can be interested in becoming active as a group of Villanovans from the same home town, the alumni association in their vicinity would automatically be strengthened. People who one might not ordinarily get to know well, and who hail from the same part of the world, could now become close companions. This is especially important since these men will be the closest contact we will have with Villanova after we graduate.

The natural question that will be asked by most of the students is, "What about the day-hops?" There is no reason that this same idea can not apply to them also. Clubs of various geographical divisions will of course, be smaller because of the heavy concentration of Villanova graduates in this area. The benefits would be the same for all after they leave the school, and perhaps even greater than those enjoyed by the residents as undergraduates.

We are hoping that through the findings of this committee and the cooperation of the administration, that these clubs will soon become a reality.

* * * * *

An interesting motion brought before the Council at the meeting of March 4, was the one concerning the publishing of a complete directory of home addresses of all the students at Villanova. This would include all regular students listed as such with the Registrar.

The purpose of such a directory would be to provide every student with the name and address of all his classmates and those in each class, from freshmen to senior. Such a guide would be a real help during the school year to locate the phone numbers of day-hop friends; it would be invaluable during the summer months; the directory would be a real convenience to any graduate in view of the fact that a person who had one for each of his years on campus would have a list of Villanovans from seven classes, the three before his and the three after as well as his own.

Right now the problem of distribution, manner of presentation, the evil of the list falling into the hands of an over ambitious solicitor, are all being reviewed by the administration. If it is found that it is practically and prudently possible to publish such a book, the students will have a real convenience provided them.

* * * * *

The suggestion box is now below the general bulletin board in Dougherty Hall. The ideas submitted thus far have been very good and properly presented. It may be early to make any decision on the success of this box, but if the first few days are any indication it will be the most important single accomplishment of the Council this year. The suggestions that are received will be reviewed and then submitted as motions at the meeting if they are considered to be important enough. As was mentioned above, the first few indicate that they certainly will rate being brought to the floor of the meetings.

Guy Lombardo and His Band Announced As Replacement For Sammy Kaye at Jr. Prom

Guy Lombardo and his Orchestra will replace Sammy Kaye as the band for the Junior Promenade May 3. This change was necessitated by Kaye's cancelling his contract because of a six week engagement at a New York hotel.

The switch in bands was announced by the class President Bob Mulcahy in a letter to the class posted on the junior bulletin board. In the letter he explained the reasons for the change and the subsequent selection of Lombardo.

The signing of Lombardo brings to Villanova one of America's leading orchestras. Known throughout the country for playing the "sweetest music this side of heaven," he is one of the most danceable bands in the business. Guy appears weekly on a television show from New York's Roosevelt Grill. Since he has been playing at the Roosevelt it has consistently drawn more patrons than any other hotel restaurant in that city.

Number One Band

Lombardo and his Royal Canadians have been declared the number one band in the country year after year by the annual polls among music and radio editors.

Although he has recorded more than 850 sides he has never experienced a flop. Some of the hits recorded by him and the Royal Canadians are Harbor Lights, The Third Man Theme, Wish You Were Here, Hernando's Hideaway, and Blue Tango.

The acquisition of Lombardo will give the campus the biggest name band in the memory of any of the present day undergraduates. The Prom will run from 9:30 p.m. until 1 a.m.

'Skin of Our Teeth' Opens Tomorrow In Field House

By JOE WHEELER

"The Skin of Our Teeth," the Pulitzer prize winning play by Thorton Wilder, will appear before the Villanova footlights starting tomorrow night, April 4, and will run through Sunday, April 7. The Masque anticipates a large turnout for all four evenings of their Spring presentation.

The Belle Masque Society has asked the Villanovan to transmit certain requests to the viewing public concerning this production.

Masque Requests

For a more complete enjoyment of the show the audiences of the four nights are requested to first, "Do not remove any portions of the stage as it is difficult for the actors to perform without the necessary scenery."

The second request is "Please do not feed the dinosaurs or the actors," for obvious reasons. Third and most important, "Watch the flashing signal lights, one flash for "Fair weather," two flashes for a storm, three for a hurricane and fourth for the end of the world." It is hoped that all will co-operate in full.

Special notice should be taken of the often unsung heros of the Masque productions, the staunch stage hands, as they change the scenery in full view of the audience in their dashing 1905 style bathing suits. Too long have these worthies gone unnoticed.

Look Closely

It is advised that after you have taken your seat and readied yourself for an enjoyable evening to look about you, for the person sitting next to you may be anything—anything from a dinosaur, subtly disguised, to Thorton Wilder, subtly disguised. After completing your investigation you can relax and enjoy the show.

Bhp. Fulton Sheen To Preach At Law School Dedication

The dedication ceremonies of Villanova's new Law building will officially commence with the celebration of a solemn Pontificial Mass at 11 a.m. Thursday, April 25.

The Most Reverend John F. O'Hara, C.S.C., Archbishop of Philadelphia, will preside at the offering, and the Most Reverend J. Carroll McCormick, Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia, will be the celebrant.

Bishop Sheen Speaks

The Most Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, Auxiliary Bishop of New York, will deliver the sermon at the opening Mass.

Throughout Thursday afternoon, Friday morning and afternoon, conferences will be held dealing with the contribution of law to the cause of peace - international and domestic.

A general open house at Garey Hall, with full opportunity to inspect facilities of the new law building, will be held Thursday evening.

Friday evening's ceremonies will be held at the Warwick Hotel where an invitation dinner in honor of Chief Justice Jones of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania will take place.

Justice Warren Speaks

On Saturday morning at 10:30, an academic convocation is scheduled at the Villanova Field House.

The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Honorable Earle Warren, will make the dedicatory address at the Saturday convocation and will receive the honorary degree, Doctor of Laws.

Spring Formal:

Annual Navy Spring Dance April 26 At The Del Rio

Recreation council spring dance co-chairmen Pat Gallagher and Dick Green announced the plans this week for the annual spring formal Navy dance to be held on Friday, April 26.

The site for the festivities is the new Club Del Rio on Westchester Pike at Eagle Road in Manoa. The dance is formal. The midshipmen will wear the bow tie with the usual dress blue bravo.

Green and Gallagher promise the biggest and best dance yet sponsored by Villanova's NROTC unit. Two musical aggregations will provide music for the affair. Charlie Reich and his orchestra will be spelled by the Philadelphians, a jazz quintet.

One of the highlights of the evening will be the unique favors, twenty-one ounce brandy snifters, embossed with a cap insignia and "Villanova 1957."

Another plus for this year's dance will be the announcement near the end of the dance of the winner of this year's company competition. The dates of the winning company's midshipmen officers will receive loving cups from Villanova's Professor of Naval Science, Captain Curtin.

The dance is dedicated to the graduating midshipmen with Lord Nelson's motto "Palmam qui meruit ferat" which may be liberally translated as, "let those who have earned their commissions use them well."

All ex-naval officers on the faculty are invited to the dance. There will be a reception line from 9 to 10 p.m.

LCDR George Rehe is advisor to the recreation committee headed by Mike Murray which is responsible for all social affairs. Assisting Gallagher and Green in the actual arrangements for the dance are Gene Fogarty and John Craft.

Robert Briscoe to Visit V.U.; To Get Honorary Degree

Honorable Robert E. Briscoe, Lord Mayor of Dublin, will be awarded an Honorary Degree by Villanova University when he visits the campus late next month, it was announced today by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President.

An Honorary Doctorate in Laws will be conferred on the Jewish Lord Mayor during a special academic convocation on Tuesday morning, April 23rd, Father Donnellon said.

Philadelphia Visit

Presentation of the Degree will be held in conjunction with the Lord Mayor's visit to Philadelphia on that day. Brisco arrived in this country on March 16th for a tour of the large cities to stimulate good will for his native Ireland and assist in the United Jewish Appeal fund raising drive.

"The election of Mr. Briscoe to Dublin's highest official post is one of the greatest examples of religious tolerance and understanding in modern history," Father Donnellon said in making the announcement. "He is a man of great talents which the people of Dublin recognize. Villanova too, wishes to honor him."

First Jewish Mayor

Briscoe is the first Jew ever elected Lord Mayor of the Irish City of 400,000 people. Plans are currently underway for Mr. Briscoe to be accorded honors befitting one of the world's outstanding citizens when he visits Philadelphia.

ROBERT E. BRISCOE
Comes April 23rd

Rev. Paul Henry Villanova Forum Speaker Tonight

Rev. Paul Henry, S.J., will speak at the Villanova Forum tonight on the topic "The Originality of Augustine." His speech will be delivered at 8:30 p.m. in the Commerce and Finance auditorium.

Visiting Professor At Penn

Father Henry is of the Institute Catholique in Paris. He is also presently visiting Professor of Philosophy at the University of Pennsylvania. Father lectures on Plotinus, Greek Philosophy and Middle Platonism at the local university.

Expert on Plotinus

Father Henry is known throughout the world as an expert on Plotinus. He is the editor of the definitive text of the Enneads of Plotinus.

Plotinus was a student of Plato prior to Augustine's time, and there is interesting speculation on the extent of his influence on Augustine.

Don't Miss

Mr. Charles Bruderle, a teacher of history at Villanova University, is chairman of the Forum. He urges as many students as possible to attend tonight's lecture.

E. I. Watkin, renowned historian and philosopher, spoke on baroque architecture last semester.

'Ode to Ron Delany;' He's Faster Than A West Wind

Bob Harding, a sportswriter for the Passaic-Clifton (N. J.) Herald-News was so impressed after seeing Ron Delany's dual victory at the IC4A Meet several weeks ago that he wrote the following poem honoring Villanova's great Olympic champion. The poem is re-printed here in its entirely.

The gun goes off, the race begins.
They push and shove and strain.
They pass below, their pounding feet
Sound like a subway train.
A tight knit group, they strive for spots
But soon they fall in place.
There's 22 laps still to go
In this two mile race.
But Delany, where's Delany?
The long line rushes pass.
He's not in front. Why there he is,
He's running next to last.
That skinny splendid Irishman
Is moving free but slow.
The crowd feels somewhat cheated
They urge him to run, to go
And take the lead, to head the pack
But he appears content
To jog along and take his time,
Not fool with sentiment.
There is Breckenridge, his teammate
The two run side by side.
Their plan to finish one and two
Is difficult to hide.
But up in front a U. Conn. boy
Lew Stieglitz is his name
Begins to move out from the field
And make his bid for fame.
At once the Villanova pair
Starts moving up in place.
They bypass the other runners,
Still Stieglitz sets the pace.
The mile mark he whizzes by,
He starts to lap the herd
And Ron is fifth and Breckenridge
Is just ahead in third.
With less than five long laps to go,
Young Breck gives up the fight
And Delany moves to second
Alone he must give flight.
Right then Delany makes his move.
He starts to sprint in high.

CROWD URGES RONNY ON
The crowd is urging Ronny on,
His feet begins to fly.
He's far behind. Two laps to go.
He hasn't got a prayer
Delany's running like the wind
As if he doesn't care.
And now the last lap has begun
The deciding one is here.
And Delany, where's Delany?
Twenty yards in the rear.
But Delany's feet know no ties,
He flashes round the track.
And with a half a lap to go
He's only one yard back.
The crowd is roaring, cheering hard,
Shouts ring from every fan.
They run together stride for stride.
Now watch that skinny man.
He's in the lead! He's in the lead,
An inch, a foot, a yard.
He rounds the bend in blinding speed
His knees are pumping hard.
The stretch he hits, twelve feet in front
The tape stands yards away.
He breasts it clean, with arms outspread.
Delany wins the day!
Now thrills in sports come every year
And games are lost and won
But thrill I did, the night I saw
The great Delany run.

And so did we all, many times ,Bob!

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

It is the desire of the editors of the VILLANOVAN that the "Letters to the Editor" column be one of the prominent features of the paper each week. Letters from students voicing their opinions on campus topics can provide most interesting reading matter for the student body.

The editors wish to remind readers that each and every student has the right to air his or her comments of raise or rebuttal. Students with intelligent ideas for the improvement of the university should not be shy about coming out in the open about them.

It's Still Lent

Have you ended your Lent already?

Although the 1957 Holy season is Still two and a half weeks from completion, many of us have neglected or broken those earnest Lenten resolutions we made on the morning of March 6 or sooner.

Year after year we go through the first three or four weeks with the utmost piety: going to daily Mass and Communion, weekly confession, daily rosaries, etc., and year after year, some of us lack that extra "kick" needed in the final fortnight.

The first time a Lenten promise is broken we usually say, "Oh, well, I broke it now, so I might as well forget about it any more." There is no obligation of course to begin anew but the mere breaking of a promise does not eliminate a firm amendment to start off on on another "streak". Only our efforts to pick ourselves up successfully after every fall will we be judged when we come before the Keeper of our spiritual balance sheet.

Last Sunday was Leatare Sunday, the midway point of the Holy Season. If we found upon examination that many, if not all of our Ash Wednesday resolutions have "gone out the window", we shoulnt shrug our shoulders and coldly reply that 1958 has a brand new Lent on its calendar in which we hope to do better.

The realization of how death may strike at anytime excludes the possibility of banking our eternal salvation in a six-week period almost a full year away. Now is the time to build up Masses, Communions, good works and indulgences for heaven.

The winner of a mile race isn't the one who is leading the field at the halfway mark or even at the three-quarters' point, but the runner who breaks the tape. Similarly, all of us are engaged in a spiritual race for heaven. If we haven't done too well in keeping our Lenten resolutions for the first "880 yards," we can still obtain our goal by widening our "stride in the stretch" and making this Holy Season the kind we originally intended it to be.

We Can Be Proud

A dream, a set of blueprints a construction project and finally a reality . . . Garey Hall, the new home of the Law Division, stands today as part of what is Villanova University. There remains but one step to be taken—the culminating one of dedication, and within a month, this too will be part of that initial dream come true.

For months preparations have been going on for the dedication of the new law building. Nothing has been spared in an attempt to acquire the most outstanding men in the field of law and outside it for the purpose of making the three-day event a true milestone in the life of Villanova.

The name list of outstanding lawmen engaged for the ceremony is as long as the list of institutions which will be represented.

With such men participating in the dedication as the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Honorable Earl Warren; the Honorable Bernard M. Shanley, secretary to President Eisenhower and Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the significance of this addition to the University is clearly shown.

That the Villanova School of Law is just in its fourth year is a fact somewhat difficult to belive. Nevertheless, last year's graduating law students were the first to leave Villanova.

Students Air Views On Youth

Do the youth of today lack the drive and initiative needed to come up with new ideas used to advance civilization? Or are they falling into a rut created by present day society—that of looking for security first or fearing to take chances or go out on a limb, and thus failing to be real seekers for new knowledge? Opinions like these have at times been made public by some critics of the youth of this generation. But what do the youth think about these charges?

In order to get the collegiate slant on this issue the Associated Collegiate Press asked the following question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

SOME PROMINENT BUSINESSMEN HAVE STATED THAT MODERN DAY YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN ARE TOO CONCERNED WITH PROBLEMS OF FUTURE SECURITY, AND THUS LACK IMAGINATION AND INITIATIVE. DO YOU AGREE OR DISAGREE WITH THIS OPINION, OR ARE YOU UNDECIDED?

The results:	Men	Women	Total
Agree	27%	23%	26%
Disagree	55%	66%	59%
Undecided	18%	11%	15%

Coeds tend to disagree with this opinion as expressed by some businessmen a bit more than do college men, although the majority of both college men and coeds disagree. About one-quarter of the students agree.

Force To Conform

Among students agreeing with the opinion of these businessmen the most commonly expressed thought is that people today are forced by society to conform to the model behavior and don't have the chance they once had to express themselves. Here are a few typical comments:

"Americans of all ages seem to conform too much to accepted patterns. Desiring future security is just a part of the fear not to conform," is the feeling of a sophomore attending Wake Forest College, and a sophomore at Syracuse University has this to say: "In a way it is true, for instance, conformity on campus has ruined much initiative; everything we do today has to be approved in advance."

Money Is Main Concern

A freshman at the University of Denver thinks that there are always "some men afraid to take chances." And a University of Maryland sophomore simply says: "The almighty dollar is king!"

Other students believe that the young people of this generation are marrying at an earlier age and have to look for security. Still others feel that too many people are concerned only with money instead of with helping mankind.

Among the majority of students disagreeing with this opinion of some businessmen the most common belief is that concern for future security arouses an interest in preparing for it. Others feel that the youth of this generation haven't changed much from past generations. Here are several typical remarks:

Really An Individual Matter

Most students undecided on the question simply say they haven't thought much about the situation and can't make up their minds. But a few feel that the issue, as a Rochester Institute of Technology freshmen says: "is an individual matter," or, as an Ohio University sophomore coed puts it: "some students are interested in security and some aren't."

Political Roundup:

Foreign Aid Will Be the Difference In Cold War

By GENE DONOHUE

There has been quite a bit of talk lately about cutting the budget for this year. It seems that the heaviest cut has been in the labor department but this is no indication that other portions of the budget will not be touched.

Aid Cheap

The portion of the budget that is of major concern to this columnist is the foreign aid apropriation. This includes not only economic aid but also military aid. These two are the cheapest means that this country has of saving ourselves from the threat of Communist aggression.

Military aid to foreign countries is our chief proximate means of warding off this catastrophe. At the present time we spend in the neighborhood of 40 billion dollars per year to maintain our vast armed forces system. For the price of about 4 billion we have outfitted a foreign army nine times the size of our own, and air and sea power about the same as our own.

Difference In Cold War

The case of pure economic aid is not so clear. We use this aid to supply food, clothing, machinery, etc. In short, we try to give those less fortunate than ourselves an opportunity to help themselves. This is the real long range program that could very well mean the difference in this present "War of Propaganda."

The idea that communism breeds the most in places where the people are economically dissatisfied is one that has been hammered at consistently for the past ten years. Yet when it comes to deciding what is to be cut in the budget, economic aid is one of the first things that is hit. How many times do you hear the old cliche, "Charity begins at home," whenever there is talk of sending more money abroad. "Yes, Uncle Sap is at it again . . ." is what is said. Sure there are people in this country without jobs and who are on what amounts to relief. But they at least live in a country where they have a right to complain about it.

Deeds Essential

If this aid is not continued then such agencies as the United States Information Agency will be little more than "voices crying in the wilderness." The people in foreign countries are interested in deeds, not just words.

This is what must be done to preserve not only the United States, but the free world in general. We tell people in foreign countries that we are a rich nation with great industrial power. How can we possibly say this if we refuse them aid. We must build them up, to protect ourselves.

"Can Anyone Spare $100?" If So, Please Get In Touch with Junior

By MIKE MANCUSO

"Dig down deep, juniors, your week of ruling the campus isn't too far off," an experienced senior stated wittily to several of his Class of '58 companions.

The juniors, after entertaining an over-jubilant "Irish" celebration in the big city several weeks ago were trying to bear in mind what is waiting for them, come April 28.

Yes, juniors, even if you have spent all your greenbacks in honor of the "green," now is the time to start accumulating those pennies and dimes for that titanic financial and social fling of the spring semester—Junior Week.

Lucky Are The Rich

To those who have the money, the problem is still unsolved. If one walks around the campus you can hear the common question, "Who can I take to Junior Week?" One of the common answers usually is, "I'll get you a date at the Tea House if you lend me, say, ah . . .!"

The millionaire therefore, as you can see, still has his problem. He finally winds up getting himself a date with a glamorous model who in turn turns out to be the Junior Queen.

Well, anyway, with about one month to go before the fling is upon us, it is the purpose of this article to inform and explain to the Villanova Junior the events that are just ahead of him.

Before we analyze the events of the week individually, we would like to mention in our recent survey, the class of 1958 is eagerly awaiting Junior Week even through the majority are financially embarassed.

In the opinion of this reporter, Junior Week has become a perennial favorite at Villanova and that it could not have become without the aid and support of the previous junior classes. Thus, in keeping with the "bigger and better" idea, the Class of '58 hopes to set a precedent in entertainment and attendance.

Classes In The Spring?

Now that spring is with us, all signs point to an easy-going student preferring the college social life to the classroom grind. It can be said, that the junior has the upper hand since he is approaching his long-awaited week. The professors know this and this may be the reason why we are getting loaded down with work. For they know when April 28 comes around, not many juniors will be interested in their dramatic lectures.

When the last weekend of April is near, Bill, Dick, Joe and the remaining juniors will be hustling home to make final plans for "their" week.

Of course, they'll come back with that scarce means of transportation known as a car. Having a car on campus is just as much to celebrate as the Prom and the Dinner-Dance, says Fats "I'm walkin' " Domino.

T&T Bows Out

The Junior Class members will usher in the week on Sunday evening, April 28, when they escort their early-arriving mothers and dates to the Field House for the NFCCS Variety Show. This show has been a new addition to Junior Week in recent years. Previously, Turf and Tinsel introduced Junior Week to the campus but the time was not appropriate for this year's production.

This affair, commencing the expensive marathon, will feature a multitude of assorted talents from local Catholic colleges, along with the famed Villanovans. The tentative entrance fee for the show is $1 per person. A dance is also scheduled to conclude the evening's activities.

On Monday, April 29, around 11 a. m., the first main highlight of Junior Week, Mother's Day, will open with the traditional Mass at the outdoor altar by St. Mary's Hall. Many events and activities will follow, including a luncheon, a banquet and of course that popular sight-seeing tour of our scholastic home.

At this point, our liberal spending Villanovan is probably wondering what the "donation" is for all of this? Not to shock him all at once, may I inform him that his $8.50 ticket will also include the traditional souvenir plate and the floral corsage which will be presented to the mothers during the day.

A First In 1934

Mother's Day was first initiated into Junior Week in 1934. What better way is there to officially open the highlights of Junior Week than by dedicating the opening day to the person who is responsible for our being at Villanova—our mother.

As of now, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday are still in the planning stages. The cost for the activities of these days will be kept as low as possible to leave some leeway for the financially-stricken Villanovan to prepare for the final two days.

Classes will again be underway for the junior after being excused on Mother's Day, but as anyone can guess many of them will just be putting time in class.

Now it's on to the Field House, decked out around an elaborate theme, where Guy Lombardo and his boys will be producing those world renowned arrangements for the enjoyment of juniors and their dates.

Less than 24 hours later, the weary Class of '58 will proceed to the Ben Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia for a dinner dance that is expected to surpass any formal function ever held by the Juniors.

It is now Sunday morning, May 5, and the show is over. The Class of '58 now has only memories, memories that he will dwell upon for years to come.

Anti-Opera? You're Missing Culture

By GERALD LA KARNAFEAUX

One of the creative art forms that is largely ignored by most college students, despite the best efforts recently of the Opera-Classica club which has brought it to the student, is the grand opera.

It is interesting to investigate the reasons for this almost universal cold shoulder. The difficulty for many would seem to be the so-called language barrier, preventing communication to those unschooled in foreign tongues.

No Problem

Fortunately, this problem of communication does not necessitate a course in the basic operatic languages such as French and Italian. The problem can be solved much more simply assuming just a little cooperation on the newcomer to opera.

The method is simply that of pre-exposure to the opera you are planning to attend. Familiarize yourself with the work by reading a summary of the plot, act by act. Unlike a novel or a drama this will not destroy the initial pleasure but will rather add to it by preparing the viewer for action and events which might otherwise confuse and disstract the viewer the main bill of fare which is the music.

Second Step

The second step in the pre-opera preparation should be reading of the complete libretto of the opera which will translate and associate the foreign language lyrics with English. This will also familiarize you with the characters and dialogue and they can be seen as real people in real situations.

It might be well at this point to mention that the characters of an opera are not as well developed or as complex as in the drama but this is, after all, not the purpose of opera. The emphasis in opera is always in the music and it is the emotion communicated through the music which makes the characters live.

Third Phase

The third phase of this learning process and the most important is that one can witness mere words being magically transformed into great drama by means of music and the unique quality of the human voice.

Finally, the complete opera should be listened to attentively without the use of a libretto. This final step is not really necessary, but the more one exposes himself to the opera, the greater is the appreciation which can be attained.

Unlike other forms of visual entertainment, the opera can be seen and heard as often as one likes and the pleasure will increase with each exposure.

'The Villanovans' Story: Obscurity to Fame

By JOE WHEELER

"We hope to stick together on a social basis but not as a working group," said Bobby Schiller leader of the Villanovans.

So ends an era at Villanova. Three years ago Schiller and four of the present six members of the combo attempted to form a 10 to 12 piece orchestra but they ran into difficulties in organizing. In the throes of their problems they received an offer for a small combo to play at a fraternity party. Thus the Villanovans were born.

After two years of playing at parties, dances they found a man who could play both the banjo and guitar. With this addition the present Villanovans were born.

Bobby Schiller, leader of this group, is a Accounting major from Malverne N.Y. While in High School he had a group for the four years and they played basically the same type of music as is now played by the Villanovans. His hot trumpet will be long remembered by the Villanova socialities.

Mike Guido on the clarinet is a Senior Marketing major from Vineland N.J. He has been playing the clarinet since grammar school days and as a result when entering high school he received a music scholarship to Valley Forge Military Academy.

Pat Briody, senior Arts major from Jamaica N.Y. is playing his trombone for the third year for the Villanovans. He looks eagerly to the day he enters Navy O.C.C. School (Intelligence Division).

The drums are in under the care of Jack Gilfillan, a graduate Electrical Engineer. Jack is employed by the Du Pont Company in his home town of Wilmington, Del. While at Villanova he was Band president in his senior year.

In charge of the '88' is Jim McCarthy, senior Pre-Law student from Engelwood N.J. This is his third year playing the piano with the group. Jim has voiced some hopes of entering Law School after he graduates.

The lone junior member of the combo is Jack Emerick, a Pre-law student from Boontown N.J. His banjo and guitar were heard for the first time this year. Jack hopes to re-organize the band next year and continue the tradition set in the last three years.

Their first appearance on the Villanova Campus was the 1954 Mardi Gras Ball. Before long they began to receive bids from the neighboring colleges. On two occasions they appeared at the University of Delaware and traveled to Carlisle Pa. to play at the Military Ball of Dickinson College.

In 1956 they played at Drexel's annual Christmas Ball. Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia was their Christmas engagement in 1955. They have played at Officer Club Dances at both the Philadelphia Navy Yard and the Valley Forge Military Hospital.

They appeared on the Multiple Sclerosis Telethon with such celebraties as Roberta Sherwood, John Reid King and the Broadway star Menasha Skulnik.

At present they are awaiting word from Bob Lawrence, WIP disk jockey, who has contacted a few of the major recording companies about the possibility of the Villanovans cutting an album before graduation. Lawrence is one of their many fans, but of added interest it was he who gave the Four Aces their start.

With The Editor:

It Was A Great Weekend But What A Journey Home

The college man is a strange animal. Many times, when dealing with one you never know exactly what to expect as his next move. But in the field of ingenuity he can hold his own with anyone.

This can be proven by the exploits of two freshmen, who will remain anonymous, on the way back from St. Patrick's Day regalia in New York. This is a true story, and as Ripley has often been heard to say, you can "Believe it or not."

An Absence Of Money

Finding themselves with barely enough money with which to buy breakfast, our young but bold adventurers decided to hitch back to Villanova, by way of the New Jersey Turnpike.

Not realizing the merits of the Lincoln Tunnel, they journeyed by Subway up to 181st Street in the Bronx and the George Weshington Bridge. But fortune seemed to be smiling upon them, as they were hitching less than a minute when a car stopped and picked them up.

They were on their way. The time was noon.

But alas, their ride was only to the other side of the Bridge and as they departed from the mobile, Lady Luck departed from them. In despair they watched as car after car highballed by at upwards of 50 miles-per-hour. Something had to be done, and done it was. They walked, all the way to the Jersey Turnpike, a distance of some five miles.

Adventures Just Begun

Their adventure has just began. Quickly, they had another ride. Their flames of hope flickered anew. They died just as quickly. The distance of the ride was exactly one exit. And the famine began.

After waiting a considerable time, another ride deposited them somewhere in the wilds of the Jersey swamp lands. But that was the end of the rides for a long time. Every car that stopped was headed back to New York. It was late afternoon before they finally gave up and took a lift back to New York, the very place from which they had debarked many hours before.

Now a new dilemma faced our weary travelers. The only means of return left was a train ride, and their money supply was far too enemic to allow such extravagance. This looked like a job for Superman, but finally old man ingenuity came to the rescue, and our two heroes boarded a Philly-bound train.

Game of Hide and Seek

Upon entering the train, they immediately headed for the washroom, and Lady Luck returning, she guided the conductor past the washroom door with only a knock, but no check. All was fine so far.

But upon leaving Newark, our two stowaways heard the conductor's key turning in the door. Quickly one of them emerged, claimed he had just boarded the train and paid the fare from Newark to Trenton. As soon as the conductor was gone, it was back into the washroom to join his friend.

As the train left Trenton in the dust, once more the key was inserted in the lock. Out stepped traveler number two, claimed he had just gotten on and paid the fare from Trenton to Philadelphia. Once again it was back to the washroom.

The Remaining Bankroll

The couple left the train in Philly not much poorer than they had two hours before in New York. Paying the 50 cents fare out to Villanova, our two protagonists arrived on campus with four cents between them.

A Little Humor

Seems there was going to be a big fox hunt at a fashionable New England locality. The one stipulation was that only male hounds in the area were to be entered in the hunt as most of the prize hounds in the area were males, and the addition of a female or two might cause complications.

But Mr. Pincheon's prize hound was a female, and he decided he would quietly sneak her into the hunt, as he did not want to be outdone by his neighbors prize canine specimens.

As the fox was released and the hunt began, the hounds disappeared in a cloud of dust over the nearest hill. The riders took after them, but could not catch them. A few miles down the road the huntsmen stopped to ask an old farmer leaning on his fence if he had seen the pack come past his farm.

"Sure have, sonny," was the farmer's reply to Mr. Pincheon, "But something was mighty peculiar."

"Something peculiar?" asked Mr. Picheon.

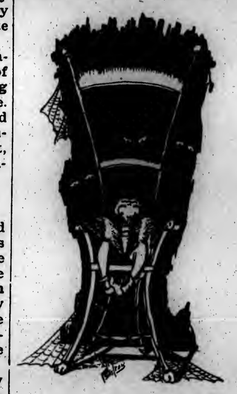
"Sure was, sonny. First time I even see a fox running sixth."

Looking For Something Good to Read; How About A Gorey Murder Tale?

In the course of a fatiguing and term-paper-ridden semester it is very refreshing to read occasionally a book that one won't be interrogated about, a story whose pleasurable qualities aren't destroyed by a systematic and deliberate dissection. For sheer relaxation and leisurely enjoyment, the mystery story —murder or otherwise—is quite refreshing.

There is something highly entertaining in a well-told tale of gore and/or suspense taking place at a comfortable distance. As an escape from the sordid realities of college life or occupation for a lonely rainy night, a mystery is hard to equal (inexpensively, that is).

Escaped from Sixth Grade —Mike Hammer



While not precisely celebrated as intellectual, not all mysteries are written on a level with those of Mickey Spillane. Mr. Spillane relates with sixth-grade relish and vocabulary torrid, unlikely and sadistic stories. Spillane carries the concept of the all-American hard-boiled detective to its logical absurd extreme.

Other varities of the mystery range from lady-like, dull, virtually unreadable British "thrillers" through the genuinely good specimen of any nationality to risque excuses for a "mystery" story.

Typical Fan Reaction

Some people expect to be kept sitting on the edge of their chairs as they avidly pour over chronicles of blood and horror; if it is otherwise, they are greatly disappointed. Still other people wrack their brains or go silently mad while trying to figure out whodunit. Yet, others, like this writer, are content to lie still and let the story lap over them. A few despicable creatures stop reading mysteries when they discover that they can unerringly spot the culprit.

Incredible as it may seem to devoted mystery-readers, there are vast hordes of piteous people utterly ignorant of the joys of mystery-reading. Even more unbelievable is the fact that some deluded persons actually read Westerns! The universality of the mystery admits believers of all tastes: lovers of foreign intrigue type stories—such as written by Ambler; those who follow heroes such as Sam Spade, Sherlock Holmes, Hercule Poirot, etc.; many who count

Huge Crowd Thrilled By Annual Choral Festival

Over 1600 people attended the second annual Choral Festival held at the Field House on Saturday, March 23. It was one of the largest crowds to attend an affair in the Field House this year.

Eight colleges participated in the festival: Temple, Penn, Immaculata, Rosemont, St. Joseph's, Chestnut Hill, St. Peter's from New Jersey, and Villanova.

Wide Range

Each school did a group of individual numbers which ranged from Sacred Music to popular hits from the leading shows on Broadway.

The finale consisted of the combined groups of 580 voices. They did three selections: "This is My Country," by Fred Waring; Beethoven's "The Heavens are Telling," and the National Anthem. These numbers were directed by Dr. Harold G. Reuschlein, director of the Villanova Singers and Dean of Law School.

Dance Followed

Following the Choral Festival, there was a dance featuring Bobby Schiller and the Villanovans.

Although returns are not complete as yet, Charles Ross, president of the Villanova Singers, termed the Festival "a huge success."

T'n'T Society Works For Serious Goal

The most important goal of the Turf and Tinsel Society is not known very well on the Villanova campus. To most people the T'n'T is synonymous with musical comedy, with an all-male hairy-legged chorus. But there is a more serious purpose behind all the drollery. T'n'T is working toward the establishment of a scholarship fund.

This goal is, as yet, unrealized. With the help of paid admissions, patrons and sponsors, this may be the year when that goal is achieved. When the T'n'T representative approaches and starts to go into his pitch, it must be remembered that he is not doing it for himself. His time and energy are freely given. By his efforts, T'n'T hopes to make a reality of that dream: to help someone else who might otherwise be unable to attend Villanova.

Patrons and sponsors for the 1957 version of the T'n'T—"The Man In The Gray Flannel Toga" will soon be solicited by members of the Society's business staff.

Summer Study Institute Issues Travel Brochures

Two publications issued this week by the Institute of International Education (1 East 67th Street, New York City,) will be of interest to the summer traveler—Summer Study Abroad, an annual listing of summer schools in other countries—and the March issue of the Institute's monthly News Bulletin which is devoted to summer educational travel.

Of particular interest in the News Bulletin are several articles discussing the latest trends in in student travel, including new programs to Asia and Africa and shipboard orientation.

Over 120 summer courses in 21 countries of interest to students from the U.S. are listed in Summer Study Aboard. This 23-page leaflet tells where to apply and gives helpful information on language requirements, credits, living arrangements and costs, transportation, passports and visas and scholarships.

Copies of Summer Study Aboard may be obtained free from the Institute of International Education in New York or from its regional offices in Chicago, Denver, Houston, San Francisco or Washington, D.C. There is a charge of 25 cents per copy for the News Bulletin.

Donald M. Collins Inaugurates Law Organization Here

By JOE McMAHON

Donald M. Collins, Professor of Law, announced the formation of a new organization, one concerned with the preparation of students for Law school, which will convene in Garey Hall April 15 at 1:30 p.m.

This will be the beginning of an organization dedicated to the proper preparation of undergraduates for the three law graduate course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

On April 15 a guided tour of Garey Hall, the new law building and a tour of the Villanova campus will be held. Of special interest, Professor Collins said, will be the Law School library. The uses and importance of this library to the future lawyer will be explained.

Witness Moot Court

Students will also witness a "Moot Court" where experienced students will bring up questions for discussion.

During these question and answer periods, topics will be presented to the floor and commented upon by the participants. This program will serve as an instrument for bringing speakers together, giving rise to many ideal situations between speakers with divergent poinions.

Professor Collins annouced that this will be only the beginning of the organization. Schools participating in the discussion will be St. Joseph's College, LaSalle College and Villanova. Future plans call for the inclusion of all colleges in the area.

Asembled students will hear short talks on the life and experiences of a Law School student. Collins stated that this organization should correct any false ideas students may have about law.

This plan will introduce students contemplating law to the type of students in the Law School. The Law Professor said that this organization will undoubtly spread the reputation of Villanova's four-year-old School of Law.

Semper Fidelis Society Orients Officer Candidates

President Jack Goodyear of the Semper Fidelis Society has announced the initiation of the Society's proposed plan for orienting Marine Officer candidates on the responsibilities of summer training.

The plan, formulated by Captain Grace, U.S.M.C., is aimed at two goals, the physical and educational preparation of members of the Society who will attend summer camp for the first time this summer. The physical conditioning aspects of the program will be under the direction of Bill Ganz who will announce the workout schedules after coordinating the rosters of the members. Any Society members who have not submitted their class schedules as yet, should do so in the Marine Office as soon as possible.

Vice-President Bill Westcott will be in charge of the educational portion of the plan which will consist of lectures and group discussions on the various facets of summer training. The discussion periods will be aided by the distribution of informative pamphlets on student regulations and other pertinent subjects.

Rifle Program

Further efforts of Sergeant Mulchaney, U.S.M.C., have made several M1 rifles available for the instructional purposes of the Society. These weapons will be used in a familiarization program which will begin tomorrow, at 10:30 a. m. in the basement of Commodore John Barry Hall. All interested members of the Society are urged to attend.

The Society has obtained access to the Marine Corps film library in Philadelphia, and in the future, will show movies of interest to the Society at the evening meetings which will commence in April. Captain E. H. Utley, U.S.M.C., Marine Officer Procurement Officer for this district, has been contacted and will be the guest speaker at the April meeting.

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

The Choral Festival and Shamokinaki Dance proved to all that even during this Season of Lent, we can find good entertainment to satisfy ourselves. A lot of fun resulted from both events and the Japanese Mission profited from Shamokinaki. It was good for all of us to enjoy ourselves and at the same time be of assistance to others.

The Choral Festival was another exemplification of the fact that a lot of good musical talent exists here on the East Coast. We all hear a great deal of talk about the musical groups that are found in the Mid-West and Pacific Coast, but here, less than two weeks ago, we proved the East has much to rave about. Let's hope we can build up a good reputation for ourselves. A soon-to-be-recorded-disc of our own Glee Club will certainly aid in this endeavor.

Coming Social Events

The Social Calendar this week starts right off tomorrow evening, as the Belle Masque Society presents "The Skin of Our Teeth." From all indications the show will be a great success. Some sources claim it to be the most radical thing to hit the Field House. We'll just have to check up on that fact. The show will close after the Sunday performance.

A dinner-dance this weekend will hold the attention of a large group of active Villanovans. The Villanovan Staff, combined this year for the first time with WVIL, will enjoy themselves at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel Saturday night.

NFCCS Variety Show

For those who missed the NFCCS variety show at Immaculata last month, you can catch it on Sunday, April 7. One of the best all round variety shows will enjoy another one night stay, this week at Chestnut Hill College.

Sunday morning, the members of DPM, Arts Fraternity, will hold their Annual Communion and breakfast. Members will attend 9 o'clock Mass on campus and proceed to breakfast in Dougherty Hall.

A Controversial Picture

The story of a nun and a marine alone on a Pacific island made its box-office debute two weeks ago. "Heaven Knows, Mr. Allison" has been made into a more pleasant movie out of Charles Shaw's novel than expected. With such a background and plot, we can expect much discussion on this picture. The book was, in a way, not too pleasing to the general public. Its movie counterpart has brought forth an absorbing tale with some beautiful photoplay, which is witnessed in the fact that the Legion of Decency has approved it for any and everybody.

With the success of "Heaven Knows, Mr. Allison," more books like Kathryn Hulme's "Nun's Story" will find their way to the motion picture screen.

This Is A Joke?

Fathers Burke and Boyle Represent VU at Meeting

The regional meeting of the College Entrance Examination Board of which Villanova is a member was held in Dougherty Hall on Saturday, March 16 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Villanova was represented by Rev. Thomas A. Burke, O.S.A., Dean of Admissions, who was chairman of the meeting, and Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., Dean of Academic Affairs.

The Board discussed membership policy, program development and the relations of schools with the Educational Testing Service.

Spring Meeting At Biltmore

Due to the size of the membership of the Board, there will be regional conferences and only two national meetings yearly. Father Burke will represent Villanova at the Spring meeting at the Biltmore Hotel in New York.

Representing the Board at the meeting on March 16 were Pearson Rich, Associate Director, and T. Leslie McMilch, Assistant to the Director.

16 College Represented

The Philadelphia-Washington Area was repersented by 16 colleges. A few who attended the Regional Meeting were: Chestnut Hill, Georgetown, Rosemont, Swarthmore, Immaculata, Ursinus and Temple.

Father Burke has been the well-known Registrar of the University for many years. He has recently been given the title Dean of Admissions.

Initiations Discussed:

DPM Meeting Tonight For Nominations

There will be an important business meeting of the Delta Pi Mu fraternity this evening at 7:30 in 201 C&F. All active members must attend.

Included in the business to be conducted will be the nomination of officers for next year, giving out of "little brothers" for initiation and discussion of the Communion-Breakfast.

The Communion - Breakfast will be held Sunday. There will be Mass in the Villanova Chapel at 9 a.m. followed by breakfast at Stauffer's Restaurant in Wynnewood.

Discussion will be held on the initiation period for the new pledges which will begin Monday and run until next Friday.

The running of initiation will be controlled by a Pledge Commission consisting of the following members: Tom Curran, Bill McCloud, Norm Peer, Mike Klesius and Al Dombrowski. These men will instruct the members as to their duties during "Hell Week."

College Councils Discuss Night School, Athletics

Villanova University was host on Sunday evening, March 24, to representatives of the Student Councils of colleges and universities of the Philadelphia area.

Robert Morrison, Student Council Representative of the Evening Division, along with Day School and Evening Division council members from Penn, Temple, LaSalle, St. Joseph's and Villanova attended the conference held in the Faculty Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Joseph Martin, President of the Villanova Day School Council, presided over the meeting.

Evening School SC Discussed

Central among the topics discussed by the group was the role of the Evening Division Student Council in a college. The ways in which Evening and Day Divisions of a school can be brought closer together through Student Council action, and the methods by which the various Evening Division Councils can foster closer relationships between the schools were important topics on the agenda.

Further discussion centered upon the social functions which could be sponsored by the Councils. Financial problems encountered by the Councils were also brought up.

LaSalle Council

The president of LaSalle's Evening Division Council explained to the group the constitution, structure and function of the Evening Division Council of his college.

A lengthy discussion followed his presentation, and the representatives of the many colleges indicated the areas wherein their own council structures could be improved.

Intercollegiate Athletics

The possibility of intercollegiate athletics between the student bodies of the various evening divisions was also discussed at some length, and many proposals were advanced.

Following the meeting coffee and ice cream were served and the members circulated among each other to exchange ideas. Shortly after the meeting adjourned.

Posthumous Award Given To Fr. Lozano

"Le Cruz de Isabel La Catholica," was presented posthumously to the late Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., Sunday, by Dr. Teodomiro de Aguilar of the Spanish Consul during the Spanish Club Communion Breakfast at the Viking Inn in Ardmore.

The award, begun by the Spanish Consul before Fr. Lozano's death in December, was awarded for his work in promoting Spanish culture at Villanova in particular, and in the area in general.

It was accepted in the name of the Augustinian Order by the Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President in charge of student affairs.

Preceded By Mass

The Breakfast was preceded by a Mass in honor of Father Lozano celebrated in St. Mary's Hall by the Rev. William Farrell and attended by members of the Spanish Club.

Spencer Tracy in Literary Club's 'Jekyll and Hyde' obert Louis Stevenson's spine-tingling mystery classic, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde", the first full-length feature film sponsored by the Literary Club, will be shown to its members tonight in 215 Mendel at 7:15 p.m.

Spencer Tracy plays Dr. Jekyll, a scientist interested in a man's dual personality, whose experiments transform him into the evil Mr. Hyde.

Tracy heads a suplative Hollywood cast including Lana Turner and Ingrid Bergman, Academy Award winner for her role in "Anastasia".

The showing of feature films of literary value is just one of the functions of the month-old organization and the possibility of procuring top-notch movies is very good, according to club president, Joe Kinney.

April 10 Closing Date

Junior and senior English majors who have not joined the club are reminded that the closing date for membership this semester is April 10.

Rogers is vice-president of the Literary Club.

Kinney also urges all non-English majors interested in joining to submit a book criticism to him before the April 10 deadline.

Tom Martinez, program chairwill present a brief biography of the modern poet, Robert Frost at next Wednesday's regular bimonthly meeting after which Mr. John Slater, English Instructor, will moderate a discussion on the poet and his works. .

Engineer's Frat Elects Officers, Plans Breakfast

Phi Kappa Pi, Engineering fraternity has elected officers for next year, reports out-going president Gary Moran.

Elected were Leo Rudegeaire, president; Pete Lucas, vice-president; Joe Krackeler, secretary; Joe Driscoll, treasurer; Frank Lamprecht, Sergeant at Arms and Bill Wescott, Student Council representative.

Future Plans

Forthcoming fraternity plans call for awards to be made to seniors and the Communmnion Breakfast to be held later this month.

The annual PKP dinner dance was held Saturday at the Club Del Rio on Westchester Pike, President Moran presiding as toastmaster.

300 Couples

Over 300 couples attended along with faculty members and special guests J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of engineering, John Gallen, CE department head and the Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., dean of student activities. Music was provided by Al Raymonds band.

Initiation was also held last week by the frat. An award was presented to Joe Schultz for the best paddle at "hell night" Thursday.

Clothier and Auth Named To New Engineering Positions

The Vice-President for Academic Affairs, the Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., has announced the appointment of Associate Professor John B. Clotheir, Jr. and Professor George H. Auth as acting heads of the Department of Electrical and Mechanical Engineering respectively.

Clothier is in his tenth year at Villanova and previously had instructed at the University of Pennsylvania and Swarthmore College. He received his B. S. in Electrical Engineering in 1922 from the University of Pennsylvania, where he remained to continue graduate studies.

The newly-appointed head of the E. E. Department has had practical experience with such organizations as RCA, General Electric and the Philadelphia Electric Co., in addition to numerous other industrial companies.

Studied at Penn

Professor Auth, received his M. E. from Brooklyn Polytechnical Institute in 1935. He continued graduate studies at the University of Pennsylvania in 1945, and in 1946 received his M. M. E. from Brooklyn Polytechnical.

Debaters Bow In Tourney

Beta Gamma Debating Society bowed to top area colleges at the St. Joseph's Regional Tournament held the weekend of March 22. Debating teams from 32 regional schools competed in this stiff elimination for the West Point National Tournament.

Each school debating six times, three times affirmative and three negative on the national topic: "Resolved that the United States should discontinue direct economic aid to foreign countries."

Of the twelve decisions rendered, President Jack McGee and Jack Serafin, of the varsity team, were able to win only three of the closely-matched contests. Their average loss was just four points per debate.

Geneva, Waynesburg Bow

Winning decisions were over Geneva and Waynesburg, while losses were to Carnegie Tech, Maryland King's College and St. Peter's.

Mr. Richard McDonough, member of the speech department and coach of Beta Gamma debating society, accompanied Serafin and McGee to St. Joseph's as a judge.

The Villanova Debating Society also met LaSalle College at Villanova on Tuesday, March 19, in two non-decision debates. Debaters were Jim McCarthy and Frank Cunningham as the affirmative, and Bob O'Connor and Bert Gratz as the negative.

Richard McDonough has announced that Villanova will be represented at the annual NFCCS Regional Tournament to be held April 28. The host school for this tournament has not as yet been announced.

Beta Gamma's total 1956-57 record is 50 wins against 23 losses. This year's home record has been 22 wins with no setbacks.

Vitro Offers Early Professional Recognition For M.E.'s, E.E.'s, Physicists, Mathematicians

Apply Your Knowledge At Once In One Of These Advanced R & D Fields

The Vitro Research and Development Laboratory in Silver Spring, Maryland, invites engineering and science majors to discuss a professional assignment in one of these important fields:

Undersea Warfare. Vitro teams are responsible for all phases of research, development, design, prototype fabrication, testing, etc., for the weapons systems presently used in the most advanced Navy submarines. Vitro's work in this advanced region of the national defense program involves new concepts in Torpedoes, Mines, and Sonic Detection. This is a demanding area of study and development work for the graduating engineering or science major.

Guided Missile Ships. Vitro's work on Guided Missile Ships and Systems for the Navy's new fleet includes projects in Fire Control, Systems and Missile Engineering, electrical and mechanical. Most recent installations have been in the cruisers U.S.S. Boston and U.S.S. Canberra.

Land-Based Guided Missiles. This is a sphere of new technology wherein the engineer can make invaluable contributions to Vitro's research in Land-Based Missile Systems for continental air defense.

Vitro, out of full cognizance of the graduate's desire to begin work of a strictly professional nature as soon as he graduates, is making it possible for seniors to arrange for permanent and full professional positions with its Laboratory now.

VITRO LABORATORIES IDEALLY LOCATED

Each of the three Vitro locations offers its own wealth of attractions. The largest Laboratory is located in Silver Spring, Maryland, a delightful suburb of Washington, D. C. Within easy driving range are beaches, lakes, mountains, offering a wide variety of scenery and recreation.

The city itself offers sports attractions including major league baseball, football, and ice hockey. Scattered throughout its parks are public golf courses, tennis courts, and bridle paths. Washington, D. C. offers over 1000 musical and theatrical events each year, many of them at no cost. Schools in this community are outstanding. Homes and apartments of all types and prices are readily available.

Vitro's West Orange, New Jersey Laboratory is situated in the beautiful Orange mountains near one of the most attractive suburbs in the entire State. New York City is only 40 minutes away by automobile. An Armament Test Activity is maintained in Florida at Eglin Air Force Base. This installation is near Fort Walton Beach, a summer resort area on the Gulf of Mexico, with fine white beaches, and a multitude of other attractions.

Laboratory Visits Scheduled By Vitro Representative

Personal inspection of the Vitro facilities, together with an opportunity to meet with staff members, enable the graduating engineer to evaluate more accurately the organization. The Vitro representative will provide interested seniors with details on how such a visit may be arranged.

Full Tuition And Lab Fees Paid By Vitro

Vitro staff members desiring to work toward an appropriate degree or take individual, specialized courses in conjunction with their work assignment, are encouraged to do so by means of Vitro's Educational Assistance Program. Many Vitro staff members have taken advantage of this opportunity with full tuition and laboratory fees being paid by the Company.

NEW $2 MILLION LAB NEAR COMPLETION

The new building to house Vitro's expanding operations in the Washington, D. C., Area, will include engineering and drafting offices as well as a complete model shop and testing laboratory. Vitro has maintained laboratories in the Washington Area for the past ten years.

Representative To Visit Campus Soon For Personal Interviews

Senior engineering and science majors are urged to make early arrangements to meet with the Vitro representative when he visits their campus. This will provide the best opportunity for them to learn firsthand about the Laboratory's work.

Vitro offers unusual opportunities for consistent growth and professional achievement. After a brief orientation program, the graduate is accorded full professional status and his place in a project team.

The typical Vitro project group is charged with responsibility for all phases of a problem, including applied research, development, fabrication of prototype, testing and design cognizance.

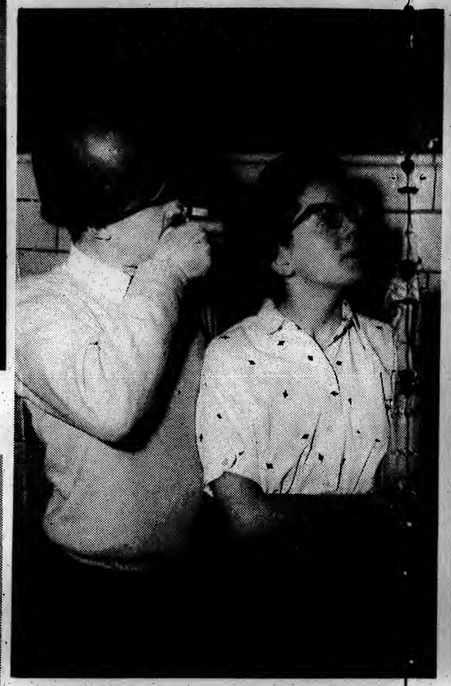
Vitro's small team system not only enables the engineer to put his knowledge to work at once, but quickens the pace of his professional growth by (1) availing him of assistance and experienced guidance when he requires it, (2) allowing his contributions to the team to be promptly recognized, (3) giving him broad, over-all understanding.

The graduating engineer who starts his career at Vitro quickly becomes a professional who is capable of fully assuming his assignment within a short period because of his rapid initiation into practical engineering work. The number, diversification and duration of Vitro programs provide its staff members with creative stimulus and rule out any possibility of over-specialization.

The Laboratory Division's policy of "promotion from within" has provided ample opportunity for growth to Vitro's professional personnel. This policy and our expansion rate insure an excellent climate for rapid advancement and professional recognition.

Vitro Technical Rep. On Campus Monday, April 29

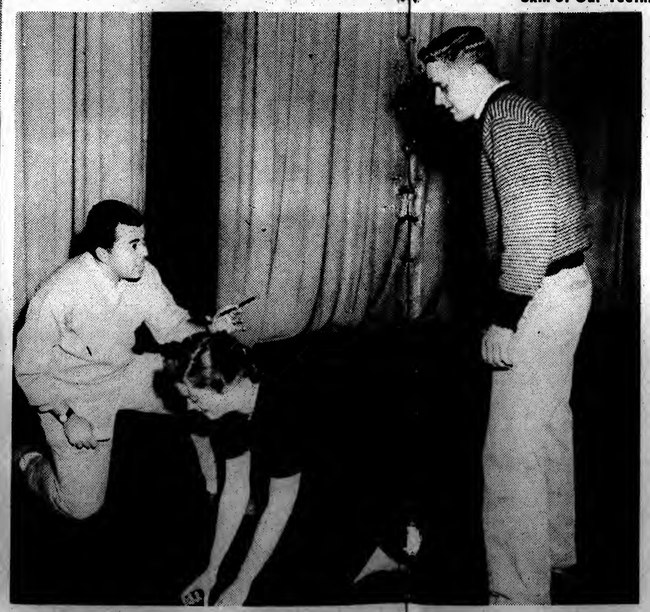
Interested M.E.'s, E.E.'s, math and physics majors are invited to make appointments now for a personal interview with a member of Vitro's engineering staff when he visits the campus to give firsthand information on available opportunities. Appointments may be made with the Campus Placement Officer who also has available copies of pamphlets outlining Company benefits, policies, and living conditions in the Washington, D. C., Area. Or write Vitro, requesting further information and pamphlets. Address: Personnel Department, Vitro Laboratories, 962 Wayne Avenue, Silver Spring, Maryland.



Masque Players Present Preview of What to Expect Tomorrow Eve. When 'Skin of Our Teeth' Opens

It looks like everyone is happy here. Tom Kimmel has just returned home from a hard day's work and is about to embrace Claire Sigerson, who plays his wife in "The Skin of Our Teeth." Other smiling faces belong to Walt Gould, Tonia deMarino and Rita Capek.

Looks like Tom Kimmel has met his match in Walt Gould. Walt appears a bit angry with the existing situations during rehearsal for Belle Masque's "The Skin of Our Teeth." Trying to restrain him are Claire Sigerson and Rita Capek.



It looks like George means trouble this time, but Sharon seems unperturbed by that ferocious gleam in his eye. George Brown and Sharon McAuliffe, Rosemont senior, take time out during rehearsals for "The Skin of Our Teeth" for a little clowning around at the Field House.

Rita Capek has won Tom Kimmel away from Claire Sigerson, and Claire seems unhappy about the whole situation. Tonia deMarino looks on during Belle Masque practice for tomorrow's production "The Skin of Our Teeth."

Rita's at it again. She's trying to steal Tom Kimmel away from his wife during "The Skin of Our Teeth." Looks pretty tempting at that.

"That's the way I want it done," exclaims Belle Masque director Mr. Richard Duprey as Rita Capeck and Tom Kimmel seem to bring off the required effect during staging of "The Skin of Our Teeth."

Three Century-Old Stein Is Displayed In Library

The library is displaying on the first floor one of the forerunners of our modern cups.

The 250 year old stein is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. George Pfaff.

The silver tankard bears the maker's initials—O.S. London, 1692. The tankard measures 8¼ inches high with a base of 7½ inches.

Intricate Decoration

Close examination reveals clever and intricate decoration. A battle scene between the Saracens and the Christians is depicted. The cover inscription reads: "The gift of the East India Company to Sir Thomas Cooke of the City of London and Member of Parliament for the borough of Colchester, 1693."

Recent tracing of the background of the inscription brings a very interesting story to light. When the question of a new charter for the East India Company came up in the Parliament in 1691, a little political maneuvering was found necessary to obtain it. Sir Josiah Child, who favored the Company, retired in favor of his trusty kinsmen, Sir Thomas Cooke.

Original Lobbyist

A wealthy merchant and member of Parliament, Cooke proceeded to disperse a huge fund in the hope of winning his own wishes, with the result that the new charter was granted.

But the Company's enemies and rivals were not to let the secret of this fund go unprobed. They badgered poor Sir Thomas Cooke in Parliament—and when he refused to answer—consigned him to the Tower of London for contempt. After all, the Tower does seem to have its good points.

Early Tankards

Tankards are among the earliest things made by silversmiths. The name is derived from the large, iron-bound wooden pitchers which the London housewives used to carry water from the conduits that flowed London's main streets.

From these early wooden pitchers, the present silver tankards have evolved.

The earliest examples were tall, tapering and horn shaped. During the reign of King James I, the horn side turned into a straight side. With the Restoration came the sumptious and generous drinking vessels. At the end of the 17th century and the early part of the 18th, silversmiths made a thriving business in designing and making the tankards.

'Merrie' England

Tankards played a large role in the history of "merrie" England. Silver played a large part in the making of beautiful examples. A fine silver tankard was often presented as a mark of appreciation, courtesy or

What a MATHEMATICIAN can do at IBM

Mathematics is an ancient but ever-advancing science that contains many forms. It shouldn't surprise you then that it took some time before John Jackson discovered the one brand of mathematics that seemed custom-tailored to his ability and temperament. John is an Applied Science Representative, working out of the IBM office at 122 East 42nd Street, N. Y. C.

First of all, what's it all about? What does a fellow like John Jackson do all day? In his own words, "I keep in touch with the executives of many different companies—advising them on the use of their IBM electronic data processing computers. I personally consult with these customers, and analyze their scientific and technical problems for solution by IBM. Occasionally, I'm asked to write papers, and give talks and demonstrations on electronic computing. All in all, it's pretty fascinating . . . something new pops up every day." In other words, John is a full-fledged computing expert, a consultant . . . and a very important person in this coming age of automation through electronics.

Since the IBM laboratories are always devising easier and faster ways to solve the problems of science, government, and industry, an Applied Science Representative can never say he's learned his job and that's the end of it. At least once every two months, he attends seminars to be updated on the latest developments in engineering and operations research.

Introduces new methods

During the two years that John has spent with IBM in Applied Science, he has guided innumerable IBM customers to new and better ways of doing things electronically. For example: about a year ago, a leading aircraft manufacturer wanted to experiment with a radically different design for a nuclear reactor. Although the basic format had been established, the project still required many months of toil with mathematical equations.

The aircraft people decided that they couldn't afford to wait that long, so they called in IBM. After discussion with top executives, John helped to map out a computer program that saved the organization over 100 days of pencil-chewing, nail-biting arithmetic. Later, for this same company, John organized the establishment of computer systems for aircraft performance predictions . . . for data reduction of wind tunnel tests . . . and for wing stress analysis. At the same time, he worked with this company's own employees, training them in the use of IBM equipment. John still drops around to see that everything is running smoothly.

Mapping out a computer program

Another service that John performs is the constant reappraisal of each customer's IBM operation. Occasionally, a customer may tie himself in knots over a procedural "stickler." Periodically, in fact, John brings IBM customers together . . . just to talk over what's happening in each other's business—how everybody else handled that old bugaboo in any industry . . . details.

New field for Mathematicians

John is exercising his mathematical know-how in a field that was practically unheard of ten years ago. Even now, this kind of work may be news to you. It was to John Jackson a few years back when he was an undergraduate at the University of Colorado. At that time, he was considering actuarial work or mathematical research. But John liked the excitement and diversification of science and industry and he wanted to use his mathematical background in both of those areas. It was not until he was interviewed by IBM that field computing whetted his scientific appetite. A few months later, John launched his own IBM career as an Applied Science trainee.

Promotionwise, John has come a long way since that time. He's now an Applied Science Representative in one of the busiest, most responsible offices in the IBM organization . . . mid-town Manhattan.

With his wife, Katherine, and daughter, Lisa, 20 months, and John,

Discussing a problem with colleagues

Jr., 6 weeks, he enjoys his suburban Port Washington home. He's happy and he's satisfied. And then, too, John knows a few vital statistics about IBM . . . such as the fact that the Applied Science Division has quadrupled during the past three years, and that in 1956 alone, over 70 promotions were conferred. If ever a future held promise, here is one.

IBM hopes that this message will help to give you some idea of what a mathematician can do at IBM. There are equal opportunities for E.E.'s, M.E.'s, physicists and Liberal Arts majors in IBM's many divisions—Research, Product Development, Manufacturing Engineering, Sales and Technical Services. Why not drop in and discuss IBM with your Placement Director? He can supply our latest brochure and tell you when IBM will next interview on your campus. Meanwhile, IBM will be happy to answer your questions. Just write to Mr. P. H. Bradley, IBM, Room 8701, 590 Madison Avenue New York 22, N. Y.

Dean Powers Will Address Pa. A-V Ass'n.

Eugene P. Powers, Dean of the Villanova Evening Division, will attend the spring meeting of the Pennsylvania Audio-Visual Association for Teacher Education April 13 and 14, at State Teachers College, East Stroudsburg, Pa.

Dr. Powers is president of the Association, and will make the opening and closing remarks about the aims and achievements of the conference. Educators from many institutions in the state will be present to hear discussions on the philosophy of education and the place of audio-visual aids in teaching.

Demonstrations of closed circuit television methods will be part of the comprehensive program. Dean Powers will head a discussion on the work of the psychology laboratory.

DeVincenzo Presides

The affair was presided over by toastmaster Vito DiVincenzo, new moderator of the Spanish Club. Dr. de Aguilar was the principal speaker.

During the Breakfast awards were presented to two Villanova students for their literary talents. The prize for the best essay in Spanish was presented to William J. Lyons. The award for the best poem in English was won by Michael J. Dougherty. Both essay and poem honoring the great Spanish writer Cervantes, a yearly procedure with the Spanish Club.

Mascagni and Nominations Scheduled For O-C Meeting

The Opera Classica Music Society features Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana with Callas as Santuzza tomorrow at 7:30 in the East Lounge, Dougherty Hall.

The Angel recording of Mascagni's Rustic Chilavry featuring the controversial Maria Meneghini Callas, Giuseppe Di Stefano, and Rolando Panerai will also be heard at this time.

Premiere In Phila.

The American premiere of this one-act opera was held in Philadelphia on Sept. 9, 1891. The setting is a Sicilian Village square; the time, the latter part of the nineteenth century.

The plot is the usual one. Turiddu loves Lola who is married to Alfio. But Santuzza loves Turiddu. Alfio kills Turiddu and everyone lives miserably ever after. A free Italian-English libretto is available to all who attend.

New Posts Adopted

Nominations for officers will also be included in tomorrow's meeting. Opera Classica will abandon its old posts of president and secretary-treasurer and adopt four new posts: The Chief Cultural Minister, Assistant Cultural Minister, The Minister on Meetings, and the Minister of Finance.

Opera Classica will expand its activities in the 1957-58 season. Guest artists will be presented, films featuring classical music, and a larger number of cultural trips are scheduled.

Society Display In Library

The Society will display material of classical music in the library effective this week. Included will be photographs of famous opera stars, musigraphs depicting the development of classical music from ancient Greece, libretti, music scores, and minature musical instruments.

WVIL will present Donizetti's L'Elisir D'Amore sung by Di Stefano and Gueden, tomorrow night at 10:15 p.m. Flotow's Martha with Tagliavini and Tassinari will be played Monday, April 8 at 10:15 p.m.

Navy Visits VU Today

Seniors interested in making application for Naval Aviation should contact Lt. Comdr. Sobien USNR who will be located in Dougherty Hall today.

Questions concerning the Aviation Officer Candidate Program as well as the NavCad Program will be answered in addition to mental and physical Exams given.

Two courses of action to "Wings of Gold" are open to ambitious young men. Seniors can enter training after Graduation under the AOC Program as a commissioned officer following a four months indoctrination period.

Men who have completed 2 years of college can enter the NavCad Program and are commissioned at the end of their flight training.

A display will be in Dougherty Hall also for all to see the power of the Navy Air Arm.

Hans Morgenthau Delivers Lecture On Foreign Policy

Dr. Hans Morgenthau, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, will deliver this year's University of Pennsylvania Philomathean Society Oration tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Huston Hall Auditorium, 3417 Spruce Street.

Dr. Morgenthau is a former State Department consultant and today occupies the position of director of the center for the study of American foreign policy.

The topic of his speech will be, "Democracy and Foreign Policy."

Dialogue Mass –

The second in the series of Faculty Dialogue Masses, in which the responses of the service and the "Gloria" and "Credo" are answered by the congregation, will be celebated on Thursday, April 4 in the University Chapel at 10:30 A.M.

Lawyer Walsh To Speak At VU Law Forum

John Patrick Walsh, Esq., noted Philadelphia lawyer, will be speaker at the Villanova Law School Forum to be held April 10, at Garey Hall.

Walsh, who has extensive experience in criminial cases, will address the Forum on criminal law.

The Philadelphia lawyer is the donor of an annual $100 prize to the Villanova Law School in honor of the late Mr. Justice Frank Murphy of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The prize is presented for the student essay which best exemplifies Murphy's support of personal rights under the Constitution.

The Forum is slated to begin at 8:15 p.m. and all Villanova students are invited to attend.

ELECTRONICS ENGINEERS is this how you would run a company?

If so, you might enjoy working with us —because this is how we run ours:

What We Do

We are an electronics engineering company 8 years old and employing about 75 people. Our income is from two sources; research and development contracts, and manufactured products. Our sales have been increasing steadily and we have recently had to double our plant size to keep pace with our expanding operations.

Who Are the Managers?

As an engineering company, we have learned to trust engineers with our top positions. Our president, vice-presidents, in fact all our management people, are experienced engineers. The business experience which equips them for management tasks has not obscured the technical considerations which dominate our activities. As in most small companies, the distance from bottom to top is short. There are no rigid echelons, no remote and unapproachable Front Office.

What Kind of People Do We Hire?

Originality, imagination, and a basic physical insight into their work are the qualities we value most in our engineers. Continous stress on these qualities since the company's inception has brought together a group of engineers who are, first of all, individuals, but who have proved, too, to have this in common: the versatility of the non-specialist and, regardless of age, the lively curiosity that led them into scientific careers in the first place. With professional interests often reflected in spare-time activities, they are free to carry on hobby projects in a company-equipped "week-end workshop". The atmosphere of mutual respect in which these men work is of their own making. We have found that, besides understanding their work, they understand one another.

For a campus interview sign up now with Placement Bureau. Our representative will be at Villanova on April 9.

How We Determine Salaries

The individual contribution of each engineer to the company's progress is the major factor that determines his salary. We believe that this is the logical "pay scale". We have no automatic increases or seniority requirements. To insure against stagnation, however, the salaries of all employees are reviewed twice a year. This policy has resulted in exceptional pay and advancement opportunities, particularly for younger men. Two out of five of our top engineers are men who have been out of school less than five years.

Where We Are

We have located our company in southern Connecticut because we like to live and work in this desirable area. Most of our employees drive to work in 15 minutes on country roads, and many go home for lunch. In this area, we are close to good schools as well as fine recreational, educational and entertainment facilities.

If You Are Interested

We now wish to add more engineers to our organization to work on a wide variety of projects involving communications engineering, digital and analog computer techniques, magnetics, research on ferrites, and other aspects of electronics. We need younger engineers to work with senior men of outstanding ability, as well as senior engineers to assume project responsibility. Company policy provides vacation, sick leave, insurance and help with graduate studies. If you would like to learn more, send for our free booklet describing the business and the people of CGS Laboratories. There is no obligation.

Discipline Board Addition Asked by Student Council

By BILL CHRISTY

A motion was passed unanimously by the Student Council at the last meeting requesting that the Administration add to the Board of Discipline a student selected by the Chairman of the Student Council.

During the discussion following the presentation of the suggestion, Rev. Dante Girolami, moderator of the Council, stated his approval and endorsement of the idea. The Board now consists of six members: Rev. Joseph Kemme, vice president of student affairs; Rev. George McLaughlin, dean of men; three dormitory prefects and one law-school counselor.

Upperclass Privileges Upheld

Upperclass privilege was supported by the Council on two points:

A motion by Tom Hoffman, newly-elected resident of the Class of 1960, allowing the purchase of blazers at the end of freshman year was defeated. This tradition was restored by a Council resolution last year after a two-year lapse.

Paul Lauglin introduced a proposal, adopted by the Council, that next year's junior and seniors be allowed the privilege of choosing which of the two annual retreats they would prefer to attend. Fr. Klekotka, Villanova's chaplain, had earlier expressed agreement with this if he would be notified of the decision early next year.

Other Items Discussed

Other matters covered at the meeting included: a request to the Administration to consider possibilities of vacation employment when planning the Christmas recess, the formation of committees to look into the formation of area clubs and the possibility of Villanova's Student Council join ing the National Association of Student overnmenGts.

Students Eligible For Cash Awards In Paper Contest

The American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers, Philadelphia section, are offering cash awards for papers on metallurgy and mining.

Prizes of $25 and $10 will be awarded for the best papers in the undergraduate and graduate levels in both fields.

Papers may range from 2000 to 4000 words. Deadline is June 25. Papers must be sent to D. B. Coughlan, Box 576, Berwyn, Pa., chairman of the prize paper committee. All undergraduates are eligible.

Awards will be made in the Fall.

Further information will be posted on the bulletin board in the Publication Office, second floor Dougherty Hall.

Soph Arts Test

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, Dean of Arts and Sciences, has announced that there will be a "Survey Test" given to all Arts and Science sophomores immediately after the Easter vacation.

Further information will follow concerning this test.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

By JOE MARTIN, SC President

At the recent Council meeting a motion was asked that should be of interest to all of the tudents of Villanova. By a unanimous vote of he representatives present a motion to request that a student be added to the University isciplinary board was approved. As was reorted in the VILLANOVAN last week, this epresentative would be a member of the Student Council and selected by the Chairman "on he basis of integrity and confidence." It is easonably easy to see that such a representative would add to the effectiveness of the oard by reminding any student appearing beore them that a violation of the rules at Villanova is a violation against the students themelves as well as the administrators who are unning the University. Both our students and our administration have the best interests of Villanova as the motive for their action. The addition of a student to such a post would strengthen cooperation of the two in meeting this goal.

MARTIN

The method of selection of such a representative is a very important factor to be considered in this matter. Although the person selected should be a person with several outstanding attributes, I feel that there are two basic qualifications to be met. They are: (1) that he be of high moral character with true loyalty to Villanova; (2) and that he truly be representative of the students. Considering these facts in reverse order one can see that the members of the Student Council, who are elected by their classmates, are surely representative of the student body. As far as the moral character is concerned, the Student Council chairman will have to use extreme care in his selection since the wrong man in such a job would destroy the confidence of the administration in the Student Council, and as a result in the student body as well.

* * * *

One of the most talked about subjects on our campus is the "power of the Student Council." In spite of this it is something that is not fully understood by everyone. "Power" is defined in the dictionary as (1) strength; might; force; and (2) a person or thing having . . . authority or influence. In the discussion of Council power we sometimes are looking at it in terms of the first definition and not the second.

Let us consider three points. Who is in prime authority at Villanova? What is Student Council? How does it fit into overall rganization? The answer to the first question is very simple. Villanova is run by the Augustinian priests. These men have devoted their lives to the education and development of Catholic gentlemen. The next question, though not as apparent, is equally simple. The Student Council is the official voice of the Villanova students.

The third question is the key one because its answer relates the first and second. The job of the Council is to determine what the majority of students think about a campus issue, and to bring this to the attention of the administration. If the administration does not agree with this stand, Student Council has no "right" to see it carried through. The next thought is just how the Student Council can use their "authority influence."

If the Student Council can demonstrate to everyone that they are a mature, intelligent body who are interested in aiding the administration in the running of the University, their views will be respected on that basis. If they can show that they are capable leaders the administration will be glad to allow them to take a more active part in the determination of various rules and policies at Villanova. If they can show that they are not a group of adolescent boys trying to satisfy their own selfish aims they will be able to earn the confidence of the administration and the respect of the students.

I feel that the 1956-57 Council has made long strides toward this end. With men in the Sophomore and Junior classes continuing the interest and competence they showed during this year the Student Council will surely advance in "influence and authority" in the coming years.

The Cosmopolitan Mystery

The two major, clear-cut divisions of the mystery are the American and the English. Besides these, there may be a few translated from the original French or Bessarabian. Ameican stories are usually matter-of-fact and hard-boiled to some degree. Sex rears its ugly(?) head in many of the native stories. British mysteries, on the other hand, often have an air of unreality or of whimsy. Michael Innes turns out fantastic, rather intellectual stories of this type. English mysteries of the better kind achieve a more artistic and less commercial effect than those of American authors.

Miss Marple Meets Mike Shayne

The British counterpart of the all-tough American detective is the sweet little old lady who lives in a small village. Although the village on the surface is as sweet as the little old lady, under the surface lurk the more lurid of the seven capital sins. The quaint yokels are being systematically liquidated through a series of clever unconvincing "accidents." After the thirteenth murder, the County Constabulary is still without a clue and turn to the sweet little old lady for help. Two pages later she has trapped the murderer and averted four more murders; the story closes as the sweet little old lady explains—in painstaking detail—the motives and methods of the unhappy killer to a moronic, adoring inspector.

For light entertainment, escape or vicarious thrills a mystery is matchless.

The shoe is on the other foot

Soon you will decide on the kind of company in which you want to invest the knowledge you have acquired through engineering education.

You will probably have more companies to consider than those who graduated before you . . . many more than the men who collected their sheepskins before 1950. While the number of engineering graduates once exceeded the number of openings, today there are more good opportunities than there are capable young men to pick up the pay checks. In short, the shoe is on the other foot—YOUR foot!

Although we recognize that fact, we cannot relax our standards. We still want only those who have the creative spark, the imagination, the talent to make important contributions in our organization. No doubt you will understand why . . . when you read our booklet. It tells about the exciting progress of helicopters and indicates something of the part Sikorsky has played and will play in their development.

This informative booklet is yours for the writing, no strings attached. Should you be considering Sikorsky as a company where you might like to get started, then tell us, too, a little about yourself. Address your letter to Mr. Richard Auten at our Bridgeport Personnel Department.

Baseball Season Begins As Wildcats Equal Colby, 4-4

Come From Behind Twice To Tie In 11 Innings, Downed By Penn In Second Contest

By JACK CURTIN

It was proper and fitting that dreary, overcast skies marked the opening games of the 1957 Villanova baseball season. The Wildcats went winless in their first two encounters.

The Mainliners came from behind twice to tie Colby in the season's opener last Friday afternoon and then were crushed by the University of Pennsylvania on Saturday. Both games were played on the Villanova diamond.

Villanova was never in the Penn battle as the Quakers rolled to an easy 12-6 victory, marking a highly successful season's opener for the Red and Blue.

An 'Achilles Heel'

Penn found Villanova's "Achilles heel" early in the Saturday game. Third baseman Gordon Achilles smaked a three run homer in the first inning against hurler Jim Grazione to pace a rally that yielded five runs before a man could be retired by the Wildcats.

This five run cushion lasted until the third frame when four consecutive Villanova doubles by Grazione, Charley DiGiovanni, George Emma, and Bob Vincent added up to three runs. Penn switched pitchers at this point and was never again in serious danger.

Penn came back with another counter in the top of the fourth, and then knocked Grazione from the mound with a three run uprising in the fifth. Reliefer Jack Kelly gave up three more runs in the sixth to end the Penn scoring. Joe Michell pitched the final frame for Villanova.

An error, John Donatucci's double, and John Bauer's single gave Villanova two more runs in the fifth inning, while Donatucci scored the final run in the ninth.

Colby Game Thrilling

The 4-4 tie with Colby 24 hours previous was a much more thrilling contest.

The game, marking not only the Villanova opener but also the beginning of the Philadelphia collegiate season, was the fifth on Colby's schedule. The

Track Season Was Greatest Triumph In Winter Sports

By STAN LUPA

To heap more praise upon Villanova's fabulous track team or coach Jim Elliott would be anticlimatic. Elliott and his troupe of stars have been toasted and re-toasted since the indoor season began.

The Wildcats can boast of two Olympic champions, two national indoor championship titles, and the greatest star-studded line-up of individual performers in the history of the sport. Superlatives are not necessary; the record speaks for itself.

Top Flight Individuals

Elliott, and his able assistant, Jim Tuppeny, had individual strength this year in the persons of Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins, Phil Reavis, and Don Bragg. These men are all considered top contenders in their respective events.

To back up these individual stars Elliott had relayers Gene Maliff, Al Peterson, John Furlinger, Ed Collymore, and Bill Rahn. These men, often teamed with Jenkins, made up almost unbeatable quartets.

Depth was added by George Sydnor, Alex Breckenridge, John Kopil, Bob Holup, and Charley Stead. Stead was the surprise find of the season. The supposed relay star became one of the country's top high jump competitors, often being the only contestant to challenge teammate Reavis for top honors in the event.

These are the men who, for the most part, made up the most powerful track unit in history. They are the national indoor AAU and IC4A champions.

A Myriad of Stars

To review the whole season, recounting the myriad of starring performances, would more than cover the entire sports page, but two performances should be noted.

The Wildcats became the first peacetime collegiate squad to ever cop the AAU title with a tremendous show of power on Feb. 23.

One week later, paced by Delany's unbelievable double victory in the 1000 and two mile run, the Mainliners ran another defending champion squad into the ground. In the IC4A championships the Wildcats crushed last year's winner, Manhattan, 46-22.

Quite A Season

Reavis and Stead tied in the high jump, setting a new record. Bragg, Jenkins, and the relayers won easily, while Sydnor, Kopil, Breckenridge, and Holup added points.

Perhaps a fitting closing for these and the rest of the season's accomplishments came in the Chicago Daily News Relays. Appearing in the midwest for the first time, the 'Cats put on a real show.

Delany's mile was two-tenths of a second shy of the world's indoor record, the mile relayers set a new world's record for an 11 lap track, Bragg beat Bob Richards for the first time, and Jenkins and Reavis won.

It was quite a season.

Jim Elliott Feted During Club Dinner

Last Monday night Villanova University track coach, Jim "Jumbo" Elliott was honored by his friends and colleagues at a Testimonial night at the Penn and Pencil Club.

JIM ELLIOTT
More Honors

Elliott, who is the first coach ever honored by the Penn and Pencil Club, was recipient of many awards and gifts. One of the gifts bestowed on the Wildcat mentor was a portrait sketch drawn by the newspapermen's organization's art chairman, George Fayko. A copy of this portrait of the Wildcat coach will be put on display in the club's display case with similar portraits of other prominant personages honored by the club.

Elliott received the other copy of the life-like portrait.

Most Consitent Wildcat:

John DiGiallorenzo Leads Villanova Infield During Third Year at Second Base

By FRANK FLEMING

In the spring of 1955 a young sophomore won himself a starting assignment on the Villanova University baseball team. Since then John DiGiallorenzo has been the starting second baseman for the Wildcat nine.

A graduate of Lower Merion High School, the mild mannered, soft spoken athlete is one of the team's leading hitters. Last year against a strong Maine team, Johnnie led the squad in hitting. In that contest he hit every time he stepped to the plate, going three for three for the afternon. One of these hits was a home run, while singles accounted for his other two hits.

During his sophomore year, DiGiallorenzo had another exceptionally fine day against Rutgers. His two doubles and a triple were big factors in the Wildcat's 12-0 rout of the New Jersey team.

Starred At Lower Merion

Johnnie did not start his climb to athletic stardom at Villanova but was a standout athlete during his undergraduate days at Lower Merion. While there he was a starter on the baseball team for three straight years and led his team to the first place spot in the Suburban One League race in his junior year. In his senior year, during which he played in the shortstop post, DiGiallorenzo's team was nudged out of its second straight league championship.

The Wildcat second sacker's athletic abilities are not limited to diamond activity. While at the Main Line high school John was a starter for two years on the court squad. In his senior year the set shot artist was elected captain of the team which turned out to be one of the best basketball teams Lower Merion had produced in years.

John's Big Game

John's greatest thrill came while playing independent baseball. As a member of the Narbeth team, the local boy contributed three hits to help his team win an extra inning game and become champions of the highly regarded Penn-Del League.

As a result of this and many other equally brilliant performances both at bat and in the field, John has been approached by several major league clubs with offers which eventually lead to big league ball. But the outstanding athlete plans to continue his education at the Temple University School of Dentistry after his upcoming graduation from Villanova.

One of the honors DiGiallorenzo gained in the world of baseball was that of being chosen to the State All Star Team of the American Legion. This team is made up of a select group of athletes who compete in the state wide leagues sponsored by the veteran organization. From this team which plays annually in Connie Mack Stadium have come some of our best major league ball players including the Phillies' ace hurler, Curt Simmons.

JOHN Di GIALLORENZO

Carries Science Major

At Villanova John is taking one of the hardest courses on the curriculum being a Liberal Arts student and carrying a science major. Despite this the Overbrook Hills resident is active in many student activities beside his baseball endeavors. Johnnie is active in the International Relations Society, Intercollegiate Conference on Government, French and Philosophy Clubs.

John, who captained the Wildcats in their opening game with Colby last week, is one of the big reasons many people believe that Art Mahan's nine will have a successful season despite their many handicaps.

Hoopster Dinner Arranged By South Jersey VU Club; Rodgers Receives Plaque

Final arrangements have been completed for the seventh annual banquet sponsored by the Villanova Club of South Jersey in honor of the coaches and squad of the Villanova University basketball team to be held on Wednesday, April 3rd, 7:00 P.M. at Kenney's Restaurant, Camden, New Jersey.

The principal speaker of the evening will be Jim Elliott, track coach of the Wildcat squad which recently won the AAU and IC4A indoor championships on successive weekends. The other speakers of the evening will include the Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., President of the University, Al Severance, besketball coach and Michael Flynn, club president.

The banquet will be the occasion for the presentation of the Michael Saxe Memorial Plaque to the outstanding player in the Philadelphia city series. The selection of the five city coaches, made shortly after the conclusion of the series, was Guy Rodgers of Temple University. Presented for the first time last year, the recipient again being Temple's Rodgers, this award has become a permanent part of the banquet.

Other awards to be made will include the General Alumni Association Most Valuable Player Award, the Villanova Club of South Jersey and the Club Loyalty Award. In addition gold basketballs will be presented to the letter winners on the squad.

Duffers Conquer Penn Intramural Champions, 61-39

By STAN LUPA

The Duffers, Villanova's championship Intramural basketball quintet, defeated the University of Pennsylvania, 61-39, last Wednesday evening in the Pennsylvania Palestra.

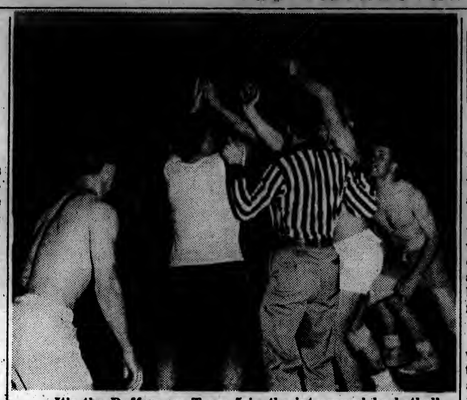
The victory over the Quakers enabled the Wildcat five to win the George Munger Basketball Trophy, given annually to the intra-city winner.

The Duffers, a day student team, won the Villanova championship two days previous to the Palestra battle when they downed Team 5, of the varsity athletic afternoon league, 55-33, in Alumni Gym.

Feiler Led Duffers

Bob Feiler led the winners in the Villanova playoff with 13 points. He was well supported by Jack Barr's 11 and Joe Armon's 9 counters. Bill Magee, varsity football quarterback, led Team 5 with 11.

At the Palestra, the Duffers took and early lead and never lost it as they rolled to the comparatively easy conquest. The Penn quintet had been undefeated in 12 previous encounters.



Jack Barr paced the Wildcat five in this post-season battle with seven field goals and three foul shots for 17 points. Bob Curvan was second in the scoring column with 12, and Ted Bettivye had 11.

Another Wilt?

Penn's six foot, five inch center, Joe McNamara, compiled most of their points, having 12 baskets and 4 foul goals for 28 points.

This victory was the second Villanova one in a series which began in 1955 when the Hottrotters, defeated in the school playoffs this year, beat the Penn champs, 27-25.

No game was played last year because of schedule difficulties, thus no Villanova team has ever lost in this contest.

It's the Duffers vs. Team 5 in the intramural basketball championship playoff in Alumni Gym last week. Players scramble for tap beginning the game. Duffers went on to capture the title.

Villanova Ties In Eighth

Maine school was seeking its fourth triumph.

Colby broke into the scoring column first, picking up two runs in the third inning on two singles, two walks, and a sacrifice fly against starting pitcher Dick Black.

An inning later the Wildcats tied it up at 2-2 when John DiGiallorenzo walked, George Emma smacked a sharp single to left for the first Villanova hit, and both men scored when Terry Hayes lined the next offering over second base.

Scalzi Takes Mound

Colby immediately gained another two run advantage in the top of the fifth ,scoring on a walk, a single, and a double.

With Bob Scalzi pitching, the Wildcats held the Colbyites scoreless the rest of the way, and then proceeded to tie up the score in the eighth inning.

Hank Nichols ,at the plate for pitcher Scalzi, walked, Charley DiGiovanni singled, and John DiGiallorenzo's third hit of the afternoon scored both. Neither team could score again and the contest ran into 11 innings before it was called because of darkness.

Joe Mitchell pitched the last three innings for Villanova.

Diamond Dust: Art Mahan and his squad went on the road seeking their first victory of the young season, playing Navy away on Monday, too late to be covered in the paper . . . Villanova collected 17 hits and 10 runs in the first two games and didn't win either, an unusual and unenviable achievement . . . Terry Hayes must be the most photogenic man on the team. After both home games, pictures of the catcher appeared in the Philadelphia papers, sliding into home plate. Unfortunately, he was out both times . . . Jim Grazione, deadeye football tosser, makes good use of that arm on the diamond too. In the Colby game his peg prevented Colby from winning the contest in the ninth inning as he threw a baserunner out at the plate.

Athletes and Activities

By FRANK FLEMING

For an athlete who spends many weekends traveling with his team, puts in at least 17 hours a week in a classroom, and spends at least an additional 15 practicing his particular athletic endeavor, the job of maintaining passing grades is quite an ordeal. But at Villanova all the athletes manage to do this feat while most manage also to be active in at least one extra-curricular activity.

Nearly every person in the world has heard of Ron Delany-track star, but how many people have heard of Ron Delany-singer, writer, financeer, and public speaker. Delany is a perfect example of an athlete who develops himself along lines other than the athletics through which he has gained his fame. Although combining the rigors of a championship track star and student, Delany finds time to relax through many extra-curricular activities.

Delany Comments

The Olympic champion recently surprised many people when it was announced that his commentaries on his native Ireland were to be published in the Lynx, Villanova's literary magazine. But anyone who knows the great miler was not surprised by this announcement for this is but one of Delany's many pursuits. Since he began his climb to international fame during last year's indoor track season, the son of Erin has become quite an accomplished after-dinner speaker. His great Irish wit has entertained various groups from coast to coast.

This Sunday evening Delany will display another one of his diversified talents when he will render a selection of Irish ballads in the National Federation of Catholic College students annual variety show at Chestnut Hill College. Singing is not Ronnie's only musical talent for he has proven himself to be a fine pianist.

Athletes and Politics

Delany does not limit his extra-curricular endeavors to the field of entertainment. He has become a figure in Villanova politics by running for the office of class Treasurer last year. The star of the national championship track team won hands down and is presently serving out his term of office.

Ron Delany is not the only Villanova athlete to take an active part in extra-curriculars. Three members of the Wildcat basketball team are also active in other activities of the school. Tommy Brennan was the first vice-president of the Class of 1958. This year his is co-chairman of Junior Week. His teammate Jack Kelly is also active in class politics and is presently serving as secretary of the class of '58. Baseball star Terry Hayes served in the same capacity last year. Bill Haley is president of the newly formed Finance club of which hoopster Kenny Harrison and grid star Gene Paja are charter members.

Football Team Led Way

Villanova football players have the honor of being the only group of athletes who have had a club organized for their own benefit. In the 1930s when Villanova was one of the best football schools in the country, coach Harry Strulderer and Business Manager Bob Whalen organized the Turf and Tinsel Club to provide off season activity for their varsity ballplayers. This organization has been recently revived after an absence from the campus and now each year presents an original musical comedy. Although with its revival on campus T'n'T has been opened to all students many gridders still take part in the show. Last year tackle Don Luzzi was one of the stars in the groups production of "Barbara of Seville."

Wildcats Served For Three Decades By Trainer Nivens

By BILL VINCENT

Perhaps many of us don't realize it, but Villanova has many traditions to be proud of other than big dances, annual football games, and other social events. One of these traditions is a small man with a big heart who has been both close and valuable to Villanova for many years. His name is Jake Nivens and his capacity at Villanova is athletic trainer.

Jake, a resident of Bryn Mawr all his life, came to Villanova in 1929 as assistant trainer under Harry Coates. Later he was an assistant trainer to Jim Elliott, present track coach, and Ray Cadsby. In 1942 Jake left Villanova to go into the service, spending four years in Europe. When he left the service in 1946, he was immediately made head trainer at Villanova and has held that position to the present day.

Aches and Pains

Jake takes care of the aches and pains of all Villanova's athletes including the members of the basketball, baseball, football, track, cross country and swimming teams. He travels with the squads throughout the year and is often seen hurrying back from a basketball game late Friday night so that he may accompany the track team to a Saturday night meet.

Jake is famous for his impartiality toward everyone. One could be an All-American or a substitute and he still would receive the same treatment from Jake. He still gives the same massage, the same rub down, the same kind of bandages and jokes with everyone in the same way. Jake has given this personal and invaluable assistance to many of Villanova's great athletes, including Eddie Michaels, Sr., Paul Arizin, Fred Dwyer, Gene Filipski and Ron Delany.

Jake's Remembrance

Jake has at least one remembrance of all these Villanova greats. His pride and joy is his collection of 29 silhouettes of all the great athletes on Villanova's history. This collection includes the six members of the 1,000 point club, Olympians, All Americans and other former Villanova stars.

Every year each senior member of the Wildcat track team presents Jake with one of his track medals that he has received while running at Villanova. Jake has also received awards from a number of Wildcat football teams, including a watch from the great Harbor Bowl champions of 1950. A number of years ago the Alumni Club of South Jersey presented Jake with a plaque in appreciation of what he has done for Villanova.

Jake Nivens has not only been a tradition here at Villanova, but also has been a great asset to the University.

Freshman Rifle Team Ends Winning Season

The best freshman rifle team ever to be produced at Villanova has just completed a very successful season. The frosh compiled a record of eight wins against two losses.

Among the victims of the frosh have been Temple, LaSalle, St. Joe's, Lehigh, Drexel, and Penn. The Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science went down to defeat twice at the hands of the yearling shooters.

A Record Win

The most impressive victory was scored over PCPS with a score of 1373 to 1296. The winning margin of 77 points is a record for the university.

The toughest one for the Wildcats to win was the St. Joe's match which they snagged by the slight margin of 1319 to 1317. Another "Big Five" opponent, Penn, provided the easiest victory of the season. The win was a forfeit.

The two losses this season came against Drexel and LaSalle and were avenged later. These two matches were lost by 21 and 15 points respectively.

Spevitz High Single

Lou Spevitz was high single scorer for the frosh team this season, accounting for 279 tallies in the first match with PCPS.

The top five shooters on the squad in overall performances were Frank Murtha with a 268.4 average, Lou Spevitz with 261.1, Joe Polizzotto with 259.7, Herb Lattau with 257.6, and Dave Walsh with a 256.1.

Other team scorers were Al Ortiz, Joe Rietzke, Dan Spada, and Joe Abruzese.

To Provide Material

Sergeant Joseph Mulchaney, assistant to Villanova's marine instructor and coach of the university's rifle teams, characterizes the freshman team as the best that ever matriculated at Villanova. He names the aforementioned Spevitz as the most improved shooter for the season. The frosh are thus expected to provide top-flight material for the NROTC and varsity rifle teams in the years ahead.

The frosh shooters spend much valuable time practicing with the team. Team members practice approximately three times a week for a period of at least an hour.

During the season the freshmen averaged one match a week.

Softball Play Begins As Intramural Leagues Open

Play Ball! The familiar cry of the umpire opened another intramural season last Monday on Mendel Field. The season's softball opener was a contest beteen last year's league champion Jizz A.C., captained by sophomore Don Brass, and the Northerners, led by another soph, George Mitchell.

Results of this and all other softball contests will begin appearing in the Villanovan next week.

A meeting of the softball managers and captains was held in the Intramural office last Thursday morning. The season's rules were explained by Council member Owen Klein.

Rules of The League

Three major rules were pointed out to the attending students. Klein stated that no spikes or cleats may be worn in competition, that one forfeit eliminates a team from the league, and that the department would supply all umpires.

A revolutionary new ruling was put into effect this season. Managers of the winning team in any contest must turn in a summary of the game for use in the Villanovan, or the game will be declared a double forfeit, thereby eliminating both teams from competition.

For the benefit of any manager unable to attend last week's meeting, Council president Jim Moran announced that upon request several members of the council will supply the information given those attending. These men are Bob Fortier, Jim Klein, Jim Corey, and Don McCoy. Moran himself may also be contacted.

Here is the Villanova intramural championship basketball team, the Duffers, who knocked off all contenders in the just-completed championship playoff. They are: (front row) Ted Bettwy, Jack Curran, Mike Walsh and Joe Armon; (back row) Bob Fortier (playoff referee), Bob Feiler, Jack Barr, Bill Brennan, Ernie Baroy and Jim Egizio (playoff referee).

Wrestling, Swimming Coming

This year's softball setup consists of eight leagues which contain 62 teams. Action will take place on three fields: Mendel, Austin, and Alumni.

Moran also announced that intramural wrestling contests would be held in Alumni Gym on April 9, at 7:30 PM. Grappling battles will be held in all the standard weight divisions during the evening.

Another announcement revealed that a "Learn to Swim" week will be held in the Field House pool beginning April 8. Any student interested in taking the course must register in the intramural office before Monday. The office is located in room 112, Alumni Hall.

AWARDS GIVEN SWIMMING TEAM

The Villanova Swimming team presented this year's individual awards at their annual party on March 23.

Recipients of awards were Lou Schoener, team captain—Best Swimmer; Bob Pinto, 100 yard dash man—Most Improved; and John Flynn, Jr., butterfly stroker — Most Loyal Swimmer.

The team also presented a gift to Mr. Edward Geisz, team coach.

Wildcats Meet PMC Today; LaFayette, Temple, Army On Schedule For The Week

By DON KEMPF

Villanovans will get a chance to see the diamond-men of Coach Art Mahan in action this afternoon at 2:30 when the Wildcats take on Pennsylvania Military College on the Villanova home field behind Goodreau stadium.

It will be the fourth scheduled encounter for the Wildcats this season and will leave a total of twenty-two more games to be played during this well-packed season.

Four Games This Week

The P.M.C. tiff will be but one of four which face the busy Mainliners this week. Tomorrow afternoon the Blue and White of coach Art Mahan will play host to the Dartmouth Indians in another game slated to begin at 2:30 P.M.

After Thursday's game with the Indians from New Hampshire the Cats will take to the road for a trip which calls for games with Lafayette, Temple, Army, Princeton, and Rutgers.

Coach Mahan and his squad will travel to Easton this Saturday to meet Lafayette, a perennial estern powerhouse and last year's regional NCAA champions. The Wildcats will be out to avenge last year's close loss to the Leopards.

Next Monday, the 8th, the Wildcats will invade the Temple diamond to take on the Owls in the first of two games scheduled with the "Big Five" school. The 'Cats will entertain the Owls on the Villanova field on the 29th.

West Point Wednesday

The Villanovans travel to West Point on Wednesday, the 10th, to take on the Army. The 'Cats lost a one run ball game to the Cadets a year ago and will be out to make up for that loss this year.

The next home game on the Wildcat roster will be be on Wednesday, April 17, exactly two weeks from today, when the Mainliners take on Rutgers of South Jersey on the Goodreau Stadium diamond.

Varsity rifle Squad to Enter in Association Sectional Shoot Offs

Villanova's varsity rifle team will journey this weekend to King's Point on Long Island, New York, to compete in the National Rifle Associations national intercollegiate sectional shoot-offs.

The matches will be fired on April 6. Team captain Hank Miller and sophomore member Chris Kloss will fire in the individual shootoffs, while the team as a whole will compete in the team shootoffs.

Any college rifle team within the specified area of the regional shootoff is eligible to enter the sectional but for obvious reasons only those with fairly impressive records choose to do so. Villanova is entering with a record of seven wins and two losses, a very respectable count in the face of the top-caliber opponents they have met during the season. St. Johns University, who will be in the sectional, is one such highly-rated competitor.

West Point Wednesday

The Villanovans travel to West Point on Wednesday, the 10th, to take on the Army. The 'Cats lost a one run ball game to the Cadets a year ago and will be out to make up for that loss this year.

The next home game on the Wildcat roster will be be on Wednesday, April 17, exactly two weeks from today, when the Mainliners take on Rutgers of South Jersey on the Goodreau Stadium diamond.

Varsity rifle Squad to Enter in Association Sectional Shoot Offs

Villanova's varsity rifle team will journey this weekend to King's Point on Long Island, New York, to compete in the National Rifle Associations national intercollegiate sectional shoot-offs.

The matches will be fired on April 6. Team captain Hank Miller and sophomore member Chris Kloss will fire in the individual shootoffs, while the team as a whole will compete in the team shootoffs.

Any college rifle team within the specified area of the regional shootoff is eligible to enter the sectional but for obvious reasons only those with fairly impressive records choose to do so. Villanova is entering with a record of seven wins and two losses, a very respectable count in the face of the top-caliber opponents they have met during the season. St. Johns University, who will be in the sectional, is one such highly-rated competitor.

AS NAVIGATOR OR PILOT

GET ON THE TEAM THAT DEFENDS AMERICA

The flying U. S. Air Force is a team of men who command the aircraft and men who plan the attack. These are the pilots and navigators, both equally important to the defense of America.

You, as a young man of intelligence and sound physical health, may join this select group in the world's most exciting and rewarding adventure. Your training will stand you in good stead, whatever your future plans may be—and you'll be earning over $6,000 a year 18 months after training.*

If you are between 19 and 26½ years of age, investigate your opportunities as an Aviation Cadet in the U. S. Air Force. Priority consideration is now being given to college graduates. For details, write: Aviation Cadet Information, P. O. Box 7608, Washington 4, D. C.

Mothers Day

Mother's Day, under the co-chairmanship of Pat Nicholson and Mike Rafferty, will be the official opening of Junior Week. Rev. Dominick Berra, O.S.A., class moderator, will celebrate a High Mass at the Shrine of Our Lady of Good Counsel at 11 a.m., and the planting of the class tree will take place at noon.

At 12:30, all juniors and their mothers will have luncheon in the resident cafeteria. Guy Barnocky and Ed Ryan have completed the arrangements for this part of the day.

Entertainment, including a skit from T'nT and the Villanovans, will be provided in the Field House beginning at 2 p.m.

Another feature of the afternoon will be the Villanova-Temple baseball game on the Villanova Field.

Staff Meeting Today

All Villanovan editors and news staff members have been asked to attend a reorganization meeting this afternoon at 3:30.

Editor-in-Chief Bob Mulcahy said the meeting will be held in the publications office, second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Mulcahy, O'Rourke, Kinney New VILLANOVAN Editors

Bob Mulcahy, Junior Class President, has been named Editor-in-Chief of the 1957-58 Villanovan, Rev. Louis A. Rongione, moderator of the weekly student newspaper announced.

Joe Kinney, junior English major, has been named Associate Editor while Sophomore Arts Student Larry O'Rourke will be the new managing Editor.

The announcement was the high point of the annual Villanova Dinner Dance held last Saturday night in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Retiring Editors

Father Rongione in making the announcement expressed his appreciation for the work done this year by the graduating editors. Bob Strayton and Bill Jones retire as Managing Editor and Associate Editor, respectively.

Other graduates who also came in for a large share of the thanks were Co-Sports Editor Joe Slavin, Business Manager Joe DeGrazia and Circulation Manager Ed Tomezko.

Mulcahy

Bob Mulcahy, new Editor-in-Chief has had the difficult task of directing Junior Week operations. The 20-year-old resident of Short Hills, N.J. has served as Co-Sports Editor on the paper this year.

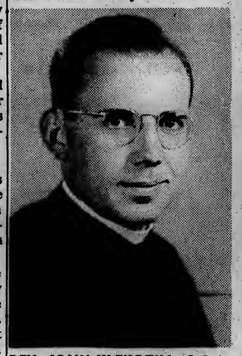
Editors Discuss Policy

Bob Mulcahy, new editor-in-chief of the Villanovan outlines plans for next year's paper to Associate Editor Joe Kinney and Managing Editor Larry O'Rourke. Appointments for the 1957-58 publication were disclosed at the annual Villanovan Dinner Dance held last Saturday evening at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Retreat Opens Sunday Night. Frs. Corley, Lanen Conduct

The opening exercise of the annual Easter Retreat will be held at the Field House this Sunday evening starting at 7:30 o'clock.



All resident and non-resident juniors and seniors are required to attend all retreat exercises, although each group has been assigned a special time for attendance at morning Mass.

The retreat has been divided into two sections, one for all male students and one for all full-time women students. Conferences for the women will be held in the University Chapel, while the men will have their retreat exercises in the Field House.

Retreat Masters

The Rev. John P. Corley, O.S.A. will be the retreat master for the men, and the Rev. Stephen F. Lanen, O.S.A., will conduct the retreat for women.

The opening exercise will consist of a conference followed by Benediction. Confessions will be heard immediately after.

REV. JOHN KLEKOTKA, O.S.A.

Monday's Mass will be offered for the intentions of students making the retreat. The Mass for resident juniors and seniors will be at 7 a.m. All other students will attend an 8 o'clock Mass.

Three Conferences

Three conferences will be held following Mass—the first at 9:30 a.m., the second at 11 a.m. and the last at 2 p.m. Religious articles will be blessed after the final conference of the day.

A holy hour will be held at 3:15 p.m. and night prayers will be said at 7:45 in the evening by resident students only.

Tuesday's schedule will be the same as Monday's with one exception. Following the holy hour at 3:15, the Blessed Sacrament will be exposed and will remain so on through the night until Mass on Wednesday. Each student is urged to spend one hour in Adoration before the Blessed Sacrament during that time, and he is welcome to bring members of his family and friends.

The Mass on Tuesday will be offered for all deceased students, faculty and alumni.

The closing exercises of the retreat will be held Wednesday morning.

Guild Collection Begins This Week; $2,000 Hoped For

Chairman Jack Garrity has announced that the first annual student seminary scholarship collection will be taken up this week through the religion sections.

Each student is being asked to donate 50 cents which will entitle him to a year membership in the Augustinian Seminary Guild. The spiritual benefits of Mass, Communion, rosary and prayers will be his reward for contributing to the fund.

The project is being sponsored by the Student Council under the direction of the three class presidents and the freshman representatives.

Opened Last Fall

The scholarship fund was opened in the fall when the juniors contributed $1,000 which were the proceeds of the Seminary Dance and the Eddie Condon jazz concert.

Inaugurated this year by the student body of the University the purpose is to create a purse of approximately $10,000 over a period of years. The interest realized from this amount will support a seminarian each year.

$2,000 Goal

Garrity expressed the wish that every student do his small share in reaching the goal of $2,000. The donation required is small in camparison to the reward obtained, he said.

SOMETHIN' TELLS ME THIS IS GONNA BE A PITCHER'S DUEL

Think Before You Vote

Although most office-seekers have to experience a gruelling campaign followed by a full day at the polls once every four years, Villanovans are given a chance to appeal to their fellow classmates every spring in an attempt to bring even better student government to the university.

Those unfamiliar with Main Line politics should try to get acquainted with the all-out programs staged by the respective candidates from the lowest freshman office to the President of the Senior Class before casting their ballot during the second week of May.

A mere promise to effect some drastic change in administration policy or to shower advantages on a particular segment of the student body should not be the basis of a voter's selection of a candidate.

A quick examination of some rash promises discloses that their attainment is impossible. Campaign promises within reason are a weighty factor in determining many elections but rash promises not only lose votes for the office-seeker but evoke ridicule from all who hear them.

The election of such "promise makers" does not help the student government of the university nor the individuals themselves. First of all, the Student Council meetings during the ensuing year will be wasted by unsound and unreasonable motions instead of helpful and carefully-thought-out ideas which are always essential to a growing student body and an expanding university.

Secondly, the victory of such a candidate leaves him in the dilemma of disappointing his supporters or "wasting" every Student Council meeting with "those unsound and unreasonable motions."

Every class except the seniors will nominate numerous candidates for president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer as well as day-hop and resident representatives, so there is a golden opportunity for every Villanovan who will return next fall to elect the type of leaders that he wants to govern him. Your class officers are chosen by no one other than you. Your ballots will determine whether your class will have a profitable year academically and socially and whether your suggestions will be voiced on the Student Council floor by capable men.

April 24 is the first step in selecting next year's class leader. This day is Nominations Day. After that, the nominees will be screened by the administration and the big elections will take place about two weeks later.

Remember, the prosperity of your class depends on YOU.

Will You Miss That Chance You Wanted?

Maybe it could be called a feeling of remorse, or better yet, just plain disappointment . . . . that "I could kick myself" feeling we've all experienced at one time or another when we've been presented with the chance of doing something or getting something we've always wanted, and then for some unintelligible reason, we don't take advantage of it.

It's a sensation difficult to discribe but whether it can be pin-pointed or not, it's probably the one we try to avoid more than all others.

This Sunday evening, all of us who are making the Easter Retreat will be given this chance to gain something we've always wanted. In front of us will be placed the opportunity of saving our immortal souls.

It's part of our human nature that when a prospective gain looks too easy, we want to find out what the "catch" is. Despite the fact that we are not getting something for nothing, the Retreat has no "catches." Almighty God is carrying on a spiritual business transaction. . . . one that will be in operation for three days. It's one of those once-in-a-lifetime deals in which eternal salvation is the product, we are the recipients and the currency consists of prayer and adoration.

It is an individual and personal transaction, but at the same time one in which all of us can share. The supply of the product is unlimited and for that reason, no one need be left out. There is more than enough room at the "Counter" of God for all of us. The only thing asked of us is that our currency be genuine and sincere, not counterfeit.

Though no one need be left out, the danger is always present as in material transactions, that for that unintelligible reason someone might miss this opportunity.

Each of us has the responsibility of making certain that he does not fail to take advantage of God's offer. Mere bodily presence at the various Retreat exercises cannot be called part of this responsibility. What do make up this responsibilty, on the other hand, are sincerity and reverence toward God and His ministers during Retreat exercises, and individual prayer and sacrifice aside from that at the general conferences.

The Retreat period is a time when we should be alone with God and apart from worldly pleasures and relations. Our Hour of Adoration before the Blessed Sacrament will be one manifestation of our divorce from the world, and solitary prayer of God, but another important way of insuring the success of our Retreat is through the prayers which we offer to God alone in our rooms between Retreat exercises.

During the three days of Retreat we are given this opportunity of being alone with God, of asking His forgiveness for our offenses against Him and of showing Him truly how much we adore Him.

If we feel like "kicking ourselves" when the Retreat is over, we'll know that another of those chances we are always seeking has slipped away from us through our own fault.

It didn't have to pass us by. . . it shouldn't have. . . . it won't unless we want it to.

Political Round-up:

President Claims Change Necessary

By GENE DONOHUE

Last week the President of the United States issued a proposal for an amendment to the Constitution which would give the Cabinet and the Vice-President the authority to determine whether a President is disabled, if, for any reason, the President himself does not declare himself incapacitated. The proposal was defeated.

This was done at the ultimate expense of the United States in the opinion of this columnist.

The reasons given for its defeat were two. It was contended that either the Cabinet and the Vice-President would be too loyal to the President to ever declare him incapacitated. The other reason is just the opposite: it is said that the Vice-President and the Cabinet will gang up on the President and put him out of office.

Both of these are very good arguments that cannot be denied. However, these things are just on the surface and do not look deep into the problem. There have been times in the history of this country when the Chief Executive was unable to perform his duties and as a result the country did not have any direct leadership.

Historical Incidents Demand Change

The two times that come to my mind are this past year when Eisenhower, himself, was laid up with a heart attack. During this period the country was unable to assert its leadership in the world. Vice-President Nixon did an excellent job in interim but was hemmed in by his inability to make an official decision.

The other time that I have in mind when this proposal would have worked for the good of the country occurred when Woodrow Wilson became the victim of a stroke while fighting for the League of Nations. If such a situation were to arise today with all the various pressures being put upon the Office of the President, the effect could be catastrophic.

It must first of all be assumed that the President has appointed honorable men to his Cabinet. Without appearing naive, the day has passed when John Q. Public knows so little about what is going on in Washington that a vertible coup de tat could be effected. No, such a thing would have been possible back in the days of the Harding administration, but not in 1957.

No "Small" Men In Cabinet

The other argument, that the Cabinet and Vice-President would be too loyal to the President to declare him incapacitated again does not take into consideration the calibre of men that are in the Cabinet.

In times such as ours, loyalty to one man is small and unpatriotic compared to the loyalty that a cabinet official would owe to the nation. Again I say, with today's vast publicity system it would be almost impossible for a "small" man to stay in a Cabinet position very long, let alone have a Cabinet with a majority of these men.

When the President made this proposal for the amendment, he showed a great understanding of his position as Chief Executive and the responsibilities which that office holds. This is an amendment which should be passed.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Article Praised By Mr. Angeline

Mr. Anthony Angeline is well known to all Villanovans for his work in publicizing the Opera Classica Music Society. Besides being the moderator for this group he teaches Finance in the Commerce and Finance School. Printed below is his reaction to an article in last week's paper concerning the appreciation of opera written by Gerald La Karnafeau, junior English Major.

Mr. La Karnafeaux's article "Anti-Opera? You're Missing Culture," was the best I have ever seen written on this subject in the Villanovan. Perhaps in cutting the article, the editors, omitted a very important step which I'm certain Mr. La Karnafeaux included in the original article—i.e., listening to the opera on records before seeing it on the stage.

I am confident that with a little patience, O-C-M-S will relieve our campus of the prejudice against operatic music. After all, the typical student (and some faculty members for that matter) has been conditioned to repelling operatic music for a good twenty years. Hence, our rehabilitation process is a difficult and a long one. However, we are not giving up.

Take a few instances of those who wandered into our meetings: Student A heard LA TRAVIATA for the first time. We supplied him with an Italian-English libretto. His remark was, "I thought you had to understand Italian to follow the opera." Student B who was told that opera stars couldn't sing heard Tebaldi singing Violetta and remarked. "Wow, what a big voice and pretty too!" Why even faculty members who had a prejudice against opera are finding out that the "stuff" isn't bad after all. In fact, it's darn good!

No student or teacher need fear that because he does not know opera, he should stay away. We are all newcomers, including yours truly. Come out and let's learn together.

Faithfully yours,
Anthony L. P. Angeline

Tall Tales But True, An Adventure In Art: Culture Is Fraught With Difficulties

By JOHN SNADER

There seems to be some sort of convention about tales of this sort and rain, but anyway it was raining. Not that this dampened our evening in any but a literal sense. Then too, there was that gasoline consuming (29.9 cents a gallon) ride from Hot Springs, Pa. or some such place. However, being under the influence of recent Villanovan articles, I thought it all worthwhile. It was all for art.

My date and I arrived in town thirty minutes before curtain time. There was the car to be parked though, and as it is more often the exception than the rule, this proved to be more expensive than the theater tickets.

Some of the gods of fate and ballet were on our side though for as we climbed out of the car it stopped raining for our walk of a block to Philadelphia's venerable Academy of Music for a performance of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo.

Impressed with a mixture of consternation and doubt we entered through the portal whose markings favorably compared with those of the lithographic impressions on our certificates of admittance.

An usher, probably wearing a mask (it would have been most distressing to have a face like that) escorted us to our seats. The step from the corridor to the level of our seats was an awe-inspiring one. We grazed from the thirteenth balcony into the orchestra pit spotting our reflection on the drummer's bald pate.

High Altitude Seats

The rest of our party straggled in. It was already post curtain time. Gerald was delirious from either aesthetic delight or lack of oxygen. Frank seemed to be fresh (?). Dorrance was somewhat miffed by a pillar holding the balcony up and incidently blocking his view of that half of the stage visible to the rest of us with the proper neck-stretching.

My date remarked that the prima ballerina was elusive, always dancing out of sight underneath our balcony at which time everyone in the audience would clap enthusiastically.

An Audience Aside

About this time, a cultured devotee of the ballet sitting in the aisle next to me with a two day growth of beard informed me in erudite fashion that if I did not shut the h—— up, he would push my face in.

I shut up, since I respect the words of a man who is not mealy-mouthed and is about six feet two inches and two hundred pounds.

Really though, we all agreed that the show was quite enjoyable and promised to see the other half some day, the other half-stage worth.

I was satisfied that I had fulfilled my purpose as it had been an evening virtually sopping with culture and elevation (our seats were especially elevated). There was only one dissenting opinion to the effect of—"how all too, too bogus making."

REV. PAUL HENRY, S.J.

"Originality of Saint Augustine" Explained By Father Henry Before A Large Forum Audience

By MIKE MANCUSO

Last Wednesday night, philosophy minded students, faculty members, seminarians and friends advanced to the Commerce and Finance auditorium to hear the words of one of the finest lecturers ever to speak in the Villanova Forum, Rev. Paul Henry, S.J.

Father Henry, the sixteenth speaker to address a Forum audience, was warmly received by the near-capacity group of attentive listeners.

Father Henry, recognized as one of the foremost authorities on the philosophies of Plotinus and Augustine, spoke on the topic, "The Originality of Augustine."

Augustine Borrowed Theories

It is the opinion of our guest speaker that several of the topics and theories of St. Augustine's philosophies are not the original thoughts of the great theologian but rather are transformed theories of Plato and his student, Plotinus.

Father Henry has spent over thirty years in research on the subject and has also written several works in order to defend and prove his opinions.

The topic of the lecture delivered by Father here at Villanova was based on the most recent research the brillant lecturer has accumulated.

The purpose of the lecture, "The Originality of Augustine" was twofold: Father wished to make clear the theories of Augustine which are not those of his original thought and he also wanted to cnumerate those theories which the great Catholic philosopher produced through his own intellect.

Five Accredited Theories

The doctrine of illumination, the doctrine of evil, the infinity of God, the main attribute of God-immutability and the doctrine of time and creation are the five theories which Father Henry stated as being accredited to Augustine even though they are not original in his thought.

Upon the data gathered, it is evident to see that these doctrines had already existed before the time of Augustine.

The illumination theory was taught by the pagan Plotinus and the christian Origin centuries before Augustine. It may be stated however that Augustine associated his ideas to the subject already existing. He taught that God knows all and that thoughts in God are a light to the reason of man.

The evil theory was pased on pagan thought because the pagans worshipped a god of good and a god of evil. Therefore Augustine adapted this theory to Christian thinking by saying that evil is anything opposite of good.

The infinity of God was an attribute of imperfection to the Greeks and the Jews because it was built on the idea of sight. It was the idea of Plotinus that infinity was an imperfection. Augustine inherited this theory of infinity of God from Plotinus and founded a basis to add that infinity is something good.

An Unchanging God

God does not change is the teaching of Plato and Plotinus. This main attribute of God was called immutability by Augustine but was derived from the teachings of Plotinus. Augustine again is found to have the ideas and thoughts of Plotinus but rather from a Christian viewpoint.

The last teaching of Augustine that shows dependence on the thinking of the pagan thinker is the time and creation theory. The mutual philosphical thought of Plotinus and Augustine is the relationship of the formation of the world and the beginning of time. Augustine stated that matter is external, an idea that follows from the already-known theory of time and creation.

On the other hand, Father Henry agrees that the originality of St. Augustine cannot be doubted. He enumerated four basic thoughts that showed the intelligence and validity of Augustinian Philosophy without any inheritance from Platonic, Plotinian or Aristotillan Philosophies.

Negative theology was the accepted doctrine until this time. It was a negative philosophy of Plato and Plotinus stating that God is what God is not.

Augustine's Original Idea

The first original theory of Augustine contradicted the theory of Plotinus and described God in positive terms.

The doctrine of memory was the second thought of the originality of Augustine that was explained by Father Henry. Augustine introduced his theory of memory by claiming that it is the point where the soul and God mix. Augustine further stressed that memory has nothing to do with sensation but rather is concerned with God and creation.

Before the time of Augustine, the theory of time was measured by movements. It was the intention of Augustine that the soul is the seat of time and that it is related and measured by man not the universe.

The fourth and final basic thought that Father Henry used to illustrate to the audience the originality of Augustine was the theory of God and His relationship with the Trinity. Under this concept, Father stressed the new principle which Augustine started in connection with the analogy of God and the analogy of man. This was the first field in which Augustine divided his theory of the Trinity.

Father Henry Impresses

The second field of Augustine's doctrine on the Trinity was the description of personality and the person as being both absolute and relative. Augustine taught that the personality in God must be related to another person; hence it is not egocentric.

The Trinity is composed of a relationship of two absolutes. When the two relationship of God the Father and God the Son join together, The Holy Ghost is begotten.

This is the cnotext of Father Henry's lecture. Along with his sharp wit and dynamic lecturing, his own personal brilliance shone through.

Alumni Expanding; Local Clubs Growing

By JOHN McGEE

Love, pride and loyalty are sentiments which students usually feel toward their college or university. Such feelings are only natural when you reflect upon the knowledge and skills, the ideas and ideals, the friendship and fellowship and the refinement and culture that a university education affords you.

Since a university exists primarily for the benefit of its students, it is only fitting that the student attempt to improve its services through the Student Council as an undergraduate and through the Alumni Council as an alumnus.

In order that the Villanova student body might better understand the Villanova Alumni Association and their relation to it, we present this article through the cooperation of Martin St. Gill, the executive vice-president of the alumni organization.

Everyone Is A Member

Every student who has ever matriculated at Villanova in either the day or evening division, regardless of whether he graduated or not and every person who has received an honorary degree is a member of the General Alumni Association of Villanova.

The men and women in this organization have for their joint purpose the further advancement of the university, its students and alumni, by whatever worthwhile means possible.

The Alumni Association has organized itself into thirty-five clubs in all parts of the country. Regular meetings are held which have both a business and a social nature. Younger members have assumed a greater part of the administration in the current period of increasing activity.

Local Clubs Represented

Each local club is represented on the Board of Governors, which also includes the officers of the organization, a representative from the present senior class and several men appointed by the president of the association.

This board provides co-ordination for the whole organization and communicates the plans and activities of the Alumni Association to each member.

The senior representative on the Board of Governors attends the quarterly meetings and acts as a liason between the Alumni Association and the student body. He presents any important information to his fellow students via the Student Council, the Villanovan or class meetings.

Funds Allocated

Complimetary to the General Alumni Association is the Villanova Alumni Foundation. Meeting annually, this group allocates funds contributed to the Foundation by the Alumni.

Since these funds are usually used for the further development of the University, both the Villanova Alumni Foundation and the General Alumni Association are under direction of the Director of the General Development Program of the University, the Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O.S.A.

The Alumnus, quarterly magazine of the Foundation, contains general information of interest to alumni concerning the University, the Alumni Association, the building program of fellow alumni and local clubs and subscriptions can be obtained afterwards on an annual basis.

Membership Shows Pride

By being a member in a local club, participating in its social and business activities and subscribing to the Alumnus, an alumnus can find the best expression of the love, pride and loyalty he has toward his university.

He can enjoy the fellowship of other alumni and he will further the development of his Alma Mater so that many more might enjoy the benefits he has.

THAT TIME OF YEAR
by Bill Jones

Now is the time of year
When a student begins to look,
With many a sigh of woe,
Into his empty pocketbook.

He sees with great alarm
And with greater despair,
That this thin little vault
Is so terribly, terribly bare.

He writes a letter home,
And asks for a little dough.
But in the sweet reply
The answer is always no.

Another Female School:

Holy Family of Torresdale Becomes Our Newest Catholic Women's College

Holy Family College? What is it? Where is it? This is a typical reaction to any mention of Philadelphia's newest Catholic women's college. For the benefit of those who thirst after knowledge, Holy Family College is a four-year liberal arts school for women, chartered in the year of grace, 1954.

Nuns of the order of the Holy Family of Nazareth, noted as a teaching and nursing order, administer the young college. There are only juniors, sophomores and freshmen in the school. The Class of 1958 will be the first graduating class. The total enrollment is approximately 110 girls.

Almost Out Of It (Philly)

Holy Family is located in the extreme northeast section of Philadelphia known as Torresdale—about an hour by car from Villanova. The Holy Family catalogue says that the college is situated on a twenty-seven acre campus. Oue building—three stories high and the size of Sullivan Hall—houses the college.

Among the more notable facilities in the two-year-old building are a psychology laboratory equipped with one-way glass for observation of actual cases, a home economics room with (virtually) numberless refrigerators and kitchen ranges, and an untenanted area eventually destined to house a radio station.

Sprecken Sie Russky

Adapted from facilities at Georgetown University is the linguistics lab. Isolation booths and earphones suggest a popular quiz show. But the purpose of the laboratory is the better instruction of the student in the several foreign languages. Records and language tapes taken from the lab's shortwave FM radio complete Holy Family's case for aural instruction.

Adjacent to the college building are the two halls for residents—St. Mary's and St. Joseph's. Also sharing this vicinity is Nazareth Academy, a private girls' high school run by the same order of nuns. Comparable to the presence of the seminary on the Villanova campus is the noviate at Holy Family.

Venturing into adult education, Holy Family offers courses at night to both sexes; among them are public speaking, home economics, sewing and theology.

There's Even A Male Committee

Various clubs, student government and The Tri-Lite (newspaper) complete the scene. Holy Family College is also the seat of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine of the Philadelphia region of the NFCCS.

There's Even A Male Committee

Various clubs, student government and The Tri-Lite (newspaper) complete the scene. Holy Family College is also the seat of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine of the Philadelphia region of the NFCCS.

A tribute to the Holy Family girls may be found in the fact that—despite the distance—three are definitely going to our Junior Week, with several others not so definitely set.

Three For The Show

Miss Loretta Cianfrogna, chairman of the Male Committee, would be only too happy to answer any inquiries concerning the forthcoming sodality dance scheduled for the middle of May.

SPOTLIGHT

Although it is seldom that a publication pats itself on the back, Spotlight this week centers around the persons of Bob Strayton and Bill Jones. Usually this article is medium for shedding some light on a person or persons little known, yet most important in their particular activity, but this week an attempt is made to bring before you the little known activity of two most important persons.

Robert G. Strayton, a senior English major, was this year's successful Managing Editor of the Villanovan. That in itself is a very meaningless statement but the combination of the two fields is more than even the above average person could handle. Strangely enough, to give this recital an even more impossible air, the exact same qualities must be attributed to William Jones, Associate Editor of these past Villanovans.

'Til The Wee Small Hours

A small fact little known except by roommates, close friends or staff members about the duo is that which tells a story of the long, weary, inglorious Monday nights at Long Publishing Co. in Phila., where the school's weekly paper took its All-American shape. These monotonous affairs which often ended at sunrise Tuesday left Bob and Bill with more than gluey fingers and baggy eyes; it left them with a personal pride towards the finished product.

BOB STRAYTON

BILL JONES

Enough of sentiment and on to concrete facts. Bob Strayton, whose talents extend beyond the paper to the Belle Air yearbook and the Lynx, resides in Rockville Center, N.Y. when away from third floor Good Counsel. In regard to the Lynx, Bob alone has been responsible for the revitalized layout of the last three editions.

Showing The Heavier Set

Perhaps the greatest thing Bob has done this semester besides being ready with a famous toothy smile is the outstanding lead he has given the heavier set towards reducing (50 lbs. is quite a lead, eh, Straytsie.)

Bill Jones, by no means secondary, rather equal with Bob in accomplishments, joins Bob in active membership in Delta Pi Mu, the Arts Fraternity. To Tie Bob and Bill together on a highter plane of scholastic achievebent let it suffice to say that both were Dean's list men last semester.

To Gain Attention

"Jonesey", as Bill the Brooklynite is usually called, is incidently quite a golfer. His score, unlike his marks, is always in the low eighties. If you ever have a need for calling his attention in a crowded group (party to the local yokels) just mention New Rochelle and give a yell for Mary Jo.

As a final commentary on the Spotlight's pair it might be appropriate to mention that both Bob and Bill engage quite heavily in Intramurals-an extension fairly hard to imagine in lieu of their other committments.

From the Villanovan staff members to you, Bob Strayton and Bill Jones, thanks for the association.

The Padded Cell

By HARRY & GERRY

Recent visitors to John Barry Hall have admired the imposing set of portraits of naval heroes which hangs opposite the main door. Last week, however, a new face was added to this collection—a face and a name unfamiliar to the memories of even the oldest salt. Great confusion has resulted. Students passing this gallery stand in awe before the portrait of this unusual creature. Who is he? Where did he come from? What has put him in such famous company? To settle this problem, the Padded Cell has delved into the unbelievable history of this obscure figure—Admiral Alfred E. Neuman.

Attended Annapolis

Little is known of the early life of Alfred Neuman. Reared on the wild, rocky New England Coast, he developed a strong love for the sea, a love which was culminated at the age of six when he almost drowned. Alf never seemed to do too well in school—teachers took one look at his lopsided head and idiotic grin and collapsed with laughter. But underneath his simple features raged an even simpler ambition. At the age of twelve, Neuman entered Annapolis, the youngest midshipman in the school's history. In his first year at the academy, Alf conceived the idea of an underwater boat but was somewhat dismayed when he was told about the submarine. Disillusioned, Alf quit the school and headed for the sea.

At this point, young Neuman disappears from the record book. Rumors have him touring the world as a professional sailor, always willing to fight for the underdog. His unruffled attitude and senseless grin, even during violent battles, made him welcome wherever he went.

During the campaign he acquired his nickname, "Old Blood and Guts," when he calmly steered his ship over an enemy frogman.

'What—Me Worry'

At the outbreak of World War II, Alfred Neuman forgot his grudge and enlisted as a common sailor in the U.S. Navy. But the finger of fate pointed to greater exploits. The setting was one of the most crucial campaigns of the war. Alf's ship, the Tallyho lay trapped under a heavy enemy aerial bombardment. On board all was chaos. Shipmates and officers ran about in wild confusion while their trembling captain remained locked in his room. At this point, Neuman suddenly appeared on deck, attired in tennis shorts, and sun goggles, and carrying a large blanket. Unmindful of the exploding shells, he calmly stretched out on the blanket and began to sun himself. When questioned by a dumbfounded officer, Alfred quietly uttered his immortal words, "What—me worry." The rest is history. The crew drew new strength from this display of courage and fought their way back to the states while Alf snoozed on the deck.

President Truman offered Neuman a ticker-tape parade but he shunned fame and returned to the sea. Stuck with tons of ticker-tape, Truman quickly fired Gen. MacArthur and had his parade, the navy won the war, and Alfred Neuman disappeared forever.

Junior Week Preparations

will replace the usual tug of war event because it is geared to more participants.

The event-packed day will be concluded by a Junior-Senior softball game at aproximately 5:30 p.m. on Austin Field.

Murphy and Moran urged that all juniors, whether they're participating in the events or not, should wear bermuda shorts on Wednesday.

Jazz Features Waxman

Co-chairmen Karl Smith and Dave Belcher have announced that Carl Waxman and his Dixieland All Stars, plus Bob Schiller and the Villanovans, will be featured in a jazz concert on Wednesday night from 8 to 11 p.m.

Location for the Concert will be announced at a later date. Tickets will be $1 per person and $1.50 per couple. It is significant to note that this will be the last time the Villanovans will play on the Villanova Campus before they break up.

Although George Fraunces and Norm Peer have been appointed to look into activities of the day, the Junior Class will not officially sponsor any activities on Thursday.

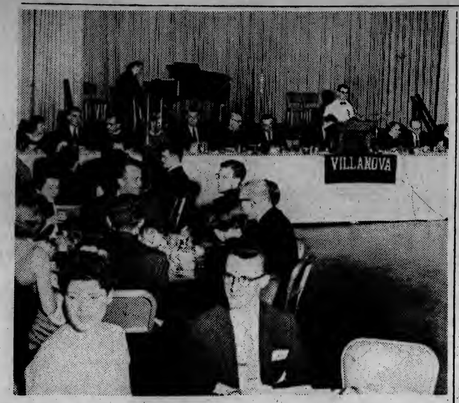
Lombardo Prom Band

Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians will provide "The Sweetest Music This Side of Heaven" for the Junior Promenade from 9:30 to 1 on Friday. Ralph DeCicco and Gene Fogarty, co-chairmen of the Promenade, have announced that the theme of the prom will be "An Evening in the South Pacific."

Decorations are under the direction of Bill Fallon, Tom Sprenger and Mike Delany, chairmen of the permanent decoration committee of the Junior Class. All juniors are urged to help with the decorations. The cost of the Junior Promenade tickets is $6.

Birch Plans Dinner Dance

On Saturday, May 4, the already event-filled week will be supplemented by the annual Blue-White Day, and that night, the Junior Dinner Dance will be held in the Ben Franklin Hotel, Ninth and Chestnut Streets in Philadelphia.



Dinner Dance Chairman Clem Birch said that juniors will eat turkey and dance to the music of Charlie Gresh, well known society band. Birch has declared that at some point during the evening, a group of seven of Mr. Gresh's band will give a jazz concert for a short time.

Another First For Juniors

Dinner will be served at about 7:30 p.m. but the Hotel will open at 6. For the first time in the history of the Ben Franklin, the Junior Class has reserved the entire mezzanine and balcony. The cost of reservations is $10 a couple and dinner Dance tickets, as well as all other Junior Week tickets, will be on sale every day from 9:30 until 2:30 up until April 26.

Ted Macri and Andy Iacchanrino have announced that John

An evening of dining and dancing was enjoyed last Saturday by members of the Villanovan and WVIL Staffs and their dates. The elaborate affair was held at the Rose Garden of Philadelphias' Bellevue Stratford Hotel.

Polio Shots

The second Salk polio shots are scheduled for tomorrow in Alumni gym between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. First shots will also be available for students.

Pre-Medical Frat Names Officers; Changes Planned

Alpha Delta Chi, the Graduate Nurses Sorority, Pi Theta Chi, the Basic Nurses Sorority and Lambda Kappa Delta, the Pre-Medical Fraternity will sponsor the second annual Caduceus' Capers Dance Saturday night, April 27.

Caduceus A Symbol

The Caduceus, which is the symbol of the medical profession, stems from Roman Mythology. It was supposedly a rod carried by Mercury, consisting of a wand surmounted with two wings and entwined by two serpents.

The Capers, closed to pre-meds and nurses, and their dates will take place in the Manayunk Firehouse in West Manyunk. The music will be provided by Bobby Schiller and his Villanovans.

Dance Co-Chairmen

Mary Ann Ruble and Jack Fisher are the co-chairmen of the dance. Sue Simmons is in charge of tickets and favors, assisted by Greg Lignelli and Mary Esther Scream. Marty Dohaney is in charge of refreshments assisted by James Rocco and John Mussio. Other members of the committee are Marge Callahan, Ed McLaughlin, Ellen Stewart, Fran Castaldi and Ralph George.

This is the only off-campus function of the year for the nurses, and it is expected to be a success. Tickets can be purchased for $3 beginning April 15.

To Speak At VU Law Forum

John Patrick Walsh, Esq., noted Philadelphia lawyer, will be speaker at the Villanova Law School Forum to be held April 10, at Garey Hall.

Walsh, who has extensive experience in criminial cases, will address the Forum on criminal law.

Turf and Tinsel Push Patron Sales Purchase of Sponsors Also Urged

The Turf and Tinsel Club will present its annual original musical in the Villanova Field Souse at 8:30 p.m. on May 8, 9, 10, and 11. This year's production, "The Man In the Gray Flannel Toga," aims toward a Grecian theme. Both the book and the lyrics were written by Bob Schiler, a senior C and F student at Villanova.

A $2 contribution entitles the donor to be listed as a patron in the program whereas a donation of $5 or more carries with it listing as a sponsor and two complimentary tickets to the show.

Affords Opportunity

T'n'T provides the student with the oportunity of discovering latent talent in the musical comedy field.

In addition to this end, there is a more serious purpose in view. The club is in no way subsidized by the University. The organization, however, donates one-half of its proceeds to the school in hopes of setting up a scholarship fund.

This Turf and Tinsel Scholarship will be awarded to a student who would otherwise not be able to attend Villanova.

Goal Unachieved

As yet this goal has not been reached. The Society's business staff will soon be soliciting patrons and sponsors for the '57 show. Every student's aid is needed in order that the scholarship can be realized this year.

The T'n'T business staff hopes that its Ad Book is as successful as the one published by Belle Masque for "The Skin of Our Teeth" last week.

John Facenda Receives St. Augustine Award At Dinner

"Newspaper and communication work may be considered a vocation," said John Facenda last Saturday night at the Villanovan banquet.

Facenda was the honored guest at the affair where he was the recipient of the Saint Augustine Medal, awarded for distintion in journalism and the communication arts. The banquet was held in the Rose Garden Room of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Rev. Louis A. Rongione, Dean of the Graduate Division and Moderator of the Villanovan, introduced Mr. Facenda. Father Rongione called Facenda "the dean of Philadelphia news commentators."

Honored Guests

Last year's recipient of the award, James Quirk, Editor of TV Guide; The Rev. Hurley, O.S.P., Prior of the Villanova Monstery; Rev. John Klekotka, O.S.A., University Chaplain and Rev. Joseph Kemme, Dean of Student Affairs were the other honored guests at the banquet table.

Also sitting at the head table were Gene Donohue, Toastmaster and his date; Bob Strayton, retiring Managing Editor, and his date; Bill Jones, retiring Associate Editor, and his date; and incoming Editors Bob Mulcahy, Joe Kinney and Larry O'Rourke, and their dates.

'Wonderful Cycle'

Mr. Facenda, in accepting the award thanked the university and the newspaper and said he felt as if he were "completing a wonderful cycle." Mr. Facenda was a student at Villanova, later taught radio here and was instrumental in the organization of WVIL.

Facenda stressed the importance of the communications industry, noting its signifiance in national security and general national morale.

Possible Condition

He considered the possible condition where the lifelines of communication are cut. Each country, each city and each home is isolated from the rest of the world. The Kremlin is alive with activity, the security lines in Washington are closed, the world's leaders are incapable of contact with one another; "fear would grip the world."

"Thus life itself depends on news."

Mr. Facenda disclosed the reason for his famous "Good Night, All" which is the closing signal on his daily program. "A few years ago, a lady wrote me a letter which I still cherish. In it she thanked me for saying 'Good Night' to someone who might otherwise go to sleep feeling lonely.'"

Journalistic Standards

In introducing Mr. Facenda, Father Rongione mentioned the standards that all good journalists should follow. "Brevity and accuracy are two of the main necessitites of good journalism. But the ability to use editorial discretion, not to injure anyone is probably the most important asset of a good journalist."

The banquet started with an invocation by Father Klekotka.

After dinner had been served Father Rongione awarded keys to graduating seniors who had been active on the paper. Then with a brief address he introduced Mr. Facenda. After the presentation and acceptance speech of the Saint Augustine Award, Father Kemme closed the banquet with the Grace after Meals.

Prior Introduction

Prior to the banquet the incoming editors were introduced to Mr. Facenda in a suite on the second floor of the hotel. Photographs and newsreel films were made of this introduction. These were shown on Facenda's 11 o'clock newscast.

DPM Initiates Novel Orientation Period in Selecting New Brothers

By LEO SHEA

Delta Pi Mu pledges will be initiated into the fraternity Friday night on the Villanova campus. The initiation will complete "hell week" for the pledges.

A unique selection system was used this year in ascertaining only the best men fit to carry the name of DPM.

Orientation Period

It was decided by the fraternity officers and by the executive council that initiations in the past had not been up to par. It was also decided that initiation would be preceded with a four-week orientation period where the pledges would meet twice weekly to become well acquainted with the fraternity and its standards.

These four weeks were up Monday when "hell week" began. The orientation period was begun by 57 pledges who handed in questionnaires about their academic background. During the four-week period study halls were held twice weekly to help the prospective members of DPM with any academic or fraternity problems they may have been confronted with.

Paddles Assigned

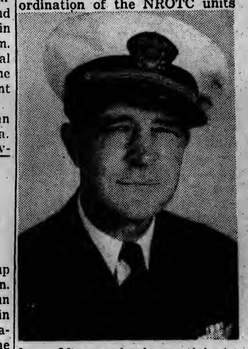
Paddles have been assigned to the pledges who are to have them ready for their big brothers today. All pledges were assigned big brothers Wednesday, April 3.

The regs worn around campus by the pledges consist of black berets with white scarves held on with a stick pin, sunglasses, a pipe, fraternity flower and a different pair of shoes and socks.

Communion Breakfast

Any pledge showing lack of interest in any phase of the orientation or pledging period will not be initiated into DPM.

President Jim Judge says it is hoped that with this new five-week system the group would be more acquainted with each other and with fraternity members and would show greater spirit and zeal for the fraternity.



All members and pledges attended a Communion Breakfast Sunday at Stauffer's Restraurant in Wynnewood. The men attended 10 a.m. Mass at the C and F Auditorium and proceded to the breakfast where president Judge delivered a short talk.

Curtin Leads Middies On Cruise Alfa

Villanova's Professor of Naval Science, Captain Neale R. Curtin, U.S.N., comanding officer of Villanova's NROTC unit, has been designated Officer-in-Charge of the NROTC midshipmen detachment, cruise Alfa. This appointment carries with it the responsibility for the coordination of the NROTC units from fifteen schools participating in cruise Alfa and their successful embarkation at Norfolk.

Three Cruises

This summer, a total of 5,935 Academy midshipmen and NROTC midshipmen will take part in three cruises designed to give them the chance to learn first-hand jobs that will be theirs in future careers as naval officers. Villanova midshipmen will participate in the abovementioned cruise Alfa and also in cruise Charlie.

After taking part in the Jamestown Festival, cruise Alfa, for third and first class regular midshipmen, will depart on 13 June for points in South America. Ports scheduled to be visited by the cruise squadrons include Rio De Janeiro and Santos in Brazil, Trinidad and St. Thomas and San Juan, Puerto Rico. After two days in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the cruise will arrive back in Norfolk on or about August 5.

Contract On Charlie

Cruise Charlie, training cruise for contract midshipmen who have completed three years of school, leaves Norfolk on July 8 with 1,120 midshipmen aboard. Ports of call for this cruise are Quebec and Boston. The cruise squadron will return to Norfolk on or about August 7.

Profs. Reuschlein And Ball Active In National Meeting

The annual national meeting of the Association of Immigration and Nationality Lawyers was held at the Villanova School of Law on March 29.

The one-day program was sponsored jointly by the law schools of Villanova, Pennsylvania, Temple and Rutgers.

Reuschlein Heads Panel

Heading the panel on Deportation and Exclusion was Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein, while the other panel, devoted to Naturalization and Expatriation, was headed by Dean Fordham of the University of Pennsylvania.

Speakers were James L. Hennessy, Executive Assistant to the Commissioner of Immigration, Willis Young, John T. McGill and John T. White, of the Department of State and Professor William B. Ball, of the Villanova School of Law.

Professor Ball

Professor Ball's topic was "Judicial Review in Deportation and Exclusion Cases."

Following the symposia was a dinner at which the speakers were David M. Maxwell, President of the American Bar Association and Judge Alexander Holtzoff, Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

Opera Society Plans Sports Participation

The Opera-Classica Music Society will hold its election for new officers tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Two new committees have been formed: public relations and intramural sports.

Guy Speciale is organizer of the first soft-ball team to represent the Society. Tennis and golf teams are also being organized. Opera-Classica stresses participation in intramural sports.

Ravel Featured

The music of Ravel, Moussorgsky and Beethoven will be featured tonight. Selections include: Ravel's The Spanish Hour, a French Comic Opera in one act: Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition with the late Aurturo Toscanini conducting the NBC Symphony and Beethoven's Concerto No. 5 "The Emperor" with Clifford Curzen at the piano accompanied by the London Philharmoic Orchestra.

Aenata, Top Vocalist

Plans are now being made to award the St. Cecilia Medal to to the outstanding vocalist of the year, Renata Tebaldi on December 17.

The University Administration, representatives of the Italian Consulate and London Records are bing invited to join in a testimonial high tea to be held in Philadelphia. Tickets will be available in September.

WVIL Schedule "Opera for those who HATE Opera."
April 11 Flotow: Martha
15 Wagner: The Flying Dutchman (Lon FFRR)

Dohaney Named President of Pre-Med Frat

Marty Dohaney replaces Floyd Nasuti as President of the Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity next year. Other officers elected at the last meeting are: Charles Bannon—Vice-President; James Rocco—Secretary; John Forchetti—Treasurer and Jack Fisher—Student Council representative.

Dohaney, a junior pre-Med, plans to hold bi-monthly business meetings with a speaker at one of the meetings every month. He intends to revamp all the committees in the fraternities and also to restore Hell Night as part of the initiation period of the fraternity.

Guild Collection

Organized through the Student Council it will continue every year until the goal is reached. Father John Coffey is the director of the Seminary Guild.

Beta Gamma Debaters Had Winning Year

Under the guidance of Richard McDonough, of the Villanova Speech Department, Beta Gamma Debating Society has had its first winning season in several years.

The record of the Villanova Debaters stands at 52 wins and 27 losses, and at one time in the season the club had a winning streak of 22 straight victories in local intercollegiate debates.

Beta Gamma was represented at the CCNY Tournament in New York on March 30 by Jim Corey, Jack Serafin, Bill Gazi and John McGee.

Here the Villanova group collected wins over CCNY and NYU, while dropping decisions to Fordham Education, King's Point, Brooklyn Polytechnical and St. John's of Brooklyn, the winner of the tournament.

Two more victories were added on April 2 when the Debaters defeated Temple twice.

Beta Gamma will also be represented at the Regional NFCCS Tournament on April 28.

Doctor Powers Announces Evening School Honor Men

Dr. Eugene Powers, Dean of the Evening Division, has announced the following men as having achieved a 3.5 quality point average or above after completing 14 credit hours.

Those men working toward their Masters Degree in Statistical Quality Control and achieving the required grades are: Alfred Capuzzi, William Darmofal, Robert Goldsmith, Anthony Mannoa and James S. Marsh. Also on the list are: Andrew J. Pfaff, John C. Saboe and James Wilkes.

Polaneczky Outstanding

Aloysius Polaneczky, after completing 18 credits, has a quality point average of 4.0. That is a perfect average in every subject attempted.

The following men have a 3.5 average or above in the Graduate School of Chemical Engineering. They are: Fredric W. Berdux, Joseph A. D'Aurio, Donald Klein and Joseph C. Maginn.

Business School

In the undergraduate division of the Night School there are 12 men who are working toward their Bachelors Degree who made Dr. Powers list. In the Business School there are eight 3.0 men. In Accounting there are Robert M. Squier and John J. Quinn. The other six men are in Business Administration, they are John P. Eliff, John D. Faulds, Walter P. Heck, Thomas G. Maguire, Leon W. Piercy and August F. Ressow.

The undergraduate Engineering Division has four students represented on the Deans List. In Electrical Engineering there are John F. Meehan and Donald Sharrock. The Mechanical Engineering School is represented by William Ball and Robert Samson.

Certification

Those men seeking certification have three men in the 3.0 club. They are Rodney Broadbelt in General Business and Salvatore L. Lubrano and Robert G. Piggott in Engineering.

Delta Epsilon Sigma Admits NewMembers

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Sciences, has announced the election of 12 seniors to the National Catholic Honors Society, Delta Epsilon Sigma.

Prominent Seniors

The list includes Leslie J. Carson, Robert Fredricks, Isaac Hargett, Joseph Keefer, Oliver Ludwig, James Manlando, John P. McGee, John P. McNicholas, Joseph Mizgerd, Charles Ross, James Shea, and Robert Weisenbaugh.

Father Sullivan made the announcement for the Committee which also includes Father Jenkins, Father McShea, Dr. McClain, and Dr. McEnerney.

The formal induction into the Society is tentatively scheduled for May 18th.

Qualifications

Induction into the Society is based on the individual's cumulative average, participation in extra-curricular activities, and submission of a critical paper to the judging committee.

Villanova Hosts AIEE Contest April 26, 27

Final Plans have been formulated for the Middle Eastern District Prize Paper Competition of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

This annual competition will be held at Villanova April 26, and 27.

The purpose of this district meeting is to bring together representatives from the 21 schools in the Middle Eastern region to compete against one another for the privilege or representing the district at the American Institute of Electrical Engineer's National Convention.

Each school will send representatives who will deliver an original paper on some phase of Electrical Engineering.

Winner Gets Big Prizes

Judges will select a winner and the winning paper will receive a cash award of $50.00, two silver cups a two-day trip to the Westinghouse Electronics division in Baltimore, and an expense-free trip to the AIEE summer General Meeting held this year in Toronto, Canada.

The winning paper will also be published in the magazine "Electrical Engineering" which is the monthly publication of the AIEE. Lesser prizes will be awarded to 2nd and 3rd place winners.

Fatkin Presides

The meeting will be presided over by Harry Fatkin, Villanova branch president. Tom Rasser is in charge of registration of candidates, John Ellis will handle luncheon and dinner arrangements, and Joe Jenkins will take charge of meeting arrangments.

Assisting the officers will be Mr. John B. Clothier, Villanova counselor of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and Rev. John A. Klekota, Villanova counselor of the Institute of Radio Engineers.

Honored guests at the conference will include, in addition to the judges, Mr. C. T. Pearce, Vice-President of the AIEE, Middle Eastern District and faculty members from each school and representatives from the national organization.

Downing Won Last Year

Villanova was represented last year by John Downing, who placed third in the competition.

Representing Villanova at this year's competition will be a paper entitled "An Introduction to Analog Computers," written by senior Electrical Engineers J. L. Noonan, R. Fallabella and E. Loftus. The paper will be presented by J. Lennox Noonan. This paper was selected from among four papers which were delivered at the regular AIEE-IRE meeting on March 26.

Students or faculty members who wish to attend the district competition may do so. Arrangements should be made through the Electrical Engineering Department.

"You're darned right I'm sold on that Burroughs engineering deal!"

Q. And just what sold you on it?

A. Lots of things, really. But when I saw I'd start right out on the work I've trained for, that was the clincher.

Q. Sure you won't get lost in the shuffle?

A. Not there! I've talked with a lot of outfits, and it's easy to see Burroughs is a company that's pulling for you all the time. They're convinced that young engineers are the key to their expansion. And their policy's to promote from within. That's for me.

Q. Future look pretty good there?

A. Great! They've expanded their engineering staff seven times since 1945. And with all the new products they have on the way, they're ready for their biggest growth yet.

Q. What's the bulk of their work—commercial or defense?

A. I'd say commercial, for sure. They're a leader in business machines and data processing equipment. And that means plenty of work in mechanics, electro-mechanics and electronics. But they're in the thick of defense work, too . . . that involves research and development in ballistic missiles, electronics, computation, data processing, optics, magnetics, communications, and many others.

Q. I suppose they have a lot of places to work?

A. Detroit's the home office, you know, and their new multi-unit research center's in Pennsylvania. Plants in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Michigan and California. Oh, yes . . . and in Canada, Great Britain, France and Brazil.

Q. Did you go into company benefits with them?

A. They actually pioneered a lot of the benefits. You get hospitalization insurance for yourself and your dependents, secure retirement and educational aid programs, sick benefits, paid vacations, of course—the whole shebang. Why not ask for the booklet they put out. It gives you an interesting picture of the whole Burroughs setup.

BILLboard

By BILL REICH

Tarrytown with the Hudson River for a background was the scene of Villanova's small but influential invasion of Marymount College on Sunday, March 31. Known as Villanova—Princeton Day, it was marked by clear skies and added to the already beautiful campus of this college for young women. Entertainment during the afternoon was provided by the Tigertown Five and our own Villanovans with Bobby Schiller. Though our representation was small, it included besides the Villanovans, such well known men around campus as Ron Delany, Pat Nicholson, John La Croix, Phil Seefried, John Lyons, Norm Shachoy, Gerry and Kevin McGrath, and George "Buddy" Christman. Along with the affairs on campus, many ventured out on picnics and gathered at the "Cabins." This was only one example of the Villanovan as he pursues his social life.

BILL REICH

On the Silver Screen these days, Paramount's "Fear Strikes Out" is being acclaimed as a unusual and excellent motion picture. Two important factors make this so. They are Anthony Perkins' moody characterization of Boston Red Sox hero Jim Piersall of Waterbury Conn. and a well balanced, skillfully directed story taken from Piersall's own book. In this movie there is equal appeal to hold the attention of sports fans and those who are not sports fans.

Musically, Perry Como's "Round and Round" seems to be the best buy and continues to dominate the air waves and juke-boxes along with the current calypso trend.

We understand that we have a few readers at the Nursing School at Harrisburg Hospital. One is rumored to be a good friend of one basketball player. To all out there in Harrisburg—Keep up the good work.

What every young man should know is that the easier she is on the eyes, the harder she is on the check book.

French Club Will Elect New Heads

The French Club will hold its nomination and election of officers tomorrow at 10:30 in the Classroom Annex, Ray Cullen, president, has announced. Mr. Wilson Frescoln, French Club moderator also said that any interested students are invited to join the organization.

Class Nominations

All class nominations will take place Wednesday, April 24. At this time all officers will be nominated for the three underclasses. Further information will be posted on all bulletin boards.

Junior Week

Robert Powers, founder of the internationally known Powers Marketing Agency of New York City, has been selected to judge the Queens' Contest.

This year, the Queen will not be announced in the Junior Week issue of the Villanovan. Instead the five finalists will be featured and the Queen will be announced and crowned by an undisclosed celebrity at the Promenade on Friday night.

Entries Deadline Extended

The original dateline was set for April 10 but has been extended to April 17, Macri announced.

Bob Mulcahy, Junior Class President, made tentative arrangements for a special Mass for juniors and their dates on Sunday, May 5. Mass will be celebrated at Our Lady's Shrine and will be the official closing of the unforgettable week.

Spanish Club To Nominate Officers

The Spanish Club of Villanova will hold nominations for officers tomorrow in 205 C and F during the activities period.

President Mike Ford hopes all members attend this meeting so that next year's officers will be truly representative.

Also on the agenda for this meeting is the financial report from the Communion Breakfast which was held at the Viking Inn last week.

University Tuitions Raised As Cost of Living Goes Up

College tuitions are being raised all over the country. Everywhere colleges and universities are feeling the pinch of the high cost of living. Higher salaries for professors, better conditions for students and an increasing demand for greater and large classroom facilities are making money more valuable and in less supply.

Prominent senators have been submitting legislation designed to aid schools and students. Many have proposed that the state underwrite the cost of education. They point out that the alarming decrease in the number of qualified engineers, scientists and mathematicians is a threat to security. The legislatures also say that poorly educated persons can be a bedit to the community.

Officials of state universities and colleges in many states are explaining their needs for funds, now appearing before legislators, many papers report.

Typical are these stories:

A bill to double full-time student tuitions of Texans was introduced in the house of the Texas legislature.

The University's management is not "pleading" or "pressing" for doubling tuition at the school, Dr. Logan Wilson, president, said in the DAILY TEXAN.

"The position of the University admininstration, if formally queried," the TEXAN reported officials as saying, "would be that it would not be unreasonable to ask students to bear an increased portion of the cost of their education by paying higher tuition."

And Editor Betty Moir of Washington State College DAILY EVERGREEN makes some comments on her school's budget and the state government's attitude:

"Outgoing Gov. Arthur B. Langlie has seen fit to revise the budget request of WSC for the coming biennium . . The college's estimated needs totaled $43,104,370 which is about $11 million more than Gov. Langlie felt was available . . .

Delany LC Representative At Marymount Symposium

Frank Delany, junior English major and editor of the LYNX, will represent Villanova at a symposium to be conducted at Marymount College in New York City on May 2.

Joe Kinney, President of the Literary Club, announced the selection of Delany after receiving the invitation to the club from the host college. Novelist Ernest Hemingway will be the subject for discussion.

Delany and Kinney will leave the Villanova campus on that afternoon and return to the Main Line after the symposium the same evening.

Representatives from Marymount and St. Francis' College of Brooklyn will also attend.

Regular Meeting Tonight

Tom Martinez, program chairman of the club, reminds all members that Leo Rogers will deliver a brief biography of the modern poet, Robert Frost, preceding a group discussion of the poet to be moderated by Mr. John Slater, instructor in the English Department, tonight in the Navy Lounge in Commodore John Barry Hall at 7:30.

Kinney has set today as the closing date for joining the club for this semester and hopes that all interested students will submit their $2 dues to Treasurer Dave Belcher at tonight's meeting in order to obtain a membership card.

60 At Movies

The showing of last week's movie, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which attracted 60 students on an evening filled with conflicting meetings for several club members was hailed by non-club members as well as regular Literary Club members. The organization expects to acquire more and better films next semester.

After the Easter vacation the bi-monthly meeting on May 8 will feature Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of Villanova's Law School. The Dean will speak on the "19th Century English Novel."

Peering . . . .

With NORM PEER

. . . at the notice on the bulletin board saying that a list of all newly elected organization officers must be submitted shortly. There are some new officers around; for instance the Astronomy Club had trouble nominating a head lens wiper and the widely advertised Opera-Classica Club now has a vice-president in charge of thumb tacks for those posters.

. . . at all these pledges walking around looking like the Duke of Windsor. First someone said they were polo players from Oxford here to play our team, but everyone knows our polo team is on the road now. That berrette they have to wear gives that air of 'artiness' which is usually so well hidden around here.

PEER

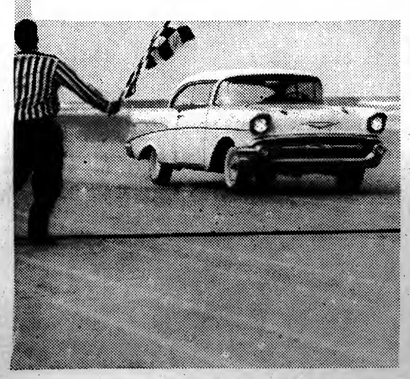
. . . at the Spring sleeping sickness that is creeping in. Some just get up for weekends while others slowly starve to death in bed rather than leave that precious sack. A motion is being brought up in Student Council to see if it would be all right if some students could be wheeled to class. The big problem is that the Administration wants them to be awake all the time.

. . . at the Dinner Dance season which is now in full swing. Some organizations can't afford to rent a place so they are having them in the chow hall and just giving each member an extra milk and more potatoes. It's cheaper but somehow it doesn't quite have that atmosphere.

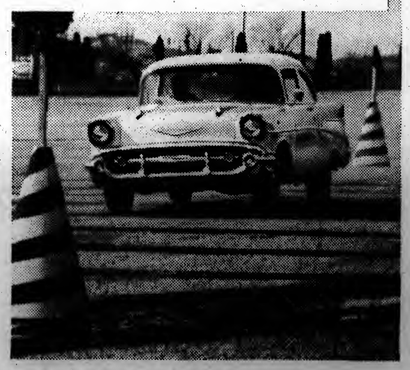
. . . at the notice in the paper that we are going to play Army in football for three years in a row. I would hate to see the schedule we were going to play before we "de-emphasized."

. . . at the strange study habits of baseball-minded students as they bring their books to games and study while the opposition bats. One boy knocked off a term paper during the seventh inning stretch. Plans are in the office now to see if exams can be taken in the stadium.

Who rates what for performance and smoother riding in the low-priced three? Chevrolet has laid the answer and the proof on the line!



First, Chevrolet won the Auto Decathlon over every car in its field, and over the higher priced cars that were tested, too. This rugged ten-way test (right, below) showed Chevrolet was the champ in handling ease, braking, acceleration, passing ability, smoothness of ride and other driving qualities you want in a car.



Then, Chevy won the Pure Oil Performance Trophy at Daytona (left, below) as "best performing U. S. automobile."

It's quite a feeling to know that you are driving a car that performs so well, responds so beautifully and is so finely built. You feel proud, of course. But you also enjoy a surer, smoother, steadier way of going, a keen cat-quick response of power, and the easiest handling you've ever experienced behind a wheel. Just try this Chevrolet (V8 or Six) and see!

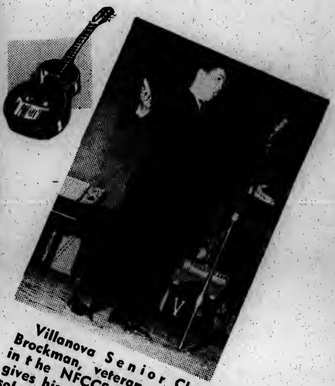
NFCCS Variety Show Set To Invade Villanova; Area College Talent Featured

MIKE GUIDA
Student Director



BERNIE CONWAY
Student Director

Contributing to the lighter side of the show is comedian Jack Nettleton, another Villanova senior and veteran performer.

For several years NFCCS Show goers have lauded these lovely singing sisters from Immaculata College. Here the "Murphy Sisters," Phyllis and Willa, please the audience once again. Willa is in her final year of college; Phyllis is in her junior year.

Villanova Senior Charlie Brockman, veteran performer in the NFCCS Variety Show, gives his all as he renders his solo to the audience.

NFCCS Show audiences have much to look forward to from pretty Joan McDermott, sophomore soloist from Chestnut Hill College.

They look as if they're playing "I've Got A Secret" but in reality Sue Linton and Thea Grimm are in the midst of their tap-dancing performance. Both these talented girls are freshmen at Chestnut Hill College, proof that the NFCCS Show has a bright future in store.

Introducing the performers is WVIL Station Manager Ed Shea, versatile master of ceremonies.

BM's "Skin of Our Teeth" Seen Best Since "Stalag 17"

By BILL JONES

These eyes have witnessed eight Belle Masque productions. All have been outstanding in the presentation of professional drama, both light and heavy, but "The Skin of Our Teeth" seems to have outdone even the wonderfully hilarious "Staglag 17" as the finest Masque production in recent years.

Combining a sometimes funny, sometimes sad look at the human race from the ice age to the era of the mighty atom, Thorton Wlder's unique play of ideas blends slapstick comedy, man, his family and his philosophies into a captivating, humorous and most enjoyable two and one half hours of dramatic entertainment.

Roses For Duprey

The first bouquet of roses goes to Mr. Richard Duprey for his direction and set design. In presenting a running production of ideas merging into representational drama, many effects must click into place with the precision of a fine watch.

The design was perhaps the Masque's best and the direction of this most difficult Wilder script was carried out almost perfectly. Mr. Duprey produced some of the loudest and some of the warmest laughter ever heard in the Field House.

A Fine Cast

Rita Capek, in portraying the curvacious maid, Sabina, was wonderful. Her handling of a part which required many outright breaks from the script for little conferences with the audience was handled professionally.

Tom Kimmel and Claire Sigerson were great as the Mr. and Mrs. of the world, Antrobus by name, scraping through life, five thousand years of it, by the skin of their teeth.

More Fine Jobs

Sissie DiMarino and Walt Gould, playing the Antrobus children, also turned in professional performances. Sissie stole the show in many spots with her portrayal of the funny and flighty daughter.

There are many others who deserve much prase, Jim Gilligan, Sharon McAuliffe and George Browne to mention a few, but it must suffice in this short space to say simply that Belle Masque has done it again, this time with icing.

State Education Official Speaks To S. E. A. Chapter

Mr. Raymond C. Webster, Assistant Excutive Secretary of the Student Education Association of Pennsylvania and the Future Teachers Association State Coordinator, will speak to the Villanova Chapter of the S.E.A. at 8 p.m., April 11 in room 101 C&F.

The topic of Mr. Webster's talk will be "The Significance of the Student Education Association of Pennsylvania Chapter in the Professional Association Framework."

General Business Meeting

There will be a general business meeting at 7:15 of the same evening. All members are urged to be prompt as there is much to be discussed.

Dick Dressler, club president, said that any student interested in teaching as a profession should attend this meeting, and if possible join the chapter.

Local Colleges Attend

There will be various area colleges in attendance. To date, Rosemont, Pennsylvania, Immaculata and Chestnut Hill have given notice that they will have representatives present that night.

Refreshments will be served immediately following Mr. Webster's talk.

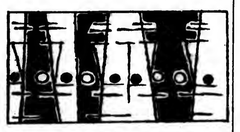
IRC Meeting Set

The regular monthly meeting of the Industrial Relations Club will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in room 207 C and F.

The main business of the meeting will be nomination of officers for the coming year.

The new incentive process system to be introduced next semester will be explained to present members of the club. This course should be of particular interest to Industrial Administration majors.

Neophytes To Enter Lambda Pi Tomorrow



Lambda Pi, the Villanova Chapter of the national honor drama fraternity, Alpha Psi Omega, will close their week of pledging tomorrow night.

There are 12 neophytes entering the frat this year. Six are from Turf and Tinsel and the other six are from Belle Masque. The president of the Villanova Chapter is Tom Curran and the Pledgemasters are Mike Clarke and Ken Maloney.

The six neophytes from Belle Masque are Rev. William Farrell O.S.A., Archie Whyte, Fred Leisentrit, Bruce Francis, Vic Ludmerer and George Browne.

Those from T'nT are Gene Donahue, Don Mattingly, Bob Schiller, Mike Guida, Charlie Ross and Joe Redmond.

There are at present 22 members in the frat. To qualify, the candidate must have done exceptional work in the field of Dramatics. This may include work in production, acting or in administration.

"What's it like to be A SYSTEMS ANALYST AT IBM?"

Two years ago, college senior Thomas Wheeler asked himself this question. Today, a Systems Analyst in IBM's Data Processing Division, Tom reviews his experience and gives some pointers that may be helpful to you in taking the first, most important step in your business career.

"What I probably like most about this job," says Tom, "is that you're never tied down to one desk and the same routine. There's always a new problem . . . a new approach needed . . . new people to meet and work with."

But nrst, what does a Systems Analyst do? "Briefly, we study a customer's present system—payroll, inventory control, billing or whatever—and convert it to a mechanized system using either conventional IBM business machines or IBM's high-speed electronic computers."

Tom works out of the IBM Baltimore Office with some of America's biggest companies as his customers. Graduated from Johns Hopkins in August, '55, with a B.S.I.E., he came immediately to IBM. During his training period, Tom studied IBM's Punched Card and Electronic Data Processing Machines. He learned their uses, their applications, and was instructed in the theories and methods of data processing.

Diversified Assignments

A leading aircraft company was Tom's first major assignment. "My job there," he explains, "was to analyze the application of IBM's latest electronic computer—the 705—to regulate the flow of materials and machines used to fill Government contracts."

Then came a short, but highly satisfying assignment. At the Bellwood Quartermaster Corps, Tom set up a "SOAP" system (System for Optimum Automatic Programming) defined by Tom as "converting the flow of instructions and information into the most efficient operation for an IBM magnetic drum computer. Bellwood," Tom points out, "is the Inventory Control Center for all

For the past six months, Tom has been working with the Statistical Services Division of Headquarters Air Research & Development Command. "We are designing and implementing a system to link eleven reporting centers to Headquarters by wire transmission," Tom reports. "Data transmitted to Headquarters by this system will be coordinated and then processed by an IBM 650 electronic computer."

Why Tom chose IBM

How does a senior like Tom, who was interviewed by at least twenty companies while in college, select his future employer? "In my case," Tom says, "the choice was easy. IBM offered the best opportunities. I knew IBM sales were about doubling every five years—and when I considered the tremendous growth potential of the electronic computer field—I had no trouble making up my mind.

"Besides, I was impressed by the caliber of IBM personnel. They had a broader outlook and an approach to

"My future? It looks good—very good. I've already received two generous raises in less than two years, and at the rate IBM and the electronic computer field are expanding, my future is both assured — and rewarding!"

Mainliners Are Still Winless; Tie Navy, Defeated By PMC

By FRANK FLEMING

April showers and snow combined to force postponements of two of the Villanova University's four scheduled baseball games last week. In the two games played the Wildcats of coach Art Mahan could do no better than tie the Naval Academy in a rain shortened contest while losing to PMC by one run in the ninth of that closely fought game.

At Annapolis on Monday the Middies managed to push across a run in the last half of the sixth inning to tie the ball game at two all before the officials stopped the contest because of rain.

Navy jumped off to an early lead in the first frame when they gained a one run margin which they held until the sixth inning. The charges of Art Mahan did not score until the sixth inning when the Wildcat's power hitting put them out in front of the future Admirals by one run.

Emma Smacks Triple

Sophomore first base-man George Emma started the rally by turning one of Jack Martin's fast balls into a triple. This was the Varsity basketball star's second hit of the day. Shortstop John Donatucci followed Emma to the plate and connected with one of the Navy pitcher's potential strikes hard enough to win a free trip around the diamond. This home run sent Emma home and put the Wildcats in a one run lead.

In the second half of the same inning Navy pushed acoss one more run which tied the game at 2-2. Villanova never received an opportunity to break the tie because a rain storm of cloud burst proportions interrupted the game after the sixth and forced the postponment of the rest of the tilt.

George Emma lead the Cats in the hitting department, gaining two hits in three trips to the plate including his important sixth inning triple.

A Wild Battle

On Wednesday the Wildcats returned home to meet Pennsylvania Military College of Chester and again were deprived of their first victory of the season in the last inning of play.

PMC opened the game by scoring a run in the first inning which the Wildcats matched in the same frame. The cadets then

Charley's On Third:

Former Utility Man Di Giovanni Is An Important Cog in 1957 Baseball Plans

By JACK CURTIN

This is a year of mystery as far as Villanova baseball is concerned. Last year the team lost its whole outfield and all of its leading hitters, leaving it a sort of questionable entity for the 1957 season. No one can safely predict just how the Wildcat record will look at season's end.

One of the main cogs in coach Art Mahan's plans for the year is a three year veteran who has seen action only as an utility man prior to this year. Now, however, he has assumed a key position in the infield for the Mainliners.

This is Charley DiGiovanni, senior third baseman. The Accounting major is a product of New England, being born and raised in Belmont, Massachusetts.

'Good Guy'

DiGiovanni was introduced to the horsehide back during his high school days in Belmont, being a three year starter on the school ball club. All three seasons the club posted a winning log.

Perfect Day At Plate

Among the many games played during his scholastic career there is one that Charley remembers with particular fondness. In a contest with Cambridge Latin High, the third sacker went four for four, slugging out a triple, double and two singles. The memory is marred only slightly by the fact that this effort was offered in a losing cause, as Belmont was defeated.

Baseball wasn't the only interscholastic sport in which the precise Villanovan participated .Charley was a three year member of the school's basketball team. This court squad went to the Eastern Massachusetts Tourney semi-final round in his senior year.

Baseball, however, was the sport in which DiGiovanni gained recognition as an outstanding athlete. In that same senior year he was named to the All-State high school baseball nine.

DiGiovanni still keeps in touch with home town baseball as he participated in a summer town league. Just this past summer, the Wildcat hot-corner man hit a highly respectable .350 against the offerings of the league's pitchers.

Influenced By Severino

Just as Fred Dwyer, ace American and ex-Villanova miler, was responsible for bringing the most famous Wildcat, Ron Delany, to the campus, another Villanova star was responsible for DiGivannoi's appearance here.

Upon graduation from high school, DiGiovanni was influenced by Danny Severino, Villanova's top pitcher the past two seasons, to attend the university. Severino himself fostered ambitions to play third base, even last year.

Charley became a member of the Villanova varsity in his sophomore year, but never started during this, or the next, year.

One of the highlights of those two years of patient waiting was the pinch hit double he delivered against Navy last season.

"Good Guys" Goes Bad

Charley is a member of the Accounting Society in conjunction with his major. This is his major extra-curricular activity. He is deeply interested in his chosen field, having made the Dean's List his freshman year.

Most people who know him classify Charley in two words—"good guy." This is fine with him, but he hopes enemy pitchers will be regarding him as a "bad guy" before the season is over.

Al Griffith Wins Alumni Court Award

Al Griffith, a three year star on the Villanova basketball team, was voted the most valuable player last season by his teammates.

Griffith was presented with the award at the Villanova Club of South Jersey annual Basketball banquet last week, by Joseph P. DeLuca, president of the general alumni association.

Rodgers Shares Honors

Sharing the spotlight with Griffith was Temple's All-American, Guy Rodgers, who won the Michael Saxe Memorial Award for the second straight year.

This award, commemorating Villanova's first basketball coach, is given annually to the outstanding basketball player in Big Five City Service competition as selected by the five city coaches. It was instituted last year.

The rest of the Villanova squad, including ex-captain Jimmy Smith, a February graduate, was given gold basketballs by the club, as were manager Richard "Doc" Newman and trainer John "Jake" Nevins.

Severance Gives Praise

University equipment manager Charley Farnam was honored in recognition of his work with the athletic department, and John P. Brennan received the alumni award for faithful service.

Basketball coach Al Severance, along with his cohort, Jim Elliott, coach of the track team, praised the court squad for loyalty and perseverance in the face of the grueling schedule and losing season.

CHARLEY Di GIOVANNI
Three Years of Waiting

It's that time again and Villanova's gridiron squad is in full spring practice swing under head coach Frank Reagan. 74 candidates have reported for the 20-day drill.

Spring Football Drills Start, Frank Reagan's First Senior Team Boasts 26 Lettermen

The 1957 Villanova grid prospects are the brightest the Mainline institution has had since 1952. Beginning his fourth year as head coach, Frank Reagan will have his first senior team since he took the coaching reins in 1953.

Twenty-six lettermen are among the seventy odd candidates who turned out for the spring drills last week. Of these, five were starters of last year. Because he used a two platoon system throughout the season, Reagan also can count on a number of other players who saw plenty of action in each of the nine games.

Luzzi Leads List

Headed by Don Luzzi, a potential All-American, the line will be strong at all positions except center. Captain Joe Ryan will be graduated and burden will fall with senior Vince Chaverini who came a long way in '56.

Reagan will have three other tackles besides the 220 pound Luzzi who rate as toss-ups for the other tackle slot. Hal Durgin, 6-5, 225; Alex Szablowski, 6-1, 215; and Bill Craig, 6-2, 220, give the Wildcats plenty of size in the forward wall plus experience.

The wing posts will have experienced Gene O'Pella, 6-5, 230 and Tony Varrechione 6-2, 195, both of who started several games in '56. O'Pella is an army veteran whose only previous experience before coming to Villanova was playing service ball in Europe. Possessing a good pair of hands, his experience on the varsity basketball team helps him snare passes all over the field. He could well become one of the nation's best receivers.

Other Wingmen

Tony Varrechione, a letter winner at one of the end posts last year, is one of the best offensive blockers on the squad. Other wingmen returning are Paul Laughlin and Pete Blackwood, a senior and junior respectively who saw plenty of action in '56.

The guards and center spots pose a problem. The first three guards are gone and Reagan will have to move some of his smaller tackles over to fill the gap. Eddie Michaels, Jr., son of one of Villanova coaches, played both guard and tackle last year and proved to be adept at either position. Mike DeLucia, junior, also switches between guard and center and was a strong point on the second platoon.

The big gap is at center. Captain Joe Ryan, who held the starting post for two years, is gone and his replacement Vince Chaverini needs help. Tom Fletcher, another junior, saw limited action but will be counted on heavily.

Every team needs a wealth of halfbacks. The Wildcats are short in this department but have the nucleus in Davey Parr and Rick Sapienza as starters. Dave Intrabartolo, a junior, who sat out all of 1956 due to an arm injury, has plenty of speed and may be in the starting lineup come September.

Who's At Fullback?

Jack Devereaux, the fourth string fullback for the first three games, last year wound up as the number one man and the team's leading ground gainer. The fullback position has only one problem. That is—what to do with all the good ones? One solution is switching big Rollie West, a 6-2, 215 pound junior to halfback and moving junior Gene Paja to one of the guard positions.

The quarterback slot is in the excellent hands of senior Billy Magee and junior Jim Grazione.

Reagan expects help from about four or five boys up from the freshman squad. Of particular interest is Dick Keyser, a 6-3, 240 pounder from Norristown, Pa. at tackle and Leon Horin, a hard-hitting fullback from Millville, N.J.

The final spring workout will be held on Villanova's Fifth Annual Blue-White Day, Saturday, May 4. An intersquad game will replace the customary varsity-Old-Timers game.

Raveling Chosen On LaSalle Frosh Opponent Quintet

George Raveling, six foot, four inch center on Villanova's freshman besketball team, has been named to the all-opponent squad of the LaSalle city champion frosh.

Raveling scored 42 points in Villanova's two losses to the Explorers, 26 in the first contest and 16 in the second.

Named to the team with the Wildcat yearling were Joe Sarner, Muhlenburg, and "Pickles" Kennedy, Temple, as guards, and Jack Saxenmayer, Penn, and Mike Wallace, Lafayette, as forwards.

A writer for the LaSalle collegiate newspaper commented that "People will be talking about these boys (the all-opponent team), our boys and good basketball in the same breath for a long time to come."

LaSalle finished the season this year with a 15-1 record and was generally considered to be the best frosh team in the area.

Musclemen Make Progress

By JACK CURTIN

A few weeks ago the Philadelphia newspaper made quite a fuss about a group of Penn students who banded together and formed an ice hockey team on their own, without help from the University. Perhaps these same papers would be interested in a group of Villanovans who have done approximately the same thing, on a smaller scale, in the field of weightlifting.

Leading the movement of muclebuilders on campus is one John O'Keefe, a cemhanical engineering senior. O'Keefe has been trying since his freshmen year to form a weightlifting organization on campus; and hwile he found enough interest among fellow students to support his idea, he could never find the space to organize a formal club.

Four Year Effort

Finally, this year, with the aid of the Villanova Intramural department, O'Keefe and his followers acquired space in the field house. Less than a month later, the Weightlifting club boasted 30 members and reasonably good facilities.

To the lifting platform and 600 pounds of exercise weights they started with, the body building enthusiasts recently added a complete Olympic weight lifting set, which will allow them to practice the three standard olympic lifts. They are the Clean and Press—bringing the weight from the floor to the chest and then overhead with no leg motion, the Snatch—bringing the weight frm tohe floor overhead in one motion, and the Clean and Jerk—bringing the weight to the chest and jerking it overhead with leg motion.

The exercise weights the club posesses are made up of dumbbells and barbells which are used mainly for body drills and weight training.

Threefold Purpose

This brings us to the purpose of this newest of campus organizations. O'Keefe stated that the club fulfills a threefold duty. It offers opportunities for the athlete to go in for weight training in his off season (an opportunity that several football players have taken advantage of), it provides a body building course for other students and hopes to foster intercollegiate weightlifting on the Villanova campus.

This third effort is the latest dream of O'Keefe. Penn and Drexel have intercollegiate teams in the area, and the club president would like to see a Villanova team in competition with them someday, should there be enough interest among students and administration.

Destroy That Bulge

In conjunction with this, he stresses that the club is open to anyone an dno experience is necessary. He added that it would be a fine way to get rid of that winter bulge before the beach season begins.

O'Keefe feels that with a large and active membership, the club will be able to branch out in its activities and somebay enter in the intercollegiate competition he dreams of. This would of course take place after his graduation, which is forthcoming in June, but he would like to see the club on its way to more activity within the next few months.

The aspirations of this group are heartily supported here, for this columnist believes in any move for more Villanova intercollegiate activity. The weightlifters seem to have the perseverance to finally attain their end. After all, they waited four years to get this far.

Tom O'Neil, sophomore chemical engineer and vice-president of the Weightlifting Club, strains under a 225-pound load as club president and organizer, John O'Keefe, looks on. O'Neil is in the clean position of a Clean and Jerk lift.

Intramural Softball Season Begun; Defending Champs Crush Opponents

By DON KEMPF

Many of last season's powers served notice that they will be strong contenders again this year as the Intramural Spring Softball Season got underway last week.

Jim Moran, President of the Intramural Council announced that there are 62 teams participating in this year's games and that they had been divided into eight leagues.

Defending Champs Win

On opening day the Jizz A.C. began the defense of their softball title in fine style and served notice that they are once more the team to beat. The A.C. routed the Northerners by a 12 to 3 score. The strong right arm of Don Brass virtually left the opposition helpless. With the addition of Tom Philo's fine handling of the chores behind the plate and the same lineup that won the championship a year ago, the Jizz A.C. looked very strong.

Last year's runner-up in the playoffs, the Litmus Blues, started off the season by outslugging the Bards for a 15 to 9 victory on Mendel field. Homers by Lou Minotti and Charley Farly paced the Blues, while Paul Clarkson turned in a fine performance of the Bards.

The Caribes had a good opening day, beating the Fence Busters by a wide 8 to 1 margin. The powerful hitting of Emilio Sanchez put the Caribes out in front in the first inning and the pitching of Miguel Sabater kept them there.

A Challenge Extended

Another of last season's powerhouse threats, the Delurey Devils, beat Able Company behind the fine pitching and timely hitting of Pat Nicholson.

The Barons, one of the most promising teams in this year's league, defeated the Austin Animals 4 to 2 behind the three hit pitching of Jim Johnson. Joe Scancarella, captain and third sacker, got two hits and drove in two runs. In extending an open challenge to last year's champs, Jizz A.C., Scancarella said that the Barons are confident of winning the 5:45 Simpson League and hope to go all the way.

Varsity Rifle Squad Closes Winning Year

The Varsity Rifle Team climaxed another successful season last week, recording seven wins and two losses. The wins were over Western Maryland, LaSalle, Princeton, Lehigh, Fordham, John Hopkins and Georgetown. The losses were to Manhattan and St. John's.

The team's biggest margin of victory was a spread of forty-eight points, coming against John Hopkins. The easiest victory was a forfeit conquest of Georgetown. The toughest one to win was the Lehigh match, 1385 to 1380.

The team made their highest score of the season, 1400 against Manhattan only to lose by twelve points. St. John's set a range record with 1450 points to hand Villanova its only other defeat of the season.

Team high scorers were captain Hank Miller with a 284.1 average, Chris Kloss, 282.3; Jim Abernethy, 274.8; Fred Passarella, 273.6 and Pete Carini, 273.5. Other top shooters were Frank Moser and J. Strom McCurley. The highest individual score of the season was Hank Miller's 290.

Competed in In Ney York

This year the varsity team branched out and broke off into the schedule of the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Rifle League, a New York City organization, which provided them with Fordham, St. John's and Manhattan as competition. St. John's at least is interested in continuing the competition on a yearly home basis.

The seeking of competition in the New York League was in line with the policy of the team's coach, Sergeant Edward J. Molcany, assistant to Villanova's NROTC unit marine instructor, to fire the best caliber competition possible. A future goal of the team is competition with the Army and Navy teams, the best in the country.

The fine record this year bodes well for next year's team since all team members, except captain Hank Miller, will return next season. Several up-and-comers from the frosh rifle team are expected to bolster the returnees. Sergeant Molcany has voiced his appreciation of the work and effort put in by the team and his pleasure in coaching it and leading it into the more advanced areas of competition.

Golf Squad Faces 13 Match Schedule As Season Opens; Aims For Improved Record

The golf team, bolstered by the return of all last year's leading men, was to open its 13 match schedule against Temple last Friday.

However, poor conditions postponed the opener until yesterday when the Mainliners met LaSalle. Other matches this season include LaSalle, St. Joseph's, Seton Hall, Muhlenberg, Penn, Drexel and Penn State.

Last year the Wildcats wound up the season with a 7-5 record. The Mainliners defeated all the leading area teams but Penn. However, this year the Wildcat golfers are much improved. They are captained by three year veteran Ben Klemanowicz. Other returnees are junior letterman, Jim Birle, Frank Kreuse, and Jay Gibney and sophomores Roger Gaire and Ronnie Zurinskas.

Matches Decide Position

Two other positions on the varsity are still to be decided. They will be filled by winners of two matches which are to be held in the near future. One match will have Bill Mawr against Joe Louis and the other will be between Roger Michard and Nick Acquilino.

The losers of these matches will make up the final cut from the original group of 35 candidates that tried out last spring at the Main Line Country Club. Marking the improvement of the club over last year was the fact that competition was so keen that a few members of last year's varsity were cut from the squad in order to make room for the impressive sophomores.

Ten Home Matches

All ten home matches will be played at Aronimink Country Club. They away matches will be played against Penn State, Drexel, and St. Joe's and will take place on these respective teams' courses.

Some of the highlights of the coming season include the match with the Alumni on Blue-White Day and the Penn State match at College Park, Pa. Last year the varsity dropped both of these matches but this year they are looking forward to turning these losses into victories.

Baseball Team Goes On Road For Three Games This Week, Plays Rutgers Home April 17

The Wildcats take to the road again this week as they try to get settled on a winning beam. They encounter Army today and Princeton and Rutgers over the weekend.

Last year the Mahanmen downed Army 7-4 at West Point and later downed Princeton by a 6-5 score. Both the Tigers and the Cadets will be out to avenge these losses.

Rutgers Is New

Rutgers wasn't on the Villanova schedule last year, but they compiled a 10-8-1 record, including victories over Penn, Princeton, Lehigh, and Syracuse. However, this George Case coached nine was heavily hit by graduation and will be depending on sophomores to fill key positions.

Exactly one week from today, on April 17, Rutgers of South Jersey will journey to Villanova to take on the Wildcats on the Goodreau Stadium diamond. A year ago the Wildcats slaughtered the Jerseyites, 21-2.

Next on the agenda for Mahan and his squad will be a contest with Vermont on April 18, followed by a LaSalle battle on the 25th. Vermont is new to the schedule, while LaSalle was beaten 6-2 last year. Both games will be played at Villanova.

Travel To Seton Hall

Two days later, the Mainliners travel to South Orange, N.J., to do battle with the always powerful Pirates of Seton Hall. A return to campus to play Temple on the 29th will be followed immediately by a trip upstate to meet Penn State on May 1.

On Blue-White Day, May 4, the Mainliners will meet their arch-rivals, the Hawks, of St. Joe's. Last year the 'Cats humbled the Hawks 11-0.

Cats Tie Score In Eighth Frame

scored one in the fourth and three in the fifth to take a five to one lead over the Cats. Villanova then came back and scored one in the sixth. The Wildcats then pushed across three more in the eight frame to gain a five-to five tie.

PMC came roaring back to make use of their last opportunity in the top of the ninth inning and scored four runs to take a nine to five lead over the Cats.

DiGiovanni Leads Team

Charlie DiGiovanni was big man for the Cats collecting three hits in the same number of trips to the plate. Ron LaMontange and Terry Hayes each hit doubles while George Emma hit his second triple in two games for the losing cause.

Trackmen Move To Cinders; All Eyes Watch Villanova

By STAN LUPA

Now that the spring season has officially been rung in by the baseball and golf teams, Villanova's powerful track machine is ready to move outside in an attempt to continue its string of conquests.

The Wildcats are after the IC4A, NCAA and Penn Relay titles to complete a sweep of the nation's track and field honors. Should they succeed, they will become the first team in history to do so.

Earlier this year, the Villanovans won the national AAU and IC4A indoor championships.

Delany Rates Special Attention

The Wildcats move from the smoke-filled enclosures of the banked boards to the sunny outdoor cinder tracks with the eyes of the nation's sports enthusiasts upon them. Ron Delany, Charley Jenkins, Phil Reavis, Don Bragg et all are expected to put on the same record-breaking performances they did indoors.

Delany will be in for some special attention. This time last year the Irish youth was considered nothing more than another good miler. Since then, Ron has joined the select group of four minute milers, been crowned the Olympic 1500 meter champion and ended his second year as an undefeated indoor miler.

Now most sports experts firmly believe that Delany can break the four minute mile any time he so desires, even indoors. This, coupled with the fact that his two arch-rivals, Fred Dwyer (who vowed to break the four minute barrier this spring) and Lazslo Tabori (who figures to run much better outdoors), are getting desperate in their attemps to beat him, should make the Dublin youth the central figure of another season.

Others To Be Watched

Don Bragg has become the first man to top Bob Richards in many a day, the mile relay team gets faster every week, Phil Reavis continues to astound everyone who sees him and Charley Jenkins just keeps rolling along; so perhaps there will be a lot of special attention paid the lads in Villanova blue.

The season opens this Saturday at the Queens-Iona Relays in New York. These relays were the season's spoiler last year in that they marked the worst all-round team effort of the year for the Mainliners, although they were also the scene of victories in the mile and four mile relays.

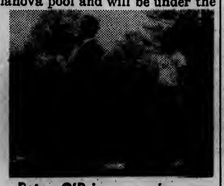
The four mile relay time of 17:31.1 was a meet record for a quartet of George Brown, John Kopil, Alex Breckenridge, and Delany.

The Villanova wonders meet Navy and Penn State in a dual meet at Annapolis a week later.

Then, on the following weekend, comes one of the big ones. Although there is no team title for the Penn Relay Carnival, winners there are generally conceded to be among the top competitors in America.

Strategy Helped

Last year, aided by the masterful strategy of coach Jim Elliott, Villanova dominated the relays, topping off the two day spectable by defeating a supposedly unbeatable Oxford University, England, quartet in the college distance medley relay.



Sr. Life Saving Course Given By Intramural Dept.

Director of Intramurals Ed Geisz announced that the Intramural department is sponsoring a Red Cross Senior Life Saving Course.

Mr. Geisz said that the course was offered before by the Red Cross at a cost of fifty dollars and felt that, because it is now being offered free of cost, all interested students would be able to participate.

18 Hours Required

Each candidate must spend eighteen hours taking instruction in order to qualify. The course will be held in the Villanova pool and will be under the direction of Jim O'Leary, Con O'Donnell, and John O'Connell.

Pete O'Brien, sophomore member of the Intramural Council throws out the first ball to open the 1957 softball season. Villanova's much publicized Ed Walsh and an unidentified catcher look on.

Intramural Council President Jim Moran announced that plans are now being completed for the Annual Outdoor Intramural Track Championships to be held on May 10. Moran said that the program would include all track and field events and would get underway at 3:30 P.M. under the direction of sophomore Jim Klein.

All of last year's winners will be back again for this season's meet. Last year's only double winner, Joe Armon, who set a new intramural record in the 220 yard dash, is presently out for the university track team, but last year's other record-setter, Bill Hixson, will be back to defend his half mile championship. Hixson's winning time was 2:11.7.

Sr. Class President Jumps

Other highlights in the afternoon's events will be the high jump in which Senior Class President Vince Sullivan will defend his crown against a host of underclassmen and Chuck Roellig's defense of the shot putt title.

Moran also announced that the tennis nets had been set up after being repaired, and that the tennis courts were now open for the use of all students.

MANAGER WANTED

There is still an opening for a freshman manager for the Baseball team. Those interested are asked to apply immediately as the season is already in full swing. Any applicants are asked to see Charley Farnam, University Equipment Manager, in the Field House about the position.

Reagan Signs Army To Grid Game In 1959

Frank Reagan, Villanova's athletic director and head football coach, has announced the first major football signing he has made in his athletic head position.

Reagan revealed that Villanova would engage West Point in a gridiron contest during the 1959 season.

Previously, Army was on the Villanova schedule for 1958 and 1960.

These three games, renewing an old Wildcat-Cadet series, are the first organized part of the new Villanova "regional de-emphasis" program.

All three contests will be played at West Point according to present arrangements, but it is reasonable to assume that, should the two teams be evenly matched and put on some of the great battles they were famous for in the past, one of the three games could be moved to Philadelphia.

The last game between the two great eastern teams resulted in a Villanova victory. In 1951, Villanova smothered the Cadets 27-6.

STUDENT COUNCIL VIEWS

By JOE MARTIN, SC President

The suggestion of the Student Council to inaugurated a Parent's Day at Villanova for freshmen is now receiving the attention of the administration.

Such a plan was prepared and presented to Fr. Kemme by the Vice-Chairman of the Council, Pat Nicholson. The basic points of the plan are a general assembly of all the freshmen and their parents, an open house with light snacks and the football game in the afternoon. The Spirit Committee would have a student parade planned for pre-game time. This would be one similar to the one held the last two years prior to the first home games of the year. Also included in Nicholson's proposal is the hope that Muff Day could be held the Friday before this Day so that parents who could make the trip early would be able to see this memorable event in the life of a freshman, as well as the traditional rally prior to each game. This plan seems to fit the initial idea of the Council; that is: to give the parents of the freshmen a look at Villanova as soon as possible after their son arrives.

JOE MARTIN

Easter ..a time of hope and happiness

The Spirit Committee has obtained a block of tickets for the students who want to see the Penn Relays. If the students that are interested are porportional to the prowess of the track team that will represent us there, Franklin Field will be loaded with Villanovans that day. Last year our team, as usual, was the highlight of the two day track carnival. Since the Spirit Committee has done us the favor of obtaining tickets to sell right on our campus, there is no reason why the turnout that Saturday will not be close to 100% of the student body.

Although it is hard to realize, there are only two more meetings of the Council before the election of new officers takes place at the annual joint meeting. At this meeting the men who will lead the Council next year will be selected by the incoming, as well as the outgoing members of the Student Council. Since this is such an important election there will be a few minor changes in the election proceedings of that night. In the past the nominations and elections of the officers have taken place shortly after the general school elections where the representatives are chosen. Because of this there was great danger that all the people doing the electing were not familiar with the candidates seeking a particular office.

This year the nominations of officers will be accompanied by a brief nominating speech that will give all present a chance to hear how active any candidate has been in the past and in general get a better chance to weigh the merits of each man. In addition to this the candidate himself will say a few words in order that he may give a short resume' of his policies and have the chance to show how well he handles himself in front of a group. I believe that these measures will aid in selecting the best men possible to lead the Council next year.

* * * * *

The Council voted at the last meeting to make the Basca Memorial Weekend a special event on the Social Calendar. This move was made so that the weekend could be held on Homecoming Weekend. Since the Homecoming date is selected by the Alumni Associations, the necessity arose to give Basca Weekend a special classification. Due to the success of the the Basca Weekends in the past two years the Alumni requested that they be held at Homecoming in future years. In this way the students at Villanova will be able to show off in front of the members of the alumni. Everyone will agree that last years bonfire rally was something that should be shown off.

An interesting motion brought before the Council at the meeting of March 4, was the one concerning the publishing of a complete directory of home addresses of all the students at Villanova. This would include all regular students listed as such with the Registrar.

TV Guide Publisher:

James T. Quirk To Address Fathers' Day Group May 11

Mr. James T. Quirk, publisher of TV Guide, alumnus of Villanova and recipient of the first St. Augustine medal for journalism, will be guest speaker at the annual Father's Day banquet Saturday, May 11.

Fathers' Day Chairman Dick Mason announces that Mr. Quirk has been selected by the Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., dean of student activities.

Villanova Alumnus

Born and educated in Philadelphia, Mr. Quirk began his career in radio in 1934 after attending Villanova. He later joined Triangle Publications where he obtained much of his newspaper training and background.

He has been with TV Guide since its inception in 1953. The weekly magazine has expanded to cover the entire country with 40 editions and a circulation of more than four million.

During World War II Mr. Quirk served as public information officer for Gen. Omar Bradley and the late Gen. George Patton. He was discharged with the rank of Colonel.

In 1951 he was recalled into the Army and served under Gen. Mathew Ridgeway, then commander of the Eighth Army in Korea.

St. Augustine Medal

Last year Mr. Quirk was presented with the first annual St. Augustine medal for contributions to the world of communications by the Villanovan during a banquet in the Drake Hotel in Philadelphia.

He resides with his wife and child in Bala-Cynwood and is an active member of the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia.

Mason also announces that steak has been chosen for the banquet meal to be served in Dougherty Hall at 7 p.m.

Other Events

The other events of Fathers' Day will consist of a Mass in the morning at the grotto of Our Lady of Good Counsel, a luncheon in Dougherty, a ball game with Fordham University and a track meet with Seton Hall.

All seniors are urged to make plans as Fathers' Day is but one month away. The price for the entire day will be $5. Tickets will go on sale after Easter vacation.

IRS Officers To Be Elected

President Gene Donohue of the International Relations Society has announced that elections for next year's officers will be held tomorrow night in 201 C&F.

The meeting scheduled for 7 o'clock will not be very long since a speaker has not yet been obtained. Donohue said.

He also expressed the wish that every member would make it a point to be there because of the importance of the elections. Jack O'Leary, Dinner Chairman, has made some tentative arrangements and said that he is waiting on the decision of the members before taking further action.

Mayor Briscoe Receives Degree Today

Law School Dedication Commences Thursday; Bishop Sheen, Justice Earl Warren To Speak

Convocation Honors Lord Mayor Briscoe

BY JOHN J. CURTIN

The Irish Times has described the Right Honorable Robert Briscoe, Lord Mayor of Dublin, as "a striking phenomenon, a highly disciplined revolutionary and a practical idealist."

Villanova University's faculty and student body will have an opportunity to greet in person this "phenomenon" today, when the Lord Mayor visits campus during his ten week cross-country tour of the United States.

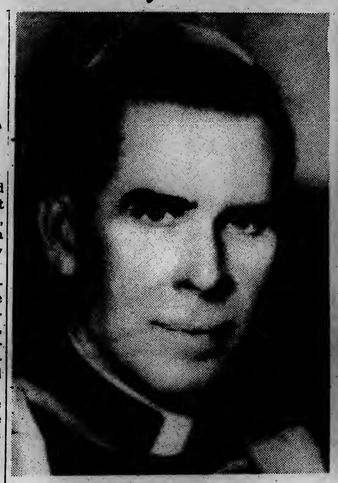
Mayor Briscoe will address the faculty and students and receive an Honorary Doctorate in Laws from the university at 10:30 this morning in the Field House.

Briscoe had often expressed a wish to see the Villanova campus, so that when his U.S. visit was announced, an invitation was extended him by the administration.

Symbol of Tolerance

It has been many years since the arrival in this country of a foreign dignitary has aroused such interest, enthusiasm and spontaneous affection as that of the Lord Mayor of Dublin. As the first Jewish Lord Mayor of the 95% Irish Catholic City of Dublin, Robert Briscoe has quickly become a symbol of freedom loving people, of tolerance and understanding, of the ability of a man to reach the top of the ladder without reference to his racial or religious background.

The Lord Mayor's election came as the climax of a lifetime of service to Ireland and the struggle for the freedom of that state.



Robert Briscoe was born in Dublin in 1895 and educated with the Christian Brothers in Strand Street and at the National School in Kildare.

Married In Dublin

After completing his schooling, he came to the United States and entered an export-import business in New Jersey; but, after the Irish Rebellion of 1916, he returned to Ireland to join the I.R.A., and to marry another Dubliner, Lillian Melanie Isaacs.

He entered Irish politics in 1926, and since 1927 has been a member of the Dail, the Irish

'International Peace' Theme Of Symposia

Law School dedication activities start Thursday morning with the opening Mass celebrated by His Excellency, the Most Reverend J. Carroll McCormick, Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia.

Presiding will be the Archbishop of Philadelphia, the Most Reverend John Francis O'Hara.

The first Symposium, International Peace, will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 in Garey Hall. Thursday night, members of the bar, and friends and neighbors of the university are invited to visit Garey Hall.

Two Symposia

Two symposia will be held Friday. In the morning at 10:00 the topic will be Industrial Peace. At 2:30 p.m. Interracial Peace will be discussed.

On Friday evening at 7:00 the Fourth Annual Law School Banquet will begin. This affair will be held in the ballroom of the Warwick Hotel. John G. Harvey, Esq., Advisor to the Section on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar, American Bar Association, and The Honorable Charles Alvin Jones, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania will speak.

To Speak:

MONSIG. VARGA, SECRETARY SHANLEY ARE ON FIRST PANEL

BY JOSEPH J. McMAHON

"International Peace" will be the topic for the first of three Dedication Symposia on Thursday, April 25, 1957.

All students and friends of the University are invited to attend the symposia.

Commencement of the exercises will be 2:30 p.m. in the Law School, Garey Hall.

St. Augustine has said, "Peace is the tranquility of order."

The theme of this first Symposia coincides with the latter quote, stating, "Law is the Foundation of an Ordered Peace." Cognition here will manifest the main idea of this opening Symposium.

Reuschlein To Welcome

Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School, will extend a welcome to guests and visitors arriving at Garey Hall.

The proceedings then will be under the direction of William B. Ball, Professor in Villanova's School of Law. Professor Ball, who has recently been appointed to the Association of American Law Schools, teaches International Law and Constitutional Law in Garey Hall.

Great Experience

Rt. Rev. Bela Varga, priest, political leader and diplomat, will talk on the subject; "Law, the Captive Peoples and International Peace," topics with which Monsignor Varga is extremely very familiar.

Hon. Bernard M. Shanley, Secretary to the President of the United States, will discuss "Law, The Free Peoples and International Peace." Being associated with the President as secretary, Mr. Shanley is well informed on national and international affairs.

Professor Carlston

Kenneth S. Carlston, a Professor of Law, at the University of Illinois, will give his views on "Law, the United Nations and International Peace."

Then Professor Carlston, will discuss "International Peace."

This opening Symosium is intended to be not only an educational but a very enjoyable affair. It is the hope that the Symposia will bring forth information which will answer questions asked daily in the world today.

Mass To Open Full Schedule Of Activities

BY LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE

A new era in Villanova University History will begin Thursday when the Dedication Ceremonies for the School of Law begin.

Starting on Thursday morning with a Solemn Pontifical Mass of Thanksgiving with the Most Reverend John Francis O'Hara, Archbishop of Philadelphia presiding, the ceremonies will continue through an Academic Convocation to be held Saturday morning.

The theme of the ceremonies is "Law, The Foundation Of An Ordered Peace." The idea is from a statement of Saint Augustine, "Peace is the Tranquility of Order."

Top Speakers

His Excellency, the Most Reverend Fulton J. Sheen will preach at the opening Mass. The Honorable Earl Warren, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States will deliver the Convocation address.

John Kennedy, junior Senator from Massacheusetts; Charles Alvin Jones, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and Bernard M. Shanley, secretary to the President are only a few of the great names that will visit the Dedication Ceremonies.

The members of the faculty of the Law School will preside at the symposia to be held Thursday and Friday.

First Symposium

Professor William B. Ball will be the chairman at the International Peace panel which will bring together Monsignor Bela Varga, famous Hungarian patroit, William Rice, Professor of Law at the University of Wisconsin. Others are Kenneth S. Carlston, Professor of Law at the University of Illinois; Frank C. Nash, former Assistant to the Secretary of Defense and Bernard Shanley.

Thomas O'Toole Presiding

With Assistant Dean Thomas J. O'Toole presiding the second symposium will consider Industrial Peace. Mr. Lee W. Minton, Vice-President and member of the Executive Council of AFL-CIO; Godfrey P. Schmidt, former counsel to the department of labor and Reynolds C. Seitz, Dean of the Law School Mar-

Peace Under God

Great and famous men will be on the Villanova campus this week. Beginning today with the visit of the Lord Mayor, Robert E. Briscoe, the parade of names will continue until Saturday morning.

The hierarchy of the Church will be well represented by Archbishop O'Hara, of Philadelphia; Bishop Fulton Sheen, of New York and Bishop Carroll McCormick, of Philadelphia.

Also present will be the members of the Augustinian order, our professors and their superiors, and countless other priests and religious people interested in the University.

Law sends the other delegation. The Honorable Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; Senator John Kennedy, young freedom-fighter from Massachusetts; Bernard Shanley, Secretary to the President; Charles Alvin Jones, Chief Justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court and countless other notables.

But these men come not merely to receive honorary degrees and merely make acceptance speeches. They have the intention to honor the founders of this new Law School and to help dedicate it.

The theme of the dedication ceremonies is "Peace". These men of peace, clergy and laity alike, come together to discuss the subject. The three symposia, "International Peace", "Industrial Peace", and "Interracial Peace" have speakers well qualified. They realize that peace is not something merely to pipe dream about, but an idea that must be put into immediate effect to insure world survival.

Peace cannot be found internationally until there is peace in homes and in the hearts of the people. And towards this end the speaker will work remembering that true peace comes only with the help of God.

We Have Reason to be Proud

Growth is progress. For this reason, if no other, the final ceremonies in the dedication of Garey Hall, the new home of the Villanova School of Law, that are being held this week, instill a feeling of pride in everyone connected with the university, past or present.

There is certainly much more, however, to this significant addition to the campus than a physical enlargement.

The accredition of a university, and its relative academic rating is often based upon its graduate schools. The addition of the Division of Law to the Villanova curriculum has played a significant part in the institution's rise to the university level.

Villanova's one graduate school has been a good one, but it has been cramped. Until recently all law classes were held in the university library. This was also the home of the law text and reference books. Now, with the new building, pressure has been removed from both the Law Division and the library.

In the impressive and highly adequate surroundings of Garey Hall, the Law School will become an even stronger institute of knowledge. And, as it gains strength, and grows in stature, so shall Villanova.

Garey Hall stands in tribute to the dreams and efforts of many individuals who wanted to make Villanova one of the finest centers of learning in the country. Most of all, however, it stands as a monument to the work of one man.

That man is Harold Gill Reuschlein. In four short years the affable Dean of the Law School has brought it from its humble dwellings in the library to its present highly impressive stone abode. His hard work and determination have made a dream come true.

What we are to witness in the next few days marks the first really tangible results of the rise to the status of a university. It is also the stepping stone to a new and greater Villanova, a university that may rank one day with the greatest in the world.

This is not a wild dream. Four years ago Villanova had no School of Law. Today she has this and more, a glorious home for it. And this is not the end.

This is but the beginning.

Villanova Is A Catholic Law School

By DEAN HAROLD REUSCHLEIN

A Catholic law school must justify its existence. It is the conviction of the faculty that there is no real justification for a Catholic law school unless it does something more than, or at least different from, that which is done by secular institutions.

The Catholic law school, in common with other Catholic professional schools, must avoid the danger proceeding from two extremes. There is first the real temptation to do nothing in the teaching of law which will emphasize Catholic philosophy at points where that philosophy is morally and socially material.

It is physically possible for the Catholic law school to worship the gods of the current legal positivism and then salve its conscience by adding religious props - placing a Crucifix in the classroom, even opening classes with prayer and, perhaps, sponsoring an occasional Red Mass. We ought not to employ the Crucifix, Prayer, or Holy Mass in a futile and insincere attempt to sanctify what is essentially un-Christian.

The other danger, no less real, is the temptation to substitute religion for the law. The Catholic law school which does this may graduate pious lawyers but they will be poor lawyers. Piety is not a substitute for competence. What then shall we aspire to in the Catholic law school? We must achieve simultaneously the attainment of Christian wisdom and careful, painstaking legal scholarship. There must be a synthesis of the two. More juxtaposition will not suffice.

How can a Catholic law school synthesize Christian wisdom and professional knowledge? We believe that at innumerable points the Common Law lends itself to a treatment which emphasizes the close relationship between the legal principles which we have inherited and the Christian tradition of justice and human dignity.

Professional Ethics is not learned from pious preachments. It is learned from illustrative material showing Catholic principles at work in the market place, the home and in government. So we do not rely principally on formal, separate courses in Ethics.

We rely on every course taught in the Law School, be it Contracts, Torts, Property or anything else being also a course in applied Ethics — Ethics in action. Now if a school is going to infuse into each course an ethical content, what will matter most is the men who teach the courses.

In introducing students to the Common Law a teacher can either make explicit these connections or he can obscure or ignore them. He can teach law in terms of an effort to achieve justice or he can teach law as the product of history or of economics or of sociology. In confronting problems which the courts have not yet solved the teacher can proceed cynically, casuistically or purposively. If he proceeds purposively, his purpose can be drawn from starting points in tune with the natural law or from starting points drawn from Freudianism, Marxism, existentialism or any of the other fads of modern learning.

The highest work and most challenging task today facing (though often unseen) the Catholic law faculty is to inquire and judge as to each course: What are the relationships of its chief problems to moral principles? How shall the content of the course be informed with Christian concepts? What insights may be discovered as to dangers in doctrines found in that field of law? What constructive, "restorative" ideas can be engendered for the improvement of that area of the law, bearing in mind the work of this age, to restore all things to Christ?

It is to these inquiries that we constantly address ourselves and to which we dedicate our efforts.

Proper Time For Dedicating

It is only fitting and proper that during this Easter Week the new Law School should be dedicated. The joy of the season is parallel to the joy we feel as a part of this great event.

Our Holy Mother the Church has just concluded the most sad and somber season of the year. Now it is time for the Alleluias to sound. The Church is starting on a bold new season. So also Villanova is entering a new field.

The Church has the feeling of self-assurance that stems from the promises of Christ. Villanova too is following the command of the Founder, "Go therefore, teach ye all nations."

And Villanova has the confidence that comes from obedience t othe will of God.

The members of the Church are gloriously singing the praises of the Risen Christ. So also this week will the honors be heaped on the University. And in praising this institution the glory is directed back to the Church and to its founder.

We then have an obligation to take an active part in these festivities. For the reflection will be from the glow of our pride. Those of us who let this opportunity slip by are causing a discredit to the University, to the assembled guests and to the Guardian of our education.

Pride of Eire

At 10:30 this morning when the Lord Mayor of Dublin receives an honorary degree, the eyes of the world will be on Villanova. For this "phenomenon" from the auld sod represents to people everywhere the spirit of democracy and tolerance.

For this man of Jewish faith, overwhelmingly elected Mayor in the world's most predominately Irish city will receive a degree from a Catholic institution. The spirit of universal brotherhood and freedom of religion under God cannot be more convincingly exhibited.

When Father Donnellon presents the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws on the Irish Mayor before the assembled student body and guests of the University, the eyes and hearts of America can be proudly raised, and the freedom lovers in Ireland can feel justly proud of their Catholic heritage which enabled them to look above intolerance to elect this gentleman.

Charity is indeed the greatest of the theological virtues. And charity is love. Charity is love of God and love of neighbor. And where could this be more appropriate than in a Catholic University.

We of Villanova can feel proud today of this opportunity we have. We can feel proud to have Mayor Briscoe on our campus.

We welcome you, Lord Mayor of Dublin, Robert E. Briscoe.

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY
Villanova, Pennsylvania

Dear Students and Friends of Villanova:

Any new building on a campus is of necessity a reason for some jubilation. In our own case the construction program has been carefully and thoughtfully designed. One by one the structures are rising. All of them fulfill a distinct need; they provide, visibly and tangibly, the classrooms and the allied opportunity for academic progress.

Eugene Garey Hall is about to be dedicated. The ceremonies should give genuine satisfaction to all Villanovans, undergraduate and alumni. But, apart from the substantial enough evidence of physical growth it portrays, the very existence of a School of Law suggests even more significance. It need scarcely be noted at this late hour that from the earliest years of history the study of Law has coincided with the process of order and civilization. The oldest universities and all centers of honest thought and knowledge since have produced results concurrent with respect for the Ten Commandments. Modern barbarians who disregard the laws of God consistently despise the laws of man as well. In the most refined tradition a School of Law is an essential part of university life.

I warmly invite all to visit Eugene Garey Hall. I ask all, moreover, to remember with prayerful gratitude the kindness of the able lawyer and gentleman for whom the Hall is named. A true friend of Villanova, his regard for the University is embodied in every classroom of the new structure.

Of These We Can Be Proud

BY FRANCIS X. DELANY

The faculty of the Villanova University School of Law is well-educated and distinguished, generally considered one of the finest in the country.

The school is headed by Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein, who came to Villanova from the University of Pittsburgh, where for some years he served as Professor of Law and Director of the Public Health Law Research Project.

Prior to that time, he had been a Professor of Law successively at Georgetown, Notre Dame and Syracuse.

His academic training was received from the University of Iowa (A.B 1927), Yale (LL.B 1933), and Cornell (J.S.D., 1934). During the war, Dr. Reuschlein served as Chief of the Office of Legislative Services in Headquarters, Army Air Forces, with the rank of Colonel, and was awarded the Legion of Merit.

He has written extensively, and within the last several years has published three books: The Schools of Corporate Reform: Jurisprudence, Its American Prophets; and Cases and Materials on Partnership and Unincorporated Business.

Dean Reuschlein is married and has one daughter, Mary Frances, a student at the Academy of Notre Dame de Namur.

Professor O'Toole holds three degrees from Harvard (A.B., 1941; LL.B., 1947; M.A., 1950).

During 1945, he studied at St. Andrews University in Scotland. He has served as a Law Clerk to the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and practiced law for a period in Boston.

THOMAS O'TOOLE

Professor O'Toole had taught economics before embarking upon law teaching and during Word War II was a Field Artillery Major.

Before coming to Villanova, Professor O'Toole was Associate Professor of Law at Northeastern University in Boston.

Assistant Dean O'Toole is married and has two sons and a daughter.

William B. Ball is an Associate Professor of Law, having joined the faculty in September 1955. He was at the time of his appointment, an attorney for and Assistant Secretary of Chas. Pfizer & Co., Inc., of Brooklyn, and prior thereto was associated with the banking and shipping firm of W. R. Grace & Co., of New York.

He is a member of the New York Bar and of the Bars of the U.S. District Courts of the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York.

WILLIAM BALL

He received the degree A.B. from Western Reserve University and J.D. from the University of Norte Dame where he was Editor - in - chief of the Law Review. He saw active duty with the U.S. Navy from 1940 to 1946 and is at present a Lt. Commander in the Naval Reserve. He is a member of the Federal Tax Forum, Inc., the Consular Law Society and the Catholic Association for International Peace.

Mr. Ball is married and has one daughter.

JOHN STEPHENSON

John G. Stephenson, III (A.B., Princeton, 1931, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and LL.B., Harvard, 1934), has been appointed Professor of Law.

He is a member of the Bar of Pennsylvania and formerly practiced law in Pittsburgh with the firm of Alter, Wright and Barron, and later was associated with the People's Pittsburgh Trust Co.

Professor Stephenson is married. He and Mrs. Stephenson have two children, Louise, a student at Wellesley and John, a student at the Haverford School.

John T. Macartney serves as a Professor.

He received the B.S. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1944 and his LL.B. from Penn in 1949.

In addition to engaging in private practice in Philadelphia after his graduation, he served as Law Clerk to Judges L. Stauffer Oliver, James C. Crumlish and Joseph E. Sloane of Common Pleas Court. Professor Macartney was selected by former Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court Owen J. Roberts as the Research Fellow to represent the University of Pennsylvania Law School in research and drafting legislation for the Public Health Law Research Project jointly carried on by the law schools of the University of Pittsburgh and the University of Pennsylvania.

JOHN MACARTNEY

Professor Macartney is married and has two daughters.

DONALD COLLINS

Donald Michael Collins serves as Associate Professor of Law. Mr. Collins was born in Philadelphia on the twenty-first September, 1925.

In competitive examinations Mr. Collins won scholarships to Georgetown University and Villanova University and he matriculated at the latter school in July, 1943.

In his freshman year he played Varsity football but he enlisted in the U.S. Marines in 1944.

Returning to Villanova, Mister Collins became Editor-in-chief of the College Newspaper and Chairman of Villanova's Student Council.

Mr. Collins married the former Madeleine Murray, a graduate of Philadelphia's College of Chestnut Hill, in Saint Patrick's Cathedral of New York City in 1952. They have one daughter, Donna, and a son, Payton.

Francis E. Holahan serves as Associate Professor of Law. He received his A.B. from the University of Pittsburgh cum laude in 1949 and his LL.B., in June, 1953.

During the war, he served in the European Theatre for two

Professor Collins Discusses Proper Preparation for Law School

BY DONALD M. COLLINS

At the outset let me point out that no course of studies is prescribed for undergraduate preparation by any law school I know. Next let me make clear that what I have to say here would not necessarily be agreed to, at least in detail, by even a majority of law school teachers.

It is probably also true that the most important characteristic of proper preparation is the habit of diligent and patient labor that any sufficiently demanding undergraduate curriculm produces. However, in my opinion, college studies can and should be directly related to the study of law in law school.

Technical Phases

The last phrase may seem an obvious qualification but it leads directly to the first question that must be discussed, that is, should the student be introduced to the technical phases of the profession at the undergraduate level or should his pre-professional education be devoted to the broad academic learning upon which the study and practice of his profession will draw.

Such a question probably arises in considering the proper preparation for any professional school. As far as the law is concerned, I oppose the former because it is probably harmful to the professional school student and I favor the latter because it supplies the resources and techniques required of him.

Helpful To Businessman

Technical courses on the law at the undergraduate level are probably beneficial to the student who enters the business world. A general understanding of the processes and limitations of the law is helpful to the businessman who will come into contact with it in his career.

But the technical learning of the attorney must be thorough and must, above all, be integrated.

Each technical question must be viewed against the background of the pervasive attitudes of the law, each must be assessed in relationship to the comprehensive functions of the profession. The law, the old saying goes, is a seamless web. It starts and ends everywhere and nowhere.

Complicated Cases

Only the student who has wrestled almost continously for years with this vast web of relevancies and relationships can deal expertly with the isolated problem. And it is only the man who has thought long and responsibly about the consequences, human and material, of alternative courses of action who can supply the counsel to harmonize the problem solution with the needs and desires of the problem poser.

Undergraduate law study can and frequently does equip the student with a glib and superficial ability which deceives him as to the depths of the problems and the attitudes and the techniques with which the profession solves them.

Pre-Professional Training

But the law school is a post-graduate school. It is so principally because the law student needs pre-professional training. We must now consider how that training should prepare the lawyer.

The principal tools of the attorney are words. Facility and precision in the articulation of ideas is an absolute necessity. Precision in thought is, of course, prerequisite to precision in expression. But the lawyer is more than a scrivener, he must know his man and mankind and the world.

DONALD M. COLLINS
Associate Professor of Law

He must deal, in his own way, with virtue and vice; he must therefore know the relationship of man to God and man to man. He will deal with human beings, their strengths and weaknesses, their predictabillty, their eccentricities; he must, after a fashion, know man.

The law builds to the past; it feels safest when relying on ancient wisdom. But that wisdom was applied to those ancient times and times change and the lawyer must know of the past and how and in what way it changed to the present.

The lawyer must use the terms and concepts of many disciplines because he must deal with all men but certain fields of learning lie so close to his own that a basic acquaintance with them is desirable.

Concretely, I think the undergraduate must be proficient in English, grammar and composition. He should pursue the courses in literature, including especially the novel and the drama, wherein as Aristotle said, we learn of life through fiction. He must study philosophy, especially logic and ethics and the history of philosophy.

Perhaps above all, he must study history. England is the father of our jurisprudence, and its history, especially its constitutional history, is a necessity and an appreciation of our laws origins and basic attitudes.

Mathematics Valuable

Some acquaintance with economics and accounting should be obtained since the law frequently deals with concepts derived from these fields. I also recommend most highly mathematics through fundamental calculus and, to a lesser degree, basic physics. It has been proved to the surprise of some lawyers that proficiency in mathematical thinking is a fairly reliable warrant of law school success.

Extra-Curricular Activities

But preparation does not stop at the curriculum. The undergraduate should take every opportunity to gain experience in expressing himself, especially on his feet. Debating, dramatics, the newspaper, the radio station, school politics and similar activities enable the student to develop his talents of thought and expression in competition with his fellows.

Vacation jobs also may contribute to successful law study. Any place from which the student can observe the motivations and the attitudes of businessmen, bankers, insurance men, government administrators and other potential clients may be an avenue to an informal education which cannot be obtained in the classroom.

Of course, those of you who read this have already started on your undergradute work. The course of studies I have suggested probably fits precisely only within the General Arts program. To you outside that program who find yourselves committed to another curriculm, I advise maximum modification of your course choices along the lines suggested.

There is no real reason to be seriously discouraged, our highest ranking graduates include men from each undergraduate division of the College.

Law Library Boasts 60,000 Volumes, Many Rare Books

By FRANK R. CUNNINGHAM

Villanova's Law School is distinguished in having the largest Catholic Law School Library in the United States.

Occupying the entire north wing of Garey Hall, the library is designed to hold more than 150,000 volumes, including 16,000 in the spacious, panelled reading room.

The rapid growth of the law library is due largely to the efforts of its librarian, Arthur C. Pulling, and his assistant, Jane L. Hammond.

Harvard Law School

Mr. Pulling came to Villanova when the law school opened following twelve years as the librarian of the Harvard Law School, where he was also assisted by Miss Hammond. In 1954, Mr. Pulling was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by the university.

In three and a half years the library has accumulated 60,000 volumes, many being donated by members of the Philadelphia Bar Association. Also, a number of corporations have contributed valuable collections, among them the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company, the Jos. M. Mitchell Law Book Company, the Aetna Insurance Company and the Electric Storage Battery Company.

Valuable Documents

The Philadelphia Commercial Museum donated an extensive collection of United States Government documents now out of print, one of which is valued at $1500.00 The Mitchell Company donated six hundred volumes of Latin-American legal documents as well as many American works.

The library can also boast many other valuable books, including a German edition of the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1837, one of the only three copies in the Philadelphia area and the complete German edition of Pennsylvania laws dating from 1805 to the present.

Complete Sets

It also has the entire National Reporter System, complete sets of all court reports of all the states except North Carolina, all Pennsylvania legal material including and all session laws from 1613 to date.

The library groups its material into five major classifications:

The library is the center of intellectual life of the ambitious student. Those students are shown at the main desk in the modern librar in Garey Hall.

ARTHUR C. PULLING
Librarian

reports of court decisions, statutes, periodicals, treatises and administrative materials. The reports comprise the greatest number of volumes, and are placed in the reading room for easy access to the student.

Large Reading Room

In the reading room, which seats 160 students, there are found the most important law texts, the decisions of the various courts, the statutes and the periodicals. The room is run by a staff of twelve students, who alternate between the circulation desk and the stacks.

In this manner the students gain experience with the assistance of the librarians.

Periodical Collection

The periodical collection is composed of about two hundred current sets, including English, Canadian and Australian material. Among the English reports are the All English Law Reports, Law Journal Reports, English Reprint, English and Empire Digest, Halsbury's Statutes and Halsbury's Laws of England.

Mr. Pulling said that the library is intended to function as a research library rather than as a working one. Lawyers of the Delaware and Montgomery County Bar Associations may use the library, as well as all Villanova undergraduates.

Law Studies Take 3 Years, 86 Credits

The Law School curriculm requires for completion three academic years of two terms each. During the first three terms, all courses are required, while in the remaining three terms, electives may be taken.

In the first year, the student must carry 15 credits each term, among them full year courses in Civil Procedure, Contracts and Torts. There is also a two hour laboratory period in the second term in which the student is introduced to the moot court program and methods of legal analysis.

Commercial Law and Corporations are the basic courses in the second year, although the student also receives instruction in Constitutional Law and Property. A one hour laboratory period each term is designated for legal writing and practical training programs.

The student must take 14 credits in the third year, of which Jurisprudence, Conflict of Laws and Equity are required. Nine elective credits must also be taken each semester to fulfill the prescribed amount of 20 needed for graduation.

Milton I. Hauser, Partner of Garey Gets Degree Sat.

By EDMUND KARRER

Milton I. Hauser, who will receive an honorary degree Saturday, was born on the lower west side of the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

He attended Public School No. 11 and DeWitt High School but remained there only 3 years when he left to take employment with a banking house.

He finished his 4th year of high school at night. In 1929 he resigned his position with the banking house where he was employed in order to pursue the study of law and enrolled in the New York Law School.

He received a degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1924 and graduated "with honors" having been awarded first prize in each of said 3 years for the highest general average of all of the students.

After completing the then required one year of clerkship he was admitted to the Bar of New York in early February 1926.

MILTON I. HAUSER
New York Lawyer

During upwards of 31 years of active practice of the law he has tried many cases not only in the State of New York but also in the courts of many of the states of the United States, including Michigan and Utah.

He is also admitted to practice in many of the District Courts of the United States located in various states as well as in several of the United States Circuit Courts of Appeal.

He is a member of the American Bar Association, the New York State Bar Association and the Nassau County Bar Association.

Sen. John Kennedy, Hero, Author, To Receive Degree

By JOHN M. HONE

John Fitzgerald Kennedy who will be the recipient of an honorary degree Saturday morning is now serving his first term as United States Senator from Massachusetts.

He is the third Democrat to represent Massachusetts in the U.S .Senate. Prior to his election to the Senate, he served six years as a Member of the United States House of Representatives from the Eleventh Massachusetts District.

Senator Kennedy, one of a family of nine children, was born in Brookline. Massachusetts, on May 29, 1917. His father, a native of East Boston, served as Ambassador to Great Britian, as Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and as Chairman of the Maritime Commission.

His mother is the daughter of the former Mayor of Boston, John F. Fitzgerald, who, more than fifty years ago ,represented the same Congressional District as Mr. Kennedy did in the House of Representatives.

Senator Kennedy was married to Jacqueline Lee Bouvier on September 12, 1953.

Kennedy attended public schools in Massachusetts, and was graduated from Harvard in 1940 with honors. He attended the London School of Economics

SENATOR JOHN KENNEDY
Freedom Fighter

in 1935-36 and took graduate courses at Stanford University.

War Record

Eentering the Navy in 1941, Senator Kennedy served as a PT boat Commander in the South Pacific during World War II.

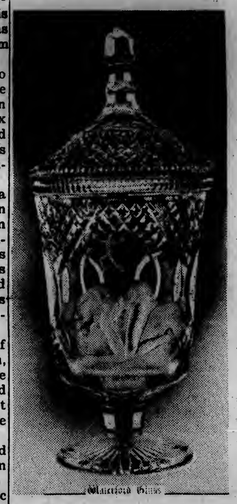
He was decorated twice by the Navy for the serious injuries he suffered when his PT boat was rammed in two while attacking a Japanese destroyer during a night action in the Solomons, and for "his courage, endurance and excellent leadership" in towing injured members of his crew to safety, and bringing them through Japanese lines after nine days.

In March of 1945, he was retired for injuries by the Navy.

In 1940, he wrote Why England Slept, the story of England's unpreparedness for war. His most recent book, Profiles in Courage, is an account of the pressures endured by Senators who spoke out for what they believed to be the national interest in opposition to the heated feelings of their constituents. Both books apeared on the best-seller lists.

Newspaperman

Prior to the war and before his entrance into Congress, Kennedy was a writer and newspaperman. He represented the Chicago Herald-American at the San Francisco Conference and in 1945, he covered the British elections and the Potsdam Conference for International News Service.



In November 1946, Kennedy was elected to Congress.

In 1952 Kennedy received the highest vote ever given to a candidate in either party for the United States Senate in the history of Massachusetts.

At the Democratic National Convention of 1956 in Chicago, Senator Kennedy came within a handful of votes of being the Party's nominee for Vice President of the United States.

The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce selected John F. Kennedy as one of the ten outstanding young men in American in 1946. On January 29, 1950, he received the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Law from the University of Notre Dame.

"TO RONNIE"

Waterford Glass piece will be presented to Ronnie Delany by the Lord Mayor of Dublin Today.

The Trophy is 18" in height. In a large panel on the front there is a hand engraving copied from the picture of Ronnie Delany kneeling in prayer after his victory.

Just overhead in this panel there is a smaller engraving of Ronnie breaking the tape. There are other engravings on the trophy and these are in smaller panels have been cut in the form of the interlocking Olympic rings. In one of the rings is Ronnie's name, over which there appears an engraving of the map of Ireland.

In another, the statement "Winner 1500 meters Olympic Games." The following ring has "Melbourne, 1956" with a small map of Australia overhead. The Olympic Flame or Torch is also featured and the caption under the main panel showing Ronnie praying is "The Flame of Faith."

Law School Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein stands in the doorway of beautiful Garey Hall. The door of Dean Reuschlein's office is open to the students for help and guidance.

Second Symposium Topic Will Be 'Industrial Peace'

BY LEO ROGERS

"Industrial Peace" will be the topic of the second symposium Friday morning Assistant Dean Thomas J. O'Toole will preside.

Godfrey P. Schmidt, attorney and educator; Shelden D. Elliott, member of the National Academy of Arbitrators; Ralph E. Kharas, Dean of Syracuse University College of Law; Reynolds C. Seitz, Dean of Marquette University Law School and Lee W. Milton, Vice-President AFL-CIO, will speak.

Mr. O'Toole said that all speakers are well-versed in the fundamentals of this "Industrial Peace" problem.

Godfrey P. Schmidt is a senior partner in firm Schmidt, Egan and Murray, New York City. A Graduate of New York Bar, he was counsel for Insurance and Banking Departments of New York State 1932-36 and Counsel for New York State Labor Department 1939-1944.

For many years he has been Professor of Constitutional Law at Fordham Law School. Schmidt has served as counsel for the Archdiocese of New York. He is known to a wide audience due to his many television appearances debating issues affecting internal security. He is a Knight of Malta.

Prof. Shelden D. Elliott graduated from Yale Law School 1928 with degree of Juris Doctor.

A member of California bar, he served as counsel to various California public agencies. Since 1952 he has been Director of the Institute of Judicial Administration of New York University Law School and also Professor of law at the same school. He served with 7th Army 1943-46; holds a reserve commission as Colonel and was decorated with Croix de Guerre.

Dean Ralph E. Kharas is a 1927 graduate of the University of Chicago and J.S.D. Yale University 1936. He has taught at Cornell, Syracuse, Colgate and New York University. Kharas is an authority in the field of labor law and member of the New York State Board of Mediation.

and a half years as a Technical Sergeant and later as a Second Lieutenant.

At Pitt, Professor Holahan distinguished himself as Editor-in-Chief of the University of Pittsburgh Law Review.

FRANCIS HOLAHAN

He will be on leave of absence during the next academic year, 1957 -- 1958, having been selected as the first Kent Graduate Fellow at Columbia University Law School on a Ford Foundation grant.

Professor Holahan is married and has a son and twin daughters.

Arthur C. Pulling is the Professor of Law and Law Librarian. Professor Pulling began his career as Assistant Librarian at the Harvard Law School. and served in that capacity from 1907 to 1912.

He was largely responsible for the upbuilding of the Law Library at the University of Minnesota, where he came at the insistence of the then Dean William Reynolds Vance.

During World War I, he served as Librarian of the War Department and organized a Library for the Judge Advocate General's Department.

In 1942 he was called back to Harvard and the next year was made Director of the Library at the Harvard Law School, from which position he retired at the end of August of this year.

He has been generally regarded as the "number one" Law Librarian in the United States.

Significantly, at a luncheon sponsored by the Harvard Law School Association, at the time of the American Bar Association convention in Boston this year, attended by 2,400 members and friends, Mr. Pulling was presented with a beautiful scroll with the following citation: "His professional skill has preserved and expanded the treasury of learning which has been his charge; his ingenuity has made the resources of scholarship accessible to those in search of knowledge; his tact has made the mechanism of a great Library the helpful instrument of education."

Dr. Pulling is married. He and Mrs. Pulling make their home in Bryn Mawr.

Mr. Stephenson to Moderate 'Interracial Peace' Panel

By JOHN D. KENNEDY

The beginning of the end for segregation was signaled by the 1954 decision of the United State Supreme Court. Some naive people hoped and believed that the problem of segregation would disappear with the court order. Such was not the case. Violence, prejudice and emotion rose in revolt against the 'illegal' and 'unconstitutional' decision. A number of zealots found support—so they said—for the institution of segregation in the Bible. The Hebraic tradition of the Old Testament, as well as the Christianity of the New Testament, was dredged up in evidence.

Christian Ethics With Law

It is at this juncture that the function of the Catholic-sponsored law school became obvious. The education of building of budding lawyers and jurists imbued with Christian purpose forms a conscious attempt at betterment of the existing social order. Such improvements in the social order may be manifested legally. Fundamental teachings of Christianity must be reconciled with the existing social order. Application of this maxim to practical reality is beset with many pitfalls.

Gentlemen of the Panel

Assembling here at Villanova will be a group of men experienced in the pitfalls. Peace—interracial peace—is vital to the settlement of domestic strife.

The Hon. Harold A. Stevens, justice of the Supreme Court of New York, as a Negro, is particularly interested in the resolution of "Interracial Peace." Justice Stevens, a graduate of Benedict College and Boston College Law School, was appointed in 1955 to fill a vacancy on the New York Supreme Court. Later, in the same year, he was elected to serve for a full fourteen-year term. A convert to Catholicism, he is holder of the "Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice" medal awarded by Pope Pius XII. Mr. Stevens was an early supporter of the Catholic Interracial Council and is now a member of its board of directors.

Jesuit To Speak

The Rev. William J. Kenealy, S.J., as a Southern educator has faced the racial problem in its native habitat. Father Kenealy is Visiting Professor of Law at the Loyola University School of Law in New Orleans. A member of the bars of the District of Columbia and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Father Kenealy served as Lieutenant Commander, USNR, during the period 1943-46.

Mr. Karl N. Llewellyn, professor of law and author, is the recipient of degrees from Yale, as well as the Universities of Paris and Lausanne. After practicing law in New York City, Mr. Llewellyn taught law at Yale, Columbia, Leipzip, and Harvard. At present, he is teaching at the University of Chicago. A leading figure in the field of Jurisprudence, Mr. Llewellyn was also president of the Association of American Law Schools in 1950.

The Fourth Member, Mr. Nutting

Fourth member of the panel will be Mr. Charles B. Nutting, director of the Buhl Foundation. Formerly vice-chancellor at the University of Pittsburgh, Mr. Nutting is a past president of the Association of American Law Schools. During his term of office desegregation started to take effect in law schools throughout the country.

Presiding over his veritable brains trust—as moderator—will be Professor John G. Stephenson III of the Vilanova University Law School faculty. Mr. Stephenson, who was recently appointed to the faculty, last taught at the University of Miami Law School. A native of Pittsburgh, he is a member of the Pennsylvania Bar.

On the graduate level, Mr. Stephenson holds a master's degree from the University of Pittsburgh and has also studied at Princeton, Harvard and Yale. At the beginning of World War II, he left his private law practice to teach in the Judge Advocate's Office. From the vantage of his Miami post, Mr. Stephenson has had ample opportunity to observe the conflicts of segregation and desegregation.

The New Legal Realism

The symposia of which "Interracial Peace" is the third and last are dedicated to the proposition that law is not apart or above the plane of society. Rather, it is a forging moral force for a more just society; no longer to be regarded as indifferent, law and the teaching of law must be remembered to deal with human beings on a traditionally Christian basis.

Those interested in the subject of "Interracial Peace" are invited to attend the symposium in Garey Hall at 2:30 p.m., Friday. The audience is encouraged to address questions to the members of the panel.

Bulletin boards are ever so important in any institution. Daily notices in Garey Hall afford communication between the administration and the student.

Do we not feel envious of the Future Attorneys who make this beautiful new building the center of their life for over eight hours a day?

Spring LYNX Dedicated To Law School

After some delay the Lynx makes a timely bow with its spring issue this week.

By some good fortune, this issuc is dedicated to expanding Villanova University and the dedication of the latest product of that expansion, the new law school, Garey Hall.

Copies of the magazine are on sale in the Book Store and the Pie Shoppe of Dougherty Hall and will be sold in the various dormitories and at sessions of the Evening division.

Layout for this edition was done under the expert direction of VILLANOVAN associate editor Joe Kinney. Frank Delany LYNX editor-in-chief and John Kennedy assisted him. Many new effects were tried this time with the layout.

Featured are short stories by Ed Karrer, Gerald La Karnafeaux, John Kennedy and Bob Strayton; essays by Richard Madara and David R. MacDermott; art work by Alan Guimaraes, Gerald La Karnafeaux, Margaret Callan and Pete Shelton; and a tape recorded interview with Ron Delany.

Reviews by George Fraunces and poetry by newcomers Tom Martinez, John Snader and James Tague in addition to the efforts of the regular contibutors of the past round out the spring issue.

A staff meeting this week will discuss editorial positions and plans it is expected that the goal of three issues wil be reached with ease next year.

Material is now being collected for the fall issue. The remainder of this year will be spent by the staff in returning unused manuscripts, under the direction of Ed Karrer, and in preparing a photo essay for the fall issue based on Evelyn Waugh characters and utilizing on and off campus models.

Jewish Lord Mayor To Visit Campus, Receive Degree

Parliament. A founder of the Fianna Fail movement, he has consistently represented it to the Parliament and in the city government since it was reconstituted in 1930.

Policy is administered by the manager and the Lord Mayor working jointly.

The whole plan is appropriately named the Dublin Corporation.

First Jewish Mayor

The Lord Mayor is the first man of the Jewish faith to be chosen for this high political post. This stands as a splendid tribute to his own abilities and the freedom of Ireland from religious intolerance.

As he himself has publicly said again and again, "I definitely consider myself the Irish mayor of an Irish city; the fact that I am Jewish is an interesting sidelight and a wonderful comment on the Irish people;"

Saying that a man's success in politics depends upon how good a citizen he is and his feeling for his country, the Lord Mayor added, "The election of a Jewish Mayor of Dublin stands as living proof that a man's religion is not a barrier to him as far as serving his country is concerned."

The Lord Mayor's visit to the United States is under the combined auspices of the United Jewish Appeal and the Irish Societies of America. Although it is not an official Irish state visit, his appearances are being made with the cooperation of the Irish Consul-General's office.

Hopes To Promote Trade

It is the Lord Mayor's earnest hope that his visit to the United States will result in Irish tourism and the promotion of Irish export trade to these shores.

After receiving his degree here Briscoe will have lunch at the home of City Representative Frederick R. Mann, general chairman for the Lord Mayor's visit. This will be a private luncheon since today is the last day of Passover and Briscoe may not eat conventional food until sundown.

Later this afternoon Briscoe will address a meeting of the City Council of Philadelphia, after which a parade is tenatively scheduled to Independence Hall.

This evening he will be guest of honor at a cocktail party and dinner in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

The third symposium, Interracial Peace will have Professor John G. Stephenson, III, presiding. Judge Harold A. Stevens, Justice. The Supreme Court of New York; and The Reverend William J. Kenealy, S.J. Visiting Professor of Law, Loyola University; will speak.

Law School Banquet

Friday night will see the guests, faculty, friends and students of the Law School at the Warwick Hotel in Philadelphia. The occassion will be the Fourth Annual Law School Banquet.

The Convocation in the Field House on Saturday will see the awarding of Honorary Degrees of Doctor of Laws to Earl Warren, Charles Alvin Jones, John F. Kennedy and Milton I. Houser.

The laying of the cornerstone and a special luncheon on Saturday afternoon will mark the end of the Villanova University Law School Dedication Week.

Garey Family Gifts Helped Form School

By ROBERT A. BAUER

Due to the generosity of Mr. Eugene Garey, Villanova University has been able to build, perhaps, the most modern and well equipped law school facilities found anywhere in the country.

This new building will set the precedent for all future colleges and universities which inaugurate new law schools.

Mr. Garey, well known corporation lawyer in New York, was born in Chicago, Illinois. After receiving his law school education in Chicago, he started a firm in New York, that of Garey and Garey.

Famous Corporations

Garey, with his brother, handled many of the trusts of large organizations, the most famous being the Remington Rand Corporation.

He became familiar with the university through the friendship of one of the past presidents of this school, Very Rev. Francis X. McGuire. Through this relationship, Villanova University acquired the largest single benefactor of the school.

Honorary Degree

Receiving his Honorary Degree of law at the commencement of 1947, he gave an address at this gathering. Since that time, he has been very much interested in the development of the law school. Working together with the staff here at Villanova, he aided in gathering material for the school.

But he did not see the completion of his work, for he died shortly before the building was finished. Even at his death he was thinking of Villanova, for he left virtually his entire estate to the university.

Long Remembered

The memory of this man will long be remembered by Villanova, for the name Garey Hall signifies the finest and most modern structure of its kind.

Church-State Institute To Explore Religious Issue

More than a year ago the Law School announced the establishment of the Institute of Church and State. The formal statement issued at that time declared: "It is noted that rancor rather than reason has characterized many discussions of church-state relationships in the past.

"This has been in part due to the lack in our nation of a genuine forum where sincere and knowledgeable men may exchange their honest views in an atmosphere of objectivity.

"The Institute believes that it can render a distinct service to our country by providing a center to which information and opinion may be brought and weighed by persons who, regardless of religious affiliation, sincerely desire to hear other men's ideas in this area and to achieve reasonable solutions of the problems considered."

Scholarly Investigation

This is the credo of the Institute. The Institute provides a forum; it does not sponsor a point of view. It seeks to encourage the scholarly investigation of a certain complex of legal problems, which appear to us to affect the two institutions which, with the family, are the most important institutions in our society—governments and churches.

Matters which fall outside the somewhat narrow ken of the law are not within the scope of the Institute's concern. Many fascinating and tremendously signficant questions of political philosophy, and indeed of general philosophy, relating to church and state must therefore escape its attention.

One cannot deny the importance of these questions, nor the impact which they would have on the legal plan.

Starting Points

Since the view of the Institute is transfixed by the law, certain presuppositions are necessary starting points. The presuppositions include the American constitutional system, the presence of the United States constitution and the various state constitutions and the existence of an almost bewildering variety of groups which could qualify under our civil law to be recognized as churches.

The presuppositions also, however, include a recognition of the elasticity and viability of our legal institutions, even at the constitutional level.

First Conference

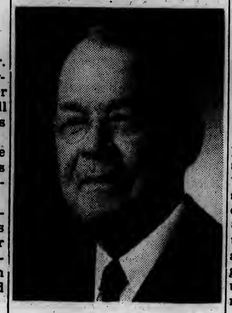
Last February the first conference of the Institute was held at the Law School. The religion in adoption cases were the topics for discussion in the two-day meeting. Principal speakers were Professor Mark deWolfe Howe of Harvard Law School and Reverend Joseph J. Snee, S.J., of Georgetown Law Center. The proceedings at this Conference will be published in June.

Meanwhile a research project has been conducted under the auspices of the Institute. Mrs. Grace C. Kennedy, Research Associate, has been collecting material for a monographe the law of tenture of church property in Pennsylvania. It is expected that this will be published when computed.

Judge Reimel

With the generous help of Judge Theodore L. Reimel, a trustee of the University, a library of church-state materials will be assembled and housed in Garey Hall. This will assist in making Villanova Law School an important center for the study of these crucial problems.

Charles Jones Outstanding Chief Justice



By JOSEPH WHEELER

The career of Charles Alvin Jones, who is to receive an honorary degree Saturday is typical of the best professional and public services that a lawyer can render.

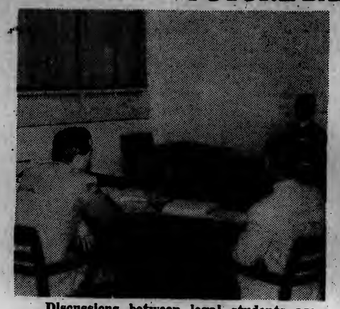
Justice Jones was born at Newport in the Juniata valley on August 27, 1887, Jones attended the public schools there, graduated from Mercersburg Academy, studied at Wiliams Colege, and graduated from the Dickinson School of Law in 1910.

Jones inclined always to the liberal side. He was not, however, actively engaged in public affairs, but was assiduous in the practice of his professions, in which he gained a high reputation as an advocate.

In 1935, when the Democratic Party, of which he had long been a member, was in power at Harrisburg, he was apointed to his first public office, becoming Special Counsel for the Public Service Commission.

CHARLES A. JONES
Pa. Chief Justice

He was nominated for Governor in 1938 but was defeated.



That year a vacancy occured in the bench of the Circut Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit on the retirement of Judge Buffington. It seemed appropriate that a Western Pennsylvanian should be appointed, and the Judiciary Committee, notified Mr. Jones that they were unanimously in favor of his appointment.

The Allegheny County Bar Association and most of the members of the Pennsylvania Bar Association signed a petition to the President urging his appointment. Jones was appointed.

For five years Judge Jones served on the Federal Bench. In 1944, to realize an ambition he had long entertained, he announced his candidacy for a seat on the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and was triumphantly elected.

Chief Justice Jones is utterly devoid of the slightest trace of self-exaltation, pretension, pompousness, hauteur or affectation. He is, and acts as [illegible] burgh newspaper [illegible] him, "Just like [illegible]

FUTURE BARRISTERS RELAX AND STUDY IN NEW BUILDING

Discussions between legal students are helpful in uncovering individual problems that may arise during classroom lectures.

Students are pictured taking notes in one of the spacious, well-lighted classrooms. At present there are 154 students in the school.

The life of a law student is indeed not all work and no play. Here they get together for a friendly discussion.

Progress of Law School Is History of Long Hard Work

By JOSEPH A. KINNEY, JR.

The Augustinian Fathers have been at their noble work in the New World since 1533.

Their first establishment within the present limits of the United States was made at Philadelphia in 1796 with the foundation of Old Saint Augustine's Church. From this venerable old church and from Saint Augustine's Academy, opened there in 1811, Villanova University traces its lineage.

In 1841, "Belle Air," the country estate of John Rudolph, Revolutionary officer and merchant, was acquired and in 1843, the college opened and was placed under the patronage of Saint Thomas of Villanova, a distinguished Augustinian writer and educator and the Archbishop of Valencia in sixteenth century Spain.

And here in one of the mellowest countrysides in America is the university today, with its Gothic towers, its grey-stone and its lovely verdure, spread upon the gentle hills along Lancaster Pike.

Big Year—1953

In 1953, Villanova College became Villanova University. That action was accompanied by the decision to expand offerings on the graduate level. In September, 1953, the School of Law opened.

It was primarily the need for a Catholic law school in the Philadelphia area which prompted the establishment of the school—the need for a place dedicated to the synthesis of Christian wisdom and painstaking legal scholarship.

The establishment of the School of Law represented much careful and painstaking planning by the then Prior-Provincial of the Augustinian Fathers, the Very Reverend Joseph M. Dougherty, O.S.A., and the then president of the university, the Reverend Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., who had the benefit of the advice, counsel and tangible encouragement of an eminent group of judges and lawyers in the Philadelphia area.

Board Of Consultors

This group of judges and practitioners, with certain additions, now constitute the Board of Consultors to the School of Law, an advisory group. They continue to be a source of strength to Villanova's President, the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., and to the Dean and the faculty.

Their chairman currently is Judge Vincent A. Carroll of Philadelphia.

The school was opened in attractive quarters in the beautiful general library building and these quarters were its home for three and a half years. The original entering class numbered seventy students. The current academic year, 1956-57, began with one hundred and thirty-four students enrolled in the School of Law.

Full Approval

Provisional approval by the American Bar Association was given to the school in March, 1954, and full approval was given in February, 1957.

Volume I, Number I of the Villanova Law Review made its apearance in January, 1956. The school boasts an excellent and most active Student Bar Association and a fine system of Law Clubs enrolling the entire student body.

The students participate in an ambitious program of Moot Court including the National Moot Court Competition in New York. Each year that the school has participated it has represented its region in New York.

The first class was graduated from the School of Law in June, 1956, and already the young school may point to pride to the achievements of its young alumni.

Magnificient Library

The crowning glory of the School of Law is perhaps its magnificient library. In three and a half brief years Dr. Pulling has built an enviable collection of over 60,000 volumes.

The faculty originally numbered six men, who dedicated their full time to the work of the school. The original members of the faculty included Arthur C. Pulling, John G. Stephenson, III, John T. Macartney, Thomas J. O'Toole, Francis E. Holahan and Harold Gill Reuschlein as Dean. Happily, every one of them is on the present faculty.

The faculty from the outset represented a deliberate diversification in types and places of training and in pre-teaching experiences.

Additional Faculty

Since these initial appointments were made, Professors Donald M. Collins and William B. Ball have been appointed as full-time members of the faculty.

Lecturers (part-time) in particular specialties include the Reverend Robert E. Regan, O.S.A., Peter P. Liebert, III, Michael vonMoschzisker and Charles S. Vogan.

Life of A Law Student

BY LEO K. O'DRUDY

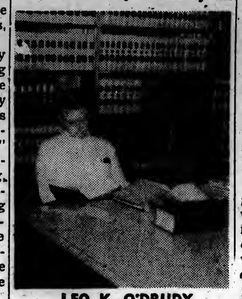
One of the tales in the rapidly growing oral tradition of Villanova law students concerns a hardworking but emotionally unstable young man who put in several weeks of ardous labor in preparation for his moot court argument.

His prodigious efforts, however, seemed only to increase his apprehensions, and an hour or two before his scheduled appearance, he nervously mumbled something to some friends about going to Bryn Mawr for a quick shot to calm himself.

He was never seen nor heard from again.

Legends and Myths

Such stories are surprisingly numerous among the student body of a school scarcely four years old, and although many have already assumed the hazy aspects of legend, the great majority are still (because of the recency of the occurrences) interestingly replete with the names of the participants, times, and places.



Compared with the already formidable folklore surrounding each faculty member, his course and idiosyncracies, the healthily burgeoning collection of stories constantly emanating from counselors about their "counselees" (In the parlance of the law student, Webster notwithstanding, any noun ending in "or" is necessarily complemented by ending in "ee"), and legal lore in general, those tales, which, as the one above, touch upon the ordinary daily experiences of the law student seem by far the most numerous and long-lived.

Pathos intermingled with an almost sadistic humor permeates each.

Busy Third Year

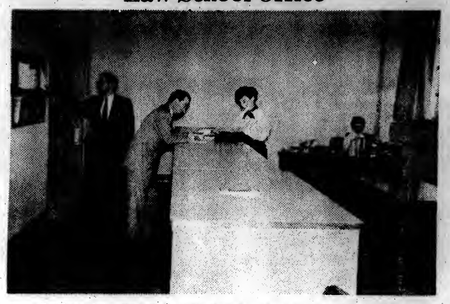
It is from the experiences of the first and second years of law school that the great bulk of these stories come (apparently, men who reach the third year either have been rendered impervious to the happenings around them or are too few in number to constitute an effective story-telling body: both views are current and credible).

For the first two years of law school are indeed fairly fraught with tragicomedy: there is that sickening first encounter with the ever popular "numbers game" (usually introduced by an upperclassman reciting with relish that "every June is a baby Hiroshima: one half of your class should drop out in the first year, one third in the second year, and five or six in the third year"); the unbelievable discovery that the highest man in the class is a cool ten or twelve points about flunking out; the feeling that work is being poured on like sand through a mammoth funnel while you dig away with a child's sand shovel; the reading and re-reading fifteen or twenty times of sentences in cases like: "Michaelmas term: Petitioner at Nisi Prius answered Respondent's writ with a plea in abatement of nul tiel corporation, to which Respondent replied with a general demurrer," or "Plaintiff in error, seized per my et per tout, sued out a writ of waste, whereas Defendant in error specifically traversed and placed himself on the country;" the reading of constitutional law cases so long that when the end is reached the beginning has been forgotten; the pride felt in what seems to be an encouragingly high law school admission test mark rudely dashed by the discovery during the last four weeks of the year that one really needs only four hours sleep a night.

LEO K. O'DRUDY
Law Student

(In the first year the student finds himself confronted with a myraid questions he dares ask no one for fear of ridicule: why the names heading the cases often seem to have the slightest resemblance to the names of the parties; whether a lower, court judge feels bad he gets reversed; whether there is a more efficient way of studying law than by the casebook method; whether the law schools in the South and Southwest refer to their states as the "better jurisdiction;" why an appellate court's referring to the "learned judge" in the lower court five or six times during a decision seems invariably to precede that judge's being reversed for an error of law.)

While it is true that the demands made upon the graduate student in quantity and quality of work are much greater than those made a few short years before, when he was in college and many changes are made in study and play habits, it would be distortion to suggest that the life of a law student is all work and watching butter paddies.



Personal interests and pursuits, though curtailed, are just that much more appreciated.

The rewards are often intangible, but real: the opening up of what can best be described as a new world of knowledge, broad enough to encompass a wide variation in intellectual interests; the gradual development of professional skill through day by day classroom encounter ("speak like a lawyer" and "think like a lawyer" are oft repeated exhortations), intensive training in the use and application of the tools of legal research (through the moot court, legal writing, and law review programs), and the opportunity to vicariously share the experiences of well-trained and leading advocates through the Law School Forum.

Day by day contact with other law students, law teachers, and practicing lawyers all of whom are interested and devoted to their chosen work, develops and gives rise to a spirit engendering pride of school and, most important of all, pride of profession.

Perhaps the classic statement of the Marine drill instructor that "I give them every opportunity to crackup" may well be applicable to law school, but almost any law student at Villanova would admit he thinks the running of the gantlet is worth the prize at the end.

A Roadside View of New Building

Garey Hall, the new Law School building stands on a hill overlooking the campus. The imposing structure was opened to students in September, 1956.

Relaxing by Reading

Mr. Arthur C. Pulling, the Chief Librarian at the Law School is found in one of his rare moments at ease from his busy day. As a law librarian, he is constantly aware that a magazine and an easy chair provide a shelter from the difficult reading of most law textbooks. But, alas, in afew minutes he will be called to help find an obscure passage in some volume.

This Is Only The Beginning For Garey Hall

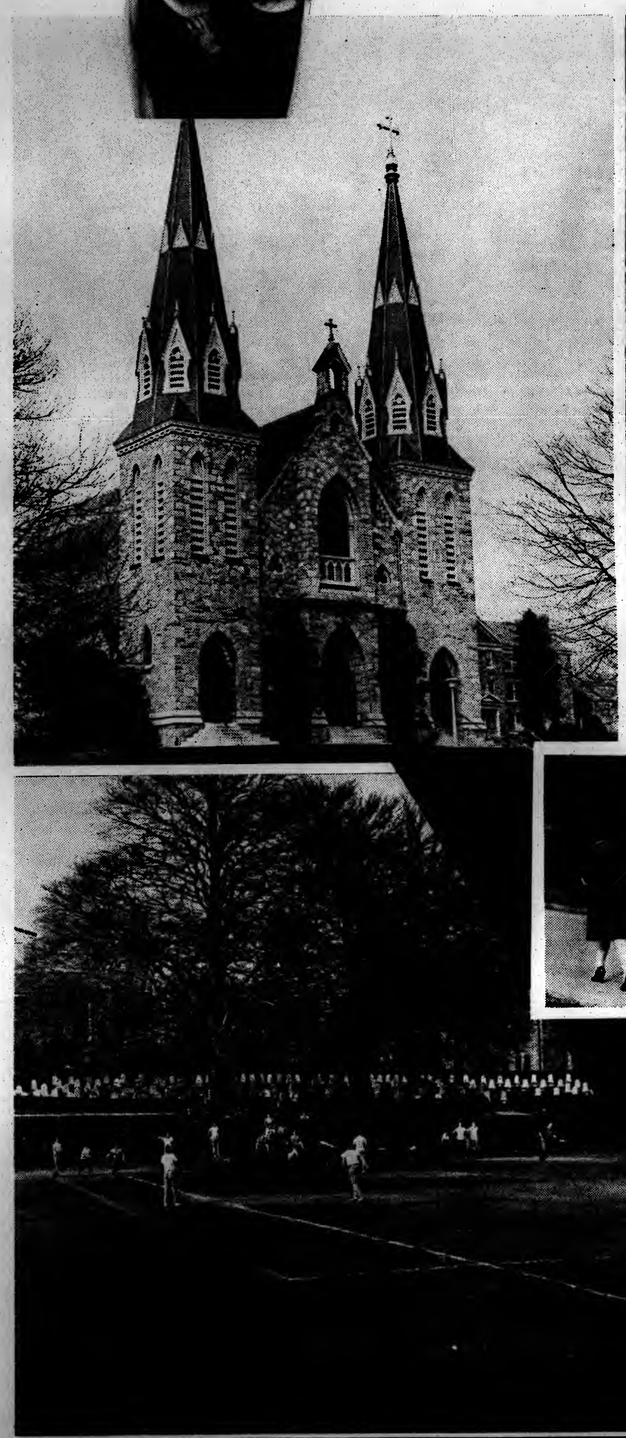
Beautiful Garey Hall is the center of activity for three years for the Law student. Dean Harold Reuschlein calls the building "the most modern law school building in the country."

Situated on the southwest corner of Montgomery and Spring Mill roads ,it stands above the other building of the campus. For many years Garey Hall will be looked upon as the center of interest on the campus and rightly so.

The Dean Relaxes

Dean Reuschlein, a firm believer in the adage. "Books fuller develope a person's character," is pictured here indulging in a pastime that many men also have indulged in to reach the pinnacle of their lives. As the Dean of the Law School he is beset with many difficulties. The dean takes a few precious moments here to review one of the many law volumes in the library.

Cheerful Library Aide



Miss Jane L. Hammond, the Assistant Librarian is in the midst of some gruelling work, but nevertheless she finds the cataloging room to be an interesting room.

Mom's Always There

An infant boy leaves his mother's arms for the first time, and with his tiny hand buried in hers, he takes his initial step on a long journey.

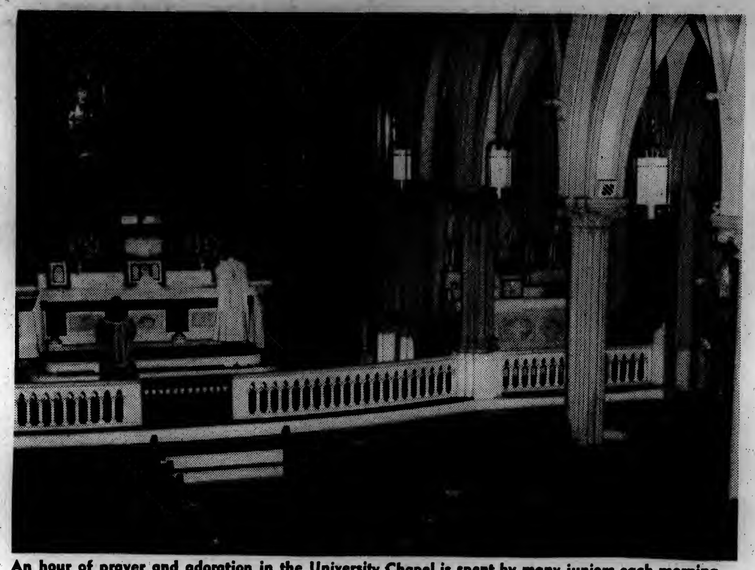
Though he has not the power in words to convey what he feels, something is present in his upward glance which seems to call out "I'm not afraid, Mother You'll help me."

Hand in hand they travel, and the little boy grows taller, stronger and wiser. "Where are we going, Mother?" he asks one day, and his guide stops and looks far ahead.

"We're on our way to visit another little boy and his mother," she smiles. Accepting his mother's answer, he clutches her hand more tightly and both continue up the path.

As the distance behind them grows longer, the end of the path becomes visible to the boy, and though in spirit he is always with his mother, the time comes when he must leave her for a brief period and walk on alone.

A strange feeling comes over the youth in those first few moments away from his lifetime guide, but he realizes now who his friends at the end of the journey are, and he knows they will help him as his mother has done. He realizes to hide his longing, for he soon meets hundreds of things which are necessary for a knowledge of the road ahead . . . things which he can comprehend only through the teachings of others.



He is happy to meet his new guides, some who are priests and some who are laymen, and he discovers quickly that they too are attempting to lead him to Mary and her Son. Though he always misses his mother's company, he is able to hide his longing, for he soon meet hundreds of other young men whose experiences have been the same as his, and whose aim it is to reach the end of the path which they and their mothers have similarly been traveling.

With these same young men, he studies, works and plays and his knowledge of the path and of those who are journeying along it with him increases with each passing day. He informs his mother frequently of his achievements and of his companions, whose number is growing rapidly.

From time to time, he returns to his mother, but rarely for any lengthy period. Yet with the few steps they take together up the road at these times, the mother finds that her hand now is in his and when speaking to him she must give the upward glance.

The youth returns again to his teachers, classmates and beautiful campus surrondings . . . the people and things which he has longed for his mother to meet since his first acquaintance with them. In what has seemd a matter of months, three years pass and the boy realizes his desire.

His friends and teachers beside him, a young man journeys another day along the path with his mother.

An hour of prayer and adoration in the University Chapel is spent by many juniors each morning at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.

President's Message

Dear Junior,

Amid the excitement and tension entailed with the beginning of Junior Week I would like to take a moment to express a few of my personal thoughts to you.

From the time of our orientation as freshmen we have regarded Junior Week as the highlight and climax of our social life at Villanova. Since that time we have watched two previous Junior Weeks pass and have waited eagerly for our "big week."

Now it is upon us and the success of this week is due to the tremendous effort and cooperation exhibited by you. Certainly each of you that has helped in moulding this week can be justifiably proud in knowing that it is a job well done.

Long after Mother's Day, the Prom, Dinner Dance and all the other activities are past, pleasant memories will remain of these wonderful days.

Our class has distinguished itself in many ways since entering Villanova and we have much for which to be grateful.

I have been proud to serve as your president this year and have felt it a real privilege. The cooperation that you have shown reveals your earnest desire for a most successful Junior Week and I thank the class and Father Berra for this assistance.

Perhaps, the simplest way of expressing my feeling is to say that I wish you all the happiest Junior Week possible and a most successful future.

Sincerely,
Robert E. Mulcahy

Appreciation

The Editor wishes to thank all the members of the staff who have contributed to this issue, especially juniors Joe Kinney, Ed Karrer, Frank Delany, John Kennedy, Joe Wheeler, John Fixl, Leo Rogers, Joe Kulik, Mike Mancuso, Clem Birch, Tom Martinez, Mike Rafferty, Ken Miller, Jack Garrity, and senior Bob Strayton and sophomore Jack Curtin.

Special recognition is also extended to photographers Al Stoughton and Al Lawler.

THE COVER

He is a junior in college now, and since the day he took his first step up the path of life, his mother was beside him to show him the way. Today, with the Villanova University campus as his background, he and his ever-present guide continue their journey, with God and His mother as their goal.

A Worthwhile Pause Among Social Events

We are now entering a week which everyone would readily admit is the high point of social achievment here at Villanova and as the varied affairs of the week unroll both our spirits and pocketbooks, we will most naturally be cobparing each event with a similar one as being either "all right" or "great."

Even though every day of the week has been scheduled for some sort of function, haven't we perhaps overlooked one major event that will not come specifically during Junior Week and probably not specifically during any of the next three or four weeks—the scholastic, the spiritual, and the traditional achievements. They can be looked at as individual parts of one central aim, that of molding a better Christian citizen in the world.

Although our spiritual accomplishment has been that of advance and not achievement we still are forced to answer a question which we will ultimately ask ourselves. Has our moral background and training reached the heights comparable to those of our social life?

Since this particular notion was the director which placed us here at Villanova, the reply from the individual himself should be obvious. Most times, unfortunately, the question is never asked, so the answer is not forthcoming. We have two semesters remaining before the majority of us will have to lead that moral life for the first time away from the guides of the Father's books and influence of friends.

Scholastically, we have in a like manner stepped far beyond the introductory courses and freshman attitudes. No matter what the particular school or division we have studied in, we all have but one more semester "to make or break" what is lying very closely ahead. It is rather startling when after we have been going at a good pace for three years we suddenly wake up to the fact that our future life is but a year away.

If in the three years we haven't come closer to our primary goal, then the job is made more difficult and its resolution becomes not a matter of desire but of inevitability.

Finally, we are entering a separate chapter titled "Class of 1958" in the Villanova story and at this point, three year old section has been filled with tradition both old and hoped for. The credit for this, each jnior must take to himself for a job well done and a new one begun.

Junior Week, then, is not only a time for foresight through rose-tinted spectacles but also a time of recollection and evaluation, of measure for the future and of resolution for the better. For in this way we stand as the Class of 1958, unified and successful.

Today's Your Big Day, Mom - Enjoy Yourself!

By JOE KINNEY
Associate Editor

Welcome to Villanova, mothers! Today is your day and a full program from 11 o'clock Mass to a specially prepared banquet is planned just for you and your sons and daughters.

Although the NFCCS Variety Show which was well attended by early arriving mothers last night might be considered the actual opening of Junior Week, today's event constitutes the official beginning of this memorable and traditional period.

Since the inauguration of Mother's Day 23 years ago, the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass has been the initial item on the agenda and this year is no exception. The Rev. Dominic Berra, O.S.A., Moderator of the Class of 1958, will celebrate Mass at St. Mary's Shrine at 11 a.m.

In case of inclement weather, the Holy Sacrifice will be offered in the University Chapel.

At 12:15 p.m. the class tree will be dedicated by Class President Bob Mulcahy and his mother in front of the Cemical Engineering Building.

Mother's Day Co-Chairmen Pat Nicholson and Mike Rafferty, along with their mothers, will plant the tree.

Immediately after the tree planting, following a long walk across campus, luncheon will be served in the resident cafeteria in Dougherty Hall.

Whether you're an avid baseball fan or a consistent show-goer, the Mother's Day Committee will adequately please you, Mothers.

St. Joseph's College of Philadelphia is sending its diamond team to the Main Line for a 2:30 contest with the Villanova nine, A variety show, featuring some of the Villanova students who participated in last night's NFCCS show as well as a scene from Turf and Tinsel Society's forthcoming original all-male musical comedy, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga", will take place at the same time.

The baseball game will be played on the diamond behind the stadium and the variety show will be performed in the Field House.

The popular Main Line instrumental combination, "The Villanovans", under the direction of Bobby Schiller, will provide the music for the show.

Schiller is a senior Accounting major at Villanova and wrote the music and lyrics for "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga" which will be presented in the Field House on May 8, 9, 10 and 11.

The winners from over 400 "Diaper Dan" entries will be picked at 4 p.m. in Dougherty Hall. The mothers of the competing juniors submitted photographs of their sons and daughters taken when only a few years, months or even weeks old.

The outdoor altar will be revisited at 5 o'clock for Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament to be offered by Father Berra preceding the day's closing event—a banquet —to be held in the Field House.

After the meal, which begins at 6 p.m., all the mothers will be presented with a nine-inch plate which bears a painting of Villanova Chapel on its face and a poem on the back, dedicated to the honored mothers.

To The Mothers - Class of 1958

We extend a hearty and loving welcome to the festivities of Junior Week. It is fitting that we should have you with us at this particular period of our college career, because, after this week, things will never be quite the same for any of us. Henceforth we shall be known as seniors, a term in and of itself conferring a certain dignity, and carrying with it the ever-present reminder that our college days are numbered, and that all too soon we shall be actively striving for the place in the world for which we hope we are best fitted.

This formal transition from boyhood to manhood cannot occur without the forceful realization of the fact that from our first experience with the world of education, gleaned from the first readers and arithmetic copy books, you were always behind us with loving words of help and encouragement; even as now, although we have attained some technical knowledge and skills beyond your ken, we still look to you for advice and good counsel, and we always will.

True education began with you; for true education is the development of character, and that was begun by you many years ago. That work you are still doing, and even though we become seniors and college graduates, we shall continue to be your loving children, who will look to you for guidance so long as you shall be spared to us.

Welcome to Villanova's Junior Week, and God bless you.

Jed Dioguardi and Tom Brennan
Chairmen of Junior Week

Mother's Day Co-Chairman Mike Rafferty and his mother will enjoy themselves during today's activities as will some 500 other members of the Class of '58 and their life-time sweethearts. Mother's Day is the juniors' way of showing their appreciation for the one to whom they owe the most.

NFCCS Opens Junior Week With Intercollegiate Vaudeville Hit

By KEN MILLER

The NFCCS Variety Show, the semi-official opener of Junior Week, provided a wonderful evening's entertainment for the early arriving mothers.

The production represented about seven months of auditioning and polishing, and the result was a feather in the cap of the directors and acts alike.

The show opened at 8 with the first number, the Immaculata College chorus line high-stepping to the tune of "Get Happy." Those pretty precision lasses included Pat Hines '58, Dolores Lapetina '57, Ellen Brennan '58, Alberta Donland '60, Nicky Irvin '60 and Maryann Rottino '58.

The gals came back again to initiate the second half of the show. This time the femmes pirouetted about in black face to "Mandy."

The man doing the introductions was V.U.'s own Ed Shea. His experience as MC is long lived. NFCCS has been in his book for the past two years.

Another VU contributor was Don Mattingly. Don has lent his vocal talent to the show for the past three years. Featured on the ticket yesterday by him was "Lonesome Road" and "Love in a Home."

Under the guiding hand of Dot Niles, a Rosemont junior and two year veteran of NFCCS, the Rosies' T-Tones sang "Sit Down Servant" and "Songs Were Made to Sing While We're Young."

Chestnut Hill's contribution from the Frosh class, Sue Linton and Thea Grinn, consisted in a boy-girl novelty tap rountine to "Tea for Two."

Jack Nettleton, another VU senior, filled the comedy spot with humor to spare. This was Jack's second year with the show.

The Hill's other entertainer was Joan McDermott, a junior. For a time she had her own radio program and brought with her the professional touch in the rendition of "April in Paris" and "If I loved you."

The Murphy Sisters, Phil ('58) and Willa ('57) from IC, sang with their usual quality of the "Banana Boat Song" and "Candy and Cake."

Cissy di Marino, a Rosemont junior, sang "I Could Have Danced All Night" and "Love Is Where You Find It," accompanied by her sister.

The Continentals, an octet composed of four juniors and four seniors from St. Joseph's under the direction of Steve Giovanisci, offered two numbers: the "Mosquito Song" and "Young and Foolish."

Betsy Hepburn from Immaculta College, Class of '59, gave us "Summertime" and "Almost Like Being In Love."

"On the Street Where You Live" and "I'm Gonna Live Till I Die" were the vocal solos by Villanova's Charlie Brockman.

The Villanovans, whose fame has spread throughout the Philadelphia vicinity and even beyond, were responsible for the back-up music for the entire show.

The combo's leader is Bob Schiller on trumpet, and includes Pat Briody, trombone; Mike Guida, clarinet; Jack Gillfilan (Class of '56), drums; Jim McCarthy, piano; and Jack Emory, banjo.

Three years ago Villanova was appointed by the Regional Directors of NFCCS to take charge of the Variety Show.

VU since that time has received the same responsibility each succeeding year. The '57 production was under the able direction of Bernie Conway, a senior pre-Law major, and Mike Guido, a senior Marketing major.

Bob Schiller was the Musical Director and Carol Chapla, an IC junior, was the director of choreography.

The Business staff included Pat Briody — Ticket chairman, Ernest Martin — Financial director, John Fusaro — Specialty chairman, and Frank Fleming (VU junior delegate to NFCCS)—Publicity. John Loller holds Villanova's senior delegate's chair.

How Can Anyone Think of Grades With All This Added Excitement?

By ED KARRER
News Editor

With spring fever, Junior Week, extra-curricular activities and that all-important social aspect of college life, it's a wonder that any junior can keep up in his academic endeavors, and yet many of them do.

Anthony Silvestri, Jack Solarski and John Capelli all proved this point last semester when they took home a perfect 4.0 average.

Silvestri, a Chemistry major with a three year cumulative average of 3.94, resides in Glassboro, N.J. He is an off-campus resident and a member of the Villanova Chemical Society. Last semester was the second time that Tony gained the perfect mark.

Solarski is a Physics major who rooms in Fedigan Hall while at Villanova, and whose home is in Rockville Centre, Long Island. Jack, who has a cumulative mark of better than 3.8, is a member of the Physics Club, Astronomy Club and Sanctuary Society.

Capelli is a Biology major who plans to enter into the medical profession. Aside from his activities in the Sanctuary Society, the Mendel Bulletin and Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity, John has managed to accumulate a 3.73 average over the past three years.

An active junior from the Commerce and Finance Division is Bill Lesko, veteran Army sergeant. In addition to his office of chairman in the ICG, Bill is a member of the Finance Society, Opera Classica, IRS and Delta Pi Epsilon. As a finance major, he has maintained better than a 3.20 mark.

Paul Muller is another C & F junior to whom the Dean's List is not unfamiliar. He is an IA major who hails from Belleville, N.J. Along with his job in the cafeteria, Paul is a member of the Villanova Singers and T 'n' T.

Donald Koestler is a juniorChemical Engineer who has maintained a 3.73 mark in his subjects over his three years at Villanova. He is an off-campus resident who lives in Rosemont during the school year, but whose hometown is Mechanicsburg, Pa. Don is a member of the Villanova Singers and serves as treasurer in the ASCHE.

Veteran and Education major Dick Dressler, who resides in Germantown, Pa., is president of the Student Education Association. Dick is also one of the founders of this Villanova organization and his speciality in the teaching field is science. Dick, who has kept a 3.5 average, is a member of Belle Masque and the Villanova Singers.

An Electrical Engineer who has successfully kept up a 3.39 mark is Guy Barnocky, resident of Trenton, N.J. Guy is a member of Phi Kappa Pi, AIEE, Sanctuary Society, Spirit Committee and the Mother's Day Committee.

Jerry Ratchford, Mechanical Engineer from Scranton, Pa., sent a 3.1 mark last semester. In addition to his position as assistant editor on the Villanova Engineer, Jerry is treasurer of the ASME, council member of Phi Kappa Pi, member of the WVIL staff and the Sanctuary Society.

From Allentown, Pa. and with a 3.7 cumulative average, comes Physics Major, Ralph Udicious.

Don't Forget Junior Class Coeds, This Is A Big Week For Them, Too

By JOHN KENNEDY
Feature Editor

Foremost among the attractions of Junior Week—although not on the official schedule—is the presence of pretty, specially-imported-from-home dates. Rosemont, Immaculata, Chestnut Hill, Marymount, Holy Family, New Rochelle and other of the innumerable female seminaries will be well represented.

Other institutions of higher learning sending members to Junior Week include New York University, LaSalle and The U.S. Naval Academy. These are escorts for Villanova juniors, members of the University's most notable minority: the School of Nursing. Of the twenty coeds making the round of festivities, eighteen are nursing students. The remaining two girls—Joan Beechwood and Helen Katona—are majors in the Education division. Their faces are more familiar to their classmates than those of the junior nurses, for the latter appear on campus only one day a week — Thursday.

On Thursday, the girls attend religion, medical ethics and social case work classes. On other days of the week, they are to be found at various assigned hospitals in the Philadelphia area. For pediatric study, the female Villanovans journey to Children's Hospital, there to be put through a strenuous routine common to their outside hospital work. A typical day, we are informed begins at the excruciatingly early hour of 5:30 a.m. After a full day of classes, as well as practical work, our harrassed heroines creep to bed (on location) at 10:00 p.m.

The intricacies of obstetrics are revealed to the neophytes during their stay at St. Agnes Hospital. Once more, the day is arduous, beginning early and ending late.

For the procedures so dear to the heart of Dr. Kildare, the girls set up shop at St. Mary's Hospital. The learning of medical-surgical procedure again entails a laborious schedule. Just how restrictive all this is may be realized with the fact that the Villanovans are constrained to work on Sunday evenings.

Despite all of the above, the junior nurses have, in their three years at Villanova managed to participate in a surprising number of activities. Belle Masque, the Belle Air yearbook, radio station WVIL have had (or have) their complement of female members. Even such a stronghold of masculinity as the Turf and Tinsel Club, of musical-comedy fame, have had a few feminine members on the technical side.

On state occasions, our junior coeds have arrived on campus in full regalia and glory of the Villanova nurses' uniform. Atop their tresses is borne the special Villanova cap, with its prominent blue 'V' against the usual white. The uniform itself is pale blue and white. The white is enclosed within the bounds of a blue 'V' design extending, in the front, to the waist. White hospital stockings an white, low-heeled oxfords complete the nurse's wardrobe from head to toe. Adding quite a bit of dash is the dark blue cape, with its high, Chinese-style collar. Heightening the over-all military effect are the two sets of golden letters 'VU' on each collar.

Juniors Looking Back Note Progress Of Villanova

By JOE WHEELER and JOE KULICK

Progress is the keynote of Villanova University. It has grown academically as well as physically in the past three years. New buildings, departments and an enlarged faculty have been but a part of this growth.

The Class of 1958 has attempted to keep pace with the remarkable advances of the University and we feel that these efforts have been realized.

As we look back upon these three years, our impressions are kaleidescopic in nature. One image after another flashes before us in blinding succession.

Our first impression of Villanova University was long lines, blue dinks, rolled up trousers, and the "white hats." We weren't too successful on Muff Day of '54, but our pride was restored in '55 when, with a late surge in the egg toss and the football game, victory was ours.

Speaking of victories and football, things weren't too good in those days when we won two and lost 18. The Spirit Committee blasted the lack of school spirit in '55, so things were taken in hand by the Class of '58. When the football team came on the field, they knew Villanova was behind them, and as a result, the team gave us our first winning season of five wins and four losses.

At matriculation, there were 898 of us and after the first grades were released, some of our group left these hallowed halls, 107 of the remaining little men on campus placed on the Dean's List.

When we cast our first ballots as frosh, we chose Leo Rudegeair and Gene Fogarty as our Student Council representatives.

In May, 63% of the class voted. Our first major officers were: Paul Laughlin-President, Tom Brennan-Vice President, John Fixl-Secretary, and Terry Hayes-Treasurer. The representatives for Student Council were Dick Hamburger and Norm Peer.

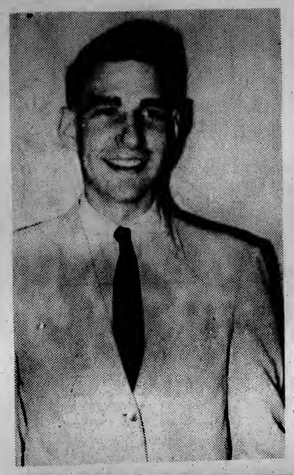
Living conditions were rather cramped about campus until the September of our sophomore year when Sullivan Hall opened with a 400 student capacity, replacing the infamous barracks.

While on the subject of buildings, there was the construction of the Student Union Building which was to be the salvation of the day hop. No sooner was the pick and shovel disgarded, than it was picked up again elsewhere. This time, a new Law School was in construction. Next on the agenda was the breaking of ground for a new dormitory and then a new C & F Building.

We were coming to the close of of our sophomore year when the news of future Saturday classes for the entire student body greeted us. This announcement was not well received to say the least. The hero of the day proved to be an unnamed architect who had the idea of moving Belle Air Hall from its position on the proposed site of the new C on F building to a position a hundred yards away.

As sophomores, we elected Bob Mulcahy for President, Jim Egizio-Vice President, Jack Kelly-Secretary, and Ron Delany-Treasurer. 71% of the class voted. Paul Laughlin, Dick Hamburger, Leo Rudegeair, Lou Pinto, Bill Seeger, and Pat Nicholson were elected as Student Counsel representatives.

The theme of our Soph Cotillion in October was "The Battle of Richmond." The chairman of this successful event was Mike Rafferty.



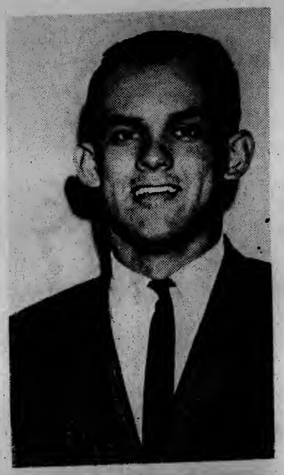
As the junior year approached, we were confronted with many responsibilities. We opened the year with the Junior Weekend, the first of its kind in the history of the University. All will recall the pep rally in the back of the stadium, the parade through the campus, and the dance. The football game on Saturday and the Jazz Concert on Sunday made the weekend a huge success and something to be remembered for quite some time.

Soon after the Junior Weekend, the Charity Ball was held and we gave a party for the orphan's of St. John's which was under the capable direction of chairman Mike Mancuso.

"Bud" Dudley resigned, Reagan advanced and Rev. Dominic J. Berra, O.S.A., was appointed moderator.

After three rather hectic years, we have in comparison little to look forward to, except a small item in our senior year called graduation.

As we look back there is one thing that can be said that will sum up the three years — "It was fun while it lasted."



CLASS ADMINISTRATORS

PRESIDENT ROBERT E. MULCAHY III hails from Short Hills, N.J., where he graduated from Millburn High School in 1954.

Bob was very active in extra-curricular activities and participated in varsity football there. Bob is a student in Villanova's Arts and Science Division, majoring in History, and was chairman of the Frosh-Soph Spring Dance.

Possessing an active interest in newspaper work, Bob became Sports Editor of the Villanovan in his junior year and was recently appointed Editor-in-Chief. Bob is also a member of the Student Council and the Steering Committee. He pledged for the Delta Pi Mu Fraternity in his freshman year and is now a member in good standing.

On Tuesday afternoons, you can see Bob as he drills with other members of the NROTC.

VICE-PRESIDENT JAMES EGIZIO resides in Allentown, Pa. He graduated from Allentown Central Catholic High School in 1954 and starred in basketball and baseball during his four years there.

He was the second highest scorer on the varsity basketball squad, the outstanding team player and always good under pressure. He also excelled as a hard-hitting outfielder for the Central Catholic varsity baseball team.

With all his participation in sports, Jim was also a prominent figure in school politics. A student in Villanova's School of Commerce and Finance, he is majoring in Pre-Law.

He was aeneral chairman of the Orphan's weekend and is a member of the varsity baseball team here at Villanova. Jim is also a member of the Pre-Law Society, the Steering Committee and the Intramural Council.

SECRETARY JOHN KELLY lives in Cleveland, Ohio. He was graduated from Saint Edward's High School in 1954, where he excelled in varsity basketball. He was chosen All-State, All-American and All-Catholic in his senior year of varsity ball.

A student of Villanova's School of Commerce and Finance, he is currently majoring in Marketing. At Villanova, he is on the varsity basketball and baseball teams and has received letters in his sophomore and his junior years.

Jack is one of the most active juniors on campus. He is a member of the Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity, Turf and Tinsel Society and the Sanctuary Society. Jack was appointed to the Steering Committee of the Junior Class. He is also a good student who has been on the Dean's List for two semesters.

TREASURER RONALD DELANY needs no introduction to the Junior Class and to Villanova.

He was born in Dublin, Ireland, where he attended Catholic University High School. Ronnie was an outstanding athlete and received letters there in tennis, cricket, rugby and track.

A student in Villanova's School of Commerce and Finance, he is majoring in Marketing. He was a member of the 1956 Olympic squad and won a gold medal as 1500 meter champion. He cracked the four-minute mile barrier last June.

He is a member of the Junior Class Steering Committee, the Turf and Tinsel Society and the Varsity Track Team, Villanovans can often see Ronnie in the library on weekday evenings. He is a good and conscientious student and a wonderful good will ambassador from Ireland.

Even A Crystal Ball Couldn't Predict These Juniors' Futures

By LEO ROGERS

After a not too cursory but foresighted look around campus, I decided that there are many juniors who can look ahead to bright and successful futures—or some kind of futures, anyway.

Before deciding on my present topic, I considered picking the "most unlikelies" of the Class of '58, but found that was too large a task so I have decided to nominate the following juniors as "most likely . . ."

. . . to be investigated by the U.S. Senate Investigating Committee: Frank "Governor" Bonner.

. . . to become president of the Elvis Presley fan club: Willie Oates.

. . . to get ulcers: Bob "what me worry?" Mulcahy.

. . . to say the wrong thing at the wrong time—or at the right time, as a matter of fact: Mike Mancuso.

. . . to sleep for the rest of his life: John Kennedy

. . . to lose his voice: Pat Nicholson.

. . . to be heard before he's seen: Dick Colucci.

. . . to be dropped from the football team because of his scholastic average: Paul "A" Laughlin.

. . . to start all kinds of "collegiate" fads on campus: Chris Humphreys.

. . . to fall out of shape after his four years of strenuous athletic officiating comes to an end: Jim Moran.

. . . to get the first patent on ray guns and space helmets: Clem Birch.

. . . to be just plain marooned on a desert island: Tom Boyle.

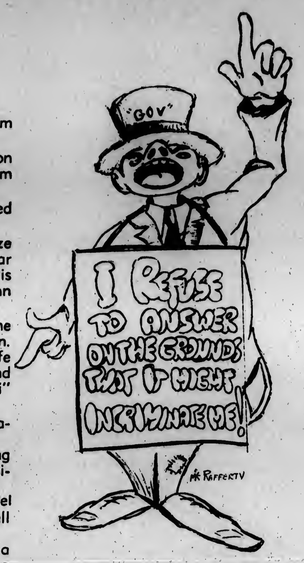
. . . to receive the Pulitzer Prize for the best short story of the year if he keeps turning them out at his present rate of one a day: John Williams.

. . . to have a "whale" of a time for the rest of his life: Bob Arkison.

. . . to spend the rest of his life commuting between Quantico and Parris Island: Jack "Semper Fi" Goodyear.

. . . to become one of Villanova's milestones: Ron Delany.

. . . to get a black eye peering at things that are none of his business: Norm Peer.



. . . to receive the Mendel Award for putting up with that hall for four years: Leo Rudegeair.

. . . to go through life with a frown on his face: Bob "am I gonna laugh" Powers.

. . . to make a big picnic out of his life—rain or shine: Jack Daly.

. . . to carry a slide rule in one hand and a T-square in the other wherever he goes: Joe Murphy.

. . . to become Harcum's "Man of the Year:" Vince Caraccio.

If He's 'Tweedy' and Wants $10,000, He's a Junior

By FRANK DELANY Feature Editor

Perhaps it's the result of this scientific age we live in but, whatever the explanation, the fact is apparent that we like to classify things from protozoa to college students. Most people immediately conjure up a vision of a 'type' when a student of say Penn, Temple, Rosemont or some other institution of higher learning is mentioned.

This is not as unreasonable as it might seem at first glance. No matter how varied the background of college students, after three years in common surroundings with common traditions and fairly similiar social and academic lives, they have been molded by their school into an at least superficially common personality.

So the natural question arises, "What sort of animal is the average Villanova junior?" With the help of a few questionaires and many personal opinions, we will try to construct a reasonable facsimile of "Joe Villanova."

You can usually tell a man by the clothes he wears. Joe Villanova would consider himself to be shoe. He is collegiate to the core, if not downright tweedy. Casual on campus and conservative off, individuality flares forth now and then in one garish garment against a cautious background of grays. As one puts it, "I like to dress quietly with a dash of color—when I must."

In his spare time, Joe Villanova is pretty much the all-American boy with a slight touch of dissipation. Girls are his number one hobby. For his less athletic moments he goes in for reading, hi-fi music and art in about that order: at least he says he does. He pursues all sports to condition him for his socializing. If he's an engineer he probably replaces reading, art, etc. with cars, airplanes and model trains in just about that order.

When he listens to music Joe Villanova prefers the classics (or at least the semi-classics) or jazz (dixieland or progressive) depending on his mood. For those doubtful moments, he has a preference for what he discreetly calls "mood music." At all times he has the proper abhorrence of rock and roll, although he can reconcile himself to calypso, mambo and other popular musical fads (especially since he shines on the dance floor). When backed up against the wall on the question of taste in music he might well come to the intelligent conclusion that "I like any music that I consider to be a good representative of its type."

Joe is a magazine man when it comes to reading, and the Luce publications get the lion's share of the business with Life, Sports Illustrated and Time, identified by a well-known - about - the-history-department professor as the "house organ of the Republican Party." When he ventures into deeper reading he wisely stays within the best-seller lists (who has the time or the money?). And then there's always Mad.

The average Villanova junior has a disquieting tendency to consider politics as outside the realm of his immediate interest. However when he does think about politics, he might be considered as possessing a liberal soul in a conservative facade. Unlike his European counterpart, he is no radical and blanches at the word socialism, but within a deep-seated faith in the traditional American values he is aware of deficiencies and would like to correct them if it won't cause too much trouble. When one varies from this pattern, he very likely goes all the way right or left.

With this conservative, balanced background, Joe Villanova has some pretty definite ideas about the future, which he faces with confidence.

Ten thousand dollars is the magic number in Joe's eyes. This is the yearly salary that he would be satisfed with although in keeping with the political character outlined above—the sky's the limit. He could look a salary of one hundred thousand dollars a year in the face with equanimity.

He knows how to go after high money, for his first ambition is to further his education, the more the merrier, and then he will sell his brains to society and probably enter business or (surprise) engineering where he will garner his fortune. And some lucky female who possesses all the Christian virtues and a number of social ones as well may share this rosy future.

Youth is supposed to hero-worship but Joe Villanova doesn't particularly pattern himself after, or admire anyone. When pressed to name the person he admires most, he looks puzzled for awhile and finally falls back on a stock political hero such as Franklin D. Roosevelt or Bob Taft, depending to a large extent on how he came to go to college.

This is pretty much the picture of the composite junior as he takes the spotlight this week. He is sensible, well-rounded, has a modicum of learning, is conservative enough to balance off the high school population and crazy enough to be downright likeable.

Perhaps this is the way you see Joe Villanova, and perhaps it isn't. Certainly you don't see this description as a fitting one for you. After all none of us are typical, just all the others.

Juniors Boast 690 Members From 16 States

By ED KARRER

Comprised of 653 male and 37 female students, this year's junior class is geographically one of the most heterogeneous at Villanova in the past decade. In addition to 16 states in America, and the District of Columbia, five countries beyond the territorial limits of the United States are represented.

Ireland, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Colombia (South America) and Cuba make up these outside lands, while states of the U.S. include: Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

The division of the University in which the grestest number of juniors are found is the Commerce and Finance Division with 307 third-year men. The Engineering Division boasts 185 juniors; 161 are in the Arts and Science Division, and 37 are studying in the Nursing Division.

The Dean's List of the first semester showed the names of some 140 members of the Class of '58, or approximately 20 per cent of the class. Three juniors achieved 4.0 averages during the fall term.

Day students in the class total 441, as compared to 249 juniors who reside on campus.

Junior NROTC students number 47; of these, 24 are in the regular program and 23 are contract students.

Turning to the lighter side of the statistics, those which might be classed as useless, but are none-the-less interesting, it is found that 81 juniors have the first name of "John." Taking second and third places in the most popular name category are "Bill" and "Joe" respectively.

Despite the fact that these three names identify nearly 20 per cent of the juniors, more than 140 other first names are found among members of the class.

These 140, incidentally, have as their initial letters 19 of the alphabetic symbols.

A Queen Is Crowned In 'South Pacific' Friday

By Ted Macri

"South Pacific"; that's the theme of the Class of 1958's Junior Promenade this Friday evening at the Field House.

Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians have been procured by Prom Co-Chairmen Ralph DeCicco and Gene Fogarty to provide "the sweetest music this side of heaven" for the Villanova crowd.

Lombardo has been the most consistently popular dance orchestra on the American scene and is without a doubt the most outstanding musical aggregation ever to grace the Field House stage.

Tom Sprenger, Bill Fallon and Mike Delany, the decorations triumvirate, have come up with some of the most ambitious and difficult plans for transforming the Field House into a Polynesian paradise.

The corners of the floor will be set up as authentic native thatched huts, in which Prom-goers will sip a special Hawaiian punch served by "Chubby" McCarthy and Norm Shachoy's refreshment squad.

The dancers will sway beneath tall palm trees constructed by the energetic decorations group and will gaze at a towering Pacific volcano.

Lou Pinto and Tony Lisa promise to produce a favor that will serve as a fitting reminder of this romantic evening.

A drive for patrons to subsidize the Prom has been going on under the direction of Jim Hearn and Jules Olita. These two also have designed an attractive program for each girl's memory collection.

"Whitey" Lyons and John Muller have been performing the arduous task of selling tickets to an economy minded group of college men. They are hoping for a sellout this Friday evening to help assure the Class of '58 of a financial success.

Working with them have been Leo Rogers and Frank Bonner, publicizing and advertizing the Promenade on and off campus through all the media obtainable.

The highlight of the evening will be the moment when the Junior Queen is crowned. Among one of five finalists, she will have been selected from over 150 entries.

John Robert Powers, internationally known beauty authority and head of the famous model agency bearing his own name, made the selections for Contest Co-Chairmen Andy Iaccarino and Ted Macri. The Queen will be crowned by last year's winner, Miss Beverly Bowden.

Jed Dioguardi and Tom Brennan, co-chairmen of Junior Week activities, have been indispensable because of their untiring efforts on behalf of the Junior Class.

Jed is a Finance major in the Commerce and Finance School, and Tom, a Marketing major, is well known as a star on the Wildcat's basketball team.

Guy Lombardo and his Royal Candians whose one night stand at the Field House Friday will be a Villanova first.

Royal Canadians:

Lombardo's 'Sweetest Music This Side of Heaven' Has Advanced His Band To Top Spot In Country

By MIKE MANCUSO
Exchange Editor

Guy Lombardo's name has become so legendary in music circles that a music critic once remarked that Lombardo could fill theaters, night clubs, and dance halls, and sell millions of records each year even if he were to use an orchestra consisting of two kazoos and two pianos.

What has made Guy's Royal Canadians the popular aggregation that it is?

It is this Lombardo philosophy—give the public what it wants—that is responsible for Lombardo's unique position in the field of popular music. Because they have continued to give the public its money's worth, Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, year after year, have been declared the No. 1 band in the country by official annual polls among music and radio editors. Believe it or not, Guy organized a four-piece group while still in grammar school. The band consisted of Guy as violinist, Carmen Lombardo as flutist, Lebert Lombardo as drummer, and Fred Kreitzer as pianist; all of whom are still in the orchestra with "the sweetest music this side of Heaven."

The original four-piece orchestra, which played at church socials and similar affairs, eventually expanded to nine, and it was these music-makers who gained fame throughout Canada and caught the ear of an American booking agent, named Mike Shea.

Lombardo's first American engagement was at an Elk's convention in Cleveland. He enjoyed the idea of playing in the United States and insisted that his agent find more bookings in the States. For a new name in music it was tough to do at first. But suddenly the Canadians were in demand and fame finally came to another musician who deserved it.

While engaged at the plush Music Box in Cleveland, Lombardo met and fell in love with Lillibell Glenn, who became Mrs. Lombardo.

In 1929, with the great stock market crash bothering the minds of millions, Lombardo opened at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York and 'clicked.' Here at this swanky big city hotel, Guy's band drew the crowds and thus began the long association between the Royal Canadians and the Roosevelt, which has become a show business legend.

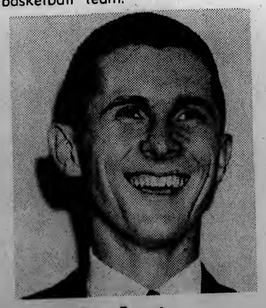
Besides his popular hotel dates and nationally-carried radio programs, Lombardo became a Decca recording star. He is credited with having introduced more songs—over 300—that subsequently became national favorites than any other orchestra leader or singer in history.

Through the year's Lombardo's music formula has been to emphasize simplicity and melody. The bandleader found out early in his career that the public wants to know what song is being played and they want it played in a rhythm to which they can dance. Along musical row it is an accepted fact that for sheer musical ability and appealing style, Guy Lombardo continues to reign unsurpassed.

No band has been copied more than Lombardo's for more than sixty other orchestra leaders, aspiring to fame, have attempted to imitate the arrangements of this master of the bandstand. What greater tribute could be paid to the Canadians?

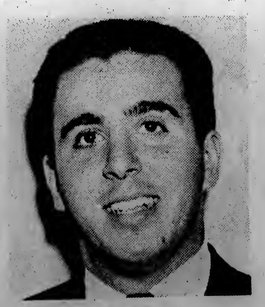
Besides playing "well groomed" music, the Royal Canadians are often referred to as the best looking group of musicians to be seen anywhere.

The Lombardo Orchestra now contains the four Lombardo brothers; Guy, Carmen, Lebert and Victor.



Kenny Gardner, who is married to Guy's sister Elaine, is also a member of the orchestra and is its featured tenor.

Also adding to the Lombardo fame are the Lombardo trio and the Lombardo twin pianos.



As extraordinary as it may seem, the closest thing to Guy's heart next to music is that fascinating sport known as speedboating. Today, Lombardo is regarded as much a sporting figure as a leading light in the field of music. The prominent bandleader is also the owner of a music publishing firm and Long Island's most elegant bistro, Guy Lombardo's East Point House; all of which causes many people to wonder where he finds the time to breathe.

What better way could the Class of 1958 highlight its Junior Promonade than by featuring the world renowned contingent of Guy Lombardo?

Speaking on behalf of the Junior Class, this reporter welcomes "the sweetest music this side of Heaven."

WHO WILL WEAR THIS  AT FRIDAY NIGHT'S PROM?

PATRICIA DOOLEY

Presenting! The five finalists in the 1957 Junior Week Queen Contest. A quintet of lovely young ladies that will comprise the Royal Family of the Class of 1958.

Contest Co-Chairmen Andy Iaccarino and Ted Macri opened the contest in February, and almost immediately juniors began to submit their Queen nominees. Last minute entries piled up forcing the deadline to be extended one week to allow as many pictures as possible to enter the contest.

At the final day for contest entries, over 150 photographs had been submitted. The entire group of pictures were relayed to the New York office of John Robert Powers, world-famous beauty expert and founder of the outstanding model agency bearing his own name.

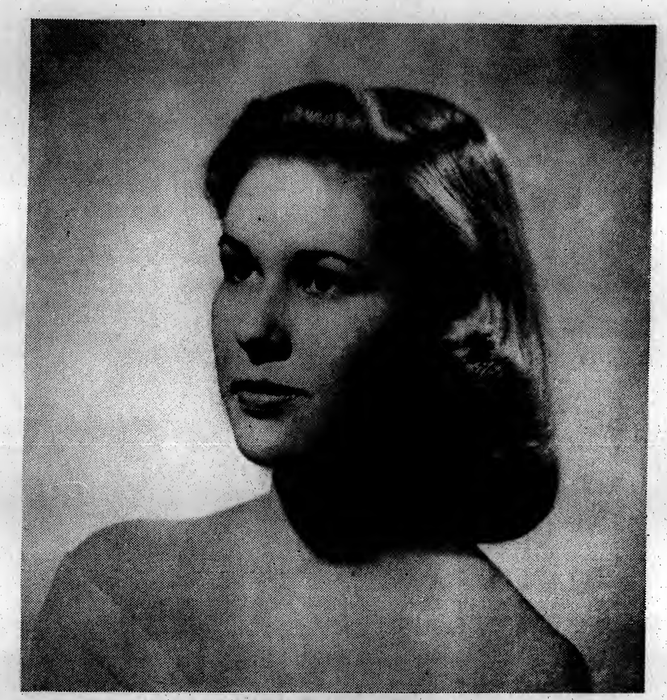
Mr. Powers expressed his dismay at the task of selecting but five finalists from such an array of attractive girls. He did make that difficult selection and no one can deny that each of the five beauties is as lovely as miss as any Villanovan could hope to have grace his arm.

As a departure from the procedure in the past, the identities of the Queen and her Lady-In-Waiting will remain a secret until the night of the Promenade.

Miss Beverly Bowden, the 1956 Junior Week Queen, escorted by Senior Ray Clarke, will crown the new Queen at the Prom.

The Queen and her date will dance to a Royal Waltz as she is applauded by an admiring throng of Prom-goers.

The Queen and her Court will reign over the events the following afternoon at Blue-White Day, as well as at the gala Dinner Dance Saturday evening at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.



First in this regal group is Miss Patricia Dooley, a blue-eyed senior at Mt. St. Joseph's Academy. Eighteen-year-old Pat's 5'6" frame is topped by soft light brown hair. Her home is in Lafayette Hill, Pa. and she hopes to enter Bryn Mawr Hospital School of Nursing in the Fall. Electrical engineer John Lamprect is Pat's proud date. John lives in Glenside, Pa.

Next we have a student of the ballet, Miss Rosalie Kroger, a resident of Rahway (?), N.J. She attends the Newark School of Dancing. Her date is Ralph DeCicco, Industrial Administration major in the Commerce and Finance School. Ralph sighs when he thinks of Rosalie's big brown eyes, but who isn't envious of his thoughts?

A lovely mother of an equally lovely eighteen-month old baby girl named Lynn, Joan Meier will attend the Prom at the side of her beaming husband, Electrical Engineer Bob Meier. Joan is a graduate of Immaculata College and hails from Bob's home town, St. Mary's, Pa. The couple resides in nearby Ardmore while Bob is completing his education at Villanova.

Blonde Jill Savage, a Marymount Junior College entrant, calls Garden, City, Long Island, her home. Blue-eyed Jill will grace the arm of Industrial Administration student Al Holfelter, also a Garden City resident. She is 19-years-old and stands 5'5".

An Immaculata senior, Kathleen Van Velso is the date of Political Science major Noel "Baron" Von Urff. A product of West Islip, Long Island, she has blonde hair and green eyes and is 21-years-old. Kathy stands 5'11" and weighs 145. She majors in English at Immaculata and hopes to teach after graduation.

Proud Mothers View Their Babies This Afternoon In 'Diaper' Show

Shades of the 'Baby Parade. Mothers Incorporated will select at four o'clock this afternoon in the lounge of Dougherty Hall the Diaper Dan of the Class of '58 from among the finalist photos of the dimpled darlings of yesteryear.

Cloaked in the protective anonymity of babyhood, entrants for the contest have poured into contest chairmen Bob Mahoney and George Wimberg's room in excess of four hundred pictures-worth.

Five finalists have been chosen from this morass of infantile pulchritude and it is from these five that the women responsible for these beautiful babies will choose the winner.

In fairness to those not included among the finalists, it should be stated that the choice was made on the basis of the photogenity of the of the subject rather than any personal attributes. All contestants would grace any crib.

Letters were sent to the mothers concerning Mother's Day and they were invited to send in the photos of their sons in those less inhibited moments, preferably without their son's notice.

So you too may be hanging in the lounge of Dougherty Hall in a pose you would think twice about since attaining the use of reason.

The pictures are bound to recall fond memories to the mothers of blessed days before Junior learned to talk and then later, his first words, "Dear Mom and Dad I am fine. I need money. Your loving son."

For the contestants, knowing or unknowing, finalist or non-finalist, win or lose the ten dollar first prize, the contest will have performed an invaluable service. It keeps us humble.

MEL VENTURA:
HOW LONG TO JUNIOR WEEK?

JACK MALONEY:

FRANK KELLY:

PEERING . . . .

with NORM PEER

At the statistics from Mother's Day which surprisingly show that no mothers were swallowed up in our famous and all-consuming mud. The broadwalk system crossing the bogs held up admirably under the strain. The mothers liked all our new buildings, even the ones that people aren't quite sure what they are. As usual none of them can understand why we don't always love "that delicious food." Well Mom, it's this way . . .

At those absolutely divine baby pictures. Some guys look about the same now as they did then—the only difference being that they shave everyday now instead of just twice a week. You'd never know it but a few of those pictures were taken freshman year. What college will do for a boy!

At the Junior Week queen pictures which are predominantly of the girl back home. In many cases they have been used as exhibit A in breach-of-promise suits involving local girls and have ended the flamboyant careers of some fine men along the Main Line.

At the coming Prom which promised for a while to be a Name That Band Contest. However, Guy offered us the most and we couldn't turn him down. Not too many people have heard of this Lombardo fellow because he was st uck in some Grill in New York for a few years but some of the mothers swear by him and a few have even stayed down.

At junior text books which lie untouched under long lists of work to be done before Junior Week and loan company slips. Everyone is going broke and flunking out of school and having a good time. Sunday morning we will awake with empty wallets, headaches and memories. Don't sleep too long though or you'll miss exams. Summer school enrollment booths are being set up at the Dinner Dance for your convenience. They think of everything, don't they?

Director Bobby Schiller and his Villanovans will be making their final campus appearance at Wednesday night's session of jazz.

Wear Your Bermudas:

Juniors and Seniors Participate In Upper Class Spring Version of Muff Day, Wednesday Afternoon

Muff Day in the Spring?

That's right! And the reason is that the Class of '58 has decided to add a new event to Junior Week in the form of a Junior-Senior Muff Day to be held this Wednesday afternoon at 3:30.

Athletic contests in every sport ranging from a tug-of-war to a mile run will be on tap for all Villanova sports-lovers.

Except for the Intramural Track Meet, all the events of the day including the featured mile run will he closed to juniors and seniors.

Co-chairmen Jim Moran and Joe Murphy have revealed the schedule for this campus Olympiad. The track meet will begin at 3:30 in the stadium under the direction of Sophocore Jim Klein.

The different events of the meet will be added to the Muff Day total. 100 yard dash, 440 yard run, 220 yard run, 440 yard relay, 880 yard run and 880 yard relay.

The broad jump, high jump and shot put will be held simultaneously with the above running events. Although open to all classes, anly points scored by juniors and seniors will be adedd to the Muff Day total.

A foul shooting contest wil start the closed portion of Muff Day on the stadium courts at four o'clock, followed by an outdoor basketball game.

The featured mile run should be the top event of the day. It will begin at 4:15 in Goodreau Stadium, a site where many a recrod has been made. The officials for all the contests will be freshmen and sophomore members of the Intramural Council.

Bringing the day to a close will be a softball game between the two upper classes that should pep up the contestants and spectators for the coming weekend.

Entries for the Intramural Track Meet will be accepted in the Intramural Office, room 112 Alumni Hall; by Jim Klein, room 202 Alumni, and by Ken MacGillivray, room 343 Austin.

Junior-Senior Muff Day entries will also be accepted in the Intramural Office, and by John Fixl, room 4 Sullivan, Bill Ickes, room 307 Fedigan and Leo Rogers, room 6 Sullivan.

Juniors are urged to attend and participate in these functions rain or shine, and they are also reminded to wear bermudas during the activities.

Tuesday's Sports Night Features Awards, Films, Athletic History

Featured as the second main event of Junior Week 1958 will be tomorrow evening's annual Sports Night, scheduled to begin at 7:30 in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium.

Jim Marrone, chairman of the affair, has arranged for a full evening's entertainment to be highlighted by the presentation of the outstanding athlete award to one of Villanova's senior sports stars.

The first event on the agenda will be the showing of the films taken at the Villanova - Boston University gridiron clash this past fall. Junior Ed Michaels, varsity tackle, will narrate the game and outline tactics used by the Wildcats in their 27-13 victory.

One of the highlights of this film is a scene in which Villanova's All-American candidate, Junior Education Major Don Luzzi, "smears" a member of the BU backfield as he is attempting to block for his kicker. This also was the game in which Mike Flynn, veteran lineman, hauled in a stray Boston pass and galloped sensationally to a 55 yard Wildcat TD.

One of the most interesting portions of the evening's program will be furnished by the Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O.S.A., historian of Villanova. Father O'Donnell has recently been conducting an extensive research project into the history of athletics at the University, and at tomorrow evening's fete he will reveal the results of this research.

The second movie to be shown is entitled "Proving Ground of Champions," a film depicting the training and running of race horses at New Jersey's Garden State Park.

The presentation of the Outstanding Athlete award will be made by Pat Nicholson, president of the Spirit Committee. Four seniors are eligible this year for the award, which is based upon proficiency in athletics, academic achievement, evening chapel attedance, sportsmanship and good conduct.

The four members of the Class of '57 vieing for this year's award are Jim Smith, varsity basketball; Al Peterson, varsity track; Don Bragg, varsity track, and John DiGiallorenzo, varsity baseball.

Rounding out this year's Sports Night program will be the presentation of a movie showing the Olympic championship runs by junior Ron Delany and Senior Charlie Jenkins. Together these two Villanovans teamed up to capture three Olympic gold medals in the Melbourne classic and put the Wildcat cinder men in the international spotlight.

This film. which will be narrated by Delany, will also show the running of Delany's history 3 minute 59 second mile in Compton, Calif. during the past summer recess.

Free to all students of Villanova and their friends, this year's annual Sports Night program brings together a contingent of the greatest Villanova athletes in recent years.

Jazz Concert Wednesday:

Dixieland Takes Spotlight With Carl Waxmen and Villanovans

The annual Junior Week Jazz Concert will be held Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the Field House.

Featured this year will be the noted jazz artist Carl Waxman who has assembled some of the finest Dixieland stars in the area for the event.

Tickets are now on sale at $1. for each person and $1.50 per couple.

Waxman has never had his own organization but has played with the best bands on the New York and Philadelphia circuits. He has promised to provide not only a capable but excellent group of jazz artists.

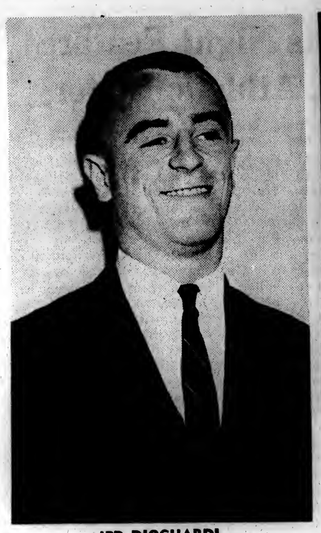
On the same agenda, VU's own great musical combo, the Villanovans, will be starred. Wednesday's show will be the last appearance of the group under the leadership of Bobby Schiller.

The group is composed of six men, four of whom graduate this June. The fifth man Jack Gillfilan was a member of the Class of '56. Jack Emory, the only remaining member and, incidentally, from the class of '58, will undertake the task of reorganizing and keeping alive the precedent of a fine campus musical group.

The combo has presently in its ranks Schiller on trumpet; Pat Briody, trombonist; Mike Guida, clarinetist; Jim McCarthy, pianist; Gillfilan on drums, and Jack Emory on the banjo.

The Villanovans have been making history since their initial appearance and it is certain that their finale will be a memorable one.

Co-chairman Dave Belcher and Karl Smith wish to stress the fact that dress for the occasion is strictly casual. Both have recommended Bermuda shorts as perhaps the most appropriate outfit.



An innovation in the setup for the bands will be seen Wednesday night. The musicians will not be on stage, but will be located on a platform on the floor of the Field House.

CARL WAXMAN
All-Star Jazzman

There will be a few seats set up near the rear of the biulding but a large portion of the floor will be left open in front of the bandstand for the more avid fans also to facilitate dancing.

The concert will be a three hour affair ending about 11 o'clock. There should be some fine memories packed into this period along with some relaxation after that gruelling, muscle straining Muff Day.

Benjamin Franklin Hotel Junior Dinner Dance Site; Chairman Birch Promises Delightful Evening To All

By JOHN FIXL
Copy Editor

Climaxing the highlights of Junior Week will be the annual Junior Dinner Dance. This long anticipated affair, traditionally proving itself to be the outstanding function of our brief college career, has been planned this year and directed by Clem Birch, junior history major.

Clem Birch
Dinner Dance Chairman

At 6 p.m., the doors will be opened in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel to initiate the greatest night of the year. Approximately twelve hundred Villanovans and their dates will file into the Crystal Ballroom at the hotel located at 9th and Chestnut Sts. in Philadelphia.

The dinner will be served promptly at 7:30 p.m. During the dinner, three musicians will provide the dinner music while the juniors enjoy a turkey dinner extravaganza.

After whetting their appetite with a delicious Hawaian fruit cup, the consomme' du jour will be served. The proverbial roll and butter with olives, celery, etc., will accompany the turkey dinner with all the trimmings. Milk, coffee, or tea will be served at the end of the meal. Everyone will enjoy the unusual macaroon ice cream roll with Melba sauce, which will be served for dessert.

Following the filling meal, Clem Birch, chairman of the Dinner Dance, will act as toastmaster. Brief addresses will be delivered by Rev. Dominic J. Berra, moderator of the Class of 1958, and by Robert Mulcahy, president of the junior class.

Dancing will begin at approximately 9 p.m. At this time, the juniors and their dates will be entertained by the music of Charlie Gresh and his prominent society band. A group of seven members of Mr. Gresh's orchestra of twelve will provide an added feature to the evening's proceedings when they pause at some time during the dance to hold a brief Dixieland Jazz concert.

Arrangements for the band have been made by John Craft, junior Commerce and Finance student.

Clem Birch, ably assisted by Vice-Chairman Joe D'Aquila, Electrical Engineering student, arranged the seating for a maximum of twelve hundred with a scheduled five couples at each table.

Group pictures of the tables will be taken at a reasonable rate. Individual pictures of you and your date against an exquisite background will also be taken at your request. Chairman in charge of photography is Mike Mancuso.

Juniors and their dates will swing to the music of Charlie Gresch and his society band in the Crystal Ballroom of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Saturday night at the annual Junior Dinner Dance.

6 Juniors Featured In T'n'T Cast; Dave Belcher Holds Leading Role

With fingers in every pie on campus, the Junior Class is well represented in musical comedy also.

Turf and Tinsel's "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," this year's offering of the campus musical comedy society, has six of its nine leads played by members of the Class of 1958.

The show, which runs from May 8-11 in the Field House, is the hilarious story of what happens to a modern-day man who returns to Mount Olympus for a session with the gods and goddesses of Greek mythology.

Dave Belcher, cast as the man in the gray flannel toga, is a neophyte actor from Bloomfield, N.J. who, in his first appearance on a stage, does a side-splitting performance as a bewildered modern set upon by the inhabitants of Olympus.

A junior English major, Dave is typically a 1958 graduate in the sense that he belongs to numerous other activities. He is a member of the Lynx staff, Delta Pi Mu, Belle Masque and the Literary Club, of which he is the treasurer; like most of his classmates, Dave also is active in class functions.

Another first-timer before the footlights is Mike Klesius, who is cast as Bacchus, the god of wine and merriment. A Psychology major, Mike's only previous experience with the stage was his service as an usher for the past Turf and Tinsel shows.

The Alexandria, Va. resident is also a DPM brother, and served as pledgemaster for the fraternity this year. He also does a weekly column in the Villanovan, and a disc jockey show on WVIL.

Dainty Danny Mullin, reputed to be the tinest specimen on campus, is appropriately cast as Aphrodite, the goddess of love and beauty, in this year's show. Dan is a Brooklynite and a stage veteran, having done several parts with the Breezy Point Club's famous annual revue.

A Marketing major, Dan also finds time to participate in Belle Masque, Delti Pi Epsilon and Alpha Psi Omega.

Lake Mohawk, N.J. produces another rare acting gem, this one named Cornelius McCarthy. "Chubby" will be seen on stage next week as Athena, the goddess of wisdom and truth.

A General Arts major, Chubby is active in class affairs and is on the Steering and Prom committees. He is also a Marine PLC candidate.

Now we come to the twins of Mount Olympus, the frolicsome Artemis and her brother Apollo, noted, as legend has it, for their patronage of the hunt and of archery.

Philadelphia's own John Kennedy is cast as Artemis, while Andy Iaccarino, a Corona, N.Y. import, will play Apollo.

John is an English major and Andy majors in Finance. Both are experienced actors, having done high school and college work prior to their performances in "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga."

Profile:

Colorful Biography Shows Life Of Father Berra, Class Advisor

By CLEM BIRCH

It seems only fitting that a feature story which would gather biographical bits of the life of a class moderator should come together with the final event of the week, as both are high points of the junior year.

Rev. Dominic J. Berra, O.S.A., moderator of the Class of 1958, although new to Villanova's campus this year, has been a sobering director behind two semesters of 'firsts" and complicated traditions.

This past year, which seemed to many to be the end-all of social and traditional collegiate life, was perhaps tame in contrast to the background of Father Berra.

His interesting biography starts in the eastern United States and begins to expand broadly with an early entrance after high school into the Augustinian Preparatory School for the priesthood at Staten Island, N.Y. in 1935. The long years of seminary life brought Dominic Berra to fulfillment in his ordination on May 18, 1944.

Father Berra's first charge, an assignment not unique but highly interesting, was that of curate of St. Augustine's parish in Marianao, Cuba. During this time while carrying out the duties of a parish priest, he studied at the University of Havana along lines which eventally in May of 1948 he reached his Doctorate of Philosophy and Letters.

One of the events which Father Berra recalls as most memorable during his stay was the establishment of the first parochial school by the Augustinian fathers in Cuba. The most unusual situation that stood out in his mind about Cuba was that at traffic intersections the person that blew his horn first had the right of way.

Father Berra did not remain in Cuba for any great time after he had obtained his degree and in the summer of 1948 he toured the great shrines of Fatima, Lourdes, and Oberammergau for the purpose "of witnessing the structural edifices of the church." "Lourdes", he said, "is the greatest devotional center in the world."

His doctorial disseration had been "Structural Systems of Religious Architecture from the Origins of Christianity," a topic which has a great import in the light of present day ecclesiastical buildings.

Upon his return from this broad European travel, Father Berra was assigned to the Chaplainship of the Queens General Hospital and the Triboro Tubercular Hospital where he remained at duty until 1951.

Fr. Berra

He was at that time transferred to Assumption parish in Lawrence, Mass., which became his home while he day-hopped to Merrimac College in Andover, Mass. to teach religion, Philosophy of Education, Spanish, Medical and General Ethics.

For the past year Father Berra has fulfilled similar duties since his arrival at Villanova University in September of 1956. It is here that he becomes fittingly the moderator of the class which has begun the Villanova Story all over again since his year like his class' is one of firsts. It is the first time Father Berra has moderated a class and also the first time that he has had the opportunity to be counsellor of men. He is the counsellor of the Ground floor of Sullivan Hall.

On the side, as additional responsibilities, he teaches religion at Hallahan High School and travels back and forth performing the duties of a parish priest for St. Monica's in Berwyn. Here at Villanova Father Berra teaches Religion.

To Father Berra, who has been such a faithful guide, go the thanks for help and counsel and a wish that we, the Class of 1958, may have his continued help both physical and spiritual for the years to come.

Junior Athletes Show Themselves Outstanding; Many Will Compete Sat. In Blue - White Day

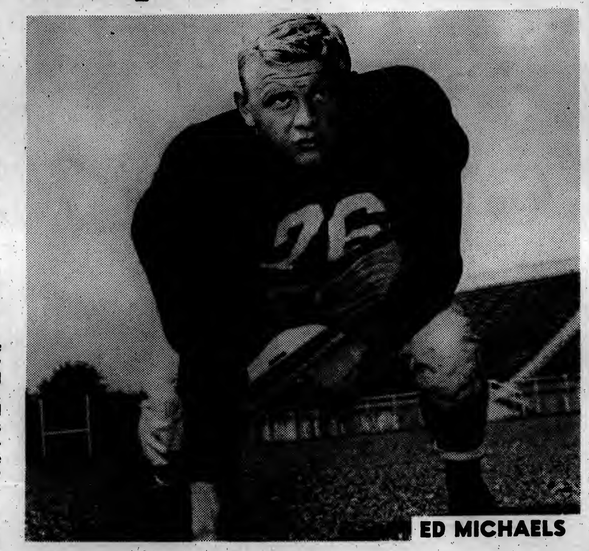
Delany Is Most Famous Name Of Aggregation

The class of 1958, aside from its academic and extra-curricular accomplisment, has played a significant part in another phase of the Villanova picture—that of intercollegiate athletics.

The prime example of this is football. An undefeated freshman team in 1954 proved true this past Fall in the first winning season for the Cats.

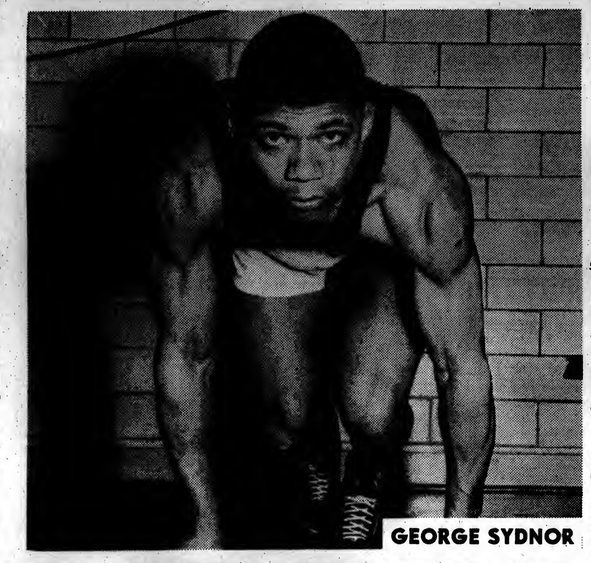
Featured in the backfield of the football team were juniors Billy Magee, the nation's 26th ranked passing quarterback, Rick Sapienza, Jack Deveraux, Dave Parr and Dave Interbartolo. The line was molstered by All-American candidate Don Luzzi, Ed Michaels, Vince Cheverini, Paul Laughlin, and Tony Varrechione.

Any study of the track history of Villanova must begin with Junior Class Treasurer Ron Delany, the world's foremost miler. The flying Irishman thrilled track fans as he led the Wildcats to the two major indoor track championships and continued his undefeated mile skein indoors as well as accomplishing the small task of winning the Olympic 1500 meter race.



Ace high jumper Phil Reavis set records in his speciality and also placed sixth in the Olympic competition. George Sydnor and Bob Holup were other juniors who figured in the amazing story of the Mainline trackmen.

The swimming team, posting a fabulous 11-1 record, was captained by junior Lou Schoener. Other juniors who were instrumental in compiling the record were Mike Rafferty, Lou Pinto and John Flynn.



Only two members of the 1957 basketball team were juniors but both men count heavily in the basketball story. Tom Brennan and Jack Kelly were familiar names to Wildcat court followers.

Shortstop John Donatucci, catcher Terry Hayes, Pitcher Jack Kelly, and outfielders Hank Nichols, Larry Mazzotti and Jim Egizio helped to form the nucleus of the diamond forces of Art Mahan.

Juniors of the golf team included Frank Krause and Jay Gibney.

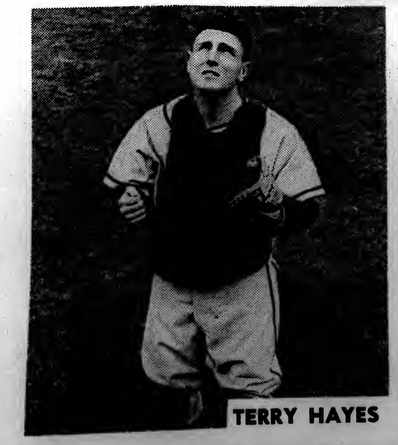
Past Villanovan Greats Appear In Annual Fete

Four Olympic track heroes an All-American basketball star and a host of other all-time Villanova athletic greats will collaborate this Saturday to make the fifth annual Blue-White Day the most outstanding sports event in Junior Week History.

The Varsity "Old-Timers" basketball contest has been scheduled for 12 noon, and Director of Athletics Frank Reagan has revealed that one of the greatest basketball teams in Villanova history, the 1949-50 squad which posted a 25 and 4 record will be on hand together with a number of other court greats to meet next year's varsity.

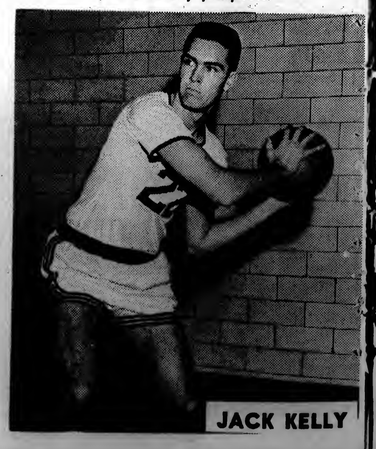


St. Joseph's College will be the opponent of the Villanova baseball team at 12:30 p.m. on the University diamond behind Goodreau Stadium.

A new event added to this year's schedule is that of the Villanova-Pennsylvania University water polo match to be held at the University pool also at 12:30. Following this will be colorful Swim-O-Rama, under the direction of Ed. Geisz Villanova's swimming coach, who lead this year's team to the most successful season in swimming history at VU.

The hour-long water festival will feature attempts by Vilanova swimmers at two pool records, fancy and clown diving and a skin diving exhibition by frogmen from the Philadelphia Naval Base who will demonstrate underwater demolition techniques.

Highlighting the afternoon's spectacles will be the star-studded track meet between the LaSalle Explorers and the Wildcats, scheduled for 1 p.m. at the University track. Competing in this event will be Villanova's Olympic stars Charlie Jenkins, Ron Delany and Phil Reavis, the latter two being members of the Class of '58. LaSalle's Olympic champion, Ira Davis, rounds out the quartet of Oylmpic greats.



Slated as the final contest of the day, scheduled to start at 2 p.m., will be the regulation intra-squad gridiron tilt. Climaxing the 20-day spring football outing for the Wildcats, this event will give Villanovans an insight into next year's varsity prospects.

Birch, Ludmerer, Mahle Voted Class Presidents By Record Turnout After Lively Campaign

Votes, votes and more votes poured into Alumni Gym last Tuesday, and at the culmination of one of the most thrilling, colorful and yet restrictive campaigning seasons in recent Villanova history, Clem Birch, Vic. Ludmerer and Steve Mahle were chosen to serve as prsident in their respective classes for the coming acadmic year.

Their elections came at the close of a whirlwind week of tense excitment that saw huge signboards spring up almost hourly in the designated area beside the Classroom Annex and the expulsion of one candidate from the ballot on election eve by an election-governing Student Council committee.

Birch, a history maorj from Havertown, Pa., became one of the few day-hop presidents in the history of the school when he defeated his sole opponent, Gene Fogerty, another off campus candidate, 338-121, for the Senior Class presidency.

Dombrowski Topped

With 73% of the sophomore class going to the polls — the day's largest class total — Vci Ludmerer won a closely contested two man race over Al Dombrowski by 80 votes for the presidency. This was by far the closest and hardest fought presidential battle of the day.

Ludmerer, a resident of New York, served as vice-president for the Class of 1959 during the past year and was in charge of publicity for the Spirit Committee.

Mahle Wins By 48

In the always unpredictable frosh contests, Navy engineer Steve Mahle came out on top in a farly even four-man race. Arts student Harry Rowe finished second, while Nick Samango and Paul Iffland took third and fourth, respectively.

Mahle amassed 209 votes to Rowe's 161.

VILLANOVAN All-American For 4th Year

Recording the highest point total in its history, the Villanovan was accorded its fourth All-American rating in as many years by the Associated Collegiate Press two weeks ago.

Judging the issues of the first seester of aacdemic year 1956-57, the ACP cited front page makeup, typography, editorial page features, and use of photographs as "suerior." The four outstanding qualities accounted for 415 of the Villanovan's 1715 points.

Of the thousands of newspapers judged each year by the ACP, only 11 were given All-American honors within the Villanovan's class.

Plays Two More Days:

'Man In Gray Flannel Toga' TNT Hit; Music Outstanding

By BOB STRAYTON
Ex-Managing Editor

The most humorous theatrical performance of the year appeared before the Field House footlights Wednesday night when "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," the Turf and Tinsel Club's spring musical comedy, opened a four-day run.

The hilarious show will play three more performances: tonight, tomorrow afternoon, and tomorrow night.

The story of an unfortunate modern-day man who is spirited away to Mount Olympus for a harrowing life with the great gods and goddesses of Greek mythology, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga" features the original words and music of Bob Schiller, student director of the Villanova marching and concert band and the Villanovans, a well-known dixieland gorup.

Twelve Original Songs

The two-act play has 12 original musical numbers as well as an original script. Schiller wrote both.

Dave Belcher, junior English major, plays the bewildered "man in the gray flannel toga," who has the unfortunate experience of travelling back to ancient Greece where he becomes involved in several rollicking sketches with love-hungry goddesses and jealous gods.

Gene Donohue, senior Political Science major, makes his final TNT appearance in the show. Donohue is cast as Zeus, the King of Mount Olympus.

Andy Iaccarino, John Kennedy, Dan Mullin, Mike Klesius, and Chubby McCarthy also have the leading roles. All are juniors.

Portray Twins

Iaccarino and Kennedy share the role of twins. Iaccarino portrays Appollo and Kennedy

Pat Nicholson Gains SC Chairmanship; Kempf Veep

Pat Nicholson, junior Industrial Administration major in the Commerce and Finance Division, was handed the gavel to pound at next year's Student Council meetings by outgoing Chairman Joe Martin at the closing Council session for the 1956-'57 school year.

The election of Nicholson by the combined representation from the outgoing and incoming members was unanimous as was the selection of Don Kempf and Lou Pinto, who were also named officers of the '57-58 Council.

Don Kempf, sophomore Arts student was re-elected to the Council Tuesday with the largest number of votes recorded by any candidate in his class, succeeds Nicholson as Vice-Chairman.

Pinto Replaces Shea

Recent winner of a Scott Tissue scholarship, Pinto, a junior Engineer, takes over the position held by Jack Shea, the retiring Secretary.

At the meeting an amendment to the Constitution was passed divididing the office of Secretary-Treasure into two separate posts—Secretary and Treasurer —with the stipulation that candidates for the latter position could be members of either the present freshman or sophomore class only.

Christy Loses By Two Again

After the adoption of the amendment, Bob Murphy, a sophomore engineer, edged Arts' student Bill Christy also of the Class of '59 by a 28-26 margin.

PAT NICHOLSON

Murphy was elected to the Council Tuesday and Christy leaves the Council as a full-voting member since he was defeated by two votes in a recount for Arts' day-hop representative.

He will represent NFCCS,

Gala Day for Dads Includes Sports, Dinner and Show

Those "boys" you'll see cavorting about the campus Saturady may not be next year's freshman class, but they'll be having as much fun. They'll be fathers of Villanova seniors, and it'll be their "day."

The annual Seniors' Fathers' Day will attract dads from the four points of the compass and a day-long sleight of activities is in store for them.

The day officially opens at 10:30 a.m. with an outdoor Mass at the Grotto of Our Lady of Good Counsel. Mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., moderator of the Senior Class.

Luncheon will be served to the seniors and their fathers from 12:30 to 1:30 in Dougherty Hall. The lunch may be obtained at any time during this hour, and Fathers' Day Chairman Dick Mason asks that everyone not try to eat at 12:30. In this way congestion can be avoided.

At 2 p.m. the Wildcat baseball team will meet a strong Fordham University squad on the Villanova diamond behind Goodreau Stadium. Fordham is near the top of the Intercollegiate Metropolitan (N.Y.) Baseball Conference.

At approximately 2:30 p.m., Villanova will unveil its three Olympians and its wealth of other track talent in Goodreau Stadium in a duel meet with Seton Hall University. This will be the Wildcat's first home meet of the season and numerous Stadium records are expected to

Four For The Future

With the casting of their ballots during the past week the three underclasses and the Student Council named the men who will lead them in the coming year. The votes cast by these various groups bestowed on the men elected a great honor, but with that honor went an even greater responsibility.

Messrs. Nicholson, Birch, Ludmerer and Mahle tre faced with a rewarding proposition, but one that will remain so only as long as they fulfill the obligations vested in them by the voters.

They have been chosen the eaders on campus, the real B.M.O.C.'s of Villanova Univrsity. Every large activity, every social function, every thing that is Villanova will be a success or failure under their guiding hands.

We wish them every bit of success and good fortune necessary to make the coming year a great one, and commend the Villanova voters for a wise choice.

They have placed us in safe hands.

Political Round-up

Russian 'Open Sky' Policy Doubtful

By GENE DONOHUE

"You may take all the pictures of our snow and ice that you want if we can photograph your West Coast industries, your naval bases on the Pacific, and your Atomic testing grounds in Nevada. There now, aren't we promoting the cause of peace and disarmament?"

Just who do the Russians think they are fooling by bring a proposal that amounts to just that before the five-power disarmament commission last Tuesday. The Russian "Peace Offensive" is in full swing again it seems, and while I have nothing against peace as such or any movement designed to lead to peace, this latest proposal is ridiculous.

U. S. A. 'Warmonger'?

DONOHUE

Naturally, this is not the way the Russian propaganda machine will present this latest plan to the underdeveloped neutralist countries of the world. The United States will be made to look the part of the war-monger and armed military camp that has a curtain drawn around its real objectives, regardless of how wonderful American life seems in the movies. The Russians will say that this beautiful "bulwark of freedom" is just a front for the poverty and decadence of the true American way of life.

It is up to such agencies as the United States Information Agency and the Voice of America to correct this impression before it becomes ingrained in the minds of these people.

Wasteland Survey Useless

Some people might say that some access to Russian territory is better than none; something is better than nothing. That may be very true, but the price that we would be paying is too great. While the Russians want to have access to the skies above the entire Western part of our country as far as St. Louis and Chicago, we may only fly over what amounts to waste land. While the area in square miles is not very different, what is contained in that area is.

'Open Skies' Unlimited

When the Russians make a proposal that will make the inspected area equal in the importance of what is to be inspected, then they will make a true contribution toward peace. The only way that this can be done to make the "open skies plan" an all embracing operation that excludes nothing.

Any plan that provides for only partial inspection is defected before it is put into operation because it provides for its own circumvention. As long as part of the area remains "closed" it can be used to carry on activities inconsistent with the disarmament program.

Air Defense Undermined

The "open skies plan" would completely undermine the air defense system of this country. This system can be safely undermined only when there is no longer a need for it: when all the skies are open and we have full knowledge of all Russian activities.

This is the exception to the rule that a little is better than none. There can be no compromise on this issue without endangering the very existance of the United States.

POLITICIANS O NCAMPUS

(ACP)—University of Texas' student assembly last month voted "with a unanimous and vigorous aye," according to the DAILY TEXAN, in favor of allowing political speakers to talk on campus.

In a TEXAN poll of 350 faculty members, only 15 per cent expressed real opposition to the resolution, though many listed qualifications.

One visiting lecturer gave these suggestions for a policy on political speakers. He said they should permitted on campus provided:

* The speech does not interfere with any major scheduled university activity;

* Equal oportunity is afforded legally recognized parties or candidates;

* The sponsoring political group or candidate reimburse the university for any expense incurred;

* Each such meeting is cleared in advance with a suitable university representative, perhaps a faculty member designated by the admisitration.

(ACP)—A tall, attractive brunette from Chicago's north side is the lone coed majoring in agriculture at Southern Illinois University, reports the school's EGYPTIAN. Her name is Gene Duane.

Her after-college goal is to get a foreign consultant's job with the United States government.

What prompted the Chicagoan to major in agriculture? "Love of the great outdoors," she explains.

A Thought For Mother's Day

Because God Knew the ways of life,
The ways of sorrow and temptation,
He gave us each a Mother fair;

Pure as the morning lily,
Vibrant as the red carnation.

A Lesson In Controversy

Wilted Ivy And The Growing Corn Belt

(ACP)—From the editorial page of the HOLCAD, Westminster college, New Wilmington, Pa., comes this comment on two kinds of colleges.

What a surprise it was to read in the March issue of HOLIDAY that the Ivy league schools "dedicated to pure and remote knowledge," are a thing of the past; "The Big Ten will have the future."

Hitting Ivy education, Professor Paul Engle of the University of Iowa writes, "The Ivy League's smallness depends on the Big Ten's bigness. Never forget; the Big Ten is that massive wall to which that gracious ivy clings."

Such universities as Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois have none of the conformity that makes an "Ivy league campus look as if its students had all gone to the same prep school at Conformity Corners."

Professor Engle does say Ivy is supreme in the limited area of undergraduate education, "But under the conception that the whole state is the campus, the Big Ten is supreme."

The author should be congratulated on his attack at the smugness of the Ivy league schools. Living off the fame and traditions of a past era, these vine-covered halls of learning have shunned the possibilities of a good education at any other college. The Harvard, Yale or Princeton diploma has been glorified erroneously as the ultimate in education.

The author does stick his neck out a bit far, however, in predicting an end for the Eastern schools. Schools like Yale who can only take one fourth of their applicants and Dartmouth which chooses its freshman class of 725 from 6,000 applicants will continue to get the best potential college material. Schools in the Big Ten are required to take the mediocre student as well as the intelligent one because they are tax-supported.

For Professor Engle to assert that "education for the few, dedicated to pure and remote knowledge is fine, touching and doomed" certainly predicts an end for liberal education as whole. And yet, it was Alfred P. Sloan, of General Motors, who said, "Give us educated men. We can train them ourselves. But we can't educate them."

The Big Ten are important in providing education for the common masses. However, just because they have become so "broad-minded" and enormous in fulfilling their purposes, one cannot call Columbia "a Sorbonne-on-the-subway, Harvard a brave settlement down-wind from the codfish-drying racks and Cornell a salt-lick in the wilderness where jaded animals come to renew their minerals."

If the professor is correct in his prediction the college Beau Brummels might as well say goodbye to button down shirts, crew necks, tweeds and chinos. Who knows, the best dressed collegian for 1960 may be wearing blue jeans, flannel shirts and straw hats. Business concerns could call it the "Corn Belt" look.

Be A Happy Employee With U.S. Steel Co.

Those of you who are faced with the all to imminent choice of a career will perhaps find some pertinent information in the following facts on job opportunities with one of America's largest and most respected corporations, the United States Steel Company, and the rest can file the article away for future reference when the time comes to be weaned from the old alma mater.

As the brochure says, "United States Steel has always recognized, as of paramount importance to its success, the caliber of the men who mage up its organization. It has traditionally expected its young men of today to become its leaders tomorrow."

Largest Producer

United States Steel is the largest producer of steel in the world and accounts for one-third of America's output. The company is continually expanding in both production and research.

The phases of employment to be found in this industrial collosus are in such varied fields as steel production, water transportation, raw materials, fabrication of steel products, warehouse distribution, production of cement (partners with steel in the production of reinforced concrete), export sales, personnel and plant operations and, perhas most significant of all, research.

The above boils down to the fact that U. S. Steel can use you, be you engineer, accountant or salesman.

College Procurement

Each year the number of trainees necessary to meet anticipated personnel requirements is determined. Personnel requirements that cannot be met from within the existing employee force are then procured through college recruiting.

Prospective employees from among the campus populations are chosen first of all upon knowledge in the field of interest and then second on personal qualities. Training on the part of the company depends upon the individual and the prospective job.

After and if one has been accepted as an employee of U. S. Steel, he will undergo a training period of approximately two years duration. The first period of training will emphasize technical and business problems confronting U. S. Steel and the entire steel industry. The second phase will develop mastery of the specific operations and responsibilities the trainee will have to face in his position.

Take Your Choice

When the candidate has completed his training, he is then assigned a regular position in line with his desires and training. The future is now up to the employee. U. S. Steel promotes from within and the gauge of his progress over the years is his own capabilities in his job and in personal relationships with hs fellow employees and his superiors. On its part, U. S. Steel has an extensive education and development program for its employees.

As you rise in U. S. Steel your salary rises with you—for the policy of U. S. Steel is proper renumeration for services rendered. Insurance programs are available and are designed to afford medical protection to the employee and his family. Vacation arrangements are pretty much the standard ones throughout the business world. A pension plan, which compares favorably with the most liberal plans throughout the industry, has been maintained since 1911, a fine record.

Additional information on U. S. Steel can be obtained from the placement office or directly from the personnel department of the particular division of the company (outlined above) which interests you.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Sir:

First I should like to explain the purpose of this letter.

I would like to thank so many on the campus for their Masses and Prayers during my recent illness.

I want to thank the members of the Augustinian Order: the Provincial, Priests, Seminarians, Sisters and Guild and also the University Students for their Masses, prayers, cards and flowers.

I know that without the spiritual help I received so abundantly during the past months, I would not now be on the road to recovery.

May God reward you for your generosity and St. Joseph guide your path through life.

With sincere gratitude,
Jake Krupa

To the Editor
The Villanovan
Editor:

For many weeks I've quitly disagreed with the views ekpressed by the ostrich who writes the Political Roundup column in the Villanovan. It is his discussion of foreign aid, appearing in the April third issue, which prompted me to write.

I am not agianst all foreign aid, as I might seem, but rather I feel that more thought should be given to it, before we reach for our checkbook. I fail to see any justification for the way we hand out money to our allies (?) when past experience points to the fact that we can't always rely on them. I believe, is that we erroneously think that everyone who is anti-communist is naturally for us, and we're ready to start dishing out aid. The truth is you can't buy friends, you can only rent them!

Who is going to our aid when we go bankrupt? I don't think Ibn Saud is going to rush out and pawn his Cadillacs to pay us back!

Sincerely,
John G. Coffey, Jr.

Hank Miller: A Busy Lad

Senior Hank Miller has gone far to disprove the theory that V.U. Engineers have time only for engineering. We offer his four years of extra-curricular achievement, as well as his off campus activities to testify to his broad outlook on life.

Hank came to Villanova after graduating from Xavier High School in New York City. Since he has been matriculating at Villanova he has had four homes in four different states, namely, New Jersey, Kentucky, Kansas and currently California. (He has not seen his home in California.)

All-American

Hank, a Marksman, has been firing at targets for Villanova's rifle team for three years and is currently a candidate for the All-American rifle team which is selected by the NRA. He has been captain and also the high scorer for the past two years. His best score was a creditable 290.

He has been passing on his skill with the rifle by teaching marksmanship at night during the past three years. Aside from his local college students he has also instructed orphans in firing and he enjoyed it so much that he includes it in his future plans.

The three year old varsity rifle team under Miller's inspiring leadership has accumulated an admirable record. The initial year they suffered only one loss, the second they were undefeated and this year's tougher competionthey lost only one.

Aside from the rifle team Hank is active on the WVIL staff in the capacity of Program Director. He is responsible to Villanova's radio listening public and more directly to Station Manager Ed Shea for all the material that goes on the air. This includes all written commercials and scheduling of new programs. Hank qualified for his responsible job on the staff by joining the station early and thus obtaining four years of experience during his stay at Villanova.

A Busy Engineer

Hank has also been a pledgemaster for AKP, the blood donor chairman, a member of ASME and the Villanova Student Committee for Traffic Safety. He has also been a member of the Belle Masque stage crew.

When asked what took up his spare time, Hank philosophically replied, "Who has spare time? It's not that I'm busy all the time, but I can't seem to remember doing anything in any spare time."

Two Great Memories

Hank leaves Villanova with memories of two great events. The first, which affected many of us, was the mass Communion after retreat and second was the honor of being elected captain of the rifle team in his junior year.

He will also never forget having painted those 40,000 windows on the cardboard Empire State Building. This was used as a decoration for the Senior Prom.

Hank says that he dosen't regret leaving Villanova at the moment but is sure he will, come June.

Future Looks Bright

Hank has a big future ahead of him at Douglas Aircraft as a missile test expert.

Honesty Is Still The Best Policy

CHEATING AT COLLEGE—THE WRONG APPROACH:

ACP—Cheat? Forty per cent or more students at a large number of colleges do it with no apology or sense of wrong-doing!

So said a national survey released a few weeks ago. And at least one college journalist makes no effort to refute it.

"This is news?" asks DAKOTA STUDENT columnist Chuck Sakariassen at University of North Dakota. "I thought it was a known, accepted fact!"

Reading the survey results reminded Sakariassen of a recent discussion with a friend after both had "flunked a stinker."

"Men of our calibre," said the friend in dead seriousness, according to Sakariassen, "should have been able to beat that one. If I would have known the set-up, I'll tell you what I would have done . . ." and went on to explain his system.

"I'll swear he must have spent the whole two hours sneaking glances around figuring what he could have gotten away with rather than trying to pass," says the writer. "No wonder he flunked.

"My excuse? I'm just stupid."

He hastens to add: "I don't mean to imply I'm above it. My white bucks are still full of ink marks from last semester's finals.

"What I'm trying to emphasize is how funny we are," he says and goes on to tell how his friend once spent eight hours making crib notes of the semester's material ("really, a work of art") only to find he had unconsciously learned the stuff.

But, Sakariassen finishes, "Is it wrong?

"There are two sides to the question. If you value honesty as a moral virtue I guess you'd say it was. But I sure wouldn't feel guilty glancing at the next guy's paper to find out who Henry VIII's third concubine from the left was if it meant the difference between a B or a C.

"Who said, 'You're only cheating yourself?' (I think it was my fourth grade teacher!)

"Anyway, whoever it was, I disagree. I'll go along with W. C. Fields who said, "Whatever's worth having is worth cheating for."

TWO HARD-HEADS

(ACP)—OKLAHOMA DAILY Editor John Campbell printed the following letter from a reader:

Dear Editor:
From your editorials I gather that:
1. You're against ROTC.
2. You're against the draft.
3. You're against parking meters.
4. You're against campus police.
5. You're against closing the old golf course to spooners.
6. You're against bicycle riders.
What a complete hard-head you must be!
Replied the University of Oklahoma editor:
Dear Sir:
From your letter I gather that:
1. You're in favor of coersive volunteering.
2. You like being drafted.
3. You're in favor of picking pockets already empty.
4. You're father is a cop.
5. You're against love.

HOPE FOR AMERICAN MUSIC

(ACP)—University of Alabama CRIMSON-WHITE columnist Madison Davis sees hope for America's musical future in the rise of calypso music. Says he:

"Harry Belafonte is giving the infamous Presley a run for the money for top spot in record sales. Belafonte's calypso music is the newest and most popular thing in music. America's musical taste is a little better than recent indications. Let's hope this trend will continue."

LIBRARY TYPES

(ACP)—Three "library types" were defined and deplored in a recent DAILY CALIFORIAN editorial.

There is the chatterbox—who must discuss the latest campus political issue or dating technique of a certain fraternity man as soon as he/she gets settled in the reading room.

There are lovers ("always occuring in the plural") whose actions almost force everyone else to stop and speculate on what will happen next.

And there is the groaner—who moans and sighs with every line he reads.

"Maybe we all are, on occasion, a little guilty of being one or all three," says the writer. "But it is time these types recognize themselves for what they are and act accordingly.

"Those suffering from "midtermitis' would appreciate it!"

Record Number of Points Nets All-American Rating

thanking the staff of the paper for its zealous work throughout the entire year."

"It is through the efforts of those who do not make the headlines or the masthead that the Villanovan has achieved its enviable stature as an All-American publication," he added.

Copy Variety "Superior"

In awarding the rating to last semester's Villanovan, ACP judge Gareth D. Hiebert, columnist and former assistant city editor of the St. Paul Dispatch, said the "editorial and inside page features are superior. I like . . . the wide variety of copy generally."

Typography was also singled out for comment by Hiebert, who said that the use of headline faces and body type "fit the format very well."

It was the front page and the use of halftones — photographs used in the paper — for which the Villanovan was particularly praised, however. The front page was of superior quality, with the use and positioning of pictures "exceptionally effective," while use of photographs was praised by Hiebert for "good sizing." He added: "You are doing a bang-up job with photography."

Excellent In Other Spots

Besides the four "superior" qualities, the Villanovan was adjudged "excellent" in numerous other departments: news sources; news stories; feature stories; sports coverage; use of heads; editorial page makeup; nameplate, mast and running heads; editorial page makeup; sports display; inside news display; headline writing and display; and the printing of the twelve page weekly.

Here's a view of Lob Cabin Lodge in Medford Lakes, New Jersey where the annaul senior outing will be held Thursday, May 30, Memorial Day.

Although the rating of All-American has been achieved during four of the past seven semesters, no other staff surpassed the point total recorded by this year's staff. Editors Harry C. Nash III, last year's chief, Edwin K. Daly, '54-55 editor and Richard Winfield, '53-54 editor, all accounted for one semester's All-American rating during their editorial terms, however.

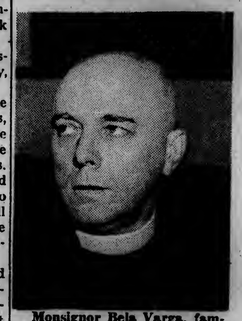
First Time It's Been Done

The high calibre achieved by the past several Villanovan staffs is the only time in the school's history that the paper has maintained skein of four year's top ranking. Prior to Winfield's rule, the highest ACP Rating had been First Class. On several judgings, the Villanovan slipped as low as second-class.

Jack Shea Announces Senior Parting May 30

The Log Cabin Lodge in Medford Lakes New Jersey will be the sight, this year, of the annual senior's parting festival, announced festival chairman Jack Shea.

The affair will be held Thursday, May 30, Memorial Day, from 1 p. m. to 1 a. m.



Surrounding the lodge are baseball and softball diamonds, a riding academy and a lake which will all be open to the seniors for afternoon festivities.

A buffet dinner will be served to the seniors from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m. Following the food will be dancing from 8 to 1 to the music of Buddy Page's Orchestra.

Ticket chairman Bill McCloud announces the price for the affair will be $8. Publicity chairman Ed Shea also announces that both seniors and dates should have age cards with them as minors are not permitted to be served with alcoholic beverages in the State of New Jersey. Drinkers must be 21.

More information about the day as well as directions to the lodge will be posted on the bulletin boards next week.

PATRIOT

Monsignor Bela Varga, famous Hungarian patriot, addresses the first symposium held in as part of the Dedication Ceremonies of Garey Hall. Monsignor Varga spoke on "International Peace."

Night School Dance

The Evening Division of Villanova will sponsor a dance on May 17 in the University Field House, it was recently announced.

The music will be supplied by the Bobby Schiller and his Villanovans, and tickets at $2 per couple can be purchased at the Evening Division Office in Mendel Hall, or from class representatives to the Evening Division Student Council.

'GRAY FLANNEL TOGA' TOP HIT

plays Artemis, the god and goddess of the hunt and archery respectively.

Squat Dan Mullin steals the show with his interpretation of Aphrodite, the goddess of beauty and love, while Klesius plays Bacchus, god of wine and merriment. McCarthy is cast as Athena, the goddess of Wisdom and truth.

Songs Most Enjoyable

Outstanding performances characterize "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," but the most enjoyable part of the two-hour length comedy are the songs, which range in scope from sweet love ballads to farcical lampoons of present society.

Directing this year's show is John Paul Kelly, a former TNT performer. Kelly and assistant Nicholas Rinaldi spent several months with the show after it had been written by Schiller. Working with Mrs. Josephine McCann, the show's choreographer, the two directors began actual staging six weeks ago after the cast and dancing chorus had been chosen.

His First Musical Score

The book for "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga" is Schiller's first attempt at playwrighting. It is, in fact, the first time a student has done anything of that type for the Villanova stage.

After he was asked to write the script last summer, Schiller spent a great deal of time doing research on the title "The Man In The Gray Flannel Toga," which was suggested by Kelly and Bob Whalen, who formerly wrote the words and music.

Several Greek mythology books gave him the subject matter for the show, which is the eleventh Turf and Tinsel production since the club was organized under ex-football coach Harry Stuhldreyer in 1937.

Name Derived From Gridiron

Turf and Tinsel derives its name from Stuhldreyer, who wanted to provide his athletes with activity during the off-season. Originally, only football players could be in the annual show, and from this came the word "Turf", which signifies the football field, "Tinsel" refers to the glitter and glamor that is show business.

Since 1937, the show has been evolving and now includes all students; this year's offering marks the first all-student production.

Tickets for the final shows can be purchased at the Dougherty Hall ticket booth or at the door of the Field House before the show. Prices are $1.00 for students and $1.50 for general admission.

Curtain time for tonight's performance is 8:30 p. m.

The recently organized Semper Fidelis Society is continuing its program of Marine Officer preparation.

Currently among its activities are the Pistol Course at Lower Merion Police Range which terminated today, May 10, and the M-1 rifle familiarization which is being conducted each Thursday at 10:30 in Commodore John Barry Hall.

President Jack Goodyear urges all newly signed PLC and OC's to attend these classes; for, they are considered extremely helpful in preparing for summer training.

Dr. Reuschlein Final Speaker At Lit. Club

Law School Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein addressed the Literary Club last Wednesday evening.

Speaking on the "19th Century English Novel" Dean Reuschlein was the last in this year's series of speakers.

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Science, and Mr. John Slater, of the English department, had been previous speakers this semester.

Membership Drive

The Literary Club will accept members for next year until May 20. Junior Literary Club president Joe Kinney is conducting the membership drive.

Kinney announced that extensive plans have been made for next year. They include additional movies and field trips, including a visit to a major theatrical production in Phila.

Marymount Symposium

Recent activities of the Club have included a presentation of the movie, "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," and participation last week in a Hemmingway Symposium conducted at Marymount College in New York.

The last meeting for this year will be held next Wednesday at 7:30 in 207 C and F. Kinney said that all interested Sophomore Arts students should attend.

Secretary Race Delayed

John Donatucci won the treasurer spot in the class over Greg Lignelli in nothear of the numerous two-man races of the day. Donatucci is the first string shortstop for the Villanova varsity baseball team.

The race for secretary of the class was postponed until yesterday because of a mistake on the ballots. The results were announced too late to appear in this issue.

Ray Lyons won the alumni representative race in a close five-man race. Lyons is a guard on the varsity football team.

Marty Dohaney, President of Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity, was named to the resident Arts student council seat, while Joe Kinney, Associate Editor of the Villanovan and Literary Club President won the day-hop seat in that school.

Fulbright Scholarships Offer Foreign Study Aid

Competitions for Fulbright and Buenos Aires Convention scholarships for graduate study aboard for 1958-59 are now open, it was announced by Kenneth Holland, President of the Institute of International Education.

Fulbright awards for pre-doctoral study and research in Europe, Latin America and Asia cover tuition, books and maintenance for one academic year. The Buenos Aires Convention scholarships provide transportation from the U.S. government and maintenance from the government of the host country.

Must Be Citizen

Eligibility requirements for these foreign study fellowships are United States citizenship, a college degree or its equivalent by the time the award will be used, knowledge of the language of the country of application sufficient to carry on the proposed study, and good health. Preferences is given to applicants not more than 35 years of age.

Countries where U.S. graduate students may study under the Fulbright Act are Australia, Austria, Belgium, Burma, Chile, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, India, Israel, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, the Philippines, and the United Kingdom. In the Asian countries—Burma, India, Japan and the Philippines, as well as in Greece, only a limited number of grants is available, and mature graduate candidates are preferred.

So. America Study Also

Countries participating in the Buenos Aires Convention Program are Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru and Venezuela.

Competition for the 1958-59 academic year closes November 1, 1957. Applicants at academic institutions must abide by the submission deadlines established by their respective Fulbright advisers.

KennedyGets Medallion At Club Dinner

On Tuesday evening, April 30, John M. Kennedy, C and F, '57 was honored by the Philadelphia Chapter, American Marketing Association at the Annual Past-Presidents' Night Dinner at the Adelphia Hotel.

Kennedy and Marketing students from four other local colleges and universities each received a gold medallion. This was the first in a series of annual student marketing awards to be given to outstanding marketing students in the area each spring.

Selected By Professors

Kennedy was chosen for the Marketing Association Award by Professors Frederick M. Burgess and William H. Charlton, co-moderators of the Student Marketing Club and by Professor Joseph C. Savage, Chairman of the Marketing Department.

The presentation was made at the dinner meeting by Professor Burgess who cited Kennedy's 4.00 average and his election to presidency of the Student Marketing Club among other achivements.

Local Schools Represented

Other student marketing clubs represented at the meeting were those from LaSalle College, St. Joseph's College, Temple University and the University of Pennsylvania.

Jack Daly Appointed '58 Belle Air Editor-In-Chief

BY JOSEPH A. McMAHON

Jack Daly, twenty-year old junior from Perth Amboy, N. J., has been appointed Editor-in-Chief of the 1958 Belle Air year book.

The appointment was announced by the retiring Editor-in-Chief of the Belle Air, Dick Schleicher.

Schleicher, a fifth year Engineering student, has recently completed the 1957 edition of the year book.

New Editor Daly, an Industrial Administration major in the C and F school, has been a member of the yearbook staff since his freshman year. He served C and F Activities Editor on this year's staff.

Busy Schedule

Daly in addition to his yearbook work is active in Turf and Tinsel, Delti Pi Epsilon, the Industrial Relations Society and the track team.

He served as co-chairman of the aCtholic High School Press Conference the past two years.

Daly's father is an alumnus of Villanova, having graduated in 1929.

however, and have a half-vote in all proposals made at next year's meetings.

Borrows Slogan

In his inimitable enthusaistic manner Nicholson expressed his gratitude to the electors and promised to borrow the slogan of the Spir Committee—"Helpl ing Villanova by boosting Villanova"—in directing the Council.

Pat is also the Chairman of the Spirit Committee.

Following the acceptance speeches by Kempf, Pinto and Murphy, a motion was made by sophomore Art's student Jack Curtin, representing the LYNX calling for the creation of an Activities' Committee.

Organization Pamphlet

The first duty of the committee would be the publication of a pamphlet listing all recogized organizations to be used for the purpose of acquainting next year's freshman class with the moderators, presidents, and essential backgrounds and functions of every campus organization.

SIGN Editorial Cites Union Inabilities

Calling on the rank-and-file of the Teamsters Union to "rise in their wrath and throw out their evil leaders," The Sign, national Catholic magazine published here, declares in companion-editorials in its May issue that "lurid details of Teamsters mismanagement have driven out the good news of the United Automobile Workers' proposal to safeguard union democracy."

In a signed editorial entitled "Labor's Greatest Enemy," Rev. Ralph Gorman, C.P., editor of the Catholic magazine of 400,000 circulation, nominates Dave Beck "not Sewell Avery nor Wertbrook Pegler nor any of the antiunionists who are now coming out into the light of day seeking to wound or kill organized labor." "The Beck affair," the priest says, "points up the need for the decent elements in organized labor to continue forcefully the clean-up they have already inaugurated."

Crooks Not Limited

"Some legislation regulating unions will undoubtedly result from the Senate investigation, he added. It should not be of a kind to cripple the labor movement. While the public is keeping an eye on evil labor leaders, it should keep another on the enemies of labor who are now prowling around ready for the kill . . . We should remember that the crooks are not limited to the labor movement. For every abuse in organized labor you will find a counterpart in business."

Referring to the UAW's action as "a bold new proposal for a Public Review Board," the second editorial in The Sign asserts, "The dramatic importance of this measure is fully appreciated when we reflect on the processes whereby serious abuses arise in a labor union . . . They can flourish only when democratic control by rank-and-rifle members has broken down . . . The victims lack funds for appeals to the courts . . .

"The UAW procedure prevents this by striking at its very roots. Any aggrieved member or group can by-pass the top appeals procedure of the union and refer a case to this board of distinguished citizens . . . It's is a tribute to President Walter Reuther and the UAW that they undertook this pioneering venture in democracy.

Jack Moynihan, left, incoming Delta Pi Mu president, accepts the fraternity gavel from Jim Judge, this year's president. Moynihan was elected unanimously at the fraternity monthly meeting two weeks ago.

Judge Retires:

Moynihan, Curtin Elected At Monthly DPM Meeting

John Moynihan, junior general-Arts student from Wilmington, Del. has taken over the presidential reigns of the Delta Pi Mu fraternity for the school year of 1957-58. He replaces out-going president Jim Judge, amiable senior from Lockport, New York.

Moynihan was elected at last week's monthly meeting of the fraternity, as was an entirely new staff for next year. Ex-president Judge turned over the gavel, signifying the presidency, to Moynihan at the May meeting of the fraternity last night.

Curtin Vice-President

Elected to the vice-presidency of Delta Pi Mu was sophomore Jack Curtin, sports eritor of the Villanovan. Jack calls Kennet Square, Pa. his home.

The Job of fraternity recording secretary went to Don Kempf, a sophomore from Chicago. Don is the current Student Council representative for Sophomore Class.

Dombrowski Named Sec'y.

Sophomore Al Dombrowski successfully attained the corresponding secretary's position. Al was the only sophomore member on the fraternity's executive council this year. He comes from Long Island.

The task of treasurer went to another sophomore, Tom McPherson, a back on this year's Wildcat football squad. Tom makes his home in Rochester, N.Y.

Executive Council Elected

Delta Pi Mu will be represented on the Student Council next year by senior-to-be Norm Peer of Peering fame.

Also chosen was an executive council for next year. The Class of '58 elected Mike Klesius and Leo Rogers, and the Class of '59 John Ramsarger and Joe Sutton. For the one post allotted to the Class of '60, Guy Ball was chosen.

Three '56 Grads Win Commissions

Three gadruates of the Class of 1956, including an ex-Villanovan columnist, received their commissions as second lieutenants t athe Marine Officers' Basic Course in Quantico, Va. last month.

Don Alton, who inaugurated the Strickly Opion column while in his junior year, has been assigned to the Marine's Flight School at Pensacola, Fla.

Bill Reilly and Larry Contrucci were sent to Camp Pendleton, Calif., following their commissioning on March 16.

CANCELLATION

The Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, Vice-President for Academic Affairs, has announced that the student convocation scheduled for next Tuesday, May 14, will not be held.

"Yes, you'll start in the thick of things as a Burroughs engineer."

(Put yourself in this student engineer's shoes for a minute as he asks a Burroughs representative some important questions.)

Q. What do you mean I'll start "in the thick of things"?

A. I mean you'll start on the work you're trained for; you won't be a man who gets lost in a shuffle.

Q. What kind of work would be open to me at Burroughs?

A. Research and development in ballistic missiles, electronics, computation, data processing, optics, magnetics, communications and electro-mechanics—to mention a few.

Q. Will all my work be in defense?

A. No. Burroughs is a worldwide leader in the business machines and data processing fields. Of course, we've many defense contracts too. And that involves fascinating work in mechanics, electro-mechanics and electronics.

Q. Are all your plants in Detroit?

A. No. We're really on a global scale. Detroit's the home office, of course. Our big research center's in Pennsylvania. We have plants in New York, Michigan, New Jersey, California and Pennsylvania in the U. S., and in Canada, Great Britain, France and Brazil.

Q. What about my future at Burroughs?

A. We at Burroughs feel that young engineers are the key to Burroughs' future expansion. Though our engineering staff has increased seven times since the end of World War II, we are just on the threshold of our biggest expansion. This, plus our promotion-from-within policy, assures an outstanding future for engineers joining Burroughs now!

Q. What about retirement plans, hospitalization, vacations—you know, the fringe benefits, I think they're called?

A. Burroughs is noted for these! In fact, Burroughs pioneered many of them. You'll have hospitalization insurance for both you and your dependents, secure retirement, and educational aid programs, paid vacations and sick benefits, to mention a few.

Opera Classica Installs Officers, Finishes Season

Opera Classica Music Society closed its season last night with Donizetti's Lucia Di Lammermoor at 7:30 P.M., East Lounge, Dougherty Hall. Maria Callas sang the coloratura role on the Angel recording. The usual incredible edibles were served after the opera.

The first annual banquet of the Opera Classica Music Society was held in the Independence Room, Stouffer's, Wynnewood on Tuesday, April 30. Miss Diana Brewster, the star of the newly formed Agora Company in Philadelphia, spoke on "Opera Without Tears."

'Ed Sullivan Way'

Miss Brewster suggested many ways to get Americans interested in opera and implied that the "Ed Sullivan way" was incorrect. She contended that the public had to be educated to accept opera, and she favored national subsides to foster this.

After the lecture, a lively discussion followed with Mr. Angeline supporting subsidies and Mr. Andrew Jackson opposing them citing France as a case in his favor. Richard J. Salisbury, retiring president was toastmaster. Dorothy Boyle, Dean of Women and John De Turck of the administration and faculty were present.

Engineer Awarded Medal

OCMS presented Dino L. Curti, junior in the Engineering Division with the Scholastic Award for having the highest cumulative scholastic average in the Society. His prize was the Angel recording of Rossini's Italian Girl In Algiers.

New officers were installed into the Society. Charles J. Fritz, soph., Accounting, is the new President; William K. Bennett, freshman, Engineering, is Vice President; Clement Novitsky, soph., Marketing, is Secretary; and Theresa Stremba, junior, Nursing, is Treasurer.

On Thursday, May 9 at 10:15, O.C. will present on WVIL—Verdi: Othello—with Del Monaco and Tebaldi (London FFRR). While on Monday, May 13 at 10:15, there will be presented — Mozart: The Magic Flute with Simoneau and Gueden (London FFRR).

VU Recorder Meta Skow Delegate At Annual Meeting

Meta D. Skow, Recorder at Villanova, was a delegate to the 43rd annual meeting of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers held in Denver April 23-26.

More than 500 admissions officials and registrars from colleges and universities throughout the country attended the meeting.

The program of the conference was concerned with better admissions and registrars methods to meet the coming tidal wave of students at the college and university level.

Outstanding Speakers

Besides hearing a number of outstanding speakers in this field, the delegates participated in a series of workshops to discuss their mutual problems and to exchange ideas for solving them.

Dr. Powers Addresses PAV., Appointed Special Advisor

Dr. Eugene P. Powers, dean of Villanov's Evening aDivision, presided over the meeting of The Pennsylvania Audio-Visual Association for Teacher Education on April 12 and 13. The meeting was held at the State Teachers College in East Stroudsburg.

As President of the Association, Dean Powers gave the opening address before the group of teachers assembled to discuss and evaluate audio-visual aids in education.

At the close of the two-day session, Dr. Powers made the summating remarks concerning the achievements of the Association's meeting and the new directions and aims to be persued by the members.

Concern Of Association

The chief concern of the Association is the formulation of a basic outline that will characterize the course in Instructional Materials and Techniques required of all students seeking teacher certification in Pennsylvania.

Dean Powers and the members of the Audio-Visual Association have for many months sought to establish a practicable set of guiding principles and a suggested content for this important facet of teacher training. The meeting on April 12 and 13 offered to the total membership the results of their labor through a series of papers, discussions, and demonstrations of new techniques.

Outline Established

The foremost accomplishment of the Association's gathering, Dr. Powers noted at the close of the session, was the establishment of an outline for the course in Instructional Materials and Techniques that recognized the philosophy of education and the role of the various audio-visual aids in furthering education.

The Pennsylvania Department of Education has taken notice of the Outline, and a study of it is now beign undertaken by the Department.

Revision Committee

The State Department of Education has further recognized the work of the Association by requesting its President, Dean Powers, to serve on a curriculum revision committee of the Department. The committee will meet in Harrisburg on May 7 to begin its survey of methods of improving the entire plan of school studies prescribed by the Commonwealth.

Dr. Powers will function in the committee in the capacity of audio-visual aids consultant. He will indicate wherein such techniques as closed circuit television, slide projection, field trips, and other graphic aids can improve the teaching of the various basic educational subjects.

Belle Air Editor Daly Announces Sr. Portrait Dates

Jack Daly, Editor-in-Chief of the 1958 Belle Air, has announced that senior portraits will be taken for six days, beginning this Friday and continuing through the week of May 13. Seminarians will have their pictures taken Saturday morning, May 14.

Appointment Needed

Daly stresses that it is imperative that all members of the class of '58 who wish to have their pictures in the yearbook have them taken next week, since this is the only time they will be taken.

Appointments for the sittings are being taken now at the Pie Shoppe.

As in the past, Carl Wolf will be the photographer. A one dollar deposit will be required at the time the picture is taken.

Attire for the sittings will be jacket, shirt and tie, and good trousers—no khakis.

Al Jacobs Voted Club Accounting '57 President

Al Jacobs, a junior in the C and F School, will take over the reigns of the Villanova Accounting Society as president next year.

Jacobs was elected at the Society's annual banquet last Thursday. He replaces Jack Patrick.

Other officers elected were Eran Gray, vice-president; Frank Miller, Secretary and Al Zimmerman, Treasurer. They replace Ed Keglovits, Gerry Dougherty and Al Jacobs, respectively.

Society Awards were also presented at the banquet. Bill Eckenrode received the first annual Accounting Society award of $25 savings bond for the senior having the highest average in the society.

Also, Mr. Schaefer, society moderator, received a silver tray in recognition of his 35 years of service with the group.

Reward: $25 to Playright For TNT Spring Production

Could you write a play? Could $25.00 inspire you to attempt it? If so, you are just the man for whom the Turf and Tinsel Club is looking. The T 'n' T has announced a contest to select a script for next year's Spring production.

"The Man in a Gray Flannel Toga" playing this week to capacity crowds in the Field House was a result of the labors of senior Marketing Major, Bobby Schiller.

Redmond Offers Reward

T 'n' T President Joe Redmond hopes that "our next musical comedy will also be authored by an undergraduate." He then went on to say that $25.00 would be awarded to the aspiring playwright whose script was used.

All entries are to be delivered to Mr. Bob Whalen in the Field House ticket office, not later than the first week of school in September.

In length, the play should be 35 double-spaced typewritten pages. Selections will be made by Mr. Whalen, officers of the club, and the director, Mr. John Paul Kelly.

Attention—Playwrights

Any aspiring playwright should keep in mind several points. Sets and costumes must be simple; love interest must be treated delicately with an all male cast. It is not stipulated that songs accompany the play; if included, they will be appreciated.

Finally, the play must be musical and comic. There must be opportunities for interpolation of songs and humor must be present. Tone throughout must be light.

To while away those lonely hours during the summer, why not try your hand at playwriting?

Geo. McCook, New Star-Gazer Pres.

George McCook, Junior Engineer, has been elected to the presidency of the Villanova Astronomical Society for next year.

Also elected at last month's meeting were: James Whelan, sophomore EE, vice president; Frank Winderlich, freshman Arts, secretary; and Joseph Chapley, sophomore Arts, treasurer.

The committee will meet in Harrisburg on May 7 to begin its survey of methods of improving the entire plan of school studies prescribed by the Commonwealth.

Dr. Powers will function in the committee in the capacity of audio-visual aids consultant. He will indicate wherein such techniques as closed circuit television, slide projection, field trips, and other graphic aids can improve the teaching of the various basic educational subjects.

SAVE MONEY! HAVE FUN! Go Home by Train!

SEE HOW LITTLE IT COSTS WHEN YOU TRAVEL TOGETHER!

GROUP ECONOMY FARES are the money-saving answer if you're returning to summer school. Team up with two or more friends bound for your home town. Travel together both ways. On trips of 100 miles or more, you'll each save 25% of the regular round-trip coach fare.*

Or better still . . . COACH PARTY FARES! Round up 25 or more to travel long-distance together on the same homeward train. Then return singly or together for summer school or fall semester and you each save 28% of the regular round-trip fare.

IT'S FUN, TOO! It's all pleasure . . . by train. No traffic delays. Walk around and talk to the gang. Refreshments or delicious meals en route. Plus the comfort and dependability all smart travelers insist upon.

Belle Air Editor Daly Announces Sr. Portrait Dates

Jack Daly, Editor-in-Chief of the 1958 Belle Air, has announced that senior portraits will be taken for six days, beginning this Friday and continuing through the week of May 13. Seminarians will have their pictures taken Saturday morning, May 14.

Appointment Needed

Daly stresses that it is imperative that all members of the class of '58 who wish to have their pictures in the yearbook have them taken next week, since this is the only time they will be taken.

Appointments for the sittings are being taken now at the Pie Shoppe.

As in the past, Carl Wolf will be the photographer. A one dollar deposit will be required at the time the picture is taken.

Attire for the sittings will be jacket, shirt and tie, and good trousers—no khakies.

Day banquet in Dougherty Hall. Main speaker at this steak dinner will be James T. Quirk, distinguished editor of TV Guide. Also speaking at the dinner will be Senior Class President Vince Sullivan, Father Girolami and Mason.

After the dinner, although it is not officially a part of Fathers' Day, the Turf and Tinsel Society of Villanova will present its annual all-male musical comedy on the Field House stage. The show, a riotous farce appropriately entitled "The Man in the Grey Flannel Toga," should provide much high-calibre entertainment for any fathers and seniors wishing to attend.

Chairman Mason urges all seniors who can possibly bring their fathers, guardians or close relatives to the day's activities do so and make this the most successful Fathers' Day yet.

Al Jacobs Voted Club Accounting '57 President

Al Jacobs, a junior in the C and F School, will take over the reigns of the Villanova Accounting Society as president next year.

Jacobs was elected at the Society's annual banquet last Thursday. He replaces Jack Patrick.

Other officers elected were Eran Gray, vice-president; Frank Miller, Secretary and Al Zimmerman, Treasurer. They replace Ed Keglovits, Gerry Dougherty and Al Jacobs, respectively.

Society Awards were also presented at the banquet. Bill Eckenrode received the first annual Accounting Society award of $25 savings bond for the senior having the highest average in the society.

Also, Mr. Schaefer, society moderator, received a silver tray in recognition of his 35 years of service with the group.

Reward: $25 to Playright For TNT Spring Production

Could you write a play? Could $25.00 inspire you to attempt it? If so, you are just the man for whom the Turf and Tinsel Club is looking. The T 'n' T has announced a contest to select a script for next year's Spring production.

"The Man in a Gray Flannel Toga" playing this week to capacity crowds in the Field House was a result of the labors of senior Marketing Major, Bobby Schiller.

Redmond Offers Reward

T 'n' T President Joe Redmond hopes that "our next musical comedy will also be authored by an undergraduate." He then went on to say that $25.00 would be awarded to the aspiring playwright whose script was used.

All entries are to be delivered to Mr. Bob Whalen in the Field House ticket office, not later than the first week of school in September.

In length, the play should be 35 double-spaced typewritten pages. Selections will be made by Mr. Whalen, officers of the club, and the director, Mr. John Paul Kelly.

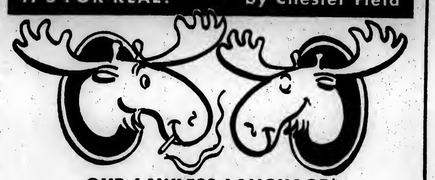
Attention—Playwrights

Any aspiring playwright should keep in mind several points. Sets and costumes must be simple; love interest must be treated delicately with an all male cast. It is not stipulated that songs accompany the play; if included, they will be appreciated.

Finally, the play must be musical and comic. There must be opportunities for interpolation of songs and humor must be present. Tone throughout must be light.

To while away those lonely hours during the summer, why not try your hand at playwriting?

Geo. McCook, New Star-Gazer Pres.



George McCook, Junior Engineer, has been elected to the presidency of the Villanova Astronomical Society for next year.

Also elected at last month's meeting were: James Whelan, sophomore EE, vice president; Frank Winderlich, freshman Arts, secretary; and Joseph Chapley, sophomore Arts, treasurer.

JUNIOR WEEK — 1957

A Tradition Continues

Crowd of Juniors and their moms watch as Pat Nicholson and his mother and Mike Rafferty and his mother plant the class tree in front of Austin Hall.

Tree planting is an annual affair of Mothers' Day and Junior Week. This picture appeared in the Tuesday, April 30 issue of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

May The Best Man Win

"May the best man win," says Jim Moran, Intramural Council President (and he did) as Vince Sullivan, Senior Class President and Bob Mulcahy, Junior Class President shake hands before the Junior-Senior softball game closing out the first annual Junior-Senior Muff Day program. Game, played on Austin Field was won by the Senior 10-8. Highlight of the game was Jaryll Stearn's clutch triple and steal of home off Pat Nicholson for the deciding runs.

Two Years Of Beauty

Mass With Mother

Palm Trees And Music

Villanovans and their dates enjoy the surrounding South Pacific theme as they dance to the music of Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians during the Junior Prom Friday night the Field House. Some 450 couples attended the prom.

The Villanovans 'Jazz It Up'

Bobby Schiller and the Villanovans are really jumping the jazz concert Wednesday night of Junior Week. A huge crowd packed the Field House to hear them and Carl Waxman's All Stars beat out some dixie-land.

Low-Rate European Tours Now Sponsored by NFCCS

Thinking of a summer in Europe? Thinking this might not be the summer to go? The Catholic Youth Travel Office asks you to think again, because this summer CYTO can give you better value than ever before in one of its four European tours.

Travel conditions in Western Europe remain better than good, according to reports in the March 11 issue of TIME magazine and the March 3 International Travel Section of the New York TIMES. This means that this summer is the time to take advantage of the continuing low rates for CYTO tours, sponsored by the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Ten European Nations

For less than $1000, students on CYTO Tour "D" visit ten European nations—a value that challenges comparison. Tour "A" take the tour-goer to the six countries that are "musts" for only $695. Further information on these and on tours "B" and "C" is available from your NFCCS travel chairman, sophomore Frank Fleming.

CYTO Membership in the Council on Student Travel gives students to Europe-bound liners the advantage of TRIP, the Travelers' Recreation and Information Program.

One of last year's tour-goers says of TRIP, "Almost all of us availed ourselves of its many services and some of us helped behind the scenes to organize and present the activities. There was always something to do . . . The heads of the various activities were capable, well-trained people.

"The organization sponsors games, dances, dance lessons, tournaments, panel discussions (often on current foreign affairs), lectures, religious activities, a daily newspaper, lessons in many different languages and talks and films especially for immigrants."

For further information, contact your campus travel chairman, or write to Catholic Youth Travel Office, One Thomas Circle, Washington 5, D.C.

Nurses Meet, Plan 12 Week Prep Course

On campus, representatives from the Community Nursing Service of Delaware County and the Division of Public Health Nursing of the Philadelphia Department of Public Health met for a two day workshop.

This was part of a curriculum project to discuss ways and means of preparing nurses for beginning positions in public health nursing, and to study what competencies the student can be expected to achieve within a planned twelve-week course.

Representatives from the Philadelphia Department of Health included Mrs. Eleanor Lefson, leader of the Workshop, Miss Mary Cahill and Miss Elsie Hugo.

The Community Nursing Service of Delaware County was represented by Miss Olga Kotalik, Miss Dorothy Sidnre and Mrs. Margaret Robinson.

Villanova University was represented by Miss Harriet D. Murphy, Recorder and Miss Marcetta Horne.

Greater Pittsburghers Pioneers In Area Clubs

Have you been seeing or hearing the abbreviation GPV around campus and wondering what these letters stand for. These letters are the abbreviation for the Greater Pittsburgh Villanovans. What are the Greater Pittsburgh Villanovans? They are the members of the Greater Pittsburgh Club of Villanova, the first and only area club on the campus in recent years.

Formed in October, 1956, by a few avid Pittsburghers, this organization is the talk of many Villanovans in, and outside the Pittsburgh area. They have been thinking of forming their own area club, but have been waiting to see the progress of the GPV.

The GPV began their social functions with a Christmas dance in the main ballroom of the Hotel Webster Hall in Pittsburgh. Many more dances are being planned both in Pittsburgh and here at Villanova.

Club League Planned

Another activity in the planning stage is the sponsoring of an intra-mural team in all sports. When the other area clubs are formed, if any, they could also enter teams and eventually a league of area teams could be organized.

Alumni Promoted

In promoting interest in Villanova in the high schools of the Pittsburgh area, the club is undertaking the task of presenting the schools with Villanova catalogues and other literature. The most important function of the Greater Pittsburgh Club of Villanova will be the promoting of an active alumni in the Pittsburgh area.

Any Villanovan, male or female, who wishes to join the greater Pittsburgh Club of Villanova, may contact any of the following officers; Tony Rossi '59, Bill Wescott '58, Paul Laughlin '58 or Mike Rafferty '58.

"What's it like to be

A PHYSICIST AT IBM?"

Five years ago, college senior Nick Hemmer asked himself this question. Today, as Administrative Assistant to the Quality Control manager, Nick reviews his experience at IBM and gives some pointers that may be helpful to you in taking the first, most important step in your career as a physicist.

"I was tremendously impressed," says Nick, "by my first plant tour. When you go through the facilities—meet the men and get an idea of the problems they handle—you can't help but become interested. Add the friendly, informal work atmosphere, and you know right off the bat these people have a story to tell."

Nick came to IBM in 1951 with a B.S. in physics. He started as a Technical Engineer—in Test Equipment Engineering—working on an analog bombing system. When that project moved from the Endicott to the Poughkeepsie plant, Nick followed it, becoming first an Associate Engineer, then a Project Engineer. As the latter, he worked on IBM's first transistorized electronic computer—the 608.

Heading up Quality Engineering

By November, '55, Nick was heading up Quality Engineering in the Quality Control Division of the Poughkeepsie plant. Recently promoted to Administrative Assistant to the Quality Control manager, Nick now concerns himself with the fundamental operations and policies of this 450-man division. Quality Control is responsible for the performance of IBM's vast array of business machines—from simple sorters and punches to the "electronic brains."

What an IBM physicist does

"The problems of Quality Control in this business are endless," Nick reports, "and fascinating to the physicist. There's process control—of the manufacture of components such as transistors and cores . . . of the contents of a gas . . . of the concentricity of an etch solution . . . of the diffraction of alloys . . . or of the properties of metals, such as the resistivity of germanium. Then, there are the important 'analysis of failure' and reliability studies, in which you seek to determine, for example, the 'life expectancy' of a device, the mean time between failures, or perhaps which step in a process has the greatest effect on the equipment involved. You may be asked to control the deposit of glass on X-ray tubes to avoid spill-over, or microscopic spotting. Or you may be dealing with arc-suppression, or gaseous electronics, the grass roots of instrumentation; or in the estimation of tolerances, or in correlation coefficients—that is, in physically sound numbers."

Problems fascinating to the physicist

Extensive educational facilities

Nick has been instrumental in encouraging many college physics majors to come to IBM. "I find they're interested in questions like these," he says: "How would you go about determining the 'life' of electrons in transition from the valence to the conduction band?" Or, in the manufacture of magnetic inks, "How can the grain size of the iron content be controlled . . . or its viscosity regulated over wide temperature ranges? How would you control the concentration and concentricity of colloidal solutions?" "Present a job in terms of actual problems," believes Nick, "and you'll get the man's interest—for it's his career and his future that have top priority."

How about further study?

Nick has taken full advantage of IBM's extensive educational facilities to get ahead at IBM. He took at least one course each semester on subjects within his immediate work area—courses on digital and analog computers and on their components such as cores and transistors. He found time to take management courses as well. "If you want opportunity for study," Nick says, "IBM will provide all you want."

Promotion almost inevitable

Asked about opportunities for advancement at IBM, Nick says, "The situation could hardly be better in that respect. With sales doubling every five years on the average, promotion is almost inevitable."

IBM hopes that this message will help to give you some idea of what it's like to be a physicist at IBM. There are equal opportunities for E.E.'s, M.E.'s, mathematicians and Liberal Arts majors in IBM's many divisions—Research, Manufacturing Engineering, Sales and Technical Services. Why not drop in and discuss IBM with your Placement Director? He can supply our latest brochure and tell you when IBM will next interview on your campus. Meanwhile, our Manager of Engineering Recruitment, Mr. R. A. Whitehorne, will be happy to answer your questions. Just write him at IBM, Room 0000, 590 Madison Ave., New York 22, N.Y.

Paul Tagliaferri Presides At Final Spanish Meeting

The Spanish Club held its final meeting of the year yesterday under the direction of the newly elected officers. Plans for the coming year were outlined and discussed.

Paul Tagliaferri, junior Arts student, replaces Mike Ford as President of the Club.

Other new officer are: Henry Tacconelli, Vice President; Ben Hynes, Secretary; Clayton Thomas, Treasurer; and Joseph Koman, Student Council Representative.

Koman is the Club's first representative on the council since the organization was awarded a seat earlier this year.

US Civil Service Examination Open For Engineers

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for Engineering Aid, Mathematics Aid, Physical Science Aid, Engineering Technical and Physician. The entrance salaries range from $3,175 to 5,440 a year.

Appropriate experience or education, or a combination of education and experience is required. No written test will be given.

Further information and application forms may be obtained at many post offices throughout the country or from the U.S. Civil Service Comission, Washington 25, D.C. Applicants will be accepted by the U.S. Civil Service Commission in Washington until further notice.

Former Villanovan Editor Now In AF

James H. Glavin, former Features and News Editor on the Villanovan has been assigned to Headquarters, 314th Troop Carrier Wing, Stewart Air Force Base, Tenn.

Glavin graduated from Villanova in 1953 and attended Albany Law School. Prior to entering the service he practiced with his father in Waterford and in Binghamton.

Assistant Dean Thomas O'Toole and the Honorable Bernard Shanley, Assistant to the President admire a portrait of the late benefactor of the law school, Eugene Garey. Mr. Shanley spoke at the Law School Dedication Ceremonies.

Acquire Academic Credits, Golf, Swim During Summer

Summer School at Sun Valley, Idaho, will again this year give students from all parts of the country a chance to combine summer study with a trip into new and interesting country and the opportunity to enjoy all the recreational facilities at the Union Pacific's famous vacation resort.

All the courses offered give credits transferable to other colleges and universities and as last year, will find plenty of time so that the work will stand up under closest academic scrutiny. Students are limited to enrollment in seven study units—with classes offered in two or three unit academic credits each. Class sessions are 90 minutes each, five days a week.

Ice Skating Offered

In spite of heavy study programs, students, as was proven last year, will find plenty of time for fun. The outdoor artificial ice rink will provide an opportunity for practicing figure skating in any free hour between classes and the golf course, tennis courts and swimming pools are all readily accessible. Weekends will give time for picnics and for fishing in the fine trout streams nearby or for sight-seeing expeditions into the primitive area of Idaho, to which Sun Valley is the gateway.

The success of the summer school last season has led to an expanded curriculum this year. English will include Modern Novel, Shakespeare, Contemporary Drama, Creative Writing, Advanced Public Speaking and Little Theatre.

Ed Courses Given

This year's education courses will be Education Psychology, Measurements and Evaluation and Audio-Visual methods of Instruction. Courses in Business Law, Political and Social History of Twentieth Century Europe and American National Government have been added to the list of studies.

Courses in art, music, psychology and sociology are in the curriculum and the physical education department offers golf, modern dance, swimming and human anatomy.

Guest Profs Lecture

Prominent guest professors will supplement the faculty of the College of Idaho in these courses presented July 8 to August 16.

Rates for tuition are $150 for six credit hours. Courses may be taken for non-credit but no reduction will be made for non-credit courses. Rooms and meals are $45 a week.

Complete information about the summer school can be had by writing to Dr. Donald J. Mammen, Director of Summer Sessions, the College of Idaho, Caldwell, Idaho.

That's a question only you can answer. But, if you are an engineer, consider this...

Everywhere the development of electronic marvels is creating overwhelming demands for more electric power. There will be more automation for industry. Many of today's routine jobs will be done automatically by an electronic specialist operating a giant production line. Tomorrow's home-owner will sleep in a bed encircled by the warming rays of a radio frequency canopy. No covers will be required, no beds will ever have to be made. Electronic computors will take much of the risk out of the farmer's daily combat with the elements—help him to grow more and better foods.

These and countless other marvels will become realities as fast as young men with the ability, imagination, and courage can be found to make them so.

If you are this kind of man, looking for this kind of future, get the complete facts about the electric utility industry by talking to your placement counselor or to the personnel director of one of Pennsylvania's electric power companies. Or write to Pennsylvania Electric Association, State Street Building, Harrisburg, Pa., telling them where you would like to live and work.

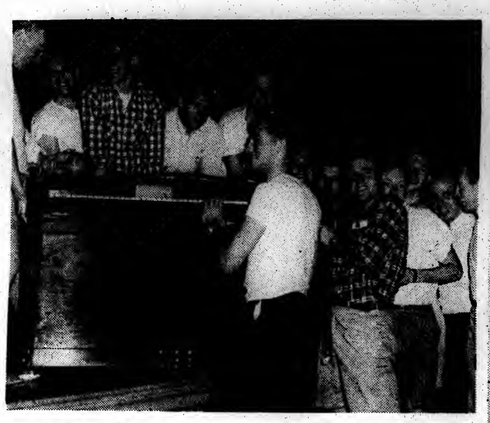
T'NT PRESENTS:



"THE MAN IN THE GRAY FLANNEL TOGA"

TNT's dancing chorus looks grim as it goes through one of its intricate routines during a rehearsal last week. The 1957 spring production, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," enjoyed a successful opening night at the Field House on Wednesday.

Dave Belcher, Andy Iaccarino (seated) and Art Kelly go through their lines at a rehearsal last week prior to Wednesday night's successful opening performance of "The Man In the Gray Flannel Toga," the Turf and Tinsel Club's spring production.

A team effort consisting of cast, dancing chorus, and stage crew is successful n getting the piano in position during one of TNT's practice sessions last week.

Take-a-break during the recent rehearsals for Turf and Tinsel's 1957 hit show, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga," finds cast members (top to bottom) Don Bragg, Mike Klesius, Gary Tackas, Chubby McCarthy, and an anguished Dan Mullin clowning for the cameraman.

Gerry Gobright, Al Severance, Bob Van Dine, and Joe Lynch strut hand in hand across the stage in one of TNT's practice sessions in the Field House last week. The show, which had a hit opening Wednesday night, will run tonight and tomorrow night at the Field House.

Andy Iaccarino, Appollo of Greak mythological fame, makes a pass at Kyrene, a woodland goddes, during a practice session of TNT's new hit show, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga."

The stage crew works as hard as the cast. Ed Lizut, Paul Floyd, and Mike Marra prepare to haul some props to the top of the Field House.

SPORTS CHATTER

A Day of Encouragement

By JACK CURTIN

Last Saturday's Blue-White Day extravaganza was a type of sports activity peculiar to Villanova alone in this area, and was certainly worth attendance. A chance to view all of the Villanova athletic teams within a space of four hours is not one to be turned down by any athletically minded person.

However, to this writer's mind, the most significant revelation of the whole afternoon was contained in Athletic Director Frank Reagan's greeting to the public on the inside cover of the Blue-White Day program.

Plans Made Public

In this short message, Reagan made known publicly the plans which he revealed through this column a few months back. They include the addition of 4000 more seats to Goodreau Stadium by next season, improvement of sanitation facilities, the relocation of a new and modern press box and the eventual enclosure of the whole East end of the stadium in a horseshoe.

These plans are far from half-formed dreams. Blue prints have been drawn up and will be presented to the Administration very shortly. Should they be approved, and certainly the need is great enough that they should be, pending any unknown circumstances, Reagan hopes to get work underway within the near future, possibly this month.

It seems very likely that these improvements will have been made by the time we return to campus next September. They, plus the new regulation six-lane track completed this year, will give the old stadium a much needed new look and make Reagan's back-to-the-campus a real boost. A pat on the back seems very much in demand for the hard working football mentor.

Look For Baylor Surprise

The football work-out, speaking of the coach, was also highly impressive. Both squads seemed swift and rugged, but the Wildcats don't seem quite ready yet to give up their high national rating in defensive tactics.

Since next season's opener with Baylor will be played at night, and not under that hot Texas sun, look for a surprise that may stun the nation's sportswriters, particularly some of our Philadelphia friends who don't seem to know we're a local team.

While, after last year's faux pas, very few writers will chance a high prediction for the Villanova courtmen, this writer saw signs of yet another surprise in Saturday's outdoor loss to the Alumni. Newcomers John Scott, a transfer student from North Carolina, and George Raveling, second leading scorer on the freshman squad, showed promise of much added rebounding strength for coach Al Severance.

Track Dominance Not At End

The track team was as marvelous as ever. Those who feel that the Villanova dominance of the cinders and banked boards will end with the graduation of seven men this June may find that they will have to eat their words. The ever-versatile Charley Stead and middle distance ace, Ed Collymore, seem quite ready to move in and maintain the legend of Villanova's Big Five, replacing Don Bragg and Charley Jenkins, and the team as a whole still shows fine depth.

Perhaps the whole theme of the sports spectacular was encouragement. Villanova has held an enviable place in the athletic spotlight throughout the years, and now look to be on the move again to even greater achievement after a short period of revitalization.

What happens in the next year will be extremely significant.

Wildcats Take Three Penn Relay Titles; Mile Contest Featured, Bragg Sets Mark

The runners stood at the line with the eyes of the huge crowd in Franklin Field upon them. This was it, the Mile Relay, the long-awaited match between Villanova and Texas Universities, the two contenders for top relay honors.

The scene was the 1957 Penn Relays. Both teams held two relay championships moving into this much publicized encounter, with Villanova the defending champs.

Jenkins, Delany Are Iron-Men

Villanova's relay wins had come easily. With Charley Jenkins and Ron Delany playing an iron man role, the Wildcats had successfully defended their titles in the Sprint and Distance Medleys.

The first win had come Friday in the distance event. Eddie Collymore had clocked his fastest time ever in the 440 distance, 48.6, to give the Wildcats a lead. Jenkins and Alex Breckinridge ran the half and three-quarter mile respectively, and then Delany's 4:19.3 mile brought the Mainliners the title in 10:10.7.

A 3:24.3 timing had brought the Wildcats victory in the Sprint Medley Saturday afternoon. Gene Maliff, Al Peterson, Jenkins and Delany combined to outdistance the field by 50 yards.

Bragg Sets Record

In the individual events, Don Bragg set a new relay record as he went 14'6" in the pole vault to give Villanova still another title. Phil Reavis went 6'7½" in the high jump to notch second place, while Bob Holup placed fourth in the high hurdle event.

But this was the big one, the race that had the eyes of the nation upon it.

The gun sounded and the runners were off. Ed Collymore, Wildcat lead off mna, opened up to sprint in front of the pack and give Charley Stead a ten yard lead.

Stead moved way out, gaining an 18 yard advantage, but died out in the last few yards to be passed by Texas and Manhattan. Now it was up to Delany, running about ten yard back.

Blue-White Crowd Sees Trackmen Set Four Records

By BILL VINCENT

Terry Hayes, Wildcat catcher who played right field against St. Joseph's because of an injured ankle lines up a pitch which he belted for a double in the Wildcats 9-5 victory over the Hawks on Blue-White Day.

The Wildcat varsity teams once again made a fine showing before the public at the fifth annual Blue-White Day held last Saturday.

Villanova's IC4A and AAU Indoor Track champions won all but two events in downing La-Salle 87-38.

The highlight of the meet was Don Bragg's pole vaulting. He cleared fifteen feet to set a new record for the Villanova stadium and he just missed going over at 15'3" but he knocked off the bar with his arm on his descent. Thr[illegible] his 15 foot jump, Bragg became the first collegiate pole vaulter to clear this height in the surrounding area.

First Bragg—Then Delany

Another highlight of the meet was Ron Delany's victory in the half mile. His time of 1:53.5 set another track record.

Sophomores Charley Stead, Jim McGroaty and Ed Collymore and three year veteran Alex Breckinridge each won two events.

Stead tied Phil Reavis at the track record height of 6'5" in high jump and won the 220 yard low hurdles in 24.5 to set an automatic track record.

Collymore won the 100 and 220 yard dashes in 10.1 and 22.1 respectively, while Breckinridge copped his specialities, the mile and two mile. His time for the mile was 4:19.1 and he came back an hour later to win the two mile in 9:34.

McGroaty Takes Two

McGroaty took the javelin with a throw of 159'7" and the shot with a heave of 49'8".

Other Villanova winners included Olympic champion Charley Jenkins in the 440 and Jim Fahey in the discus. Jenkins time for the 440 was 49.3 while Fahey heaved the discus 136'4".

However, track wasn't the only sport on the program, and the other Wildcat teams also made fine showings.

In the basketball game a star studded Old Timers team, led the Warrior great Paul Arizin, defeated the varsity 47-42. High man for the winners was Nick Maguire with 12 points, while freshman George Raveling led all scores with 15 points.

Parr Scores Twice

In a intrasquad football game the Blue Team defeated the White Team 27-12. Davey Parr and Leon Horin were the men of the hour for the Blue as they racked up two touchdowns, each while Bill Halligan and Dave Intrabartolo each scored six pointers for the White. The Blue's extra points were kicked by Rick Sapienza.

In the baseball game the Wildcats broke up a 3-3 tie to beat St. Joseph's 9-5. The winning pitcher for the varsity was Bob Scalsi and Charley DiGiovanni led the hitting brigade for the Wildcats with a home run and two doubles.

The varsity golf team defeated the Alumni 9½-2½ at Aronimink Country Club and the water polo team dropped an 8-7 decision to Penn.

In the other victory the locals got 15 hits, being led by John Donatucci's four safeties. Joe Michell struck out seven batters to notch the vic

Villanova Crushed 11-2 By LaSalle and Penn State; Win Twice by 16-3 Scores

Two 11-2 losses added to Villanova's woes last week prior to the Blue-White Day win over St. Joseph's.

On Friday the Wildcats were routed by LaSalle as they could turn their eight hits into only two runs. The Mainliners led only in the first inning as they scored one run. LaSalle came back with two in the top of the second and was never again headed.

Leroy Sheehan and Mike Schlacter drove in three runs for the Explorers.

Larry Massotti, Terry Hayes and Hank Nichols all had two hits for Villanova. Jack Kelly absorbed the pitching loss.

Get Only Six Hits

The day before the Villanovans were handed an identical loss by Penn State on their opponents field. Villanova managed only six safeties while State collected 11 off three Villanova pitchers.

The lone Wildcat runs came in the seventh frame when Ron LaMontagne's triple scored Charley DiGiobanni and George Emma. Joe Michell took the loss.

A suspense-filled 1-0 loss to Temple on Junior Mother's Day last Monday was perhaps the best game played over the last three weeks.

Temple's Charley Bergdoll threw a brilliant one hit performance against the Wildcat's Jack Kelly, who pitched almost equally as well.

Score In Sixth

The tall lefty matched Bergdoll pitch for pitch through the first five innings. Then, in the sixth, with two Owls on base, Temple third baseman, John Granozio, hit a run-producing single for the game's only tally.

Charley DiGiovanni beat out an infield roller in the fifth for Villanova's only hit.

On the 27th, the Wildcats dropped an 8-2 decision to Seton Hall, as the Pirates bombed the local's hurling for 11 base hits.

The Villanova nine got their only two runs in the second inning on a double by LaMontagne and a single by Dick Black, and again in the fourth on two singles and an error.

Two 16-3 Victories

The two victories during the period also came by identical scores. They came on the 13th and 17th of April as the Wildcats walloped Rutgers of South Jersey by 16-3 scores.

Against Rutgers, Villanova batters had a field day, smashing 20 hits off the opposing hurlers. Larry Massotti paced the Mainliners with five safeties, while John DiGiallorenzo and Ron LaMontagne each added four to the impressive total.

Dick Black was the winning pitcher.

Bragg Chosen Standout Sr. '57 Athlete

Don Bragg was named Villanova's Outstanding Senior Athlete during the Sports Night activities held on April 30.

A cheering audience of Villanova students watched for two hours as a panorama of Wildcat athletics passed before its eyes. The show was a part of the Class of 1958's Junior Week's activities.

Students Named Bragg

The presentation of the award to Bragg, Villanova's nationally famous pole vaulter, came as a result of the ballots cast by the student body a few hours before.

The award is based on an athlete's contribution to the university, both as a student and an athlete. Extra-curricular activity participation is also taken into consideration.

The Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O.S.A., athletic historian of the university, gave a short talk on the problems facing the committee that is compiling an athletic history of the school and promised that it would be ready within a year.

Also featured were several films of Villanova sport thrills during the past year.

Olympic Films Shown

Films of the 1956 Olympics, showing Ron Delany and Charley Jenkins winning the 1500 meter and 400 meter races brought the students to their feet cheering, as did the showing of Delany's breaking the four minute mile last June in California.

Also shown was the football contest between Villanova and Boston University last fall which the Wildcats won, 28-14. This game was the occasion for the Villanova student football trip last October.

An added attraction was a short film showing the training of thoroughbred horses for racing at Garden State race track.

Villanovans Third In Iona Meet; Beat Navy, Penn State

By JERRY HOGAN

The Villanova track team recently opened its outdoor season with meets at Iona, Annapolis and the Penn Relays. These were just the preliminaries for the rest of the outdoor season which includes meets against St. Joseph's —May 14, Quantico—May 25, the I.C. 4A's — May 30 to June 1 at Randall's Island and the N.C.A.A. Championships in Texas—June 15-16.

At the Iona Relays, the first outdoor meet of the season, the 'Cats showed the results of the three week lay-off between the indoor and the outdoor season. Manhattan, which doesn't take a break between indoor and outdoor, came in first in the team scoring with 72 points, Yale was second with 45 and Jumbo Jim Elliott's Villanovans finished third with 21½ points.

Kopil Out For Season

Coach Elliott had to let two major events go by, the two mile and four mile relays because John Kopil came up with a bad leg which will sideline him for the season.

The mile relay team of Gene Maliff, Ed Collymore, Ron Delany and Charley Jenkins waltzed home the victor over Manhattan in the relatively slow time of 3:19.1.

In addition to the mile relay, the 'Cats also scored in the distance medley relay with Al Peterson (880), Charley Stead (440), Vic Di Maio (¾ mile) and Alex Breckinridge (mile). The time was 10:34.3. Alex running a beautiful 4:17.3 mile, closed a 40 yard deficit and won easily by 25 yards.

Jenkins led off the sprint medley with a 51.4 second quarter. John Furlinger and Gene Maliff running the 220's gave Ronnie a ten yard lead. The Olympic Champ loped in a five yard winner with a clocking of 1:54.

Bragg Stopped By Sickness

Phil Reavis, jumping for the first time in three weeks, was tied by Morgan State Bob Barksdale at 6'6¼". Don Bragg ddn't vault because of sickness.

In their final tune up prior to the Penn Relays, the 'Cats nipped Navy and Penn State in a trianglar meet, April 20, at Annapolis.

The final score was Villanova 59, Navy 57½ and Penn State 45½.

The score was close due to the fact that John Kopil is out for the season, Phil Reavis didn't compete because of an operation on his teeth and George Sydnor pulled a muscle while running a leg of the mile relay. This unfortunately put Sydnor out of the Penn Relays.

Collymore, Jenkins Win

The 100 and 220 furlong were won by Eddie Collymore, the flashy sophomore. The former Mass. State 220 Champ just nipped Charley Jenkins in the 220, but Charley rebounded in his speciality with a 48.5 clocking to take first.

Ron Delany trotted home first in both the mile and half mile runs and Alex Breckinridge ran a beautiful two mile after losing to Ron by a step in the mile.

Both Don Bragg and Charley Stead established Navy track records. Bragg vaulted 14'9¾" and Charley leaped 6'7½".

The most important of the upcoming meets are the N.C.A.A. the and I.C.A.A.A.A.

Manattan Again

In the I C's the stiffest competition will undoubtedly come from Manhattan's hordes. Recently at the Penn Relays they took both the two mile and four mile relays and exhibitied much power in doing it.

Mainline Golfers Boast 4-3 Record After Blanking Scranton; Look Impressive

The Villanova golfing season is now three weeks old, and the Wildcat varsity linksmen have posted a 4-3 record against the first seven opponents on the 1957 schedule, having won their last three matches in a row.

Veteran golfer Ben Klemanowicz is captaining the Wildcats this season, holding the post for the second straight year. Other members of the squad are Frank Kruse, Jay Gibney, Jim Burle, Bill Mawn, Ronnie Zurinskas Roger Gaire and Nick Daquilino.

Zurinskas Impressive

Team manager Bill McCloud has rated the team as "very much improved," and states that all the participants are looking forward to bettering last season's 7-5 record. He also labeled sophomore Ron Zurinskas as "a real comer."

One of the bright spots in the team's future arises from the fact that it has seven underclass members, four juniors and three sophomores. Klemanowicz is the only senior member.

Last Thursday afternoon the Mainliners posted their most impressive win of the season, shutting out Scranton University, 9-0. The match was held on the Aronomink Golf Course which serves as Villanova's home club.

Jim Burle shot a 74 to lead the squad in the win, while Klemanowicz posted a 79.

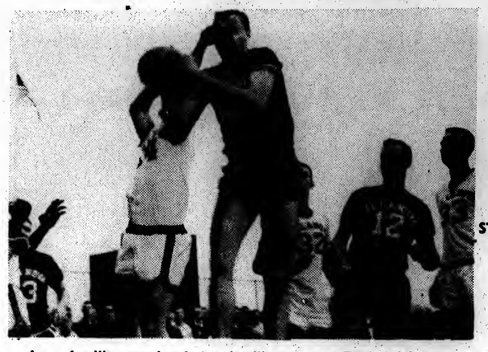
Crush Haverford

Earlier, the golfers scored a more one-sided victory that just missed being shut-out as they downed Haverford, 16½-1½, at Aronomink.

The week before they annihilated Drexel to the tune of a 14½-3½ score. Ironically, this meet marked captain Klemanowicz's only defeat of the season. This match was held at the Springfield course.

Against Penn, both Klemanowicz and Frank Kruse were highly impressive in taking their Quaker opponents. Ben shot a 75 to outlast Penn's Franny Poore, who is rated one of the best collegiate golfers in the East.

Kruse turned in a 74 score card in besting Bob Ray of Penn.



St. Joe's, LaSalle Upcoming

Aside from the Blue-White Day meet with the Alumni, held last Saturday, upcoming opponents will be familiar names on a Villanova athletic schedule.

Contests are listed with St. Joseph's, LaSalle, Muhlenburg and Seton Hall.

An unfamiliar number but a familiar pose as Paul Arizin comes off with a rebound during the varsity-oldtimers Blue-White Day basketball game, won by the oldtimers, 47-42. Joe Lord, George Raveling, Tom Brennan, Brooks Ricca, and Dick Scott watch as frosh Bob Ward goes after Arizin.

Olympic gold-medaler Charley Jenkins, Ed Collymore, and pole-vaulter Don Bragg hustle to the finish line in the 100 yd. dash.

Don Bragg twists over the bar at 15 feet as he fulfills a vow made after he won the Senior Class Outstanding Athlete Award last week. Don promised to do 15 feet in the Blue-White Day pole-vault when he heard the students had selected him outstanding athlete.

Senior swimmer Don Coulg, goalie during the Blue-White Day water polo match with Penn, bites his lip as he prepares to bat away a goal attempt. Penn won the match, 8-7 with a score in the last 5 seconds.

Track was the highlight of Blue-White Day as the Wildcats great runners pounded LaSalle, 85-38. Here, Charley Stead clears the last hurdle as he races to the finish line ahead of LaSalle opponent.

Ten Graduating Seniors Important To Track Conquests

By JACK CURTIN

Ten seniors are graduating from the Villanova track squad in June. Two of these men, who have made Jumbo Elliott's Wildcat unit one of the most famous and powerful teams in the history of trackdom, are world famous; the other eight are oftentimes allowed to go unnoticed.

It is to these eight, the men who worked in the shadows of the super-stars, the men who added the depth that made the Villanova team great, that this article is dedicated.

An Affable Shadow Dweller

Perhaps the best known of the Wildcat shadow dwellers is the affable Alex Breckinridge. The modest, sincere Breckinridge is considered one of the nation's top competitors in the two mile run. A consistent point getter, Alex has played an important role in the rise of the Mainliners to top ranks of the world's track teams.

Breckinridge is a native of Glasgow, Scotland, but, having been born in Buffalo, N.Y., he is a United States citizen .

An outstanding long distance runner, Breckinridge has been an outstanding member of the university's cross-country team.

Little Johnny Kopil's name is also a familiar one to the nation's track enthusiasts. One of three seniors who came from Bayonne, N.J., four years ago, John has also been a regular point contributor, although his chances of winning a race have been mighty slim. John competes in the mile behind the unbelieveable Ron Delany.

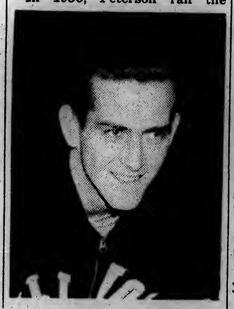
Kopil Highly Ranked

Kopil is ranked as one of the

JOHN KOPIL

best college milers around today, and turned in a 4:10 performance in Boston this year.

The most forgotten of all men are usually the members of the mile relay team.



Leadoff man for the Wildcats most of this season has been 21 year old Gene Maliff. His job is to bring Villanova in a lead at the end of the first quarter, a job he has fulfilled conscienciously, to say the least.

One of the toughest competitors on the Wildcat squad, Gene failed to hand the second runner the baton with a lead only once during the indoor season. That was in the Millrose Games when he fell on the first turn

Al Peterson, like John Kopil, is another little guy with a big competitive heart. A man who can be counted on for valuable points when the score is close, Al has been a steady member of the championship relay team.

Ran Anchor In 1956

In 1956, Peterson ran the

AL PETERSON

anchor leg on the medley relay team which won the A.A.U. indoor championship.

A four year Navy veteran, John Furlinger, returned to school this year to play a prominent part in the Villanova story. When sophomore Bill Rahn was injured, John stepped into his shoes on the relay squad to become a member of the team that crossed the line with the final points to make the Wildcats A.A.U. indoor champions.

Furlinger was a member of the Villanova sprint medley team which established a world record in 1949.

George Browne is the sixth member of this group of Villanovans. Browne did not see much competition this year, but did run in the Philadelphia Inquirer Games and on Blue-White Day.

Two other men are added to our list of graduates when we move outdoors. Both men, Ron Cherubini and Jim Fahey, are better known to Villanova fans in other athletic areas.

These are the men about whom we have heard little or nothing. They are also the men who have made possible the capturing of the two major indoor track titles by Villanova.

Years from now, only the names like Jenkins and Bragg will stick in our memory, but somewhere in the university records these eight men will be remembered—the men who made Villanova a track team.

Charley Jenkins, Olympian, Departs As An Era Closes

When a class graduates from a college it is always easy to find people on the campus who lament the departure of their friends and sometimes idols. This year it will be more than easy to find scores of underclassmen and administrators about Villanova University missing the same member of class of 1957. Perhaps this feeling will not reach its peak until sometime next winter when all Villanovans will become aware that the world's greatest middle distance runner is no longer a member of the Villanova track team.

At first it will be a matter of awaking on Sunday mornings without being greeted by headlines beginning "Villanova's Charley Jenkins." This feeling will grow as each week passes and finally reach its greatest peak when the big team championship meets the I.C.4A.'s & A.A.U.'s—draw near. Suddenly, while totaling points that Villanova can win, you realize that the valuable points always brought home by Charley Jenkins will not go to Villanova this year.

Alway in Limelight

Yes, it will be as if a school tradition was abruptly discontinued. Whenever a person thought about track at Villanova, Charley Jenkins, a man who was always in the lime light wherever the Wildcats competed or were discussed, will no longer be a part of the track team he so greatly helped to make famous.

CHARLEY JENKINS

Jenkins was not always one of the most famous men on campus. In the fall of 1952 Villanova University had what was considered by all an average track team, but then a young man from Massachusetts entered the Main Line school. Immediately he began his rise to international fame and became a major factor in the teams climb to the same status.

Honored As Freshman

Entered in the 600 yard run in the Boston Knights of Columbus meet, Jenkins amazed the entire track world by beating some of the best middle-distance runners to win this event. So great was this performance that he was awarded the meet's outstanding performer trophy, and become the only freshman ever to be so honored.

Last year in the Boston K. of C. games the Cambridge, Mass. native set a new world's indoor record for the 500 yard run. He also has been anchoring the mile relay team for three years and did so the night they broke the world record for the event this year to beat Notre Dame with a time of 3:16.

Wins Two Olympic Medals

Charley reached what might be considered the peak of his fame last November when he won the 400 meter event at the Olympics in Melbourne. Against a field of the best middle distance men in the world, Jenkins proved his real ability by downing this highly talented group and bringing home a gold medal. Charley was one of the few athletes to bring more than one of these precious items as a result of also being a member of the U.S.'s championship 1600 meter relay team.

Yes, Vilanova will miss Charley Jenkins, for during the past four years his name has been synonymous with the Wildcat track team. Charley Jenkins has been more or less a sign of Villanova's greatness in track.

Truly the departure of this man who has for the past four years, been a big factor in the sports chronicle of the school will be a low point in this history he has helped to write.

Don Bragg Ends Legendary Career; A Villanova Great

Your name is Don Bragg and an era in your life is about to end. You are about to close out a career as one of the most famous collegiate athletes of all time.

You have behind you a past of which you can be proud; one which leaves promise of a greater future to come.

You are Don Bragg, pole-vaulter extra-ordinary.

From Penns Grove High school, in Penns Grove, New Jersey, where you vaulted as high as 13'9", an almost unheard of height for a youth in his teens, you came to Villanova University, immediately set a freshman vaulting record and then established yourself as one of the greatest vaulters of all time in your four years here.

A Dream Come True

You've come a long way from that little town in Jersey, a long long way. Thrills, heartaches, success, failure—all have a place in your story. You have been a coach's and fan's delight. Yes, and a sportswriter's dream come true, for you have provided some of the best human interest copy to cross any newspaper desk in America these past four years.

Don Bragg—the guy who wants to play Tarzan in the movies, the pole-vaulter whose father threatened not to shave until his son had cleared 16 feet; the lad who has to have a special pole to vault with, because his excessive weight bends regular ones; the kid who has been picked by Bob Richards, the world's greatest vaulter, as the person to break Cornelius Warmerdam's 20 year old record—you are all these things.

But these are only sidelights, anecdotes that grow out of a fabulous history of record-breaking triumphs, triumphs that are unfortunately tempered with one bitter defeat, a defeat you couldn't stop.

DON BRAGG
Cleared 15' 22 Times

Last year, before the Olympic tryouts in California, you were one of the few men picked as an almost definite member of the United States squad. Then, a pulled leg muscle and a still much disputed judge's ruling shattered your dream, just as you were on the treshold of success, to place you in a select and unenvied group that included other such great stars as Duke's Dave Sime.

But you rebounded from that bitter defeat to come back and establish yourself more firmly in the stronghold of the track immortals, and became the first man to beat the supposedly unbeatable Richards in Chicago this winter.

Having conquered the mighty Mr. Richards, you find a new challenge to face. Your achievements this past season have often been overshadowed by the meteoric rise of young vaulter from the West, Bob Gutowski, of Occidental College.

Gutowski has now gone higher than either you or Richards and holds the world's outdoor vaulting record. Many writers seem to have forgotten you during the excitement over this newcomer to the ranks of the 15 footers, but those in the know sit back and wait—wait for the day Don Bragg tops them all.

A Vow Is Kept

Perhaps the others, the ones who have forgotten, should have stood with you the night Villanova University named you its Outstanding Senior Athlete for 1957 and heard you vow to clear 15 feet on Villanova's Blue-White Day for the first time.

It was a vow you kept, and one that bodes ill for the high flying Gutowski.

It has been an interesting and rewarding career you have had as one of the stalwarts of the Big Five of history's most powerful track aggregation, and now it draws quickly to a close. You and Villanova have done much for each other, and at the time of parting, both of you must realize that an integral part of your life is changing.

Come what may you will live in the hearts of all who knew you at Villanova as a true champion. The reason for this is obvious.

You are Don Bragg and you were born one.

Intramural Track Meet Big Success; Seniors Down Juniors on Muff Day

Villanova Water Polo Team Gains Tie Against WCST

Latest among Villanova's intercollegiate athletic endeavors is the addition of a water polo squad. Under the direction of swimming coach Ed Geisz, the squad opened the current campaign on Tuesday, April 31, tying West Chester State Teacher's College, 2-2, in a double overtime match at West Chester.

The polo team is manned by approximately the same men who posted an 11-1 swimming record this past season. In the goalie position is senior Don Couig, while forwards are Joe Mason, Denny Rinkacs and the past season's swimming captain, Lou Schoener.

Guards for the Wildcats are Frank Keefe, John Flynn and Bob Pinto. Other participants are John Rumbarger, Ken MacGillivray, Lou Pinto and John Kennedy

Trail At Half

The Villanova team had to fight from behind to tie the West Chester squad in a rough and tough battle. A shaky first half left the Mainline lads behind 2-0.

Joe Mason and John Flynn scored for Villanova in the second half, the latter's goal coming on a shot from mid-pool. Neither squad could score in the overtime periods.

Highlighting Intramural activity over the past few weeks was the presentation of the annual intramural track meet in Goodrow Stadium.

Interest in this year's meet was further enhanced by the holding of a Junior-Senior Muff Day as a part of Junior Week ceremonies which ran in unison with the track meet.

Unhappily for the juniors, the seniors won the battle, 36-21, to remain undefeated in three Muff Day competitions.

The battle for class supremacy was decided out on Austin Field when the Class of 1957 downed the activity-ridden juniors, 10-8, in a softball battle

The spirited competition saw five track records broken in the course of the afternoon, with soph Pat Kelty, a pre-med student, cracking the old barriers in both the high jump and the 100 yard dash.

Kelty broke senior class president Vince Sullivan's one year old mark of 5'7" in the high jump with a leap of 5'9" and shared a 10.2 second timing in the 100 yard dash with Joe Cunjak for his other title.

Cunjak Wins Two

Cunjak was a double winner, also capturing first place honors in the 220 with a 24.1 second clocking.

Two other double victories were turned in, one by frosh Jonas Swenson, who turned in a record breaking 2:9.2 performance in the 880 yard run, and then ran the opening leg of a winning freshman 880 yard relay squad which covered the distance in 1:43.

The other double victor was Kent Lydic who set a new record in the broad jump with a 21 foot, leap and anchored the victorious 440 relay team which also included Bill Somers, Ken Kaminsky, and Ed Martucci.

Mile Relay Featured As Jenkins Wins

Ron brought the stadium crowd to its feet as he rapidly closed up the gap and gave the baton to Jenkins, only two yards back.

Jenkins Brings Victory

Charley Jenkins, the man who has made a career out of starring in these relays, was running now neck and neck with the Texas anchor man.

There he goes! Around the last turn, Jenkins put on a spurt and came home winner by two yards with an amazing 46.4 quarter.

Villanova had run a 3:12.7 mile, fastest of the year, and Texas had to be content with second honors.

Record 661 Students Graduate; Honorary Degrees Awarded to 4

Nearly 700 students, the largest class in its long history will receive diplomas today as Villanova University holds its 1957 commencement exercises at 11:00 A. M. in the campus field house in the presence of friends and relatives of the graduates.

Observing the completion of its 114th academic year, the University will bestow honorary Degrees on four outstanding citizens in addition to the 661 seniors who will receive degrees in course during the impressive ceremonies.

Among the four honorary degree recipients will be only the fourth woman in Villanova's long history to be so honored. Miss Cecile Kennedy, presently associated with the State Welfare Department and for many years a field representative for the American Red Cross, will be awarded the Degree of Doctor of Social Science.

Served In Two Wars

Miss Kennedy, a resident of Upper Darby, Pa., saw service in two World Wars with the Red Cross. In addition she received citations from governors of three states for service in peacetime disasters.

Also receiving Honorary Degrees are the Rev. Joseph P. Moroney, Dean of the College of Science, Duquesne University and Mr. Richard Schleicher of Los Angeles, California, who is Chief Structural Engineer for the North American Aircraft Co., both of whom will be awarded the Degree of Doctor of Science.

Degree To Historian

The Rev. Philip Hughes, world famous historian, now on the faculty at Notre Dame University, will receive the Degree of Doctor of Literature. The Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Chairman of the Board of Trustees and the Very Rev. A. Donellon, University President, will make the Honorary Presentations.

Among the 666 graduates will be 22 members of the Villanova University School of Law who will receive Bachelor of Laws Degrees in the Law School's second graduation.

Commissions To 51

Fifty one other members of the class will receive Commissions in either the Navy or Marines in addition to their Academic diplomas. They are members of the University's Naval Reserve Officer Training Program and will report for immediate active duty.

Captain Neale R. Curtin, U. S. N., Commandant of Midshipmen will administer the Commissions during the ceremonies, which will be preceded by an academic procession from the Commerce and Finance Building

Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., will be one of six Augustinian Priests observing the 5th anniversary of their ordination to the Holy Priesthood on Saturday, June 9th,

In addition to Father Donnellon the Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S.A., Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., Rev. Richard M. Plunkett, O.S.A., Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A. and the Rev. Robert Reagan, O.S.A., will offer Masses of thanksgiving in the campus field house at 11:00 AM.

Masses Simultaneously

The six jubilarians will offer their Masses simultaneously on the stage of the field house in the presence of friends and relatives. The Rev. Thomas E. Rogers, O.S.A., will deliver the sermon.

The jubilarians were ordained by Bishop Emmet M. Walsh, Bishop of Charlestown, South Carolina from 1927 to 1949.

Father Donnellon, who still maintains a teaching schedule despite the heavy duties of his office has been President of Villanova since 1954 when he succeeded the Rev. Francis G. McGuire, O. S. A., now director of the Villanova development programs.

Father Sullivan has been Dean of the Schol of Arts and Sciences for the past four years and Fathers Dunne, McShea and Regan have all been members of the faculty for many years. Father Plunkett is Sub Prior of St. Mary's Hall, home of the Villanoca Seminary.

A private luncheon will follow the celebration of the Masses.

SIX DEDICATED MEN

Jubilarians gather on the steps of the Monastery to discuss plans for their celebration this Saturday. Six Masses will be offered simultaneously on special altars set up in the fieldhouse. Left to right is pictured, Rev. John R. Dunne, O.S.A., Rev. Robert Regan, O.S.A., Rev. Richard M. Plunkett, O.S.A., Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A. and Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A. These six men represent 150 years of loyalty and dedication to the Augustinian Order.

Honorary Degree Winners Addition to Select Group

By LARRY O'ROURKE MANAGING EDITOR

Cecile R. Kennedy, who will today receive the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Social Sciences, is only the fourth women in Villanova history to be so honored.

Miss Kennedy joins the company of Elizabeth S. Kite, who was awarded the Doctor of Literature Degree in 1933; Anne O. McCormick of the New York Times, who also received a Doctor of Literature in 1943; and Margaret Rendt who received a LL.D. in 1949.

Nearly 200 people have received Honorary Degrees from Villanova since 1877.

Famous Male Recipients

The Rev. Joseph Moroney, Mr. Richard Schleicher, both Doctor of Science winners, and the Rev. Phillip Hughes, an Honorary Doctor of Literature Degree winner, join a long group of celebrities.

They will join a list that includes Presidents, Senators and great humanitarians.

William Howard Taft, received a J.D. Degree in 1910 and Grover Cleveland received a J. D. in 1902.

H. Cummings, History Prof., Wins Grant

Raymond L. Cummings, assistant professor of History, has been awarded a Fulbright grant by the U.S. Government to do research in French diplomatic history in Paris.

Mr. Cummings will be affiliated with the University of Strasbourg in Northern France but will be doing his research in Paris, in the diplomatic files, history books and documents.

The grant will cover one academic year, October to June and will cover all expenses for the recipient.

Family To Accompany

His wife, the former Anne Reardon, of Phila., a graduate of Chestnut Hill College, and their three children, Kathleen, 5; Patricia, 3; and Sharon, 18 month, will accompany him.

Mr. Cummings will work for his Ph.D., for which he has already completed classroom work at the University of Pennsylvania. The research will be used in his dissertation for his Doctorate.

The Plymouth Meeting, Pa., resident is a native of Baltimore. He was graduated from Loyola High School there, earned his A.B. at Villanova University; and his Master's in History at Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.

Bombardier In War

He served from 1943 to 1946 bombardier in a B-29 crew; finished up at Villanova, went to Georgetown and then returned to Villanova as an instructor.

Pleasant Memories

The culmination today of four years of study is time to be joyous and yet to be sad. It is time for jubilation inasmuch as 661 young men and women have qualified academically to meet the world. The diploma these 661 receive today is the proof of academic sufficency.

But despite the prospects of adventure that front the student there is that longing to look around once more a the old campus and maybe even that unspoken desire to turn the hands of time back four years.

Four years acquaintance with anything makes it something personal. The love and respect that grows with that acquaintance is eternal and satisfying. A few graduate with an occasional "bad memory." But most forget the hard times and look back only with love.

The companionship with fellow students will be missed perhaps more than anything else. For man is a social animal and can not easily be torn away from thoe with whom he has toiled.

The realization that undergraduate days are the best days of life will not be long coming. And then the memories of Villanova University will bring a lump to the throat and that desire to be "collegiate" once more.

ETERNALLY GRATEFUL

A graduation day is one filled with memories with celebration. Today those with the greatest memories and with the greatest pride will be the parents.

For these are the ones whose entire lives have been spent preparing their sons and daughters for this great day. And to these the sons and daughters today say, "This is yours. This graduation, Mom and Dad, belongs to you. For in terms of sacrifice we are nothing."

The feeling of pride felt by the parents this morning on recipt of the diplomas can be felt nowhere except at a college graduation ceremony.

The parents now have given their sons and daughters more than many of them ever received. They have given them the greatest start in life, a Villanova University Catholic education.

How rightfully the students can say, "Thank You."

APPRECIATION

The editorial staff of the Villanovan wishes to thank all those graduating seniors who have worked to earn this year's All-American rating for the paper.

Without the inspiration and guide of the upperclassmen the present staff would have been unable to acquire the skills needed to produce a good newspaper.

The Editor-in-Chief wishes also to thank all those who have helped in any capacity during the past year. He hopes for continued support.

PUBlicly Speaking

As this column's namesake thins out each and every day and each and every exam terminates another senior's college career we, as juniors, find ourselves facing more and more slots to fill. It could be understood that the SENIOR class is the "workhorse" of the collegiate span.

A pause for a short remembrance of the freshman fool you were. And now the lovable senior resting elequently on his haunches entertaining his crafty mind with ideas of; hoy he sneaked in to the picnic, what to do with his elephant like date, and where to unload his faultering auto. Nevertheless he is the all-knowing senior, looked up to by all freshmen and sophomores, scorned by juniors and tolerated by his fellow classmates.

A salute to the class of 1957 as they make way for more aspiring collegiates. The column—PUBlicly Speaking—wish the best possible luck that could be granted to a class except that which will be granted to the class of 1958. Thank you.

Peering . . .

. . . At all those empty chairs in the Fieldhouse just waiting to be slept in while endless names are called out today. Pillows will be sold, however, and those parents whose son's name is in the last part of the alphabet are asked to eat dinner before arriving at the Fieldhouse. The local hotels are filled with relatives rarely seen who want to see "Junie get his sheepskin."

. . . At those burly men in the back of the Fieldhouse graduation day with armbands and sad looks. Who are they? Who else, but Mainline bartenders sorry to see such a fine class of good customers depart.

. . . At all the big money jobs being parcelled out. Government jobs again prevail and the tremendous salary for those men about to embark on top-secret civil service careers is the same as last year—$.90 a day with a free bus ride to Ft. Dix.

. . . At the way our beloved graduates find out the difference between the man with the college education and the man without it. It's easy. The non-college man works with his hands at something he likes, makes $4.31 an hour, and doesn't worry. The college grad sits behind a desk for $35 a week, wondering when he is going to use all that knowledge he gained, and spends his free time commuting on a hot train.

. . . At the astonished looks on the faces of the parents as they wonder if this is the same campus where they left their little boy four years ago. They see new building, bigger boys, more policemen and longer lines.

Good Luck.

SC VIEWS

By PAT NICHOLSON

It is certainly a wonderful honor to be elected Chairman of the Student Council. I can not begin to thank you enough for placing your trust in me. It will be a very difficult job to fill the shoes of Joe Martin, Jack Shea, and the other senior members of the Student Council. They have given a great deal of their time and effort to help build Villanova through a more effective and efficient council. We the underclassmen can be proud of our Senior leaders here at Villanova. We hope and pray that their college careers and that futures will be as successful as they will be as loyal alumni as they have been loyal Villanovans.

This year the council has taken giant strides toward obtaining the solid respect of both the administration and the student body. It has tried to coordinate the ideas and efforts of the students. It has cought the cooperation of administration officials and faculty members. The council has made an all out effort to build up the interest and spirit of the student body.

The potentiality of the Student Council is just recently beginning to be realized. It will be the goal of the new council to greatly expand its activities and authority. The council, through Area Clubs can take the lead in strengthening the Alumni Association. Programs must be initiated to increase the interest of our parents and the people of Philadelphia in Villanova University. Greater traditional rivalries in sports must be established and every effort must be made to assist the Athletic Department in building up the support of Villanova's athletic teams. Senior class priveleges and class and school traditions should very definitely be increased.

The success of the new council will depend on the initiative and ability of its members. An increase in the number and responsibility of Student Council committees will afford a more complete and efficient handling of all the members of the counparticipate in council projects. The new officers will definitely need everyones wholehearted support and cooperation.

The administration has shown this year, that as the council increases prestige and undertakings, it will be given increased authority. This is extremely important in that in order for the Student Council to be a success it must have an effective voice.

Besides those already mentioned, the unltimate goal of the new Villanova University Student Council will be the active participation in at least one important campus activity by all members of the student body. The accomplishment of this goal would make each student and alumnus a true Villanovan—one in heart and spirit as well as in learning.

Again I wish to thank you for selecting me to lead your Council. I can only hope and pray to God that I will be able to live up to the duties and responsibility of the trust that you have placed in me.

THANKS!

Dear Member of the Class of 1957:

Our four years at Villanova are over now, and most of us are wondering where they went and just what they were. Well, they were great to start with. We were the last freshman class to matriculate at Villanova College, and the first freshman class to matriculate at Villanova University. We watched Villanova grow, and we were a big part of that growth.

Our class was the best Villanova ever had—we did more things, we worked harder, and accomplished more than any class before us. From our picnics to our formals to our Muffdays we were always a success because the members of the Class of 1957 were behind their class.

It was a great class for four big years, a good time at a good school—let's be proud of it and let's not forget it. On behalf of all the class officers and representatives over the four years, thank you.

V. E. Sullivan

Alumni Secretary Pequinot Welcomes Graduates of 1957

On behalf of the General Alumni Association it is a great pleasure to welcome the Class of 1957 to our membership. You are now a member of an organization which is striving to assist the Augustinian Fathers in their great work here at Villanova, as well the friendships which were as, enabling the continuation of formed while at Villanova. Our common bond is a strong one —we are all Villanovans.

You will find, as we have, that from now on you will be identified with Villanova and vice versa. So it is on your own interest to help keep your Alma Mater strong. This you can do best in the frame work that has been set up.

By being an active member of the General Alumni Association and taking an active interest in Villanova you can be helping yourself. Also within this frame work can you best continue your college acquaintances.

With regard to the latter, the Alumni is about to hold its annual reunion here on the campus. You are now eligible to participate in this weekend event which takes place the 7th, 8th and 9th of June. A full program is planned. The Class of 1957 is invited to be our guest at the Jamboree in the Field House at 8:30 on the 7th.

You may obtain complete information and make reservations for the entire weekend by dropping into the Alumni Office in Mendel Hall. It will indeed be an honor to have you with us for this weekend of merriment.

I shall write to each of you personally during the summer and tell you more about your newest membership—The Villanova General Alumni Association.

Survey Shows That College Students Prefer Serenity Of Country to Busy City

Graduating seniors will be interested to know that if preferences are any indication of future behavior, it looks like the present trend toward suburban living will continue in years to come.

After graduation, substantially over half of the college students to day would prefer living in a suburban area rather than in the city proper or further out in the country. Coeds seem to prefer city living slightly more than do college males.

Associated Collegiate Press gathered this information on living preferences by asking the following question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

AFTER YOU GRADUATE AND SETTLE DOWN AT A PERMANENT JOB WOULD YOU PREFER LIVING IN A CITY, IN A SUBURB, OR FURTHER OUT IN THE COUNTRY?

The results:

	Men	Women	Total
In City	15%	23%	18%
In Suburb	60%	52%	57%
In Country	19%	19%	19%
Undecided	6%	6%	6%

Students preferring city living all give one reason for their choice, the city contains all the elements needed for work and entertainment. A Lynchburg College (Lyuchburg, Va.) freshman puts it this way: "There is more to do in a city." A senior at the University of Arkansas (Fayetteville) elaborates a bit more with this statement: "There are more economic, social and cultural advantages to a city." And in answer to the question a Baruch School of Business (City College of New York) senior coed says she prefers to live in the city, but then adds: "only for a while."

Advantages Of Suburban Life

Preference for suburban living is easily explained. The following comments give a fairly representative idea of student opinion.

A sophomore coed at the University of Arkansas feels a suburb "offers more advantages than a city—not so crowded; good place to raise children." And a junior at the same school sees it this way: "You are close to a city but have the quiet of the country."

Know YOUR College Read The Villanovan

Students preferring country living appear to have stronger feelings about their choice. They generally cite the desire for elbow room and the wholesome atmosphere for raising a family. Here are a couple of typical viewpoints:

A Mississippi College (Clinton) freshman coed had this to say: "With all the rush and fuss of city life no one can ever hope to do anything other than fit the pattern, and nothing creative ever grew from following set routine." A senior coed attending the College of St. Catherine (St Paul, Minn.) says: "I like the country. I want to raise my children by myself—and not have neighbors raising them."

Undecided V. U. Sophomore

Students who answer that they are undecided on the question have given little or no thought to the question and just don't feel like making a choice. Some students, like the Villanova University (Villanova, Pa.) sophomore who says: "It depends upon the location of my job," are generally willing to go wherever their work takes them.

Halphens: A Villanova Family

By JOHN MULCAHY

The first brother and sister undergraduates in Villanova University history were following tradition this week as they threw the text books temporarily into the corner and prepared for summer vacation.

The male of the family, Mr. Marshall Halphen is a seminarian in St. Mary's hall. He is putting aside the Liberal Arts with a Philosophy major books and preparing for a month with his brother seminarians in Sea Isle by the cool Atlantic Ocean.

His sister, Mary Beth Halphen, an undergraduate nurse who is just completing freshman year has no definite plans for the summer but expects to "enjoy herself."

Mr. Halphen and his sister, while so near to each other every day, rarely see each other. Both are rather busy with study and other assignements and thus meet only one Sunday every two months which is visiting day in the seminary.

The young seminarian attended Malvern Preparatory School where his father taught and coached athletics. After one year at Malvern he entered the Minor Seminary in Staten Island, New York. He finished high school there and entered the Novitiate in Septemebr of 1954. He spent one year there which he made his simple vows. He then came to Villanova.

Mary Beth attended Glouchester High School. She entered Villanova for many reasons. First, she liked the school. Her father is a 1927 graduate and was a football star on the varsity for three seasons. He is presently on the Athletic Advisory Board of the University. Mary Beth was "sort of raised with many friends in the Augustinian order."

Both Halphens find studies interesting, at times difficult, but not overbearing. Mr. Halphen likes his philosophy courses and says that they keep him very busy. The courses themselves are not found too hard, but like all philosophy courses time consuming.

Mary Beth finds the Nursing Department courses very interesting but they force her to spend many hours in study. She is more amazed than ever at the wonders of a graduated nurse.

The senior Mr. Halphen is a candidate for the Foundation Board of Trustees. He has already served one term and in the current issue of the Alumnus magazine thanked the members of the Alumni Association for the support he has been given. He has another daughter who hopes to enter Villanova soon.

With the entire Halphen family engaged in the religious scholastic and financial ends of the University it is well to call this family a real Villanova one.

REPORT OF INDIA: PROGRESS BUT NEED

By SISTERS M. VERA AND M. BEATRICE
APOSTOLIC CARMELITESE FROM INDIA

We hail from India, are Indians ourselves, and can give firsthand information about the land which is more than twice as numerous in population though just about one-third the area of U.S.A. in size: Area of U.S.A.: 3,022,387 sq. miles. Population: 167,000,000 (total) 31,648,424 Catholics.

Area of India: 1,221,881 sq. miles

Total Population	376 millions
Hindus	303 millions
Moslems	38 millions
Catholics	5 millions
Protestants	4 millions
Others	26 millions

Ratio of Catholics to the rest of Indians is 5:371!

Variety of Languages

India is called a sub-continent because of its many tribal races, creeds and languages. There are fourteen languages that are the vernaculars of its various regions, and these have diverse dialects in colloquial usage.

India gained its Independence just ten years ago on August 15, 1947. Since then, the vernaculars have become the medium of instruction in the schools, with Hindi and English as 'Second' languages in order that Hindi may be our national 'lingua franca' and English our international tongue.

India is a land whose culture contains striking contrasts arising from the differences between wealth and poverty, capital and labour, learning and illiteracy, Christianity and non-Christian religions.

We, Indians, are a new nation so far as democratic independence goes, though our history and civilization date from 3000 B.C.

Vast schemes are afoot for uplifting the masses of our citizens through 'Five Year Plans'—the second one of which has, just begun its operations encouraged by the successes of the first.

Progress Takes Time

Great works with hugh dimensions cannot be accomplished in vast proportions within a short time. The progress attempted within limited spaces by the Community Development Projects has shown encouraging results, particularly gratifying for the following feature: They have proved an effective way for overcoming barriers of caste and creed.

The Government of India subsidizes these 'Projects' on a wise basis: either volunteers from schools and colleges, or Social Service Leagues working along with the villagers, organize ways and means for clearing slums, making decent roadways, building better homes and the like.

Thus when the 'ancient low-caste villager' sees the 'high-caste' university student dig the earth with him and handle shovel and spade—he indeed realizes 'Our Brotherhood' while the high-born learns the Dignity of Labor.

U.S. Is Helping India

Remember: 'Rome was not built in a day!' It will take time before the good work spans all the vast regions of India. The biggest difficulties in the way of the rapid spread of this 'White Fire of Progress' are two-fold: financial and educational.

Thanks to the great help extended by the World's Organization of Brotherhood among Nations (U.S.A. foremost among them) the Indian Government hopes its economic and industrial plans will all come to fruition some day, some how. A large majority of India's population being illiterate, they do not understand sufficiently well the need for more 'scientific ways' of living and forming and cultivation.

'The Grow-more-food Campaign' has a mighty though stupid enemy indeed in the ignorant villager who thinks 'he knows it all' by reason of long years of experience traditionally handed down from father to son! It is difficult to convince him out of the rut. Understanding has to come before appreciation. Only education can help accomplish this.

More Schools Needed

The 'Each-one-teach-one' way of Education is one of the methods of Social Service undertaken by students and socialworkers in India . . . but 'it's a Long Way to Go!' The cry is for more schools.

Here are Needs . . . But where are Funds?

Here is our chance too, for the Apostolate of the Faith! Did you note from the figures quoted above that the ratio of Catholics to the non-Catholics in India is 5 to 371?

Four-fifths of these are scattered over India. North India has thus the barest sprinkling of them! Calculate then what few chances they have of knowing what Catholics really are like. The surest way of breaking down barriers of prejudice resulting from lack of India, wherein a handful of Catholics contact is by opening shools in North may prove a 'leaven.'

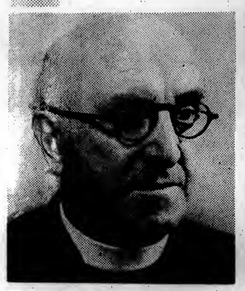
Nuns Working In India

The Sisters of the Apostolic Carmel of India are an indigenous Congregation of Carmelites of the Third Order Regular, affiliated to the Discalced Carmelites and engaged in the Apostolate of Education, in the Missions of India, Goa and Ceylon.

The Apostolic Carmel was founded in 1868 (Mother House at St. Ann's Convent, Mangalore, S. India) They have received pressing requests for more schools in North India. Help answer this Call of the Master's Vineyard!

$1.00 can put up a portion of a School Brick Wall

$3.00 will mean a black-board



$5.00 may supply some indispensable equipment.

If we do not hasten to fill this need for more schools in North India, non-Christians will take that field. You know what a power-house a school can be! Offer a sacrifice for the Missions in India.

You may send your mite either to the Superior General of the Apostolic Carmel, St. Ann's Convent, Mangalore, S. India, or hand it over to either of us—the two nuns you see on Villanova Campus (in a reddish-brown or purplish habit!); or you may give it to Mrs. Paul at the Chaplain's office, for us.

As this is our last semester here, may we take this opportunity to express our sincere thanks for and our deep appreciation of the many valuable lessons we have learned in various ways at Villanova University—from its authorities, faculty (administrative and teaching), staff and students.

Frs. Boyle and Rongione To Accept Honorary Degrees

Two outstanding members of Villanova's administrative staff will receive Honorary Degrees by other Universities this month.

The Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., Vice President for Academic Affairs at Villanova will receive an Honorary Doctorate from Duquesne University and the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O. S. A., Dean of the Graduate and Part Time Divisions will receive an Honorary Degree from the College of Steubenville, Steubenville, Ohio.

Duquesne Commencement

The Rev. Vernon Gallagher, President of Duquesne, announced this week that Father Boyle, William P. Rogers, Deputy Attorney General of the United States and Richard E. Berlin, President of the Hearst Corporation would be honored when the Pittsburgh institution holds tis commencement exercises on June 2nd.

Father Boyle, who will receive the Degree of Doctor of Education will deliver the Sermon to Duquesne graduates during the Baccalautate Mass at St. Paul's Cathedray at 10:00 AM. Graduation ceremonies will be held at the Syria Mosque at 3:00 PM.

Father Rongione Speaker

Father Rongione will receive the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Pedagogy from Steubenville, one of the nation's newest and fastest growing institutions, on June 9th. Commencement exercises will be held at 3:00 PM in the Auditorium of Steubenville High School. Father Rongione will deliver the principal address to the more than 100 graduates, their friends and relatives.

in Dougherty Hall at 5:30 P. M.

President's Guests

Former alumni officers and the presidents of the local alumni clubs will be the guests at the President's Dinner at 6:00. Promptly at 7:30 the classes will form in front of Austin hall for the parade to the gym. The concluding feature of the night will be the Alumni Jamboree in the Field House at 8:00 P. M.

At 1:00 P. M. the alumni will hear the administration report on Villanova University which will be followed by a question to all phases of the University itself.

Concludes Sunday

Sunday will be the concluding day of the program. Mass will be offered in the morning in the University Chapel and breakfast will be served from 8:00 A. M. to 12 noon in Dougherty Hall.

A glorious time is guaranteed to all that attend this weekend reunion. All interested should inform the university as soon as possible so that proper arrangements can be made. From the looks of the reservations, that have been accepted already, it can be readily seen that this reunion promises to be the biggest and the best of all precious ones.

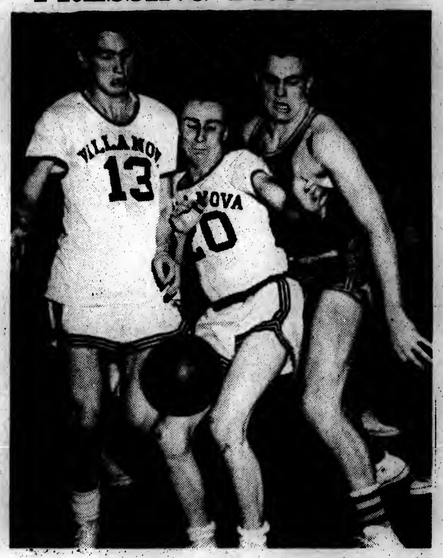
AS NAVIGATOR OR PILOT

GET ON THE TEAM THAT DEFENDS AMERICA

The flying U. S. Air Force is a team of men who command the aircraft and men who plan the attack. These are the pilots and navigators, both equally important to the defense of America.

You, as a young man of intelligence and sound physical health, may join this select group in the world's most exciting and rewarding adventure. Your training will stand you in good stead, whatever your future plans may be—and you'll be earning over $6,000 a year 18 months after training.*



If you are between 19 and 26½ years of age, investigate your opportunities as an Aviation Cadet in the U. S. Air force. Priority consideration is now being given to college graduates. For details, write: Aviation Cadet Information, P. O. Box 7608, Washington 4, D. C.

*Based on pay of married 1st Lieutenant on flight status with 2 years' service or more.

Stadium Enlargement Plans

This touched-up photograph shows the planned additions to the Stadium as described in Frank Reagan's article. The dotted line shows the former location of the goal posts and outlines the seat additions. The white outline on the field shows the new location of the playing field. Note also the new press box (upper right).

Frank Reagan Elaborates On Plan To Enlarge Stadium

We reprint here portions of the article in the current Alumnus magazine by Athletic Director and Football Coach Frank Reagen.

By FRANK REAGAN
Athletic Director

After considerable research and planning, the Administration has approved the addition of four new sixty-foot concrete sections to our present stadium facilities. Each section will seat approximately 1000. The illustration on this page will give you an idea of the work to be done. To amplify this photographic information, the expansion will encompass the following work.

1. Moving the playing field sixty feet to the East.
2. Erecting two new sixty-foot concrete sections at the East end of the North and South stands, providing a total of approximately four thousand new seats. On the North side, the new sections will be constructed on a straight line with the existing stands. On the South side (Lancaster Avenue), one section will conform to the present stands, and the second section will follow the arc of the new track, as the first segment of what we hope will eventually be a horseshoe at that end of the field.
3. Erection of a new Press Box, to be relocated on the South Side, instead of the North, as at present. This new unit will be much larger than the present Press Box and will be designed with the idea of providing suitable and comfortable quarters for members of the Working Press.
4. Present sanitary facilities will be completely renovated and increased. In addition, two new units will be installed under each of the North and South stands.

It is the earnest hope of the Administration and the Athletic Department that this work will be completed by the opening of the 1957 season. We have been assured by the builder that this is possible. The University, faced with a tremendous building program at the present time, is going all out in respect to the Stadium.

If I may, I would like to inject a personal note as this point. I am grateful that the Administration has seen fit to mind, our present policy is a undertake this project. In my sound one, and our opportunities are unlimited.

the successful operation of an athletic program is a substantial sale of Season Football tickets.

As an important phase of the policy of bringing football back to the campus, we are inaugurating what we hope will be a permanent season ticket plan, to become effective this fall. Briefly, the details are as follows:

Individual game tickets for the three home games of the 1957 season are priced at $3.00, or a total of $9.00 for the three home games. Under the new plan, season tickets will be sold at a reduction of 20%, or a total of $7.20.

Early application, naturally, will be assigned the best seat locations, and these locations, once established, will carry on from year to year, pending of applications within the specified dates.

The genaral feeling of optimism in regard to our prospects for the coming season is much prevalent, in my mind, than at any time since coming to Villanova. We have the most spirited group of boys we have had and a greater number of good football players.

We must face some stiff competition this Fall, and whether or not we can better our 5 and 4 record of last year is a big question. As a result of our Spring workouts, however, the staff feels that we are capable of playing a better brand of football than in the past—hence the feeling of optimism.

All-in-all, the outlook for 1957 is good. For the time being, the crying towel is in moth balls but can be reached when, as, and if needed.

Classes Finished, But V. U. Trackmen Keep Running

For the next six or eight weeks the name of Villanova will be on the tongues of track fans throughout the country as "The Greatest collegiate track team in history" takes to the road to show the world just how good they really are.

Over the weekend the Wildcats participated in the 81st annual I.C.A.A.A.A. Track and Field Championships on Randal's Island in New York. From there they will travel to the wide open spaces of Texas, the area which has been letting off a lot of steam about the entire state and in particular about a clan of so called track men.

Houston will be their first stop-over as the Villanova Champs will compete in the Meet of Champions Friday night June 7th. The meet is actually a warm up for the National Collegiate Champions in Austin on June 14th and 15th. At Austin, the Wildcats are given an outside chance of coping the first N.C.A.A. title ever won by Villanova.

A week later our boys will triumphantly (we hope) return North and encamp at Dayton, Ohio, the scene of the National A.A.U. outdoor championships, of which Jenkins, Delany, Bragg, Reavis et al walked off with the indoor version in New York last winter.

After performing for the fans in this country several of the champions will travel to Europe to compete for a New York team which will meet a team from London at London during the middle of July. So far, Charley Jenkins and Phil Reavis and believe It or not Ron Delany have been selected to compete on the New York squad.

Right now plans of the A.A.U. are sort of up in the air about sending other squads to Europe for summer competion. If they do, Villanova will most likely be represented. If not, the Blue and White will still be flying as Ron Delany will most certainly take part in several meets in his native Ireland.

Sixteen members of the team competed in the I.C.A.A.A.A. championships in New York. Of these, Gene Maliff, Al Peterson, John Furlinger, Jim Fahey, George Browne competed for Villanova for the final time. They will all be receiving degrees this morning. Several other seniors, Charley Jenkins, Don Bragg and Alex Brecken-

Drill Team Is Successful In Drill League

The crack drill team of Villanova's NROTC unit marched off the Philadelphia Navy Yard parade grounds on Saturday, May 18, with fresh laurels for Villanova under the capable direction of its commanding officer, midshipman Philip Kent, the drill team won both the "basic" and "fancy" honors in the Greater Philadelphia ROTC league drill competition. Villanova was defending champion in both categories having won both competitions in the past two years in a row.

Local Schools Competed

Other teams competing were NROTC, ROTC and AFROTC teams from Temple, La Salle, Drexel, Penn, Penn State, Rutgers and St. Joseph's. Among them, these schools entered one Navy, two Air Force and six Army teams against Villanova.

The explaination for the team's consistent excellence lies in their daily practice each morning, weather permitting. Much time and hard work has gone into shaping the team into the precision outfit that it is. Mr. Kent's assistant in the handling of the drill team is its executive officer, Jay O'Neil.

Secord Participation

This was only the second time this year that the team participated in competition. Earlier this year the team traveled to Pittsburgh to take part in competition among Pershing Rifle teams. Villanova belongs to the Pershing Rifles which is a national organization of top drill teams throughout the country.

The very fine turnout of willing and able freshman for the team this year augers well for the drill tems of the next few years.

Chase Named Publicity Dir.

By WILLIAM M. HONE

Joseph F. Chase has been appointed to direct Villanova's athletic publicity office. Joe, presently a senior in the Commerce and Finance School, succeeds Jim Gallo who has returned to his home town of Allentown to accept employment there.

Chase first becme associated with the publicity office in September, 1954 when he assisted Gene Ruare. He continued as an assistant until December 1, 1956 when he took over the position of Director of the Office. Joe, whose home is in Yeadon, Pennsylvania, graduated from West Catholic High in 1947 and served with the U.S. Air Force for 35 months as a supply Sergeant in Texas. While there he was also Training Group Athletic Coordinator and sports editor of the Base paper.

CHAMPION TALK

Sport Magazine for the month of August features a lively story on Villanova's lively champion, Ron Delany.

The story gives the Delany and Jumbo Jim Elliott psychology of running the mile and tells why Ron likes to compete in the mile run. The magazine is on the newstands now.

SPRING SPORTS

There is no more active time of year for collegiate athletics than spring. At Villanova the the many trees and shrubs have blossomed forth, and so too have our athletes.

With the indoor season successfully behind them, the track team started pointing for the Penn Relays. They pointed well for they successfully defended three relay titles. On the first day the Villanovan"s easily held on to the distance medley title with Jenkins running the half-mile, Collymore the 440, Breckenridge the three-quarters and Delany the mile. The next day the Wildcats started off the day by retaining their sprint medley crown with a 20-yard victory over N.Y.U.

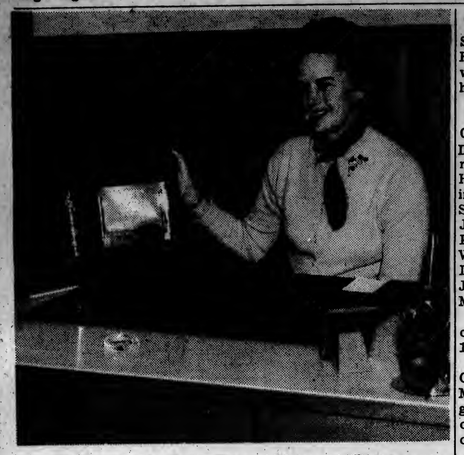
The climax of the Relays came with the running of the mile relay. The heralded, undefeated University of Texas team sized up as being the Villanovans toughest opposition and that they were, though they suffered their first defeat. Charlie Jenkins and Ron Delany rose to the occasion as Ron picked up four yards of a six yard deficit and Charlie made up the rest and went on to give the Wildcats a two yard win over the Longhorns.

This was the fastest mile clocked in the Nation to date this year, but a full second off the record by the Wildcats last year. Don Bragg won the pole-vault. Bob Holup placer fourth in the 120 yard hurdles and Reavis finished third in the high jump.

Baseball Starts Slowly

Coach Art Mahan said goodbye last year to his great outfield and many of his capable pitching staff. Now faced with building anew in these important departments he has been forced to constantly shuffle his lineup in search of the right one. It seems more than likely that as the season progresses Art will be able to repair the damage done by graduation and start the team on its usually consistent winning ways.

Football Team Reports



Twenty-six lettermen were among the seventy candidates who reported to Coach Frank Reagan for spring practice. Five of these were starters and several others saw plenty of action since Frank used the two-platoon system. Prospects are, indeed, bright but this is discussed elsewhere in this issue. Spring practice reached a climax with the intersquad game on Blue-White Day.

Golf Prospects Bright

All of last year's leading men return to bolster this year's edition of the Villanova golf team. They stand excellent position to have improved on last year's successful 7-5 record when the season ends. Jim Elliott finds time in his busy life to coach this team which had 35 candidates at the beginning of the season. Aronimink Country Club is the scene of the home matches.

Intramural Extremely Active

Nor have the many students who are not a member of any of these intercollegiate taems been inactive. Ed Geisz has coordinated a tremendous intramural program which among other things has a 62-team softball league. Other activities in the intramural program include: tennis, horse shoes, checkers and a track meet.

Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, Dean of Women at Villanova, was honored by the Berwyn Businessmen's Association at a banquet at the Paoli Inn on May 8th. Mr. William Fritz, President of the Association made the presentation of a Plaque to Miss Boyle as a result of her appointment as Villanova's first women dean of women.

ridge will be making the trips to Texas and Ohio.

Another senior, Johnny Kopil, from Bayonne, New Jersey has also put away his blue and white uniform for the final time. Diminutive Johnny with a great big heart, really came into his own this year. A former national scholastic mile record holder, Kopil gave his best collegiate performance at the Philadelphia Inquirer Charities meet in January, when he was clocked in 4:10.9 for the mile.

All former Villanova trackmen are asked to get in touch with Jim Tuppeny, assistant track coach at Villanova. Jim is handling the organization of the Spiked Shoe Club which will be an organization of former Villanova trackmen. Jim will be in contact with these fellows as soon as he hears from them.

Under the capable direction of Marine Corps T/Sgt. Edward Molcany, four of the summer school sisters take aim at targets in the firing range beneath Barry Hall. Sisters (left to right) M. Lorraine, O.P., M. Anne, O.S.B.M., Mary Emerentia, O.S.F., and M. Rosartia, R.S.M. are members of the newly organized rifle team. The Sisters have certainly eliminated any threat of World War III.

Surge Claims Urgent Need Of Edifices

Riding past Villanova on the Lancaster Pike, even a casual passer-by must be aware that a tremendous building program is in progress.

To the students of Villanova, this is nothing new. Since the increased surge of pupils after World War II, additional building have been constantly changnig the face of the 170 acre campus.

From 1947 through 1949, at a combined cost of $1,500,000, the Library, the Naval R.O.T.C. Building, and the Chemical Engineering Building were erected.

In the years succeeding 1950, many of the summer students watched with interest the growth of Dougherty Hall, which serves as a Student Union Building, and Sullivan Hall, built to house 420 students and 4 counsellors.

Buildings Symbolic

To those not residing in the Philadelphia area, the approach to Villanova this summer was considerably changed by the appearance of Sheehan Hall, a twin to Sullivan, and the new Commerce and Finance building.

Across the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad stands Garey Hall, the Law School, with the dedication prayers of April still fresh upon its walls. Rising aloof from the campus it appears symbolic of the dedication theme: "Peace is the tranquillity of order" (St. Augustine).

Stadium Renovation

The Stadium, too, is being renovated to keep pace with the increasing enrollment. Plans for this include an enlarged playing field, construction of new concrete stand sections to accommodate a total of 4000 new seats,

Summer School Agenda Includes Censorship Panel

Villanova's annual summer school forum, held in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium July 15 and July 16, dealt with the timely and thought-provoking topic of censorship.

A proper understanding of the nature of censorship as well as a knowledge of its proper use and possible abuse are of vital importance at the present time when censorship, constitutional guarantees, and legal proceedings pertaining to both are being so widely discussed.

The sessions of the forum, as enjoyable as they were educational, answered this need.

Legal Controls

Mr. Bruderle, acting as chairman for Monday's session, opened the forum and after welcoming the many faculty members and students who were present, explained that a change of speakers had been made.

Mr. William Ball, Associate Professor of Law at Villanova, was unable to take part due to the sudden death of his father.

Mr. Bruderle then introduced Mr. Thomas J. O'Toole, Assistant Dean of Villanova's School of Law, who took up Mr. Ball's topic, "Legal Control of Motion Picture Exhibitions," and extended it to include all other forms of communciation.

Mr. O'Toole explained that whereas Mr. Ball had been actively engaged in studies pertaining to motion picture codes for over two years, he himself had been away from such studies for an equal length of time. For this reason he intended to give a more general talk on censorship.

History of Censorship

This he did by tracing a brief history of censorship from colonial times up to the present. Mr. O'Toole pointed out that is is only a blinded view of censorship that is in disfavor. "At all times," he said, "there have been controls, undisputed limitations pertaining to libel and what we know traditionally to be obscene.

Printed sheets presenting examples of state statutes and leading cases dealing with legal controls had been distributed before the session, and Mr. O'Toole referred to these and explained them in the light of the Supreme Court decisions pertaining to the First and Fourteenth Amendments and also of the legal definition of obscenity.

Villanova Confers Degrees On 200; Prov. Presides

Most of the more than 200 graduate students of the 40th Summer Graduation at Villanova University, are teaching Sisters who will return to their horizon of yester-year. The horizon may not be new but each one will have a new DEGREE of greater satisfaction.

It has often been said that "informed people" are free people—ready for anything. Each graduate of Villanova goes back to her little niche readily equipped with the strength and wisdom of Villanova.

HONORED GUESTS

Presiding at the Commencement of 1957 will be the Very Rev. Henry A. Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of St. Thomas of Villanova Province.

The graduation address is to be delivered by the Very Rev. John L. Seary, O.S.A., presently Prior Provincial of the American Augustinian Province of Our Mother of Good Counsel. He directs the destines of the Augustinian High School in the Mid-West as well as the educational institutions proper to the Order.

We are not surprised that Father is to be the recipient of an honorary degree. He has an A.B. from Villanova and an A.M. from the Catholic University.

FIFTH WOMAN FOR HONOR

Mary Ellen Meade, Ph.D in Political Philosophy, Fordham University, is also to receive an honorary degree. She is the fifth woman to receive such an honor from Villanova. She has taught in the Public High Schools of New York City; served as Principal, especially in Washington Irving High School, one of the largest for girls in the world.

Currently Dr. Meade is Assistant Superintendent in the High School Division of the New York City Public School System; the FIRST WOMAN EVER TO HOLD THIS POST.

Dr. Meade has received many civic and Catholic awards she is a member of the Board of Trustees of numerous institutions, including Notre Dame College, Staten Island, N.Y. She has membership in more than twenty educational, religious, civic and cultural organizations and is now National President (1955-57) of the National Council of Administrative Woman. She is a long time member of the Augustinian parish of Our Lady of Good Counsel, S.I.

Honorary degrees will be conferred by the Rev. James A.

Depts. Make New Plans For '57-'58

Geared to enable graduate students to gain a master's degree in the shortest possible span of time, a new plan of studies for industrial employees and fulltime teachers will come into effect this fall semester.

Accelerated Courses

A result of careful study and discussion by committees for graduate studies, the system will make it possible for students majoring in English, education, history, and mathematics to complete requirements for the degree within one year and a summer, the equivalent of three semesters.

In addition to revision in course planning, three of these departments have also revised course offerings, making available during the year, courses previously reserved for the summer and vice-versa. New courses are introduced in education and mathematics.

Ed. Dep't Plans

Among the courses offered in the fall, the Educational Department will present four new ones: School Activity Programs, Industry and Industrial Relations, Educational Sociology, and School Public Relations.

An expansion of the number of courses available has now made it possible for students in education to acquire guidance certificates as guidance instructors or directors.

New Comprehensives

A new comprehensive examination, the result of a 10 year study, has been drawn up by the Education Department. Organized into a standard, bound book form, it has been printed on campus by the Research and Development Section. Special attention has been given to mechanical aspects of the form—organization of the questions, spacing, page size, type size, and kind of print.

"The 250 rather good questions," says departmental chairman Mr. George A. Harris, "are subject to revision." In order to keep the examination a "living" thing, the questions will continue as objects of study, undergoing

WORK SHOP

All Sisters are invited to participate in a special Music Workshop to be held in the C&F Auditorium every Monday and Friday evening following Chapel exercises, and Wednesday afternoons at 3:30.

The project will be the singing of the Mass for Graduation August 3.

Life's Gain

The goal of every Religious is the attainment of that degree of holiness for which Almighty God has destined her. In His loving wisdom He sometimes opens the way for intensive spiritual growth by means of unusual opportunities.

Attendance at Villanova during the summer session is one of these periods when His consecrated souls may draw waters in abundance from the "Fountains of the Saviour". There are times when it is difficult—even impossible—to write of one's experience, especially in those things of such intimate nature as one's closer approach to the supernatural goal.

The reason this is quite obvious when we consider that God gives so many gifts, so much richness in grace that one simply cannot express—much less measure her gratitude. And it is primarily with the purpose of giving gratitude to God, the Author of all holiness and to the Augustinian Fathers, His zealous human instruments, that this editorial is written.

Now it is precisely because the Sisters' day is centered around the Eucharistic Christ that these six weeks are so fruitful. Their first act is that of participation in the many Masses offered on the various altars in the Chapel.

During the Holy Sacrifice they share in the heavenly banquet which augments their union with Christ and the Members of His Mystical Body. Refreshed by these sacred rites, the religious souls are then ready for the prayer and work which make up their day at Villanova.

Evening finds them assembled once more at the feet of the Master when He blesses them from the Host held high by the anointed hands of His priest.

Circumstances necessitate the dispensing with choir services, naturally, but the Sisters recite the Divine or Little Office of the Blessed Virgin in private. They are conscious of the beauty and value of the Church's official prayer which one writer describes as "Sound waves of the Mass echoing through the day and night."

In a world that pays little or no attention to God, the Source of all good things, the Sisters unite with the entire Church in praise, adoration, and supplication, thus compensating in some measure for their fellow-man's forgetfulness.

With all these advantages found at Villanova, is it any wonder that the Sisters are enthusiastic about their return each summer? Their deepest concern, which is for the growth of their interior life can be satisfied and they can contribute to the world the most valuable thing it needs—holy religious.

Spirit Abounds

Someone has suggested that we try to give to others some notion of the spirit of Villanova. However, it is quite obvious that such an intangible air is difficult to capture and to manifest in words!

It is better seen, even though it is not really visible. So let us say that it is seen in things. A newcomer, or visitor might be able to describe it, but one who lives here, however lengthy or brief the stay feels it.

Part of the Whole

The whole kernel of this seeming paradox lies in the fact that each one coming here is so absorbed in this spirit that he or she is a part of it.

Perhaps the one word most fitting to the notion is that of unity; unity composed of a oneness of faith, a oneness of purpose; a oneness that is cloaked in a spirit of joy; joy in others, and for others. It is this very joy that sets the spirit of Villanova high in the hearts and minds of all who have the privilege of considering themselves partakers of/and participants in the atmosphere that is this spirit.

Atmosphere Prevails

True, we may say, or hear said, that one is attracted by the buildings, the campus, the traditions, and the type of education offered here. All this would not be, were it not for this permeating spirit that so eludes imagery.

Memories Linger

The wonderful feeling of belonging the minute you came . . .
The morning walk to Chapel from Fedigan, the cool greeness of the trees . . .
The mad rush for the breakfast line, where you you had to choose between religious decorum and being late for class . . .
The old dining room in Mendel, where you began at the ends, and finished in the middle . . .
The frosty pitchers of cool drinks, alternately grape, lemon, lime and orange . . .
The battalions of thermoses, waiting to be filled with coffee or ice . . .
The Math classes in Belle Air where you had to prop open the windows with a stick, and there were more mosquitoes than Univac could compute . . .
Professor Amelotti's gift of laughter, lightening the dreariest mental calculations . . .
The hazards of walking (and driving) when cars were allowed on campus . . .
The old Pie Shoppe, and the juke boxes that played "April in Portugal" no matter which button you pushed . . .
The unofficial trips through Dougherty and Sullivan while they were still under construction . . .
The summer of '52, when the annual precipitation for Pennsylvania gathered over Villanova in July . . .
Your envy when the Science Department had their picnic on the field . . .
The humble gratitude you felt when everyone else was so concerned over the your comps . . .
The long, long lines outside the old Book Store in Mendel, and the feminine wiles you used to attract service, once you got inside the door . . .
The Song Fests, and the Villanova cheers, the memory of which kept the heart-fires burning in the months between summer sessions . . .
The feeling you had on Graduation Day, when some of your classmates walked up those steps, and you told yourself, "Someday" . . .

Soul

These are the ties that try men's soles . . . good old summer times when even religious are not mindful of saving their soles. Yes, those frequent treks from one end of the campus to the other, those climbs which make the body and spirit soar high are enough to wear out the soles, but the march goes on.

Every summer hundreds of religious flock to the Villanova Campus to imbibe sound principles at the fountain of knowledge. With each year the wisdom seekers grow in numbers.

Why? Because Villanova offers the nicest welcome mat a University can present, and spreading this mat are those zealous men of God, the Augustinians. To them we owe the summer satisfactions that are ours. To them we are deeply grateful for the spiritual, intellectual and social ingredients that combine into a rewarding amalgam.

May God reward the noble sons of St. Augustine.

Censorship Stands Accused

Charles Shreiner (extr. left), of the Catholic Standard & Times and Thomas J. O'Toole, (2nd from right) principal speakers during the Forum on censorship, discuss topic with Father Rongione before opening session on Monday, July 15th. Those attending were treated to a lively and scholarly discussion of this controversial subject. Sister Antoninius looks on.

Reporter's notes: After a brief recess the court is once again filled with quiet, anxious people intent upon following every detail of the last session of what has turned out to be a very unusual case. Throughout the previous sessions, many witnesses and much evidence had been brought forward by both prosecution and defense. It remains now for the attorneys to sum up their cases and await the jury's decision. The spectators lean forward as the prosecuting attorney, Mr. John Q. Public, rises from his place and walks toward the jury box. The case against censorship:

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, you have heard the testimony of the witnesses. You have heard the charges brought against the plaintiff, but because of the importance of your decision, let me bring these charges briefly before you once again.

"We accuse the defendant of resorting to the use of aliases such as 'Critical Selection' and 'Consumer Control' when confronted with proof that Censorship itself is incompatible with democratic ideals.

"We accuse the defendant of subversive attempts to interpret the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution in the light of its own narrow-minded attitude.

"We accuse the defendant of making efforts to control even the Supreme Court by its constant complaint of '. . . vague definitions'.

"We accuse the defendant of crimes against the people—
. . . against the writers, painters and sculptors whom it seeks to enslave
. . . against the motion picture producers whom it wishes to intimidate
. . . against the publishers and dealers whom it tries to impoverish
. . . against all people whose rights to read and see what they choose are being threatened.

"If we allow such action to continue, we alone are to blame when we at last awaken to the fact that we have lost our most cherished freedom . . . freedom to write what we please . . . read what we please and say what we please.

"I urge you, then, to stand firmly against this threat. By your decision, render powerless this usurper of liberty! Let your decision show the true American spirit of liberty, a spirit can be expressed in words borrowed from Voltaire, 'I wholly disapprove of what you say and will defend to the death your right to say it.'

"The Court rests its case."

Counsel for the defense:

"Mr. Public closed his case by quoting from Voltaire; I shall open mine by quoting from Lewis Carroll. 'When I use a word it means just what I want it to mean, no more, no less.' Thus spoke Humpty Dumpty—thus spoke Mr. Public. The word 'censorship' has many shades of meaning—some admittedly undemocratic, others far removed from anything which would constitute a threat to democracy. My client belongs in the second category.

"Mr. Public accuses us of adopting aliases. Are not names such as 'Critical Selection' and 'Consumer Control' as well as the name 'Censorship' itself only expressive of the rights we all have to select our reading and control what we bring into our homes?

"Mr. Public accuses us of subversive activity. Are we so foolish as to undermine our own freedoms? Who cherishes more the freedoms provided for in the First and Fourteenth Amendments? Are we destroyers of these freedoms because we insist that the Founding Fathers never intended that freedom should be a cloak for license?

"Mr. Public accuses us of attempting to control the Supreme Court. Does he base his accusation on our obvious joy when that court pronounced its definition of obscenity? If so, he must also accuse the many others throughout the land who welcomed a decision which put obscenity outside the protecting limits of the Constitution.

"Mr. Public next accuses us of a long list of crimes against the people. I do not intend to take up each charge separately. However, I do question the charges. Have any of the many witnesses given substantial proof of their enslavement, intimidation, or impoverishment?

"Were any of the writers, painters, or sculptors who gave testimony, truely artists whose creative ability had been enslaved? Were they not rather men whose 'creative abilty' lay in the field of easy money-making schemes?

"And these 'intimidated' motion picture producers, how effective has been the intimidation? We can urge a selective public to stay away from obscene films, but many producers continue to produce similar one.

"Who are the impoverished dealers and publishers? How many have declared themselves bankrupt? They seem wealthy enough to pay for large scale advertising of the immoral writings, I refuse to call it literature, with which they stock their shelves.

"You ladies and gentlemen of the jury, represent the largest class 'victimized' by my client. Mr. Public accuses us of conspiring against your rights to read and see what you choose. Ask yourselves—how much truth is there in this accusation? It is true that we have a motion picture code known as the Legion of Decency. It is also true that we have an organization known as the National Organization for Decent Literature. It is likewise true that many smaller groups, under the auspices of men trained in the application of the moral law, have attempted to clean up some the newsstands which display indecent books and magazines. If guilt there be in such action, then indeed, we plead guilty.

"But can such action be evil? Good, thinking people will always have an abhorrence for flagrant indecency. Our protests against this problem are not attempts to acquire control over object is to resist efforts to throw all mediums of communication. Our aside basic moral principles of decency, principles which are both the foundation and protection of democracy.

"The Counsel for Defense rests his case."

Reporter's note: The Judge then addressed the members of the jury, reminding them of their grave obligation to render a just verdict. The spectators conferred quietly among themselves while the jury deliberated. "What would their verdict be?"

What is your verdict? You are the jury!

Youth's Ideal:

Hero Beholds 'The Greatest Hero Of All Times'

By SR. St. Anthony, CND

Sister Mary Berchmans walked slowly back to her classroom. To say that she was stunned would be an understatement. She had been finishing lunch when called to the telephone in the Principal's Office, to learn of a noontime accident. One of her boys had collided with a fast-moving truck. His bike had been shattered and he had been instantly killed. Could it really be Joe Sheridan! Why only yesterday . . .

Yes, only yesterday, while straightening the desks after class, Sister M. Berchmans had paused at Joe's desk. She had raised the lid and stood aghast. Such an array of pictures as were plastered there! Joe surely was a hero worshipper. Sister remembered the first picture he had put there in the earlier days of September. All his heroes then were baseball men. He rushed in one morning holding up Herb Score's picture, "Wish I could be like him, Sister!!" Joe pasted the picture inside his desk and often during class would raise the lid for a glimpse of the player. When the World Series was over and football began, Sister noticed new faces appearing and she asked Joe why he preferred them. Unhesitatingly he replied, "Why they're the great heroes these days." Just last week all others were eclipsed by hockey stars.

So, yesterday, Sister had gazed at the fine display for some minutes, then, going to her own desk she had taken a large print of Our Lord carrying His Cross. She placed this beside the pictures in Joe's desk and wrote underneath "THE GREATEST HERO OF ALL TIME."

Eagerly Sister had awaited Joe's arrival this morning. A few minutes before the final bell he arrived, interestedly showing one of his pals another picture to be added to his collection. Sister could not see his face, but she noticed that he sat down and gazed at his surprise-picture for a long time. No mention was made of it during the morning, but Sister saw Joe open his desk several times and look in awe at his new treasure. As the boys rushed from the class at noon, he grinned at Sister M. Berchmans and mumbled — "Guess you're right, Sister. I'd sure like to be a little more like HIM."

Little did Sister realize then how soon Joe was to see his new HERO.

Father Hubert Szanto Reveals Experiences

Interview with Father Hubert S. Szanto, O. Praem. Our Lady of Daylesford Priory, Paoli, Pennsylvania as told to Sr. M. Rose Anita, O.P.

Q. When did you leave Hungary, Father?

A. In November, 1948, I was sent to the Norbertine Monastery in Wilten, near Innsbruck, Austria. I was six years there and I was graduated from Innsbruck University. I came to America to form a new community of Hungarian priests (Norbertine), with seven more, who had the opportunity to leave Hungary. The purpose will be achieved this September when we start a new house in California. We will teach in the Diocesan High School in Santa Anna in the Archdiocese of Los Angeles.

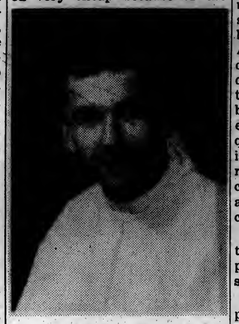
Q. Where were you stationed in Hungary?

A. I came from Csorna, a town of approximately five thousand people. It is located near the city of Gyor, which was often mentioned in the Hungarian uprising of the last year.

Q. What was the effect on the Catholic Schools in Hungary when the Russians came into Hungary?

A. Formerly the schools were operated by the Religious whose salary was paid by the government. The administration was independent of government rule. The lands belonging to the Order helped provide support for the school.

In 1945, the government took all the land away, depriving the schools of independent support. They continued, however, to pay the salary of the teachers.



In 1948, the schools were taken away because of the order of Cardinal Mindzenty to all teachers and religious asking them not to cooperate with the Communists.

Q. What was your first impression of New York when your plane landed at Idlewild?

A. I remember seeing, very far away, the skycrapers of New York. I, also, for the first time, saw a helicopter. On the first impression I couldn't appreciate the skyscrapers, but afterwards I saw them nearer. My neck hurt but I didn't find the style I was looking for. I couldn't decide in what style of architecture they were built.

In Europe, I hadn't seen any television, although I knew that there were such things.

The prices in the stores seemed very cheap because of the changing of money. Something $100 seemed cheap, because 100 Schilling of Austrian money is worth only about $4.00. $1.00 is equal to about 25 schillngs. This counting and comparison of prices continued for several months until I got used to it.

FATHER SZANTO
Hungarian Priest

Q. Do you find that the people in the United States consider religion important in their lives?

A. The people in America who are going to Church are going much more from an inner feeling than from attachment to the Church through tradition. Therefore, the Catholics here are much more active because in their hearts they know they need the Church. The Church depends on the people for the support of the schools, and that is one reason why the Church and the people are so close. Another reason is the historical suppressing of the Catholics which drew the people closer to the Church. The Catholic Schools are much more independent.

Q. How would you compare Hungarian and American education?

A. From the first view, it would seem that in the European Gymnasium (Junior and Senior High) a student receives much more knowledge than in an American High School. This is true because the teachers have more means of forcing the students ot study. Besides this, the Gymnasium is a school for a more or less selected group. The schools are also smaller than here. On the other hand, the American High School is a more democratic institution which opposes class difference among the people. Here the distinction between "learned" and "unlearned" men does not show. The question could be raised: "What is better, democarcy or a little more knowledge in certain classes of the population?" The answer is: "Certainly, Democracy."

Q. Do you have any comment to make about the American people as you have found them since your arrival?

A. I find that the American people are very kind and helpful. They are friendly, and priests enjoy much more respect than in Europe, not only from Catholics, but from people of other faiths as well.

When I arrived, I thought there would be many papers and questionnaires to be answered, as well as reporting regularly to the local police office. However, nobody seemed to place too much importance on the papers, and without sending for me, the immigration officer sent through my identification papers. In Austria, in the beginning it was necessary to report every month to the police station to sign papers informing them that I was still there and that I didn't do anything wrong.

NOTE:

Besides Father Szanto, who is spending his second year at Villanova, we have also:

One Augustinian priest from Italy.

One Augustinian priest from Australia.

One Augustinian theologian from Mexico.

Several priests from Spain among whom are Augustinian Recollects (completely separate Order).

Several Sisters from India, Ireland and Canada.

Mr. Trezza Attends ALA Convention; Hears Problems Of Higher Education

Sister Mary Etheldreda, R.S.M.

Mr. Alphonsus Trezza, Executive secretary of the Catholic Association, whose office is at Villanova University, attended the recent convention of the American Library Association, held in Kansas City, June 23-29.

Mr. Trezza generously shared his information and experiences with the classes he teaches in the Library Science department and now with the general student body by means of this column.

He stated that Reverend Paul C. Reinert, President of St. Louis University, drew one of the largest audiences during the convention when he spoke on the subject Problems of Higher Education.

Evaluation Discussed

The discussions and reports on Accreditation brought attention to the Catholic institutions which have been evaluated within the last five years. Catholic University of America still stands approved for the giving of graduate degrees in Library Science. Rosary College, River Forest, Illinois works towards meeting the demands of A.L.A. and ask for re-evaluation this Fall.

Saint Catherine's, one of the oldest colleges in the field of Library Science, has definitely decided to proceed at an undergraduated level.

However, even these schools recognize the need for assistance from A.L.A. in drawing up plans for teacher-training and for accreditation.

Former President of the United States Harry Truman attended the Convention and spoke at one of the general sessions on the necessity for the kind of library recently established for preservation of presidential papers and such.

Scholarly Material

Since these are indicative of the tenor of the times of each administration, they provide scholars with invaluable material in years to come.

In the past, heirs or others, who did not realize or appreciate the worth of such material, have often destroyed it.

Need For Our Support

As Catholic educators we do well to support so strong and influential an organization as the American Library Association. They have decided definitely to move the central office to Washington, D.C. In about two years they hope to be established there.

Religious Thespians Perform Cast Presents 'Cradle Song';

Something new has been added to the summer school schedule at Villanova! Under the patient and efficient direction of Mr. Duprey, Sisters from various Communities are joining together in the production of a play.

The Cradle Song, to be presented July 29, 30, 31 was written by Gregorio and Maria Martinez Sierra it is a two-act comedy which take place in a cloistered convent of Dominican nuns.

As the curtain rises, the Sisters are celebrating the feast day of their Reverend Mother. Several presents arrive at the convent, creating an unusual air of excitement, especially among the young novices.

Basket Bewilders Sisters

One gift, a basket containing baby, Teresa, sends the excitement soaring to great heights! The Sisters are betwixt and between as to how to handle the situation, when the convent doctor offers a solution: he will adopt the baby, and the Sisters will be responsible for her upbringing. Throughout the play is revealed the growing attachment of Teresa for the Sisters, and vice-versa.

One Sister in particular, Sr. Joanna of the Cross, has been entrusted with the care of Teresa. Sr. Joanna was one of a large family of children, and readily assumed her role of "mothering" the foundling.

The act progresses with visible traces of humor, especially in the person of the Vicaress, a rigid and righteous person, who is appalled at the prospect of a child infringing on the profound calm of the cloister. Sr. Marcella, the youngest member of the community, is a fun-loving, quick-witted person, who shocks the older Sisters by her lively escapades.

Action Progresses

In the second act Teresa now 18 years old is preparing to be married. The nuns are finishing her bridal things, and everyone offers contributions and suggestions. Antonio is put through a third degree by the anxious Sisters, who are saddened at the idea of relinquishing their loving and tender solicitude. His embarrassing and unusual position is laugh-provoking.

With the exception of the Doctor, Teresa and Antonio, the play is being enacted by an all-Sister cast.

Library Science Discloses Plans; Features Exhibits

Library Science Department anounces that beginning with the fall semester, courses in library science will be offered on Saturdays.

Not quite ready to participate in the graduate expansion program introduced in English, history, and mathematics, the department will probably participate fully from September, 1958. Plans are being formulated to provide late afternoon and evening classes daily, beginning at that time.

"At present, there is a greater demand for library science by elementary and secondary school librarians," states Reverend Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., departmental chairman, "therefore, our program is planned principally for librarians in elementary and secondary schools, rather than public, industrial, or university librarians."

Now on Display

Newly framed, reproductions of paintings of St. Augustine and numerous Augustinians through the centuries, as far back as the 14th century, are currently on display in the Villanova Room, second floor of the library.

Tabbed with painters' names—Boticelli and Rubens among the more famous—each reproduction is also identified as to year painted in an allocation of the original at present.

After a final, fall exhibition, the paintings will be displayed in various places throughout the library building.

It's real . . .

Located in the main foyer of the library is a nine foot, marble grandfather's clock recently acquired. A product of Tiffany's in New York and one of only seven like creations, the clock was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Flemming.

Primarily ornamental, the gift was made in memory of the mother of Mr. Flemming, '52.

Come, look, listen . . .

Current innovations in the library are a TV, radio, and phonograph on an individual transmission hook-up. Located in the reserve book room, the instruments are available to all comers, six at a time, at anytime during the day.

Special features of the TV hook-up are individaul earphones which fit under the chin (especially designed to suit most coifs) and individual volume control enabling each listener to adjust volume to suit himself without affecting other listeners. The operation of these instruments is soundless and does not disturb neighboring readers.

Commissioned by Father Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., the work was done just in time for the summer session by Mr. Richard B. Cuff '54, currently an electrical engineer at Bryn Mawr.

Junior Journalists . . .

Father Falvey is very enthusiastic in planning the Villanova Annual Press Conference for secondary schools.

Scheduled for October 12, the program will be highlighted with addresses given by His Excellency, the Most Reverend John J. Wright, D.D., Bishop of Worcester, Mass., and Mr. John J. Liney, Jr., creator of comic strip character, Henry.

Among outstanding features will be the open forum for members of publication staffs. The forum was a new feature for newspapers last year. This year, the yearbook will have one as well.

SUMMER SCHOOL-1957

A Busy Day Ahead

Here Sisters (left to right) Patrick Joseph, S.C.H.: John Raymond, S.C.H.: and Joseph Marie, S.S.J. leave their Sullivan Hall Dormitory, books in hand, prepared for the busy day ahead.

Down To Work

An Intellectual Discussion

Father Louis Rongione, Dean of the Summer School is never too busy to see the students. Miss Susan Yeager joins Sister Stephanie, C.F.M. (standing) and (seated left to right) Sisters Mary Blaise, C.F.M., and Edmund Marie, O.S.F.

Two Scholars

It isn't only the air conditioning that makes the library a busy place. Its thousands of volumes contain many of the sisters sew. Sister M. Hermanette, S.C.C. (left), and Sister M. Gemma, S.C.C. find this work assignment a pleasant duty.

Woes Emerge From Nun's Diary

By Sr. M. Rosalima, CSFN

June 23—
Arrived today, 5:30 p.m. Just made it to carry the luggage up to my room and make it for supper at 5:59 (supper served from 5 to 6 p.m. Sundays).

Did I say "carry luggage"? It was three flights up and 50 feet over from the stairway. My companion deserted me at the crucial moment (with my reluctant permission—true) and the pleasure was all mine. She returned when I was mopping up—myself, of course—and brightly remarked "My, but I feel tired. Isn't it strange how tired you can get from DOING NOTHING " It took all my Christian charity to call a truce after that!

It's exciting to be here! That's all for today, but I'll be back each night; that's a promise!

June 24—
You've never seen anything like it! What a time we had getting registered, getting courses approved, and getting room keys—especially getting room keys.

Miss Boyle's hair began to curl noticeably—not that it wasn't curly to start with. Despite all precautioning measures taken, she was faced with the problem of two people (different orders) claiming the same room every 25th application made. That's no mean problem to face, considering that there are some 450 single rooms assigned.

After three hours on line (one Sister started an hour later and finished an hour sooner. $64,000 question: HOW?) we fell to in the dining room. Ah, the food, the music, the air-conditioning!

June 25—
Opening Mass today. My neighbor didn't get there, though. She walked out of her room, left the latch button set and her key inside. Along came a gust of wind and—there was one extra place in chapel.

Father Rongione's address made us feel very welcome. I wouldn't complain about classes except that my first class is at Barry Hall, my second at Belle Aire, and my third at Barry Hall again. The profs are really nice—so cheerful and considerate. I'm absolutely positive that I'm going to enjoy this summer. Everything about it promises satisfaction—classes, room accommodations, activities, especially swimming. Three days a week are for the Sisters, and I'm not missing a single one!

June 26—
All classes were held on regular schedule today. I'm not so sure that my anticipations remain as optimistic as they were yesterday. I have two term papers to write, eight chapters to summarize, an oral to make, plus a language exam to take. Besides, there are only 35 days left to final exams.

June 27—
Swam the length of the pool up and back five times and even tried some fancy diving. Very refreshing! It's quite a project to sleep late in the morning. Alarms start going off at 4:50 a.m. Since Mass is at 6:30, I imagine the last alarm couldn't possibly ring later than 6:15. Maybe there's a speed demon we haven't heard about though . . .

June 28—
Friday. We had our first weekly movie, "The Swan." You know the type—a princess falls in love with a commoner. The ending was traditional, of course. What was especially worthy of comment, however, was the carefree appearance of some few in the audience who came without books or note cards. Wonder what courses they're in . . .

June 29—
Saturday and in school, but that's because we want time off on July 4th to shoot some firecrackers. Went swimming!

June 30—
Our Sunday for 8:15 Mass. I slept to the last possible second. Ever since my days began to extend from morning to morning instead of morning to evening, every such opportunity is more than welcome.

July 1—
31 days left to exams. Swam the length of the pool up and back four times. Haunted the library the rest of the afternoon and evening, as usual.

July 2—
Blessed Mother's feast. To celebrate, we went to the Snack Bar for a treat at 7:35—it closed at 7:30.

July 3—
Today's my day! I was only 87th in line for breakfast. That's quite a push from 175th place. There's a trick to advance, but I won't disclose it until I've perfected my technique.

July 4—
Bang! Swam the length of the pool up and back—three times. No diving—no time!

July 5 to 8—
Doing research. I staked out a claim on one of the desks in the stacks. Swam the length of the pool up and back once today; no time for more.

July 9 & 10—
Busy. Oral report Thursday.

July 11 to 19—
Working on paper No. 1, a criticism of criticisms. I intend to prove that literary criticism is the most unnecessary necessary evil extant in English studies today. Went to look at the pool yesterday. The water looked wet.

July 20—
Went to the Logan Square Library. I've exhausted Villanova library, literary section; I've exhausted the librarian; in fact, I'm exhausted too!

July 21—
Typed my summaries of the 8 chapters due tomorrow. How are we supposed to narrow down 5000 words to 200?

July 22—
Working on paper No. 2. I received a letter from home today. Mother's very happy that I'm getting a break spending my vacation away from "home".

July 24—
Till sorking won pat thaper!

July 25 to 28—
Wrote, re-wrote, typed IT.

July 29—
Turned my paper in. I almost cried; it hurt that much to part with that constant (of late) companion.

July 30—
Ureka! I was fifth in line for breakfast and it works! What? My new technique, of course. Here are some points you may want to remember:

Look sleepy as you come down the chapel stairs after Mass (it fools the crowd). They misjudge your capacity, and while they are still unaware, dash up about 50 places.

Sometimes, if you look quite excited and call an imaginary companion's name around the forbidding shoulder of the triple block before you, it opens to let you pass (surprise reaction). Take advantage immediately.

As a drastic means (on some mornings everybody seems more than normally hungry) you can try falling down the last three or four chapel steps. That stops the crowd. In fact, some will even turn back to see what happened. Then, while all mill around trying to find out what happened, slip around the edge of the crowd and beat them to the lead. Once your lead is established, you're in the clear!

July 31—
Final exams tomorrow. I'm not too worried because I know my philosophical conclusions relating to exams are sure to tide me over, come what may. Consider this:

There are only 2 things to worry about—you'll either get an exam, or you won't. If you don't get it, there's nothing to worry about; if you do . . .

There are only 2 things left to worry about—it will be either easy or tough. If it is easy, there's nothing left to worry about; if it is tough . . .

There are only 2 things left to worry about—you will either know the answers or you'll guess. If you know the answers, there's nothing left to worry about; if you guess . . .

There are only 2 things left to worry about—your guesses will be either right or wrong. If they are right, there's nothing left to worry about; if they are wrong (mostly) . . .

There are only 2 things left to worry about—you'll either pass or flunk. If you pass, there is nothing left to worry about; if you flunk . . .

You are going to be so busy washing pots, scrubbing floors, weeding the garden, and mending the linen that you won't have any time left to worry, so . . .

August 1—
Exams today. I didn't feel well at all. My elbows and knees were weak, rubbery. Must be getting the grippe.

August 2—
It must be the grippe; I almost fainted today. That class was so stuffy. I don't understand how I endured it all summer with no ill effects . . .

August 3—
They carried me out of the last exam class today. My "grippe" must have come to a crisis though, because I felt much better this afternoon. I believe there would be no ill effects now, if I just knew what I was getting on my report slip.

Miss Boyle Fills Position of Dean of Women; Claims Membership in Five Organizations

By Sr. M. Mechtilda, SSJ

"It's my first summer with the nuns and I love it," states Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, Dean of Women at Villanova University.

Although Miss Boyle's appointment took place in February, until this present summer session her duties consisted primarily in the housing of women students off campus, and discipline. She also sponsors the ladies' social affairs and extra-curricular activities.

Stupendous Job

Since June 24th, 770 nuns representing 48 different communities, and 122 lay women swarm about Room 134. This little bee hive in Mendel generates activity. From early morning until late in the evening, Miss Boyle proposes and plans spiritual, educational, and recreational diversions for "her charges."

"Summer school is so different from the winter sessions," remarked Miss Boyle. "It's more interesting, too. The girls have a tendency to shy authority; but Sisters, no. They are simple, straightforward, and docile. All my life I've placed them on a pedestal, and that, in my opinion, is just where they belong."

Sacrifices Career

When asked to assume the responsibilities of mentor, Miss Boyle hesitated because it meant giving up her career of teaching and nursing. Prior to her new position, she served on the faculty for three years as an instructor in the institution's nursing division.

Miss Boyle, a resident of Berwyn, Pa., graduated from the Sisters of Mercy Academy in Merion, spent two years at Immaculata College, and for three years attended the Bryn Maur Hospital School of Nursing; after which she gave three years of service to her country in the Navy Nurse Corps.

Returning from the Navy, the dean continued her studies at Villanova, and received her B.S. degree in Nursing Education in 1953.

Graduate of U of P

Although Miss Boyle taught nursing here at Villanova, she attended classes at the University of Pennsylvania where she majored in counseling and guidance, but mastered in Education. This school conferred on her a Master's Degree in Education in 1956.

She is a member of the American College Personnel Association, the Pennsylvania Association of Dean of Women, and is affiliated with the American Nurses Association and the National League of Nursing.

Neghborly Pride

On May 8, 1957, the Berwyn Business Association presented Miss Boyle a plaque "in commendation upon her selection as the first woman to hold the position of Dean of Women at Villanova University."

"Life here at the University proves most enjoyable for the Dean of Women, for," says, she, "meeting different personalities fascinates me, and besides, the administration treats me beautifully. They are so cooperative."

Panel Members Discuss Problem of Censorship

O.S.A., of Villanova's Department of Religion, who was the first panelist, added to Mr. O'Toole's discussion on obscenity by defining it in the light of moral theology.

Father also emphasized the definite connection between immorality and obscenity especially as manifested in youth.

The question of the "by whom, for whom and how" of censorship was the problem presented by Mr. Donald M. Collins of the School of Law of Villanova.

Mr. Collins stressed the need of making the Supreme Court's decision on obscenity effective by democratic action on the part of all censoring agencies, whether social, business or private, as well as by the states.

Department of History

Villanova's Department of History and Political Science was represented by Doctor Fritz Nova. "Many of the evils of censorship come from lack of organization," said Mr. Nova.

He stated some of the evils, particularly that of censorship exercised indiscriminately by persons ". . . not outstanding for selection."

Stresses Need For Morality

Brother E. Anthony Wallace, F.S.C., represented Villanova's Department of Education and urged the importance of raising the community standards by stressing the need of fundamental morality.

Brother Anthony also called attention to the policy of some newspapers which decry crime and juvenile delinquency on their editorial pages and publicize advertisements which blatantly portray crime and immorality.

After a final discussion among the members of the panel, several questions were asked, most of which dealt with problems of prior restraints and the action taken against those who print, publish, or exhibit matter that is clearly obscene.

Point of View

Tuesday's session of the forum, directed by Mr. O'Toole, had as its topic, "Creativity and Censorship: The Writer's Point of View."

Mr. Charles Shreiner, staff member of the Catholic Standard and Times and holder of an M.A. in Journalism, gave the principal address. "Mr. Shreiner acted," to quote Mr. O'Toole, ". . . as a devil's advocate" in presenting some of the views held by some non-Catholic writers, views which charge us with a propagandistic conformity to the discipline of morality and a negative viewpoint to all that is produced by other members of our pluralistic society.

"Intolerance of their opinion," said Mr. Shreiner, "is one charge we clearly ignore; these opinions were all published in Catholic periodicals." Mr Schreiner continued, "That such views are wrong, we as Catholics know, but we should know that such views are held."

Quotes Father Murray, S.J.

Father Courtney Murray's well-known stand on censorship was quoted as Mr. Shreiner pointed out the importance of moving slowly in a pluralistic society.

"We know what the occasion of sin is and we know the value of even one immortal soul and because of this knowledge we . . . We know that the stability want our moral code observed. of any nation is based in a high moral standard . . . the most effective means must be used, but we must remember we are a minority and proceed without anxiety."

Attitude of the Writer

Dr. Charles Bernardin, Chairman of the Villanova English Department, brought out the point that a serious writer is not swayed by censorship because as an artist he will not be dictated to.

The necessity of having well qualified censors who are fully equipped to judge literature was another important feature of Dr. Bernardin's contribution to the forum.

Meaning of Censorship

"Censorship has come into disrepute because of the change of meaning in words themselves," stated Reverend Louis Rongione, O.S.A., Dean of the Graduate Division of Villanova. After proving this point, Father showed that we all exercise censorship in one form or other everytime we choose a book or a program. Censorship is not only good, but it is also necessary and properly understood, it can never endanger either freedom of the press or freedom of speech.

Understanding

A librarian's understanding of the problem was presented by Alphonsus Trezza, Executive Secretary of the Catholic Library Association and a member of Villanova's Library Science Department.

Mr. Trezza stated that censorship is defensible. We have the right to try to elevate the moral values of those among whom we live, but we will not be able to accomplish this by trying to impose our views on others.

Mr. Trezza also urged the listeners to read more deeply into the subject of censorship and gave titles and authors dealing with this topic.

Animated Discussion

Once again there was a lively and enlightening discussion and Mr. O'Toole quoted a sentence from Jacques Maritain which seemed to express the spirit of the forum, "While error has no rights, people who err do have rights." Those who do not agree with the Catholic stand on censorship usually do not understand its scope.

The evils which can be checked by censorship are not found in the works of most writers; it

Summer Enrollment Sets New Attendance Record

By Sr. M. John Helene, OP

Although last summer's enrollment was considered to be the largest in the history of Villanova University there has been an increase of five and one-half per cent.

Enrollment Rises

On the campus at Villanova there are 1327 students attending daily classes. In Hallahan in Philadelphia there are 285 in attendance. The extension has 402; thus giving an entire total of 2014 compared to last year's 1900.

The majority of the enrolled students are Sisters of about fifty different communities who are engaged in teaching or nursing. Priests, Brothers, and Seminarians also attend various classes.

Lay Students

Of the lay students there has been a marked increase in the number of young ladies (especially in the science department) who are preparing to be nurses.

This marked increase is due to the wonderful spiritual, moral, physical to say nothing of the educational benefits all at Villanova.

When done to a turn, garnish with a small salary, and serve hot to a community."

LATEST ADDITION

By next summer Villanova's new Commerce & Finance building will be in operation. The new structure will contain 32 classrooms varying in size from 30 to 90 seats and two huge lecture halls seating 180 each. Scheduled for completion in mid-winter, the building will accomodate about 2,500 students with offices and facilities for 60 faculty members.

FINE ARTS:

University Proffers Music, Theater Arts

By Bob Lima

The Summer Session at Villanova provides excellent opportunity for experimentation in the broad field of education. The two best examples of this are the new courses being offered in Drama and Music.—Basic Theatre Arts and Music Workshop.

The latter is not an accredited course, and is being offered only as an extra-curricular activity. However, the interest in liturgical music and music education is so pronounced at the present time that more than likely the Workshop will atain full course stature within the year.

Mr. Cullen Directs

Mr. James Cullen, a new full-time faculty appointee, is the choice of Fr. Joseph Boyle to instruct in the Workshop. His background extends from membership in the Temple University Glee Club through the associate directorship with The Reading Philharmonic.

He was "Assistant to the Director of Choral Activities" at Temple, and later was named "Director of Choral Activities" at Xavier U. in New Orleans. Mr. Cullen describes as the outstanding memory of his music career a tour of Europe in 1953 as a member of the Temple Glee Club.

Varied Plans

In our interview with Mr. Cullen we learned of the expansive plans that are now being considered in the preparation of a varied music program.

He feels that there are four needs to be serviced in Villanova through music: first, he insists on the broadening of cultural ideas; second an increase of educational values through the appreciation of music; third, revival of interest in Liturgical music; fourth, and this applies primarily to the summer session, an opportunity for teachers to learn "teachable" methods in music.

Mr. Cullen's duties will be to teach, conduct the University Concert Band and direct the Villanova Singers and the Liturgical Choir which will be reorganized in the fall.

Threatre Arts

The Basic Theatre Arts course has been added to the curriculum to serve the growing need for a concise presentation of Theatre Technique. The work is laid out so as to afford each student the chance to prepare in a professional manner a production of his choosing.

The instructor is Mr. Richard Duprey, M.A., of the English Department, whose idea in presenting the course is to let the student examine and work with the "tools" of Theatre so that when planning his own production he will be able to select the method or approach that best suits him and make it work.

Topics Discussed

The main topics discussed in accordance with the above are: basic ideology, methods of costuming, techniques of lighting, budget, set design and construction, and play direction. As the topics are taken up the student applies them to the play he has selected.

The result is a close scrutiny and application of the integral parts that must be considered in the planning of a production. Special attention is also given to specific topics that arise and thereby the course is made elastic.

Mr. Duprey's Background

Mr. Duprey's experience in the theatre is varied. A graduate of St. Anselm's College, he did his graduate work at Tufts University after transferring from Fordham. He has been an announcer for WMUR and WMUR-TV in Massachussetts and has appeared in "The Mikado," "Macbeth," "Career Angel" and many other productions. Along with his acting activities Mr. Duprey has taken time out to write and direct a full-length play, "The Vigil", at Tufts.

Another of his plays will be presented there this summer, while a third is now in the process of completion. To his credit also are a number of one-act plays.

Duprey's Present Position

At the present time he is the Director of the BELLE MASQUE Dramatic Society and will in the fall term present George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" in the "round". This will be the first arena production ever to be staged at Villanova and one of the rare performances of the play outside the professional stage. It will certainly be a must on the area's fall theatre list.

All this activity in Theatre & Music bears promise of great things to come. The Arts are definitely on the upgrade at Villanova.

History Students Visit Gettysburg

To provide history students with an opportunity to witness scenes of major interest in the study and consideration of the Civil War, departmental Chairman Harold F. Hartman aranged a field trip to Gettysburg for 48 religious and 6 lay students.

Fr. Dunne Officiates

Preceded on Monday by a special lecture given by Dr. Hartman in reference to the importance of the sites to be visited, the purpose of the trip was further realized through the informative talks offered enroute yesterday by the Rev. John R. Dunne, O.S.A.

Having left the campus at 8 a.m. the sight-seers arrived at Gettysburg at approximately 11:45 a.m., and returned about 9:30 p.m.

Double Feature

The main feature of the day was a double tour of the battlefield area, presenting in separate trips scenes of the first day's fighting and second and third day's fighting respectively. This major tour, consuming the greater part of the afternoon, was preceded by a visit to the National Cemetery and followed by a viewing of the Gettysburg National Museum and of a cyclorama of Pickett's Charge.

After dinner, the return journey via Lancaster County offered a double dose of additional interest, a viewing of the home of James Buchanan and travel through the Amish country of Lancaster County.

Woes Emerge From Nun's Diary

By Sr. M. Rosalima, CSFN

June 23—
Arrived today, 5:30 p.m. Just made it to carry the luggage up to my room and make it for supper at 5:59 (supper served from 5 to 6 p.m. Sundays).

Did I say "carry luggage"? It was three flights up and 50 feet over from the stairway. My companion deserted me at the crucial moment (with my reluctant permission—true) and the pleasure was all mine. She returned when I was mopping up—myself, of course—and brightly remarked "My, but I feel tired. Isn't it strange how tired you can get from DOING NOTHING " It took all my Christian charity to call a truce after that!

It's exciting to be here! That's all for today, but I'll be back each night; that's a promise!

June 24—
You've never seen anything like it! What a time we had getting registered, getting courses approved, and getting room keys—especially getting room keys.

Miss Boyle's hair began to curl noticeably—not that it wasn't curly to start with. Despite all precautioning measures taken, she was faced with the problem of two people (different orders) claiming the same room every 25th application made. That's no mean problem to face, considering that there are some 450 single rooms assigned.

After three hours on line (one Sister started an hour later and finished an hour sooner. $64,000 question: HOW?) we fell to in the dining room. Ah, the food, the music, the air-conditioning!

June 25—
Opening Mass today. My neighbor didn't get there, though. She walked out of her room, left the latch button set and her key inside. Along came a gust of wind and—there was one extra place in chapel.

Father Rongione's address made us feel very welcome. I wouldn't complain about classes except that my first class is at Barry Hall, my second at Belle Aire, and my third at Barry Hall again. The profs are really nice—so cheerful and considerate. I'm absolutely positive that I'm going to enjoy this summer. Everything about it promises satisfaction—classes, room accommodations, activities, especially swimming. Three days a week are for the Sisters, and I'm not missing a single one!

June 26—
All classes were held on regular schedule today. I'm not so sure that my anticipations remain as optimistic as they were yesterday. I have two term papers to write, eight chapters to summarize, an oral to make, plus a language exam to take. Besides, there are only 35 days left to final exams.

June 27—
Swam the length of the pool up and back five times and even tried some fancy diving. Very refreshing! It's quite a project to sleep late in the morning. Alarms start going off at 4:50 a.m. Since Mass is at 6:30, I imagine the last alarm couldn't possibly ring later than 6:15. Maybe there's a speed demon we haven't heard about though . . .

June 28—
Friday. We had our first weekly movie, "The Swan." You know the type—a princess falls in love with a commoner. The ending was traditional, of course. What was especially worthy of comment, however, was the carefree appearance of some few in the audience who came without books or note cards. Wonder what courses they're in . . .

June 29—
Saturday and in school, but that's because we want time off on July 4th to shoot some firecrackers. Went swimming!

June 30—
Our Sunday for 8:15 Mass. I slept to the last possible second. Ever since my days began to extend from morning to morning instead of morning to evening, every such opportunity is more than welcome.

July 1—
31 days left to exams. Swam the length of the pool up and back four times. Haunted the library the rest of the afternoon and evening, as usual.

July 2—
Blessed Mother's feast. To celebrate, we went to the Snack Bar for a treat at 7:35—it closed at 7:30.

July 3—
Today's my day! I was only 87th in line for breakfast. That's quite a push from 175th place. There's a trick to advance, but I won't disclose it until I've perfected my technique.

July 4—
Bang! Swam the length of the pool up and back—three times. No diving—no time!

July 5 to 8—
Doing research. I staked out a claim on one of the desks in the stacks. Swam the length of the pool up and back once today; no time for more.

July 9 & 10—
Busy. Oral report Thursday.

July 11 to 19—
Working on paper No. 1, a criticism of criticisms. I intend to prove that literary criticism is the most unnecessary necessary evil extant in English studies today. Went to look at the pool yesterday. The water looked wet.

July 20—
Went to the Logan Square Library. I've exhausted Villanova library, literary section; I've exhausted the librarian; in fact, I'm exhausted too!

July 21—
Typed my summaries of the 8 chapters due tomorrow. How are we supposed to narrow down 5000 words to 200?

July 22—
Working on paper No. 2. I received a letter from home today. Mother's very happy that I'm getting a break spending my vacation away from "home".

July 24—
Till sorking won pat thaper!

July 25 to 28—
Wrote, re-wrote, typed IT.

July 29—
Turned my paper in. I almost cried; it hurt that much to part with that constant (of late) companion.

July 30—
Ureka! I was fifth in line for breakfast and it works! What? My new technique, of course. Here are some points you may want to remember:

Look sleepy as you come down the chapel stairs after Mass (it fools the crowd). They misjudge your capacity, and while they are still unaware, dash up about 50 places.

Sometimes, if you look quite excited and call an imaginary companion's name around the forbidding shoulder of the triple block before you, it opens to let you pass (surprise reaction). Take advantage immediately.

As a drastic means (on some mornings everybody seems more than normally hungry) you can try falling down the last three or four chapel steps. That stops the crowd. In fact, some will even turn back to see what happened. Then, while all mill around trying to find out what happened, slip around the edge of the crowd and beat them to the lead. Once your lead is established, you're in the clear!

July 31—
Final exams tomorrow. I'm not too worried because I know my philosophical conclusions relating to exams are sure to tide me over, come what may. Consider this:

There are only 2 things to worry about—you'll either get an exam, or you won't. If you don't get it, there's nothing to worry about; if you do . . .

There are only 2 things left to worry about—it will be either easy or tough. If it is easy, there's nothing left to worry about; if it is tough . . .

There are only 2 things left to worry about—you will either know the answers or you'll guess. If you know the answers, there's nothing left to worry about; if you guess . . .

There are only 2 things left to worry about—your guesses will be either right or wrong. If they are right, there's nothing left to worry about; if they are wrong (mostly) . . .

There are only 2 things left to worry about—you'll either pass or flunk. If you pass, there is nothing left to worry about; if you flunk . . .

You are going to be so busy washing pots, scrubbing floors, weeding the garden, and mending the linen that you won't have any time left to worry, so . . .

August 1—
Exams today. I didn't feel well at all. My elbows and knees were weak, rubbery. Must be getting the grippe.

August 2—
It must be the grippe; I almost fainted today. That class was so stuffy. I don't understand how I endured it all summer with no ill effects . . .

August 3—
They carried me out of the last exam class today. My "grippe" must have come to a crisis though, because I felt much better this afternoon. I believe there would be no ill effects now, if I just knew what I was getting on my report slip.

Miss Boyle Fills Position of Dean of Women; Claims Membership in Five Organizations

By Sr. M. Mechtilda, SSJ

The main feature of the day was a double tour of the battlefield area, presenting in separate trips scenes of the first day's fighting and second and third day's fighting respectively. This major tour, consuming the greater part of the afternoon, was preceded by a visit to the National Cemetery and followed by a viewing of the Gettysburg National Museum and of a cyclorama of Pickett's Charge.

After dinner, the return journey via Lancaster County offered a double dose of additional interest, a viewing of the home of James Buchanan and travel through the Amish country of Lancaster County.

LATEST ADDITION

By next summer Villanova's new Commerce & Finance building will be in operation. The new structure will contain 32 classrooms varying in size from 30 to 90 seats and two huge lecture halls seating 180 each. Scheduled for completion in mid-winter, the building will accomodate about 2,500 students with offices and facilities for 60 faculty members.

FINE ARTS:

University Proffers Music, Theater Arts

By Bob Lima

The Summer Session at Villanova provides excellent opportunity for experimentation in the broad field of education. The two best examples of this are the new courses being offered in Drama and Music.—Basic Theatre Arts and Music Workshop.

The latter is not an accredited course, and is being offered only as an extra-curricular activity. However, the interest in liturgical music and music education is so pronounced at the present time that more than likely the Workshop will atain full course stature within the year.

Mr. Cullen Directs

Mr. James Cullen, a new full-time faculty appointee, is the choice of Fr. Joseph Boyle to instruct in the Workshop. His background extends from membership in the Temple University Glee Club through the associate directorship with The Reading Philharmonic.

He was "Assistant to the Director of Choral Activities" at Temple, and later was named "Director of Choral Activities" at Xavier U. in New Orleans. Mr. Cullen describes as the outstanding memory of his music career a tour of Europe in 1953 as a member of the Temple Glee Club.

Varied Plans

In our interview with Mr. Cullen we learned of the expansive plans that are now being considered in the preparation of a varied music program.

He feels that there are four needs to be serviced in Villanova through music: first, he insists on the broadening of cultural ideas; second an increase of educational values through the appreciation of music; third, revival of interest in Liturgical music; fourth, and this applies primarily to the summer session, an opportunity for teachers to learn "teachable" methods in music.

Mr. Cullen's duties will be to teach, conduct the University Concert Band and direct the Villanova Singers and the Liturgical Choir which will be reorganized in the fall.

Threatre Arts

The Basic Theatre Arts course has been added to the curriculum to serve the growing need for a concise presentation of Theatre Technique. The work is laid out so as to afford each student the chance to prepare in a professional manner a production of his choosing.

The instructor is Mr. Richard Duprey, M.A., of the English Department, whose idea in presenting the course is to let the student examine and work with the "tools" of Theatre so that when planning his own production he will be able to select the method or approach that best suits him and make it work.

Topics Discussed

The main topics discussed in accordance with the above are: basic ideology, methods of costuming, techniques of lighting, budget, set design and construction, and play direction. As the topics are taken up the student applies them to the play he has selected.

The result is a close scrutiny and application of the integral parts that must be considered in the planning of a production. Special attention is also given to specific topics that arise and thereby the course is made elastic.

Mr. Duprey's Background

Mr. Duprey's experience in the theatre is varied. A graduate of St. Anselm's College, he did his graduate work at Tufts University after transferring from Fordham. He has been an announcer for WMUR and WMUR-TV in Massachussetts and has appeared in "The Mikado," "Macbeth," "Career Angel" and many other productions. Along with his acting activities Mr. Duprey has taken time out to write and direct a full-length play, "The Vigil", at Tufts.

Another of his plays will be presented there this summer, while a third is now in the process of completion. To his credit also are a number of one-act plays.

Duprey's Present Position

At the present time he is the Director of the BELLE MASQUE Dramatic Society and will in the fall term present George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" in the "round". This will be the first arena production ever to be staged at Villanova and one of the rare performances of the play outside the professional stage. It will certainly be a must on the area's fall theatre list.

All this activity in Theatre & Music bears promise of great things to come. The Arts are definitely on the upgrade at Villanova.

Summer Faculty Includes Grandson of Al Smith

By Sr. Mary Corintha, OSF

"Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith," Oliver W. Holmes once wrote of a classmate in "The Boys." Among "The Priests" on the faculty this summer another Smith has been revealed the Rev. Arthur F. Smith, O.S.A.

What distinguishes this young Augustinian priest from the other countless Smiths is that he is the grandson of that "Happy Warrior," Alfred Emmanuel Smith, once the governor of New York and Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1928.

Teaching Career

Teaching for the first time in the Summer School, Father Smith, a history major, conducts classes in Medieval and U.S. Church History. During the school year, the boys at Carroll High School in Washington, D.C., receive the benefits of his training in American History.

A little more than ten years ago, young Arthur Smith came as a student to Villanova, where he was interested in Modern European History. Before graduation, however, he left the campus to enter the Augustinian novitiate. When he returned to his studies, his historical bent inclined toward American History, for several reasons.

Father Arthur, named for his father, the second son of the great statesman, does not, of course, remember his visits to the governor's mansion in Albany, for he was but three years old at the time. Readers of "Up Till Now," Al Smith's autobiography, will find pictures of these family scenes. For, despite many demands on his time as a public servant, the Democratic leader always found time to visit his son's family on Sundays.

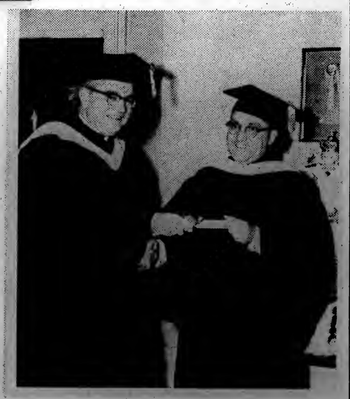
Later, as a schoolboy in New York, however, Father stayed at his grandparent's house during the week, returning to his own home on weekends.

Defeated though he was as Presidential candidate, Al Smith was successful in many ways. That he was ever the family man is evidenced by the fact that Father Arthur recalls "nothing particularly unusual" in their associations—" just the usual grandfather-grandson relationship."

Interest In History

"I've always been interested in history," Father responded when questioned about his choice for major studies. "Tough political background in the family is strong, it was not the chief factor which influenced my decision."

Catholic Issue



A great hue and cry was raised in 1928 over a Catholic's running for the highest office in the land. Will the same thing happen in 1960? "Catholicism, of course, was not the only issue in 1928," Father stated. "The promise of so-called Republican prosperity was the major issue. Perhaps never again could the same circumstances be reproduced. Today, a Catholic—Senator Kennedy, for instance—could, all things being equal, be elected President."

Willing to let the political laurels rest with the former Governor, the members of the Smith family are not actively engaged in politics. However, a young clerical visitor to many Senate meetings on Capitol Hill is young Alfred E. Smith, III, the younger brother of Father Arthur. An Augustinian cleric now studying in Washington, this tall young man with the famous name will be ordained next June.

Of the many notable accomplishments of the beloved Alfred E. Smith, truly he could be most proud of these two Augustinian grandsons.

Father J. Boyle Attends NEA Convention

By Sr. Mary Loretta, SBS

At the Centennial Convention of the National Education Association held in Philadelphia June 30 through July 5, the assemblies centered upon the theme, "An Educated People Moves Freedom Forward."

Among the 14,000 conventioneers was Villanova Academic Vice-President Father Joseph I. Boyle.

Vast Scope

The scope of the NEA Convention was vast. Addressing the various gatherings were such personages as the Honorable Richard M. Nixon, Vice-President of the United States, George M. Leader, Governor of Pensylvania, Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, and James B. Conant, former U.S. Ambassador to West Germany.

Diverse aspects of free-world education were covered in nearly sixty group discussions. Topics ranged from Child Health to the Geophysical Year.

One hunderd-fifty exhibitors displayed the latest advances in school equipment in Convention Hall's Exhibition Center. Programs of interest were presented in Robin Hood Dell and Convention Auditorium.

Martha Roundtree's Press Conference originated right from the stage of Convention Hall during a Sunday discussion period.

Pivotal Session

The pivotal session, however, was held in the Sheraton Hotel, July 3. Attendance at this Centennial Convocation was by special invitation only.

Speakers at the general session held in the morning included Dr. Conant and Norman Cousins, editor of The Saturday Review.

In the afternoon 120 discussion tables were set up in the main ballroom of the Sheraton. Seated at each table were from 8 to 10 educators from every part of the United States and Puerto Rico. Roll was taken of the 120 discussion leaders; there were but 2 absent.

One conventioneer had traveled 3,000 miles to attend this one session which lasted from 2:30 to 5 p.m. Father Boyle, lone priest at this special-invitation meeting, had abbreviated his Cuban trip to be present.

Among the topics discussed at this gathering of the intellectual elite were the following queries: What should education to serve a free society consist of? What structure will best serve for it? Should the school offer the student free access to all information?

Since the answers are strongly colored by the philosophies of the discussants, therefore, argues Father Boyle, it is imperative to make the minority tally. Wishing to alert more Catholic educators to the importance of the National Education Association, Father Boyle said:

Emphasizes Group Thinking

"The National Education Association is an organization composed of individuals rather than institutions. It is important to emphasize the group thinking of individual teachers rather than schools or institutions of learning.

It follows, therefore, that large segments of the teaching profession can, if they wish, "pack" a convention and promote a philosophy of education that might not truly reflect the real educational ideals of our country."

Await Printed Report

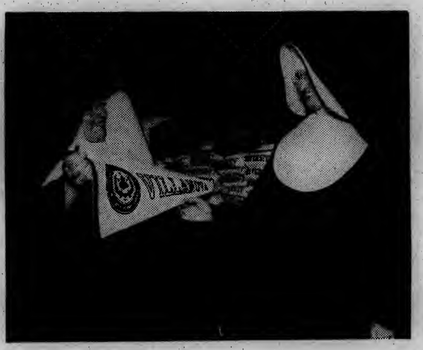
In the NEA, Catholic educators are very much in the minority status. The results of each discussion table's verbal thrashings were noted carefully on forms turned over to the committee preparing the convention report.

The NEA Report is expected to occasion vital argumentation throughout political as well as academic circles when it rolls off the preses in September.

Public school personnel comprise the preponderate membership in the NEA even though the nation-wide organization is open to all interested persons.

Catholic Teachers

Father Boyle, when asked if he would encourage more Catholic teachers to join the NEA, replied:



"Since our institutions can not directly affect the thinking of the NEA by reason of its membership composition, it is important that Catholic teachers give serious consideration to becoming members in order not only to observe but try to assist this organization to understand the importance of Catholic education in the United States."

The published NEA Report, due to appear in September, will be of interest to everyone in the field of education.

A variety of orders represented at this years session of Villanova's Summer School is shown in this photograph. The 1957 session boasts the largest enrollment in the University's summer history. Representative of some 28 different orders are pictured in the photograph.

The life of a summer school student at Villano'a is a busy one. Each hour of the day finds the Sisters engaged in a different activity. In these pictures the Sisters portray many of these activities.

Rememberances of a happy summer and for the prospective Alumnae are available in Dougherty Hall's Colege Store. Sister M. Alban, S.S.N.D. (left), proudly displays newly purchased Villanova penant to Sister M. Kathleen, SS. C.M.

Activity also whets the appetite and the sisters find that lunch time comes none too quickly. Here the sisters are served Cafeteria style in Villanova's spacious Dougherty Hall dining room. Miss Patricia Buselli is the pleasant server.

No matter how busy the day there is always time for a visit with Our Mother of Good Counsel. Sister M. Mercedes, O.S.S.T, (in white), leads the rosary for Sisters M. Willimyn, I.H.M.: M. An Employee Reminisces- Villanova's Yesterdays

By The Peekskill Franciscans

How can one believe that at one time Austin Hall was a barn for housing cows and horses! Yet, GEORGE HARRIS, who is the oldest inhabitant on campus can vouch for the veracity of the above statement.

Indeed, he can recall when he was trapped, trying to rescue a horse which insisted upon going back into his stall during the fire which razed the whole of Austin Hall. Mr. Harris will never forget Father Driscoll who came to his rescue.

Actually, over the period of nearly a half-century during which Mr. Harris has worked at Villanova, he has seen many of the buildings destroyed by fire which left only the outside walls standing. Not only was he a spectator but what is more, he took an active part in extinguishing these fires.

Odd Jobs

If we think that putting out fires is a little out of the ordinary, we have plenty of surprises to make us think so as Mr. Harris recalls the various and varied chores which fell to his lot.

The most curious of these was the result of a request made to Father Driscoll for the body of a seminarian after twelve years interment.

That was enough for Mr. Harris. He dug up the body, laid the remains in his arms and then gave it to the undertaker for placement in a box for shipping to New York.

Biologist—Grave Digger

His career as grave digger does not end with the cemetery here at Villanova. If your science students would like to know what happens to your mutilated specimens once they leave your skilfull hands, ask George, he needs no headstone to mark the spot.

If any of you are still dubious about Villanova being a farm perhaps we can still convince you. Mr. Harris tells us that way back, his first duty of the day was to rise at three a.m. (and we complain) in order to milk the cows, separate the milk and have it ready for breakfast.

This was a feat despite the fact, that prior to his marriage to a Bryn Mawr girl he lived right here on campus.

Further proof for the die-hards is the fact that he killed hogs and pigs which were penned here so that the Fathers might eat. The army taught him how to bake such delicious bread that "It was so good, they ate too much."

Then And Now

Since he came to Villanova when he was seventeen years old, he has seen the gradual evolution from farm to University.

Conditions are much better now, but the boys are still boys. He describes the present students as "A nice bunch, sometimes boisterous, but on the whole a good natured bunch of fellows."

Reciprocal Feelings

Asked if he ever thought of leaving, he said, "Yes, but the Fathers did not want me to go. The Fathers treat me just as if I were one of them.

This simple tribute is matched with the remark which we are certain, is shared by everyone, "There is a good man! Wish we had more like him.'

Infirmary Service Is Now More Than An Experiment--

By Sr. Mary Vincent, PBVM

Splinter in your finger? Soot in your eye? Don't reach for your home remedy. The Infirmary is the place for you.

This summer witnessed the the opening of the Villanova Infirmary to those living on campus.

Under the direction of Rev. Francis Boyle, O.S.A., and in the competent hands of Sr. Sancia, C.S.F.N., and Theresa St. Leger, the infirmary serves the students for two hours each day.

Seventy Per Day

To date there have been approximately seventy calls made to the infirmary. Hence, what started as an experiment is making itself known as a must for future years.

Our thanks go to Fr. Boyle and his infirmary staff for a healthful summer.

New Additions To Expanding V.U. Campus

the erection of a new Press Box, and renovated and increased sanitary facilities.

New Conveniences

Within Villanova, renovation on a smaller scale has taken place. A constant theme of delight and amazement, especially to students of the past five summers, is the conversion of the old dining room into offices for the various university departments, and the addition of a post office.

The bright and coloful transformation is a tribute to the ingenuity of the planners.

High Cost

The cost, so far, is well over a million dollars for each new building. Father John Curran, O.S.A., Vice-President for Finance, casually quotes seven-place numbers as "one six and a quarter." An uninitiated reporter has to shift gears quickly to realize that this means "one million, six hundred twenty-five thousand dollars."

Sullivan, Sheehan, and the new C and F Building cost an average of $1,250,000 each; Dougherty, $1,000,000; and Garey, $1,150,000. These figures are a far cry from construction costs in 1901, when the combined cost of the monastery and the college building was $285,000!

The cost in anxiety and responsibility is still higher, but God has given to Villanova men of magnificient spiritual stature to bear the burden.

116th Registration

September will see Villanova open its door for the 116th registration. According to statistics, the college-age population in Pennsylvania will increase approximately 25% by 1963.

Villanova must expand to meet these students, now wrestling with sixth-grade decimals, but so soon to face the intricacies of finance and accounting in C and F.

All Can Help

Every Sister-student is proud to be long to Villanova and anxious to promote its development. What can we do to help? Father Curran has the answer in one word—"Pray."

Pictures of Our Lady of Good Counsel are free in the Chaplain's Office. Why not keep one in your missal as a reminder to pray for the Villanova Building Program?

Why not turn the energy of your students into a prayer campaign that will shake the very gates of Heaven? The future Villanova can be bigger and better for your prayers.

Strictly Business Nickels Are Best

By Sr. Dennis Eileen, SSJ

John Bauman, proprietor of the University Shop, is not the type to indulge in "small talk" so dear to a reporter's heart for its human interest angle, but we did manage to learn his views on the Summer School customers.

"They're more quiet, of course," he admitted, "but they go for the same sort of stock as the boys—stationery, Villanova caps and T-shirts for favorite nephews, beer mugs (???!!!).

In the beginning, we have a hard time cashing all the big bills, but it isn't long until the small change passes over the counter for an occasional eraser or ruler."

Outstanding Trait

When questioned for one trait characteristic of the Sisters at Summer School, Mr. Bauman admitted reluctantly that there was one.

We pounced upon him. "What was it?" "Well," he smiled, "almost every day some Sister will hand me a quarter and say, 'Three nickels and a dime, please, and God bless you'."

Rifle Team is there.

Villanova's summer rifle team was off to a start when ten Sisters answered the "call to arms" Wednesday, July 9.

Under the direction of Edward J. Molcany, Technical Sergeant U.S.M.C. and Ass't Marine Instructor, the group was given detailed instructions on the proper handling of a 22 caliber rifle during the first meeting. This was followed by actual target firing at Barry Hall's range.

Members of the team who meet twice weekly to aim at the bull's eye are: Sister Mary Rosarita, R.S.M., Sr. Mary Lorraine, O.P., Sr. Matthew, O.S.B.M., Sr. Anne, O.S.B.M., Sr. Constance Marie, M.S.B.I., Sr. Mary Emerentia, O.S.F., Sr. Mary Stella, O.S.F., Sr. Mary Rosalima, C.S.F.N., Sr. Mary Tarcilia, C.S.S.F., and Sister Mary Adalbert, C.S.S.F.

SIDELINE FUN:

Baseball Produces Even Monsters On The Field

By Sr. Mary Loretta, SBS

. . . by Sr. Mary Loretta, SBS

A new sports comet flashed across the Villanova heavens this summer. It was a sensational new team of sluggers calling themselves the "Mendel Monsters."

Demons of Diamond

In conference the other day with the Chief Monster, Team Captain Don "Murdoch" Luzzi, the latter called the roster of the dynamic team: "Marvin" Arnold Clark, second base, Warren Kimball, third base, Bernie McCoy, pitcher, Jack Karo, shortstop, "Melvin" Charles Volpe, catcher, John R. McCartney, left field, "Morton" Bruce Francis, right field, Jim Stark, center field and John Giantonio, Bob Durkin and Bill Surette as three strategic floaters.

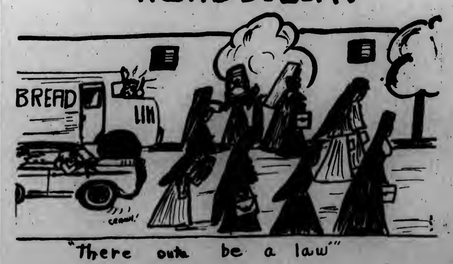
Captain Luzzi hinted that his policy was to build up the hopes of the opposing teams in the beginning, but to show no quarter in the last inning. In the last game of the season the fabulous trophy, the MONSTER CUP, will be the prize.

Monsters Start Season

The Monsters initiated their season Wednesday, July 3rd. Not wishing to discourage the opposing team by a crushing victory, they graciously lost with a score of 10-6, favor the priests.

Captain Luzzi commented, "It, would not be polite to let my men win the first game against some of their own professors." In the second game, played before a rabid audience of nearly a hundred breathless fans, the Mendelites were swept from the dusty diamond by a Seminarian victory, 13-5. Catcher "Morton" Volpe explained this state of affairs thus, "After letting the Priests win one, we figured we ought to let the Seminarians win one too."

In line with his stated policy, Captain Luzzi reported that the Monsters ceded to the Priests a "gift game" on July 10th. The score for that game was 12-3. July 15th saw the first Monster victory, when they clouted the Seminarians 8-2.



Captain Luzzi explained that this departure from the Monster code was simply to keep up fan interest. In their game with the Priests, July 17th, the score was 10-6, in favor the Monsters.

Game Scheduled

The last Monster game of the season is scheduled for July 31. To be played against the "All-Stars" of both Priests and Seminarian teams, this promises to be the decisive bout of the season. Win or lose, the Monsters are this time determined to "bring home the bacon" and the MONSTER CUP.

Notice to all Monsters rooters: a collection will be taken up during the seventh inning stretch to provide bacon for the hungry Monsters to carry in triumph back to Mendel.

SUMMERTIME POETRY

Hail Mary

In verse to praise thy Virgin Motherhood,
Bending o'er Babe Divine, my great desire,
Or laud they love as 'neath the Cross you stood,
Watching, in agony, thy Son expire.
Fit words to hymn thy glorious beauty rare
Fail me, and still a beggar mute, I stand,
Knocking at Inspiration's gateway fair,
Which opens not, though humble my demand.
Hail! full of grace—an answer to my plea—
Whispers my heart, for by day and by night,
Mother of God, thus have I sung thee,
From life's dawn till now its twilight.
Hail full of grace! Gabriel's Ave I'll sing;
Blessed among women! this praise I'll bring.

Sr. Mary Pius, O.S.P.

Rifle Rhyme

Oh, shooting is really great fun!
You may think it's no sport for a nun,
But be careful there, stranger,
I now am a Ranger,
And I'm trading my books for a gun.

Sr. Rose Philippine, SSJ

Triolet

The dear, familiar miracle of You
Lord, help me grasp;
Lord help me take as true
The dear, familiar miracle of You.
With sight made bright by Heaven-hue,
Though earth-wrought is the clasp,
The dear, familiar miracle of You
Lord, help me grasp.

Sr. Rose Philippine, SSJ

My Limitations

My limitations are the sign
Of what you have in Your design.
I need but follow and apply
Myself to what You send from high Wholeheartedly

I do not want the sweetness sent,
Its loss—Your gift—this is my bent.
I only want to strive and do
Everything for love of You
Eternity.

To fit the outline perfectly
That You have patterned just for me.
I pray for grace—for strength of will
And call on You to help me 'til Eternity.

Sister Mary Madeline, R.S.M.

To A Negro Child

Child of eyes like the beautiful
Darkness of forgotten sorrow,
Child of cheek foreshadowed by the Greatness of your good tomorrow!
Blinded of heart are they
Who will not see in you
What I may see—
His Image, carven deep into
This ebony.

Sr. Mary Loretta, S.B.S.

All God's Children

Dark skin, white skin,
What do I care
If you are sombre,
If you are fair?

God, Who is Beauty,
He moulded you.
I do not quarrel
With His hue.

Sable as night,
Golden as day,
God, Who is Goodness,
Created that way

Trying to ravish
Our souls with His art.
What can I do
But give you my heart?

White skin, dark skin,
What does it prove?
All that I know is
I see, and I love.

Sr. Marty Loretta S.B.S.

Will You? Won't You?

I know what I'll remember
If I get to graduate.
I'll remember all the hidden joys
Back of Villanova's gate.

I'll remember all the teachers
Who overflowed our hours
With thoughts and talks and busy work
Just because they held the "powers"

I'll remember all the Sisters
That we meet from year to year;
The associations, campus-made,
Are those which do endear.

But, won't we, too, remember
All the little hidden things,
And the person who made possible
The happiness it brings?

On this Campus there are many such.
I cannot list them all;
But I'd like to mention in their names,

One is a busy person
In the Library Reference hall.
She never counts the steps she takes;
She has a smile for all.

The other's a Maintenance lady
At everyone's beck and call.
Without such hidden services
Could Villanova exist at all?

Sr. St. Anthony, C.N.D.

Flight Into Egypt

Yon asked no questions Mother dear
When Joseph told you his fear.
But quickly sped to do His will
That His dear Son be safe from ill.
O teach me how to question not
When doubt and fear become my lot.
Remind me ever I must know
You and St. Joseph had to go
Away in haste; and insecure
To keep our God from evil's lure.
"Stay there until I tell you"—so
I too must sometimes hasting go
To follow in obedience blind.

Sister Mary Dominic, O.S.F.

To Our Lady

O bless me Lady, Mother dear
Free my soul from doubt and fear
Then bless me with Thy precious Son
When each vic'try I have won.
Keep thy mantle blue about me
Lest I lose my way without thee
Smile upon me Mother do
Keep me—thought, word, deed with you.

Sister Mary Dominic, O.S.F.

The Mercy of God

DEDICATED TO FATHER McDERMOTT, O.S.A.

My Jesus, Thy mercy, I tearfully plead.
My past sins are over—
My mercy I need!
I'm sorry my Jesus, for all that is done;
But fretting and crying from sun until sun
Can never undo what is judged on by Thee.
O mercy my Jesus! Have mercy on me.
TODAY, as it comes Lord
I'll do Thy sweet Will.
And TOMORROW dear Jesus
With your grace You will will Yet TOMORROW my Savious
May well never be.
But THIS MINUTE O JESUS—
Have mercy on me!

Sister Mary Dominic, O.S.F.

Protection

We rest between Your Hands, O Lord,
For every single step we take,
Is guided by Your shielding grace;
We, 'tis true, Your loving ward.

We rest between Your Hands, O Lord,
Within Your soft protecting love;
. . . Who are but poor small helpless doves,
Become the King's most mighty sword.

We rest between Your Hands, O Lord
While unprotected fools rush by.
We are the apple of Your eye;
And You, my God, are our reward.

The Artist's Touch

O see the crystal flake of snow,
A frozen drop of jewel-like dew,
And you cannot but truly know
It it exists . . . Creator drew.

O see the tumb'ling water fall
Where foaming billows downward rush,
And see through veil-like rainbow walls
A masterpiece: Creator's brush.

O see the raging torrent splash
Almost in cataclysmic rage;
Put down in but one binding flash,
Yet this is just another phase.

O see the thundernig ocean thrust
The beach as if 'twould fight the land.
See well my child the Artist's touch
And recognize Creator's Hand.

Patrick X. Nidorf, O.S.A.

Please Lord

O bless me Lord along the way
As I see Thee in sick souls today.
May each one, in my spirit see
That I've this day been blest by Thee
May I instill in others' minds
The peace and hope You've poured in mine.
That they with faith, and courage blest
Will too, find joy, and calm and rest.

Sister Mary Dominic, O.S.F.

My Prayer

"If you ask the Father anything in My Name, He will give it to you."

O God, Eternal Father
In Jesus' precious Name
I lay this cause before Thee
To grant; or to refrain.
If what I ask for Father
Is not in Thy sweet Will
Then keep it from me loving God.
My soul with peace, just fill.
Thou knowest what is best Lord.
I will not doubt nor fret.
But still trust on unceasingly
And know—You won't forget.

Sister Mary Dominic, O.S.F.

Recompense

Behnid the clouds, the sinking sun
Tells me dear Lord, the day's nigh done.
And 'ere it pass, I kneel and say
"Take all I've done; for Thee today;
And bless me Lord with peace and grace
And let me, gazing in Thy Face
Behold Thee smile; hear Thy Voice say,
"You've pleased My Heart with love today."
"Love that you've shown to souls in fear
Deeds little known to all those near.
Yet for My Sake you served and prayed
An do'er each deed My Hand I've laid
To keep you free from hidden strife
And bless with happiness, your life."

Sister Mary Dominic, O.S.F.

Golden Cups

Dreamily gliding along a filigreed path
I freely rise toward a light-dipped cloud
And there I find blessed freedom of mind
Quite remote from the surging crowd.
As I breathlessly peer into sun-filled vials
Soothing songs lullingly come to me,
And my love-famished heart plays a minor cord
In its majestic symphony
One golden cup quivers, then finds quiet repose
As I—wearily resting and very alone—
(Finding long-sought escape in fanciful sleep),
View sun-kiss'd cups, serenely enthroned;
While my thought-famished heart finds a watch to keep.
There is nothing can disturb my sweet repose now
As I recall the secrets the golden cup taught,
While harmonious strains still my soul-stirring fears,
And reality seems but naught.

Clouds

by Sr. Mary Loretta, S.B.S.

Sun-split, glorious
At the morning-crest,
Furled as battle banners
In a sun-stained West,
Clouds of wind and sea
Of sweeping sky
Languor for beauty-sake
Enchantments to the eye.
Sheer summer-silken veils
Strewn height on height,
To me, the clod, the plod,
Soul-freedom seem. Delight!

Sisters of Villanova

by Sister Jean Marie, O.S.B.

They come, these Sisters
From near and from afar—
Searching for knowledge in Villanova's halls of fame,
Most of them have just left far behind—
A school with empty desks,
Where spiders find a rendevous,
A place to spin their cobwebs unidsturbed,
While Sisters dream of children
Who have need of so much that only God can give,
Sisters who try to fill their minds and hearts with treasures;
So that someday they can impart,
Their Ideal to the childish hearts.
But as they walk from classes to and fro,
Sometimes with smiles
And sometimes preoccupied with all the difficulties
That all their classes bring—
The campus with its heat and unfamiliar faces fade—
And in its place they see:
A convent on a hill
With three whose soft cool breezes sooths their troubled spirits;
Minds which are filled with fear and dread for exams which lie ahead,
Where the ghost of failure raises its drooping head,
To taunt them with the unreality of it all.
They hear the soft sweet chant of nuns so far away,
Singing their praises to the God who reigns on high,
Who loves them as no other could.
They long with wildly beating hearts
To be once more within their chapel walls;
They see again the hand carved Cruifix in the hall,
And then a voice so strangely gentle and yet so strong says,
"It is My will that you
Should leave it all for realms
Where you feel unknown, and forgotten;
Ah, but My feet walk with you
Into the classrooms where professors are,
My voice whispers to you when you feel
That all is lost."
Their dream has faded now,
And once again they walk
Upon the campus with its vast green lawns,
Its towering trees—
While the sense of loss has gone,
And in its place remains,
Only a deep desire to serve;
And bring to Him the very best that they can give.

Largest Class Graduates Exercises In Fieldhouse

Donnellon, O.S.A., President of the University.

GRADUATION MASS

A solemn High Mass celebrated by the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., will immediately precede graduation exercises. Deacon and subdeacon assisting at the Mass will be the Rev. Edward B. McKee, O.S.A., Assistant to the President, and the Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., Vice-President for Academic Affairs.

The Mass, "Orbis Factor", directed by James W. Cullen, M.S., will be sung by the Sisters who have participated in the Church Music Workshop during the summer school session.

CONFERRING OF DEGREES

After Mass, candidates for degrees will be presented by the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., Dean of Graduate and Part-time Divisions. The Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., will confer M.A., M.S. and B.A. degrees on students who will have completed graduate and undergraduate work. A slightly larger class than last year.

The Graduates are:

Censorship

is the obscenity produced by many writers who are interested not in self-expression but in self-gratification—that type of book written solely to make money.

Successful Close

After a period of questioning, the forum was closed. The problem of censorship was not settled—it never can be—but all who took part had an excellent opportunity to examine censorship from several angles, to have its nature and problems clarified and to be prepared to discuss it intelligently in the future.

MARY ELLEN MEADE
Honorary Degree Winner

Villanova University was the recipient this week of a gift of $25,000. Mr. & Mrs. Robert Rea of Devon, Pa., made the gift in the name of their late son, Robert W. Rea, Jr. The money will be used to finance a library in the new Commerce and Finance Building said the Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, Director of the Villanova Development Foundation.

Courses Revised For Next Year

change as circumstances warrant.

English Dep't.

Plans for a new type of comprehensive examination have have been announced and a new reading list will be issued to graduate students in English during the summer semester. The first group subject to new regulations will next summer's applicants.

"The principle behind this new organization of the comprehensive examination," states departmental chairman Dr. Charles W. Bernardin, "is to encourage students to develop a broad general knowledge of the entire fields of American and English literature, simulanteously developing a much more detailed and deeper fund of knowledge centered on one specific area."

Exam Divisions

According, the examination will be drawn up in two parts, one covering the entire field of American and English literature very generally, the other centering in greater detail on the specific area of concentration, selected and developed by the individual student in conjunction with thesis research.

Formulated for the English Department by the committee for graduate studies in the fields of American and English Literature comprised of Dr. Charles W. Bernardin, Mr. Bernard J. Bedard, Dr. Albert H. Buford, Mr. Jerome J. Fischer, Dr. Edward McGrath, and Dr. John S. Phillipson, the new system of studies offers an added benefit to the student, that of concentration of studies in a greatly narrowed span of time.

Obviate Need

This will obviate the need for arduous review of material studied years ago, in order to meet requirements of the comprehensive examination.

Besides a similar revision of study plan to promote speed in acquiring a master's degree, the Mathematics Department anticipates a not too distant expansion in physical facilities and methods.

A new science building, project for the near future, designed to house Biology, Physics, and Mathematics Departments, promises sufficient area for expansion and improvement of facilities. Among mathematical "dream-come-true" will be the addition of a statistical laboratory and a computer.

Methods Plans

In the methods area, a plan has been approved providing for graduate assistants to serve as teacher aides while working for a master's degree. According to departmental chairman Mr. Emil Amelotti, applicants for these positions must be qualified graduates of recognized institutions.

Requirements for students wishing to avail themselves of the new graduate study plan in mathematics are limited to a Bachelor of Science degree with a minumum of mathematics through calculus.

Summer Courses Continue

In general, the new system is not intended to supersede the part-time and summer school program. The latter provisions will continue to function for the benefit of all who can not or will not avail themselves of the accelerated program.
